Sadat, Begin Agree to Talk

ALEXANDRIA, Egypt (AP) - President Anwar Sadat and Israeli Prime Minister Menachem Begin are close to agreeing to set their differences aside and resume the Palestinian autonomy negotiations, diplomatic sources from both countries said today.

The sources, who asked not to be identified, said the two leaders believe it would be better to discuss their differences after the deadlocked talks get underway again.

The sources were not able to say whether the two leaders would announce some form of agreement during a joint press conference at the president's summer home scheduled for later today. Egyptian sources said earlier that any agreements reached at the two-day summit probably would not be announced until after Begin meets with President Reagan in Washington next month.

Meeting Tuesday for the first time since Israel's devastating air strikes in Iraq and Lebanon, the two leaders held each other at arm's length in contrast to the hugs, smiles and joking comaraderie of their previous meetings.

Begin sought Sadat's agreement to resume the deadlocked talks on autonomy for the Palestinians of the occupied West Bank and Gaza Strip, which the Egyptian president suspended last summer.

The prime minister also contends that Egypt is lagging on the process of normalizing relations with Israel is accordance with the Camp David peace treaty. He wants this speeded up, with implementation of cultural and economic agreements as the first step.

Egyptian sources said Sadat was asking Begin to "show the world, by some sort of act," that Israel is (See SUMMIT, Page 2)

PASADENA, Calif. (AP) -Mechanical trouble aboard Voyager 2, perhaps caused by a collision with particles from Saturn's rings, interrupted the flow of stunning and revealing photographs from the planet today, but scientists said the mission was still a "high-percentage success."

A platform carrying Voyager's cameras apparently got stuck, limiting the cameras' aim, and project controllers could not fully analyze the problems until they receive crucial tape recordings at mid-morning, a spokesman said.

Controllers noticed the problem shortly after 2 a.m. EDT as soon as radio signals with the craft were reacquired once Voyager passed from behind Saturn as seen from earth, project spokesman Alan Wood said.

Scientists had said that passing through Saturn's rings posed a danger of collision for Voyager with ring particles. A pathfinder spaceship, Pioneer 11, followed the same route safely in 1979 and scientists were confident Voyager would make it

As it raced away from Saturn today, the one-ton robot explorer began a fiveyear journey to distant Uranus, a world never before seen up close. Until the ship arrives in January 1986, no other world will unravel before an American spacecraft. Voyager is then headed for a 1989 tour of Nep-

The encounter left scientists overwhelmed by a flood of dates and pictures of sights no human had ever seen from the exotic planet. "The closer we look, the more puzzling things are," said chief scientist Edward Stone.

College Building Fund Unfair to Counties

By BOB NIGH Managing Editor

Austin - Arguments over a civil suit originally scheduled to be heard Monday concerning the reinstatement of the 10-cent state property tax which has been used to finance new construction at 17 state colleges and universities that are not included in the University of Texas and Texas A&M systems have been postponed at least until October.

William Thacker, Jr., a Wichita Falls attorney and a regent at Midwestern University in Wichita Falls, said last week the trial was being delayed by mutual agreement between the university and the state attorney general.

Midwestern has filed the suit to reinstate the tax, challenging a 1979 legislative act which reduced the state property tax from 10-cents per $100 valuation to .0001 percent.

Thacker said the postponement will allow plantiffs time to decide if tax assessorcollectors in Texas' 254 counties should be added as defendants in the case. "The state has contended in its pleadings that the county tax assessor-collectors had the responsibility to collect the tax and therefore should be parties to the suit," he said.

He added that Midwestern has three choices in the matter. It can make the 254 tax assessor-collectors part of the law suit, "or it can meet the challenge that they are not necessary to the suit in written pleadings or go ahead with the lawsuit and argue the matter in court."

The university contends that the 1979 legislative act reducing the property tax is unconstitutional because it violates a provision of the state constitution that says the levy must be 10 cents.

The 1979 act said future 'funds for construction would come from general revenue funds. However, Texas Attorney General Mark White later ruled that general revenue could not be used as long as a means for providing construction funds was in the constitution.

Efforts to repeal the state property tax and to provide college construction funds failed during the 67th Legislature's regular and special sessions this year.

Economists Still Insist Inflation Will Lower

By OWEN ULLMANN Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) -The Reagan administration and private economists are sticking to their predictions of a single-digit inflation rate for 1981 despite a surge in consumer prices in July.

Led by soaring housing costs, prices last month rose at a 15.2 percent annual rate, the highest in more than a year. But most economists called the increase a temporary phenomenon.

Jerry L. Jordan, a member of President Reagan's Council of Economic Advisers. said the Consumer Price Index report released Tuesday exaggerated the way housing costs are measured. Jordan said the administration is still "right on track" in its prediction that inflation will rise 9.9 percent this year. In recent months, when inflation fell well below a 10 percent pace, administration economists warned that prices were bound to show large, temporary jumps, too, but that the general trend would be a gradual easing of inflation.

Inflation has risen at a 9.4 percent annual rate through the first seven months of 1981. Last year, prices rose 12.4 percent.

According to the Labor Department's Bureau of Labor Statistics, consumer prices in July rose 1.2 percent, the largest monthly increase since March 1980 and the first time in five months that inflation advanced at a double-digit pace.

If prices were to climb 1.2

percent a month for a full year, the inflation rate would be about 15 percent.

House prices, which had declined earlier this year, climbed 1.8 percent, the largest increase since the government began collecting records in 1953. Mortgage interest rates - which are running at record levels - advanced 1.3 percent. Overall

July, the largest drop since April 1979, the government said. During the past 12 months, a worker's buying power has shrunk 2.9 percent.

Most economists said July's overall price rise was distorted by the large jump in home-buying costs. If house prices and mortgage rates were taken out, consumer prices would have risen at a housing costs, including rent, 10 percent annual sale, the economists said.

Even so, a broad spectrum of other prices registered their largest gains of the year. Large rises were reported for meat, fruits and vegetables, natural gas and

No Indictments Issued In Shooting Incident

PANHANDLE, Texas (AP) -Grand jurors investigating the death of a bystander killed at a shootout earlier this month between police and a fugitive have issued a report critical of how authorities handled the case.

The panel returned no indictments Tuesday night but said they wanted Texas Rangers to investigate the shooting and read a report citing specific complaints about the way police and sheriff's officials handled

"Out of the further investigation some indictments may result," District Attorney David McCoy said. James Grandstaff, 32, a foremand, a witness told police. Cox and as many as five police officers began shooting and Grandstaff was struck and killed by a stray bullet.

The grand jurors refused to identify the officer who fired the fatal shot until their investigation is complete.

The report criticized investigators for permitting Grandstaff's body to be taken to a funeral home before an autopsy could be done and claimed that ballistics tests were inadequate to determine precisely which gun fired the fatal shot.

Grand jurors also said in their report that the sheriff's department failed to impound Cox's pickup truck and the Borger police officers were not sufficiently trained to deal with stressful situations.

NWF Show Increase In Annual Eagle Count

The National Wildlife Federation has announced that its third annual midwinter bald eagle survey in the "lower 48" states, taken during the first two weeks of January, 1981, resulted in a count of 13,709 eagles-an increase of five percent over last year's count.

The survey was taken between January 2 and January 16 by nearly 4,000 counters from 45 state and wildlife agencies, seven federal agencies, and 150 local conservation groups.

William S. Clark, director of NWF's Raptor Information Center, estimated that of the 13,709 eagles counted, about 70 percent were migrants from Canada and Alaska which fly south when cold weather and frozen waterways interfere with their search for food. "The contiguous 48 states have a resident population of around 4,500 birds," he said, "but eagle counters may have actually surveyed only between 2,000 and 3,000 of the residents." He noted that in 1981 comparable to coverage in 1980, which explained the similar results. There were 35 percent more eagles counted in 1980 than in 1979, mainly due to better coverage last year.

Considered to be the most complete midwinter bald eagle count available, the NWF survey provides eagle experts with data on where the birds are distributed during the winter and what kind of habitat they need to survive. "As we accumulate data from our annual bald eagle surveys, we will be able to better understand the needs of these birds," Clark explained. NWF's Raptor Information Center, established in 1976, serves as a clearing house for data on eagles and other birds of prey.

"The annual survey is taken during the winter in order to increase our knowledge of bald eagle numbers and distribution at that time of year, when the numbers of birds found in the lower 48 are at their peak," Clark said. "During January survey conditions are ideal because eagle movements are at a minimum."

According to survey coordinator Mike Pramstaller, an NWF raptor specialist, the state of Washington reported the biggest 1981 midwinter eagle populations, with 1,611 sightings. Other states with high numbers of eagles were Missouri, with 955; Florida, 920; Idaho, 756; Utah, 742; and California, 711. No eagles were sighted in either Vermont or West Virginia. Pramstaller pointed out that at least one pair of eagles is thought to reside in the latter state. Surveyors failed to spot the pair, however. Because of duplicated sightings by survey teams, state counts must sometimes be revised, he said. Last year's reported census total 13,127 was later revised to 13,046.

For this year's survey every state had a regional coordinator, who was responsible for organizing the coverage in his area. In most cases the coordinator was an agency biologist who was knowledgeable of the eagles in his area. In five states-Idaho, Nevada, New Mexico, Texas, and Pennsylvaniathere was a significant increase in eagle counters this year.

Weather conditions had a definite effect on survey results. Pramstaller emphasized. Cold weather was probably responsible for the increase over 1980's count in the number of eagle observations in Connecticut, New Hampshire, Pennsylvania, and Maryland. Eagles are much more concentrated in certain areas during the cold weather, as they congregate near unfrozen water sources. In the region west of the Appalachian Mountains, weather was mild and dry, so the eagles were more dispersed and survey-taking more start of school next week.

"But we'll get it," he said.

"I never imagined in this world that he would decide this way," he said. "We're difficult. In Missouri and Utah, for example, eagles were counted in low numbers at traditional concentration areas. In both states about as many eagles were counted this year as last, but they were more dispersed.

There was a major change in distribution this year in the region along the Mississippi River from Minneapolis to Dubuque, Iowa, where bald eagles increased by 151 over the 1980 figures. A concurrent decrease this year of 194 bald eagles in Illinois away from the Mississippi suggests thatthe extremely mild weather encouraged the eagles to remain further north along the river, Pramstaller pointed

In the western U.S. bald eagle numbers were up in the intermountain regions of Idaho, Utah, and New Mexico. The larger number tallied in New Mexico may be largely attributable to more extensive coverage in 1981. However, bald eagle numbers were up 75 percent in Idaho. Coordinators from that state felt that although there was increased coverage in 1981, there were significantly more birds present this winter. Counts in Utah, which were hampered by extensive fog, may have resulted in increases comparable to Idaho under more ideal survey conditions. Elsewhere in the West, bald eagle numbers were similar to last year except in Nevada, where increased survey effort yielded more birds, and in Oregon, where eagle numbers were down by 106. The bald eagle was adopted as the national symbol by the my works and my little Continental Congress in 1782. brother goes to a day care While the decline of bald eagle populations is due Raul said he realized the mainly to habitat loss, use of air-conditioned classroom DDT and other pesticides might not be ready by the during the 1950's and 60's seriously impaired the bird's reproductive process. Elizabethan Theater

CEDAR CITY, Utah (AP) - William Slater thought his leg was receiving a sly tug.

Slater - responsible for such British Broadcasting Corp. dramas as "I, Claudius" and "The Duchess of Duke Street" - was hunting for a replica of an Elizabethan theater for a televised history of theater. Producer Peter Wineman told him to have a look in Cedar City, Utah, and here's the map.

"When he told me there was an Elizabethan-type theater, open to the skies with a thrust stage, I said, 'Pull the other one. You're joking! Utah? Where's Utah?' I was incredulous. I couldn't believe it," said Slater, executive producer of the theater series.

That's how the BBC came to spend two weeks in this little southwestern Utah town, home of one of the oldest Shakespearean festivals in

The marriage was a happy one, with BBC cast and crew treated to the kind of fanfare that made British actor Jeremy Irons - fresh from a Western barbecue - think this might have been how traveling players were wined and dined in the villages of 16th century England.

The Utah Shakespearean Festival, in its 20th season, is held each summer in the Adams Memorial Theater, an imposing two-story Tudor building on the campus of Southern Utah State College.

"There is no such theater in England, where you think it would be," Slater said, and it would have "cost us a great deal more money to build this theater, which is absolutely essential to this episode." Local theater patrons, among them farmers and ranchers, lined up for tickets more than a year before the BBC film crew arrived.

The series episode dealing with William Shakespeare was filmed before capacity audiences over two days last week. Spectators sat under a baking sun - no Elizabethan audience ever saw a play at

"I just love to hear those dudes talk, don't you?" murmured one man as Slater, the executive producer, shouted instructions to cameramen. "The thing I love is the audiences," Slater said after watching a festival production of "Much Ado About Nothing." "They don't come in with some pious air of reverence. They get all the gags. They don't miss a trick. They are absolutely on the ball," he Actor Paul Rogers was asked if the local audience lacked the theatrical sophistication of those in Britain. "If that is the case, it is the most marvelous virtue," he said. "They respond to the jokes as if for the first time."

Not all in the audience were impressed by the visitors. After watching Irons and Rogers in the ghost scene from "Hamlet," one local woman sniffed, "I liked our production a lot better."

The irony of finding in America the best replica of an Elizabethan theater was carried a step further by the series' theater director,

"It's probably true to say that the tones of good American speech are much, much closer to the sounds Shakespeare heard in his head as he wrote than anything you'll get in any current BBC production of any of Shakespeare's plays," said Langham, director of the Juilliard Theater Center in New York City.

That's because the English spoken in America - parts of which were settled by contemporaries of the bard has since changed far less than the English spoken in Britain, he said.

The 13-part series, entitled "All The World's A Stage," is a history of the theater from its origins in religious ritual to the present. Co-produced by Time-Life Inc., it was written by playwright and novelist Ronald Harwood.

It will be broadcast in England in 1983 and probably the following year in the United States.

Like Rogers, Harwood was agog at finding a cultural haven nestled in the sagebrush and sand of the American West

'Surprised? I was astonished," said Harwood, who admits to one large hope for "All The World's A Stage":

"I'm the traitor in television, because what I want to happen at the end of the series is for everyone to switch off their television sets and go to the theeter."

In Cedar City, residents

proudly point out, they've been doing that for years.

ting past Saturn at 11:24 p.m. EDT, Voyager 2's radio, as expected, went silent as the ship passed behind the plane while diving through the sparse outer E-ring. The encounter was not confirmed until 12:50 a.m. today, when the radioed messaged arrived at the Jet Propulsion Laboratory in Pasadena.

A less-sophisticated Pioneer II spaceship safely followed a similar route in 1979, and scientists had been confident that the Voyager also would survive without being hit by any large ring particles.

"This is exploration at its finest," Andrew Stofan, acting space sciences chief of the National aeronautics and Space Administration, said Tuesday. NASA administrator James Beggs called it 'one of the really great scientific achievements of our age."

'Festival of Stars' Opens August 28

The 1981 "Festival of Stars" in the PaloDuro Canyon near Amarillo and Canyon, which will be staged Aug. 28-Sept. 13 (except Wednesdays), is a joyous salute to America expressed in the dancing of every era and section of the country. Guest stars from New York City including several from the prestigious New York City Ballet, and members of the Lone Star Ballet Inc. of the Panhandle combine to bring some of the humorous Scott Joplin numbers, western movements with internationally known roper Sonna Warell called "Leaps and Lariats," The Raven Dance and an American Indian Legend, an early colonial minuet, frontiersmen celebrating, tastes of soul music and vaudeville and the fifties, a salute to Disney, and an American Finale with marches and flags and Pom Poms and twirlers.

After the intermission follows the "Story of the Palo Duro Canyon" in Sound and Light from a Script by Paul Green telling of the formation of the great abyss by wind and water, the flint chipping of the prehistoric Indians 12,000 years ago, the prehistoric monsters, the later animals, the coming of the Spaniards in 1541, the last battle with the Indians for the Plains and the coming of the ranchers, farmers, city dwellers and even airplanes.

Delight Thames and Jeff Smith of Hereford and Shawn Walsh, a grandson of Mr. and Mrs. Harold Krieghauser of Hereford will participate in the 1981 Festival of Stars.

Delight Thames

Miss Thames, 14, is one of the younger dancers just beginning to work with the company. She began at Larrymore Studio when she was 11. For the past 2 years she has worked with Hess's School of Dance in Amarillo. She is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Thames, 110 S.

Centre. Her grandparents are Mr. and Mrs. H.C. Williams of Hereford and Mr. and Mrs. R.W. Thames of Andrews.

Jeffrey Smith

Smith is a 1979 graduate of Hereford High School. In high school he was student technical director and stage manager. He is now a Technical Theatre Major at WTSU and sound and light designer for Boomer's Gold, sound design for "Come Blow Your Horn," "Romeo and Juliet," as well as other productions. He has been head of the sound, light and special effects department at WTSU for the past year. He also worked with the American Deaf Dance Theatre in April as the Assistant technical director, and has been learning sign languages. Jeff is the son of Mr. and Mrs. John R. Smith of Hereford, and the grandson of Mr. and Mrs. Raymond Smith.

Shawn Walsh

Shawn Walsh (Lonnie Cheek) has lived in Portales, New Mexico all of his life, and is a 1981 graduate of Portales High School. Shawn has a great interest in music theatre and is proud to be cast as a Flag Dancer is "Texas."

In high school he was active in Choir, Swing Choir, Band and Drama. As a sophomore in Eastern New Mexico University's annual musical production "Swanee" as well as other productions. He will be attending WTSU in the fall where he received the Bayles Voice Scholarship.

Performances begin at 8 p.m. From 6-8 p.m. there will be short shows on the grounds, a Cowboy Close-up with Dick Ratjen, rodeo rider and TV commentator, exhibits of the work of 12 artists and craftsmen, and barbecue dinner from 6:30-7:30. "THERE YOU ARE, GENTLEMEN!... ONE MORE I FOR AN INCREAGED DEFENSE BURGET!"

the abundant life Bob Wear

By Bob Wear IN THE MULTIFARIOUS experiences of life. reasonable and satisfactory living requires that we develop, maintain and nurture "a winning spirit."

THIS IS THE SPIRIT that enables us to do the important things, the things that should be done. We see the obstacles, we are realistic, but a winning spirit makes us strong. No, not invincible, but strong. We never give up, if the job needs to be done; we just continue to try.

"THE BLOCK of granite which is an obstacle in the pathway of the weak, becomes a stepping stone in the pathway of the strong."-Carlyle.

A WINNING SPIRIT must abide in us, as individuals, as families, as groups and as a community. We must never give up. This giving up would be loss by default, and is perhaps the most ignominious human loss. What is worse than losing, just because we stop trying?

WE MAY have reasonable prospects for victorious living, but if we do not have "a winning spirit" there is no hope for a satisfying life experience. We are like a stove with the fire gone out, or an engine with the power gone. THE DESIRE TO DO is the principal element in this spirit. Of course, we may fail in some things; we will fail some times, but there will never be any appreciable success without the desire to succeed. "The first essential of achievement is a desire to

THE GREATEST GOOD is realized, when this winning spirit is correctly and closely related to all of the essentials of a wholesome life. We must think that we are able to do what needs to be done, and then act on this feeling; with the highest degree of knowhow, and guided by the greatest wisdom.

"TO THINK we are able is almost to be so; to determine upon attainment is frequently attainment itself; earnest resolution has often seemed to have about it almost a savor of omnipotence."-S. Smiles.

PEOPLE AND COM-MUNITIES become insipid. when defeatism is accepted, when they stop trying, when the winning spirit no longer prevails. There are many persons and communities radiant with life today just because they refused to give

A Winning Spirit

WITHIN THE LIMITA-TIONS of good sense, and good judgment; we can do what needs to be done, and we can be what we should be. This is the realization which is so very essential to meaningful living.

WE MUST KEEP TRY-ING, even after we have tried and suffered a temporary setback. We are not defeated unless we stop trying. The desire to do, plus the resolution to continue trying to do is a winning spirit.

THIS SPIRIT is appropriate to our origin, to our purpose for being, and to our ultimate destiny.

Two Hereford Couples Tour Nashville

Thomas and Etoile Manning, Robert and Alice Thompson, all of Hereford, recently returned from a tour to Nashville, Tenn.

First stop on the tour was Tulsa, Okla., where they toured Oral Roberts University - famous for it's Prayer Tower, hexagonal shaped library, sports center, chapel with carillon tower, and new hospital facility.

From Tulsa the tour journeyed to Memphis, Tenn. There they visited famous Beale Street, "Graceland," home of Elvis Presley, the Memphis Botanical Gardens, Hospital, then on to view the Mississippi River.

In Nashville, they visited the Heritage, home of Andrew Jackson, the Country Music Hall of Fame, and attended the Grand Ole Opry, where they saw and heard such country stars as Jerry Clower, Hank Snow, Grandpa Jones, and many others.

Rain Boon to West, Central

COLLEGE STATION. (AP) - Western areas, the plains and parts of the Hill Country and Central Texas got most of the rain the past week, giving crop and livestock conditions a boost. But the rest of Texas remained dry, allowing crop harvests to proceed without interruption.

While the dry weather was a boon to harvest operations, it is putting pressure on water supplies in some locations. Also, lack of moisture is hampering the growth of peanuts and soybeans as well as late cotton and is restricting grass growth on pastures and ranges, said Dr. Daniel C. Pfannstiel, director of the Texas Agricultural Extension Service, Texas A&M University System.

Sorghum harvesting continues in North Central and Northeast Texas as well as in the Rolling Plains and West Central Texas.

Corn harvesting is about complete in the Rio Grande Valley but remains in full swing in Southwest Texas, the Coastal Bend and some central counties said Pfannstiel.

The cotton harvest is at the 75 percent mark in the valley and continues active in Coastal areas. Bolls are opening in South Central areas and in the Central Texas Blacklands.

Peanut harvesting continues in Southwest Texas with yields generally below normal. Some early fields are ready to harvest in Central Texas but much of the crop remains drought-stressed.

technique for vaccinating baby chicks through the eggshell before they hatch to prevent the poultry industry's most costly disease.

The Agriculture Department said veterinarians believe the technique - as a guard against Marek's disease - "can drastically cut the nation's poultry losses in the years ahead" if subsequent tests prove it ready for Research scientists say they have devised a laboratory commercial use. A vaccine for Marek's disease has been in use since 1971 and has been remarkably effective in saving losses to the poultry industry at large.

But Terry B. Kinney, acting administrator of the department's Agricultural Research Service, said a major problem has been that the procedure involves vaccinating chicks soon after they hatch and that some still get the disease.

That is because the chicks do not have enough time between vaccination and exposure to the disease to develop adequate immunity. Vaccinating them before they hatch solves the problem by giving the chicks more time to develop the needed im-

Results of the research on vaccinating chick embryos were released today by the agency.

"These research results demonstrate for the first time that resistance can be established in chick embryos through vaccination," Kinney said. "Use of the new technique will help the poultry industry save billions of dollars in the future.

"The savings will result from reduced deaths and condemnations of poultry (by federal inspectors), improved feed utilization and increased egg production."

Veterinary scientists developed the pre-hatch vaccination methods at the Agricultural Research Service's regional poultry laboratory at East Lansing, Jagdev M. Sharma, who developed the technique, said birds vaccinated three days before hatching had an 8-1 ratio of disease resistance, while all unvaccinated birds developed the disease.

"We have found vaccination of chick embryos very successful. It had no adverse effect on percent of hatch or rates of gain," Sharma said. "Whether our methods, under laboratory conditions, would be a practical alternative remains to be determined," he said. "It also remains to be seen whether this method of vaccination is feasible for other diseases."

Before vaccine was available, Marek's disease costs the poultry industry almost $300 million a year. In 1971, the first year of its use, benefits of the vaccine were estimated at $30 million.

By 1974, when the vaccine was used by the entire poultry industry for the first time, overall benefits climbed to an estimated $628 million and are expected to reach $2 billion by 1983, officials said. Vaccine research costs over a 10-year period, comparatively, totaled $32 million

The 68 low-income nations surveyed will need to import 35 million metric tons of cereals and other staples in 1981-82, the department's Economic Research Service said Monday. However, they can afford to buy only 22 million tons.

"This would leave 13 million tons of import requirements to be acquired via donation, purchased concessionally or forgone," the report said.

Unless the tonnage is forthcoming, per capita food consumption - already less than adequate nutritionally in many countries - will drop further, the report said.

A metric ton is about 2,205 pounds, or 36.7 bushels of wheat.

The 13 million tons in deficiency would include 12 million of cereals, 150,000 of vegetable oils and 410,000 tons of non-fat dry milk, all

Moreover, since some food aid is generally given on a priority basis to outside the group analyzed, officials said donor countries aid would have to exceed $3.4 billion to meet all of the lowincome countries' needs.

"Although detailed information on donor country budgets is not available until later in the year, it appears likely that donations will rise fractionally from $2.5 billion in 1980-81 to $2.6 billion in 1981-82," the report said. "Donations of this magnitude would fund of cereals."

Good Marketing Key to Profits

COLLEGE STATION --Although most Texas farmers are looking at a good crop year, the financial rewards they reap will depend heavily on their ability as astute farm marketers.

"Developing pricing strategies and evaluating marketing options are activities that distinguish 'farm marketers' from 'farm producers," says Dr. Ashley Lovell of Stephenville, area economist in management with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service, Texas A&M University System.

"Traditionally, many farm producers have sought to sell at the highest price during the marketing year, to sell everything at one time, and to market at about the same time each year. Selling based upon habit is unlikely to consistently result in maximum returns," warns Lovell.

Instead, farmers should take a look at these marketing options:

-Selling at harvest. -Storing and selling at a later date.

-Forward contracting for delivery at harvest or at a later date.

-Hedging in the futures -- Using the Commodity duction cost estimates are essential for the consistent success of the farm marketer. Although the estimates may be less difficult to establish than achieving accurate price expectations, they alone cannot ensure successful marketing decisions. "However, a sound approach for developing expectations of future commodity prices, when combined with accurate production cost estimates, will have a

State Ag Commissioner Reagan Brown appears to really be in his element when he's pressing the flesh with farmers and walking and talking with them in the

He was in rare form here Tuesday during an appearance at the annual Deaf Smith County Crops Tour.

"The main thing we've got to do is sell," said Brown. "The farmers represent just three percent of the population, and we've got to convince those other 97 percent that farmers have to make a profit, or the city streets will have grass growing in them in a few years down the Brown said it was his job to fight for the farmer, adding that he'll use "whatever means it takes to get the job done." Brown quipped that his wife had a more peaceful nature, "she wouldn't even kill a Medfly!"

The state ag chief blasted "Moonbeam" Brown for his handling of the Mediterranean Fruit Fly, saying he had warned the California governor and other officials eight months ago of the impending problem.

A large group of farmers and businessmen visited six farms on the annual tour. The barbecue dinner, courtesy of seed dealers and Frito Lay, was held at the Jimmy Christie farm, where special corn test plots were being

Kenneth and Jimmy

Christie welcomed the tour group to the barbecue. Jerry Walsh, Frito Lay, called off the names of farmers who won seed in drawings at the luncheon.

Other farms on the tour included those of Charles Schlabs, Miles Caudle, Thurman Atchley, Raymond Schlabs and John Smith. Several Texas Agricultural Extension Service officials discussed crop production and demonstrations.

Brown noted that he was on his way to Tuscon, Ariz., for a meeting tonight with southern agricultural commissioners. He said he is willing to negotiate with the U.S. Department of Agriculture in efforts to protect state borders against the medfly. The commissioner added, however, that he is prepared to take harsh measures to keep the pest out of Texas produce. A federal judge Monday said he would give Texas and the USDA time to negotiate a compromise on how large a quarantine zone should be imposed on California to stop the spread of the Medfly.

"We've had our tails between our legs too long," said Brown. "We've got to be tougher traders and negotiate for better prices on exports. People are starving all over the world, yet our farmers have never been turned loose to produce food, at a profit, to help solve the problem."

Brown was pleased about the prospects of gasohol with the passage of the tax exemption bill recently. "We finally got it passed, even with some members of the Legislature trying to reduce and seduce the bill, and some idiot from Houston trying to filibuster." The Texas ag chief also had something to say about the corn the government has shipped into the Texas High Plains from the midwest. "They've been talking about the high cost of transportation, but did you know it's costing $40,000 a day just to store that corn?'

The Commodity Credit Corporation purchased more than 200 million bushels of corn last year. More than 45 million bushels was shipped to the Texas High Plains for storage, where it now is being offered for sale on a bid basis. Southwest corn and sorghum producers have recommended to Ag Secretary John Block that this corn be restricted to export sales on-

Vitamin Tests May Benefit Humans

By Robert L. Haney TAES Science Writer

Vitamin C, in tests on chicks, was shown to affect the uptake and absorption of both iron and copper. This finding could have implications for human nutrition since Vitamin C is routinely taken in vitamin supplements by many people and sometimes taken in unusual amounts as a "cureall."

Timing, as well as amount of Vitamin C availability, were found to be critical by scientists in the Department of Biochemistry and Biophysics at Texas A&M University. "Vitamin C can either promote or inhibit the absorption of iron and copper, depending on when it's available in the digestive process," according to Dr. Edward D. Harris, who conducted the tests in trace mineral nutrition for the Texas Agricultural Experiment Sta-

"Copper is an essential element to all forms of life,' Harris says, "and our own research has vividly shown the requirement of copper for sound bones and blood vessel development in chicks.

"The human is clearly implicated in these findings; any factor that interferes with adequate intake of copper, either because of nutritional deprivation or nutritional antagonism, poses a health threat to animals.

"With copper, a slight deprivation in the growing chick is seen as a gradual impairment in walking (leg weakness) and stunted growth.

"Biochemically, we can evaluate the course of the copper deficiency by follow-ing the level of lysyl oxidase, a copper-dependent enzyme. The enzyme fails completely in severe copper deficiency. "An important discovery made in our laboratory concerns the effect of copper on restoring lysyl oxidase activity in a severely deficient chick. The mineral shows remarkable restorative ability at very low levels, literally trace amounts of copper.

This observation has provided us with a means of assessing effects of copper on physiological functions.

'It has long been known that L-ascorbic acid (Vitamin C) interferes with the absorption of copper. When the vitamin is given to an animal or human suffering from copper deficiency, the condition

By combining actual preharvest variable costs with projected harvest costs and share rent, a farmer can estimate the breakeven price necessary to cover variable cost and land rent. Montreal Expos catcher Gary Carter is playing in pain ... but it's the Cincinnati Reds who are hurting.

"Dr. (Larry) Coughlin, our team physician, just diagnosed the injury as a torn ligament in the right ankle," Carter said. "He said it doesn't require surgery. It's going to cause some pain but he expects that time will help it heal. In the meantime, I can continue to play on it."

And play he did. On Tues-day night Carter drove in six runs, four of them with a grand slam homer, to power the Expos over Cincinnati 9-1. "I'll take it," said Carter of his performance. "I'm happy that I'm still able to play.'

Carter suffered the injury in a game against the Houston Astros last week. Diagnosed then as a strained ligament, Carter aggravated it when he bailed out at the plate on an inside pitch from Reds starter Mike LaCoss. In other National League games Tuesday, the Chicago Cubs edged San Diego 4-3, Atlanta crushed Philadelphia 12-2, Los Angeles toppled Pittsburgh 9-7 in 11 innings, the New York Mets nipped Houston 2-1 and San Francisco stopped St. Louis 4-2.

Braves 12, Phillies 2 Catcher Bruce Benedict slammed his first major league grand slam and Chris Chambliss added a homer and five runs batted as Atlanta crushed Philadelphia and snapped a four-game Phillies winning streak.

With the bases loaded in the first, Chambliss doubled home two runs. After a walk loaded the bases again, Benedict unloaded his fourth homer of the year over the left field fence.

The Braves made it 7-0 in the second, stretched their lead to 10-0 in the fourth and made it 12-0 in the sixth when Chambliss, who extended his hitting streak to 11 games, slammed his seventh homer with a man on base.

The Phillies played without Manager Dallas Green, who was suspended indefinitely by National League President Chub Feeney after an altercation Monday night with umpire Steve Fields.

Dodgers 9, Pirates 7 Pinch-hitter Rick Monday singled home the winning run as Los Angeles outlasted Pitt-and knotting the score at 7-7. Dusty Baker had staked the Dodgers to a four-run lead in the top of the ninth with a runscoring double before the Pirates came storming back.

The game was halted briefly by a bench-clearing confrontation under the stands in the sixth inning. Both teams led from their dugouts into the corridors beneath Three Rivers Stadium after a sixth-inning incident involving starting pitcher Pascual Perez ignited the angry exchange.

Perez was warned by home plate umpire Dutch Rennert after he hit Bill Russell and Baker with pitches. Perez then exchanged comments with the Dodger bench as he left the mound at the end of the inning.

After he reached the Pittsburgh dugout, Perez led the Pirates into a hallway connecting the two dugouts.

Players from both teams yelled and screamed at each other, but photographers who witnessed the incident said no punches were thrown in the three-minute confrontation that was out of sight from the fans. The umpires followed the players under the stands and play resumed shortly after-

The only hit was a leadoff bloop double in the ninth by Robin Yount, a shot that fell just out of left fielder Kuntz's reach. DEAR DR. LAMB -

Recently I suffered through an attack of gout. My doctor prescribed Zyloprim. I also take a diuretic (Zaroxlyn)

for high blood pressure. I asked my doctor for a specific gout diet but he didn't seem to think I needed one.

According to what I have read, Zyloprim is allopurinol which is not supposed to cure an attack but only prevents gout. And I have read such bacteria are present. Beyond that, I think it is fairly safe if a woman or girl is careful not to use a tampon too long, particular-ly during the menses. She should sleep without one in place and be sure to have at least one change every day that diuretics can cause gout. I never had gout before I started taking diuretics. during menses. I have always appreciated gourmet foods and fine wines in moderation. Only cost kept me from experi-encing them on a regular basis. If I had to choose between high blood pressure ing most of the few plea-

DEAR READER -Zyloprim does prevent gout cancer and does not cure an acute attack. But your doctor is giving it to you so you can take diuretics for your high blood pressure and so you won't need to be so strict with your food or drinks. Many diuretics, including the one you take, can cause an acute attack of gout - particularly if you already have a high uric acid and are

You can probably help yourself if you will make an effort to lose gradually any excess fat you have. Weight loss must be gradual; if you lose weight too fast or cut out carbohydrates as on many fad diets, you will have an acute attack of gout. start a walking program. Walk a little twice a day.

Too much unaccustomed exercise will also cause an attack. Decrease your calories by eliminating fat so that you lose about a half pound of fat a week. I'd like to see you gradually increase your walking so you can walk about two miles twice a day. If you are cessful and lower your body fat, you may not need a diuretic for your blood pressure and too. That may enable you to live a little better after you have gotten your weight DEAR DR. LAMB - I am facing the problem of whether or not to let my 13year-old daughter use tampons. The use of napkins is very objectionable to her.

I have used tampons all my life (I am 42 now) and imagine that is why she made that decision. Can you help us come to some reasonable solution to our problem? I know opinions vary. If the risk of toxic shock is really great in your opinion then we will have to solve it in a manner not readily accepted by my daughter. It would make it easier for her having had an opinion from you. DEAR READER - The risk is small but if it happens to you that doesn't help.

Before, or if using tampons, a woman should see her doctor. Some staphylococcal bacteria that may be present in the vagina have been identified with the problem and treatment is indicated if

DEAR DR. LAMB - I. had a Pap test a month ago and was told I have atypical cells that should be watched closely. I have to have a repeat test every four months. This has frightened me as I don't understand it. My husband is afraid I have cancer. Could you explain this to me in plain language? My doctor uses complicated medical terms I don't understand. What is the difference between atypical cells and

DEAR READER - To start with, remember that all cancer cells originally come from cells that have changed from normal. A liver cancer is made up of abnormal liver cells that are distinctly different from normal liver cells. Cancer is literally the regeneration process gone haywire to form abnormal cells that grow in wild profusion. The catch is that not all abnormal cells are or will become

Your cervix sheds cells and replaces them regularly just as your skin does. Most of these cells will be perfectly normal. If you had actual cancer of the cervix, the Pap test would be characteristic of cancer cells and your doctor would have said, You have cancer of the cervix." He didn't, so you don't.

But some cells that are not cancer are still not normal. Because women who have 'se atypical cells are at geater risk of developing cancer of the cervix, they are asked to come back for more frequent examination way, if you sh cancer it can be detected early. It is still true that the earlier a cancer is diagnosed and treatment begun, the better a person's chances are for a cure.

About one out of four Americans develop cancer some time in their life. And a lot of them are cured today. Early detection has a lot to do with that. It is important to know the signs of danger of cancer, such as an unexplained change in bowel habits. Be sure and follow your coctor's advice for regular checkups of those atypical cells until he gives you a clean bill of health. DEAR DR. LAMB - I just read an article that said overweight people are healthier and live longer than thin people. This is hard to believe. If it is true, why do all doctors want people

HEALTH

Lawrence E. Lamb, M.D.

DEAR READER - What you have read or at least quoted is a half-truth. One study did show that people who were ideal in weight not too heavy and not too thin — tend to live longer in better health than people who were below average in who are overweight to go on weight. However, the life insurance statistics compiled over years tend to show that people who are thin live longer. The differences in the studies may reflect the difference between national statistics and a local population study that is not repre-sentative of the nation as a

Doctors ask people to lose weight because they have a medical finding such as high blood pressure, high glucose or a high cholesterol level which we have learned can be improved by eliminating excess body fat. It is an individual recommendation. We are less concerned about people of average weight who do not have such findings. The rule is to "individualize don't generalize" — do what is best for the individu-

Gum on pants

By Polly Fisher

DEAR POLLY — Help! My 5-year-old has managed to smear bubble gum on a new pair of jeans and a pair of denim overalls. Please advise how I can get it out without ruining the fabric. Of course, he'd never get gum on his old, worn-out pants! — MRS. I.J.C.

DEAR MRS. I.J.C. — No, they never do get it on their old clothes. But I guess that's how kids turn stiff, uncomfortable new clothes into comfy, broken-in old clothes! Anyway, here's what you should do about that gum. If there's a wad of gum on the surface of the fabric, harden it with an ice cube applied to the gum for a few minutes. Then you should be able to peel and scrape most of the gum off. Then remove any remaining stain with cleaning fluid or fabric spot remover, and launder as usual. — POLLY

DEAR POLLY - Maybe this will help those who are having trouble with sealing jams and jellies with paraffin. After pouring the wax onto the surface of the jelly, tip the glass gently from one side to the other so the paraffin climbs up the side of the glass about one-quarter inch all around. This will seal the wax to the glass and prevent weeping and leak-

DEAR POLLY - I have a cupboard full of cookbooks and can never remember which book has the recipe I'm looking for. To solve this problem, I made a card file divided into categories - breads, cakes, pies, main dishes, etc., and listed on each card the names of recipes I've tried and liked, the cookbook each came from with page number and ments about the recipe. - LINDA DEAR POLLY - To remov
