Highway bill to be vetoed

WASHINGTON (AP) - President Reagan, complaining of budgetbusting pork barrel spending, promises to veto a politically popular, $88 billion highway construction bill that allows states to raise the speed limit to 65 mph on rural interstate highways.

Sunday

Senate Minority Leader Bob Dole, R-Kan., says a veto would provide an important test of Reagan's strength in Congress as he seeks to rebound from the political damage of the Iran-Contra affair.

Reagan supports the speed limit change, but opposes the "favorite pork barrel projects" of individual legislators.

But Sen. Steve Symms, R-Idado, an ardent Reagan supporter, thinks

Symms said that's what he told White House Chief of Staff Howard H. Baker Jr. in a telephone call Friday, shortly after the Senate gave final congressional approval to the 65 mph speed limit on a 60-21 roll call

The Senate then tacked the speed limit provision onto the previously approved highway bill and sent it to the president. The bill provides $70 billion for highway construction and $18 billion for mass transit over the next five years.

"I think it's a mistake for the president to veto this bill, and he is very likely to be overridden by Congress because highways are so important to this country," Symms said in

On the whole, I don't think a program that's as non-partisan and important to the country as the highway program is a place for the president to exert his clout," he added. "I think he's getting some bad advice on this

Dole told reporters in Salem, N.H., Thursday night that "the veto will be a key test of the president's strength, or the president will be back in the

The Republican leader said he wasn't sure whether Reagan had enough support in Congress to sustain his veto. It requires two-thirds majorities of both the House and Senate to override a yeto, meaning that anything less in either chamber would be enough to sustain the president's action.

Dole acknowledged that the vote would be close, and Senate Majority Leader Robert C. Byrd, D-W.Va., seemed to agree. Asked if he had the votes to override a highway bill veto, Byrd replied: "I don't know."

Reagan himself left no doubt where he stands.

"Congress can't have it both ways," he said in a statement issued Friday before the Senate vote. "They can't talk about cutting unnecessary deficit spending and then vote in favor of bills that bust the budget."

Reagan added: "My vote will be to veto bills that spend unnecessary billions on projects the American people cannot afford. ... I am adamantly opposed to the excessive spending that is in the bill as it emerged from the conference com-

For a while, Dole had planned to use the 65 mph bill as a vehicle to try to strip $890 million in road and bridge "demonstration projects" from the highway bill, to overcome White House criticism of "favorite pork barrel projects" benefitting legislators' home districts.

Dole abandoned the idea, his aides said, because he lacked the votes to win. Dole also told his colleagues that he didn't want Congress to delay any longer the payment of billions of dollars in highway construction funds that states complained they should have gotten months ago.

AIDS virus or block infection, it cannot be considered a cure, officials said. Its effect is merely to inhibit reproduction of the virus and thus regulate, to some extent, the symptoms of the disease.

"People who take the drug are not going to have their immune deficiency go away," said Dr. Lawrence Kaplan, medical director of the AIDS clinic at San Francisco General Hospital, where AZT has been in use for some time.

"They are going to continue to have problems with the usual complications of AIDS, though it's possible that may occur at a slower rate," he said.

"It's a small step in the right direction. This drug seems to have some demonstrated benefit in the short term, in terms of survival. But we have no idea what kind of benefit it has in the long term." Dr. Samuel Broder of the National Cancer Institute, who led the research project to develop the drug, agreed with that characterization. What we have to do is to take the momentum from AZT and channel it into further research, so that we can learn how to do things more effectively and with less toxicity," Broder said. He predicted that developments in technology and the availability of other anti-AIDS drugs would produce a drop in the cost of AIDS drug

We recently received an anonymous letter from someone who thought we withheld the name of a local businessman in connection with a drug case. The writer concluded that the name would have been published "had it been a Mexican."

That's wrong, of course, but it made us realize that many readers are not familiar with our policy on reporting news from law enforcement agencies. Our general policy is to publish names in connection with felony crimes and not to publish names on misdemeanor offenses.

Although the writer did not mention a name, we are quite sure the case to which he referred was one where a misdemeanor charge was filed. We don't use names on misdemeanors because there would be so many of them, including every traffic citation. We go through the police report daily with an officer of the Hereford Police Department and check with the sheriff's department several times a week. We ask for information on all incidents which constitute a criminal offense.

On some occasions, persons request the police not to release their names to the newspaper. The police cannot legally make that decision on matters of public record.

One way that many people judge the fairness of a tax-or of a whole tax system-is to analyze the extent to which it taxes people according to their ability to pay.

In tax terminology, the words "regressive", "progressive" and "proportional" refer to different relations between taxpayers' income-their ability to pay-and the amount they pay in taxes.

A tax is termed regressive if it takes a bigger percentage of the income of lower-income taxpayers than of higher-income taxpayers.

The opposite relationship is called progressive. A progressive tax takes bigger percentages as taxpayers' income increases.

A proportional tax takes the same percentage of income from all tax-

Tutoring is conducted using the Laubach method. It is estimated that using this method it will take one year for a student to go through four consecutive levels. Tutoring is completed when the student attains an eighth grade reading level because it is believed that at this point they are capable of continuing to learn on their own.

The tutoring workshop will be taught, free of charge thanks to financial donations of the cosponsors, by counselors from Amarillo's Adult Literacy Council. Sessions will last a total of 10 hours split over a two-day period.

According to Pierson, 10 of 19 tutors trained last spring were former teachers but tutors can come from all professions. Applicants for the program are predominately Hispanic and tutors are predominately Anglo but the program is encouraged for all as either teachers or pupils. Much of Pierson's time in administering the program is spent matching times people can meet along with personalities and abilities.

Persons interested in the tutoring workshop or in learning to read should contact Pierson at the library, 364-1206, to enroll.

tion of trucking in Texas will benefit both consumers and shippers of goods. They argue that the competitive environment created by deregulation will lower shipping prices and improve the quality of service. .

In addition, supporters point out that House Bill 787 does not affect the Railroad Commission's authority to determine trucking routes or set safety controls. Therefore, service to small rural communities will not suffer, and trucking companies will still be required to follow the same safety guidelines as they do now.

House Bill 787 has been referred to a subcommittee of the Transportation Committee.

God forgot to tell Eve about curse of bridal showers make her attend.

BEAUMONT, Texas (AP) - God was around today, I'd break my was pretty mad at Eve after the bit longstanding policy of never having about the apple. So mad in fact that a shower and hold 72 in a row just to he kicked her and her old man out of the Garden of Eden and told them they were going to have to work for a living and that she was going to have hell having children.

But what he didn't tell her was even worse.

When he was outlining the curse of womanhood, he was probably saving the worst for last and then forgot about it. He didn't say one word about showers.

At least they send invitations in enough time for you to plan a trip out of town they can't just put an invitation on the bulletin board at work like they do for beer busts and free kit-

But they're not really invitations. They're more like subpoenas. If you don't go, you've got to have a solid excuse like a broken back or no one will speak to you the following Monday at work.

They consult Emily Post and color coordinate everything and make things so proper you feel like you're in Sunday school. Every time I think about it, I get mad at Eve, too.

First of all, you have to get all dressed up on your day off even though everybody there has seen you in jeans before. There's nothing but punch in the punch, and there's nothing to eat but nuts and those little mints that taste like flavored air. Maybe chips and dip, but nothing substantial like nachos or pizza.

Then you've got to sit around in a circle that reminds you of playing "gossip" in second grade.

As the shower honoree opens the 50-bezillionth present, careful to save all the bows and not tear the paper and ribbon, you've still got to "ooh" and "ah" like it's the first time in your life you've ever seen a waffle

And do you know why they don't tear the ribbons at bridal showers? The myth goes that for every ribbon you tear, that's one baby you're going to have. Well, anyone who would rely on that for birth control will need all those untorn ribbons to tie their kids up with. But wait! Before the gift-opening begins, they designate someone to write down who gave what for the sake of thank-you notes. They generally pick someone who writes very slowly, and even more so at the shower because she's trying to make it pretty since the shower honoree is going to save the list forever and ever as a lasting reminder of this magic day.

And then there's the thank-you notes themselves. They can't just say "Thank you;" they've got to write the obligatory: Dear (blank): Thank you for the lovely (blank). I know I will get a lot of use out of it, and it will go so well with my (kitchen, bathroom, bedroom circle one) and the three others I got just like it. Again, thank you for your thoughtfulness. Love, (blank).

When I stop and think of how many single people I know who may get married and how many married women I know who may have children and equate that with the staggering number of mints that taste like flavored air, untorn bows and squeals over waffle irons that lurk in my future, I get real depress-

I dilln't even know Eve. But if she

Hospital food no 'tasteless' joke

WICHITA FALLS, Texas (AP) Institutional cooking, the cuisine offered by hospitals, schools and military installations, has often been the subject of "tasteless" jokes. It's as if people thought dishes prepared in these settings automatically had to be bad.

Dietitians who engineer these meals are some of the most creative and innovative cooks around. Not only do they deal with the everyday challenge of feeding hundreds of people while maintaining a cost-efficient operation, clinical dietitians must gear meals to any number of dietary specifications.

Fifty percent of our job is creating food that tastes good," said Judy Tolbert, chief clinical dietian for Wichita General Hospital. "But the other half of our responsibility is making the food look appealing.

Many patients need a strong motivation to eat - when you're ill, sometimes nothing tastes good. We make as much as possible of the food we serve from scratch, including cakes, piecs and breads. Attention to detail like that makes more difference to people than you might think.

Clara Smith, chief dietian for Bethania Regional Health Care Center, explained that dietary restraints can make recipe formulation quite a challenge.

We have patients on low-sodium, no-sodium, low-cholesterol, highcarbohydrate and sugar-restricted diets, to mention a few," she said. We try to make the food our patients recognize and enjoy with these requirements in mind, while still keeping them attractive and tasty. It's not easy, but well worth the effort when we know it's helping people stay strong and get well.

Open meetings

Local government boards have long thumbed their noses at the public interest by finding ways to technically comply with the Texas Open Meetings Act law while violating its spirit. Attempts to make substantial changes in the law have failed during the past five legislative sessions.

Once more this important issue is before the Legislature. Sen. Kent Caperton, D-Bryan, and Rep. Juan Hinojosa, D-McAllen, have introduced the legislation. It calls for tape recordings or certified minutes to be made of all closed-door meetings. Participation in an illegal closed meeting would become a punishable offense. And, it would specifically allow TV cameras in public meetings.

The Texas Open Meetings Act forbids closed-door sessions of public bodies except for discussion of litigation, personal matters and property acquisition. Too often these broad guidelines are used to close a session and to limit the information available to the public on important issues. Furthermore, a violation of the law is difficult to prosecute since a motive must be established to prove "willful" violation.

Other loopholes in the current law include abuse of "emergency meeting" provision, which allows a meeting to convene only two hours after it is announced, and closed sessions held with less than a quorum. In both cases, issues can be discussed without providing the public with a clear account of the business conducted. The proposed legislation would improve compliance by making the language of the law more specific.

The weakest part of the legislation is the section allowing "certified minutes," instead of tape recordings of all closed sessions. Minutes, unlike recordings, may be incomplete or inaccurate through either carelessness or design.

Overall, though, the Caperton-Hinojosa bill promotes the public interest. It would stop public bodies from using hair-splitting legal interpretations to justify violations of the spirit of the law. Requiring better record keeping in closed sessions would give the courts access to enough evidence to make informed decisions in open-meetings lawsuits. It would encourage legitimate lawsuits and discourage frivolous

In an open society, the public's business is supposed to be conducted in the open. Information is essential to the life and vitality of a democracy. It is time for lawmakers to fulfill their obligations to help protect the public's right to know how its business is bieng conducted.

Oil warning

Following through on his repeated calls for action to safeguard the domestic oil industry -and the nation's security" Sen. Lloyd Bentson introduced a bill which would require action by the president when oil imports reach 50 percent of U.S. demand.

"By the end of 1986," Bentsen pointed out, "oil imports were flooding into the U.S. at 6.3 million barrels a day, compared with 3.9 barrels a day in 1985. As a result, our dependency on foreign oil last year rose to nearly 40 percent, far above the 27 percent level in

If the United States' dependence on foreign oil continues to grow unchecked, it's entirely too conceivable that Americans could once again find themselves experiencing the severe dislocations attendant upon the oil shocks of the 1970s.

With American motorists and householders still revelling in the luxury of relatively low gasoline and heating oil prices, it's difficult to enlist massive public support for efforts to shore up the domestic oil industry but there is a clear, urgent need for such efforts.

Wright's tax plan

House Speaker Jim Wright continues to push for a tax increase "to help reduce the federal budget deficit."

The Fort Worth Democrat is pushing for a transfer tax on all stock market transactions.

That is not all Wright wants. He would revoke part of the tax reform law enacted last year by freezing the top tax rate at 38.5 percent instead of allowing it to drop to 28 percent next Jan. 1, as scheduled under law.

If Wright's new tax and higher tax rates were absolutely dedicated to cutting the deficit, he might gain public support. By tightening the Democrats' identification with higher taxes and more spending, he is hurting the party's already battered image.

The Penultimate Word

NEW FASHION GRANNY

A restaurant in Oklahoma has a sign that says "Pies like mother made before she learned how to play bridge". They don't make mothers and grandmothers like they used to. Maybe that isn't as bad as it sounds. Just because they are different does not automatically mean they are not as good. Grannys aren't the same little Mother Hubbards of our youth, but some of them are better.

I think we need a new word for grandmothers. Granny sounds old and old fashioned. When I became a grandfather I had a struggle with the name. I still have a little twinge when I am called Grandpaw. Why can't they call me some name that does not sound so old? My brother declared that his grandchildren would call him Grandpa Sir. Of course, that was before he had any grandchildren. I talked one of his into calling him Pee Paw.

Last week we buried one of the new style grannies. Her name was Clara Gillentine. Clara broke all the molds. She started breaking molds before she was a granny, and never stopped. She was a dynamo. She saw needs and met them with a vengenance. She was largely responsible for many of the good things in our town. I tried to remember the first time I met Clara. I don't think I met her. I think she happened to me. She burst onto my life one day, and, before I knew what hit, she had me involved in her projects of helping people. I never knew her when she was not trying to help somebody or somebodies. I would love to have been in heaven when she checked in. I guarantee things began to get organized right then and there. They did not meet her, she happened to them.

Clara became the ultimate new style granny. At a private time with her family the night before her funeral the grandchildren shared a picture of adventure and fun. There was not an old fogey bone in her body. She did not fit the mold, but, boy, did she create a great new one. She took them on excursions through life and taught them how to live it to the fullest. She thought they were wonderful, and made sure she told them so. They were loved and accepted, and they knew it. That is grandmothering to the ultimate degree.

On the way to her funeral I saw one of Clara's best friends driving to the service. Her friend is another one who breaks the mold. They were friends because they both loved life. Here was a sweet little lady driving her car to the funeral of her friend. The car had a bumper sticker on the back advertising Gilley's in Pasadena, Texas. I'll bet they both had been there.

Kennedy said, "is the only man in our economy who buys everything he sells at wholesale, and pays the freight both ways."

If life was tough for farmers in Kennedy's day, it is surely much worse now. Tens of thousands have gone bankrupt in recent years and many more are on the verge. Their anguish and despair are real and command our attention.

But as I have often noted, there has never been a social or economic problem in our country so severe or tragic that liberals in Congress couldn't make it worse. in essence cutting the future of this state.

"The farmer," President John F. troduced by Rep. Richard Gephardt D-Mo., and Sen. Tom Harkin D-Ia.

Prudence deters me from speculating about the motives of the authors of this legislation, but it is clear they were not driven by an urge to foster sound economic policy.

It is no great secret why farmers are in trouble. There are simply too many farmers producing too much food for which there is no market either in this country or abroad. Last year, our government spent about $26 billion buying up surplus farm produce and still thousands of farmers went under. It is clear to everyone, including farmers, that our government's ham-handed efforts to relieve the plight is serving whole simultaneously bankrupting the nation's treasury.

As you might guess, the "solution" proposed by Gephardt and Harkin is to vastly expand the government's role in agriculture. They envision a "supply management's system. Farmers would vote whether to join the program. If a majority in any particular commodity voted yes, every farmer producing that commodity would have to join. Then the government would step in, proclaim a national marketing quota and divy up acreage among farmers, telling each one how much he could pro-

The goal, of course, is to drive up farm incomes by raising food prices. They don't call it a national food tax, but that is what it would be. According to the U.S. Department of Agriculture, by 1991 this program would raise the price of dairy products by 30 percent and red meat by 25 percent. From 1987 through 1991, consumers would be socked with a $50 billion increase in food prices.

To rub salt in the wound, the USDA says also that this program would instantly double existing crop support levels, which are already in the stratosphere, and hike them 10 percent more by 1990.

Government management of agriculture is not a new concept. The Soviet Union has been doing it for years, which is why the soviets experience regular shortages of food. Both shortages and surpluses present problems, but given a choice I will take the latter any day.

There is only one rational way out of our predicament. We must ease government out of the subsidy business and assist our farmers through the transition. One thing we clearly do not need is a national food

Bootleg Philosopher

Editor's note: The Bootleg Philosopher on his Johnsongrass farm on Tierra Blanca Creek looks at the college football scandal this

Dear editor:

Timing is said to be the key to success in acting, after-dinner speaking, slam-dunking, announcing for President, playing the stock market, planting in the moon, etc.

Hence there was bad timing when college recruiting scandals came right in the middle of the Iran-Contra scandal. For best results, you need one scandal at at time.

Even so, in some areas the college scandal has risen above the other scandal on front pages.

As sports followers know, shock waves went through the athletic departments of major colleges across the country when the NCAA thre the boo, at S.M.U. in Dallas for buying football players. As punishment, the school can't field a team this fall and students will have little to do on fall afternoons.

The shock waves were so strong that I have a notion star football players at nearly every major college in the country were told to keep their new cars out of sight for a while.

You see, paying college football players is not against the rule. Paying them too much is. They can get free room, board, tuition and laundry money, which these days is a large sum, but anything beyond that is against the rule, and is especially against the rule if you get caught.

Abolishing football for a year at S.M.U. is calculated to send a strong message to coaches and athletic boosters around the country, and the message is: we've got to be a lot more careful about how we pay our football players.

Yours faithfully,

Letters to the editor

Dear editor:

The lack of understanding of the purpose and function of Texas Conference of Churches by Charles Threewit is regrettable. A state wide news release was in effect immediately upon the close of the Texas Conference of Churches Assembly on February 18, concerning the Nuclear Waste disposal plans for Deaf Smith County. This item was presented along with 8 other resolutions by the Commission on Church and Society, which is comparable to the Christian Life Commission of the Southern Baptist Church. Both commissions deal with moral and ecological issues - affecting our world.

All resolutions were presented to the Board of Directors, which is composed of 46 Judicatory Heads plus 6 laypersons 2 of whom are women, on December 8. I serve on this distinguished board and was elected to serve another two year term. These items were carefully considered, discussed, and debated. The Nuclear dump site in the Panhandle was opposed strongly by Rt. Rev. Sam Hulsey, Bishop of the Episcopal diocese of Northwest Texas.

Other functions of the Texas Conference of Churches include the Commission on Christian Unity which fosters spiritual unity through two events, the Week of Prayer for Christian Unity and Faith and Order Conferences.

Another arm of Texan Conference of Churches is Impact a legislative group who visit the Capitol regularly, monitor committee meetings, and converse with the Governor and Congressmen about legislative matters.

For the intregal function of Texas Conference of Churches and the unity among Christians to combat evil in this state and community - To God be the Glory!

Draper Club hears economics program

Beverly Harder, county extension agent, gave a program on financial economics to members of Draper Extension Homemakers Club when they met recently in the home of Vickie Higgins.

Members and visitors were given packets containing information on what records to keep in the home and which to keep in the safety deposit box. A quiz on 'how organized are you?' was also given.

Before the conclusion of her program, Harder distributed forms on keeping track of insurance papers, business interests, credit cards, savings and checking accounts, real estate, investments, stocks and property papers. A group discussion followed.

After the lunch, members answered roll call with "the most foolish purchase I have made." They were reminded and encouraged to attend the District I Spring meeting April 2 in Stratford. Deaf Smith County won the traveling award in 1985 and 1986 and plans on keeping it this year.

Sherrie Blackwell was elected as Draper's nominee as delegate for the district meeting. Elections will take place at the council meeting Monday. Members were encouraged to bring educational exhibits to the Stratford meeting.

The group was informed that there will be a covered dish luncheon at noon Monday preceding the council meeting at which time Sue Farris, district director, will speak.

Members decided to attend the parliamentary training on March 30 at 1:30 p.m. in the Deaf Smith County Library Heritage Room.

Draper Extension Homemaker Club challenges all extension clubs to have a large attendance at the Stratford meeting.

Those in attendance were Higgins, Johnnie Messer, Tonie Vaughn, Brenda Pagett, Carmen Rickman and Sherri Blackwell. Guests were Pam Tingle, Janie Euler and harder.

All visitors are welcome to attend meetings. For more information call Beverly Harder at 364-3573.

While the public is becoming more aware of the disastrous consequences of alcohol abuse, the special dangers it poses to women often are underestimated.

Following is a summary of recent research on women and alcohol:

The Physical Effects

It's generally known that if a man and woman were measured against on another beer for beer, he undoubedly would "drink her under the

That's because her liver can't break down and metabolize the alcohol as fast since she's probably smaller than her male opponent. And because she has more body fat-and consequently less water per unit volume-than a man, alcohol doesn't diffuse as quickly into the fat cells and remains in the bloodstream longer.

But research indicates that a woman who tries to hold her own when drinking with a man may suffer more consequences than a severe hangover. Studies have found that women show signs of cirrhosis of the liver by consuming only one-half to one-third as much alcohol as men. Drinking During Pregnancy

Research for many years has indicated that drinking during pregnancy is unsafe to the unborn

Heavy alcohol consumption in particular is known to cause Fetal Alcohol Syndrome resulting in newborns with smaller heads, facial irregularities, joint and limb abnormalities, heart defects, mental retardation and severe behavioral pro-

But, mounting evidence indicates that even light to moderate alcohol consumption during pregnancy can be hazardous to the fetus.

Research conducted by Emory University on 155 full-term, threeday-old infants found symptoms of Neonatal Withdrawal Syndrome among the 52 newborns whose mothers consumed only two drinks each week during their pregnancies. Those side effects included tension, restlessness, stomach upset and inability to be comforted.

Another study at the University of Washington which measured the weight, length and head size of 450 babies, found the smallest measurements among infants born to women who reported having one to two drinks per day during their pregnancies.

Women and Addiction

Alcoholics Anonymous reported in 1970 that approximately one in six members was female. Within 10 years, that figure swelled to one in three.

At first glance those statistics seem to show that more women are becoming alcoholic. (Estimates indicate that as many as one-half on the nation's 14 million alcoholics are women.)

But treatment experts speculate that AA's figures probably are more reflective of two major trends. First, it's becoming more acceptable for women to come out of the closet with their drinking, and second, since half of all women work, they have more difficulty concealing their problem than 15 years ago when many women were housewives.

Research also indicates that, in comparison to male alcoholics, women who drink too much:

-Experience initial problems with alcohol an average of eight years later-age 34 for women versus 26 for Research also reveals that women wait longer to seek help and, consequently, are sicker by the time they husbands stays with an addicted enter treatment.

Drug and alcohol abuse experts say the unbalanced representation of women in treatment is due to the fact that while 50 percent of women work, the other half still remain home where it's easier to conceal a drink-

Another major factor is the tremendous stigma attached to the woman alcoholic which prevents her--and her family-from admitting she has a problem.

But as indicated by the rising number of female AA members. more women are beginning to seek help for alcoholism. That trend is likely to continue as the public is more educated about the special threats alcohol poses to women.

An AP Sports Analysis By DENNE H. FREEMAN

AP Sports Writer FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) You killed us, Killer.

Your foot-stomping, coatthrowing, referee-baiting bench escapades were entertaining. Your quip-filled quotes made reporters look good with colorful The precisely coached teams you fielded made it a pleasure to attend a collegiate basketball game. You had over 700 victories in 38 years of coaching the game at all levels and your expertise was without question.

With apologies to Bob Hope, thanks for the memories, Jim Killingsworth. Texas Christian Athletic Director Frank Windegger said it best when Killingsworth retired this week for the peace and quiet of Starr Valley Ranch on the Idaho-Wyoming border: "I'd like to find another Killer, but there aren't any more out there. Intercollegiate athletics needs more Killingsworths." Indeed, Killingsworth insisted that his kids attend class and get their degrees.

How's that for revolutionary thinking? Killingsworth assumed that most of his players weren't going to make an NBA team and might need a job someday.

He was as proud of Carven Holcombe graduating on time as he was his being named the Southwest Conference Player of the Year.

At his retirement day press conference, the Killer needled senior Larry Richard about his grades, saying, "Larry get with it or you're going to end up hot topping the road to my cabin in Idaho."

Killingsworth had winning programs everywhere he went except Oklahoma State. He started coaching in Oklahoma high schools but built his reputation with some great teams at Cerritos (California) Junior College.

At Idaho State, he fielded teams that terrorized the Big Sky Con-ference and knocked off UCLA in the Things didn't mesh for Killer when he retured to Oklahoma. Two losing seasons had the natives grumbling at Oklahoma State. Windegger was smart enough to discover the Killer wasn't married to the Cowpokes.

"I just had a gut hunch so I asked him to consider coming to TCU," Windegger said. "He did and turned around a program that had won only

TCU. This year's team was his pride and joy, winning the SWC title by four games but losing out to Notre Dame in the second round of the NCAA by a point on a questionable call by the referees. Killingsworth's retirement was something of a surprise except to in-

Ryan enters 1987 season painless

By MICHAEL A. LUTZ AP Sports Writer

KISSIMEE, Fla. (AP) - Nolan Ryan knows the time is near when he'll be forced to end what is certain to be a Hall of Fame career.

Ryan is 40 years old and still throwing 95 mph fast balls and he knows it can't last too much longer even under optimum conditions.

But don't push him into a rocking chair just yet.

"I'm in a good situation," the major league's all-time strikeout and no-hit leader said. "My family enjoys the sport, I live at home.

'We're enjoying my career so I don't have any emergency to retire. I don't see why I can't pitch two or three more years as long as I feel good and don't have any more in-

After 19 years of throwing sizzling fast balls, Ryan's career was in jeopardy last season when he battled a painful elbow in spring training and pitched with pain throughout the

But it didn't destroy Ryan's effectiveness in the Astros' National League Western Division title drive. After struggling to a 3-6 start, Ryan posted a 9-2 record in his final 18 starts of the season, including a 6-0, 12-strikeout victory over San Francisco Sept. 24 that clinched a tie for the title. After the season, Ryan returned to his cattle ranch in hometown Alvin, near Houston, to rest his aching elbow. He decided against surgery mound for a year. Now he's back without pain and determined to help the Astros take the next step beyond a division that could have kept him off the Pitching for Houston in a World Series is one of the few goals Ryan has yet to achieve

"It was disappointing for us to get so close last year and not win it," Ryan said. "We've done that twice now since I've been here. I'd hate to think we got that far again this year and not get to the World Series.

Houston's chances of breaking tradition and repeating as Western Division champions may rest on average since a 9.96 average in 1978

Astros Manager Hal Lanier lists finding a left-handed relief pitcher as the team's No. 1 priority in spring training, But Ryan's status is high on Lanier's list of concerns.

We need another good performance from Nolan," Lanier said. "If he can pitch this season without pain, it will definitely help our cause."

Ryan's first spring outing was

"I'd almost forgotten what it was like to pitch without pain," Ryan said. "I hope it remains that way."

He has resisted the temptation of developing other pitches to take the pressure off his pitching arm. He's experimented with a sinker pitch this spring, but he'll finish his career as a fastball pitcher.

"I still throw about 70 percent fastballs, and that's what I've thrown throughout my career," Ryan said. "To me, throwing breaking balls is harder on your arm than fastballs.

Ryan averaged 9.8 strikeouts per nine innings in 1986, his highest when he pitched for the California Angels.

Ryan's 1986 late season surge showed no signs of a pitcher ready for retirement.

"If I got to the point where I wasn't effective and wasn't contributing to the ball club, I'd know it was time to quit," Ryan said. "But as long as I'm physically able and still enjoying the game, I want to keep pitching.' The years have not left Ryan without memories, like playing on the 1969 "Miracle" New York Mets and becoming the first pitcher to break Walter Johnson's career strikeout record in 1983.

"I wanted to be the first to break the strikeout record because I knew there would be several others with a chance at it," Ryan said.

Rvan will start his 20th season in the major leagues with 4,277 career strikeouts. Philadelphia's Steve Carlton is second with 4,040.

Pitching for the 1969 Mets will hold a special place in Ryan's memory.

'That what you career consists of, the good times," Ryan said. "That's what you look back and think of."

Witt called a young Nolan Ryan

By MICHAEL A. LUTZ AP Sports Writer

PORT CHARLOTTE, Fla. (AP) -Texas pitching coach Tom House compares Ranger starter Bobby Witt to a young Nolan Ryan, and Witt already is challenging some of Rvan's accomplishments.

Witt recovered from a slow beginning as a rookie starter in the major leagues last season with an 11-9 record that included seven straight victories to finish the season.

He also walked 143 batters, the most since Ryan had 148 walks in 1978. Witt also set an American League record with 22 wild pitches. "Those aren't the kind of records I want to be setting," Witt said. But he showed enough to convince House that the Ranger's young starter has the third-best pitching arm he's seen in 20 years of observing big-league talent. "I saw the young Nolan Ryan and I've seen Roger Clemens," House balls for the Houston Astros, and Clemens, the 1986 American League Cy Young award winner and Most Valuable Player, rank No. 1 and 2 on House's list. Mets pitcher Dwight Gooden is fourth.

Like Ryan early in his career, Witt had control problems last season, but House anticipates a turnaround.

"Bobby's got the body, the arm speed, the mastery of mechanics," House said. "All he needs to do is figure out what his body is doing and the arm will take him as far as he wants to go.

Witt doesn't feel intimidated by being placed in such elite company.

It's nice to hear things like that said about you, but you really have to block those things out of your mind," Witt said. "I don't look at comparisons like 'maybe he can be as good as this guy in a few years.' If you start thinking about those things. that's when the concentration goes.'

Witt pitched just 11 minor-league games last season before the youthoriented Rangers called the promising rookie to the big leagues. He and 6.67 earned run average and uncorking 15 wild pitches. Then he turned it around with a mechanical and mental adjustment. The mental adjustment of being called up to the big leagues your first year and going 49 kind of took its toll," Witt said. "Then I won a couple of games and got some confidence

Witt finished the season with a 5.78 earned run average and 174 strikeouts, second among American League rookie pitchers.

House has analyzed Witt's pitching motion and offered some alter-

> Witt jumped so eagerly into House's off-season weight-lifting program that he developed tendonitis in his pitching arm.

"He got overloaded in the bigmuscle groups," House said. "But we're confident he'll be ready for the regular season.'

Witt, throwing in the upper 80-mph range, threw 36 pitches Monday against the Pirates, and 18 were balls. Of 26 pitches he threw against the Royals on Wednesday, 16 were

Reynolds: flare for dramatic

By MICHAEL A. LUTZ AP Sports Writer

KISSIMMEE, Fla. (AP) Houston shortstop Craig Reynolds showed a flare for the dramatic last season, collecting four of his eight game-winning hits in the Astros' final at-bat.

Reynolds' pinch-hit grand slam homer on April 12 was the first by an Astro in 11 years.

It was Reynolds' two-out homer in the bottom of the ninth on July 19 that beat the New York Mets 5-4 and put the Astros in first place for the rest of the season in the National League's Western Division.

Reynolds has been a stabilizing force in the three seasons since. fellow shortstop Dickie Thon's career was almost ended after a beaning incident.

Last season Reynolds also filled in at third base, first base, right field and even pitched an inning of relief against the New York Mets. Yet Reynolds started spring training this season battling for a job.

Reynolds platooned with Thon last season but Manager Hal Lanier feels an every day shortstop will provide a smoother double play combination.

Reduce total fats in diet

Many people are trying to cut back on saturated fat because of its association with elevated blood cholesterol levels and increased risk of heart disease

"What people often don't understand is that to decrease their intake of cholesterol from saturated fats. they must change their overall eating habits to reduce total fat," maintains Mary Kinney Sweeten, a Texas A&M University Agricultural Extension Service nutritionist.

"It's not simple to cut out saturated fats alone since fats in foods are mixtures of saturated and unsaturated fats," she explains.

In general, foods containing saturated fats are solid at room temperature, says Sweeten. They include animal products such as poultry, fish, meat, eggs and some

There are two types of unsaturated

Mono-unsaturated fats do not seem to have any effect oncholesterol levels, and polyunsaturated fats seem to lower blood cholesterol. Unsaturated fats are usually from plant sources and are liquid at room temperature.

"But even a polyunsaturated oil, such as a standard vegetable oil, will contain 40 percent polyunsaturated fat and 13 percent saturated fat," she remarks.

"Palm oil and coconut oil are also important exceptions to note," says the nutritionist. "Both these vegetable oils, which are used extensively in processed foods and commercial baked goods, are over 80 percent saturated fat.'

Sweeten says it could be very difficult for many people to eat only foods that are low in saturated fats.

"Most people want and need to include some foods from animal sources in their diets, because they are a major source of protein. Trimming visible fat, eating lean cuts of meat and removing the skin from poultry will help reduce saturated fats from these protein foods," she

The nutritionist advises building a diet lower in total fat around the recommended two servings daily of protein foods and rounding it out with fruits, vegetables, breads and cereals, and lot-fat dairy products.

"Simply watching your intake of fried foods and the fats you're getting from processed foods will also help reduce both saturated and unsaturated fats in your diet," adds Sweeten.

Five hundred home day care providers participated in the study conducted by the Texas A&M University Agricultural Extension Service (TAEX) home economics program and funded in part by the Texas Department of Human Services (TDHS) and Corporate Child Development Fund for Texas.

"Concern over the quality of child care is a statewide issue that prompted development of an Extension program to reach these family day care providers with education and training," said Diane Welch, Extension family life specialist and project coordinator.

"Reaching family day care workers is difficult, since they work all day and have family responsibilities in the evening. Time constraints may prevent some providers from attending classes even when they are offered locally," she added.

The TAEX program included a manual and a set of videotapes for home study about child care, including health and safety, child development and guidance, nutrition and business management.

The materials were distributed by Extension home economists in cooperation with local TDHS staff in 28 counties. Most of those participating were operators of TDHS registered family day homes.

entered the Hereford School system in the eighth grade, he knew of the rigid entrance standards required by the selective university. He knew that only 1,755 of 7,000 applicants would comprise the freshman class, and, of those accepted, only threefour percent of Notre Dame students would come from the entire Southwestern United States.

Yet, despite the high standards, Craig never felt disheartened or discouraged. "All throughout the years, my family and friends have been supportive of my dream to attend Notre Dame. They are all happy and proud for me now that I've been accepted," he continued.

Leadership qualities are evident in Craig as he has been active in various school and church ventures. A member of St. Anthony's Catholic Church, he is a member of the Catholic Youth Organization. He is vice-president of both the Key Club and HHS Band, and serves as field commander of the HHS Marching Band. He is a member of the National Honor Society and the Fellowship of Christian Athletes.

An avid baseball fan who has collected more than 17,000 baseball cards throughout the years, Craig is an accomplished golfer. "I may play golf at Notre Dame and I plan to check out the intramural sports. I also hope to be a member of Notre Dame's marching; and concert bands since it would be great fun to go to the Fighting Irish football games!" said the enthusiastic youth.

"I felt very fortunate to find out this soon of my acceptance into Notre Dame," Craig continued: "The application said that applicants would receive a decision letter during the period of March 1 to April 10. I received my letter of acceptance,

When asked about his choice of a school, Craig replied, "I've wanted to attend the University of Notre Dame since I was six-years-old because it is the most revered Catholic school around. If I had not been accepted, my second choice was to attend Texas A&M

He was not even detered from his dream when he learned of the hefty $12,900 per year cost to each student attending Notre Dame. "I don't have any financial aid garnered yet, but I hope to remedy that situation soon," he admitted. "A University of Notre Dame alumnae club, whose members live in West Texas and Eastern New Mexico, contacted me after they learned of my acceptance. I plan to meet with them and discuss various scholarship opportunities." Since he has yet to visit the campus of Notre Dame, Craig hopes to tour it before his admission in late August. The university's 1,250 acres, with twin lakes, extensive wooded areas and tree-lined quadrangles, are located on the northern limits of South Bend, Ind., some 90 miles east of Chicago. Once an all-male university, current enrollment stands at 71 percent male, 29 percent female. "The students must be dedicated Aiming high in his career goals, Craig tentatively plans to major in international business or some form of engineering. "I know it will be hard, but it will help that Notre Dame's 9,000 'students enjoy a pupil/teacher ratio of 11 to one.

"The very essence of Notre Dame is a tradition, a fire in the vision and a flame in the hearts and minds of those who have and you will join us in our common pursuit of excellence." The university's catalog continues to point out that its students are. "growing and preparing to create their own place in this complex

Hopefully, the next banner Craig will see at his home will simply say, WELCOME HOME NOTRE DAME GRADUATE.

Extension Homemaker News

By BEVERLY HARDER County Extension Agent SPRING PREPARATION FOR SUMMER COOLING

Controlling cooling costs this summer really means controlling the effects of sunshine on your home.

How much the sun heats your house depends on your home's shape, orientation, insulation, color, materials, landscaping, and most important, the shade it receives.

Trees, shrubs, trellises with climbing vines and landscaping cut cooling costs by keeping the sun's heat off your walls, windows and roof. Thus, you might consider planting more trees and shrubs as an energysaving investment as well as a way to beautify your yard.

Building elements, such as overhangs, awnings, shutters, screens, reflective films, drapes, blinds and shades will also help reduce cooling costs.

How much of an impact these devices have depends on their snape and form, location near a window, color and the reflectivity of the materials used. A "shading coefficient" is used to compare different shading options. It is a ratio of the total solar heat gain through a shading device or window combination compared with the total solar heat gain through a singleglazed, unshaded window.

More than 1.5 million people annually visit the 86th- and 102nd-floor observatories of the Empire State

A single-glazed, unshaded window has the highest value of 1. The lower the ratio, the more effective the shading device.

The most effective shading devices are outside louvers, with a ratio of .10-.15 and outside overhangs or louvered shade screens at .25. Properly angled, long roof overhangs can reduce indoor temperatures from 8-15 degrees and lighten the air conditioning load by 25 percent.

Trees that cast a shadow across walls and roof can provide shading coefficients from .20-.70, depending on density and position.

Exterior shading devices tend to be more effective than interior devices. For example, inside dark shades or blinds have a shading coefficient of .60-.80.

So before you start your air conditioner, think about some ways to add shade to your home and lot and begin Spring preparation for Summer cool-

Wellness Weekend activities planned

If you've been meaning to start a new exercise program, improve your diet or if you just need a change of pace, West Texas State University has the answer for you.

On Friday and Saturday, March 27 and 28, the third annual Weekend With Wellness gets underway in Henson Activities Center on the WTSU

The four general sessions will feature such noted persons as T. Boone Pickens, Jr., of Mesa Petroleum, who will address the third general session at noon on Saturday; Drew Pearson, formerly of the Dallas Cowboys, making the presentation at the concluding session on Saturday evening; and Harriet Griffin, chair of the Texas Silver Haired Legislation Steering Committee, who will speak at the first general session on Friday evening. Dr. Phillip Allsen, of Brigham Young University, will make his third appearance with Weekend With Wellness at the second general session on Saturday morning.

With workshops on everything from weight training to water aerobics there should be something to interest just about everyone at this year's event. Every aspect of wellness will be covered: nutrition, exercise, prevention of exerciserelated injuries, stress management, dealing with the problems of a ging. and exercise for the handicapped are just some of the areas that will be ad-

Mike Kerr, wellness coordinator for Southwestern Public Service will present a workshop on "The Heart at Work." A good demonstration of the heart at work will take place in the parking lot of Henson Activities Center where the third annual Well-Come Spring 5K Classic will get under way at 7 a.m. on Saturday. The race is sponsored by the American Heart Association. Several of the workshops this year deal with the problems of aging. Margaret Dean, of the Amarillo Bi City County Health Department, will show you that "Wellness is Ageless." "Creative Aging" is the topic for Ardis Martin, who is a 70-plus year-old graduate nursing student and advocate of geriatric programs.

Aerobics have undergone a metamorphosis in the past several years. Water aerobics and lowimpact aerobics are two ways you can exercise without harming your body. The Duncanville Ladies, a senior citizen exercise group, will present two sessions of water aerobics on Saturday. Rebecca Lunden and Sheila Brainerd of Rancha la Puerta, California will give instruction on how to prevent back strain during exercise. They are well-qualified and experienced exercise instructors who have been associated with Rancha la Puerta and its sister spa, the Golden Door, since 1979.

Weight training has become a part of many exercise programs. Bob Fix, strength coach at Baylor University, will demonstrate the correct way to train with weights on Saturday afternoon.

Exercise is good, but nutrition is also an important aspect of wellness. Gene Erb, director of the Health Promotion Center of the Town Club and High Plains Hospital in Amarillo, will discuss "Nutrition-Facts and Fallacies" on Friday afternoon. In the same field, Mary Blinderman, home economist with Southwestern Public Service, will give you some "Delicious ideas for Healthy Meals."

Preventive approaches to wellness will be discussed by Clayton D. Gable, assistant director of physical therapy at the Texas Tech University Health Sciences Center/High Plains Baptist Hospital, in his seminar "American Back School." "Prevention of Substance Abuse" will be covered by Kay Kropff, of Palo Duro Hospital Care Unit.

Exercise is often difficult for the handicapped person. Danny Williams of the Baylor Institute-Rehabilitation and Therapeutic Recreation Division, will address this issue in "Fitness for Handicapped Persons" on Saturday morning. Mental fitness will also be featured Saturday morning with Dr. Joyce O'Rear and "Stress Management: Essential Skills and Strategies for Contemporary Life Problems."

Besides being on a $5 bill, Abraham Lincoln's portrait is also on a $1,000 savings bond

'Natural' meat a matter of definition

From cereal to fruit juice drinks, there are plenty of products labeled "natural" in the supermarket. Now we can add meat and poultry to that

What is "natural" meat and poultry?

According to Texas A&M University Agricultural Extension Service nutritionist Marilyn Haggard, the U.S. Department of Agriculture has three rules for using the term "natural" on a meat or poultry pro-

"To wear the natural label, meat or poultry must have no coloring or artificial ingredients," she says.

"The second requirement is that it have only minimal processing," the nutritionist says. "Examples of minimal processing include cutting, grinding, canning, drying or freez-

"The label must also explain use of the term," Haggard reports. "For instance; a label might state "Natural beef-no added coloring or artificial ingredients; minimally processed."

Meat and poultry labels may also carry animal production claims, such as "fed grain grown without the use of pesticides," reports the nutri-

Vague terms like "chemical-free" and "organic" are not allowed according to USDA regulations, she emphasizes

In addition, Haggard says any company using animal production claims on a label will have to document that the claims are accurate. Those animals would have to be raised and transported separately from other livestock or poultry to assure that the two groups of animals don't get mixed together.

The nutritionist points out that consumers will probably wind up paying more for meat or poultry with a natural label or a production claim.

"The natural label meat and poultry products are likely to be safe, wholesome and nutritious, but so are the regular products, which meat rigid production and labeling standards of their own,"notes Haggard.

CAN LOWER THE PROPERTY TAXES ON YOUR HOME

A homestead exemption lowers the property taxes on your home by lowering its taxable value. For example, if your home is valued at $50,000 and you receive a $5,000 homestead exemption, your home will be taxed as if it were worth only $45,000.

You qualify for a homestead exemption if you owned your home on January 1 and used it as your primary residence on January 1. It doesn't matter whether your home is a house, a condominium or a mobile home.

Exemptions are available to all homeowners to lower their school taxes. Additional exemptions are available to homeowners who are disabled or age 65 and over. Other exemptions may be offered to homeowners by school districts, counties, cities, and special districts. All taxing units offer exemptions to disabled veterans. Deaf Smith County Appraisal District 102 W. 4th Hereford, TX.

Apply to your local appraisal district office at the address shown below for all exemptions you may qualify for. Application forms are available there.

If you received a homestead exemption on your present home in 1986, you won't need to apply again for 1987 unless your chief appraiser requires you to reapply. However, if you passed your

PRODUCTIVITY VALUATION

THE PROPERTY TAXES ON YOUR FARM, RANCH OR TIMBERLAND

Texas law provides farmers and ranchers with a way to lower their property taxes, known as productivity valuation.

If you qualify, your agricultural land will be taxed on its capacity to produce crops, livestock, or timber, instead of its value on the real estate market. Productivity valuation can lower the taxable value of your land, and lower your property taxes as a result.

If your land has never received productivity valuation, you must apply to the appraisal district by April 30 to get tax benefits for 1987. You can choose from two types of productivity valuation.

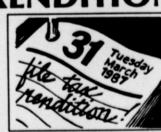

If your land already receives open-space or timber (1- d-1) valuation, you don't need to reapply unless the chief appraiser requires you to. But remember, you must apply every year for ag-use (1-d) valuation.

Paranoid public boosts security business crime-conscious public - even paranoid, some officials say - is spurring an unprecedented boom in the private eye and private security business across Texas

In 1975, the Texas Board of Private Investigators and Private Security Agencies regulated just 3,000 people in the industry, a number that in 1986 swelled to more than 84,000, said Clema Sanders, the board's executive director

People are now more paranoid than ever," Ms. Sanders said. "You read so much and hear so much about crime. People are so much more aware of all these things that happen nowadays.

Dale Simpson of Dallas, a member of Ms. Sanders' board, agreed: "The private security business is probably the most booming business in the state of Texas today.

Industry officials say the soured year in Texas. But most of the DALLAS (AP) - An increasingly Texas economy has fueled the trend. Besides pushing unemployment and crime rates ever higher, the cash crunch has hampered many cities' law enforcement agencies and left them unable to keep up with security demands.

"It's the economy that has caused our business to pick up," says Col. Charlie Beckwith, who led the aborted mission to rescue American hostages in Iran. He now operates Interpro Personal and Corporate Security Co. in Austin.

We're doing at least 50 percent more business now than three years ago," he added. "And customers are now more precise and sophisticated. They want to write the rules and they know more about what kind of security they want."

The growth of the security and private investigator business is averaging more than 20 percent per growth has been in the private security area such as alarm contractors, contract guard agencies, guard dogs and private patrols, Ms. Sanders said.

And it is that explosive expansion that is taxing the agency beyond its means. Her staff has added only four employees since 1975, when 30 people regulated 3,000.

"I'd have to say we're a teeny tiny bit outnumbered. It's absurd," she said. "December '86 was the strongest month we've ever had and we're hip deep in paper. My knees have carpet burns from pleading for more money at the Legislature."

Nevertheless, a New York-based security consultant concluded after his recent national study that Texas runs the best security-investigator regulatory operation of any state.

Texas has the most roughneckpunishing agency in the nation and is the cleanest operation in the country," followed by Arkansas; Washington, D.C.; Delaware and North Dakota, said Mark Williams of Colburn International

He noted that Ms. Sanders' bureau is consumer-oriented, thoroughly checks the background of every person applying for a guard's license and aggressively prosecutes wrongdoers.

In fiscal 1986, for example, the Texas board held 5,561 hearings, most of them disciplinary and many of them that led to license revocations, statistics show. That's compared to 3,752 hearings in 1985 and 2,102 in 1984.

Williams noted that there is still room for abuse.

Contract guards have committed many crimes, including an alarmresponse service in New York that would smash a business' window, radio police that they would take care of the alarm call, and then pro-

Another New York private security agency had its office furnished by stuff stolen from its clients, Williams

In Texas, the most common complaint against contract guards involved employers who failed to register new guards for background checks within the required 10-day period, Ms. Sanders said.

The state has 32,000 armed guards and 52,000 unarmed guards working for private businesses, and all must satisfy certain requirements, such as attending a state-approved training program. Armed guards also must requalify on a firing range every 24

Nationally, the average guard makes less than $6.50 per hour, is not well educated, doesn't see his job as a career and generally receives little if any employee benefits, Williams.

The image of the old man with a rusty gun is changing to one of unemployed urbanites without guns," Williams said. "But guards

Along with the boom in the security business has come stiff competition, Smith says. Dozens of new companies are popping up to cash in on it. Williams notes that it's big

"If you add up the top five companies now, their annual revenues are more than $1.5 billion," he said. What used to be a field of small, privately owned agencies is now a Fortune 500 gold mine.'

Insurance authorities encourage homeowners to inventory valuables

By BARBARA MAYER

AP Newsfeatures Insurance authorities say that typically few victims of fire or theft have taken an inventory of their belongings before the loss.

The result, according to Kathleen Gura, is that they cannot be reimbursed for items that may cost many thousands of dollars to replace. Gura has launched a business in her hometown of Redland, Calif., to inventory the contents of people's homes. Recently, she wrote a book, "Protecting the Family Jewels," on the subject. It explains what a home inventory is and how to conduct one for oneself.

The purpose of the home inventory is to tell what is owned and how much it is worth and to enable a householder to make an informed decision on how much insurance is required, she said.

She says a good inventory describes each item one wishes to insure; lists its replacement cost and documents advises that several friends get ownership with photos and receipts, when available

An inventory should also include professional written appraisals of highvalue items such as antiques, furs and ignored hundreds of small things that $100,000 or more, she adds. will have to be replaced if a complete

Compiling such a list might consume several weeks. But for a quick fix on the value of household goods, list and estimate the replacement cost of home entertainment equipment, major appliances and furniture. These items usually amount to a quarter up to a third of everything in a home.

In her self-published book, Gura provides 20 categories of items found in most homes, such as luggage, clothing, sports equipment, books, linens, major appliances, home office equipment, toys, household items and tools.

A section on what she calls "forgotten items" (things such as erasers and pencils, glue, ironing board, cleaning supplies, vitamins and toiletries), notes average prices for these items. She says that while it is the personal mementoes that make a home unique almost every household has the same general type of things.

The person taking the inventory (she together and help one another to make the job more fun and easier to accomplish) counts the number of items, estimates the likely cost of replacing them and arrives at a total replacejewelry. Gura says the most useful in ment cost figure. The grand total of all ventory also lists the frequently- these things is likely to be as much as prices of anything they may not have purchased in a while by visiting a furniture and appliance store.

Documenting the inventory can be accomplished in several ways. Buying a large envelope and using it for receipts on insurables is one suggestion. If the receipt was not kept, insurance companies also accept manufacturer-instruction booklets as proof of ownership, she said.

Photographs of the objects, preferably with a family member included in the photo are also accepted as documentation. As a general guideline, she suggests taking photos of the outside of the house as well as each room. Include shots of unusual landscaping and plants and of outbuildings, pool and tool shed.

Inside the house, go room by room, starting with one wall and taking as many pictures as necessary. She says that one or two shots per wall is usually adequate. Open cabinets and closets and photograph the interiors. Then take individual photos of special items such as artwork, antiques, coin and stamp collections and musical instruments Group together in one photo small items such as ashtrays and knickknacks.

A replacement-cost inventory would was for actual cash value only. Consequently, she advised reviewing in-surance carefully in the light of the new information provided by an inventory.

Gura recommends a full-replacement cost policy. Though it usually costs more, it covers more. However, she noted that full replacement cost really means replacement up to a preset limit. If the inventory has disclosed the limit is unrealistic, one can negotiate a higher limit or add coverage for individual high-cost items such as jewelry or, furs or collectibles.

To keep premiums from rising too high, she suggests raising the deductible amount on the policy. Gura says a $1,000 deductible could save up to 30 percent on premiums and a $500 deduc-tible might save about 20 percent. She also advises getting a quote from a number of insurance companies.

Insurance cannot replace irreplaceable items. Consequently, in order to minimize the trauma of a loss. she suggests that important records such as passports, birth certificates, marriage licenses, wills, deeds, contracts, income tax papers and a copy of the home inventory be copied and the copies kept outside the house, perhaps in a safe deposit box or at a relative's home. One might also consider copying family photographs or removing the negatives for safekeeping.

Most victims who have escaped a fire or other home destruction disaster recount that they were unable to think clearly in the moments before they were evacuated or fled the house. She says preparation of an evacuation list of items to take can help. If the items are kept together in a drawer or box it would be simple to grab the container

Avoid cross-pollination when planting garden

By The Associated Press

If you plan to grow both sweet and pop corn, be sure to keep them far enough apart to avoid crosspollination.

The two varieties will crosspollinate if they shed pollen at the same time. A distance of 250 feet should be far enough apart to avoid affecting the quality of either crop.

If the two crops mature at least 14 days apart, cross-pollination will not be a problem.

If cross-pollination does occur, popcorn grains may be sweeter and kernels will be shriveled. Sweet corn pollinated by popcorn will be more starchy, but the appearance won't be altered.

The best time to water your garden is in the morning or early afternoon. If plants are wet overnight, fungus troubles may occur. Water enough to soak the root areas but no more than once or twice a week. Daily watering really is not necessary.

Flowers planted around trees help protect them from lawn mower injury. When you water the flowers, water deeply to help keep the tree healthy during dry periods. -

WASHINGTON - Positive rates of analysis, for the association's

The most recent investment real estate survey taken by the association showed that 33 percent of all investment properties recently bought and sold were multifamily housing projects, while 21 percent were retail buildings, 16 percent were office buildings, 14 percent were industrial projects, 14 percent were land and 2 percent were hotel/motel properties.

More than 11,000 investment real estate specialists were surveyed by the association last fall, yielding information on more than 1,000 investment transactions. Slightly more than 90 percent of all reported transactions were closed in1 986, with 9 percent closed in 1985. This survey was the fourth of a series.

be expected to comprise a larger share of the investment real estate market this year, overall investment likely will be down from last year. This will happen, he said, because many markets are overbuilt and the new tax law may discourage some forms of investment such as office buildings, hotels and motels.

Pafenberg and Flick noted that 66 percent of all investment real estate transactions were financed with just one mortgage, and 22 percent of the transactions had two mortgages. One percent were financed with three mortgages, and about 12 percent were cash sales or trades.

Most of the mortgages were fixedrate in nature, with 56 percent of first mortgages and 65 percent of second mortgages being fixed-rate. Adjustable-rate mortgages and balloon mortgages were the next most popular types of mortgages.

Most first mortgages for investment properties (31 percent) originate from commercial banks, Pafenberg said, while 25 percent originate from savings and loans, 15 percent are assumptions and 14 percent are seller financed. Sixty-eight percent of all second mortgages for investment transactions are financed by sellers.

In addition to multifamily housing projects, Pafenberg and Flick said industrial and retail properties likely will be popular forms of real estate investments this year. "Retail properties likely will do well because of the recent strength in consumer spending. However, we do not expect a surge in construction of retail properties, because some retailers fear that consumers may be slowing their spending," Flick said.

"Office, hotel and motel properties likely will have a major shake-out this year because of overbuilding in some areas and less generous tax incentives," he added.

The National Association of Realtors, the nation's largest trade association, represents more than 700,000 members involved in all aspects of the real estate industry.

Here's the Answer

Asst. Vice President & Mortgage Loan Officer

Hereford State Bank

In the last four to five years, real estate lenders have developed numerous creative financing loans. However, most of these loans have fallen by the way, with the exception of the adjustable rate mortgage.

An adjustable rate mortgage (ARM) is a loan that permits periodic adjustment of interest rate and monthly payment amount, usually once a year. Adjustment to the interest rate must correspond directly to the movement of an index, most commonly the 1 Yr. T-Bill. There is also a margin involved, which is a constant number that will never change over the life of the ARM. The new interest rate each time will equal the current index plus the margin. However, most ARMs also have provisions that limit the yearly interest rate adjustment and lifetime change, known as "caps." These "caps" protect the borrower against "payment shock" in times of rising interest

In an attempt to explain an interest rate adjustment, the following figures will be assumed: Current Index Rate (1 Yr. T-Bill) 5.94% Margin: 2.5%; Yearly interest rate cap: 2%; Interest rate currently in effect: 12%, The formula would then be: 5.94% (index) +2.5% (margin) equals 8.44% rounded to 8.5%. However, the current interest rateon the note is 12% and there is a 2% annual adjustment cap. Therefore, the new interest rate will be 10% in this example, not

The ARM is probably the one mortgage loan that is fair to both the lender and the borrower. Each is assured of paying or receiving interest that is equitable to market conditions.

out fairly good, but is a little too glossy

A. — Yes, rubbing with pumice powder and oil will turn the high gloss into a satiny sheen that some people find more acceptable. In any case, a light machine oil will do the trick. Some professional wood finishers use any one of several kinds of oil. The reason for using the oil with the purnice is it works very gradually, much more so than when water is used. This is a step you may be able to avoid if you use a semigloss varnish, although it is not available everywhere.

Q. — You recently told somebody about building a workbench and suggested putting casters on it so it can be moved about in close quarters. Isn't it dangerous to have casters on a workbench because of the possibility it will move while you are working on it?

A. — Not if you use the type of casters that have a locking brake on them just so they can't be budged, even when working on the bench.

Q. - I expect to remove an old threshold at a doorway and replace it with a new one, but the threshold extends under the door jamb and I can't figure out how to remove it without breaking it into pieces. Is there some way to do this?

A. - Sometimes removing the door stop will make it possible to take out the threshold, although I can't see the necessity for keeping the old one intact. Even if you have to cut it into two or three pieces to remove it, you can fit the pieces together and still use it as a pattern when buying a new one.

Parents say home schooling gives children benefit of better education

By JOAN GOESSL Associated Press Writer

Sarah Klima had finished third grade at a public school when her parents decided she could receive a better education at home.

That was nearly three years ago. Today, Sarah shares a classroom in the Klimas' Las Cruces, N.M., home with her older brother and younger brother and sister.

The children's mother, Sue Klima, is their teacher.

"I wouldn't trade it for any other school," said Sarah, now 12 and in the sixth grade. "It's just a lot easier being taught in your own home."

The Klimas are among roughly 200 New Mexico families who have registered with the state Department of Education to teach their children

Phil Schultz, president of New Mexico Christian Home Educators, said that number represents about half of the parents who teach at

'We're moving toward, a trend where more are registered than aren't," said Schultz, whose wife, Wende, teaches their three schoolage children in their Albuquerque home. "Some people are afraid that if their names are discovered and :... the law were to change, they'd be exposed. The fear is that they're going that they plan to teach their children at home.

-Parents maintain attendance and immunization records and furnish them to the district's superintendent.

Parents include certain subjects in their curriculum, and test students annually to assess achievement under state and local school district testing programs. The law also stipulates that the home teacher possess at least a baccalaureate degree, but that requirement can be waived.

A child who finishes secondary education at home does not receive a diploma, but rather takes the high school equivalency exam.

Weekday mornings find the schoolage Klima children - Sarah, Jason, 13, Joshua, 8, and Rachel, 6, - helping with chores around the house, spending an hour on Bible study and then diving into subjects such as science, math, geography and English.

The changes in her children have been remarkable since they began attending classes in a "school room" complete with maps on the wall, cabinets filled with encyclopedias and textbooks, and a large table with chairs, Mrs. Klima said.

'They're more positive, more confident, have a better attitude about life in general," she said. "They're. better able to interact with kids their age and they have a better attitude about learning than they did when they were in public school.

Mrs. Klima's sentiments about

Answer to Previous Puzzle

home schooling are shared by other parents in New Mexico who have opted for a classroom in their homes.

Their reasons for home education often center around strong religious convictions and a belief that morals and ethics taught in the home will mold their children into more solid

Home schoolers Dorothy and Clyde Sanchez were educated in New Mexico schools before attending Cornell and Yale universities. Their college experience led to a decision to teach their two school-age children in their Albuquerque home.

When we got there (to college) we just kind of realized that our overall attitude toward learning was not what it should have been," said Mrs. Sanchez, who holds bachelor's and master's degrees in nursing. "We were not as prepared as other students were.

We also feel as Christians that God's given us a command to teach our children and we feel that's the way to go," she said. "The public school system doesn't allow teaching about creationism or character qualities that we feel are essential."

Wende and Phil Schultz's schoolage children have been taught at home for the past four years, a decision reached largely because they thought their kids needed better character development.

When we had them in school we kept seeing character areas that they had needs in and we kept hoping there would be a teacher who also would notice those areas," Mrs. Schultz said. "Academically they were doing very well.

Like Mrs. Sanchez, Mrs. Schultz believes "it's God's plan to teach a child at home.

But while home school proponents stress that children receive a richer education because of the individual attention they receive, opponents contend home schooling prevents a child from acquiring social skills. They also question the ability of some parents to teach subjects such as chemistry and calculus.

'Some say the (home school) children are sheltered, but it's impossible to shelter children in this world," Mrs. Schultz said. "You can't turn on the radio or TV or walk down the street to visit relatives without having conflicting views."

Home schoolers also are quick to point out that their children do ined have a social-life.

The Klima children, for example, participate in music and Spanish classes with other home-schooled children. The Sanchez children get together with other home schoolers for a monthly field trip. What I always tell them is come and see," Mrs. Klima said, referring to critics. "The people I've talked to who were skeptical at first have changed their minds when they see the kids interacting with other home school kids."

A point of controversy among home schoolers is the state requirement that a parent who teaches at home have at least a baccalaureate degree. While that requirement can be waived, home schoolers question whether it's needed at all.

"Whether a person has a degree or not has very little bearing on how well he performs as a home schooling teacher," said Phil Schultz. "Some people could legitimately point out that someone could have a degree in basket weaving. What does that have to do with teaching?"

Wende Schultz, who's applied for a waiver, said, "As far as parental qualification, from what I've seen. the parent knows the children best.

"I guess what I feel is the requirements should not be based on what qualifications you have but what are the results," she said. "Our children are average or above average in everything.

Margaret Rutz, state coordinator for home schools, said waivers usually are denied on technicalities. One parent's request for a waiver was rejected because the parent was using a tutor, which is not legal.

Another waiver was questioned because a report from Health and Social Services indicated the home was not a desirable teaching atmosphere, Miss Rutz said. A followup visit found the parent was not conducting a home schooling program, and the waiver was denied.

Of the 200 families who've registered with the state, more than 50 percent have requested a waiver for not having a bachelor's degree, Miss Rutz said. And because short staffing has kept the accreditation department from responding to many of the requests, Miss Rutz said any parent who has filed a waiver can begin teaching regardless of whether it's been approved.

Home schoolers have not reported major problems," Miss Rutz said. "I think in general it's been well received. There are still people who feel a home school is not an acceptable way to educate youngsters and of course others who feel differently. Home schoolers themselves stress teaching children at home is not an undertaking all parents are destined

'Home education is not an easy thing to do," Schultz said. "We're not going out and encouraging everybody to do this.

IRS deduction not affected by reform

tion has not affected the cost-inwater income tax deduction allowed by the Internal Revenue Service for water depleted from the Ogallala aquifer in the business of irrigation farming in the High Plains Underground Water Conservation District's service area.

According to Joe Ehler, of Richardson and Ehler, Certified Public Accountants, who is the accountant for the High Plains Water District, eligible landowners should continue to claim the water depletion deduction as they have previously.

Anyone who purchased, inherited or otherwise obtaine dland within the Water District's service area since 1948 and whose ground water is depleted through irrigated farming is eligible to claim the tax deduction. For landowners to claim the tax deduction, the IRS requires documentation of the price paid for the water at the time of land acquisition, the quantity of ground water in storage at the time of acquisition and yearly decline data.

For more than 20 years the High Plains Water District has provided cost-in-water guidelines and water decline and saturated thickness information to parties wishing to claim the tax deduction for lands within the District's boundaries. The District handles six to seven thousand requests for water decline data each year. The water depletion deduction has been estimated to reduce the taxes owed by Water District landowners by $3 to 5 million per year. The tax deduction is based on the price the landowner paid for the ground water in storage under the property at the time of land acquisition. The value of the water is deter-

Annually, land appraisers hired by the Water District update guidelines on the cost allowed for ground water and the value that must be attributed to the land.

Bobbie Bramblett, Water Depletion Coordinator at the High Plains Water District, urges landowners or their accountants to submit their requests for water decline information as soon as possible to ensure speedy processing.

'Requests for water-level declines will be processed in the order that they are received. The sooner the requests are received, the sooner the response will be. Our 1986 decline data will be reviewed by IRS engineers in December and hopefully approved for use in providing the necessary decline data to landowners. Requests for water decline parcels will be processed and mailed to accountants and landowners on a first-come, first-served basis beginning January 5."

Information necessary to file a new water decline request includes the taxpayer's name, address and social security or federal identification number, a legal description of the land and the date of the land acquisition. If a previous claim has been made, only the permanent reorder number is necessary. The fee for 1986 decline data is $5 per parcel if there is a decline. There is no charge if the decline is zero.

For more information, water-level decline data or forms for requesting new claims, landowners or their accountants should contact Bobbie Bramblett at the High Plains Underground Water Conservation District NO. 1, 2930 Avenue Q, Lub-

Russian sales hurt wheat growers

By MIKE ROBINSON Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) - Representatives of the nation's wheat growers, smarting over the falloff in grain sales to the Soviet Union, are urging an end to policy decisions they say put a chill on the oncelucrative exports.

"Foreign policy decisions of the U.S. State Department have in the past severely hampered our efforts to move our product to overseas markets," Jim Miller, president of the National Association of Wheat Growers, said in a statement.

"We are convinced that if Secretary Shultz is made aware of the effects these policies can have on the domestic farm economy, we will see more favorable treatment for our trade positions in the future," he said. The statement was issued this week after the organization's directors met with Secretary of State Shultz and George Undersecretary of State Allen Wallis to discuss the department's role in formulating farm trade policy.

Wheat growers have been upset about a variety of administration policy decisions they say have put a crimp in sales to the Soviets.

The General Accounting Office, an investigative arm of Congress that has been looking into the falloff in grain sales to the Soviet Union, says it has been told repeatedly by Soviet officials that the primary reason has been the high price of U.S. grain.

During their four-day spring meeting, the directors also voted to admit the North Carolina Small Grain Growers Association as the 18th state represented in the organization. It was the first state organization from east of the Mississippi to join.

Pivot system good, if fit to conditions sprinkler irrigation system can improve irrigation efficiency, saving both money and water. However, the key to the efficiency of a sprinkler system is a design that fits the conditions under which it will be used.

The main concern is that the system needs to be designed for the amount of water the farmer has available. There shouldn't be any guess work," states Ken Carver, Assistant Manager of the High Plains Underground Water Conservation District No. 1. "It is important that the farmer provide his center pivot center dealer with accurate information. This way the dealer can design a system that will provide a uniform application of water to the field with the least amount of evaporation losses, while obtaining the maximum fuel efficiency from the irrigation pump.

Carver explains, "First, the farmer needs to determine the friction losses in the pipeline between the well and the center pivot. These friction losses result in the pump working harder to produce a given amount of water. In fact, the effect of additional pressure on the pump is the same as the pump lifting water from a greater depth-one pound of pressure equals 2.31 feet of additional lift for the pump.

Next, the farmer needs to meter his well or wells to determine the quantity of water he has available for the system. Additionally, the farmer needs to find out the pressure requirements of the center pivot sprinkler system he is considering purchasing. The yield of many wells will drop when they are pumped against a pressure head. Therefore, the

. A properly designed center pivot operating pressure of the sprinkler plus the pressure required to overcome the friction losses in the pipeline with a squeeze valve on the pump before he makes his yield measurements, explains Carver.

> With this information the dealer can then design a system for the correct volume of water that will be produced and distributed through the pivot sprinkler system.

If the sprinkler system is designed correctly, it can be a highly efficient method of irrigation. However, if the system is designed for a given volume of water at a certain pressure requirement and one of those parameters is incorrect for the actual field conditions, then the efficiency of the system suffers, notes

Irrigators may also need to consider the slope of their land, which may require the addition of pressure regulators in order to maintain the required pressure and keep an even water flow to the field. In addition, a booster pump or revamping of the pump may be necesary to handle the added pressure of the sprinkler

For those interested in acquiring a center pivot sprinkler system to improve their irrigation efficiency, the High Plains Water District currently has loan money available to qualified applicants for the purchase of sprinkler systems and other agricultural water conservation

For more information about the design and installation of a center pivot sprinkler system, contact the High Plains Water District in Lubbock, the local office of the Soil Conservation Service or the Texas farmer should simulate the Agricultural Extension Service.

BISMARCK, N.D. (AP) - The suicide rate among farmers in five agricultural states has not jumped dramatically during the farm recession, although it exceeds the rate for white male adults, a study says.

The study, which took a year to complete, analyzed data from North and South Dakota, Minnesota, Montana and Wisconsin, said Dr. Robert Wentz, health officer for North

In those states, there were 44.2 suicides in 1980 for every 100,000 farmers, according to a North Dakota Health Department statement. The national rate that year was 31 suicides for every 100,000 white men aged 20 or older, a category that included virtually all the farm suicides studied.

The rate dropped to 41.8 in 1981, but increased to 57.5 in 1982, the highest of the six years studied, the statement said. However, it gradually declined in the next three years, dropping to a rate of 41.3 in 1985, the last year covered by the analysis.

This is the first definite study that I know of that deals with farmrelated suicides in North Dakota and nearby states," Wentz said. "Much of the information we have had previously has been anecdotal and based on perceptions rather than statistical data.'

The study found a total of 589 suicides among farmers in the five states during the six-year period analyzed, the statement said.

A lack of data made it difficult to determine whether the suicide rates calculated by the study represented a change from earlier years, or if they differ from farm suicide rates in other parts of the country, Wentz water loss occurs.

Checking irrigation well yields is one of the keys to maintaining an efficient irrigation application and distribution system. "Irrigators should routinely check to see if their pumps are delivering the amount of water they were designed to produce," advises Ken Carver, Assistant Manager of the High Plains Underground Water Conservation District No. 1.

When well yields drop, pump plant efficiencies normally decrease. This in turn, raises the pumping costs," says Carver. "Declining well yields can indicate that a problem exists with either the pump or the well itself; for instance, the pump bowls could be worn or the well casing perforations could be corroded or clogged.

Checking well yields before the summer irrigation season allows farmers time to fix any problems that may exist before they begin irrigating. Carver also recommends that farmers check their well yields every summer during normal well operation, because problems can be detected quickly at that time.

The best way to check the well yield is to install a flow meter on the discharge pipe at the well. This meter records the well yield in gallons per minute: "If you have a closed system, where you can't measure the flow at the well, you can use a short pipe connected to a hydrant and meter the well yield there." Carver says

It is particularly important to check well yields if more than one well is pumping into a common

Often when more than one well is pumping into a common pipeline, the wells do not produce the amount of water they would if they were pumping to open discharge. In fact, a few wells have been found that will not pump any water at all when they are pumping against the pressure head created by other wells pumping into the same system. Farmers should measure the flow of each well individually, both when the well is pumping alone and when the well is pumping in combination with other wells in the system.

Beef cattle program scheduled in April

COLLEGE STATION - A special program dealing with beef cattle health will be held April 25-26 at the YO Hilton Hotel in Kerrville.

The program is an educational effort of the Texas Veterinary Medical Center at Texas A&M University and the Texas Agricultural Extension Service and is aimed at both beef cattle producers and veterinarians, points out Dr. Buddy Faries, Extension veterinarian.

The opening session which begins at 8:30 a.m. on April 25 will focus on quality feeder calves, bull evaluation and cost benefits of maximizing immunity-minimizing stress in beef

Conference participants will have a choice of several activities that afternoon, including a Brangus Sale ville, a tour of the Y-O Ranch, and visits to Ingram and Fredericksburg. Former Texas Commissioner of Agriculture Reagan Brown will address the conference that evening.

The following day's program will include discussions on parasite control, implants, the beef checkoff program, lean beef, supplemental feeding, estrous synchronization, costs and returns of cow-calf management procedures. brucellosis update and use of drugs

Dr. A.F. Hopkins, president of the American Veterinary Medical Association, will speak at a luncheon on April 26.

Loan expansions could cause problems

WASHINGTON (AP) - Expanding the marketing loan concept to include wheat, corn and soybeans might cost in the range of $2 billion to $3 billion over two to three years, a leading farm cooperative official estimates

In light of U.S. farm problems and their economic ripples, it might be well to reconsider budgetary objections to marketing loans, Wayne A. Boutwell, president of the National Council of Farmer Cooperatives, told a Senate panel.

"Surely the burden of proof should now be with those who oppose its implementation," Boutwell told a Senate Agriculture Committee hearing called to review the working of the farm program set up under the 1985 Food Security Act.

The concept is designed to stimulate exports.

It was included for rice, cotton and honey in the 1985 law and has given a -boost to overseas sales of those com-

The marketing loan modifies the traditional non-recourse pricesupport loan by allowing the farmer to repay at the prevailing market price, which is ordinarily substantially below the amount of the loan.

The government received discretionary authority to use marketing loans for wheat, feedgrains and soybeans but thus far has not done so.

Meanwhile, "the turnaround has been dramatic" for the crops that are benefiting from marketing loans.
