Turning life around

By KAY PECK
Staff Writer

'Boot camp' gave Richard Rodriguez a second chance

Richard Rodriguez found a detour off the road to destruction. His future was transformed from bleak to promising by a 75-day tour at the Texas Department of Corrections "boot camp" at Huntsville.

RICHARD RODRIGUEZ
...Camp has improved his outlook on life

"Nine months ago, I just didn't care," Rodriguez said. His conviction that he was free to do whatever he wanted whenever he wanted to do it was apparent in his juvenile criminal record and in his felony conviction for unauthorized use of a motor vehicle. It was this conviction which led to Rodriguez' term at the TDC boot camp.

The boot camp project is one part of the "shock" probation program currently in use by the Texas judicial system. Offenders are sent to the TDC for a designated number of days before being placed on probation. Officials hope a taste of prison life will "shock" an offender into a more law-abiding life.

For Rodriguez, the philosophy appears to have worked.

The 18-year-old is home again, a greatly changed man. His "I don't care" attitude has been altered into a positive plan for the future. Rodriguez intends to complete his senior year of high school.

"This was supposed to be my last year, but I screwed it up," he said.

At present, Rodriguez is looking for employment so that he can begin paying his restitution and fines as another step in meeting his legal obligation. Despite his felony

"I'm going to go for it," Rodriguez said.

If the young man once believed that the military was not worth the trouble, he learned that a felony conviction certainly was not.

"Those 75 days (in the TDC boot camp) were hell... hell and a half," Rodriguez said.

Each weekday, the inmates in the boot camp ran two miles and did about 300 jumping jacks and 75 pushups. Before breakfast.

The days started at 4 a.m. with reveille and the weekdays included an almost continual work and educational schedule until 7 p.m. The inmates had free time from 3 to 4 p.m. and from 7 to 10:30 p.m., when it was lights out for taps.

"If you got a demerit, you lost all your free time for that day," Rodriguez said.

Each work day included about seven hours of hard labor. Much of Rodriguez' time was spent at the rock pile.

"There were rocks as big as you are, and you got to break them into little, bitty rocks," Rodriguez said.

The TDC boot camp was tough, very tough.

"Oh, man, this is a drag," Rodriguez thought when he first arrived at the camp.

The camp is modeled after a military boot camp. Military-style discipline is carried one step farther as camp officials attempt to rehabilitate first time offenders.

"People (other inmates who had been in the service) said it was worse than the army," Rodriguez said.

The work was hard; the physical training was hard; and the discipline was hard. Despite the difficulty of life in the boot camp, the incentive was strong to stick with the program.

Failure meant time in the "big house."

Not only did transfer from the boot camp mean serving "hard time," but credit was not given for time spent in the camp. The inmate's sentence started again from "day one."

Of the six men who entered the boot camp with Rodriguez, he was one of only two who completed the program. The man did more than just survive. He excelled.

The officers and sergeants, all guards in the TDC system, kept close watch over the inmates' behavior and quality of work. Behavior problems were disciplined, and good behavior was rewarded. For example, those selected for the honor squad were given more free time.

The highest honor for an inmate was to be incorporated in the color

Shoe-ing away

Ray and Suzie White pause for a moment while shoeing horses recently. The couple travels all over the Panhandle region practicing their craft.

Whites help make shoe fit

By ORVILLE HOWARD
Special Feature Writer

The gaited world of Flat Creek was simpler with pampered steeds and coffee after dawn but Ray White broke family traditions to hammer out a lifestyle in the West where folks still break broncs before breakfast and use the cow-horse as status symbols.

"I first came out here to Texas back in the early 1970s then decided one day to go back to Tennessee," said White, as he brushed the rump of a naky grey. "You probably won't believe it but I actually got homesick to come back to the Texas Panhandle. Don't ask me to explain it because I don't know why. But there's something about the Texas people and open country that can make a man feel 10-feet tall."

White and his wife, Suzie, shoe horses for a living, operating a 100-mile circuit centered around Hereford, Tx. that takes in more than a dozen of the largest commercial cattle feedyards in the region and nearly an equal number of some of the largest cattle ranches in the Texas Panhandle. An average month will put White under more than 250 horses with his petite blonde wife backstopping on the anvil with a set of shaping tongs.

Tough business? Absolutely. The profession of horseshoeing puts man and beast side-by-side-and sometimes face-to-face-with the beast generally having the upper hand...or, if you please, the upper hoof.

White sizes up his horses about like he does people—forms an opinion on the first opener. Tough still on the sunnyside of middle-age, the 37-year-old farrier can quote volumes of one-liners and homespun philosophy which is voiced only when the work is done. But catch this Tennessee-Texan taking a breather on a tailgate of his mobile blacksmith shop or at high noon at K-Bob's and one will understand why most horse owners don't shoe horses.

"It's certainly not an easy way to make a living but I really enjoy it," said White, as he put the wraps on another feedyard job out on the New Mexico border. "Oh sure, I've received several broken bones, kicked around and punched in the head a time or two, but most of this happens when you don't take time to understand your horse...sort of goes with the territory."

White turned to the grey, took another quick look at the new shod job and handed Suzie something that looked like a grizzly bear file.

Dressed in blue denims that needed no factory fade job, Suzie tidied a homemade farrier tool box before snapping shut a battered tailgate. Her husband was already heading for a well-worn driver's seat when she paused for a moment under a hot Texas sun: "I would a lot rather be out here working in the open than somewhere inside. I had a choice and I chose him...I was once a kindergarten school teacher."

Some time later and 50 miles down the highway White and his wife looked a bit more relaxed as they talked of the farrier profession over a steak dinner at K-Bob's. "They sure have good restaurants here in Hereford," said White, as he looked over a menu fit for kings. "We generally eat at some place different every day when we're on the road and they're all mighty good in Hereford. One doesn't really appreciate all of this good food until you get caught somewhere out on the Canadian River at high noon."

White spoke with deep feelings of appreciation while describing the trust between Panhandle cattlemen and their employees: "Out here a handshake is as good as a written contract until you prove otherwise." Last month, the husband/wife team shod 168 horses and trimmed 88.

Having attended one of the top farrier schools in the nation, the 20-year veteran of the farrier profession has spent a lifetime around livestock and been associated with the commercial cattle feeding industry of the Texas Panhandle since 1973.

Born and reared on a stockfarm near Flat Creek, Tenn., White grew up in a Tennessee countryside 30 minutes south of Nashville where tobacco farming and raising gaited horses are second only to country music. In addition to a stockfarm of tobacco and corn, White's parents, Allen and Sarah, operated a country mercantile store called Live N' Let Live.

"I think it's really about as hillbilly as you can get around there," said Texas-born Suzie with a chuckle, who frequently jests Ray about Tennessee lifestyles. Sometimes he grins and sometimes he doesn't.

"I got exposed to the rodeo world at a very early age," White recalled, in showing that it was the Texas cattle country that lured him westward. "We lived down the road a short piece from a feller named Preston Fowlks who owned the Fowlks Rodeo Co. I got to helping him with the stock and shoeing the horses while I was still in high school." RECs sign power accord

James Hull, president and general manager of Deaf Smith Electric Cooperative and chairman of Golden Spread Electric Cooperative's board of directors, today announced the signing of a memorandum with Sunflower Electric Cooperative, a generation and transmission utility located in Hays, Kan., and the Western Area Power Administration, a federal hydropower marketing agency headquartered in Golden, Colo., for peaking capacity and a new high-voltage power line.

The memorandum is the first step in consummating an agreement between Golden Spread and Sunflower for the sale, by Sunflower, of excess capacity to Golden Spread. The memorandum also provides for the construction of a transmission line from Sunflower's Holcomb Station, near Garden City, Kans., to Guymon, Okla.

Under the agreement with Sunflower, Golden Spread will obtain 110,000 kilowatts of capacity from two gas-fired turbine generators located at Sunflower's Garden City power plant. The power will be used to meet the peak-load needs of Golden Spread's member systems.

The transmission line from Holcomb Station to Guymon will be financed by Western, Golden Spread and Sunflower. Sunflower and Western will be responsible for the construction costs of substation and transmission improvements in Kansas. Golden Spread will be responsible for the costs of such improvements in Oklahoma.

Group ready for more rescues

By JOHN BROOKS
Managing Editor

A group of Hereford-area residents who participated in an Operation Rescue at a Lubbock abortion clinic last week would do it again, even if it meant going back to jail for some of them.

Why would they go to jail? If you read Proverbs 24:11-12, you'll know why, they take the two verses very literally, just like others who participate in Operation Rescue across the United States.

In the Living Bible it says, "Rescue those who are unjustly sentenced to death; don't stand back and let them die. Don't try to disclaim responsibility by saying you didn't know about it. For God, who knows all hearts, knows yours, and he knows you knew! And he will reward everyone according to his deeds."

Three county residents, Randy Tooley, Mike Brumley and the Rev. Dorman Duggan, were among 28 persons arrested outside the Lubbock clinic last Thursday.

"I've been a straight-living, law-abiding, taxpaying citizen all of my life. I never thought I would go to jail for anything," said Brumley.

Then came an opportunity to participate in Operation Rescue close to home.

Operation Rescue has been involved in non-violent demonstrations in front of abortion clinics throughout the country, trying to "rescue" unborn children and counsel with mothers considering abortions.

"I started reading about Operation Rescue in Catholic publications," said Janie Banner, who has been working in "problem pregnancy centers" for 16 years and three months, she said, "volunteering my time and what money I was able to put into it."

"I noticed it (Operation Rescue) and read everything I could, but I never thought it would come to actually participating in a 'rescue.'

"I thought about going to Lubbock, and every reason I could come up with for not going to Lubbock became an empty excuse.

"Then, I read about Randy Tooley in the Brand (Tooley was arrested in Atlanta, Ga., for his participation in a 'rescue' there in 1988) and found myself putting Randy in touch with people I knew in Lubbock."

Already, six Lubbock men were organizing a rescue there, and a group from Hereford and other area cities combined their forces to help.

"I don't think anyone went down there to break the law or to be arrested but just to show people how man has broken God's law," Banner said. "We must all consider repenting of our nation's sin and stop killing innocent babies. There are really two victims, the babies and the mothers."

Most of the protestors spent their time praying, singing hymns, and counseling with persons considering an abortion.

"There was no shouting," Brumley said. "There were only one or two signs, one that said 'Rescue in Progress,' and another that had a picture of a baby inside a womb. We didn't do anything forceful or violent in any way."

While one group, including Brumley, Duggan and Tooley, sat in front of the clinic, others including Banner, Cathy Revell, Ida Schumacher, Nadine Berend and Judy Detten of Hereford were in a prayer group nearby.

Then Lubbock police came up to give the group in front of the clinic a 10-minute warning to vacate their position.

"Then they came up to us individually and said we had to get up or we would be arrested," said Brumley. "At that point you had to either leave, or you were carried off on a stretcher and (See RESCUE, Page 2A)

Ready for another rescue

Mike Brumley, Janie Banner and the Rev. Dorman Duggan say they are ready to participate in more "Operation Rescue" activities to fight abortion. Brumley and Duggan were arrested during a recent "rescue" in Lubbock.

But White's beginning in horse-shoeing actually began with a team of mules on his father's farm at the age of 15. The Tennessee farm boy, upon graduating from College Grove High School in 1969, expanded his farrier circuit to include some of the top training stables around Nashville and seeing the need for perfection enrolled at the Tennessee State University Farrier's School at Murfreesboro. It was here that he studied and trained under D.N. Canfield who is recognized as one of the leading farrier professors of the South.

In addition to his farrier work, White followed his good friend Fowlks on the rodeo circuit where he sort of stumbled into the risky art of clowning...the funny man in the barrel who switches to chaps and spurs to ride for pay dirt.

Following an old Tennessee-Texas friendship pattern that dates back to the Alamo, White had a close friend by the name of Bill Clary who had earlier come to the Texas Panhandle to work in feed-yards around Hereford. "One day Bill called back home and said if I wanted to really get into cowboy-ing, this was the place to come," recalled White. "I knew if Bill said it, it would have to be right so I headed for Texas."

For a short time, White got a job in a local feedyard and followed the weekend rodeo circuit, handling clown work most of the time for such rodeo producers as Uncle James Martin of Spearman, Tx., Clay & David Rodeo Co. of Odessa, Mo., and the Bowman Carpenter Rodeo Co. of Hayesville, Ks. Though rodeoing was funtime, White realized that better bucks came from the anvil and in less than a year, he had built a horseshoeing business across much of the central Texas Panhandle.

In 1976 White once again put his farrier tools in storage and this time went to work as manager of the Webb Farms Feedyard 12 miles south of Dimmitt and for 1 1/2 years was head feedlot honcho for the Webb family. White left the Webbs in 1983 to open a custom preconditioning feedlot near the community of Sunnyside on the South Plains. He also maintained a string of 800 to 1,000 head of his own feeder cattle in the growing operation.

But the cards didn't fall right for White in the cattle feeding business: I went broke feeding cattle so I went back to shoeing horses for the third time. I've been shoeing horses now for four years on this last go-round and I guess I'll stay hitched...it's the best business I know, and besides, I like it."

Most of his horseshoeing business from the commercial feedyards is located in the Hereford area but some of his ranch work takes him northward to the Canadian River and west into the New Mexico mesa country. "I got kinda covered up with work earlier this spring and had to let a feedyard or two go...not because I wanted to but because just couldn't find enough hours in a day," he added.

White takes his work seriously and tries to size a green horse before he ever lifts a hoof. And there's the trained or veteran cowhorse that may have a few personal twists of his own. "One of the best roping horses in the country won't let you work on his hoofs unless you're right up under him--you get off to one side and you're in trouble," said White. "This same horse also doesn't like women so Suzie has to sit in the pickup with the windows rolled up before the horse will let me work."

Some of the mean personalities have to be carried down, while others require a twitch in the nose for allowing a horseshoer to work... "Sometimes I get Suzie to grab a handful of hide in the shoulder and sort of lean forward while I work."

"Sometimes this works and sometimes it doesn't and sometimes I run," said Mrs. White, in showing that all saddle horses are not backyard play pets. White was recently knocked unconscious with a kick to the forehead by a mule: "I got up after a while and went on ahead and shod him but I paid a little more attention to his personality this time."

A first-class manicure and a new pair of shoes takes about an hour if things go rather smoothly, but the tough ones take more time. A correctional shod job will take a couple of hours or more, depending on the damage to the hoof. After cleaning out a hoof, White trims off all the dead sole and trims up the frog (a rubbery substance in the center of the hoof which works as a pump to circulate blood through the hoof). When the hoof is rasped down to a perfectly smooth finish,

Suzie shapes the shoe to fit exactly to form.

White sets the shoe with two nails and dresses the shod hoof to perfection before tacking in the other six to eight nails. He uses eight nails for feedyard horses and six nails on outside horses. The nails go into the wall of the hoof so if everything is done to perfection the animal feels no pain--"If you don't hear a hollow sound you'd better stop...if you quick a horse you won't get ahold of his hoofs again."

The daughter of Bob and Phyllis Mooney, Suzie moved with her parents to Dimmitt at the age of 5 and a grandfather, Elmer Youts, once served a mayor of Dimmitt. She graduated from high school in 1973 and later taught kindergarten for 10 years.

The Whites and their children, Caleb, Kacie and Cody make their home on a farm about 20 minutes southwest of Hereford where they still feed a few calves when the horseshoeing is done. The Whites have sense of humor that brings on chuckles instead of frowns when they speak of problems of the business: "We have one customer who has a rooster named Red and a goat named Candy and the rooster put the three kids up a windmill tower once for about 10 minutes...a real tough little rascal."

White said the lifestyles between his birthplace in Tennessee and the Texas cow country is about as different as you can get. "Besides tobacco and corn, we made our own molasses and looked forward to hog-killin' time each winter," said White, in comparing the two states. "But I seriously doubt if I ever go back to Tennessee to live--Texas is now my country."

RESCUE

loaded onto a bus. The police department was totally professional and they were very kind to us."

Banner said that Bill Stewart, one of the Lubbock organizers, had been in contact with the police department and told the persons participating in the rescue "weren't going to be there just to get arrested or to cause problems."

There had been rumors that the rescuers would gather at another clinic the next day, but those rumors were unfounded.

"The next day representatives of the National Organization for Women (NOW) showed up at another abortion clinic, expecting to find us and get us involved in a conflict," Banner said.

The group plans to carry on its efforts in the area to educate the public on what it feels are wrongs.

Brumley said the abortions are performed for $300 and up "and guys are getting filthy rich off of something that is a 15-minute procedure. That in itself is not right, much less the killing of babies."

"It is wrong, even if it is the law. For many years, the law was that negroes were nothing but animals. That was wrong and events changed, but a lot of people suffered because the Supreme Court said negroes were animals. This is the same thing, and the people that are making the laws don't have the guts to change it."

Duggan, minister at Community Church, felt it was time to take a bigger stand.

"I felt all along that abortion was wrong, and I think if you ask any real born-again Christian, that christian will tell you it's wrong. The problem is, most Christians haven't really done anything," Duggan said.

Then, Tooley became involved in the rescue effort, and Duggan encouraged and counseled him before deciding that he needed to act himself.

"We've heard all along that Christians shouldn't break the law, but look through the scriptures," Duggan said. "In The Acts, Peter was ordered to quit preaching. If he had quit, where would we be today? Most of Paul's letters were written from prison. Killing babies is breaking the law of God."

"As a pastor I went to support and pray, but if pastors don't stand up for what is right, how can we expect others to? Some pastors might not want to offend their members, but you can't worry about losing members."

While they may or may not be participating in another rescue in the near future, the group plans to continue doing other work.

"We have been working educationally, financially, legislatively and prayerfully," Banner said. "Now, it's time to do more and put our actions where our words have been. We can do more."

"I was scared. I didn't want to go charging up there (to the rescue). I prayed about it seriously for 2-3 weeks, and I finally said yes to God's call as a Christian and said I would do it again. It takes grace and guts."

Weather thou goest

If it's some kind of weather data, you'll find it in Asheville, N.C.

EDITOR'S NOTE - When officials wanted to know what kind of weather to expect during the cleanup of the Alaskan oil spill, they turned to a weather archive in the mountains of North Carolina. The National Climatic Data Center handles tens of thousands such queries each year, from farmers, lawyers, sailors, filmmakers and others.

By PAUL NOWELL
Associated Press Writer

ASHEVILLE, N.C. (AP) - Perhaps it's fitting that the world's largest repository of weather records is housed in a 1920s-vintage indoor shopping mall that leaks during downpours.

Accurate weather records dating back to 1890 - some even to the time of the Pilgrims at Plymouth Rock - are available at the National Climatic Data Center, which has dozens of cubbyhole offices in the historic building guarded by two terra-cotta griffins.

"Every time it rains hard the roof leaks and we have to break out the buckets," says Steve Doty, the center's project director.

Despite the accommodations, the center, with a staff of 300, turns out an impressive amount of weather information, answering 85,000 queries last year alone.

"We can't give you the weather forecast for next week but we can give you a look back 100 years," Doty says. "Our role is to supply the historical perspective."

The center's long view at the world's climate can be vital when it comes to such things as fighting world hunger, sending astronauts into space or winning court cases.

For example, when an Exxon tanker spilled 10 million barrels of oil in March into Prince William Sound in Alaska, industry and government experts called the center to learn what kind of weather conditions could be expected during the cleanup.

By coincidence, the center had just published a climatic atlas of the area, which provided detailed information on temperatures, wind speed and ocean currents.

Bill Brower, who had helped prepare the atlas, said the data showed the 70-mph winds that hit the Valdez area at the time of the accident were unusual for that time of year. The information was beneficial as cleanup efforts were coordinated.

"What we offer is a lot of good hard science," Doty says. "We can tell you normals and extremes so you know what to expect."

COOPERATIVE

The proposed transmission line is expected to be either a 230 kV or a 345 kV line, depending upon the final engineering analysis. The projected cost of the new line will be between $23 million and $36 million. The power line will be about 90 miles in length and will take about three and one-half years to complete.

Golden Spread President Robert W. Bryant said, "This new power supply arrangement will benefit all of Golden Spread's member systems and their consumers. Golden Spread's members will obtain low cost peaking power to assure that electric rates will continue to be affordable for their irrigation consumers. The new transmission line will strengthen the electrical interconnections to the North and increase our opportunities for future access to low cost electrical power."

Golden Spread provides electric service to 10 member cooperatives in Texas: Deaf Smith, Bailey, Greenbelt, Lamb, Lighthouse, Midwest, North Plains, Rio Grande, Rita Blanca, South Plains, Swisher, and one Oklahoma electric cooperative, Tri-County.

Power advantages

CAMP

guard which raised the flag every morning.

"You had to be one of the best ones to raise the colors," Rodriguez said.

A subtle change could be heard in the young man's voice as he continued. Very quietly and, perhaps for the first time in his life, there was a note of real pride.

"And I made it," he said. "The drastic change in Rodriguez' attitude has not gone unnoticed."

"I'm amazed at the improvement in the young man," said 222nd District Judge David Wesley Gully.

Rodriguez is the first offender to be sent from Deaf Smith County to the new TDC boot camp program. Local officials hope that he will be an inspiring success story.

The boot camp program is new in the state of Texas (Rodriguez was the 20th inmate to be admitted to the camp), but it has shown great promise in other states. The success rate (those with no repeat offenses) for inmates who complete the boot camp is estimated at 95 percent.

Rodriguez' life has changed since his return from Huntsville. At one time, he had a severe alcohol and drug problem. Rodriguez reports that he has been off drugs for eight months and alcohol for six months.

"I don't get the urge to smoke (marijuana) or drink. I feel good about myself," Rodriguez said.

Classroom instruction was provided for the inmates at the boot camp along with the hard labor, physical training and military drill. Instruction was given on such subjects as anger control and rational thinking. Classes were also conducted by Alcoholics Anonymous and Narcotics Anonymous.

"They taught us a lot...not to make the same mistake twice," Rodriguez said.

The young man offered some advice to other young people who may be caught in the same lifestyle which once seduced him.

"If you keep it up, you're going to mess up your life," he said. "You don't want to go through what I went through."

In one day the average person inhales 15,000 quarts of air.

Ben Franklin, Thomas Jefferson and George Washington Carver all were amateur weather observers. Copies of their records can be found at the center, which is part of the U.S. Commerce Department's National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration.

The tons of records stored in the center's basement are testimony to generations of less-famous volunteer weather trackers.

"We've even got a copy of a diary with weather records from Plymouth Rock," Doty says.

Most of the bound records stored in what once was the mall's underground parking deck come from places like Vicksburg, Miss., St. Joseph, Mo., or Bear Mountain, N.Y., since 1890.

So if you've just got to know how many times it snowed in Chicago on April 30 for the past 99 years, the folks at the NCDC can help.

The raw data comes from the military, the National Weather Service, the Federal Aviation Administration and 8,000 volunteer weather observers.

Hourly weather observations pour in from around the globe, much of them from 10,000 ships stationed in various positions and from weather satellites orbiting Earth.

Current records are stored on computer. But because of budget constraints the center has been able to save on microfiche only a fourth of the 200 million paper records.

The center prints about 5,000 different publications on such topics as hourly precipitation data by state, national storm data and global climatic data. The publications go out to more than 50,000 individuals and businesses.

Seven staff meteorologists answer thousands of telephone and mail queries each month.

The minimum charge for information was increased recently to $12, while the average cost is about $40. Some complicated requests can cost several thousand dollars.

The weather records also help scientists explore such things as the "greenhouse effect," a warming of Earth's temperatures that has been attributed to industrial growth.

"There are some scientists who believe the 1988 drought was caused by the greenhouse effect," Heim says. "We've had worse droughts. If this one was caused by that, what caused the droughts of the 1930s and 1950s?"

Chamber board hears reports

Reports from committee chairmen highlighted the regular monthly meeting of the Deaf Smith County Chamber of Commerce board of directors Thursday evening.

Ken McLain, retail business committee, reported his group, with 15 attending a planning session, had set some goals for the year. The committee has sponsored one successful seminar and has another set for June 27.

Pat Robbins, advisory director for the ag committee, reported that committee chairman Lewis Block and his group are making plans for the Farmers' Market later this summer, and are active in securing more ag members in the chamber. The committee is also sponsoring a growers' meeting with Frito-Lay.

Herb De La Rosa, chairman of the human relations committee, presented a list of goals his group had submitted for the year. These included better promotion and communications with Hispanic businesses and a beautification program. Larry Malamen is liaison director for this group.

Bud Eades, chairman of industrial development, gave the board an update on his group's activities. Eades attended a Rural Development Conference in Lubbock earlier this week and plans to attend a Food Technology Show in Chicago June 25.

Eades will work in a booth sponsored by Southwestern Public Service at the Chicago show. He will send information on Deaf Smith County to all business contacts made at the show.

Mike Carr, executive vice president, gave a progress report on other committees and C of C projects. He announced that plans have been initiated for the annual Town & Country Jubilee for Aug. 6-12. He also praised Ken McLain for volunteer work on a flower garden in front of the chamber office.

Directors attending included President Rocky Lee, Doug Josse- rand, Larry Malamen, Carol Ger- k, David Emerick, Pat Robbins, Bobby Moore and Carol LeGate. Absent were Ike Stevens, Temple Abney, Berta Ottesen, Scott Keeling and Donna West.

Panhandle Community Services report

HELPING PEOPLE HELP THEMSELVES

In the fall of 1988, the Hereford Panhandle Community Services formed an Advisory Council. The council consists of residents interested in, and wanting to participate in, helping our agency.

At least half of our Advisory Council is composed of representatives of the poor; 25 percent from public organizations, and the remainder from private organizations, business, labor or education.

The Advisory Council is empowered to sponsor area-wide projects to relieve problems of the poor, as well as to promote all services and programs authorized by PCS.

The Advisory Council meet every two months. The present council members are:

*Sister Mary Jean Ferry: Church, community and concerns of the impoverished.

*Judy Baker: represents Deaf Smith County.

*Ruben Gutierrez: represents minority businesses and chamber of commerce.

*Jody Keese: local industry and chamber of commerce.

*Sylvanna Juarez: City commission appointee.

*David Blea: Texas Department of Human Services.

PCS of Hereford depends on this council to serve as advisors and make recommendations as to the needs of the poor in our area. They have also been an asset in directing us in our public relations activities.

Pioneers elect new officers

Members of Pioneer 4-H Club met Thursday evening at the Hereford Community Center for the 4-H Spring Fling.

During the business session, new officers for 1989-90 were elected. Donna Grotegut will serve as president; Dominique Guerrero, vice president; Pam Price, secretary; Jason Brumley, council delegate; Colby Christie, council delegate alternate; and Joanna Brumley, reporter.

It was announced that the group will meet the second Thursday of each month at 7 p.m. beginning Aug. 10.

Some people believe that when a candle sparks, a letter is coming.

STEEL STRENGTH

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) - While steel production capacity nationwide has been cut, Ohio says its steel industry is continuing a steady five-year growth pattern, with new mills being established and older facilities modernized.

The state, which has 66,500 workers in the steel industry, ranks first in the number of jobs in iron and steel foundries. In 1988, it produced more than 16 million tons of steel, 18 percent of the total national production.

NEW YORK (AP) - Take the time now to assess what you have - and what you need - in the way of legal protection.

Here are some tips from Family Circle magazine to keep you and your family legally sound and prepared for any emergency:

- List Assets: An inventory of possessions which includes descriptions, purchase prices and dates, and item locations will facilitate collection of insurance payments in the case of theft, fire or other damage.

- Build Up Credit and Savings in Your Own Name: Establish credit records for individual family members. If all records and accounts are in one person's name, or held jointly, serious financial problems could develop in the event of death or divorce.

YOUR EYES

FARSIGHTED OR NEARSIGHTED

The terms farsighted and nearsighted continue to confuse many people. Quite simply, the farsighted person usually sees objects better at a distance than close up; the nearsighted person sees more clearly at close distances than at far ones.

Anatomically, the farsighted eye does not focus the light rays from close objects, at the proper location. These rays come to a focus beyond, instead of exactly on the retina, sending a blurred image to the brain.

The nearsighted eye has trouble bringing light rays from distant objects into focus. These light rays entering the eye are in focus in front of the retina, also sending a blurred image to the brain.

In either condition, properly prescribed lenses can correct the focus, alleviate eye strain and permit the individual to see clearly.

Boost the YMCA

In 1976, a group of Hereford citizens organized to discuss the possibility of having a YMCA association in Hereford. Meetings were arranged with consultants from the National YMCA to define the steps that needed to be taken. Through this combined community effort, the Hereford & Vicinity YMCA was chartered on Oct. 11, 1976.

During 1976 and most of 1977, the YMCA occupied a small office on Park Avenue, across from Stanton Junior High. In 1977, the YMCA expanded its programs and facilities by moving into Sugarland Mall and also used school and church facilities to conduct leagues and programs.

In 1983, the "Y" board was challenged to expand the services and facilities. The result was a two-year effort that resulted in the construction of the present YMCA building, located at 500 E. 15th St. The new building was formally dedicated on Feb. 3, 1985. The 26,000-sq.-ft. facility features a full size gymnasium, four racquetball courts, workout room, aerobics area, game room, exercise pool, a nursery/meeting room, men and women's fitness centers, locker rooms, and office space for the "Y", Big Brothers/Big Sisters, and United Way.

The Hereford YMCA makes many things possible. Among these are the experience of a young boy being on his first organized football team... a young girls learning to swim... or youngsters developing confidence in their own powers through wrestling or gymnastics.

To enable the YMCA to have a financial base which will sustain it growing and expanding programs, a Sustaining Contribution Campaign is conducted each year. The '89 campaign started this week, and the YMCA needs your help. The 1989 campaign goal is $40,000. The people heading up this drive are volunteers who are committed to the cause. The "Y" board and staff have pledged almost 20 percent of the goal.

A volunteer may have contacted you this week, or it may be in the next week or two. Fifty-five volunteers are working in the campaign, and their only reward is reflected in the campaign slogan: "Partners in the People Business". Treat 'em nice, and help if you can!

No reform

One of the major mandates of the 71st Texas Legislature was to reform the process of worker's compensation insurance in the state. This week, the Senate has turned its back on reform and chosen to continue, with a few cosmetic changes, the old system of compensating workers for accidents on the job.

The major part of the reform of worker's comp insurance was to be the elimination of trial de novo. This provision of current law allows the injured worker to appeal the decision of the Industrial Accident Board on damages to be paid to a district court.

In that new trial, all the findings of the Accident Board cannot be used, so the lawyers for both the injured worker and the insurance company must reintroduce the evidence used by the Accident Board to make their decision. Each party to the disputed settlement receives a new trial in district court, or trial de novo.

Trial de novo is one part of our current law that is driving up the cost of worker's compensation insurance in Texas businesses. Both sets of lawyers spend expensive hours preparing for and presenting a case that has already been decided by a qualified board. Neither side works for free and, in the end, insured companies pay the bill by increased insurance rates.

There was an opportunity, in this session of the legislature, to end trial de novo and make other significant reforms in the worker's comp system of Texas. The House of Representatives has already passed a bill that would make the needed reforms and the Governor is ready to sign the House bill, but the Senate has diluted their version of worker's comp reform that a compromise seems unlikely.

Only nine Senators, out of 31 members of the upper chamber, voted against the Senate version, authored by the trial lawyers. Our Senator, Teel Bivins, was one of those nine.

Now, Gov. Bill Clements should make good on his promise and call a special session of the legislature for meaningful worker's compensation reform. Maybe in the heat of an Austin summer, the 22 senators who oppose reform will see the light.

Help For Marginal Students

Texas is learning some hard lessons about education. Over the past five years much has been done to make schooling more meaningful, tougher, more comprehensive.

The results of this attitude are beginning to bear fruit: Tests scores are going up among all students, with Texas' ninth grade students showing the greatest improvement. Also encouraging are improvements shown in test scores by blacks and Hispanics.

But the new life is bearing thorns, as well. We've made the schools tougher and are finding, as we might have expected, that more students can't make the grade.

Of course, not all students will graduate from a public school system. Some are not smart enough, some are not industrious enough, others, possibly, are too smart. But in improving education we should not give up on marginal students.

Marginal students must grow to have a place in our society, too. If we do not help them, now, that place could be the unemployment line or jail.

Dear editor:

There is a dedicated sixth grade teacher who has been trying to help kids in her class.

She stays after school three or four times a week until 4:30 p.m. or 5 p.m. just to help these kids. This is her free time, and she doesn't get paid for it. She volunteers this time because she loves her job, and she loves her kids and treats them as if they were her own. She gives 100 percent and she expects 100 percent back, but she does it out of concern and love for the child.

There are a few people who don't like this. Why? We don't know. They say that if they can't do it during classtime, "fail them." Some of our kids are begging for extra help, but they say they can't help. This is wrong.

Some of your kids or grandkids will have her next year, and they may need extra help. Are we going to let them say she can't help them?

Should we lose such a gifted teacher? I hope not. She's a hard breed to come by. All she's doing is giving the kids that want an education an aisle to walk down.

This is more than I can say for some of the teachers I've talked to and visited with. That's why Mrs. Holland is one of the best.

America deserves a better Congress

By WALTER R. MEARS

WASHINGTON (AP) - This was supposed to be National Tap Dance Day, but Congress never got around to proclaiming it. It's had trouble getting around to a lot of things this year.

This was going to be the historic, high-powered 101st Congress. So far, the bicentennial session has been long on ceremony and heavy on intramural disputes.

Chief among them now is the ethics case against House Speaker Jim Wright of Texas, the top

The Penultimate Word

MEMORIAL DAY AND SIGNIFICANCE

Memorial Day is one of the major reasons I keep writing this column. I look forward to the column that tries to remember folks.

A young woman who had suffered the death of a husband and a child was able to explain the difference in the grief faced in each case. She said the grief over her husband was a process of letting go, saying goodbye. The grief over her child was a process of hanging on. There was a sense that the child did not live long enough to establish significance and she had to establish it for the child.

The key word in both experiences is significance. That is the meaning of memorial day. We remember the significance.

Each year I think about some significant folks for my memorial time. I do not try to list everyone each year. It seems that certain ones will be on my mind each year. There is no explanation as to why these are on my mind and others are not. Next year there will be a new group and I will not know why. Over the years they all seem to come back for a visit. This year I am visiting with the significance of:

MARY FRYE--Has there ever been a better smile in all the world? Has there ever been a more dedicated mother? She taught her girls how to live and then taught them how to die. She planned the memorial service and requested "Red Sails In The Sunset" to be sung. No one but Mary.

JUSTIN HARDIN--We passed the two-year anniversary of Justin's death this past April. In 16 years Justin showed more kindness and love than a lot of folks show in a long lifetime. He loved us all and did not mind letting us know it. In 16 years he showed more courage and faced more pain than most of us will face or show, no matter how long we live. Pretty good 16 years.

I am out of space so I can only name the names of the rest on this years list. Tom Manning, my father. Delbert Kinsey, who has made the list many times and is back this year. Wayne Thomas, who challenged me to think. Stacy Rickman, who showed me the meaning of the word tough.

I wish we could all sit down and compare lists. We have known and been touched by significance walking around looking like folks.

Warm Fuzzies,
Doug Manning

Democratic official in the government, struggling to hold onto his job.

As he tried to get the major charges dismissed, Wright's lawyer suggested to the ethics committee that the tough line against the speaker is part of the fallout from other episodes - such as Senate rejection of the nomination of John G. Tower, a former Republican senator from Texas, to be secretary of defense; and the continuing effort to deal with the savings and loan crisis.

Along with those issues came one in which Wright himself played the leading role, the 50 percent congressional pay raise originally programmed to go through without a vote. It was derailed and defeated after a public outcry led the speaker to put it to a roll call.

Wright's own ethics case is a distraction or worse, although other Democratic leaders insist it has not diverted the House from conducting its regular business. Wright himself takes a somewhat different line, insisting the charges are unfounded and should be dropped so that Congress can concentrate on the work of governing.

Three major measures that have passed this session are a $1.17 trillion federal budget for the fiscal year beginning next Oct. 1, a measure providing limited aid to the Nicaraguan Contras and a $4.55 hourly minimum wage bill.

The budget wasn't really legislated; it was negotiated with the administration, at the urging of the Democratic leaders of Congress and of President Bush. To make the deal, the negotiators put aside contentious tax and spending questions until next year.

"It's no more smoke and mirrors than in the past," said Sen. Pete Domenici of New Mexico, senior Republican on the budget committee. And he said the process that produced the budget agreement is itself a stride toward a better way of doing things in the future.

The Contra package was a negotiated deal, too, and it is subject to an intricate system of congressional vetoes.

The minimum wage increase will be an issue, not a law, for a while yet. The Democratic Congress raised the rate past the level Bush said he would accept, but by margins that are not wide enough to override a veto. The lines are drawn on that one, and despite his preference for compromise and bipartisanship, Bush can't afford to back down.

That doesn't add up to much of a season as Congress takes its Memorial Day recess. Sen. Don Nickles, R-Okla., said his college-age son was driving to work with him the other day when they spotted a bumper sticker on the car ahead: "America Deserves a Better Congress."

"I said 'What do you think of that, son?' He said, 'Well, I think they're right.'"

Early in the session, Sen. Alfonse D'Amato, R-N.Y., introduced his joint resolution to designate today as National Tap Dance Day, this being the birthday of Bill "Bojangles" Robinson, born in Richmond, Va., in 1878.

He proposed to honor Robinson, "King of the Tap Dancers," and "to refocus the attention of the nation on American tap dancing."

Rep. John Conyers Jr., D-Mich., introduced the resolution in the House, and added some more Bojangles lore.

"He coined the phrase 'everything is copasetic,' which means it's going along just fine," Conyers said. "Unfortunately, this phrase no longer holds true for the art form he brought to near perfection."

Nor for the resolution, which never got to the floor for the routine approval that is customary on such commemorative measures.

But then, not much is copasetic in Congress these days.

Vermillion earns top award

A local Girl Scout leader was recognized recently at the annual meeting of the Texas Plains Girl Scout Council.

Linda Vermillion was awarded the Appreciation Pin by Jean Wood, executive director of the council. The award is the highest honor bestowed on an adult volunteer and Vermillion was cited for "duties performed above and beyond the expectation of the position held."

During the presentation, Wood noted that "no task is too large for Mrs. Vermillion to take on or too small for her undivided attention. She shares her time, her heart, her talents, and her home with all ages of Girl Scouts. Several years ago, she was instrumental in opening the door for Girl Scouting in her community."

"Many girls from culturally diverse and disadvantaged backgrounds have experienced excellent Girl Scout programs under her guidance. Leaders and girls look to her for help and understanding as they grow in their Girl Scout program. Without her drive, stamina, and dedication, there would be no Girl Scout program in Hereford."

Hereford school students recently participated in a fire prevention poster contest. Junior high and high school students placing in the local contest included, from left, Aaron Stevens, first in junior high and second in Panhandle; Jeremy Paetzold, third in junior high; Kent Simmacher, first in high school locally and second in Panhandle; and Matt Keenan, third locally but first place in the Panhandle-wide contest. Not picture are Israel Herrera, second locally in junior high, and Patricia Lopez, second locally and third in the Panhandle in high school. The Panhandle-wide placers will compete in the state contest in June.

She volunteers this time because she loves her job, and she loves her kids and treats them as if they were her own. She gives 100 percent and she expects 100 percent back, but she does it out of concern and love for the child.

There are a few people who don't like this. Why? We don't know. They say that if they can't do it during classtime, "fail them." Some of our kids are begging for extra help, but they say they can't help. This is wrong.

Some of your kids or grandkids will have her next year, and they may need extra help. Are we going to let them say she can't help them?

Should we lose such a gifted teacher? I hope not. She's a hard breed to come by. All she's doing is giving the kids that want an education an aisle to walk down.

This is more than I can say for some of the teachers I've talked to and visited with. That's why Mrs. Holland is one of the best.

America deserves a better Congress

By WALTER R. MEARS
AP Special Correspondent

WASHINGTON (AP) - This was supposed to be National Tap Dance Day, but Congress never got around to proclaiming it. It's had trouble getting around to a lot of things this year.

This was going to be the historic, high-powered 101st Congress. So far, the bicentennial session has been long on ceremony and heavy on intramural disputes.

Chief among them now is the ethics case against House Speaker Jim Wright of Texas, the top

Doug Manning

The Penultimate Word

MEMORIAL DAY AND SIGNIFICANCE

Memorial Day is one of the major reasons I keep writing this column. I look forward to the column that tries to remember folks.

A young woman who had suffered the death of a husband and a child was able to explain the difference in the grief faced in each case. She said the grief over her husband was a process of letting go, saying goodbye. The grief over her child was a process of hanging on. There was a sense that the child did not live long enough to establish significance and she had to establish it for the child.

The key word in both experiences is significance. That is the meaning of memorial day. We remember the significance.

Each year I think about some significant folks for my memorial time. I do not try to list everyone each year. It seems that certain ones will be on my mind each year. There is no explanation as to why these are on my mind and others are not. Next year there will be a new group and I will not know why. Over the years they all seem to come back for a visit. This year I am visiting with the significance of:

MARY FRYE--Has there ever been a better smile in all the world? Has there ever been a more dedicated mother? She taught her girls how to live and then taught them how to die. She planned the memorial service and requested "Red Sails In The Sunset" to be sung. No one but Mary.

JUSTIN HARDIN--We passed the two-year anniversary of Justin's death this past April. In 16 years Justin showed more kindness and love than a lot of folks show in a long lifetime. He loved us all and did not mind letting us know it. In 16 years he showed more courage and faced more pain than most of us will face or show, no matter how long we live. Pretty good 16 years.

I am out of space so I can only name the names of the rest on this years list. Tom Manning, my father. Delbert Kinsey, who has made the list many times and is back this year. Wayne Thomas, who challenged me to think. Stacy Rickman, who showed me the meaning of the word tough.

I wish we could all sit down and compare lists. We have known and been touched by significance walking around looking like folks.

Warm Fuzzies,
Doug Manning

Democratic official in the government, struggling to hold onto his job.

As he tried to get the major charges dismissed, Wright's lawyer suggested to the ethics committee that the tough line against the speaker is part of the fallout from other episodes - such as Senate rejection of the nomination of John G. Tower, a former Republican senator from Texas, to be secretary of defense; and the continuing effort to deal with the savings and loan crisis.

Along with those issues came one in which Wright himself played the leading role, the 50 percent congressional pay raise originally programmed to go through without a vote. It was derailed and defeated after a public outcry led the speaker to put it to a roll call.

Wright's own ethics case is a distraction or worse, although other Democratic leaders insist it has not diverted the House from conducting its regular business. Wright himself takes a somewhat different line, insisting the charges are unfounded and should be dropped so that Congress can concentrate on the work of governing.

Three major measures that have passed this session are a $1.17 trillion federal budget for the fiscal year beginning next Oct. 1, a measure providing limited aid to the Nicaraguan Contras and a $4.55 hourly minimum wage bill.

The budget wasn't really legislated; it was negotiated with the administration, at the urging of the Democratic leaders of Congress and of President Bush. To make the deal, the negotiators put aside contentious tax and spending questions until next year.

"It's no more smoke and mirrors than in the past," said Sen. Pete Domenici of New Mexico, senior Republican on the budget committee. And he said the process that produced the budget agreement is itself a stride toward a better way of doing things in the future.

The Contra package was a negotiated deal, too, and it is subject to an intricate system of congressional vetoes.

The minimum wage increase will be an issue, not a law, for a while yet. The Democratic Congress raised the rate past the level Bush said he would accept, but by margins that are not wide enough to override a veto. The lines are drawn on that one, and despite his preference for compromise and bipartisanship, Bush can't afford to back down.

That doesn't add up to much of a season as Congress takes its Memorial Day recess. Sen. Don Nickles, R-Okla., said his college-age son was driving to work with him the other day when they spotted a bumper sticker on the car ahead: "America Deserves a Better Congress."

"I said 'What do you think of that, son?' He said, 'Well, I think they're right.'"

Early in the session, Sen. Alfonse D'Amato, R-N.Y., introduced his joint resolution to designate today as National Tap Dance Day, this being the birthday of Bill "Bojangles" Robinson, born in Richmond, Va., in 1878.

He proposed to honor Robinson, "King of the Tap Dancers," and "to refocus the attention of the nation on American tap dancing."

Rep. John Conyers Jr., D-Mich., introduced the resolution in the House, and added some more Bojangles lore.

"He coined the phrase 'everything is copasetic,' which means it's going along just fine," Conyers said. "Unfortunately, this phrase no longer holds true for the art form he brought to near perfection."

Nor for the resolution, which never got to the floor for the routine approval that is customary on such commemorative measures.

But then, not much is copasetic in Congress these days.

Vermillion earns top award

A local Girl Scout leader was recognized recently at the annual meeting of the Texas Plains Girl Scout Council.

Linda Vermillion was awarded the Appreciation Pin by Jean Wood, executive director of the council. The award is the highest honor bestowed on an adult volunteer and Vermillion was cited for "duties performed above and beyond the expectation of the position held."

During the presentation, Wood noted that "no task is too large for Mrs. Vermillion to take on or too small for her undivided attention. She shares her time, her heart, her talents, and her home with all ages of Girl Scouts. Several years ago, she was instrumental in opening the door for Girl Scouting in her community."

"Many girls from culturally diverse and disadvantaged backgrounds have experienced excellent Girl Scout programs under her guidance. Leaders and girls look to her for help and understanding as they grow in their Girl Scout program. Without her drive, stamina, and dedication, there would be no Girl Scout program in Hereford."

Fire Prevention poster winners

Hereford school students recently participated in a fire prevention poster contest. Junior high and high school students placing in the local contest included, from left, Aaron Stevens, first in junior high and second in Panhandle; Jeremy Paetzold, third in junior high; Kent Simmacher, first in high school locally and second in Panhandle; and Matt Keenan, third locally but first place in the Panhandle-wide contest. Not pictured are Israel Herrera, second locally in junior high, and Patricia Lopez, second locally and third in the Panhandle in high school. The Panhandle-wide placers will compete in the state contest in June.

Scott, Brown, Victor spark Region victory

Herd whips Lions in series opener

BY SAM WALLER
Brand Sports Editor

The Hereford Whitefaces took a 1-0 lead Friday night in their regional playoff series with Brownwood, beating the Lions, 5-2, in windy Chaparral Field in Lubbock. Jason Scott, now 14-0, went the distance for the Herd but not before facing the potential go-ahead run with the bases loaded and two out in the seventh inning. Scott managed to get Mike Smith to foul out to rightfielder Keith Brown to end the game.

Scott almost didn't have the chance to finish the game. After walking designated hitter Lewis Vasquez to lead off the inning, Scott got two quick outs and then gave up another walk to centerfielder Kurt Jones and a single to third baseman Mitch Stovall to load the bases.

Scott forced in a run by walking first baseman Sammy Kasberg on four pitches before getting Smith. Scott went to 3-0 on four of the seven batters he faced, in the seventh inning.

"If he'd walked the last batter, I would have pulled him. I was probably within a batter of taking him out," said Hereford Coach T.R. Sartor.

"I was nervous," Scott said. "I thought too much instead of pitching."

Sartor attributed Scott's late problems to a breakdown in mechanics, rather than being tired. "It wasn't a matter of him losing the hop on his pitches," Sartor said. "He was losing his release point."

Brownwood almost scored in the second with three straight singles, but the Lions came up empty. With Smith on first, shortstop Ernesto Rivera hit a sinking liner for which centerfielder Clint Cotten dove. The ball popped in and out of Cotten's glove, but he quickly recovered and threw to second for a forceout on Smith.

Scott gave up another single but struck out the next two batters to end the threat. Scott ended up with 11 strikeouts in the game and stranded nine Lion baserunners.

The Herd scored all the runs they needed in the third. Little Jared Victor lashed a single just inside the bag at first, and easily stole second. Scott then hit a pop-up to second baseman Kyle Montague, who misplayed the ball, allowing it drop for a hit. With one out, Brown lined a shot to left, which Brian Davis let roll through his legs to the wall.

The two-base error scored Scott and Glen Parker. Roger McCracken hit the next pitch back through the box.

Brownwood got on the board in the fifth when Vasquez singled and Davis tripled down the rightfield line. Hereford got the run back in the bottom of the fifth. Parker got an astro-turf infield single, beating out a high hopper. He went to second when Stovall threw the ball away. Brown was intentionally walked after the count reached 3-0.

Sartor called for the double steal with McCracken at the plate, and Parker scored when catcher Jes Rathke's throw bounced away from Stovall. Brown later scored on a double play.

Brown led the Herd, going 2 for 2, driving in a run and scoring two runs. Victor had one of his best games at the plate, going 3 for 3.

"This victory is real important for us," Sartor said, "because we didn't want Jason to go seven innings and us be 0 and 1."

Brownwood coach Mark Howeth said five Lion errors were the difference in the game. "We lost our poise a little bit there in the third," Howeth said, "but what really hurt was getting runners in scoring position and not scoring. We just didn't take advantage of our opportunities."

"We'll be out here tomorrow and be ready to play ball," said Howeth.

"They've been here before," Sartor said, talking about Brownwood's ability to come back in a series, having forced two previous playoffs to a third game. "We'll have to be ready."

Hereford and Brownwood were to meet in the second game of the best 2-of-3 series at 1 p.m. Saturday. Complete results will be in Tuesday's Brand.

Pole position at Indy more responsibility than advantage

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) - Rick Mears says the pole position in a 500-mile race is more a responsibility than an advantage.

"You can win from any seat in the house," said Mears, who will start from the pole in Sunday's Indianapolis 500. "There's a lot of time to work your way through traffic. The big thing, for me, is it's a little safer starting up front at the beginning."

"I can set a pace, if we can lead the race at a pace that I feel is comfortable on the car, on the tires, for the conditions, then we'll do that," the defending champion and three-time winner said.

Mears, who owns a record five poles at Indy, was criticized by some drivers for setting too slow a pace at the start of the 1982 race. Just before the leaders approached the starting line, Kevin Cogan's car veered to the right, clipped A.J. Foyt and bounced back in front of Mario Andretti. Foyt's car was repaired and ready to go when the race was re-started, but Andretti was eliminated.

Andretti blamed Cogan, and Cogan blamed Mears.

"That was to my advantage," Mears said, recalling the slow 1982 start. "I'm the pole-sitter. I'm supposed to pace the race at what I feel is right. I felt I could get a better jump at that speed, in that particular gear, and get to the corner before the other guys. That's really my prerogative to do that. But everybody hollered about it so much, I figured I just might as well pick it up and go whatever."

This year, Mears was the fastest driver in practice at more than 226 mph and the fastest in qualifications at record speeds of 224.254 for one lap and 223.885 for four laps. He doesn't think those make him the favorite on Sunday.

"Everybody has more faith in me with eight drivers turning faster laps than the 215 that Mario Andretti led with in last year's "carburetion day" practice.

Al Unser, Mears' teammate, was fast at 217.407, followed by Andretti at 217.286, Teo Fabi of Italy at 217.233 and Mears at 216.710.

"In 1986, the car never bobbed all month long. But on race day, the car couldn't do anything. We just couldn't balance it. When we got in traffic, we couldn't go anywhere. So you just never know about this place until you see the checkered flag."

Mears also said the close competition - six cars were qualified at more than 220 mph and five others were above 218 - makes a pre-race prediction meaningless.

The only thing he will predict is that the race will be fast.

The two-hour final practice on Thursday lent credence to that opinion.

Newton tired of 'fat jokes'

IRVING (AP) - Nate Newton is not telling any fat jokes these days, and he's not interested in hearing any.

"Too many people are spending too much time talking about how overweight he is, he complains.

Despite checking into Valley Ranch at an admittedly robust 358 pounds - approximately 43 over his projected playing weight - Newton has not yet jeopardized his status as the Cowboys' starting left guard.

In fact, new Cowboys coach Jimmy Johnson and offensive line coach Tony Wise have been ultra supportive - even though an injured shoulder prevented Newton from participating in minicamp drills. At minicamp one year ago, coach Tom Landry demoted Newton to the second unit during a team meeting because he had shown up at approximately the same weight.

Newton has until the end of June to make good on several conditioning clauses that will pay him $80,000 over the life of the three-year contract he signed last September.

Newton talked about his weight recently after walking to the side of the track where he had just done laps in a gray sweatsuit marked XXXL.

Rangers, Valentine facing crossroads

An AP Sports Analysis
By DENNE H. FREEMAN
AP Sports Writer

ARLINGTON (AP) - Give Bobby Valentine until the July All-Star break.

It should be apparent by then whether Valentine has proved his mettle as a major league manager.

There can be no excuses from Bobby V in 1989. The talent mix is there to keep the Rangers in the American League West race until October.

Note the phrase is "keep them in contention."

Realistically, there's no way the Rangers can match the talent, power and pitching of the defending champion Oakland A's.

Thanks to Tom Grieve's remarkable wheeling and dealing in the off-season, the Rangers had their best April in club history.

It was followed by a miserable May. Texas started playing like the old Rangers with bad base running, shoddy fielding, and questionable pitcher handling.

You can tell when a team starts to hit the downslide. It begins holding team meetings.

First Nolan Ryan himself spoke at a "pitchers only" gathering in which the main topic of the thesis was to throw strikes.

"If you don't trust your stuff enough to get it over the plate, then you don't belong in the big leagues," Ryan said.

Advice which should be chiseled on the locker of every Rangers' pitcher. Texas pitchers have the worst reputation in baseball in dishing out walks.

Then Valentine held a team meeting to analyze the Rangers' first two months of play.

"It may be June before we figure out where all the switches are with this team," Valentine said. "I'm trying to figure out just where we are. It's my job to figure it out."

Indeed, there's pressure on Valentine, a protege of the Los Angeles Dodgers' Tommy Lasorda, to prove he can produce the winning magic his mentor does.

Valentine's critics don't like the way he handles pitchers nor the way he rests players in an attempt to get everybody on the squad into the games.

A case in point would be the recent placement of Jeff Kunkel at third base, where he committed three errors.

Or subbing Mike Stanley at first base where he almost blew a game with a damaging boot of a grounder.

The Rangers' melancholy May certainly hasn't been all Valentine's fault.

Charlie Hough's slow start has been very damaging. He lost five games before he finally beat the Kansas City Royals this week. The 41-year-old Hough's rejuvenation could be the big push the Rangers need to stay close to the red-hot A's.

Hough had the second worst earned run average in the AL before he notched his first victory in 36 days.

The designated hitting spot also has been killing the Rangers, who are the worst in the AL in that department. The batting average for the designated hitters was well under .200, and at one stretch Texas went 0-for-18 from the designated hitter spot.

The talented Bobby Witt has almost pitched himself out of the rotation with his mysterious up-and-down production.

But no matter what happens on the field, new owners George W. Bush and Rusty Rose have to be delighted with their purchase from Eddie Chiles.

Texas' 23-18 record was the best by the club after 41 games since 1981.

The Rangers' 107,918 attendance increase over the first 20 dates in 1989 was the largest increase in major league baseball.

By early July those fans should know the mettle of the team they're watching.

Lewis snubs TAC

HOUSTON (AP) - Carl Lewis and other American Olympic medalists in track and field disgruntled with The Athletics Congress say they are boycotting the national outdoor championships next month.

"We cannot continue to be put in this position because the TAC is killing track in America. They are holding back funds, they are misappropriating situations and making it very difficult for athletes to compete here," Lewis, a six-time Olympic gold medal winner, said Thursday.

"They're taking in a lot of money and giving out very little and then asking all the athletes to continue to go."

Lewis said he'd like TAC to establish a plan to pay the top 10 athletes in every event, instead of the current process of paying only about 10 to 15 athletes, including Lewis, while "everyone else gets dogged."

Lewis said TAC has arranged a profitable television package with Turner Broadcasting System, but are "failing to give any more than 15 to 20 percent of that money to the competitions so the meets cannot function. Whereas last year they were able to get local sponsors, they cannot get local sponsors anymore because of this TV package."

Boycotting the June 15-17 meet at the University of Houston is the only way Lewis says athletes will be heard. "The only way that we have to take a stand and to get the TAC to start listening to the voice of the athlete is to boycott competitions," he said. "I feel it's very unfortunate because this is my hometown and I want to compete here."

Pete Cava, a spokesman for TAC, which is the governing body for all U.S. track and field, confirmed that Lewis and Joe DeLoach, 200-meter gold medalist, would not be competing in the national championships.

"If they choose not to compete that's their right," he said. "Carl Lewis will only hurt himself in the long run and the same for Joe DeLoach."

By not competing in next month's competition, Lewis, DeLoach and others boycotting will not be able to qualify for the World Cup competition scheduled in September in Barcelona, Spain, Cava said.

Expected to join Lewis in skipping the TAC meet are 400 gold medalist Steve Lewis, 400 silver medalist Danny Everett, 110 hurdle gold medalist Roger Kingdom, women's high-jump gold medalist Louise Ritter, sprinter Evelyn Ashford and middle distance runner Steve Scott.

"We're boycotting because we asked to discuss these problems with TAC and TAC refuses to see us," Lewis said. "Everybody feels they're given TAC long enough and they're not going to do it any more. People watching these meets are saying, 'Where is everybody?' Well, they're sitting at home, taking a stand."

Lewis, who is a strong advocate against drug use among athletes, also lashed out against TAC because, "I am not sure that TAC is committed to fighting drugs."

"They're sitting back concerned about helping their image but they're not concerned about fighting the drug problems. We want a new drug situation where we can fight drugs. We all want it stopped in our sport."

Cava said Lewis' allegations about drugs, "is ridiculous and he knows it."

"He is like a child throwing a tantrum," Cava said. "He has the opportunity to affect a change within the organization and he is not availing himself of any of these opportunities. He chooses to sit on the sidelines and be a cry baby."

On The House Basic tools for workshop

By ANDY LANG
AP Newsfeatures

If you were starting a home workshop - and you had accomplished very little in the way of doing it yourself - which basic tools should you purchase, assuming you had to watch your budget?

We recently tried this question on some of our friends who are fairly handy at fixing and making things. Everybody agreed on two of the tools that would be required. You could not get by, it was said emphatically, without a hammer and a screwdriver. No argument there. Even if you never contemplated a home workshop or planned to repair anything, a hammer and a screwdriver are needed whether you own a house or rent an apartment. There always are times when something must be hammered or a screw must be tightened or loosened.

After those two choices, there was a considerable difference of opinion. Some suggested a pair of pliers as essential, some selected a hand saw, some thought a portable electric drill was a key tool. When power tools began to get into the picture, some complications existed, so we added the proviso that, for the sake of discussion, the selections should be confined to hand tools. In the natural course of events, nearly all of us get acquainted with hand tools before we begin to use electric machines.

To get a professional viewpoint on the subject, we talked to Peter Costello, vice president of Stanley Tools. In his opinion, neither a hammer nor a screwdriver is the most essential tool for a beginner. Nothing is more important, he said, than a measuring device. Therefore, he felt a power return tape rule belongs at the top of the list.

After that, he named the hammer and screwdriver, followed by a utility knife and a pair of pliers. As he explained it, you can't hang a picture or do any repair or remodeling job inside or outside the house without having a way to measure distances. The steel tape that rolls up into a compact case was seen as the supreme "first" tool for any homeowner who wants to do more than change a light bulb.

A 16-pound hammer was listed by Costello as the best choice for all-purpose hammering. In the screwdriver line, a four-way ratchet screwdriver or a set of screwdrivers with different lengths and sizes was recommended.

Do-it-yourselfers soon learn that "you won't cut it if you can't cut it." The simple utility knife has the most utility when it comes to hobbies, handiwork or even heavy duty jobs. It's ideal, from scoring laminate to cutting carpet, and from snapping string to slicing veneer, shingles or moldings.

A Lazy Susan for a cupboard

By READER'S DIGEST
For The Associated Press

Revolving shelves in a cupboard put every item within easy reach. Simple to make, a revolving shelf or Lazy Susan consists of two plywood disks, crosspieces between the disks, and a swivel bearing. Here are building instructions:

Tools and Materials
You will need 3/4-inch plywood (the size will depend on the size of your cupboard), 1-inch flexible metal countertop edging, a 4-inch Lazy Susan swivel bearing (usually available in hardware stores and home centers), white glue, 6-d finishing nails, four roundhead wood screws and four sheet metal screws. The necessary tools are: hammer, screwdriver, electric drill with 3-16th-inch and 3-32nd-inch bits, tin snip and sandpaper. If you plan to cut the plywood disks yourself, you will also need a saber saw.

Instructions
1. To determine the size of the shelves, measure the inside depth and width of the cupboard. When installed, the Lazy Susan should have at least 1/2-inch clearance all around.

2. It is easiest to have the lumber dealer cut the disks out of the plywood. If you cut them yourself, draw the two circles on the plywood, with a beam compass or a home-made pin and string compass. Place the plywood at the edge of the workbench or on a pair of sawhorses, then cut the circles using a saber saw.

3. Cut the crosspieces so they are identical in height. Cut one the same length as the diameter of the disks. Cut the other into two pieces, each one half the diameter of the disks, less 1/8-inch.

4. Assemble the Lazy Susan. Attach the crosspieces to both disks with glue and finishing nails. The crosspieces should be perpendicular to each other.

5. Attach the metal edging around the edges of the disks, using the fasteners supplied with the edging.

6. Center the swivel bearing on the underside of the lower disk and mark the location of the four corner holes. Drill pilot holes using the 3-16th-inch bit.

7. Temporarily fasten the bearing to the unit with the sheet metal screws driven from the top side of the lower disk. The swivel should spin freely.

8. Place the assembled unit in the cupboard, make sure it can turn freely and that it has sufficient clearance all around and mark the position of the bearing's bottom on the bottom of the cabinet.

9. Remove the unit, take out the screws and fasten the bearing to the bottom of the cupboard using the wood screws. To facilitate driving the screws, drill pilot holes using the 3-32nd-inch drill bit. Place the Lazy Susan back on the bearing and fasten it permanently to the bearing.

Here's the answer

By ANDY LANG
AP Newsfeatures

Q. - I will be painting the outside of my house this year. I have read up on the subject and am sure I can do a good job even though I have never painted an exterior. Every once in a while, I run across the expression "follow the sun" while doing the painting. I have an inkling of what that means, but I am not sure. Can you clarify it for me?

A. - When you paint the outside of a house, you do not want the rays of the sun to dry it too quickly. The best results are obtained when the paint dries normally without any aid from heat. To "follow the sun" means to paint where the sun just has been and will not return that day. You then will be painting all the time in the shade. Besides helping the paint job, that procedure will keep you a lot more comfortable on a warm day.

Q. - I have a large panel of wood that was not used for a long time and became warped. What causes this and how can it be corrected?

A. - The usual cause, although by no means the only one, is when moisture on one side of the wood is greater than on the other. What you should do is find out which side is dry. Apply some moisture to that side. Place the wood on wet grass or damp towels so that it will be in the hot sun most of the day. The cupped side of the wood should be face down. Put some weights on the top of the wood - perhaps a few books, but not too many or the weight will be too heavy. Examine the piece of wood at least once a day and remove it when the wood appears to be straight.

Frito-Lay to hold canola meet Tuesday

Representatives of Frito-Lay will meet with area farmers Tuesday at 9 a.m. in the banquet room of the Hereford Community Center to discuss contracts for raising canola seed.

The meeting will begin with a general presentation, then break into question-and-answer and one-on-one discussions from 10 a.m. until noon.

The company has added canola oil to its list of alternative oils for making potato chips after testing canola-fried chips during the past year in a special test market. The company will test canola in the company's other snack products later.

During the past two years, Frito-Lay has contracted winter canola with area farmers, and hopes to significantly increase the number of contracts for the 1989-90 growing season.

For winter canola, farmers would plant the crop in early September and harvest it in Spring 1990.

Lane Burtz, director of oil purchasing for Frito-Lay, said the 1989-90 program features several points of difference from previous contracts.

"The oil market has shown great variance over the past year. Therefore, we plan to offer growers prices that will adjust to reflect market fluctuations," Burtz said. "These prices will be competitive with other oilseed offers by moving with the soybean oil futures."

Burtz said the grower can lock in a flat price on half of the crop before Oct. 13, 1989, and can set the price on the remainder of the crop anytime between March 5 and June 15, 1990,

Burtz said. "The grower can pick his timing to set the price of the crop, since the price will move with the soybean oil market."

Research has shown that canola seed can be a profitable alternative as a rotation crop with wheat. It doesn't share the same diseases as wheat, so it works well in a rotation. It requires the same planting and harvesting equipment as wheat, and direct input costs are virtually the same.

Canola is also drought-tolerant and since it is an oilseed its value is set by vegetable oil markets, not the grain market, providing further diversification.

The demand for canola oil by U.S. food companies is increasing dramatically, according to Frito-Lay officials, because of its excellent nutritional profile. Canola oil has only six percent fatty acids, less than half that found in corn oil. Of the 94 percent unsaturated fatty acids, 58 percent are monounsaturated fatty acids which have been shown to have a favorable impact on blood cholesterol levels in individuals who have to reduce their intake of saturated fats.

Burtz said that unless domestic canola production increases, foreign farmers will, by 1991, be growing over 800,000 acres of canola to meet U.S. demands. He said that Frito-Lay would prefer to contract directly with U.S. farmers, as they have for potatoes and corn, than to purchase canola oil from Canada or other countries.

Insect workshop is Friday

Cotton, corn and sorghum producers in the Panhandle and South Plains are receiving a special invitation again this year to attend the annual High Plains Insect Scout Training Workshop to increase the effectiveness of their pest management programs.

The first of two workshop sessions will focus on early and mid-season pests and will be held Friday, June 2 at the Ollie Linder Agricultural Center in Plainview.

The center is on U.S. 87 Business Route south of the city.

The second workshop will be July 10 in Plainview and will cover mid to late-season crops pests.

The workshop, conducted by the Texas Agricultural Extension Service, was first held in 1973 to train scouts in the pest management programs it conducts. The Extension Service is part of the Texas A&M University System.

In subsequent years, the training has expanded to include scouts employed by consultants, aerial applicators and others, as well as producers who want to learn how to scout their own fields for insects. The workshop focuses on perfecting skills in identifying crop pests and making timely pest management decisions which can protect investments and yield.

The first workshop will begin at 8:30 a.m. with Dr. Jim Leser, extension entomologist, outlining the scope of the training, general concepts of pest management and sampling. Aspects of pesticide safety will be presented by Craig Forbis, extension agent-pest management and sampling. Aspects of pesticide safety will be presented by Craig Forbis, extension agent-pest management at Lamesa.

Dr. James Supak, extension cotton specialist, will open the cotton session with information on growth and development of cotton. Leser then will present information on thrips. Cotton fleahoppers and beneficial insects will be discussed by Mark Brown, extension agent-entomology headquartered at Crosbyton.

Greg Cronholm and Mike Blanton, extension agents-entomology in Plainview and Farwell, will provide information on early and mid-season pests of sorghum and corn. Dr. Pat Morrison, extension entomologist will discuss pests of soybeans and sunflowers. Major plant diseases of South Plains crops will be discussed by Dr. Harold Kaufman, extension plant pathologist. Nutrient deficiency symptoms will be presented by Dr. Michael Hickey, extension soil chemist.

The workshop will conclude at noon with a hands-on session in which participants will learn how to determine the percent square set on potted cotton plants and will identify insect specimens. Handouts will be available.

Low Mississippi could halt barges

WASHINGTON (AP) - An Agriculture Department transportation expert says the Mississippi River has not recovered from last year's drought and its reduced streamflow could bottleneck barges moving grain and soybeans into export this fall.

T.Q. Hutchinson of the department's Economic Research Service said a sharp upturn in demand for jumbo covered railroad cars and "continued low-water conditions on the Missouri and lower Mississippi rivers will create a tight transportation situation for grain marketing."

However, Hutchinson said there will be "sufficient capacity" available to meet the current export forecasts for feed grains and wheat.

"Replacement of Lock 26 at Alton, Ill., will close the Mississippi River for about one week in October-November 1989," he said. "The closing, combined with low water and a tight rail car supply, could limit a post-harvest upturn in export shipments, but should not markedly disrupt grain distribution."

Hutchinson said in a report that water levels for the lower Mississippi in the first four months of this year were well below those of the same period in 1988. However, the January-April levels averaged above those of the 1988 drought months, June through December.

"Navigation on the middle and lower segments of the river will probably remain impaired in 1989, as in 1988," he said. "However, sufficient capacity exists to carry the volume of grain implied by current marketing estimates."

Hutchinson said that between 1944 and 1988 the flood measure at St. Louis, Mo., averaged 19.5 feet in April, falling to between 6 and 9 feet in September. Thus, he added, "a substantial reduction in water depth can be expected to occur between spring and fall."

Last year, the water level at St. Louis fell from 15.1 feet in April to 0.4 feet in September. The gauges do not indicate the channel's depth, but measure the quantity of water available. Channel depths are affected by dredging and other activities.

In April, Hutchinson said, the flood gauges at St. Louis averaged 13.5 feet, nearly two feet below the previous year and six feet below the 1944-88 average for the month.

"In the coming months, flood gauges will likely reflect decreasing amounts of water, as they did last year," he said. "Much of this will result from continuing low flows from the Missouri River."

Last year the Missouri River supplied 65 to 70 percent of the flow at St. Louis, he said. Normally, the Missouri would account for 45 percent. Although water releases in 1988 were below average, the Missouri's increased share of the flow stemmed from reductions in the Mississippi and its tributaries.

"Currently, Missouri River reservoirs are 50 percent to 60 percent full," Hutchinson said. "The Missouri River division (of the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers) plans to release slightly more water than last year - but less than in a normal year."

Also, he said, the Corps of Engineers plans a shortened navigation season this year because of the low levels of storage reservoirs. The river opened one week later and will close 25 to 30 days earlier than usual.

WASHINGTON (AP) - The Agriculture Department says private exporters have sold China an additional 150,000 metric tons of U.S. wheat for delivery in the marketing year that will begin June 1.

No selling prices or the names of the companies involved were announced.

Wheat sales to China in the current 1988-89 marketing year total almost 8.3 million tons, officials said Thursday.

A metric ton is about 2,205 pounds and is equal to 36.7 bushels of wheat.

As soon as a trap-jaw ant queen rears her first daughters - from eggs to voracious larvae to metamorphic pupae to worker adults - she gives up foraging and most likely never leaves the nest again, says National Geographic.

Here's A Good Word For People Who Eat -

BEEF!

Did you know -

- Beef is ideal for modern, low-calorie diets, because today's leaner cattle provide beef that is, on the average, 10% lower in calories than it was in years past!
- Beef is more digestible than vegetables!
- A 3 oz. serving of lean beef supplies only 8% of an adult's daily calorie requirements - but 45% of the daily protein requirements!
- Beef provides iron - and also serves as a catalyst to help you get the most iron out of other foods!

When you consider the superior nutritional value and its genuine good taste, is it any wonder that it continues to be an American favorite both at home and when dining out?

Japan leads in violations

WASHINGTON (AP) - U.S. officials say they hope immediate trade talks can open markets in Japan, Brazil and India and avert any backlash in those countries over being named to the administration's list of top trade violators.

"This exercise is not intended to be offensive," U.S. Trade Representative Carla A. Hills told a news conference Thursday night as she announced the administration is targeting those countries for priority action under the 1988 trade law. "I hope there is no backlash."

The 1988 Omnibus Trade Act requires the administration to issue what amounts to a hit list that names the countries whose trade barriers are most harmful to American producers. The government then has 18 months to negotiate away the barriers.

Failure of the talks could lead for tariffs of up to 100 percent on selected exports from the offending countries.

While Hills expressed hope the action would not generate bitterness, Japanese Ambassador Nobuo Matsunaga issued a statement calling the decision to include his country "extremely regrettable."

Hills also announced the United States would be watching closely 25 countries suspected of failing to protect U.S. copyrights and patents and said the Bush administration would reveal the status of the eight most flagrant ones in November.

The Japanese lobbied in recent weeks to stay off the list of top trade violators. They were less successful, however, than the Koreans, who made a number of trade concessions in recent days and did manage to avoid inclusion.

Japan was cited for its refusal to buy U.S. supercomputers and satellites as well as its barriers to purchase of U.S. wood products. The United States ran a trade deficit of $52 billion last year with Japan, or 44 percent of the $119.8 billion U.S. trade imbalance.

India was cited for barriers that bar foreign investment and the closing of its insurance market to foreign companies.

The administration cited Brazil for quotas on imports and licensing restrictions.

Besides citing Japan, Brazil and India for flagrant trade barriers, the administration placed eight countries on a "priority watch list" of nations that have failed to protect U.S. copyrights and patents. It declined, however, to target any countries for priority action on that issue.

Accidental Discovery May End Obesity

WASHINGTON - Obesity may be controlled naturally with a new type of pill, discovered by accident, a research scientist confirmed recently.

In studies, scientists noted an unusual side effect. Patients receiving an ingredient in what is now being called FS-1 all lost weight, while body weight in control groups remained constant.

Scientists say the mechanism behind the weight reduction is not clear, but suggest it is partially due to a decrease in the intestinal absorption of calorie-rich dietary fats. Although scientists for some time have known of substances with the capability of producing this effect, the dramatic impact on weight reduction was not known until recently.

The director of research and development at National Dietary Research, an organization committed to the investigation and research of nutritional solutions to world-wide health problems, stated, "The mechanism by which FS-1 works to decrease body weight is actually a more complex and sophisticated process called nutri-bonding. When chewed and swallowed immediately before meals, FS-1 releases nutrients with low calorie content into the body, while high-calorie fats are eliminated, thus providing optimum nutrition and a minimum number of calories."

Studies with FS-1 indicate weight loss results clearly superior to products currently available for the treatment of obesity. In a comparative study by NDR, whose research topics have been the subject of articles published in recent medical and nutritional journals, FS-1 was found to be the most effective treatment for obesity and the most acceptable to patients.

The discovery comes as welcome news to thousands of obesity sufferers waiting years for this type of breakthrough. According to a spokesperson at NDR, FS-1 can be made available to the public immediately, because it is not a drug and contains only natural ingredients recognized as safe. A drug with essentially the same weight loss capabilities might take as long as eight years to be available, due to lengthy delays encountered in the approval process. FS-1 is currently available on a limited basis through physicians and pharmacies. An instruction sheet for proper use and optimum results is provided with each bottle of 100 tablets.

Wood's slaying was huge crime

SAN ANTONIO (AP) - It was a crime that could not go unsolved - a federal judge gunned down on orders from a family so rich in drug money it tried to buy its own brand of justice.

Ten years ago, the morning quiet of an affluent San Antonio neighborhood was shattered by the crack of a high-powered rifle as U.S. District Judge John Wood swung his briefcase into his car.

A single bullet struck him in the back, and Wood died outside his condominium just days before he was to preside over the drug conspiracy trial of Jimmy Chagra.

Since Wood's assassination on May 29, 1979 - the only slaying of a federal judge this century, prosecutors say - Jimmy Chagra has disappeared into the anonymity of the Federal Witness Protection Program. His wife and a man convicted of taking the Chagras' money to kill Wood are in prison.

Joe Chagra - who advised his brother to have the judge known as "Maximum John" assassinated - is working as a paralegal in El Paso, his prison term behind him.

But federal officials who spent more than $11 million to convict Wood's killers say the case remains a tragedy they cannot forget.

"The slaying was a traumatic occasion for an awful lot of people," said Jamie Boyd, a former U.S. attorney who worked on the Wood case and is now a Bexar County prosecutor. "It was an attack on the system, not just a judge, and it was a crime that had to be solved."

Ray Jahn, assistant U.S. attorney who was lead prosecutor in the Wood case, called the crime a tragedy not only for the Woods but for the Chagra family as well.

"Money can buy some things, but it can't buy happiness. It didn't do them any good," Jahn said.

Jimmy Chagra was an El Paso rug salesman who turned to the lucrative marijuana smuggling trade in the 1960s. By the time of the Wood slaying, prosecutors say, his drug empire stretched from Florida to Las Vegas, where he lived in a $1 million mansion and was known as a high roller who blew thousands of dollars on a roll of dice and gave away hundreds more in tips.

Prosecutors say his generosity attracted con men - among them Charles Harrelson, who had served time in a 1968 murder-for-hire conviction.

Harrelson - father of "Cheers" TV star Woody Harrelson - said he went to Las Vegas to dupe Jimmy of $250,000. Prosecutors say he was a coldblooded trigger man, the right man to carry out Joe Chagra's suggestion that his brother commission Wood's killing.

"Jimmy felt he was above the system and that's why he had no compulsion for buying Harrelson's murder of Judge Wood because as he accumulated so much wealth he believed he was bigger than our entire judicial system," said Jack Lawn, administrator of the Drug Enforcement Administration and special agent-in-charge of the FBI in San Antonio when Wood was killed.

Wood had built a reputation as a hard-working attorney who specialized in civil matters.

He was appointed to the federal bench by President Nixon and although unfamiliar with criminal law, he was a quick study and developed a dislike for narcotics defendants.

"He hated drugs and he felt he could do something about it by putting some of those people away," said prosecutor Boyd.

For a time, Wood had U.S. marshal protection, but found it too intrusive, Boyd said. "I told him he needed the protection, but he said to me, 'If they're going to kill me, they're going to kill me anyhow.'"

Boyd was well aware of the violence that seemed to trail the Chagras.

The prosecutor was investigating the slaying of a third Chagra brother, Lee, during a December 1978 robbery at his El Paso law office.

Two soldiers later were convicted of the crime. And Boyd also was studying a 1978 carbine attack on assistant U.S. attorney James Kerr, who was investigating Jimmy Chagra's drug business at the time. Kerr escaped injury by hiding under the dashboard of his car.

Boyd left San Antonio the morning of May 29, 1979 for El Paso, where he was to investigate the Lee Chagra and Kerr cases. He drove past Wood's condominium complex, the Chateau Dijon, and onto the highway headed west.

It was an hour later, a little before 8:30 a.m., that Wood said good-bye to his wife, Kathryn, and walked out the front door. Kathryn was talking on the phone with her daughter.

Wood walked to his car, opened the door and prepared to swing in his briefcase. Then the rifle cracked and a single bullet found its target in Wood's back.

"I heard the shot. I just dropped the phone and went outside," Kathryn Wood testified at the Chagra and Harrelson trial in October 1982. "I looked down, picked up his head and said, 'John H., who shot you?'"

Wood died almost instantly. News of the shooting spread through the federal government, and prosecutors immediately suspected Jimmy Chagra.

Boyd recalls hearing the news on the car radio and thinking, "My God, I never thought they'd go that far."

Hundreds of FBI agents and reporters converged on San Antonio, but the killer was long gone.

The FBI tediously began putting its case together. The first indictments were issued in April 1982, against Jimmy Chagra and others accused of taking part in the murder-for-hire scheme.

By then, the agency had conducted more than 30,000 interviews, collected more than 500,000 pieces of information in its computers on the Wood slaying, and spent nearly $5 million.

Prosecutors' efforts pushed the tab to more than $11 million during the trials in 1982 and 1983 and subsequent appeals, officials said.

"The San Antonio community wanted an instant result because it was a heinous crime, but we didn't feel any tenseness in the investigation," the DEA's Lawn said. "The investigators proved their mettle in this investigation."

The murder weapon - a .240-caliber Weatherby rifle - never was recovered. But with Joe Chagra's testimony - given in exchange for a plea bargain - a jury was able to convict Elizabeth Chagra and the Harrelsons.

Harrelson, who wrote in a note confiscated after his 1980 arrest in Van Horn, "I never killed a person who was undeserving of it," was convicted of murder and conspiracy and sentenced to two consecutive life terms, plus five years in prison for obstructing justice.

He has steadfastly denied any involvement in the Wood killing.

His wife at the time, Jo Ann Starr Harrelson, was convicted of perjury and obstructing justice and is serving 25 years in prison. Prosecutors say she bought the murder weapon 12 days before Wood's death.

Mrs. Chagra, accused of delivering the $250,000 payoff from her husband to Harrelson's stepdaughter, Teresa Starr Jasper, was convicted of conspiracy, tax fraud and obstruction of justice charges. Her conviction was overturned once, but in 1986 she was convicted again and sentenced to 40 years in prison.

Jimmy Chagra was acquitted of a murder charge in the Wood killing. Prosecutors say Joe Chagra's refusal to testify against his brother left them with too little evidence to get a conviction.

Joe spent 6 1/2 years in federal prison before being paroled in March 1988.

Jimmy already had been convicted on charges of running a drug enterprise and sentenced to 30 years in prison without parole. Federal officials then sought his help solving the Kerr case. Jimmy agreed to a plea bargain, saying he would testify against the Kerr trigger man, James Kearns, if Mrs. Chagra's sentence was reduced by 10 years.

Jimmy never testified against Kearns, who pleaded guilty in 1984 to attempted murder, and Mrs. Chagra's sentence remained unchanged, but Jimmy nonetheless was accepted into the Federal Witness Protection Program in June 1984. His whereabouts are kept secret, but federal officials say he is in prison.

The plea bargain was sealed by order of U.S. District Judge William Sessions, who presided over the trials and now is director of the FBI.

Jahn and his wife, LeRoy, are the only members of the five-person Wood case prosecution team who still work for the government.

"When we finished this case, we were told, 'The two of you will never be afraid of any other case again,'" Mrs. John said. "They were right. Everything in the world you can imagine came up in that case."

Wright's hometown is worried

WEATHERFORD, Texas (AP) - There are no statues of Jim Wright in his hometown, although there are two honoring Mary Martin's Broadway flight as Peter Pan.

But when folks here need any reminder of how much Wright means to this town of about 14,000, all they need do is dig in their pockets.

As rumors continue to swirl that Wright may step down as House Speaker because of allegations he violated 69 counts of House ethics rules, townspeople wonder what life would be like without the longtime Democratic congressman.

Weatherford, the county seat of Parker County, is a town reliant on the paychecks many residents bring back from Fort Worth. And large numbers work at General Dynamics and Bell Helicopters, defensive companies that have benefited from contracts Wright helped push through Congress.

City officials were not certain how many of the town's 14,000 residents commute to jobs in the larger neighboring city where Wright's Congressional district lies, but they know interstates 20 and 30 fill with traffic every morning and evening.

Even those who dislike Wright or his politics dare not criticize him too loudly in the town where he became Texas' youngest mayor at age 26.

Mayor Sherry Watson, who says she is a fan of Wright's, said, "Without him, I think you're talking about General Dynamics and Bell Helicopter being hurt real severe."

She said the town has been shaken by the allegations against Wright.

"I think we'll all be in trouble - all of Texas and especially us," Watson said. "Jim's our voice in Washington. I think it's an assault on Texas."

At the Fix-It Shop on Elm Street, Billie McLendon took his attention away from a shopful of lawnmowers needing repairs and vented his anger at those trying to sideline Wright.

"He's too good a man to resign," said McLendon, 60. "I've never seen him and I've never met him, but I know he's not crooked. I've followed him all my life."

"All I know is if Jim Wright goes, the business around here will fade away, and a lot of people are going to know what starving is about."

Some say Wright is being brought down by those who are jealous of Texas' sudden power. Others say he is being waylaid by political opportunists seeking to grab his power.

"I think it's retaliation," said Martha Reeder, a real estate agent. "We're sure he's done something - but we feel the majority of people up in Washington have."

"He's getting old; they think they can step on him," said repairman Gail Quick.

Whatever happens, though, it will not affect the deep respect and admiration that Wright has won over 34 years as a congressman and as Weatherford's mayor from 1950-54.

A city official who wouldn't give her name said, "You're not going to see anyone in this town condemn him. He's like a legend. He's larger than life."

But there is little more here to remind anyone of Wright.

Aguiree receives degree

Barbara Jean Aguiree of Hereford received a bachelor degree in business administration during spring graduation ceremonies at the University of Mary Hardin-Baylor recently.

Dr. Ralph Wilson Jr., vice president of Premark International, Inc., brought the commencement address and Ed L. Spivey, pastor of Bethel Baptist Church in Nocona, was the baccalaureate speaker.

Over two million Americans are 85 and over.

Ann Landers

DEAR ANN LANDERS: Thank you for blowing the whistle on the Cancer Fund of America Sweepstakes. That column was a terrific public service! But it came too late for me. I had already been taken in by those slick operators.

When I received a letter informing me that I was a winner in the $5,000 sweepstakes and asking me to donate $5 to help fight cancer in exchange for a "mystery gift." I sent in my check. According to a recent letter I will be receiving my prize (they didn't say what it would be), but after reading your column I'm sure it will be 40 cents.

Why can't the Better Business Bureau do something about these crooks? They are clearly taking advantage of people left and right-- Illinois

DEAR ILL.: The Cancer Fund of America folks are extremely clever. They use language that keeps them half an inch this side of the law. They also rely heavily on the theft act that most people don't read carefully and that Barnum was right when he said there's a sucker born every minute. Read on.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: The Cancer Fund of America is only one of seven organizations soliciting people in his manner. All seven "not-for-profit" organizations have contracts with Watson & Hughey, a direct-mail firm in Alexandria, Va., which does their fund-raising. All sweepstakes letters are virtually identical and the motive is definitely not charitable. The seven organizations are:

- American Heart Disease Prevention Foundation Inc., Montclair, N.J.
- Cancer Fund of America Inc., Knoxville, Tenn.
- Center for Alternative Cancer Research, also known as Project Cure of Dothan, Ala.
- Walker Cancer Research Institute Inc., Edgewood, Md.
- Pacific West Cancer Fund of Seattle, Wash.
- National Animal Protection Fund of Tulsa, Okla.
- Social Security Protection Bureau, also known as Foxhall Corp., of Washington, D.C.
- Watson & Hughey is currently being sued by the attorney general of Illinois for fraud and deception. Several other states are suing also. Betty Furness, NBC-TV consumer reporter, said Robert Stone's license to practice law was suspended three years ago in Virginia. Similar action is pending in Washington. (Stone is the lawyer who signed the pitches.)

The sweepstakes solicitation was carefully timed to hit more than 200 million households during the holiday season. Because Americans are by nature charitable, millions of dollars went into the coffers of Watson & Hughey instead of to legitimate charities. When news of these abuses gets out, many people will unfortunately be reluctant to give to any charity, however worthy.

Note that the name of the phony organizations sound very much like the legitimate organizations such as the American Cancer Society and the Cancer Research Foundation of America, which for years have been doing a splendid job.

Thanks again, Ann Landers, for being such a good watchdog on behalf of all Americans. We are grateful.--Professional Overseer, Chicago

DEAR OVERSEER: I hope all my readers will be more cautious about sending money for "causes" or entering contests that are supposed to help the afflicted. Give only to organizations that you know. If you are uncertain, call the Better Business Bureau or the attorney general's office. If you get snookered once--shame on them. If you get snookered twice--shame on you.

Haile Selassie, the last emperor of Ethiopia's 3,000-year-old monarchy, died in Addis Ababa in 1975. He was 83. His death came almost a year after his overthrow in a military coup.

MR. AND MRS. JOE BELL
...to manage Thriftway Store

Bell to manage Thriftway

Although Joe Bell and his wife, Phyllis, have lived in Hereford less than two weeks, the new manager of the Thriftway Store is enthusiastic about his new position and about the town.

"From the moment we saw Hereford, I viewed it as a very progressive town," explained Bell, who moved here from Lamesa where he was the manager of United Supermarket. "My wife and I are going to do everything we can to support this community."

Bell is no stranger to the grocery business since he has made this his profession for 36 years. "I graduated from Spur High School in 1953 on a Friday and began work at Safeway on the following Monday morning."

His wife, who is assistant store manager, has 10 years experience in the same vocation. Although she has owned and operated a beauty shop and is qualified in several fields, she enjoys being in the grocery business.

The couple works well as a team since they have the same aspirations. "We have set goals for ourselves," Mrs. Bell said. "My husband and I will do whatever it takes to make this Thriftway Store a success. We will strive to have the freshest produce and meat at competitive prices."

"I also want our employees to be the most courteous in town and make shoppers want to patronize our business," she continued.

The store now employs 18 full-time people including the second assistant manager, David Thompson, and market manager, Mark Velasquez. For the convenience of the public, the store is opened seven days a week from 8 a.m. until 9 p.m.

"The decor of any business is also important," Joe Bell said. "We plan to decorate the store according to various holidays and seasons. For instance, during the Fourth of July holiday, we will have a theme of red, white and blue."

NEW YORK (AP) - Turkey 'n Corned Beef Doubledecker is the newest addition to Hansel 'n Gretel Brand's "Healthy Deli" line. Doubledecker is a single cut of meat - turkey on the left and corned beef on the right. The company says the product is 99.95 percent cholesterol-free and 97 percent fat-free.

The company, with facilities in Glendale, N.Y., features 90 items in its product line.

Bell also noted that he is a stickler for cleanliness. "There is no excuse why a store, particularly a grocery store, should not be immaculate. The very first thing I notice when I walk into a store is the floor. If it's shiny and clean, than more than likely the entire store is."

The Bells, who have a son and a daughter and two grandchildren, are "85 percent" settled even though they spend long hours at their business. "We were very fortunate that we found a home so quickly," Mrs. Bell said. "My husband and I looked at the ads in the paper and moved into one of the first homes which we saw advertised."

"In fact," laughed Bell, "we visited with our neighbors before we even moved in. The people were a big influence in our decision to live at that location. They were so friendly and responsive and made us feel wanted."

Mrs. Bell elaborated, "I was a little apprehensive about moving, not because I didn't feel it wasn't a wonderful opportunity, but because it's always somewhat difficult making new acquaintances. However, after visiting with some of the Hereford people, I knew I would feel right at home."

Joe Bell concluded, "There's always a rainbow and my wife and I feel like we have found our pot of gold by moving to Hereford. We're excited about making a positive contribution to this community."

Crusade chairmen report contributions

Approximately $6,800 has been contributed to the Deaf Smith County Unit of the American Cancer Society, announced Amy Gililland, local board president.

During the recent residential crusade, chaired by Kee Ruland and Nicky Walsler, $3,728.24 was collected from Hereford citizens. Business drive chairmen, Jim Arney and Richard Ottesen, reported they had collected $1,417.50. Previous donations raised the total to $6,800.

Board members were assisted during the campaign drives by members of the Kiwanis Club and Hereford High School Keywanettes as well as local citizens.

During the business meeting and luncheon held recently at Deaf Smith General Hospital, board members were reminded that a patient services program is offered free by the ACS to cancer patients and their families. Cancer patients wishing to use the services must be recommended to the Society by their physician. Counseling, before and after surgery, is provided and support groups are available. Also, the Society assists with equipment needs, etc. More information about the special program may be obtained from your doctor or by contacting a local ACS board member.

A public education program is available from the Society and is presented upon request to clubs and organizations. Contact Kee Ruland for additional information.

The Deaf Smith County Unit of the American Cancer Society meets once a month. If you would like to serve on the board of directors and become active in the unit, call Amy Gililland.

There is a house in Massachusetts built entirely of newspaper. It is made of 215 thicknesses of newspaper and all the furniture is of newspaper, too.

Successful crusade drives

Amy Gililland, president of the Deaf Smith County Unit of the American Cancer Society, at right, accepts contributions from Kee Ruland, co-chairman of the recent residential drive, and Jim Arney, co-chairman of the business crusade. A donation of $3,728.24 was received from Ruland and Arney presented a check for $1,417.50. With previous donations made to the local ACS unit, the crusade total amounted to approximately $6,800.

Hints from Heloise

LETTER OF WARNING
Dear Heloise: For years we have known how dangerous plastic bags are for children. Well, please let your readers know of the danger to our pets from the new plastic grocery bags.

I have a curious cat and I have always left a paper grocery bag on the kitchen floor for him to play in. One time I accidentally left one of the new plastic grocery bags on the kitchen floor and I discovered my cat frantically running around the house with his head through one of the handles of the bag. I had to chase and grab him to remove the bag. It could have strangled him.

With this in mind, always store those plastic grocery bags in a safe place away from children and pets. — Helen M., Temple, Texas

PAINTED FIREPLACE
Dear Heloise: The previous owners of our home painted the bricks on the fireplace stark white. It doesn't have a mantle so it looks long and bare.

Since summer is here and the fireplace is not being used, I want to do something to dress it up and make it look nicer. I don't know what to do. Can you help? — Louise Adams, Laguna Beach, Calif.

White bricks can be a bit too stark. Try changing the appearance by painting them a lovely wheat color.

Even though you don't have a mantle, hang a large wall clock or a group of paintings above the fireplace safely away from any escaping heat when the fireplace would be in use. I you want a mantle, have one installed. That may just be the finishing touch you are looking for. — Heloise

Send a money- or time-saving hint to Heloise, P.O. Box 795000, San Antonio, TX 78279. I can't answer your letter personally but will use the best hints received in my column.

LACK OF ENGINEERS
BARTLESVILLE, Okla. (AP) - During the past seven years, the number of college students pursuing petroleum engineering courses has dropped more than 80 percent.

This, has created a competitive marketplace for corporate recruiters in technical industries such as oil and chemicals, says Phillips Petroleum, where nearly 70 percent of the professional jobs are in technical areas.

The firm says that during the current school year its recruiters will visit more than twice as many campuses, in a much broader geographic area, as they did the previous school year.

Golf tourney to benefit Ronald McDonald House

Plans are for the fifth annual Ronald McDonald House Pro-Am Golf Tournament are being finalized and it's not too late to join the fun, according to tournament chairman, Johnny Moore.

This year, in addition to the tournament, which will be June 2 at Amarillo Country Club, there will be a pre-tournament party at the Amarillo Civic Center on Thursday night, June 1st. The fun will begin at 6 p.m. with a cocktail hour during which guests will have an opportunity to view auction items furnished by Amarillo merchants. The auction, conducted by Bob Goree, will begin at 8:30 p.m., after a barbecue dinner. The Don Edwards Band from the White Elephant Saloon in Fort Worth will provide dance music.

The tournament begins with registration at 8 a.m. Friday and a shot-gun start at 9 a.m. Prizes to be awarded include roundtrip tickets for two to Orlando, Florida, compliments of American Airlines.

"This party and tournament are the major fundraising activity to benefit the House in 1989. Proceeds help us meet the costs of providing 'a Home Away From Home' for families who must travel to Amarillo to receive medical treatment for a critically ill family member," explained Moore.

"Since August of 1983 we have served over 2,000 families, over 400 since January of last year."

Those interested in attending the party and/or playing in the tournament can contact Moore at 376-5575 or the House, 358-8177.

'Indy' features friendly skies: ours

AMARILLO (AP) - Those same big skies that nearly upstaged Paul Newman in the Panhandle Western "Hud," (1963) make a comeback in a showy but less dominant role for "Indiana Jones and The Last Crusade."

Safe to say no adventure hero has gone riding into a grander sunset than the one that frames Harrison Ford's Indiana Jones for the finale in this last outing of Paramount Pictures' well-received series, opening this week in many theaters.

The George Lucas-Steven Spielberg project starring Ford and Sean Connery found its ideal vista on what is arguably creation's flattest expanse of land, a vast prairie between New Mexico and Oklahoma on terrain with all the contours of a flapjack. Except nobody told them that.

"They said the place was just what they wanted - except that we had to make it perfectly flat," said Amarillo rancher Rit Christian, who cfamily's flatland spread became the shooting site.

Actually, this requirement meant that a stand of tough mesquite growth had to be cleared away.

"I rounded up some buddies ... and we set about cutting down, oh, about a square mile of mesquite," Christian said.

The success of the shoot helps to make up for lost time in Amarillo's half-and-go attempts to compete as a place of scenic interest to Hollywood.

While movie production has become second nature to such Texas metropolitan areas as Fort Worth, Dallas, Houston and Austin, the film industry seldom has made use of the Panhandle-Plains region's flatlands, sometimes rolling terrain and sweeping horizons.

Demoralization endures from a decision made 44 years ago by the Selznick Co. not to film the Panhandle Western "Duel In The Sun," on true-to-the-book locations in the Palo Duro Canyon, that remarkable exception to the rule of flatness, just south of Amarillo. For whatever reason, the city has yet to organize a movie-development agency comparable with those promoting filming in North and South Texas.

Amarillo lost out on its last major-league chance during the mid-1970s. Warner Bros. had taken steps toward shooting a Burt Reynolds action comedy on old industrial locations in Amarillo, but the project moved elsewhere after owners of an abandoned zinc smelter proved uncooperative. That film, "Hooper," was released in 1978.

The selection of land south of Amarillo as a site for the new "Indiana Jones" came as a godsend after filmmakers Lucas and Spielberg had dispatched location scouts last winter to find a "perfect" horizon. Tom and Anne Christian were traveling in Canada when the advance team spotted their ranch.

The production company connected with the Christians' son, Rit, a student at West Texas State University at nearby Canyon, and made their intentions known.

That was the easy part. The Lucas-Spielberg crew began dealing with the Amarillo Chamber of Commerce about a month before the Feb. 21 shooting date, and arrangements were made that would require Rit Christian to handle several tasks in front of and behind the cameras.

"Rit was really the man of the hour as far as helping Amarillo to impress the company as a good place to do their filming," said Kathryn Pearson of the chamber of commerce. "He got an early start - drove up to Bishop Hills on the northwest side of town to get the Winnebagos that would become the dressing rooms for Sean Connery and Harrison Ford."

"Then he came back to the ranch and rode horseback into the canyon area where they were setting up and changed into a Nazi uniform for a tiny little part on camera. Then he got recostumed like Indiana Jones so he could stand in for Harrison Ford while the camera crew was framing its shots."

Ms. Pearson also worked on location, assisting with details of production. She and a member of the filming party who was introduced only as "Linda" were instructed at one point to move the horses away from the shooting site.

"No big chore," said Ms. Pearson. "It only involved Linda and me riding the horses a short distance away from where they were filming. She was a really friendly, down-to-earth type - talked about her own horses, Arabians, and so forth."

"I didn't realize until later that this Linda was Linda Ronstadt, the singer, who's a friend of Mr. Lucas."

Filming included a confrontation between Rit Christian's Nazi guard character and a stunt double for Sean Connery. This portion runs only a matter of seconds on screen but required three hours to shoot.

Man Caught With Classified Information

Claims information regularly published

Neighbors today were surprised to learn Melvin Kline, a seemingly quiet, well-mannered man was making extra money with classified information. When questioned earlier this morning, Kline professed surprise that everyone wasn't using the classified section to earn extra income and get rid of unwanted items.

"It's common," he said. Recent studies tend to bear Kline out. Consumer Data Service reported that over 85% of the public read the newspaper and over 80% of those read the classifieds. Kline claimed widespread use was being made of the classified information. "But you have to act quickly," he remarked.

"If I have something to sell, I can be in the paper by tomorrow. I do that a lot now," he confessed. "With classified, whether I'm buying or selling, I can reach a large market instantly. And it's easy...just pick up the phone."

When asked if price mattered at all, Kline stated he was in possession of Consumer Data Service documents that indicated newspaper readership increases as income increases. "The more money they make, the more they read the paper," he said, "and I can prove it."

Asked for a last comment, Kline replied "No matter what you're looking for, a new job, a great car, merchandise, or even a home, take a long look at the classified section.

Local confesses he profited from classified information in newspaper

"Sure, I've made some money from classified information, but so can anyone who reads the paper."

The information's all there." Response Analysis Corp. studies indicate the public does exactly that, with 98% preferring the newspaper over radio and 68% preferring the newspaper instead of TV.

Kline was last seen in the company of an unidentified man carrying two outboard motors.

RENEE RICHARDS, JACK L. BUCK

Nuptials scheduled

Wedding vows will be exchanged on June 16 by Renee Richards and Jack L. Buck.

Setting for the nuptials will be the Community Room of Hereford

State Bank.

The bride-elect is the daughter of Mrs. Ann Monahwee of Weleetka, Okla. The prospective bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Louis Buck, Sr. of Hereford.

Ask Dr. Lamb

DEAR DR. LAMB: Our 34-year-old son-in-law has been diagnosed as having rheumatoid arthritis. Naturally we are all quite concerned. Can you tell us something about this illness? Can it be cured? Can it be controlled? Does it always get progressively worse? Is it always disabling and is there a recommended diet?

DEAR READER: I won't try to give you a falsely optimistic reply. Rheumatoid arthritis is a serious disease. The cause is not known after all these years. I regret that it was ever called arthritis because it is an inflammatory disease and can involve almost all parts of the body including the lungs and the heart and can even be associated with dry eyes. It is not just a disease of the joints.

On the hopeful side is the point that its course is highly variable. Some patients have one attack and may have a permanent remission. Others have remissions for many years between painful attacks. While some are really severely disabled, others are not. I hope your son-in-law will be one of those who has a mild case and maybe even a permanent remission. No one can really predict what the future will be, but mild cases with blood tests for the rheumatoid factor that are negative or low are most likely to be associated with a favorable outcome.

There is no special diet for rheumatoid arthritis and it is not caused by dietary factors. The best bet is that it is an "autoimmune" disease meaning a person's own immune system attacks the normal body tissues.

There is now a major change in the thinking about treating early rheumatoid arthritis. The aspirin and aspirin-like medicines have been shown to cause a lot of complications over a period of time. And some of the medicines that have been avoided have been found to be effective in lower doses when given early in the disease. An example is a low dose of prednisone on a daily basis.

Elswick, Breeding vows spoken Saturday

Lorie Marie Elswick of Phoenix, Ariz. became the bride of David Dean Breeding of Peoria, Ariz. in a late morning wedding ceremony Saturday at St. Mary's Episcopal Church in Phoenix. The Rev. Lewis H. Long of the church officiated.

The bride is the daughter of Curtis and Diane Elswick of Phoenix and the bridegroom is the son of former Hereford resident, Paula Breeding of Amarillo, and the late Glenn Breeding.

Noreen Haltmeyer of Phoenix served as matron of honor and best man was Kevin McElfresh of Peoria. Ray Bunch escorted guests.

David James of Phoenix played principal wedding selections.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore an ivory chapel-length gown trimmed with lace. Her hair was adorned by an ivory floral wreath and she carried ivory carnations.

The bride's jewelry consisted of her mother's cameo pendant and earrings.

The matron of honor was attired in a coral chapel-length dress.

Ray Bunch invited guests to register at the reception held in the church.

The ivory iced cake was decorated with coral trim.

Leaving for a wedding trip to Mountain Shadows Resort in Scottsdale, Ariz., the bride wore a pink street-length dress with white lace.

The couple will make their home in Peoria, Ariz.

The bride attended Glendale Community College in Glendale, Ariz. and is presently employed by National Labor Relations Board in Phoenix.

The groom is employed by the U.S. Air Force at Luke Air Force Base, Ariz.

Wedding guests included Mr. and Mrs. Henry Cass Jr. of Gaithersburg, Md.; Ray Bunch of Naples, Fla.; Mr. and Mrs. Less Breeding and Paula Breeding, all of Amarillo; Marshall Breeding of Nashville, Tenn.; and Mr. and Mrs. Michael Horochivsky of Lompoc, Calif.

Names In The News

LOS ANGELES (AP) - Katharine Hepburn and Red Skelton received lifetime achievement awards and playwright Neil Simon was presented the lifetime creative achievement award at the Third Annual American Comedy Awards.

The honors in 17 categories were presented Tuesday at the Hollywood Palladium, and broadcast on ABC-TV.

Roseanne Barr and her co-star in ABC's "Roseanne," John Goodman, won as funniest female and male performers in a leading role in a television series. Barr also was honored as funniest female stand-up comic.

Robin Williams was selected as funniest male stand-up comic.

In the motion picture category, Bette Midler was selected funniest actress for "Big Business," and Tom Hanks as funniest actor for "Big." The supporting awards went to Joan Cusack for "Working Girl" and Arsenio Hall for "Coming To America."

Tracey Ullman won funniest female performer in a television special, for "Tracey Ullman: Backstage." David Letterman won in the male category for his "Sixth Anniversary Special."

Rhea Perlman won funniest supporting female in television for her role in "Cheers" and Dana Carvey won funniest supporting male for his role in "Saturday Night Live."

WILLIAMSTOWN, Mass. (AP) - Pulitzer Prize-winning historian James MacGregor Burns is planning to fly from Leningrad, to London, to New York, to Washington and attempt one-mile runs in each city - all in a day.

"If I can do it in one day, it will remind us how close these nations are geographically and hence must be economically and politically," Burns said in a statement issued Tuesday by Williams College, where he is a political science professor.

College spokesman James Kolesar said the 70-year-old Burns will attempt the feat Friday, traveling between the cities on regularly scheduled flights.

TAMPA, Fla. (AP) - Drummer Michael Clarke, an original member of the 1960s rock group, The Byrds, has permission from a judge to continue using the name of the band for one he has formed.

Clarke was sued in U.S. District Court by three former band members - Roger McGuinn, Chris Hillman and David Crosby.

They accused Clarke, Artists International Management Inc. in Boca Raton and AIM agent Steve Green of false advertising and unfair competition in using the name The Byrds.

Judge William Castagna said last Thursday that he found little to support the accusations and allowed the 45-year-old Clarke to use the name.

SYDNEY, Australia (AP) - British rock star Sting visited Australia's hottest environmental trouble spot after meeting Prime Minister Bob Hawke to promote a campaign to save Amazonian rain forests.

The former singer of the group Police went to the Eden rain forests near the Snowy Mountains of southern New South Wales to show his support for the conservation issue.

Since February, 550 demonstrators have been arrested at the Eden forests. Shortly after Sting's visit Tuesday, police arrested for trespassing 28 demonstrators who walked into a protected area of the forests.

Sting's visit caps a world tour that has included Britain, the United States and Japan to raise awareness for the vanishing jungles of Brazil.

"I don't pretend to be an expert on this problem here," he said. "But one thing I did learn while in Japan recently is that they don't log their own forests. They don't need to, they log yours."

Japan is a leading importer of logs from the U.S. Northwest and other areas of the world.

NEW YORK (AP) - A judge approved the sale of a Grandma Moses painting owned by Sir Rudolf Bing to raise cash for the former Metropolitan Opera director's care in a nursing home.

State Judge Eve Preminger on Tuesday authorized the sale of "Haying in Vermont" at an auction today at Sotheby's. The judge required a minimum bid of $35,000, based on an appraisal of the painting.

"The money situation is absolutely desperate," said Kevin

Walsh, lawyer for Paul Guth, Bing's court-appointed guardian.

Bing, 87, is suffering from Alzheimer's disease.

LOS ANGELES (AP) - O.J. Simpson and his wife, Nicole, say their marriage is strong and they want to "set the record straight" about the incident that resulted in a wife-beating charge against the retired football great.

Simpson, an actor and winner of college football's Heisman Trophy, was ordered Wednesday to pay a $200 fine, give $500 to a shelter serving battered women, perform 120 hours of community service and continue psychiatric counseling for his no contest plea to spousal battery.

Simpson, 41, who didn't appear in court, also was placed on two years' probation. A no contest plea is not an admission of guilt, but allows the defendant to be judged as guilty.

In a statement Wednesday, Simpson and his wife said they wanted to "set the record straight from the distortions and misleading news reports that our family has been subjected to."

"Upon returning home New Year's Eve, we got into an argument which escalated and the police were called. Fortunately, neither one of us required medical treatment," the couple said. "The very next day, we talked about it and took steps to put this behind us."

"We have never been separated and our marriage is as strong as the day we were married, if not stronger."

Simpson allegedly screamed "I'll kill you" as he slapped and kicked his 29-year-old wife of four years.

NEW YORK (AP) - Former Phoenix television reporter Shelly Jamison says posing nude in Playboy was part of a calculated, career-changing move.

"My motivation has always been success in broadcasting," said Jamison, adding that she had grown tired of her job at KTSP-TV and now hopes to work in "entertainment, commercial, industrial, voicing or modeling."

"Move over, Mary Hart!" the 26-

year-old Jamison proclaimed at a news conference Wednesday. She said a job on "Entertainment Tonight" was her ultimate goal but she will consider all offers.

It started when Jamison's husband, Ron, a firefighter, took some photos and urged her to submit them for the 35th anniversary playmate contest. Playboy photo editors suggested a separate feature on her instead for the July issue.

After the station was told, it limited her to off-the-air work and she quit, said Jamison.

BERLIN (AP) - Britain's popular Duchess of York is in West Berlin for her first visit to the divided German city.

The Duchess, 29-year-old wife of Queen Elizabeth II's second-oldest son, Prince Andrew, was welcomed Wednesday by representatives of the three Allied military powers in West Berlin.

She will inspect British troops during Friday's annual military parade at West Berlin's Olympic stadium celebrating the British monarch's birthday.

LONDON (AP) - Peter Cushing, the English star of Britain's Hammer horror films and a onetime Sherlock Holmes, says he has confounded science in his fight against cancer and now has a clean bill of health.

The actor, who will be 76 on Friday, said that his prostate cancer is in remission and he less dependent on medication.

"I was on so many pills for so long. I was in danger of becoming a drug addict," Cushing said Wednesday.

COLUMBIA, S.C. (AP) - Imprisoned soul singer James Brown won't be allowed to give an interview requested by the French government for a television program celebrating the 200th anniversary of the French Revolution.

The state Department of Corrections turned down the request Wednesday.

The French Ministry of Culture was hoping to use a taped interview with Brown during a July 14 telecast that will feature the Florida A&M marching band performing Brown's music as it marches toward the Arc de Triomphe in Paris.

Brown is serving a six-year sentence for aggravated assault and failing to stop for police during a chase across the Georgia-South Carolina border.

NEW LONDON, Conn. (AP) - Author Alex Haley has often referred to the Coast Guard Academy as his alma mater. Now it's official. Haley was awarded the academy's first honorary degree at its 108th commencement.

President Bush, who delivered the commencement address Wednesday, conferred upon the 67-year-old Haley the honorary degree of doctor of humane letters.

Haley, author of "Roots," retired from the Coast Guard in 1959 after 20 years, leaving with the rating of chief journalist.
