

WT officials: merger means funds, programs

CANYON (AP) - A merger with the Texas A&M System will mean more money and a wider array of programs for West Texas State University, officials say.

The merger was approved Saturday by A&M System regents meeting in College Station. West Texas State's regents approved the plan earlier in the week. If the Texas Higher Education Coordinating Board approves the merger, the 5,700-student university 17 miles south of Amarillo will become part of the A&M System next Sept. 1.

"I am convinced that much more educational money will come into this region this way than any other way open to us now," West Texas State regent Burk Whittenburg said Monday. "I see some huge potential for shared programs and new academic programs and especially agricultural research."

A&M officials have said West Texas State will benefit from expanded programs, grants generated from cooperation among A&M schools, easier fund raising and prestige from being associated with the A&M name.

"I do feel we're giving our young people a better chance and providing a better education for them," said T. Boone Pickens Jr., chairman of the West Texas State board of regents.

West Texas State is interested in a number of collaborative efforts with Texas A&M, especially in adding to the Panhandle school's agricultural program, West Texas President Ed Roach said.

Roach dismissed fears that West Texas could lose upperclassmen and graduate engineering students to the flagship campus in College Station.

"I think we will attract students who would come here for those programs," Roach said. "Those are students attracted here initially who would not otherwise come."

Regent Becky Dodson predicted an immediate enrollment increase. Admissions standards will remain the same.

Still to be decided by a committee of A&M System regents is whether West Texas State's name will be changed. Roach said he wants strong identification with A&M, whether or not the Canyon school's name is changed.

Lions benefit sale Saturday

Anyone out there have some items to donate to a benefit garage sale?

The Hereford Lions Club will hold its annual Garage Sale on Saturday, with proceeds going to the Holly King Fund. Lions are donating items for sale and the club is seeking contributions from others in the community.

The sale will be held at the old Phillips 66 station on the corner of Park Avenue and U.S. Highway 385.

Lions will be at that location from 5 to 6 p.m. each weekday sorting and tagging items. They will accept contributions for the sale, or interested persons can call Lester Wagner (364-0602) or Cliff Williams (364-7532) to have items picked up by a Lion.

Drug poster entries needed

Entries are now being accepted in a poster contest open to all seventh and eighth grade students in Deaf Smith County. The contest is sponsored by the health and safety committee of the Chamber of Commerce and will be a part of Drug Awareness Week scheduled for Oct. 23-27.

Posters must be turned in to the Chamber of Commerce office, 701 N. Main, no later than 5 p.m. on Oct. 19. First, second and third place winners will be awarded prizes of Hereford Bucks which can be spent in local businesses.

The amount of Hereford Bucks to be given for each prize will be $20 for first, $10 for second and $5 for third.

All posters entered in the competition should feature some aspect of drug awareness and the importance of avoiding drug abuse. Entries will be judged based on content, originality and neatness.

On the back of each poster, entrants should write their name, age and grade, their school and their home address and phone number.

Rural highway meeting Thursday

A meeting to discuss a proposed rural highway system in Texas will be held at 8:30 a.m. Thursday at The Harvey Hotel in Amarillo.

The Amarillo meeting is one of 10 being held throughout the state to gain input about the plan.

"This is a rural system designed to link urban areas in the state," said Al Lueddecke, transportation planning engineer for the highway department. "The goal is to provide enhanced mobility for rural areas with a network of four-lane or wider divided roadways."

Lueddecke said detailed maps on the system will be displayed and staff planners from the department will be available to answer questions.

CAP recognizes Clyde, McMorries

Two Hereford men received national recognition when they were presented with Commander's Commendation medals and citations at the Texas Wing Conference of the Civil Air Patrol last Saturday.

Lt. Col David Clyde and First Lt. Jim McMorries Jr. received those awards for their efforts in returning the Danny Vermillion family to Hereford from Louisiana when Danny died suddenly there earlier this year, stranding the family.

Maj. Gen. Gene Harwell and Col Tom Todd made the presentations.

Gen. Harwell is the national commander of the CAP. Col. Todd, former Texas Wing commander, is now the vice commander of the Southwest Region.

Col. Clyde is a local attorney. Lt. McMorries is a real estate appraiser and tax consultant.

Col. Todd said the action of the two men reflected the highest traditions of the U.S. Air Force and the Civil Air Patrol. "This is what we are all about, helping those in distress," Col. Todd said.

TEA begins school accreditation

By JOHN BROOKS
Managing Editor

An accreditation team from the Texas Education Agency is visiting Hereford schools this week to examine the good and not so good in the local education system.

The large team is made up of TEA employees and school administrators from throughout the state.

All schools across the state are monitored by a TEA contingent about once every five years. The teams visit with teachers, administrators and, in some cases, students, as well as with the public to hear praises and complaints about schools.

The team began its Hereford visit Monday by meeting with central office personnel to go through documents previously requested by TEA. They met with Superintendent Charles Greenawalt and some school board members on Monday to explain some of the areas they would be closely examining and other things for which they were looking.

On Tuesday, team members met with administrators at Northwest Tierra Blanca and Hereford Junior High schools, then held an open meeting for the general public at the Hereford High School auditorium.

Some persons complained about the time of the meeting, but Greenawalt said the time was set by the TEA and not by Hereford school officials.

At Tuesday's meeting, the TEA team heard criticism and praise of various schools and programs in the local district.

The complaints ranged from dissatisfaction with the forming of junior high volleyball teams to more playground equipment to lack of help for some youngsters having learning disabilities.

Others praised programs for learning-disabled students, allowing parents to become more involved in

TEA meets with public

Jean Bradley, standing, the head of an accreditation team from the Texas Education Agency, explains the purpose of a public meeting Tuesday at the Hereford High School auditorium. TEA officials and school administrators from throughout Texas are in Hereford's public schools as part of an official visit to determine the good and bad in Hereford schools.

their child's education, and programs at individual schools.

"I don't have a problem with people coming to the meeting and voicing their complaints, but many of those people (with complaints) have not been to see me," Greenawalt said. "That doesn't upset me, but I would urge those persons to come talk to me."

"People also need to understand they have the same opportunity to visit with our school board once a month just like they did with the TEA team."

Greenawalt said the visitors will be at West Central, Bluebonnet and Aikman schools today, then will visit the high school and Shirley School on Thursday. During the visits to the schools, they will go over records and interview teachers and administrators, and possibly some students.

Friday, the visitors will meet with Greenawalt to discuss some of the items they feel need correcting and some of the good things they discovered, then meet in a longer session with all administrators before leaving on Friday morning.

"They will let us know verbally what we will later see in writing," Greenawalt said. "We will have a written report in 6-8 weeks, and we will have a time period to correct problems ... or draw up a plan to correct the problems they find."

Noriega thwarts coup attempt

PANAMA CITY, Panama (AP) - Gen. Manuel Antonio Noriega's grip remained firm after his forces crushed a coup attempt, and an opposition leader said there would be no civil uprising because Panamanians "are highly intimidated."

Troops enforced a nighttime curfew in Panama City early today on streets where forces loyal to Noriega on Tuesday quashed the second attempt in 18 months by dissidents in the military to oust the Defense Forces chief.

Noriega was quick to blame the revolt on the United States, which has been trying to oust the Defense Forces commander for more than 1 1/2 years.

"The proof is that American troops closed access routes to the barracks, just as they closed the Pan-American Highway," Noriega said on nationwide television several hours after the failed coup by what appeared to be a small group of soldiers.

President Bush denied any role in the rebellion, but reiterated that the United States would still like to see Noriega ousted.

"I want to see democracy in Panama succeed," he said in Washington Tuesday night. White House spokesman Marlin Fitzwater said the Bush administration had some advance word that a coup attempt might be afoot.

Noriega was indicted on drug trafficking charges in the United States in February 1988, but maintains those charges are part of a U.S. plot to keep possession of the Panama Canal, which reverts to Panama at the end of the century.

He also annulled May elections after international observers said his slate of candidates had lost by a landslide.

U.S. troops moved into position only a few hundred yards from the fighting Tuesday and temporarily closed the main bridge over the canal, but U.S. spokesmen said those were only security measures.

The U.S. troops did not take part in the fighting.

About 50,000 Americans live in Panama, including more than 12,000 U.S. military personnel attached to the U.S. Southern Command.

Although witnesses reported some deaths during the fighting, Defense Forces spokesman Maj. Edgardo Lopez would say only that a number of soldiers were wounded and refused to be more specific.

Former opposition vice presidential candidate Guillermo Ford said at a New York news conference that Noriega was not getting any stronger despite the crushing of the coup.

"The mere fact that a group of officers, young officers, have attempted to overthrow him, in my opinion, is important enough that he must be getting the message loud and clear," Ford said.

Tuesday's coup attempt was more serious than a failed coup on March 16, 1988, but it appeared that only elements of the Urraca battalion, which is in charge of security at Defense Forces headquarters, were involved.

Although the rebel's only communique was signed by the battalion commander, Maj. Moises Giraldo Vega, Lopez said "more than 60" soldiers and four or five officers were being held prisoner, far less than a full battalion.

Noriega controls the country through his command of the Defense Forces, and the failure of any other units to respond to the rebel call served to underline his control.

"Absolutely all" other Defense Forces officers remained loyal to Noriega, according to Lopez.

That loyalty was visible in the swift reaction by the elite Battalion 2000 and Macho de Monte units, which moved into Panama City to put down the uprising from bases respectively 25 and 55 miles away.

Although Ford reported some civilian discontent, he also admitted it was quickly put down.

"I personally believe, and I say this with a lot of sorrow, that the Panamanian people are highly intimidated by the regime," said Ford.

Reps consider taxes, lottery

AUSTIN (AP) - A lawmaker says a lottery would solve school finance problems, while a Republican candidate for governor says he would support a tax increase if it would make Texas No. 1 in public education.

In proposing a lottery, Rep. Ron Wilson said he didn't think Texans were ready for another "draconian" tax bill in response to the state Supreme Court's decision that the state school finance system is unconstitutional.

GOP gubernatorial candidate Jack Rains was asked Tuesday if he would support higher taxes to pay for school finance reform.

"If it takes higher taxes to make Texas no. 1 in quality education, I'll go fight for the higher taxes, because I think the people of Texas will support that," Rains said.

"But what the people of Texas are fed up and tired of are having systems that are not responsive to their needs ...," he said. "In the education system, we've had a 50 percent increase in funding and no appreciable change in the quality of education - uneven results at best, with most of the money going to overhead and administrative items and not into the classroom.

"That's the sort of thing Texas taxpayers are not willing to support, and I think they're justified in reaching that conclusion."

Rains said after the Legislature enacted educational reforms in 1984, it "threw a great party, declared victory and sent the bill to local property owners. And they're groaning under that massive tax bill today."

Wilson, who also had a news conference, said although Gov. Bill Clements has stated he will call a special legislative session in the spring on public school finance, there is so much interest that Clements will put the issue on the agenda for the November special session.

"It's going to be hard not to place this item on the agenda when you have us back in session in November, because the members are going to clamor for it, for one thing," said Wilson, D-Houston.

Clements already has set a special session to begin Nov. 14 on workers' compensation, a subject that has tied the Legislature in knots this year.

The Supreme Court has given the Legislature until May 1 to come up with a solution on school finance, and the governor said Monday that he, Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby and House Speaker Gib Lewis would appoint a task force.

"I think it's been studied to death, and I don't think we can afford to wait any longer," Wilson said.

"It doesn't make sense to have us sitting there in November spending tax dollars, focusing on one issue and not being able to take up another that's going to be on the agenda - it just doesn't make good sense," he said.

Wilson said most experts agree it will take "tremendous sums of money" to repair Texas' public school system, and added, "It's time for us to again consider a state lottery to raise this needed revenue."

He said a lottery would bring in $1 billion the first two years.

But the director of an anti-gambling group called the lottery proposal "irresponsible."

"Proponents who want to substitute an inequitable taxing system with a regressive lottery are very shortsighted in wanting to make the poor, who already are shortchanged in the educational system, pay a disproportionate share of their educational costs," said Sue Cox of the Dallas-based group, Texans Who Care.

October designated as National Pasta Month

NEW YORK (AP) - Pasta has made it to the top of America's list of favorite foods. The options have expanded from macaroni and cheese and spaghetti and meatballs to an endless array of side dishes, salads, main courses and desserts in a variety of shapes, sizes and flavors.

Pasta can be baked, boiled, fried, spiced, steamed, stuffed, smothered with sauce, mixed with meatballs, or dipped in chocolate and covered with whipped cream.

Pasta comes in more than 600 shapes; in colors of red, orange, yellow, or green; and in shrimp, nut and herb flavors.

Pasta is found on athletes' tables as they load up on carbohydrates before a competition - and in countless kitchens where even the busiest or most inexperienced home chef can create a meal in minutes - and feel like a gourmet.

THE GOOD NEWS ABOUT PASTA

October is National Pasta Month, and the National Pasta Association in Arlington, Va., is spreading the good news about pasta.

Pasta is an excellent source of complex carbohydrates.

Two ounces of dry pasta contain 210 calories.

Pasta is a good source of protein, vitamins and minerals, and is naturally low in sodium, fat and cholesterol.

IN FAVOR OF FRESHNESS

Fresh pasta, packaged soft and sold refrigerated, is growing in popularity in the United States.

Justin Arcchi, president of Frescala Foods in San Antonio, Texas, makers of fresh pasta products, says: "One of the best things about fresh pasta is that it has more texture, or 'bite' in your mouth, and it has a taste of its own. It's not just a vehicle for the sauce."

COOKING METHOD

Fresh pasta is quick and easy to prepare. The cooking time is short - about 1 or 2 minutes. (Most people have a tendency to overcook pasta, resulting in a mushy, bland-tasting product.)

"Test the fresh pasta after about 45 seconds," Arcchi recommends. "If it has a white center, it's not done. If it's springy and has resistance to the bite, it's ready."

Arcchi offers another tip: "Fish pasta out with a net when you think it's done. Don't pour the water and pasta into a strainer because you may need the boiling water to cook the pasta for a few more seconds."

When the pasta is cooked just right, toss with a sauce or other ingredients in a heated bowl. Serve immediately on heated plates to prevent the pasta from sticking together.

"Fresh pasta has such good texture and taste that it makes a satisfying meal when served with just a small amount of butter, cheese or seasonings for added flavor," Arcchi says.

"Serving fresh pasta tossed with fresh vegetables, or mixed in a salad with vegetables and chicken or fish, are other ways to make a meal out of pasta without overloading on calories."

PASTA RECIPES

In honor of October as National Pasta Month, the makers of Prego Spaghetti Sauce present a new leaflet, "Pasta - a Recipe Collection of Saucy Sensations." The leaflet features 8 recipes - from Microwave Lasagna to Pasta with the Works. The leaflet also includes cooking tips and ideas for quick and easy sauces. ## Orders for annuals being taken Orders are being taken through Friday for the 1990 Hereford Junior High School yearbooks.

In order to receive an annual when they are delivered in May, orders must be placed this week. The price of an annual is $12. For an additional $3, a student may have his name printed in silver on the front cover. Plastic dust covers may be ordered for $2.

Members of the yearbook staff will be selling annuals before school from 8-8:20 a.m. in the new front hall of the junior high school. Students may also order annuals during the day from any member of the annual staff: Omar Atchley, Brandon Geam, Kathleen Cooper, Misty Dudley, Randy Sorensen, and Krista West. Advisor is Billie Jo Reiter.

Students may pay the full amount due on their annual at the time they place their order or they may make a down payment of $5. If a down payment is made, the balance due must be paid before school is dismissed for the Christmas holidays.

WEST PALM BEACH, Fla. (AP) - An appeals court ordered billionaire developer Donald Trump to fork over an additional $81,000 a year in property taxes on his 100-room Palm Beach mansion.

The Fourth District Court of Appeal on Wednesday overturned a lower court ruling that had reduced the appraised value of the estate from $11.5 million to $7 million.

Trump bought the Mar-a-Lago estate in 1986 from the Merriweather Post Foundation for $10 million. He later said he sealed the deal with only $2,812 of his own money.

But several days after the purchase, when a county appraiser valued the home at $11.5 million, Trump claimed it was worth just $7 million. The rest of the purchase price was for untaxable furnishings, he said.

Trump said the 54,000-square-foot estate, which stretches from the Intracoastal Waterway to the Atlantic Ocean and includes a nine-hole golf course, a citrus grove and a six-car garage, was so huge that few could afford to buy it, lowering its value.

The appeals panel upheld the Palm Beach County appraisal and said the methodology employed by Trump was dubious.

"It's wonderful," said Willa Fearington, an attorney for the county, which put the annual tax

Drugs in Hereford topic of program

The Pioneer Study Club met Sept. 26 for a luncheon at Something Special for the first meeting of the club year. Gladys Miller and Catherine Gripp served as hostesses.

Guest speaker, Lt. David Wagner of the Hereford Police Department, presented a program on "Drugs in Hereford and What Is Being Done." The speaker listed the drugs found in Hereford and showed a sample of each. He gave the cost of marijuana, crack, cocaine, speed, and heroin.

"Substance abuse doesn't always mean marijuana, cocaine, heroin or alcohol, especially among very young students. Abused substances can include common items like cinnamon oil, aspirin, salt, and parsley cigarettes sprayed with insect killer. The problem starts at the primary school level when students are inventive to try getting high or looking cool to their friends.

Also available, often over the counter from just about any store in town, are inhalants. Inhalants can range from gasoline and model glue to metallic paint and typewriter correction fluid. "We have a few people doing inhalants," Wagner said. Inhalants can burn up the brain cells.

Lt. Wagner told of the work the police department and volunteers are doing to deter drugs in the public schools.

Mary Panciera conducted the business meeting. Billee Johnson, yearbook chairman, gave a review of the year's study. She said since this year is the 100th birthday of the General Federation of Women's Clubs and the Bi-Centennial of the United States Constitution, the year book committee has tried to coordinate the two.

Plans were made to attend the Federation of Womens Club Top of Texas District Convention at Le Fors on Oct. 21.

Club was adjourned by repeating the club motto dedicated to Mrs. O.G. Hill Sr.

Those present were Fern Ford, Gripp, Mabel Heard, Beatrice Hutson, Johnson, Etoile Manning, Miller, Panciera, Eunice Petersen, Fern Sigle, and Willie Wimberly. Visitors were Liss Kuhlman of Canyon, district president, and Maria Escamilla and Lt. Wagner.

Spikers whip Borger in three, maintain District 1-4A lead

The Hereford Whitefaces closed out the first half of the District 1-4A volleyball season Thursday at 7-0 with a 15-2, 9-15, 15-0 win over the Borger Bulldogs at the HHS Gym. It was the second straight match Hereford has been taken to a third game.

Hereford ran off a 14-0 lead in the first game before Nadine Wakefield served up the only points Borger would get. Hereford led at 12-0 after one full rotation.

The teams stayed even through 16 changes of serve in the second game. With the score tied 4-4, Amy Guyton served the Bulldogs to a five-point lead and Areitha Hunnicut made the score 10-4 before the Herd could stop the run. Hereford got as close as 12-8 before Guyton served the final two points.

Hereford wasted little time in deciding the third game as Shantel Cornelius served for six straight points to put the Herd up 7-0. Jill West served out the match as the Herd allowed Borger only three serves the entire game. West led the Herd with 12 service points including an ace followed by Nikki Self with eight points and an ace. Libby Kosub added seven points with four aces in only nine serves while Cornelius had six points on serve. Poppy Richardson had three points with an ace and Cande Robbins had two points and an ace.

Robbins led in kills with six followed by Kosub with five. Self and West each contributed three kills while Richardson, Cornelius and Krystal Sims had two apiece and Jessica Dearing had one.

Robbins also led in digs with 12 and had 10 service receptions to the setters. Kosub also passed 10 serves to the setters.

Coach Brenda Reeh said the Herd's inconsistency in the match was team-wide.

"We played two great games in the match," she said, "but the middle one was a bad dream. It seems as though we are playing all-or-nothing volleyball.

"When one hitter is off they all seem to be making mistakes. Then when one gets hot, everyone is effective."

Reeh added that overconfidence after breezing through most of the district schedule has not been a problem.

"I don't think we're becoming overconfident," she said. "In fact, we may be doubting ourselves more than we deserve."

"Obviously, we're doing something right if we're beating people 15-2, 15-0 in some games. We've just got to figure out why we're making things tough on ourselves. We can't have any weak spots if we want to beat Dumas. We will work this week on becoming more consistent."

Herd JV vs. Borger JV

The junior varsity maintained its winning string with a 15-6, 14-16, 15-7 victory over Borger.

Hereford seemed to have the match put away with a 14-8 lead in the second game before Borger came back to score eight straight points for the win. The Herd served at match point five times in the game, but could not convert on the opportunities.

Jennifer Bullard led the JV with 13 service points while Jayme Moore had 11.

"You cannot miss 13 serves and expect to dominate another team," junior varsity coach Lynn Gilbreath said. "Borger always seems to give us the ball back whenever we play them."

"This is the first time in three or four matches we've been challenged. The girls will definitely be challenged Saturday when we play Dumas. We're going to have to play great defense and have very few offensive errors in order to beat them."

Both varsity and JV teams will host Dumas on Saturday at the HHS Gym. The JV match is scheduled for 2 p.m. with the varsity to follow.

Dumas, Canyon rip HJH

Dumas and Canyon made Tuesday a long day for Hereford Junior High football teams taking all four games played in Hereford.

In the seventh grade White "A" game, Dumas' Marcus Ruiz scored on runs of 60, 32, 63 and 29 yards to lead the Demons to a 32-8 win at the South Field.

Hereford's only score came on the final play of the first half when Joe De La Cruz hit Michael Marquez on a halfback pass for 65 yards. Quarterback Benton Buckley added the two point conversion.

In the "B" game, Dumas scored a 28-8 victory. Jacob Lopez scored on an 11-yard run to give Hereford an 8-0 lead in the first quarter.

In eighth grade games played at the Junior High Field, Canyon defeated the Maroon "A" team, 8-0, while beating the Maroon "B" team, 20-0.

In HJH road games, the eighth grade White "A" team fell 16-0 to Dumas while the "B" team lost 18-6. Results of the seventh grade Maroon games played at Canyon were not available at press time.

The HJH gridders will face each other Tuesday in scrimmages. The eighth grade Maroon and White teams will face off at the Junior High Field while the seventh grade Maroon and White squads will meet at the South Field.

Shell named Raider coach

By JIM LITKE
AP Sports Writer

Finally, there is one. One black head coach in the one major American professional sports league that didn't have one in the modern era.

"It is an historic event," Art Shell, promoted to the helm of the faltering Los Angeles Raiders franchise, said Tuesday, embracing the job even while he spurned the asterisk.

"I understand the significance of it. I'm proud of it, but I'm also a Raider. I don't believe the color of my skin entered into this decision. I was chosen because he," Shell continued with a nod toward Raiders managing general partner Al Davis "felt I was the right person at this time."

And Davis, even while embracing Shell, agreed it would be a short step forward if the team breaks the color barrier without breaking a few opponents' heads.

"If this is an historic occasion, it'll really only be meaningful and historic if he is a great success. ...

"He's got to do it and we've got to do it," Davis said later with trademark precision. "That's all that counts in our culture."

A nice thought - if it's true. Tuesday, as it turned out, marked exactly 15 years to the day that Frank Robinson took over the Cleveland Indians and became the first black manager in professional baseball. It also marked the first day that a black manager, Cito Gaston of the Toronto Blue Jays, turned in a lineup card for a postseason contest - another first made possible only after vanquishing Robinson's Orioles in the first stretch drive featuring two black managers.

"I don't attach all that much significance to firsts," said Dr. Harry Edwards, a professor of sociology at the University of California and consultant to the San Francisco 49ers, the NBA's Golden State Warriors as well as Major League Baseball. "I'm interested in seconds and thirds and fourths and fifths."

"Too often, first translates into only. You have to look carefully at what first means in terms of future development because that, in the long run, determines the credibility of the initial move.

"If Jackie Robinson was the only black who ever played major league baseball, the fact that he was the first is absolutely of no consequence," Edwards continued. "But the fact that nobody knows who was the last black ballplayer cut after spring training - and that nobody doubts he got a fair shot - that is of consequence."

Baseball has had three black managers besides the well-traveled Robinson, but two of them - Larry Doby and Maury Wills - each lasted little more than half a season. That in a sport in which, according to Edwards' figures, about 16 percent of the players are black.

Basketball fares considerably better on that score. In a professional league in which fully three-quarters of the current players are black, 18 black men have served as head coaches since Boston Celtics great Bill Russell was first elevated by his former team in 1966. Six of that number had tenures of a season or less, and a seventh, Stu Jackson of the New York Knicks, doesn't begin until the next season.

Given those precedents, what can be reasonably expected of the NFL, where Edwards pegs black players at 63 percent of the total.

"That's a good question," said Jesse Jackson, who played collegiate football at North Carolina A&T, but now does his running in different arenas. "What counts as much as anything in these matters is how quickly the audience - and by that I mean a mostly white audience - reaches a comfort level."

He continued, "Now, Al Davis has torn through the cotton curtain. If you think back just a few years, not playing blacks at quarterback was an unspoken rule. But that's been toppled as well. My feeling is if Art Shell is successful and enough men, like Davis, can find the courage of their convictions, this barrier will come down pretty quickly."

Upsets hit ranked teams

By The Associated Press

While the top ranked teams in The Associated Press Schoolboy Football Poll scored easy victories, a pair of No. 2 ranked teams suffered losses and both teams tumbled in the rankings.

Katy Mayde Creek, ranked No. 2 in Class 4A last week, lost to Tomball, which jumped from No. 8 to No. 6 following its 30-22 victory.

Gainesville and Hamshire Fannett, ranked second and third in Class 3A, each lost to Class 4A schools and fell to No. 5 and No. 10.

The No. 1s, Converse Judson in 5A, Paris in 4A, Southlake Carroll in 3A, Groveton in 2A and Munday in A, all easily held their positions.

Judson, Groveton and Munday had lopsided shutout victories.

West Orange-Stark defeated

Beaumont Central, the No. 8 ranked 5A team, 47-33 and moved up from No. 3 to No. 2 in 4A.

Ballinger defeated Stamford 67-0 and jumped from fourth to second in 3A, filling the void left by Gainesville and Hamshire Fannett.

Beaumont Central was replaced in the 5A rankings by Corpus Christi Carroll, 4-0, and Plano dropped from No. 7 to No. 10 after it was tied by Richardson Pearce, 14-14.

No. 7 Grandview was the only loser in 2A and was replaced by No. 10 Reagan County after a 17-6 loss to Lexington.

Rising Star moved onto the A list, replacing No. 10 Flatonia, which lost to Schulenburg, 35-0.

Schulenburg is ranked No. 6 in 2A. Judson got 20 of the 27 first place votes case by The AP's panel of sports writers and sportscasters. Permian, which beat crosstown rival Odessa High 49-27, got six first place votes.

Southlake Carroll was a unanimous first place choice in Class 3A, receiving all 27 first place votes and a 270-224 point margin over No. 2 Ballinger.

Jack Nicklaus has won 18 of the gold tournaments that make up the Grand Slam. He won six Masters, five PGAs, four U.S. Opens and three British Opens.

Cande Robbins (8) sends a spike past Borger's Marcy Gallaspy (43) Tuesday during the Herd's 15-2, 9-15, 15-0 win over the Bulldogs at the HHS Gym. Hereford finished the first half of District 1-4A play at 7-0 and will host second-place Dumas at 2 p.m. Saturday.

Jones baffled by Cowboys' slow start

IRVING (AP) - Jerry Jones admits he's a bit baffled.

"I didn't expect to be 0-4 at all," said the new owner of the Dallas Cowboys, who are off to their worst start in 26 years.

Jones said he feels "like somebody who has the flu. It doesn't feel good when you are sitting, standing or laying down. Food doesn't even taste good. You know something's wrong."

Jones paid about $140 million for the Cowboys last February and swept house, bringing in close friend Jimmy Johnson as coach.

During the off-season, Jones boldly predicted the Cowboys would win as many games in the first one-third of the season as they did all of last year. The Cowboys were an NFL-worst 3-13 last season.

"I knew if we didn't have success early on then we wouldn't get the normal honeymoon period," he said. "We're being judged against the previous 29 years. But I don't get uptight with those judgments. I did think we would win a game by now."

"It gives me resolve and I won't let my lip drop at what's being said. The criticism is nothing now. I've had that since the first day."

Jones added Johnson's "got a coaching lifetime to get it done, but I don't want him to take it."

A's take Game 1 from Toronto, 7-3

OAKLAND, Calif. (AP) - Dave Stewart has had a knack for escaping serious trouble ever since his hardscrabble childhood in inner-city Oakland.

But like Indiana Jones, Stewart wishes he didn't always have to live so dangerously.

Stewart survived his usual early woes in Tuesday night's American League playoff opener, bearing down to get credit for the 7-3 victory over Toronto. He gave up five hits and three runs through 3 1-3 innings, then held the Blue Jays hitless until Dennis Eckersley relieved in the ninth.

Same old Stewart - not much flash or panache, just another 'W'.

And anxious moments galore. "I don't know why I always struggle early in the game," Stewart said. "I probably haven't had 10 starts this year that you haven't had to stay on the top step of the dug-out."

The Blue Jays, who missed a golden opportunity to gain the home-field advantage, got another chance this afternoon when they sent young Todd Stottlemyre (7-7) up against A's veteran Mike Moore (19-11).

Game 3 will be Friday night in Toronto's SkyDome, where the Blue Jays have won 20 of their last 26 games.

Stewart, who's in line to pitch the fourth game Sunday in Toronto, struck out six and walked three. The third-time 20-game winner, 21-9 this year, put to rest any questions about his sore right shoulder. He stalked around the mound disgustingly after giving up a fourth-inning leadoff homer to Ernie Whitt, one of Whitt's two RBIs, then allowed only two more baserunners.

He threw 46 pitches in the first two innings and only 68 in the next six.

"I think he got into a good rhythm as the game progressed," said Toronto's Mookie Wilson, who had one of the early hits.

Stewart averaged seven-plus innings per outing in 1989 and got decisions in all but six of his 36 starts.

"He keeps us in the ballgame," Dave Henderson said. "When that happens, we figure we'll win."

The A's found a way this time with aggressive baserunning by Rickey Henderson, their other Oakland native. Henderson broke up an apparent inning-ending double play in the sixth with a ferocious takeout slide, sending Nelson Liriano's relay throw squirting wide of first and allowing two runs to score as Oakland took the lead for keeps.

Henderson, who played linebacker and running back on his high school football team, reached base when he was hit on the wrist by reliever Jim Acker's pitch.

"It was a hell of a play," said Dave Parker, whose fifth-inning single gave him one more postseason RBI than he had in 27 at-bats last October. "Rickey can beat you with his glove, his bat or his legs."

Said Henderson: "It's just hard baseball, doing whatever it takes to win. I saw the ball from the bat well and got a good jump."

It left the Blue Jays, who blew a 3-1 fifth-inning lead, bemoaning the fact the A's got the two lead runs without hitting a ball out of the infield.

"Each game will depend on who gets the breaks," Toronto third baseman Kelly Gruber said. "The first break was Gallego's high chopper that I lost in the lights (on the infield hit just before Henderson's at-bat). The second break they created themselves with Henderson on the double play."

Blue Jays starter Dave Stieb had won five straight decisions, but he flirted with danger throughout his 5 1-3 innings. The A's put runners in scoring position in every inning he pitched, although they had to settle for solo homers by Dave Henderson and Mark McGwire and Parker's opposite-field RBI single to left until Rickey Henderson's big play.

"I had nothing. It wasn't my night," Stieb said.

Johnson not displeased with offensive coordinator

IRVING (AP) - Jimmy Johnson isn't unhappy with offensive coordinator David Shula although the Dallas Cowboys offense has sputtered like a car on bad gas.

"I think David is doing an outstanding job and I have no problem with the concept of what we're doing offensively," Johnson said. "He's doing a good job working with the quarterbacks and all the other new personnel trying to learn our system."

Johnson on Tuesday said he is discovering the hard way just how much experience means in the NFL.

"In college, you work on fundamentals throughout the season," he said. "It was important that you had players who knew your system. In the NFL, we don't have the practice time we had in college and we don't have the same numbers to work with. Experience is even a bigger factor in the pros than it was in college."

"It's frustrating. You want to run a defensive stunt or a certain blocking scheme and the players don't even know what you're talking about."

The Cowboys are off to a 0-4 start under former University of Miami coach Johnson, the club's worst in 26 years.

"We know the direction we are headed and we'll eventually get better with our system," Johnson said. "We're not searching for something that isn't there."

Some of the New York Giants, including linebacker Lawrence Taylor, were critical of the Cowboys' "plain vanilla" offense after Sunday's 30-13 victory.

"I can't speak for Taylor but all I know is we are progressing at as fast a pace as we can with the people we have," Johnson said.

Johnson made several personnel changes on Tuesday, releasing wide receiver Ray Alexander for a second time plus free agent linebacker Onzy Elam and moving rookie second-round draft pick Darryl Johnston to first-string fullback replacing Broderick Sargent.

"Our offense has been working hard to try to eliminate the mistakes and penalties we've been getting," Johnson said. "We still have too many breakdowns offensively."

Dallas travels to Green Bay on Sunday to meet the Packers in Lambeau Field for the first time since the Cowboys lost the "Ice Bowl" NFL championship game of 1967.

"I didn't see it," Johnson said. "I think I was grinding down film at Wichita State. At least the field won't be frozen this time."

Green Bay is considered a seven-point favorite for the noon kickoff game.

Johnson put up a sign in the dressing room to try to get his players on track for their first victory.

It read: "We must transfer our hard work and go-get-it attitude, enthusiasm, intelligence and intensity to the football field on game day."

Mavs ready for camp

DALLAS (AP) - Five free agents are among the 20 players who have been invited to the Dallas Mavericks training camp that opens Friday at Southern Methodist University, team officials announced.

The five players, who will sign short-term contracts, are being invited along with 10 returning veterans, the Mavs' three 1989 draft choices and unrestricted free agents John Long and Steve Alford.

The five free agents are: Chris Childs, a 6-3 guard from Boise State; Michael Henderson, a 6-9 forward and former Harlem Globetrotter from C.W. Post; Larry Houzer, a 6-8 forward from UNC-Wilmington; Barry Stevens, a 6-4 guard from Iowa State; and Darryl Walker, a 6-8 forward from Seton Hall.

Top draft pick Randy White already has signed a five-year contract, but second-round draft choices Pat Durham and Jeff Hodge must sign contracts to participate in the camp. Team officials said they expect the two players to do so by Friday.

Both Alford, a former Maverick, and Long, who played last season with Indiana and Detroit, are also expected to sign contracts by Friday, the Mavericks said.

Sam Perkins and Bill Wennington, who played last season with the Mavs, are unsigned restricted free agents but still are on the team's training camp roster.

NBA training camp rosters are limited to 20 players, and all must be signed to participate.

Eighteen players took part in the just-completed rookie-free agent camp, which began Sept. 30. The team didn't keep guard Ennis Whatley and forwards Orlando Graham, Steffond Johnson and Andre Moore, all of whom have NBA experience.

San Francisco gimpy, Cubs feeling just fine heading into NLCS

CHICAGO (AP) - Pitching is important and so is hitting and fielding. But the one element all teams really hope for now is health.

Every year, some injury seems to get in the way as teams head into the baseball playoffs.

San Diego lost Kevin McReynolds in 1984, a tarpaulin ate Vince Coleman in 1985, Tom Seaver missed the postseason for Boston in 1986 and Jack Clark was out with St. Louis in 1987.

Then again, Kirk Gibson got only one swing in last year's World Series and that was enough to swing it for the Dodgers.

This time, San Francisco is fragile while the Chicago Cubs are fine going into tonight's opening game of the National League playoffs.

The Giants, who lost postseason ace Dave Dravecky to a broken arm in August, are still hurting. Pitchers Don Robinson and Craig Lefferts are tender and starting catcher Terry Kennedy is only so-so.

"We're not as strong pitching-wise because of the injuries," Manager Roger Craig said Tuesday during a workout at Wrigley Field.

Lefferts, who has pitched 12 scoreless innings in postseason play, has a sore shoulder.

"I probably won't be able to use him as much as I'd like," Craig said.

Robinson, who Craig wants to be in the starting rotation, has stretched ligaments in his right knee, but was deemed OK after pitching batting practice.

Kennedy injured his arm last Sunday. He is a left-handed hitter and will start Game 1 against right-hander Greg Maddux, but Craig said Kennedy may not be able to play every day against the Cubs' all-righty rotation.

"That could be a problem," Craig admitted.

The teams had until midnight to determine their rosters. The Giants waited until after Tuesday afternoon's practice, while the Cubs were set a week ago.

"We're healthy, and that helps," second baseman Ryne Sandberg said. "You can use the guys you want and don't have to worry about who can't play."

Each team chose a nine-man pitching staff. The Giants kept Allee Hammaker, who was 6-6 with a 3.76 earned-run average in 76 2-3 innings, and dropped Bob Knepper, who went 3-2 with a 3.46 ERA for San Francisco after being released by Houston.

The Giants left two other veterans off their roster. Injury-plagued infielder Chris Speier and little-used catcher Bob Brenly were replaced by reserve catcher Bill Bathe and infielder Greg Litchell.

Whatever little nagging injuries that have accumulated during the season won't be helped by the weather. Tonight's forecast calls for wind, of course, with temperatures in the middle 40s.

Which way the wind is blowing could have a small influence of which way the series goes. San Francisco out-homered the Cubs 141-124 and might prefer the wind blowing out so Kevin Mitchell, Will Clark and the rest of the big hitters can take advantage.

The Cubs, once power-oriented but now a blend of contact hitters, have fared better this season when the wind is blowing in.

"I don't think it'll make that much of a difference," Andre Dawson said. "It's not something we can do anything about, anyway."

101 Cattle Co. shapes up calves for area feed yards

Kenneth Walker, two sons, run 5,000-head capacity conditioning yard, 15,000 acres of wheat, grass

By ORVILLE HOWARD
Special Feature Writer

Harvesters come in many shapes and sizes, but Kenneth Walker likes his to be a bit on the thin side, a little long in the middle and coated with any color in the book.

"I like to see 'em hit the ground running and hungry," said Walker as he snapped a chute gate. "We certainly don't always get them that way but that's the way we like it."

Walker is owner of the 101 Cattle Co. and Ranch headquartered about five minutes southeast of Hereford. The only harvesting machines are mobile beef factories called calves: not just a couple of strings of dogies but thousands upon thousands of calves which will eventually wind up in commercial feedyards around Hereford.

Once a showplace for registered Herefords, the Tierra Blanca spread is now a livestock grazing operation which shapes up the small-fry for heavy beef production in the custom feedyards. From fence to fence, wheat fields and meadows and upland grass are earmarked for growing calves into trim feeder cattle. Every ounce of feed or forage leaves this ranch as walking beef. Trucks roll in with tons of grain, but not a bushel ever leaves the ranch.

Walker and two sons, Guy and Clay, run a tight ship out at the 101 Ranch headquarters which includes a 5,000-head capacity livestock conditioning feedyard and about 15,000 acres of wheat and grass.

However, the 101 Cattle Co. extends far beyond the boundaries of Deaf Smith County. Using its 1988-89 seasons as a yardstick, the Walker grazing operations included more than 100,000 acres that reached below the Caprock on the south and played tag with the state line to the west. Though Walker participated in the CRP program, he noted that the diverted acreage system had cut deep into Panhandle wheat grazing, forcing many stocker units to move to preconditioning pens earlier than normal.

Once, Walker was grazing out more than 7,000 acres on his own prime wheatland, in addition to the vast leased acreage that stretched almost continuously for 21 miles across portions of two counties. Wheat on the 101 Ranch is sown in early August, wet or dry, in an effort to get early grazing.

"But this season has been a real nightmare," Walker said as he drove down a fence line. "You can just barely see some of it (wheat) down the row and it should be up there about ready to graze. But the rain have come one after another. I've plowed and planted this field three times during the past six weeks."

Walker is also a farmer because "that's the only way I can get the wheat for livestock grazing." But he takes pride in keeping some of the finest farming equipment available, with one hired hand devoted solely for maintenance and repair. He owns some of the biggest field tractors on the market and has geared wheat sowing to two rigs.

"We operate two planting rigs around the clock when it comes time to sow the wheat," Walker said. "One of my sons heads up a night shift and the other takes the day. We never shut down until the wheat is planted."

Each planting rig takes a 34-foot swath, with the two units capable of planting 640 acres a day. In showing the importance of continuity in wheat planting, Walker said he'd plant every acre between suns if it were possible.

"I've seen fields where just one day made the difference between good growth and bad," he said. In addition to the high-speed equipment, all moving vehicles on the Walker spread are tied together with a dozen high-frequency radios capable of spanning more than 75 miles. Base stations are situated in the various ranch households and the feedyard office.

Walker put the responsibility of day-to-day operations in the hands of his sons. Guy is the general ranch manager and Clay is in charge of the range livestock facilities. However, they're never seen behind a desk or sipping coffee at a snack bar. The Walkers work from sun-to-sun, with a bit of daybreak in the morning and a lot of twilight in the evenings tossed in for good measure.

Guy is seldom seen without his familiar black felt hat, spurs and scarred leather chaps. While Clay is also a familiar sight in the saddle, he spends much of his time with a sorting stick in the ranch feedyard and is an expert on the big earth-movers. But when the Walkers are receiving or delivering cattle, the 101 Cattle Co. becomes a real family affair. Guy's wife, Carol, is a veteran at the computerized book-keeping system and takes a leading role in helping keep the bottom line black. The Walkers have a daughter, Amy, who is a senior at West Texas State University. Another son, Tim, is in the home construction business in Dallas.

In outlining his cattle operation, Walker said most incoming cattle are lightweights from the southern U.S. and a few Mexican imports when available at the right price. "We don't finish a thing here in our feedyard," said Guy Walker. "We like to bring in the smaller calves at 250-300 pounds and get them ready for the finishing yards at between 650 and 700 pounds."

He said the ideal program is to feed the lightweights about 100 days on a growing ration blended with corn bran, ground cotton burs and supplements. "If the cattle grow out well, we can turn out numbers about three times a year," he said.

If the wheat pasture is available, calves are sometimes shaped and sorted for only about 45 days in the feedyard then moved out to graze. All new cattle are processed through the 101 feedyard, no matter their growing background. The feedyard is equipped with a livestock hospital equipped to treat any illness in the business.

The Walkers handle Mexican cattle when they are available, showing where the imports take less care and have higher gain ratios than many southern strings. Records tell the story, such as one pen where the medicine bill was 7 cents per head on the Mexican stock and $17 per head on a comparable pen out of Mississippi.

"And according to the computer back at that time, the Mexican cattle did better than the Mississippi cattle even at 20 cents a pound higher," Walker said.

When it comes time to sell, Walker does most of it right here in Hereford, sometimes through the Clifton Cattle Co or to AzTx Cattle Co., and sometimes both. On a recent morning, the Walkers loaded out 21 double-deckers before noon, with all of the feeder cattle bound for AzTx facilities in Texas and Colorado.

This weekend cattle deal contained shades of the Old West where cattlemen swapped herds with a handshake. Such was this deal, no contract and no cash, just the word of three men: Kenneth Walker, Jimmy Rhoderick and Jack Alshire. Rhoderick represented Clifton and Alshire represented AzTx. As hundred of cattle filed into the big rigs for shipment that morning, the three cattlemen, all in a different phase of the beef business, chatted casually about fishing and hunting.

When the last truck was loaded just about noon, the three shook hands and odd-manned for dinner. They knew the cattle would be munching on Colorado rations before sundown at an AzTx yard near Rocky Ford. Rhoderick's cattle trading heritage goes back through three Texas generations and Alshire spent some 25 years as a cattle trader and auction owner around Tucson, Ariz., before joining the Hereford-based firm about four years ago.

Kenneth, Clay and Guy Walker are shown in front of the 101 Ranch office building.

HUSTLE HEREFORD

Though Walker has owned farms around Hereford since the early 1960s, he didn't move heavily into the cattle grazing operations until 1976 when he bought the old Lee Cocanougher Hereford Ranch headquarters. He then branched out in the purchase and leasing of several smaller operations adjacent to or near the ranch, then built the feedyard. Renovations during the past 14 years have included steel holding corrals for pasture cattle, new barns, scales, and general upgrading of the cross-fences.

Walker has also owned farms in northern Deaf Smith County, near Sayre, Okla., and had a sizable outfit in the western Oklahoma Panhandle near Felt called the 101 Ranch. When he sold the Felt ranch he retained the name, which he later gave to the old Cocanougher outfit.

Though Walker's heavy investments in the cattle industry reflect a true desire for ranch life, his first 20 years as an adult were spent in home construction. During the 1950s and 1960s Walker was one of the largest homebuilders in Amarillo, building more than 90 percent of the homes in the Ridgcrest and Belmar additions.

"I thought it took a lot of money to run a construction business, but it didn't hold a candle to financing in a cattle operation," said Walker. "But the real big problem in running a sizable farm or ranch is getting good help. It's almost impossible to find a hired hand who knows how to handle livestock and machinery."

Walker doesn't mind the high-risk element of the cattle business, but frequently takes a serious look at the bottom line on investments.

"Other than the people directly involved in the cattle business, I don't think there's a person in town who understands how much money it takes to make a livestock operation work. Sometimes when the market goes to hell, I wonder why I'm in it myself."

"I sometimes get a gut feeling to get out, then someone call up with a string of 'real good uns' out Mississippi way or maybe the Mexicans have opened up down at Eagle Pass. Then I go again. There's something about the cattle business that keeps you hanging in."

Soil erosion threat to farm productivity

WASHINGTON (AP) - New technology is expected to boost crop yields sharply over the next few decades, but an Agriculture Department study says soil erosion continues as a threat to the productivity of farmland over the long haul.

In its projections announced on Sept. 21, the USDA said only around 220 million acres of cropland may be required by 2030 to meet U.S. domestic and export needs, compared with more than 380 million acres used in 1982, the base year for the study.

The report is the second appraisal of the nation's soil and water resources since Congress ordered the periodic studies in the Resource Conservation Act of 1977.

Regardless of technological advances and higher annual crop yields, the 280-page report also says erosion from water runoff and wind are long-term threats to the land's productivity.

And it is difficult to measure. Erosion reduces yields when it is severe, sometimes by up to 50 percent.

"Generally, however, only a very small amount of soil is moved in any given year," the report said. "The resulting annual loss in productivity is so small that it is hidden by differences in the weather or in the management farmers apply from year to year."

In many soils, it said, crop yields may not appear to decrease at all, even if erosion is excessive, because the farmer has switched to improved, higher-yielding varieties of crops, or is applying more fertilizer, or controlling pests more effectively.

To help show what is involved in long-term soil erosion, researchers devised computer models to simulate "the effects of many years of erosion on many kinds of soil" under various conditions and systems.

Using 1982 management conditions and not allowing for technology improvements, the computer program looked at what might happen to the nation's 421 million acres of cropland after 100 years of "sheet and rill" erosion from water runoff, and wind erosion.

Overall, according to the computer, cropland productivity would be reduced by less than 3 percent a century from now.

"The projected national percentage of loss is low because many soils are not losing any productivity under current (farm) management," the report said.

In other words, some of the nation's soil is being naturally replaced as rapidly as it is being eroded. But other soils erode at several times the "tolerance" value, or replacement rate.

And on very fragile soils, even slight erosion results in significant yield reductions, the report said. On some of these, after a century, productivity loss was projected to be quite high.

"Loss of productivity after 100 years is projected to be as high as 60 percent along the central California Coast Range, and as high as 50 percent in the Great Valley of Virginia," the report said.

Another point to keep in mind is that "a century is a short time in the existence of a soil - or a society," the report said.

Iowa would require 617,000 equivalent acres after 100 years to replace its productivity lost from water erosion.

Others in the top 10 states in terms of projected losses include: Illinois, 569,000 acres; Missouri, 413,000; Indiana, 389,000; Kentucky, 358,000; Pennsylvania, 333,000; Ohio, 310,000; New York, 261,000; Nebraska, 246,000; and California, 235,000.

Much of the wind erosion would be concentrated in the Great Plains states. Texas was projected at 380,000 acres after 100 years; Colorado, 128,000; Montana, 108,000; Washington, 76,000; Idaho, 66,000; South Dakota, 50,000; Kansas, 43,000; Nevada, 31,000; Nebraska, 19,000; and Oklahoma, 19,000.

Business leaders support giving the United Way

There are many valid reasons why Hereford needs the United Way.

All of the agencies supported by United Way, without exception, serve the people of our community. Also without exception, these services are rendered to people who cannot help themselves either for financial reasons or an organization necessary to carry out activities. For example, a Camp Fire activity must have an organization to plan and implement activities.

For several months I have been involved in promoting economic development in our community. One important thing that I learned years ago and have emphasized in these recent months is that an industrial prospect measures our community by our record of supporting the United Way. They believe this support is an indicator of whether or not we are a caring community, a community into which they would want to move their key employees and feel confident that they would be happy.

There is no question but that the youth activities, toward which activities of most United Way agencies are directed, help to deter mischief and criminal activities. Idle children seem to gravitate to this kind of behavior when more positive programs are not in place.

Because our support of United Way has fallen short in the past, we see more agencies having to conduct their own fund-raising drives to supplement their budgets. This causes waste and duplication of efforts, calling on volunteers to make solicitations when this could all be done with one drive.

Let's all support a one drive system. We need the "United Way" of giving and funding.

Bud Eades

Hereford needs the United Way for several reasons.

It help unite our community by a coordinated effort to raise funds to support our many needy organizations, from the Camp Fire to Hereford Senior Citizens.

CRAIG SMITH

I believe in and support the United Way as a businessman and as an individual.

As president of Hereford Senior Citizens, I am aware that this group supports the drive and receives a quarterly allocation. The allocation is used to support the transportation necessary in delivering, daily, over 200 nutritious meals to Hereford home-bound citizens.

By doing it the United Way, this prevents the 12 agencies from having to have individual fund raisers, giving relief to those organizations and to our businesses and individuals.

United is the better way!

Shirley Garrison

The United Way helps to support 12 different organizations in Hereford that directly affect approximately 10,000 citizens. The greater percent of these organizations budget, funded by the United Way, results in fewer local fund raisers that have to be held in order to meet other needs.

These organizations receiving funds are determined through a local committee that assesses the needs and priorities of the organizations. The entire process of establishing and directing our local United Way campaign requires the dedication of many individuals who devote their time and efforts to help those less fortunate benefit from your giving, thereby achieving a better quality of life in Hereford.

We need to be more appreciative of the local United Way efforts. So often the capacity to appreciate is frequently left to only a few! How often do you think about the good things that your United Way does for your community?

Efforts on the United Way's behalf require each of us to extend ourselves to achieve a positive goal. We should become more aware of some of the problems that surround us and be less apathetic to the problems that confront others. Apathy solves no problems!

Let us all join together to assume some responsibility to achieve a positive goal for the United Way of Deaf Smith County. Your contribution enhances your community.

Craig Smith

Meat well met

The new location of the Hereford Meat market, 411 N. 25 Mile Ave., was the scene of a ribbon cutting on Monday. The ribbon cutting was hosted by the Hereford Hustlers, a goodwill ambassador group for the Deaf Smith County Chamber of Commerce. Prior to this recent move Gilbert Tijerina (second from right) and his wife, Ermelinda, (third from right) operated their meat market just down the street from its present site at 220 N. 25 Mile Avenue.

Computer owners worried about virus

NEW YORK (AP) - A rare data-destroying computer virus that will attack personal computers after Oct. 12 is causing consternation among computer owners who fear they will be among its relatively small number of victims.

Computer security firms and companies that supply anti-viral software say they have been deluged by calls since word of the "Datacrime" virus was spread widely last week by the news media.

"Frankly, the virus isn't all that important a virus, yet this phone is ringing off the hook," Ross Greenberg, a New Yorker who makes a virus protector called Flu-Shot Plus, said late last week.

"The alarms that are going off absolutely staggered me," said Winn Schwartau, president of American Computer Security Industries Inc. in Nashville, Tenn. He said several concerned government agencies and Fortune 500 companies had contacted him.

Greenberg said he has received maybe a half-dozen reports of the virus since it surfaced this year. The Computer Virus Industry Association of Santa Clara, Calif., has received seven reports, chairman John McAfee said Monday.

In contrast, there have been thousands of reports of other viruses. Far more people will be hit on Oct. 13 by the less harmful but more widespread Jerusalem virus, also known as the PLO or Friday the 13th virus.

"I'm more worried about spilling a cup of coffee on my keyboard than I am about the Datacrime virus," Greenberg said.

Computer viruses are pieces of software written by anonymous programmers that make copies of themselves and spread from one machine to another through infected floppy disks, office networks or phone links such as computer bulletin boards.

The Datacrime virus attacks the hard disk data-storage devices of IBM-compatible personal computers that use Microsoft Corp.'s MS-DOS operating system. It wipes out the directory section, making it impossible for the disk's contents to be read.

The virus is triggered when an infected program is used anytime after the computer's internal clock passes Oct. 12, the traditional date for Columbus Day. It is also known as the Columbus Day or Icelandic virus.

The virus was found lying dormant in computers by people who noticed that some of their programs had swollen inexplicably. Infected programs were turned over to experts who dismantled the virus and found out how it worked and when it would be triggered.

Computer security experts say the best way to protect against viruses is to make backup copies every day of everything users want to save.

"People should make backups the way they brush their teeth in the morning, like a basic part of hygiene," Greenberg said.

About six percent of all American households now have computers.

Military Muster

Navy Petty Officer 2nd Class Micheal D. Smothermon, son of Delbert B. and Jackie A. Smothermon of Route 2, Hereford, recently returned from a six-month deployment to the western Pacific Ocean aboard the aircraft USS Ranger, homeported in San Diego.

While deployed, crewmembers rescued 39 Vietnamese men, women, and children who were spotted 80 miles southwest of Cubi Point, Republic of the Philippines.

Smothermon visited Pearl Harbor, Hawaii and made foreign port visits to Diego Garcia; British Indian Ocean territories; Fremantle; Australia; Subic Bay, Republic of the Philippines; Singapore; Hong Kong; and Pattaya Beach, Thailand.

A 1983 graduate of Dimmitt High School, he joined the Navy in April 1984.

U.S. schools to celebrate National School Lunch Week

Dallas -- On Oct. 8-14, schools across the nation will celebrate National School Lunch Week. Enacted by Congress in 1946, the National School Lunch Program has made it possible for the nation's children to enjoy nutritious, well-balanced, low-cost lunches for 43 years.

This year's theme, "School Lunch: What a Way to Grow," reaffirms the important role the National School Lunch Program plays. Designed as a program "to safeguard the health and well-being of the Nation's children and to encourage the domestic consumption of nutritious agricultural commodities and other food," the National School Lunch Program has done just that. For over four decades, the program has met the needs of school children across the land, while constantly changing to reflect new trends in food preferences and a greater nutrition awareness. Today, cafeterias in some 90,000 schools across the nation combine to serve over 24 million customers daily. School lunch is big business. In fact, it is one of the largest food service programs in the country.

The National School Lunch Program, administered at the federal level by the U.S. Department of Agriculture's (USDA) Food and Nutrition Service, provides some 3.8 billion annually (up 20 percent from 1980) in cash and commodities to participating schools. In return, schools that choose to participate must meet federal minimum meal requirements and must offer free and reduced price lunches to eligible children. Nationwide, almost half (48 percent) of the lunches are served free or at a reduced price.

While the majority of the food used in the National School Lunch Program is purchased by schools on the local level, a variety of over 80 different kinds of USDA commodity foods make up about 20 percent of the food used in the program. Commodity foods are under constant review, and over the years significant progress has been made to reduce the amount of sugar, salt, and fat contained in commodity items. Most commodity ground beef is now at least 78 percent lean, canned fruits are packed in light syrup or fruit juice, and more poultry and fish are being purchased. While the final selection of commodity items is based upon availability and market conditions, the USDA solicits input and feedback from local schools through the commodity preference survey completed annually.

Tastes have changed over the years and school cafeteria menus, which are locally planned, often reflect these changes. Many schools have taken a cue from the USDA/HHS Dietary Guidelines and have tailored their menus to feature a wide variety of foods. With overall balance and the moderation of sugar, salt, and fat foremost in mind, many schools now have salad bars, whole wheat bread products, raw fruits and vegetables, etc., as daily offerings.

PUBLIC NOTICE

The Commissioners Court of Deaf Smith County will hold a public hearing at 9:10 AM on October 9th, 1989 in the Court-house for the receiving from the public input on the creation of a "Septic Tank Order" within the County for the purpose of complying with the State Board of Health. All persons interested in septic tank matters in Deaf Smith County should plan to be in attendance.

PUBLIC NOTICE

The Commissioners Court of Deaf Smith County will hold a public hearing at 9:30 AM on October 9th, 1989 in the Court-house for the purpose of identifying either by name, letter, or number the roads within the County. The purpose for such is to assist the 911 emergency system in dispatching rescue units. All persons interested in having input in the identification of County roads should plan to attend.

The death rate from heart attack has declined nearly 29 percent in the last 11 years, says the American Heart Association, but heart attack remains the number one cause of death. The AHA estimates approximately 1.5 million Americans will have a heart attack in 1989, and more than 500,000 will die.

Ducks will lay eggs only in the early morning.

Hints from Heloise

DEAR READERS:

Finding a missing pet can be a frustrating and stressful event. Many times owners drive around their neighborhood looking for a lost pet and, if this proves unsuccessful, aren't sure what the next step is. Here are some suggestions to help you locate a missing pet.

One of the first things to do is to make several posters or handouts. Be sure to include your telephone number and a photo or good description of the pet. Leave them with neighbors in at least a 12-block radius and check local ordinances before attaching signs to telephone or utility poles.

Ask neighborhood children, the newspaper delivery boy and the mailman to see if they have seen your pet. If they have, find out which direction the pet was headed.

Call or stop at all the veterinarians' offices in your immediate area, as well as some in the surrounding neighborhoods. Call local emergency animal hospitals and go in person to local animal shelters and the Humane Society to look for your pet. Describing your animal friend may not be easy.

Run an ad in local newspapers, put up notices in stores that allow it, and be sure to include the animal's description as well as your work and home telephone number. These hints should help bring that special pet back home quickly. — Heloise

Let us show you a Texas you've never seen before.

- All 172 pages in full color
- Each page measures a large 15 x 11 inches
- Presents the entire state in stunning detail
- Appendices and specialty maps of many different features

THE ROADS OF TEXAS is the culmination of a mammoth project that has involved many individuals for over two years. When you get your copy of THE ROADS OF TEXAS you'll wonder how you ever traveled the state without it.

This 172 page atlas contains maps that show the complete Texas road system (all 284,000 miles) plus just about every city and community! Texas A&M University Cartographics Laboratory staff members produced the maps, based on county maps from the State Department of Highways and Public Transportation. The details shown are amazing—county and local roads, lakes, reservoirs, streams, dams, historic sites, pumping stations, golf courses, cemeteries, mines and many other features too numerous to list.

Flower show set Thursday

Members of the Bud to Blossom Garden Club are sponsoring a mini standard flower show Thursday at the Hereford Garden Center. The show will be open to the public at no charge.
 "Our Panhandle Heritage" is the theme of the event. Exhibitors' entries should be an interpretative design expressing heritage during harvest season.
 In the horticulture division there will be an open class for area gardeners and flower show judges. Entries can be a cut flower or a container-grown plant.
 An invitation open class in design will be held for area floral arrangers and flower show judges. Theme for these entries will be "Glimpses into the Future" and can be made with fresh or dried plant material.
 Any interested area youth may enter cut flowers or container-grown plants in the horticulture division or a floral arrangement using fresh flowers and plant material.
 Flower show chairman is Wilma Bryan. Any interested person should contact club President Phyllis Brown at 364-1804.

Betty Crocker's Cooking Tips

Q. Do you recommend greasing both sides and bottom of a cake pan? D.S., Ava, II

A. For most cakes, grease and flour the inside of pan with solid shortening and dust with flour. Exceptions are angel food and chiffon cakes which should neither be greased nor floured.

Q. My biscuit dough contains baking powder, baking soda and yeast. It's supposed to keep in the refrigerator for a week but after three days the dough discolors. What would prevent this? C.K., Weatherford, OK

A. Even carefully wrapped and stored dough will darken due to a reaction of the leavening and flour. For best results, bake and freeze finished biscuits, reheating them to serve.

More than 57 percent of adult Americans have blood cholesterol levels above 200 milligrams per deciliter, a level at which the risk of coronary heart disease begins to rise sharply, says the American Heart Association.

Ann Landers

DEAR ANN LANDERS: My husband and I run our own business. I am happy to say we have enjoyed considerable success.

The problem is that my husband is illiterate. His inability to read or write has caused this dear man a great deal of grief. He has told me that he has thought of suicide. When he talks like this I become extremely upset.

We have tried a few tutors, but it was expensive and we didn't see any real progress. Besides, he is understandably reluctant to reveal his "handicap." I don't want to hurt his pride by being open about asking for help.

I would be willing to teach him myself, but I need guidance. Is there some special program available for adults that I could follow? I would like an outline telling me where to begin and how to progress. Even if it didn't work out for me as his teacher, it would help a tutor follow a definite plan in achieving the results we want.

There are quick-weight-loss programs, Alcoholics Anonymous, sensitivity training, foreign language courses, etc. Is there anything for those poor souls who are illiterate?

Please help! Our son will soon be attending kindergarten. - A Loving Wife

DEAR HON: Your day is made. Here it is.

And now can I tell you about a common grammatical error that drives me up the wall?

When I hear someone say, "between you and I," my hackles go up and I must fight with myself to keep from saying, "Please! It's between you and ME."

An easy way to remember this is to tell yourself that "between" has two "e's." The twin "e's" need a triplet. It can be found in the word "me."
