

Castillo gets 20 years for cocaine sale

By KAY PECK
Staff Writer

Mary Castillo, 28, of Hereford was sentenced to 20 years in the Texas Department of Corrections during 222nd District Court action on Tuesday.

Earlier Tuesday, Castillo was convicted on charges of delivery of a controlled substance (cocaine).

The case against the Hereford woman was the result of an undercover operation conducted during the fall semester of 1988. A special officer was hired by the Hereford Police Department to pose as a student at Hereford High School during that period.

Mary Castillo was arrested as the result of one of seven drug transactions conducted by the special officer during a two-month period.

The officer, who has asked to remain anonymous, registered at Hereford High School in the fall of 1988. The woman is a trained graduate of the Panhandle Regional Police Academy who posed as a student in order to investigate narcotics-related crimes committed by or with local high school students.

Mary Castillo's conviction and sentencing on Tuesday was the final case to be heard in 222nd District and Deaf Smith County Courts as a result of the undercover operation. Three felony convictions were included in the seven cases filed in connection with the operation, according to Lt. David Wagner of the Hereford Police Department.

Last July, Mike Castillo, Mary's brother, entered a plea of guilty to one count of delivery of cocaine and another count of possession of cocaine back. He was sentenced to 15 years for each count with sentences to run concurrent.

The brother and sister were charged in connection with the same incident.

In another felony case filed as a result of the investigation, Freddy Mendoza entered a plea of guilty to charges of delivery of cocaine and was sentenced to 15 years in the Texas Department of Corrections.

Both Mary and Mike Castillo were indicted in connection with a transaction which took place on Oct. 4, 1988, at Mary Castillo's residence. The brother pleaded guilty, and the sister was found guilty of selling 0.2 grams of cocaine to the undercover officer.

Although a jury was called to hear Mary Castillo's case, the defendant waived her right to a jury trial shortly after proceedings began on Tuesday morning. After hearing evidence in the case, Judge Virgil E. Mulanax, presiding judge by assignment to the 222nd District Court, found the defendant guilty as charged.

During the sentencing phase, the defense attorney asked that Judge Mulanax consider several factors, including the defendant's three children. Defense counsel requested that the judge consider a sentence near the five-year minimum mandated in the charge for which Castillo was convicted.

"If we're going to win the war on drugs, we're going to have to do at least part of it in the courtroom," District Attorney Roland Saul countered in his closing statements.

Saul recommended that a much stiffer sentence be given in order to help send out the message that illicit drugs "will not be tolerated" in Deaf Smith County before the 20-year sentence was handed down by Judge Mulanax.

Mulanax heard the case in the absence of 222nd District Judge David Wesley Gully. Co-workers said Judge Gully is doing well following a recent hospitaliza-

Hereford got some international television exposure this past week, thanks to a visit to Corpus Christi by Joe Soliz Jr. of Hereford. Soliz was in Corpus to talk to television star Johnny Canales about doing a concert in the Panhandle. Canales, according to Soliz, is the "Hispanic Dick Clark" of television. His show, on Univision, is viewed by some 22 million people in the U.S., Mexico and Central and South America.

Soliz took some Hereford products along to present to Canales and he discussed the products and Hereford on his show. Soliz said he took some Holly sugar, Malamen carrots, the mayor's potatoes (Wes Fisher), various products from Ramirez & Sons, as well as onions, jalapenos, pumpkins and pinto beans.

Soliz said his trip was successful and that he signed Canales for a concert at Randall Park sometime in July.

Montoya gets 60-year term for murder

In connection with February death

Alfredo Montoya was sentenced to 60 years in the Texas Department of Corrections during 222nd District Court action last week after Montoya pleaded guilty to a murder charge.

Investigation of the case began last February after the frozen body of Robert Youngblood, 61, of Amarillo was found on Feb. 4, 19 miles northwest of Hereford. The body was not identified until Feb. 14 when highway workers discovered Youngblood's driver's license beside U.S. Highway 385, four miles south of where the body was discovered.

Montoya and Eloy Garcia Fuentes, 26, were both accused of beating and robbing Youngblood and abandoning him beside a dirt road in sub-freezing weather.

According to a statement made by Fuentes, the three men had been traveling from Amarillo to Colorado when the incident occurred.

In that statement, Fuentes indicated that Youngblood "had a lot of money" and that he and Montoya turned off the main road onto a side road. It is believed that Youngblood was beaten and robbed at that time.

According to Fuentes' statement, the two men netted $30 to $40 in the theft.

Fuentes is currently being held in the Deaf Smith County Jail while awaiting trial on murder charges.

Just prior to the incident, the victim and both men accused in his death were all living in the same apartment complex in Amarillo.

Justice slaps back

Bakker gets 45 years, fine

Jim says he's 'sorry for those I have hurt.'

Zsa Zsa gets 3 days, fine, service

Judge says 'if you slap a cop, you go to jail.'

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) - A judge sent evangelist Jim Bakker directly to jail to start a 45-year sentence for defrauding followers of millions of dollars, saying people were "sick of being saps for money-grubbing preachers."

U.S. District Judge Robert Potter on Tuesday also fined the defrocked PTL founder $500,000, concluding that Bakker had continued to milk the faithful even after his conviction for overselling memberships in a Christian vacation retreat.

The 49-year-old television evangelist left the courtroom in leg irons and handcuffs on his way to federal prison in Alabama. Depending on the outcome of an appeal, he will serve at least 10 years before being eligible for parole.

Prosecutors said the man who founded the once mighty PTL religious empire raised thousands of dollars since his Oct. 5th conviction and needed to be imprisoned to stop him from using TV and the mails to raise more.

"He's able to walk out of this courtroom today and continue to perpetuate this fraud," Assistant U.S. Attorney Jerry Miller told the judge. "He hasn't blinked."

Potter read a letter that Bakker and his wife, Tammy Faye, mailed last month from their new TV ministry in Orlando, Fla., asking 300 supporters to send in $1,000 apiece to alleviate a financial crisis.

"Those of us who do have a religion are sick of being saps for money-grubbing preachers and priests," Potter said. "Worst of all, it appears that Mr. Bakker feels he was deserving of his gains from the little people who sent in their savings."

Potter refrained from ordering Bakker to make restitution to his victims, saying that issue needed to be resolved in bankruptcy court.

Bakker's fall from power began in 1987 with revelations about a sexual encounter with former church secretary Jessica Hahn, who received hush money, leading to the unraveling of the ministry.

"I'm deeply sorry for those I have hurt," Bakker said before sentencing. "I have sinned. But never in my life did I intend to defraud anyone."

Prosecutors didn't accept his apology.

"This man is a con man, a common criminal," said Miller. "He's ready, willing and able to pick it up where he left it off. He's ready to go back to the henhouse."

Bakker stood and stared straight ahead as the sentence was read. Potter then sent him to the medium-security federal prison at Talledega, Ala., where he arrived late Tuesday.

Warden Don Southerland said Bakker was to spend the night in a cell with another inmate, and remain there a few weeks before being assigned to another institution.

BEVERLY HILLS, Calif. (AP) - The law slapped back at Zsa Zsa Gabor with a three-day jail term for slapping a policeman, ending a circuslike case that left the actress unrepentant and her husband fuming.

"Yes, I'm upset," said Miss Gabor's eighth husband, Frederick von Anhalt, as he stormed down the steps of the courthouse after Tuesday's sentencing. "I will ask the court if I can go to jail instead of my wife."

Miss Gabor, a one-time Hungarian beauty queen believed to be in her mid-60s to early 70s, snickered, smiled and made quips as Beverly Hills Municipal Judge Charles Rubin announced the sentence, peppering his statements with rebukes and warnings.

"Now you laugh," the judge said, before lecturing Miss Gabor about the 25,000 Americans who die yearly in alcohol-related accidents. Among Miss Gabor's misdemeanor convictions was driving with an open container of alcohol.

"The law applies to everyone, whether they are rich or poor and whether they are famous or not," Rubin said before sentencing her. "In the absence of extremely mitigating circumstances ... if you slap a cop, you go to jail."

Along with the jail term, the judge ordered Miss Gabor to pay $12,937.50 in fines and restitution and to perform 120 hours of community service in a women's homeless shelter, where she may not talk about her case or give media interviews. Miss Gabor, who returned home after the verdict, was given until Dec. 29 to complete the jail sentence.

She also was ordered to be interviewed by a psychiatrist and to refrain from driving until she gets her real age on her driver's license. During the trial, Miss Gabor claimed the license was stolen and altered by someone else.

The judge repeatedly attacked Miss Gabor's demeanor inside and outside of court, saying she was "milking this case for publicity" at the expense of the taxpayers who paid for the trial.

"She has demonstrated an attitude continually of contempt for law and order and these proceedings, without a hint of remorse or contrition of any kind," the judge said. "And that is very relevant to sentencing."

As Miss Gabor left the courtroom, she disputed the judge's contention that she not only slapped a police officer, but the American people by her statements out of court that the United States was worse than the Soviet Union or Nazi Germany.

"I'm a very good American. I love America," she said. "Why should I slap the face of America?"

Miss Gabor, star of such B-films as "Queen of Outer Space" and "Picture Mommy Dead," faced a maximum of 18 months in jail.

Sen. Gramm may run for President

WASHINGTON (AP) - Republican Sen. Phil Gramm says he's considering a race for the White House in 1996, as he nears the end of his second term in the Senate.

"I don't think that anybody who ever runs for city council didn't ultimately think about running for president," said Gramm, a conservative first-term senator from Texas who is up for re-election in 1990.

"If I ever heard the call (to the White House), I wouldn't be afraid to answer the call," Gramm, 46, said in an interview Tuesday. "I don't know whether it will come or not. But I'll be listening."

Gramm said he remembers the day he was sworn into Congress for the first time, on Jan. 3, 1979, and leaning over to fellow Texas Rep. Kent Hance, who said: "Reckon how many people standing here will be speaker of the House?" And I said, "Kent, the people standing here think they're going to be president."

"I have great ambitions to serve America and to do things that I believe important to the working men and women of the country," said Gramm, who was first elected to Congress from College Station as a Democrat. Gramm later resigned from the House, switched parties, and was sent back to the House in a special election.

Gramm said he nominated George Bush for president at the 1988 Republican convention and "I meant for that nomination to last for eight years, not four, and I'll be out all over the country in 1992 campaigning for George Bush for president."

But by 1996, if re-elected to the Senate next year, Gramm would have been in Congress for 18 years. "By that point I hope to have learned this job," he said.

"I don't know what I would be looking at in 1996. It's an awfully long way away, and I have to be re-elected and I don't take that for granted," Gramm said.

Gramm said he has seen 10 incumbent senators defeated at the polls and "I don't want to add my name to that list."

Gramm's only announced opponent in 1990 is Democratic state Sen. Hugh Parmer of Fort Worth.

"But in terms of 1996, that is so far off, I certainly hadn't made any plans and hadn't thought about it. In my position, it's dangerous to be making jokes about it," Gramm said.

Cash for HHS computer

Hereford High School librarians Lois Matchett and Carole McGilvary accept a check from Bobby Moore of More's Jack and Jill supermarket in Hereford for a new computer at HHS. HHS is the second local school to receive a check for a computer through the store's "Computers for Kids" campaign. Several other schools are near the $100,000 in register tapes needed for the gift.

Ann Landers

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I've read so many letters in your column from women who go through hell to become pregnant that I feel it is only fair to present another view.

It's no longer a "sin" not to want children. My husband and I don't. Our planet has become over populated, polluted, drug-crazy and crime-ridden. No matter where you look, there's a war someplace. It's time to print that terrific piece that appeared 15 years ago. Here's a copy. I read it whenever I want a good laugh. -- B.J.R., Oak Park, Ill.

DEAR B.J.R.: With pleasure. Here it is.

Musings of a Good Father on a Bad Day

There's nothing sadder than the childless couple. It breaks your heart to see them stretched out, relaxing around swimming pools in Florida and California, suntanned and miserable on the decks of boats, trotting off to Europe like fools, with money to spend, time to enjoy themselves and nothing to worry about.

Childless couples become so selfish and wrapped up in their own concerns that you feel sorry for them. They don't fight over the kid's discipline. They miss all the fun of doing without for the child's sake. It's a pathetic sight.

Everyone should have children. No one should be allowed to escape the wonderful experiences that come with each stage of development. The happy memories of those early years, saturated mattresses, waiting for sitters who don't show up, midnight asthma attacks, rushing to the emergency room to get the kid's head stitched up.

Then comes the payoff, when the child grows from a little acorn into a real nut. What can equal the warm smile of a small lad with the sun glittering on $2,500 worth of braces -- ruined by peanut brittle. Or the ear-splitting shrieking of 20 hysterical savages running amok at a birthday party?

How sad not to have children to brighten your cocktail parties, massaging potato chips into the rug, wrestling the guests for the olives in their martinis.

How empty is the home without challenging problems that make for a well-rounded life and an early breakdown. The nightly reports from your wife are like strategically placed blows to the temple. And when the report cards come you have to face the truth -- your senior is a moron.

Children are worth every moment of anxiety. You know it the first time you take your son hunting. He didn't mean to shoot you in the leg. Remember how he cried? He was so disappointed that you weren't a deer.

Think back to the night of romantic adventure, when your beautiful daughter eloped with the village idiot. What childless couple ever shares in such a growing experience? Could a woman without children equal the strength and heroism of your wife when she tried to fling herself out of the bedroom window? Only a father could have the courage to stand by, ready to jump after her.

The childless couple lives in a vacuum. They try to fill their lonely lives with dinner dates, parties, theater, golf, tennis, swimming, civic affairs and trips to London, Paris, Rome, Madrid, Mexico City and Hawaii.

See what the years have done to the childless couple. He looks boyish, unlined and rested. She is slim, well-groomed and youthful. It isn't natural. If they had kids they would look like the rest of us -- depressed, worn out and haggard. In other words, normal.

Drugs are everywhere. They're easy to get, easy to use and even easier to get hooked on. If you have questions about drugs, you need Ann Landers' booklet, "The Lowdown on Dope." Send a self-addressed, long, business-size envelope and a check or money order for $3.65 (this includes postage and handling) to: Lowdown, c/o Ann Landers, P.O. Box 11562, Chicago, Ill. 60611-0562. (In Canada send $4.45.)

Spikers sweep LHS in home finale

Everything's coming up roses

HJH teams 0-for-Tuesday

Hereford Junior High football teams suffered through six losses Tuesday at the hands of teams from Levelland and Borger.

At the Junior High Field, Borger defeated the seventh grade Maroon "A" team, 22-16, and took a 30-6 win over the seventh grade Maroon "B" team.

In the "A" game, Hereford drew first blood, going up 8-0 when Michael Brown scored on a 30-yard run in the first quarter and Ashley Noland passed to O.J. Rodriguez for the two-point

The Hereford Whitefaces completed their home season Tuesday with a 15-4, 15-0 walkover against Levelland at the HHS Gym.

The win kept the Herd tied for first place in District 1-4A with Dumas and upped its record to 12-1 in loop play and 24-4 over all heading into Saturday's season finale at Borger. A win in that match would assure Hereford of no worse than a tie for the district championship.

Hereford jumped to an 8-0 lead in the first game as Nikki Self and Libby Kosub each served for four points before Levelland's Aida Villanueva got the Lobosettes on the board. Shantel Cornelius and Jill West stretched the lead to 11-1 before Levelland could score again.

Hereford almost had the win on one rotation when Cande Robbins served for the game, but a side out against the Herd enabled Akiko Shibayama to add two points to Levelland's total before Self served the winning point.

The Herd completely dominated the second game as Self started with seven straight points. After a net serve by Shibayama, Kosub connected for six more to give Hereford a 13-0 lead.

Jessica Dearing, in her only time at serve in the match, completed the shutout with back-to-back aces.

For the match, Self served for 12 point, including three aces, while Kosub totaled 10 service points with three aces. Cornelius, Poppy Richardson and Dearing had two points each an West and Cande Robbins added the other two Herd points.

Kosub led in kills with four, followed by Richardson with three and Cornelius and West with two each. Kosub also had three service receptions and added a pair of stuffs, Cornelius also had two stuffs with Richardson and Robbins getting one apiece.

Coach Brenda Reeh was pleased with the way her team controlled the match.

"Our kids just wouldn't budge at all against them," she said. "Eleven out of 19 attacks went down for kills. Our kids did a great job of playing with lots of intensity even when we got ahead by quite a few points."

Reeh added that the play of the team's eight seniors in their last home appearance was not overly emotional.

"This was a great last game for our seniors. I was a little concerned about them playing too emotionally before the match started, but they handled this like champs.

"Afterwards was when it hit hard that our seniors would never play in the Hereford High Gym again. They, as well as every underclassman, have a great deal of pride in their team, their school and their community. They all have certainly represented each of those groups very well this season."

Reeh said the Herd must now focus on beating Borger and remaining in first place.

"We just have to keep this momentum we've created in the last few matches and go into Saturday against Borger very aggressively," Reeh said of the final contest. "Borger is in a great position to be a spoiler for us. They've got lots of talent and when they get rolling, they're tough."

Herd JV vs. Levelland

The Hereford junior varsity had little trouble with Levelland, taking a 15-1, 15-8 win.

Jennifer Bullard led with 10 service points while Brek Binder and Lori Sanders had four each.

In the first game, the Herd had a 5-0 lead before Levelland scored its only point, as Bullard had the first four and last five points of the game.

The visitors managed to stay close early during the second game, trailing only 3-2 before Hereford took control.

"We didn't miss a serve in the first game," JV coach Lynn Gilbreath said. "We hit the ball really well. In the second game, we had a few errors. It was really hard to maintain intensity, but we had a good match statistically."

conversion.

The lead proved to be short lived, though, as Borger's Chris Hanna returned the ensuing kickoff 63 yards for a touchdown. Borger tied the game when quarterback Chad Mullenix ran for the conversion.

Borger took the lead on the first play of the second quarter when Eric Powell ran 20 yards on a reverse and Hanna added the two extra points.

Hereford came back to tie the score with nine seconds left in the first half. Brown hit Noland on a tailback pass to the quarterback from 15 yards out and Noland passed to Raymond Alaniz for the conversion.

Borger scored the winning touchdown on the first play of the fourth quarter when Mullenix went over from the 1-yard line.

In the "B" game, Greg Kalka threw to Ben Barrientos for Hereford's only points.

In games played at the South Field, Levelland swept both games from the seventh grade White "A" and "B" teams with a pair of 20-0 shutouts.

In eighth grade action, the Maroon "A" and "B" teams traveled to Borger where the "A" lost, 20-0, and the "B" fell, 14-6. Armando Garza scored the "B" team's only touchdown on a three-yard run.

The eighth grade White "A" and "B" teams will face Plainview Red at 4 p.m. Thursday at the Junior High Field.

Series setbacks: shocks, showers, Stones

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) - Before the World Series resumes at Candlestick Park, part of it will spend some time in Phoenix.

The Subway Series is taking a jet.

The Oakland Athletics were to work out today and Thursday at Phoenix Stadium, their spring training facility.

A week after a devastating earthquake hit the Bay area, San Francisco and Oakland worked out Tuesday after morning showers.

The World Series is scheduled to resume Friday at Candlestick after an 11-day delay between games. It's the longest delay in the history of the Fall Classic.

The decision to move to Phoenix was made after Tuesday's workout by General Manager Sandy Alderson.

"Sandy told the players this was their best chance to get ready," Oakland manager Tony La Russa said.

"We'll work out at 2 (p.m.) on Wednesday and noon on Thursday and leave at 6 (p.m.)," La Russa said.

"If they could guarantee we could do everything here that we need to do, we would stay here," La Russa said. "The people here just want us to be ready."

Scattered showers were predicted for the Bay area for today and Thursday.

The A's started their season in Arizona in February and played their first exhibition game at Phoenix Stadium on March 5.

It was suggested to La Russa that the A's are going back to spring training.

"I wouldn't put any label on it," the A's manager said.

"It's more like being on the 15-day disabled list," A's catcher Terry Steinbach said. "I'm sure everyone will feel a little strange on Friday at Candlestick."

The Giants will continue their workouts in San Francisco, where an aftershock of 4.5 was registered Tuesday. The aftershock, the latest of about 3,500 to hit the area since the quake, did not affect the teams nor the stadiums.

"We're feeling a lot better now because we know what's going on," Giants pitcher Kelly Downs said. "It would be real tough if they would've needed to delay it again. If that happened, I'm sure a lot of guys would feel that they should just cancel the World Series."

Candlestick Park, meanwhile, is set to go for Game 3 on Friday evening. San Francisco mayor Art Agnos on Tuesday certified the stadium as structurally sound.

The weather also seemed ready to cooperate. After a week of scattered showers, the National Weather Service predicted clear skies for the weekend.

The weather is beyond the Athletics' control. But the Rolling Stones aren't.

The rock group is scheduled to play at the Oakland Coliseum on Nov. 4-5 and nearly 120,000 tickets have been sold. The Stones say their contract allows them to move into the stadium five days early to set up, and that could conflict with Games 6 and 7 of the World Series, if necessary, on Oct. 31 and Nov. 1.

"Maybe we could be the opening act," Alderson joked. "I'm sure something can be worked out. It might mean a delay of a day or two for the concerts."

Concert promoter Bill Graham said that his options included postponing the show for a day or having the Rolling Stones play at the Coliseum on a smaller stage that would not take as much time to set up.

AFTER SCHOOL

MEMPHIS (AP) - Two Memphis State professors completed a study on a controversial subject: college athletes and academics.

Their findings were that football players succeed academically or professionally about as well as those at most other major schools. Basketball players do not.

The survey disclosed that of 76 football players who completed eligibility between 1978-79 and 1983-84 at Memphis State, 51 percent graduated and made a good living, either in pro football or business. Only 11 percent of the basketball players in the same years graduated and only one got a pro contract.

SHORT PEOPLE

FORT WAYNE, Ind. (AP) - The outstanding guard of the Indiana-Purdue-Fort Wayne basketball team, Lawrence Jordan, is only 5-6. But in his first two years he broke all the school records for assists.

Other people may be surprised at his size but Jordan is not. "I had nothing to do with it," he said with a smile. "My father is 5-4 and my mother is 5-3. I'm the giant in the family. They call me Kareem around the house."

Irish apologize for pregame fight

SOUTH BEND, Ind. (AP) - Notre Dame has apologized to Southern California for the fight among players before last Saturday's game between the longtime college football rivals.

Athletic Director Richard Rosenthal telephoned his Southern Cal counterpart, Mike McGee, to smooth out the ruffled emotions left by the incident.

"He called to apologize and said to expect a letter of apology from Notre Dame and assured us they were working to correct the situation," Tim Tesselone, USC's sports information director, said.

Athletic administrators for the schools maintained public silence over the incident, in which USC and Notre Dame players battled near the tunnel leading to the locker rooms.

Rosenthal and McGee couldn't be reached for comment and Tesselone said USC coach Larry Smith, who had angrily denounced Notre Dame's failure to prevent the brawl, refused to discuss the matter further.

Notre Dame coach Lou Holtz discussed it at length, however, during a press conference Tuesday.

Holtz said he feared Notre Dame's reputation could be tarnished by the incident. He labored to polish the image, vowing to punish any players involved in the fracas and to resign if it happens again.

Yet Holtz weaved back and forth, holding his players blameless at one point, then later promising disciplinary action.

And while accepting responsibility for the fight, the third since last fall involving Notre Dame players, Holtz implied Southern Cal may have been at fault, too. When pressed on that point, Holtz passed on the opportunity to absolve the Trojans and called the question "irrelevant."

On at least one crucial point, however, he was unchanged.

"We at Notre Dame take responsibility for that thing occurring," he said.

The first fight occurred Oct. 15, 1988, when Miami and Notre Dame became involved in a pre-game melee inside Notre Dame Stadium's narrow tunnel. Holtz dismissed that incident as a misunderstanding, saying Miami players had mistakenly believed Notre Dame players rushing off the field were headed to attack them.

At the Fiesta Bowl on Jan. 2, Holtz himself rushed onto the field to settle his players, who had begun taunting and showing West Virginia players with only minutes remaining and the Mountaineers long out of the game. "We were completely out of line, and I've said that before," Holtz said.

But the incident with Southern Cal may have been different, at least in the mind of Holtz and his players.

"The connotation that our football players tried to instigate this or start it, I can't agree with that," he said.

In explaining events leading to the fight, Holtz said practice areas on the football field are carefully divided to allow each team room to run plays and punt. The division line, a dog-leg jag running from the south 40-yard line to the north 40, is clearly marked in the visitors' locker room, he said.

A 20-year-old ritual requires the visiting team, practicing on the south half, to follow the narrow and crowded sidelines to the tunnel when the players leave the field. "That's their obligation," Holtz said.

The entire width of the field at the north end, just outside the tunnel, belongs to Notre Dame.

Holtz suggested Southern Cal players crossed through the still-practicing Notre Dame team, a small incursion that could ignite the high emotions on both sides of the longtime rivals.

HS leaders keep AP spots

By The Associated Press

Converse Judson in 5A, West Orange-Stark in 4A, Southlake Carroll in 3A, Groveton in 2A and Munday in A had little trouble retaining their leads in The Associated Press Schoolboy Football Poll.

But there were shakups below them especially in 4A where Jasper jumped from No. 4 to No. 2 following an open date, moving ahead of Calallen and Bay City, which had impressive victories.

Under the new 4A alignment, West Orange-Stark kept its lead with 18 of the 26 first place votes cast by The AP's panel of sports writers and sportscasters.

Jasper moved into second place followed by Calallen and Bay City.

Paris, the defending 4A state champion, lost its second game of the season and dropped from No. 7 out of the top 10. Terrell, 7-0, is the new No. 10 team.

No. 3 Plano East took the longest fall dropping out of the 5A top 10 after a 39-20 loss to Richardson Pearce. Corpus Christi Carroll, ranked No. 8 last week also disappeared from the rankings.

No. 8 Amarillo Palo Duro and No. 10 Killeen Ellison are the newcomers.

Southlake Carroll, a unanimous No. 1 pick the past three weeks, beat No. 4 Gainesville 35-13 but lost its unanimous billing. Carroll still got 25 of the 26 first place votes.

Gainesville dropped to No. 10 following its second loss of the season.

Reagan County, 4-2, lost its No. 10 ranking in 2A after a 10-9 loss to Winters and was replaced at No. 10 by Shiner, 7-0.

No. 8 Skidmore-Tynan was tied 10-10 by Runge and No. 9 Era lost to Valley View 14-13 in Class A and both fell from the rankings. The replacements are No. 9 Normangee and No. 10 Rising Star.

Other teams receiving votes included: 5A, Plano East 29 points, Victoria 20, Sugar Land Willowridge 18, Corpus Christi Carroll 13, San Antonio Sam Houston 10; 4A, El Campo 21, Tomball 17, Paris 15; 3A, Freer 25, Iowa Park 20, Vernon 19, Linden-Kildare and Montgomery 11 each; 2A, Manor 11 and A, Charlotte 14, Bells and Frost 10 each.

Tagliabue close to job

CLEVELAND (AP) - Paul Tagliabue, one of Pete Rozelle's closest advisors, is three votes away from becoming Rozelle's successor as commissioner of the NFL.

The question now is whether Rozelle's implied threat to walk out of the job he had vowed to keep until a successor is chosen will be enough to break the deadlock among NFL owners.

The owners met for 11 hours Tuesday and adjourned after four votes with Tagliabue three short of the 19 needed for election. He had 16 votes to 11 for Jim Finks, the New Orleans Saints president and the candidate of the so-called "Old Guard" owners. Finks had seemed to have the job locked up in July until a group of 11 insurgents blocked his election.

Now it's Tagliabue, who is about as old guard as can be after two decades working closely with Rozelle and old-line owners, who seems in position to get the job.

"Jim Finks' candidacy is dead," Philadelphia's Norman Braman, one of the leaders of the insurgent group, said.

It is blunt statements like that made by Braman which have kept the deadlock going through 40 hours of meetings and 10 ballots. What might eventually break it is Rozelle's implied threat to walk out. He announced his retirement on March 22 and has been living in a New York hotel suite since Aug. 1 while his wife, Carrie, prepares for their move to the San Diego area.

Even if Finks lacks the votes for election, he has more than enough to block Tagliabue. Wellington Mara of the New York Giants and Art Modell of Cleveland are owners who like Tagliabue, a 48-year-old Washington lawyer, but don't want to cede control of the NFL to newcomers.

The new commissioner will have to get 19 votes from just 26 voters. The Los Angeles Raiders' Al Davis left town on Tuesday and San Diego's Alex Spanos won't be present for today's meeting. Both were aligned with Finks.

"There's going to have to be a solution that provides an opportunity for everyone to save face," conceded one of those newcomers, New England's Victor Kiam, who has owned the Patriots for less than a year. "Right now, there's a lot of pride involved."

Rozelle wasn't interested in face.

Clearly exasperated with the delay - it is now 218 days since he announced his retirement - he left some strong hints that he might walk away if the deadlock continues.

"I indicated my patience was becoming very short," he said. "I didn't give them an ultimatum, but they understood how I felt."

Then he added: "I feel like I've lost some of my retirement already."

Hereford--the town without a toothache

Dr. George Heard left an indelible mark, telling world of city's life-giving waters

By ORVILLE HOWARD
Special Feature Writer

George Heard may have been a man before his time, a voice crying in the wilderness, but he left an indelible mark on Hereford in telling the world of the life-giving waters of Hereford--the town without a toothache.

No toothaches in Hereford? Well, almost, back when local diets contained home-grown products and lots of water...pure blue water from the Ogallala sands far below the fertile farms of Deaf Smith County.

No toothaches in Hereford? Well, almost, back when folks ate lots of raw vegetables from Deaf Smith County fields, drank raw milk from Deaf Smith County dairies and blended recipes with flours from grains of local fields.

For more than 20 years, Hereford was headlined worldwide as a "Town Without A Toothache"--journalists from every continent on earth beat a path to Hereford to find the health secrets of this Texas Panhandle town. They came, they found and they wrote. Headlines of Hereford's health habits emblazoned the most renowned publications of the world. Writers told of the pure waters of Hereford that evidently built strong teeth and strong bones.

They told of locally-grown grains that aided in the structure of healthy, strong bodies and of the high, dry climate where the sun shines more than 300 days a year.

And right in the middle of it all was an unpretentious man by the name of Dr. George W. Heard, a dentist who had a second-floor office at Third and Main.

Being something of an adventurous man, a person who had continuously looked for new horizons, Dr. Heard kept astute records of his dental work. He sought for more painless ways in handling dental work and looked for the "best way" in terminal cases.

Thus, early in his professional career at Hereford Dr. Heard noted that folks around this Texas Panhandle town generally sported a mouthful of strong, healthy teeth. He began to keep records of these findings long before World War I, and told colleagues of the low cavity rate around Hereford as compared to those in South Texas or his native state of Alabama.

Simply put, his hometown research was ignored by associates in the dental profession--sometimes to the point of becoming the scapegoat of satirical jokes at community meetings and national dental conventions. But despite the ignorance of those around, Dr. Heard continued to keep detailed records of his patients and the end result just kept getting better...more patients and less cavities from the natives of Hereford.

Twenty years slipped by--World War I had come and gone. Omnipresent rumbles of World War II were being heard across Europe in 1939 when Dr. Heard decided to make his research in writing to the Texas State Board of Health in Austin. In essence, the report of Dr. Heard said there was a noticeable absence of caries (cavities) among patients who had spent most of their lives, or who were born, in the Hereford area.

Dr. Heard infiltrated some of his homespun philosophy in the reports, saying he believed the absence of caries may be attributed to the excellent drinking water in the Hereford area and perhaps to the excellent food value of vegetables and grains grown in the rich soils of Deaf Smith County.

"I remember Dad saying that one of the first things he noticed when he came to Hereford in 1916 was the strong, healthy teeth of folks from around the Deaf Smith Community," recalled George G. Heard of Amarillo, a son and only child of Dr. and Mrs. George W. Heard. "He always says that you could tell what a person ate or drank by looking into his mouth."

But it was not until 1941 when the voice of this Hereford dentist was heard around the world with a simple slogan coined on research from a walk-up dentist office--"A Town Without a Toothache."

Dr. Edward Taylor, director of Dental Health for the Texas State Board of Health in Austin, had told the research section of the American Dental Association of the results of Dr. Heard's findings during a national meeting in Houston in October of 1941. Dr. Taylor commented at the time that this study of Dr. Heard may become one of the most important discoveries in dental history.

Newspaper reporters covering the Houston convention caught the meaning of having teeth without cavities--the following day, Dr. Heard found himself the center of medical history in the making as the Big City press across the nation bannered headlines on the Hereford dentist and the health-bearing attributes of water and food produced from Deaf Smith County soils. Some writers went a step further and envisioned "A World Without a Toothache."

To the detriment of the commercial industry related to teeth, Dr. Heard's research showed that there was little relationship if and when a person brushed his teeth--or how many times a day. The most important thing related to Dr. Heard's research was how long they had lived in the Hereford area.

Dr. Heard became so convinced in his theories that good teeth was related directly to water and raw farm products produced from the Hereford area that he frequently quizzed his patients on their eating and drinking habits if he found an extra cavity.

Despite the headlines of the Hereford research, dental associates of Dr. Heard in general refused to accept these uncorroborated dental reports. Later, during the same meeting in Houston that made national headlines, Dr. Heard extended to Dr. Taylor a personal invitation to come to Hereford for an on-site inspection for a second point-of-view of the relationship between local teeth and local water and local produce.

In March of 1942, Dr. Taylor surprised the Hereford dentist with a phone call from the state dental office in Austin, wanting to see for himself the fine teeth of Hereford folks. In an effort to make Taylor's findings an official act of corroboration, an uninterested person unrelated to the dentistry profession accompanied the Austin official on the Hereford fact-finding mission.

Under supervised escort, Dr. Taylor toured Deaf Smith County, examining 56 persons of which 43 were native-born residents. Dr. Taylor did not find a single cavity among the 56 and returned to Austin with a personal determination to make Dr. Heard's research more than homespun philosophy. He made the research an official report which went worldwide to the dental and medical professions. And the colleagues of Dr. Heard finally began to listen--just a little.

Preliminary studies continued in 1942 when additional state health department dentists showed up in Hereford for extended studies of school children--taking into consideration of what they ate and drank and how long they had lived in Hereford.

In a summary report of the two-year study, Dr. Taylor later reported that of 289 children examined, ages 6 to 18, who had lived in the Hereford area all of their lives, only 111, or 38.4 percent, showed any signs of tooth decay. The average was 1.29 decayed teeth per child, a rate much lower than the previously lowest recorded rate of caries in the civilized world.

This was the ink that broke the publishers' backs--Dr. Heard once again was the focal point in medical news--reporters and editors from every hamlet and city of America wanted an interview with this Hereford dentist. Then came Collier's Magazine and its J.D. Ratcliff to Hereford, a writer who is generally accredited with the first national headlines of "Hereford--A Town Without A Toothache." Ratcliff's story was followed with a condensed version in Reader's Digest, followed by video spots on the "silver screen" from Universal News Reels... millions of popcorn munchers across America for the first time discovered the Texas town of Hereford.

From news accounts and documentaries on file, it seems that Dr. Taylor wanted still further evidence of the glad tidings from Hereford, so in 1947--five years later--the Austin state official showed up in Hereford once again, along with another team of dentists to make a second survey in April of 1947.

Dr. Taylor said at the time that the 1947 dental study was conducted only as an official move to further substantiate the earlier findings of Dr. Heard, who by this time had sold his practice and retired from dentistry (May 1964).

At this point in time, dental scientists had not uncovered any specific reason or underlying facts behind the low cavity rate, other than it obviously was connected to locally-grown food and/or water.

The laxity in follow-up research on Dr. Heard's studies at that time apparently was due in part by the troubled times of World War II and by disinterest evidenced from the dental profession. The 1947-48 studies on the relationship between Hereford--grown teeth, food and water brought additional scientists to Hereford that included a Dr. F.M. Butler who conducted research here in 1948 and a dentist by the name of Dr. Elmer G. Ahlf from the state office in Austin.

It was Dr. Ahlf who first made public that the low-cavity rate around Hereford may be attributed to the fluorine in the drinking water which came from the Ogallala Formations hundreds of feet below the surface of the Earth. Later, Dr. Ahlf's theories were confirmed on an international level, thus, leading to national fluoridation of drinking water. His theories also paved the way for much controversy in the field of dentistry on the attributes of fluorine relative to the maintenance of healthy teeth.

In January of 1947, Dr. Heard appeared on national television (there were no local television stations in the Texas Panhandle at that time) to tell of his research around Hereford. He was asked by a national news commentator, in a satirical manner, if there were any dentists left in Hereford?

"I told them that many people living here ship their food in from other areas and, therefore, have rotten teeth just like they have anywhere else," Dr. Heard replied.

"I told them that I am no scientist--I know what I have seen. I did observe, though, in 52 years' dental practice that what a fellow eats shows up in his mouth. People who eat foods grown in Hereford do not have bad teeth."

As result of Dr. Heard's research during his 30 years' of dental practice in downtown Hereford, a group of physicians and local residents in 1951 established the Deaf Smith County Research Foundation, with Dr. L.B. Barnett of Hereford named as the foundation's charter president. The foundation employed a full-time laboratory technician and had an agricultural division designed to make exhaustive studies of locally-grown vegetables and grains.

Earlier, Deaf Smith County Chamber of Commerce President E.B. Posey had prepared a brochure depicting Hereford's health-giving qualities. At about the same point in time, the W.W. Hill family of Hereford had offered a tract of land for the location of a Shrine Crippled Children's Hospital in Hereford, but there were no takers.

With the coming of the vast boom-or-bust irrigation industry of the 1950s, Hereford became an industrialized city of the Plains, leaving in limbo some of this pioneer legacy. Wars and farm bills took precedent over day-to-day historical accounting and the volumes of hand-written research from the old drugstore dental office of Dr. Heard was all but forgotten.

During a recent conversation with Dr. Heard's son and daughter-in-law in Amarillo, the early life of Dr. Heard was told with much reverence from a couple who also spent much of their lives in scientific research. As recalled by his son, Dr. George W. Heard was born Oct. 21, 1867, the middle child of a family of 13 children. He spent his early years on a farm 24 miles east of Talladega, Ala., during a time of oppression of the Reconstruction Years of post-Civil Wars days. A national educational system had not reached the Deep South by the time the Heard youngster had reached school age. Thus the public school system at that time in Alabama was limited to three grades.

The system required that each student memorize everything in the three grades with each student more or less setting his own pace. Young George had reached teenage years by the time the three grades were mastered by rote memory and it was then he began working for a man by the name of Street over on the edge of Tennessee where he earned enough money to buy his first pair of store-bought clothes at the age of 21.

With this Mr. Street being a lawyer and a local judge, and his wife also being a college graduate, Mrs. Street taught her own children in their home, a rather common practice in those days.

It was here that George Heard learned how to run a one-bottom sod plow and all of the heavy hand-work that went with southern farms of the 1880s. Since young Heard had a distinct dialect from his part of Alabama, he began picking up new words and new phrases from the street children. Then one day the Street children asked their mother if George could join in on the living room school lessons at night following long days in the fields. He was accepted into the Street household classroom.

By the time he was about 23, Heard had saved enough money to enroll into a local school for teachers, and after the first year of college, he began teaching and going to school at the same time. It wasn't long before heard learned that he could make more money teaching in Texas than in Alabama so he headed west to the Waco area where he taught school for a short period of time.

Then came a day when he heard that dentists made more money than school teachers, so with a few bucks in his pocket, he headed up to Vanderbilt which was the school at that time south of the Mason-Dixon Line that offered a four-year college in dentistry. After one term of dentistry at Vanderbilt, a student could practice dentistry in the summer and go to school in the winter, similar to the system offered in colleges for teachers.

"Dad would go out and pull teeth all summer then go to school in the winter," said George G. Heard. "He graduated from Vanderbilt in 1898 but he had already been practicing dentistry since 1894."

At the age of 31, young Dr. Heard set out to make fame and fortune in the dental profession but it was a little different from today's plush waiting rooms, swivel chairs, fluorescent lighting and the electric drills. Instead of waiting lines and scheduled appointments, Dr. Heard went from door-to-door asking if anyone needed some tooth work. He used kerosene lamps, treadle-driven drills and whiskey when morphine was scarce. He practiced dentistry in Albertville, Ala., for 17 years, a time of his life when he was married and a son was born.

He and Mattie G. Reed were married in Albertville in 1906, with Mrs. Heard also being a native of the Deep South. She was born in Ragland in 1874. Upon the death of her mother, she and a sister became responsible for a large family at a time when "growing up" came early. She was educated in Alabama and received her master's degree from the Heidelberg University at Tiffin, Ohio, and in the years that followed she wound up teaching seven terms at Roswell, N.M., where she was seeking a drier climate for health purposes.

Their son, George G. Heard, was born Nov. 12, 1911, at Albertville and a short time later, the parents were seeking a drier climate for Mrs. Heard, first in the Jourdon area of South Texas and then northward to Amarillo and Hereford. In 1913, the Heards became a part of the Deaf Smith County area when they bought a section of farmland 3 miles south of Hereford. The town at that time was called the "Windmill City" of Texas. The small farming center boasted more than 400 windmills and had already begun bragging about its healthful climate in land development brochures. As early as 1901, land boosters had proclaimed nationwide about the "health-giving properties of this dry atmosphere, the excellence of our water and the vigorous growth of all kinds of garden products and grains." In 1910, the Hereford Chamber of Commerce included in its platform the "making of Hereford a health resort."

George G. Heard had just celebrated his 4th birthday in Albertville, Ala., when his parents moved to Hereford to take over a second-floor dental practice in a building owned by W.E. Dameron at Third and Main.

The first floor--or street floor--was a corner drugstore that was the meeting place of downtown Hereford--a place where townspeople could buy cold soda drinks, ice cream, drug sundries and most of all, exchange daily gossip. The drugstore also served as a point of election returns, and its new-fangled radio drew large crowds each summer when baseball season rolled around.

"I remember Dad telling how he would go downstairs and get someone to help run the old-fashioned tread-powered tooth drills when someone came in with a real bad decay," recalled the younger Heard. "In those days, the drills were powered with a foot-tread a whole like the old-fashion sewing machines."

"Later, when he got an electrically-powered outfit, Dad would really play hell with the baseball games downstairs when he turned on those old tooth drills."

While Dr. Heard was making notes on the fine teeth of Hereford residents, he was also making notes on the number of "bad" gums he encountered in his 30 years' of practice on Main Street--a physical deficiency that was never solved by the Hereford dentist.

The son graduated from Hereford High School in 1929 and graduated in January 1934 from the University of Wisconsin with a degree in chemical engineering. He immediately went to work for Sinclair Oil Co. at its research headquarters in East Chicago, Ind., assigned to research and development of oil lubricants.

He and Margaret Donnelly of Terra Haute, Ind., met while the two were attending the University of Wisconsin and were married.

She also graduated from the University in 1934 with a degree in chemical engineering, the first woman to graduate from the school with a chemical engineering degree. but she went to work for the sweeter things of life--research in the E.J. Brach Candy Co. in Chicago, Ill.

Through the years, Dr. Heard invested heavily in local farms around Hereford and when he sold his practice to Dr. Will Graham and retired from dentistry, he once again returned to the ways of his childhood--farming. But this time it was in high-dollar stakes of irrigated potatoes and field grains. Dr. Heard had also become something of a self-imposed benefactor of many young farmers long on energy but short on capital.

Dr. Heard's son and family returned to Hereford in 1944 to find the family farm in a "peculiar farming mess"--on the brink of becoming a financial disaster.

Though the initial trip back to Hereford in 1944 was intended only as an effort to help his father recover some farm loans, George and Margaret wound up taking over the entire farming operations--George in the potato fields and Margaret running the books. There were 160 acres of potatoes ready to dig and not a worker in sight. In a fast move from Chicago, the Heards turned a "farming mess" into a workable unit, establishing a potato shed near the old water tower in southeast Hereford.

Once again, George G. Heard and family were residents of Hereford, but this time as full-fledged farmers. In 1946, the son built an alfalfa pellet mill on the east edge of Hereford to be operated in conjunction with the farming interests. The mill at one time employed some 20 persons and ran 24-hour shifts during hay season.

On March 14, 1947, Mattie Heard died at the age of 73. Dr. Heard continued to live in Hereford. In 1957, his son leased out all of the Heard farming interests, the alfalfa dehydrating alfalfa pellet mill and went back to his profession of chemical engineering--this time for the country of Iraq at Bagdad. An Iranian war cut short a scheduled 10-year tour and the George G. Heard family returned to Texas in 1959.

Since the Heard farm and feed-mill were still under lease, the Heards elected to live in Amarillo where he could continue his chemical engineering profession at Pantex Plant east of Amarillo. By this time, Dr. Heard was in failing health and moved to Amarillo to spend the rest of his days with his son, daughter-in-law and grandchildren. In 1962, the Heards sold the pellet mill to a Nebraska outfit but continued to lease the farmland.

On Aug. 7, 1965, Dr. George W. Heard died, just short of his 98th birthday, and was buried near his wife at Hereford, a town which he had adored for nearly 50 years.

The George G. Heards are now retired and travel extensively throughout the world. Their home is adorned with family photographs, particularly their children--Martha of Albuquerque, George E. of Golden Colo., Jane of Portland, Ore., and Leslie of Clinton, Miss. BUt most of the formal decor comes in the form of oil paintings--fine creations from the brush of Mattie Heard...perhaps one of the best kept secrets of Hereford.

Perhaps tomorrow--or some day in the seasons ahead--you may spot a weathered sign at 1st and Main where downtown Hereford blends with U.S. 60. There's no name nor dates...no glitter or glamour, just black and white lettering on cedar posts--"Stop for a drink of water from the town without a toothache, Hereford, Texas."

With services Saturday, Sunday

First Baptist Church will observe 90th anniversary

The 90th anniversary of First Baptist Church of Hereford will be observed with a special banquet Saturday night and in worship services Sunday morning, according to Dr. Ron Cook, pastor.

The banquet Saturday night will begin at 7 p.m. in the Family Life Center and tickets are available at the church office. Featured speaker will be Dr. Gary Cook, president of Dallas Baptist University.

Sunday morning will be "High Attendance Sunday" for the Sunday School Department with a goal of 450 set for the various classes.

Dr. J.B. Fowler, editor of the Baptist New Mexican, will be the speaker for the Sunday morning worship service.

The Baptist church was organized Oct. 15, 1899 when a group of 10 men and 8 women met in a vacant store building to organize a church. A pastor was called from Canyon at a salary of $180 per year for parttime work. After meeting in homes and buildings, the first church was built at Jackson and 4th Streets and occupied at Christmas time in 1900.

In July, 1910, a Sunday School annex was added and a baptismal spot was acquired on Tierra Blanca Creek. The baptistry and dressing rooms were built three years later. In just another 18 years, a larger building was needed and E.W. Harrison gave the building site at the corner of Main and 5th Streets, the present location.

Public subscriptions were raised for the sum of $64,614 and the first service in that church was held May 19, 1929. Even during the dust bowl days, payments were made on the debt and the mortgage was paid off in 1942.

The First Baptist has started several missions which are now churches. Mission work was started at Dawn in 1942 and it later became the Dawn Baptist Church. In 1945, mission work began in northwest Hereford and the resulting church is now Avenue Baptist. In 1950, FBC added the H.G. Conkright educational building to its facilities and two years later another mission was established in north Hereford. This is now the Temple Baptist Church.

Also in 1945, FBC acquired a lot in Glorieta, N.M., where the church lodge is now located. A Mexican mission was started in 1956, later to be moved on N. Hwy. 385 and it became the First Mexican Baptist Church. A new elementary education building was completed in 1958 and, a year later, the church sanctuary was remodeled with new pews, carpet and sound system. A church lodge was also built at the High Plains Baptist Assembly.

An elevator was installed in the sanctuary area in 1964, and a new Fellowship Hall was built in 1970. On Oct. 15, 1979, members voted to completely renovate the sanctuary, stripping the interior and starting from scratch. A goal of $750,000 was set to cover the construction and all costs of the project. Pledges totalled almost $1 million after a campaign drive.

The church approved the construction of a Family Life Center on March 2, 1986 and the new $500,000 facility was dedicated March 29, 1987. The church has grown from 18 members in 1899 to 1,668 in 1989. (The membership rolls show 798 resident members and 870 non-resident members).

The church in 1899 collected $1,225 to purchase its first building site. The FBC church property value is now estimated to exceed $2.5 million.

T.J. Burnett was the first pastor of FBC in 1899. Dr. Cook, current pastor, came in February, 1983. He is listed as the 21st pastor to serve the church. Three former pastors are living at this time: B.L. Davis (1960-67), Gerald Mann (1968-73) and Doug Manning (1973-82).

Use alkalized cocoa for gourmet desserts

NEW YORK (AP) - Hershey Chocolate U.S.A. has introduced European Style Cocoa, Hershey's version of alkalized cocoa. For "Dutch-processed" or alkalized cocoa, unsweetened cocoa powder is mixed with an alkali agent that reacts with the cocoa to create a darker color and distinct flavor in rich gourmet baking and beverages.

Hershey says alkalized cocoa does not have the same baking uses as regular, unsweetened, non-alkalized cocoa. "Recipes are always carefully developed for one type of cocoa to yield the best combination of flavors and baking characteristics, so switching the two cocoas may not yield the best results," the company says.

Heat oven to 350 degrees F. Line a 9- by 11/2-inch round pan with aluminum foil; butter bottom only.

In large mixer bowl beat eggs, sugar, butter, vanilla and salt. Beat on high speed for 3 minutes until smooth and thick, scraping bowl often. Add cocoa and flour; blend well. Stir in almonds. Spread into prepared pan. Bake 35 to 40 minutes or until wooden pick inserted in center comes out clean. Cool on wire rack for 15 minutes. Remove from pan. Carefully peel off foil; cool thoroughly. Place on serving plate. Spread Sacher Glaze over top and sides; garnish with sliced almonds if desired. Makes 10 to 12 servings.

Sacher Glaze: In small saucepan over medium heat melt 1/2 cup butter. Remove from heat. Immediately add 1 and 1-3rd cups semi-sweet chocolate chips, stirring until chips are melted and mixture is smooth. Cool until slightly thickened.

"And if he is effective, he gets artistic performances out of everybody. You need to find good producers to spread good producers across the state."

Next in line are writers, directors and designers, said Busfield, who holds a theater degree from East Tennessee State University and conducts summer workshops for young people at the school.

Let us show you a Texas you've never seen before.

- All 172 pages in full color
- Each page measures a large 15 x 11 inches
- Presents the entire state in stunning detail
- Appendices and specialty maps of many different features

THE ROADS OF TEXAS is the culmination of a mammoth project that has involved many individuals for over two years. When you get your copy of THE ROADS OF TEXAS you'll wonder how you ever traveled the state without it.

This 172 page atlas contains maps that show the complete Texas road system (all 284,000 miles) plus just about every city and community! Texas A&M University Cartographics Laboratory staff members produced the maps, based on county maps from the State Department of Highways and Public Transportation. The details shown are amazing—county and local roads, lakes, reservoirs, streams, dams, historic sites, pumping stations, golf courses, cemeteries, mines and many other features too numerous to list.

What they're saying about "The Roads of Texas"

"When you get your copy of THE ROADS OF TEXAS you'll wonder how you ever travelled the state without it."
Texas Highways Magazine
October, 1988

"For details of Texas terrain, oil company maps and the State's Official Highway Map can't match THE ROADS OF TEXAS."

These people are shouting with joy.

Why? Because they're just two of the people who have enjoyed the success of Hereford Brand classifieds. They were able to target what they had to offer to their prospective customers. Like many customers, it cost them less than $11 a week to run their ad every day in the Brand. Because they ran their ad every day for a week, they received a free ad in the Reach 4 More, reaching customers in Hereford, Dimmitt, Friona, Vega and Adrian. You can be a success, too. Family members will gobble up turkey legs

Next time you get ready to cook beans, consider adding a smoked turkey leg to the pot. It imparts the same smoky flavor as a ham hock but with less fat.

Or, when cool weather calls for warm stew, use turkey legs in place of red meat. Brown the legs first, then stew them slowly until the meat falls off the bone.

Thirty years ago 90 percent of the turkeys consumed in the United States were eaten during the holiday season. Today around two-thirds of consumption takes place from January through September. Much of the change is due to the availability of parts and other turkey products that are easier to handle than a whole bird.

Americans will eat an estimated 16.9 pounds of turkey per capita this year, up from 9.9 pounds in 1979. "About half of that is probably eaten as turkey hams, breasts, and other parts," said Dan Mittel.

Smoked turkey legs are sold to festivals around the state where they're convenient to carry around and snack on," Mittel said. The rest are sold retail. The legs are cured in a manner similar to ham, the reason for their pinkish color and smoky-sweet flavor.

Smoked and raw turkey legs are readily available in most supermarkets. Most weigh around three-fourths pound, which yields a serving or more of meat. They are an inexpensive source of high-quality protein. Dark meat with skin contains 18.5 grams of protein in a 3 1/2-ounce serving. Fat content is slightly over 10 percent, less than a third of it saturated.

"The protein in turkey is easily absorbed," said Texas Department of Agriculture home economist Carol Guthrie. "It is high in the amino acid methionine, which breaks down protein and allows the body to use more of it. Turkey is also a source of potassium and, to a lesser extent, calcium, iron, magnesium, phosphorus and zinc."

Texas ranks sixth in turkey production in the country. In 1988 it produced an estimated 160 million pounds of turkey valued at approximately $58.4 million.

HUNTER'S TURKEY LEGS

6 turkey legs

- Salt and pepper to taste
- 4 T. olive oil, divided
- 1/4 C. all-purpose flour
- 1 C. chopped onion
- 2 minced garlic cloves
- 1 lb. sliced mu. rooms
- 1 C. dry white wine
- 2 T. chopped fresh tarragon or 1 T. dried
- 3 C. chopped ripe tomatoes
- 1 C. chicken broth

Sprinkle turkey legs with salt and pepper and set aside. Heat 3 tablespoons of oil in heavy skillet large enough to hold the legs in one layer. Dredge legs in flour and shake off excess. Add legs three at a time to the skillet and cook, turning often so they brown evenly on all sides, about 10 to 15 minutes. Remove

PINTO BEANS WITH SMOKED TURKEY

- 1 lb. pinto beans, washed and sorted
- 1 T. oil
- 1 chopped onion
- 2 minced garlic cloves
- 1 (1-lb) smoked turkey leg
- 1 T. chili powder
- Salt and pepper to taste

Place beans in bowl, cover with water and soak overnight. Or cover beans with water in medium saucepan and boil 2 minutes. Remove from heat and let stand covered for 1 hour. Drain. Heat oil in Dutch oven or large heavy saucepan over medium heat. Add onion and garlic and saute until tender. Add beans and enough water to cover by 1 inch. Add turkey leg. Simmer, covered, 2 1/2 to 3 hours or until beans and turkey are tender.

Remove turkey leg. Pull off meat and add to beans. Add chili powder, salt and pepper. Cook, uncovered, 30 to 60 minutes or until mixture thickens. Taste and correct seasonings. Makes 6 servings.

Hints from Heloise

DENTURES

Dear Heloise: My husband was in a nursing home for six and a half years and one of the things that really helped during his stay was that his dentist had put my husband's name in his false teeth. Quite often the teeth would wind up in other rooms than his and the name made them much easier to identify.

This would also be a good idea for eyeglasses. I now do volunteer work in nursing homes and see misplaced items all the time. — Mary Tomky, Austin, Colo.

FIREPLACE LOGS

Dear Heloise: My husband makes newspaper logs by rolling old newspapers tightly and fitting the rolls into empty cardboard tubes from paper towels. They work well as fire starters. — Barbara Litman, Waldorf, Md.

These do make nice logs and it's a great way to use all that newspaper. The logs will burn longer if you soak them thoroughly in water and then allow them to dry completely. The paper sticks together better and is less likely to come apart and fly into the room or up the chimney. As a caution, don't use colored comic pages. They could emit harmful fumes. Either way, enjoy your cozy fires. — Heloise

FLOSS

Dear Heloise: When material comes loose from a spoke in my umbrella I reattach it with dental floss. It's stronger than thread and it's waterproof. — Frances Porcher, Ft. Myers, Fla.

Salesman Confesses

Claims newspaper is best salesman

On Monday, Jules Wintner, owner of a local retail establishment, confessed his job as a salesman was obsolete due to the impact of newspaper advertising. Wintner, in an exclusive interview, said sales were made in the local paper instead of in the store.

"Sure, we get a chance for additional sales," Wintner commented, "but the newspaper has become our best salesman." Wintner reported that consumers name the local newspaper as their usual source of "Best Buy" information. 10 times more than radio or television. This con- forms with a recent Consumer Data Service report that indicated 60% of the consumers seek "Best Buy" information from the newspaper versus only 6% for radio and 7% for television.

Wintner later remarked that because the newspaper is read by all Texans, regardless of income, his business was able to sell both upper end products as well as value priced items. "No matter what we're selling, we get good response in the newspaper," he said. "In fact, the better our response seems to be." This fact is substantiated in a survey by the Texas Newspaper Advertising Bureau that documented readership of the newspaper increases as income increases. In the survey, almost 75% of Texans with incomes exceeding $50,000 a year read

"Our customers shop the newspaper. When they walk in the door, they already know what they want, they know the price and often have the ad with them."

the newspaper. "My job has become redundant," Wintner admitted. "Used to be I had to really sell each customer, but now I'm just an order taker." Asked what he intended to do now that the newspaper was doing most of the selling, he replied, "Spend more in newspaper advertising than last year."

Salesman admits he "never had to sell anything" because of newspaper ads

Guest speaker

Lt. Col. Albert Tribe from Cannon Air Force Base was the guest speaker at this week's meeting of the Hereford Rotary Club. Tribe utilized a slide presentation to illustrate his presentation on the history and mission of the Clovis base. Cannon is the home base for the 274th Tactical Fighter Wing which includes three squadrons of F111D fighter/bombers. Tribe is in command of the maintenance squadron which keeps those aircraft flying and in good repair.

US ag trade overhaul plan presented at Geneva

WASHINGTON (AP) - A U.S. plan to overhaul world agricultural trade, including the elimination of commodity export subsidies within five years, is being presented today in Geneva.

The plan also calls for the elimination, perhaps within a decade, of domestic programs that distort international trade in farm commodities.

But Agriculture Secretary Clayton Yeutter said the detailed plan prepared for the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade would not get rid of all government farm aid.

"There is nothing here that precludes any nation from having a safety net for its farmers," he said.

Sen. Patrick Leahy, D-Vt., chairman of the Senate Agriculture Committee, said U.S. agricultural policy "will not be made in Geneva or some foreign capital. It will be made by Congress, which must approve any final GATT agreement before it can become law in this country."

Leahy added in a statement: "I will not abandon our farmers to unfair competition. I will also not allow the administration to abandon them either."

"Quick elimination of direct export subsidies should be the top priority of the negotiations," he said. "It makes no sense for both the U.S. and Europe to bribe other countries to buy our farm products. This only drives down prices and raises taxpayer costs."

The current round of talks under the 97-nation GATT began in Punta del Este, Uruguay, on Sept. 20, 1986, and will conclude at the end of 1990.

Yeutter, who joined U.S. Trade Representative Carla Hills at a news conference Tuesday, said the plan going before GATT isn't much different from the initial U.S. proposal made in 1987, although it's "much more comprehensive, much more specific."

Hills said the agriculture proposal "would mean that America's farmers could compete against foreign farmers based on price and quality, rather than on the depth of a foreign government's pocketbook" or the height of a trade barrier.

Yeutter said the U.S. proposal calls for gradually scaling down or eliminating quotas and other non-tariff barriers by converting them into tariffs over 10 years.

He said safeguards would be allowed for temporary protection against countries dumping their goods - selling them below production cost.

Export subsidies would be phased out over five years, Yeutter said. The export subsidies maintained by the European Economic Community have been a sore point with U.S. trade officials for years.

Under the proposal, some domestic subsidies would have a "red light" designation and be eliminated gradually. Those with a "yellow light" designation would be watched for possible further negotiation, and those with "green

Kirby: new school cost could be $3B

TYLER, Texas (AP) - Faced with finding $1 billion to $3 billion in new money to equalize spending among Texas school districts, Education Commissioner William Kirby acknowledges the time frame makes his task even more difficult.

"The plan is going to take a significant amount of new money," Kirby said Monday. "And that new money is going to have to come from taxes, and in an election year, to get the Legislature to agree to a new tax bill is going to be a challenge."

Three weeks ago, the Texas Supreme Court declared unconstitutional the state's method of distributing aid to poor and wealthy school districts. The court set a May 1 deadline for legislators to find a solution to "glaring disparities" in state funding of the nation's second-largest public school system.

One possibility is consolidating school districts into countywide taxing entities, Kirby told the Association of Bullard Schools.

The state constitution prohibits a statewide property tax, but counties could levy such a tax.

State Rep. Bill Hollowell, D-Grand Saline, also spoke to the group. He said additional alcohol and tobacco taxes aren't out of the question to pay for school funding.

But, he said, "I can tell you it's going to be hard to get the votes on any one of them."

"I can vote for an increase on taxes for alcohol (and tobacco)," he said. "Alcohol is ruining a lot of lives, it fills up our jails, so I can vote for it, but I don't think it would pass."

"I represent three relatively dry counties, but big wet cities have always been against raising those taxes, especially (on) alcohol, because they say their constituents have to pay it and mine don't," Hollowell said.

light" designation, such as conservation programs, would proceed.

Yeutter stressed that no move would be made unilaterally by the United States and that no farm program would be altered unless other countries did likewise.

"If we travel down this correct road, we will travel it only in conjunction with our trading partners," he said. "Whether or not we do so is now up to them."

Yeutter said he doubted if the GATT proposal would significantly alter the debate in Congress on new farm legislation due next year. He said he hoped that the 1990 farm legislation would become law before the Uruguay Round of trade talks conclude.

Assuming the trade negotiations are successful, he said, "We will make modifications in that (farm) legislation in 1991."
