In local elections Saturday

Good voter turnout expected

By SPEEDY NIEMAN
Editor-Publisher

A large turnout of voters is anticipated in city, county, school and hospital district elections Saturday. Polls will be open from 7 a.m. to 7 p.m. in Hereford Community Center and the nine county precinct boxes.

With a large absentee voting total—ranging from 185 in the hospital district to 410 in the special county election—and some hotly-contested races on the ballots, political observers are predicting a good voter turnout Saturday. If past absentee voting is an indication, the total could reach around 4,000. The city, school and hospital elections will be held in the Community Center, and voters will have to use three separate entrances to cast ballots in all three elections. Voters in the special county tax election will use the regular nine voting boxes in the county, one of which will be in the Community Center.

The city commission race is the most congested, with 12 candidates vying for five places on the commission. The school race is for two at-large seats, since the District 2 trustee is unopposed. Six candidates are vying for three at-large seats on the hospital board.

The special county election is to determine if voters want to approve a one-half percent sales tax. If the measure is approved, the sales tax here would go from 6.25 percent to 6.75 percent. The state sales tax is 5.25 percent and the City of Hereford levies a 1 percent tax. Recent legislation made the county sales tax an option, but the law requires that property taxes be reduced by the amount of revenue the sales tax would generate. For this reason, some observers think the tax hike has a chance of passing.

The mayoral race has drawn three candidates with incumbent Wes Fisher facing the challenges of Jim Steiert and Sylvia Flores. Fisher, who has served four years as mayor, is part owner of Barrett-Fisher Co. in Hereford. He has resided here 24 years, is a former city commissioner and has served in various positions in the produce industry.

Steiert is a veteran farm journalist and has been associate editor of the Texas Farmer-Stockman magazine since 1981. A 10-year member of the Hereford Young Farmers and current vice president, he was named Outstanding Agri-Businessman for Area 1 of Young Farmers in 1984. He is a native of the Panhandle and is an active leader in various wildlife organizations. He was appointed in 1982 to serve on the Buffalo Lake Water District Board.

Mrs. Flores, a 32-year-old housewife, was formerly employed as a clerk in the tax appraisal district office. She works with the Red Cross chapter and is a volunteer for the Problem Pregnancy clinic, bilingual language director for the Amarillo Baptist Association, and active in Primera Iglesia Bautista Church where her husband, Ruben, is the pastor.

In Place 1, a single-member district situated in the north central part of town, incumbent Loran Nixon is challenged by Sylvia Juarez. Nixon was appointed to fill out an unexpired term. He is employed with Deaf Smith REC as operations manager. Mrs. Juarez is a lifelong resident of Hereford and a 1980 graduate of HHS. She is employed at LoMart and serves on the voter committee of the Concerned Citizens of Deaf Smith County.

For the Place 3 city commission seat, incumbent Tom LeGate and Boyd Foster are the candidates. Place 3 is situated in the northwest and north part of town, generally extending from West Park Avenue up north of Park Avenue to Whittier. LeGate is completing a two-year term on the commission and is owner of Top Properties, a real estate firm.

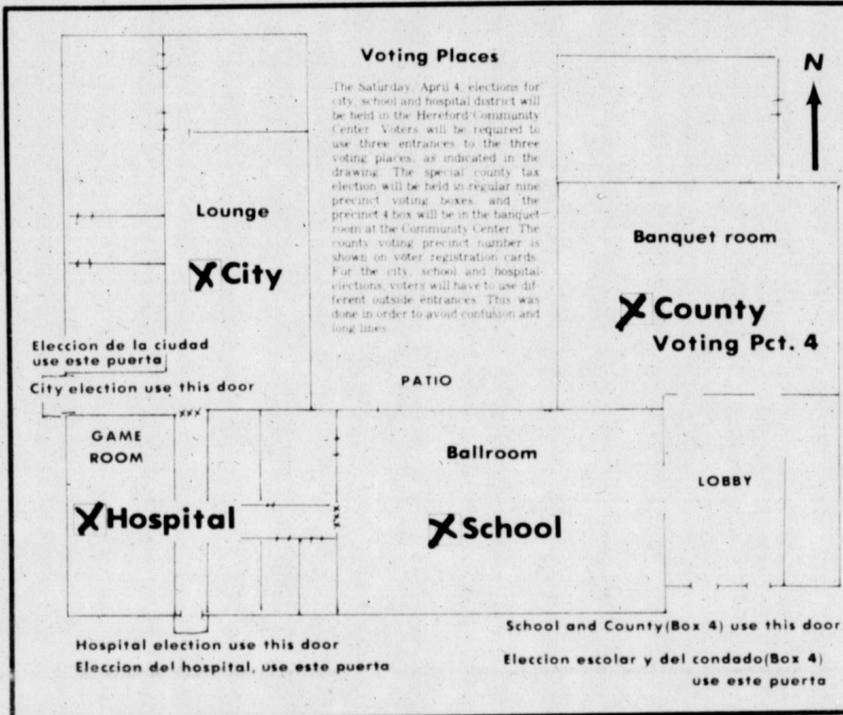

Foster is president of Arrowhead Mills, has resided here 25 years and is seeking office for the first time.

City voters will elect two at-large commissioners. There are four candidates for the two seats, Places 5 and 6. In order of listing on the ballot, they are Jerry Walsh, Raul H. Valdez, Paul Abalos, Ed Wuerflein and Paul Hamilton. Walsh is manager of the Frito-Lay plant here; Valdez is a pastor of Community Church; Abalos is in the restaurant business and a former commissioner; Wuerflein is a cattleman-farmer and a land-leveling consultant; and Hamilton is a WT Services sales representative and a member of DSGH ambulance service.

In addition to the usual issues, the controversial nuclear waste repository issue was injected into some of the city races. As reflected by public statements and political advertising, three candidates in particular campaigned for a stronger city stance against the DOE project. These included Steiert, Foster and Walsh.

In the school election, Jo Garcia is unopposed in District 2, a single-member district. Two at-large positions will be decided with voters choosing from four candidates. John Fuston, the lone incumbent, is manager of the ASCS office; Demetrio Zuniga is employed with Frito-Lay; Delia C. Griego is a homemaker, and Dennis Newton is the county agent.

The hospital district will elect three directors to its board. Six candidates are seeking the three at-large seats. As listed on the ballot, they are Jim Herbertson, an orthopedic surgeon; Ralph Detten, a county farmer; Gerald G. Payne, a doctor at Family Medical Clinic; Olivia Denning, a homemaker; Thomas Hyer, general manager of WT Rural Telephone; and June Radd, a nurse with the local school district. Dr. Payne is the only incumbent. Fr. Charles Threewit and Dr. Hap Cavness did not seek reelection.

Services Saturday for Justin Hardin

Teen fatally shoots self at home

Sixteen-year-old Justin Hardin died at his home Thursday afternoon from a self-inflicted gunshot wound to the head, after phoning a friend and leaving his family a letter indicating that he was "sorry it has come to this."

The popular Hereford High School sophomore was doing well in school, but pain was so severe from a condition he had had since childhood that he passed out at times.

Justice of the Peace Johnnie Turrentine said the young man, son of Mr. and Mrs. Jerry Hardin, died at 4:11 p.m. at 248 Douglas.

Hereford Police Officer Butch Glenn and Lt. Pat Michael also investigated the case.

Turrentine said Hardin called a friend and told him of his plans. That friend immediately called Hardin's parents at work. Both parents arrived at the home at the same time. Hardin was found in the bathroom by his father.

Turrentine's official statement was that Hardin was "depressed over a lifelong illness."

"Everyone is just in shock," said Marilyn Leasure, assistant principal at HHS. "The students and teachers are sad and are missing him today. He was well liked and had lots of friends. It is having an impact on our school."

Youth counselors at First Baptist church, where Hardin was a member, met with the teens of that church Thursday night and will continue counseling sessions as necessary to help the students deal with the grief.

Services for Hardin are at 2 p.m. Saturday in First Baptist Church. Rev. Doug Manning and Randall Stotts, FBC youth minister, will officiate. Burial will be in West Park Cemetery under direction of Gilliland-Watson Funeral Home.

Hardin was born Jan. 25, 1971, in Plainview. He moved to Hereford in 1976 from Sayre, Okla. He was a part-time employee at Sirloin Stockade.

Survivors are his parents, Jerry and Barbara Hardin; two sisters, Misti and Tammy, of the home; grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. J.R. Hardin, and Mr. and Mrs. M.R. David, all of Erick, Okla.; and a great-grandmother, Jettie Davis, also of Erick.

A Justin Hardin Memorial Fund has been established at both banks for needy children with medical problems.

Override may raise Texas speed limit by mid-summer

DALLAS (AP) — Texans may be able to drive 65 mph on some roads as early as this summer now that the Senate has overridden President Reagan's veto of a highway bill, state officials say.

Thursday's override also freed $850 million in federal funds for use in Texas this year, which will support about 20,145 jobs in construction and related activities, State Department of Highways spokeswoman Marcy Goodfleisch said.

The bill allows states to raise the speed limit from 55 to 65 mph on most stretches of interstate highways and includes more than 100 highway demonstration projects tailor-made for individual lawmakers.

"Reaction in the whole department has been very positive because we know we can go to work on projects that are now needed," Ms. Goodfleisch said.

She said an estimated 23.7 jobs are created with every million dollars spent on highway projects. The department will begin letting contracts almost immediately.

"We have been postponing projects for a while now and as early as December started using some major state dollars for these projects that would have been let by federal dollars," she said, citing the new bridge in Baytown in Southeast Texas as an example.

The state is free to raise the limit to 65 mph on 2,422 miles of interstate highways, but not on 704 more-urban miles. Trucks would be allowed to drive only 60 mph during the day and 55 mph at night, Ms. Goodfleisch said.

Legislative action is not required for raising the limit, but the state highway commission must wait for the new regulations on the bill and set a public hearing before it can vote to raise the speed limit on some highways, she said.

That should be taken care of by summer, she said.

U.S. Sen. Phil Gramm and U.S. Sen. Lloyd Bentsen of Texas voted on opposing sides, with Republican Gramm voting to sustain the veto, while Bentsen joined fellow Democrats in favor of the override.

"This is a victory both for Texas and for pay-as-you-go government," Bentsen said in a prepared statement. The bill includes a Bentsen amendment that closes a loophole in the 85 percent guarantee program.

He said the bill will mean an additional $580.2 million for Texas during the next five years "over and above what we would have gotten otherwise. It would have been in jeopardy had the President's veto been sustained," Bentsen said.

Gramm said the bill "clearly is a (See HIGHWAY, Page 2A)

School board to meet

Hereford School trustees will canvass votes, certify Saturday's election, swear in board members and elect board officer at 7 a.m. Monday in the administration building.

The board also will consider leasing land from the VFW and approve final plans for the new gym at La Plata.

Police report

Two persons were arrested by Hereford police Thursday. A 35-year-old was booked for public intoxication and a 21-year-old for assault.

Other reports filed were for criminal mischief in the 200 block of East Park and in the 200 block of Avenue H. A harassment was reported in the 800 block of Irving.

OUTLOOK: Fair tonight and not so cold. Low in mid 30s. Wind south 10 to 15 mph. Saturday, fair in the morning, increasing cloudiness in the afternoon. High near 60. Wind south 10 to 15 mph, increasing to 15 to 25 mph and gusty by midday. Lake wind advisories will be required in the afternoon.

Time Changer

Leonard Bartels, left, assures Fr. Cletus McGorry that St. Anthony's chimes will be changed for Daylight Savings Time — by adjusting the main clock in the restroom. Churchgoers can be on time Sunday if they set clocks ahead one hour Saturday night. The official change is at 2 a.m. Sunday, several weeks earlier than in the past. Congress made the change last year to extend DST.

Water director asked to step down

DALLAS (AP) — The executive director of the Texas Water Commission has been asked to step down after complaints he did not keep the commission informed about his actions and those of his staff.

Ralph Roming, one of the three commission members, wrote a letter to Larry Soward asking for his immediate resignation, the Dallas Morning News reported.

Soward, who has been executive director since September 1985, could not be reached for comment Thursday.

In a letter dated Wednesday, Roming wrote, "You and I have discussed on many occasions the absolute necessity of me being completely informed." He said, "Your refusal to cooperate is nothing less than insubordination. I have been embarrassed and made to look like a fool in the past by your actions along these lines."

But commission chairman Paul Hopkins said he opposes removing Soward, defending him as a "great public servant who deserves better treatment than this."

"He'll do more in 24 hours than Commissioner Roming will do in 10 years," Hopkins said.

Texas prisons closed again

HUNTSVILLE, Texas (AP) — The Texas Department of Corrections remains closed today with a near record number of inmates in the 26-unit prison system, officials said.

The department closed its doors to new admissions after the system was deluged with new convicts earlier this week, putting the inmate population over a state-mandated 95 percent capacity.

Figures at midnight Wednesday and released Thursday showed 38,855 inmates, or 96.14 percent of capacity — 461 prisoners more than the 95 percent limit allowed by state law, prison spokesman Charles Brown said.

"I believe that's a record," Brown said Thursday. "That's the highest (population count) I know of."

Only 92 inmates were released on parole Thursday, he said.

The prison system, the nation's third-largest behind California and New York, is regularly closed to new admissions and releases on weekends.

But on two weekends this year, inmates were released under legislation that stipulates they go to halfway houses. The new state law awards up to 60 days of good-conduct time to selected prisoners.

Brown said he did not know if any inmates would be released this weekend.

Cuban prisoners sent to Texas

LAREDO, Texas (AP) — Fifteen Cuban convicts released from New York jails but deemed too dangerous to be set free were flown to indefinite detention in Texas.

Federal authorities are detaining the Cubans released from state prisons in the Laredo maximum-security jail because they are too dangerous to set free and Cuba will not accept them, officials said Thursday.

"We dislike this very much," said Benedict J. Ferro, U.S. Immigration and Naturalization Service chief for New York and Vermont. "It is an incredibly inhumane act for Cuba not to take them back and that leaves us no choice but to detain them."

The group, believed to be the first from New York, was flown in shackles from the Niagara Falls Air Force Reserve Base, the officials said.

The prisoners will join 124 Cubans sent to the Webb County Law Enforcement Center in the last three weeks from various states, according to New York and Texas officials.

With their state releases, they have met their sentencing obligations in New York but are placed in the custody of federal immigration authorities. Though they are no longer charged with crimes, they are being detained because they are in the country illegally, the officials said.

Most of the Cubans were among 129,000 who came in the so-called "Freedom Flotilla" to the United States from Mariel harbor in 1980. Cuban President Fidel Castro said afterwards that the group included the undesirables from his country's jails and hospitals.

The 15 served sentences on convictions for rape, kidnapping, drug sales and armed robbery.

Moscow security officer recalled

WASHINGTON (AP) — The State Department, still unsure how many secrets may have been compromised at the U.S. Embassy in Moscow, is recalling the mission's chief security officer to answer questions.

It also is taking steps to make sure the Soviets won't be able to eavesdrop on Secretary of State George P. Shultz's confidential conversations when he visits leaders in Moscow later this month.

The department said Thursday that Frederick Mecke, the regional security officer in the embassy since August 1985, was being brought back to Washington. He will consult with security officials on the problems at the embassy, which include allegations that Marine guards were enticed by Soviet women into providing embassy secrets.

A new officer will take his place. "He is a key person in the chain of command and as a consequence is in a position to know how things developed there," State Department spokesman Charles E. Redman said.

"We're going to be talking to everyone at the embassy," Redman said. "Certainly the RSO falls into that category."

In what Redman has called a serious breach of security, Marine Corps guards Sgt. Clayton Lonetree and Cpl. Arnold Bracy have been confined at the marine base in Quantico, Va., and face charges that they allowed Soviets into the most top-secret work places in the embassy.

Among the areas that may have been penetrated are rooms used for secret communications. State Department officials said that for the time being, they have switched to the use of couriers to hand carry communications in and out of Moscow.

'Star Wars' budget slashed

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan's "Star Wars" budget request was reduced sharply in the first test vote of the new Congress for his research program to find a shield against Soviet nuclear attack, congressional sources say.

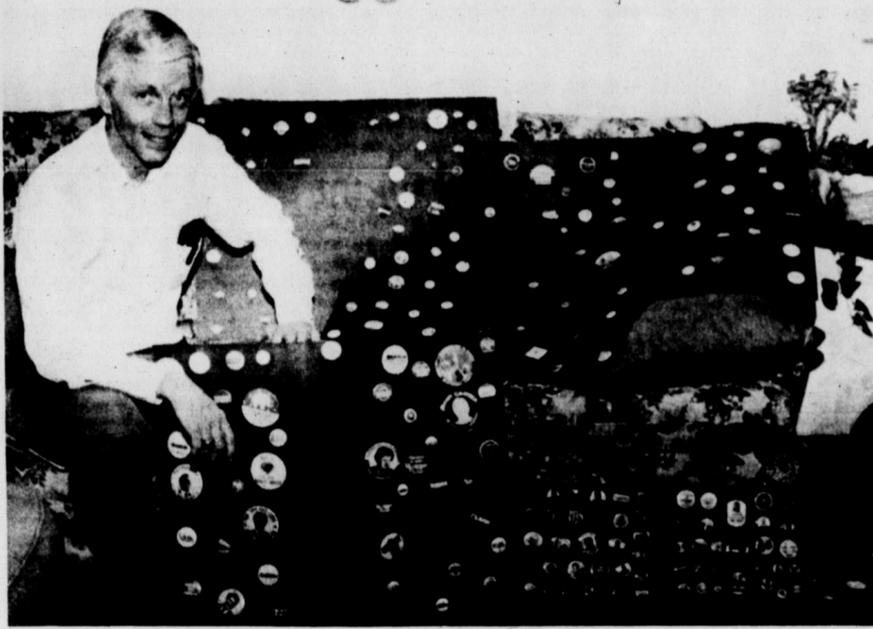

A House subcommittee voted Thursday to cut $2 billion from Reagan's request for $5.8 billion for Star Wars spending in the fiscal year starting Oct. 1, the sources said.

The decision was taken as the subcommittees of the Democratic-controlled House Armed Services Committee met to write a budget authorizing the Pentagon's budget for the next fiscal year.

The Star Wars vote came in the research and development subcommittee, according to the sources, who spoke only on condition of anonymity.

The full committee will meet next week to vote on the defense budget before sending it to the House for floor action later in the spring. A similar process will be followed in the Senate, and the differing versions that pass the chambers will be reconciled by a House-Senate conference committee.

Reagan wanted $312 billion for the Pentagon next year, which would be a 3 percent hike beyond inflation.

Manchee began saving the buttons 17 years ago when a former history student of his sent him a Harding-Coolidge pin (circa 1920). Manchee says half the fun of collecting the pins is seeing how many he can get free, but if he sees a valuable pin, he might spend some money. Snow moves south

Floods threatened in Maine

Floodwaters remained at rooftop levels in Maine today after destroying bridges and homes, carrying off an 18th century British stockade and driving hundreds from their homes, while a storm over the East produced snow almost to the Gulf of Mexico.

A state of emergency remained in effect in Maine, where state officials said water levels were too high to estimate the damage, but Guilford town manager Robert Littlefield said losses in his community alone were in the millions.

"I think we lost everything," said a weeping Rolande Poirier of Augusta, who clutched her dog and gazed at her flooded home. She vowed to move back "as soon as I can go in and clean it up."

Snow fell early today as far south as Hattiesburg, Miss., about 70 miles from the Gulf, and bridges were being sanded in Jackson. Snow also fell in Michigan's northeastern Lower Peninsula.

The forecast called for heavy snow today over the central and southern Appalachians, with up to 6 inches possible in the mountains of northwestern North Carolina and up to 4 inches in northeastern Tennessee.

Maine's most destructive flooding in memory began Wednesday when heavy rain and melting snow swelled New England rivers and streams. In Nashua, N.H., witnesses said a person fell into the flooding Nashua River on Wednesday and was believed drowned.

Maine's Kennebec and Androscoggin rivers ripped out bridges, swept houses downstream and drowned livestock. Hundreds of residents were evacuated from their homes, some taken to shelters by state and National Guard helicopters.

Residents braced for more flooding today along the Penobscot River, which was expected to crest at Eddington at 6 feet above flood stage. The St. John River also continued rising.

In Winslow, the Kennebec tore three homes from their foundations and swept away the Fort Halifax stockade, the oldest wooden fortification in the country. The British built the fort in 1754 to defend the frontier against the French and Indians.

In Augusta, a swollen brook lifted a vacant restaurant the size of a two-car garage off its foundation and carried it about 50 feet down a street, a spokesman for the city's Public Safety Department said.

Gov. John R. McKernan Jr. took a helicopter tour Thursday of areas of central Maine, where water lapped against rooftops.

In Massachusetts, about 20 families evacuated in Northampton were to return home today. Mayor David Musante had declared a state of emergency Thursday along the Connecticut River, which crested 7½ feet above flood stage at Montague.

A storm that caused a near blizzard in Michigan on Thursday dropped more snow today as it made a slow exit. Alpena had 9 inches of snow on the ground by early today.

Snow and sleet from the storm extended as far south Thursday night as northeast Texas and northwest Louisiana.

budget buster" that allocates money in a "pork-barrel formula." In a telephone interview from Washington, Gramm said Congress cannot fund the programs authorized in the bill and meet Gramm-Rudman spending reductions without raising taxes.

"Finally, the bill cheats Texas," said Gramm, "because this bill gives money to Boston, Mass., as a going-away gift to (retired House Speaker) Tip O'Neill and for a mass transit system in Los Angeles."

Bentsen maintained the bill is in line with Gramm-Rudman budget deficit targets.

Gov. Bill Clements, meanwhile, said he was pleased by the vote.

'Daddy' requires discretion

NEW YORK (AP) — ABC has been airing a "parental discretion" warning about its Sunday movie on teen pregnancy, "Daddy."

In fact, parents might want to make sure teen-agers see it. But be forewarned that, while tastefully done, the movie contains blunt references to sex and birth control.

"Daddy" doesn't insult kids' intelligence, but it has a lot to say about responsibility and choices. John Herzfeld ("On Fire") wrote and directed the movie. His teen-agers are treated with sympathy, but their situation is not romanticized. In fact, the movie concludes that their lives are, if not ruined, then irreparably disrupted.

Dermot Mulroney is 17-year-old Bobby, an aspiring classical guitarist, carousing his way through high school and planning on a music scholarship to a good college.

When his girlfriend, Stacey, played by Patricia Arquette (younger sister of Rosanna) announces she is pregnant, Bobby's parents argue about who should have had "the talk" with him. Stacey's mother begs her to have an abortion.

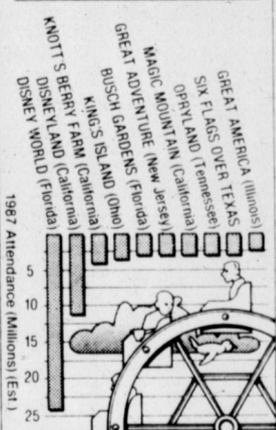

Stacey insists on having the baby. Bobby had fallen for another girl, the one who said "no," but he begins to love the unborn baby and stays with Stacey.

They get a crummy apartment. Stacey goes on welfare. Bobby continues to go to high school while holding down a part-time job. His friends party without him. The pressure gets to Stacey, and she runs away, leaving the baby with Bobby.

Union protestors rally against LTV

DALLAS (AP) — Union officials say they are planning a daylong rally at LTV Corp. headquarters later this month to protest what union leaders say is poor treatment of LTV retirees and strikers at an LTV plant in Arkansas.

Charlotte Consiglio, a union organizer, said plans call for up to 1,000 protestors to attend the rally on April 20. She said union members from as far away as Pennsylvania plan to attend.

Consiglio said the purpose of the rally is to call attention to retirees' loss of some of their pension benefits following LTV's bankruptcy last year and to publicize a 10-month-old strike at LTV's rocket-launcher plant in Camden, Ark.

"We're hoping to attract more public support and bring LTV Corp. back to the bargaining table and gain support for restitution of pension payments," said Consiglio, a Bell Helicopter Textron employee and member of the United Auto Workers Local 317.

Workers at the Arkansas plant and other LTV defense plants in Dallas and Grand Prairie are represented by the UAW.

Consiglio said plans are being made to bring the Camden strikers and some of their relatives to the rally.

Dolores Hrysyk, a representative of LTV retirees in Aliquippa, Pa., said about 100 pensioners have made arrangements to attend the rally.

LTV cited heavy losses in its steelmaking subsidiaries in July 1986 when it filed for protection under Chapter 11 of the federal bankruptcy code.

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Oliver Stone, whose film "Platoon" won four Oscars and has grossed more than $102 million, plans to write and direct a sequel about the painful homecoming of a Vietnam veteran.

Actor Charlie Sheen has expressed interest in reprising his role, which was patterned after the young Stone. John Daly, president of Hemdale Film Corp., said Thursday. He said the sequel will be called "Second Life."

"Platoon," which was based on Stone's experiences as a soldier in Vietnam during 15 months of combat, won the Academy Award for best picture Monday. It also won Stone an Oscar for best director.

NEW YORK (AP) — After two months on the job, White House spokesman Marlin Fitzwater admits that he worries about his daily grillings by the press corps, so much so that ABC correspondent Sam Donaldson haunts his dreams.

"I dream about the questions. I say, 'Donaldson, get the hell out of my bedroom,'" Fitzwater said in an interview published Thursday in The Wall Street Journal.

Despite his nightmares, Fitzwater says he likes the press.

"Sometimes, after a briefing, my staff will say, 'My God, that was nasty. They were really tough,' and I don't have any awareness of that," he said. "I like the people out there. I don't take it personally."

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Actors Debra Winger and Timothy Hutton have moved into a new beachside home in time for an expected addition to their new family.

Miss Winger, 31, and Hutton, 26, were married in March 1986 after a three-month courtship and are expecting their first baby in a few weeks, said Paula Askanas, secretary to Winger's publicist. She would not disclose the location of the couple's new home. The actress recently said she didn't want to wait until she was 40 to have a baby.

"You can have a child at 40, but you can't start a family," Miss Winger said, adding, "Now that I'm pregnant, I get these highs that are unbelievable."

TALLAHASSEE, Fla. (AP) — Jerry Mathers, who played buck-toothed Beaver Cleaver on television 30 years ago, named the governor and the state cabinet honorary residents of Mayfield.

The mythical town was the setting for the show "Leave It To Beaver," which ran from 1957 to 1963.

Mathers, who now stars in the cable TV series "The New Leave It To Beaver Show," and a co-star who plays his son on the show, Kipp Marcus, visited the capital Thursday to help promote April as cable TV month.

Mathers presented Gov. Bob Martinez and Cabinet members with blue sweaters, each with a yellow "M" on the pocket for Mayfield. He in turn was honored in a resolution as someone who "served as a role model to millions of children" and "transformed a stage image into a permanent part of American folklore."

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Grand Ole Opry star Johnny Russell, who wrote the song "Act Naturally," is recovering in a hospital from a stroke.

Russell, 47, suffered slight impairment on his right side as a result of the stroke at home Monday night, manager John Dorris said Thursday.

"Act Naturally" was a hit for the Beatles and for country star Buck Owens. Russell's own hits include "Rednecks, White Socks and Blue Ribbon Beer" and "Cattfish John."

Sales hit record at auction filled with romance, history

GENEVA (AP) — Buyers from around the world bid a record $30 million for the late Duchess of Windsor's jewels on the first night of a glittering two-day auction that evoked the romance of a love affair that King Edward VIII gave up his throne to keep.

With the 10 percent buyer's fee, the 95 lots sold Thursday brought a total of $33.5 million — more than four times the previous record for a single-owner collection of jewelry.

The top lot, a 31-carat diamond ring bought for the duchess in 1950, fetched $2.9 million, almost three times the estimate. It went to Tokyo jeweler Tsuneo Takago who said he would keep it in his personal collection.

Elizabeth Taylor picked up a poolside phone in Los Angeles to join mostly anonymous bidders from 24 countries in the sale by Sotheby's, which had estimated the auction would bring in $8 million.

Miss Taylor paid $65,000 for the Prince of Wales feathers brooch, a diamond clip bought in 1935 when the celebrated Windsor romance was still a closely guarded secret.

Sotheby's top jewel expert, John Block, said Miss Taylor and her late former husband, the actor Richard Burton, were friends of the duke and duchess and had admired the brooch.

"The more help a man has in his garden, the less it belongs to him," William H. Davies, English poet and author.

for years. "She also said that this is the most important jewel she ever purchased for herself," Block told about 200 reporters at the end of the four-hour first session early today.

The opening night of the sale, held in a red-and-white striped tent on the banks of Lake Geneva, drew 1,950 people, plus another 450 watching the auction in New York via a satellite hookup.

King Edward VIII abdicated the British throne in December 1936 to marry Wallis Warfield Simpson, a twice-divorced American. They became the Duke and Duchess of Windsor and lived in Paris. The duke died in 1972.

The auction's proceeds go to the Pasteur Institute in Paris, which will use the funds for research into cancer and AIDS.

That arrangement is in accordance with the will of the childless duchess, who died in Paris in April 1986 at age 89.

Seventeen television crews were on hand to film what Sotheby's had dubbed "the most important sale of the century."

An 18-carat gold and gem-set cigarette case inscribed "David from Wallis Christmas 1935," with an etched map tracing a joint holiday tour of Europe, fetched $266,000, almost 100 times the price it had been appraised at. The duke was known as David to his friends.

A set of diamond cufflinks and dress buttons, one inscribed "Hold Tight," brought $400,000, about 50 times the catalogue estimate, after a fierce battle between bidders in New York and Geneva.

An emerald engagement ring went to London jeweler Laurence Graff for $2.1 million, who also spent $2.3 million for a pair of yellow diamond clips.

The duchess' marriage contract bracelet, seen on a famous official wedding photograph, brought more than $1 million.

The previous world record total for a single-owner collection was $8.09 million paid at a Christie's auction in New York in 1984 for the jewels of Florence Gould, widow of American railway magnate Frank Gould.

Donaldson helps Mavericks improve

By DENNE H. FREEMAN
AP Sports Writer
DALLAS (AP) — Until James Lee Donaldson III bruised aboard, the Dallas Mavericks were the defensive wimps of the NBA.

The 7-foot-2 English-born Donaldson put a 272-pound, roadblock stop to easy layups and creampuff offensive rebound tips.

"The atmosphere improved from the moment James got here," said Dallas Coach Dick Motta.

Not to mention the improvement in the Midwest Division standings.

Let history record the date: Nov. 25th, 1985.

It was at this moment the Mavericks quit accepting elbows from other NBA bullies without returning same. Here was a giant floor sweeper who could clean more backboard glass than an industrial strength solvent.

The Los Angeles Clippers received Kurt Nimphius and the Mavericks' never dying gratitude in return.

It's the finest season in the seven-year history of the expansion franchise.

And you can thank Donaldson, who recently signed a five-year contract, which means he'll be rejecting ill-advised short shots for another half-decade.

"I like it in Dallas, I feel accepted here," Donaldson says. "I don't have to be a big scorer, just play defense and get my rebounds."

Donaldson was sixth in the NBA in rebounding in late March with almost 12 rebounds per game. You may recognize some names behind Donaldson in the rebound statistics, including Akeem Olajuwon of Houston and Larry Parish of Boston.

"When you talk about our success, you have to talk about James," says Dallas guard Rolando Blackman.

Donaldson runs the court well for a big man. He doesn't get winded easily. He averages 36.8 minutes a game, shoots 60 percent from the field (second best in the NBA), and 80 percent from the free throw line. He also is just out of the top 10 in blocked shots.

"My game plan is to slow down the big guys I play against," Donaldson says.

Hard to believe the 300-pounder had to be persuaded to try out for his Luther Burbank High School team when he was a teen-ager.

Donaldson, who earned a degree in sociology at Washington State, was born in Meachern, England, where his father was in the Air Force.

"The teams that I've left in the past, like the Seattle SuperSonics and the Clippers, I think have finally taken notice what I've done," Donaldson says. "Maybe they didn't have the patience to wait."

If they had only seen him recently in a game against the Chicago Bulls, 7 of 10 shots from the field, 2-of-2 from the foul line, 10 rebounds, and 2 blocked shots; or the night he had 21 rebounds and 3 blocks against the Houston Rockets.

And he's an iron man. Donaldson has already played in 500 straight NBA games, the second best active streak going.

"I can pace myself during a game," Donaldson said. "I like to get a lot of minutes. It doesn't bother me."

Now we know why baseball is so adamant about getting a testing program. Dwight Gooden has proven there is no fooling the little cup.

You can be the biggest star in the business, with a world of talent and an unlimited future. It makes no difference. Drug tests are non-discriminatory. A sample is a sample, no matter who produces it. Add the chemicals and the contents of the cup will tell us just how you've been spending your spare time.

Because the players association, citing the privacy issue, refuses to accept testing, baseball plods along with a unilateral policy, pieced together by Commissioner Peter Ueberroth.

The penalties depend on the circumstances. Violators might be assessed substantial fines and forced to perform community service, like Keith Hernandez, Dave Parker and the other survivors of the Pittsburgh drug trials. Or they might be suspended like LaMarr Hoyt. Or they might get none of the above, like Dwight Gooden.

This is a little like frontier justice, a dangerous way to operate.

Baseball's explanation is that the Pittsburgh case was a criminal proceeding and subjected the participants to one set of punishments. Hoyt had failed to stay clean after rehabilitation, producing a different level of violation. Gooden came forth voluntarily for testing, still another circumstance.

Will the Gooden case change the union's stand? It is unlikely. The players association says testing is appropriate only for cause — past problems or documented suspicion of current ones. From now on, though, you can be sure Gooden and the testing cup will be going steady. He has provided the cause.

There had been whispers about Gooden during and after what was for him a sub-par performance last year. So he volunteered to be tested "to end all the allegations." All the test did, though, was confirm them.

There are two ways to look at the bold decision by the 22-year-old pitcher to volunteer for testing. Either he was reaching out for help, knowing his sample would come up positive, or, armed with the arrogance of youth, he was defying the laboratory to catch him if it could.

It did. When Gooden's test results were in, there were a variety of reactions. One explanation was that it was a one-time-only use at a party. "We've nipped it in the bud," his agent, Jim Neader, said.

Somebody, maybe Neader, should have nipped it before that, though.

Frank Cashen, general manager of the Mets, was understandably distraught. Gooden, after all, is the crown jewel of the Mets' pitching staff.

"The sudden fame and fortune he achieved is nice," Cashen said sadly. "But we sort of robbed him of his youth."

Well, not really. The Mets robbed nobody. If the pressure of fame and big money was too much, then the kid could have walked away anytime and become a milkman or a truck driver or a plumber. The Mets paid Gooden for his youth. They are the ones who have been robbed.

Faced with the awful truth that one of the game's marquee names was involved with drugs, Ueberroth reached into his justice grab bag and offered Gooden two choices — suspension or rehabilitation. Gooden, being a sensible sort and remembering his $15 million salary, chose rehab.

So he is getting a free ride. No penalties. Just a request that he clean up his act and come back. When he does, he'll still be 22, still be a major league baseball player with all the attendant perks.

And he'll also be the most dangerous thing of all, a recovering addict, battling a very patient substance that will always be there, tempting and tantalizing, willing to wait for a weak moment.

That will be the greatest pressure of all.

Men's volleyball title match tonight at YMCA

The Hereford and Vicinity YMCA men's volleyball playoffs are scheduled for tonight.

Two first-round matches will be played, along with the semifinal matches and the championship match.

In the first-round matches, the Second Timers meet Casa Ramirez at 7 p.m., and the Ballbusters play Brown Drilling at 7:45 p.m.

The winner of the Second Timers-Casa Ramirez match will play against the Boots team at 8:30 p.m. in one of the semifinal matches. In the other semifinal contest, the winner of the Ballbusters-Brown Drilling match will go against Hereford YMCA at 8:30 p.m.

The winners of the semifinal matches will then play in the championship match at 9:15 p.m.

At Hagler-Leonard news conference

'Trade secrets' not revealed

By TIM DAHLBERG
AP Sports Writer

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) — Goody Petronelli, one of Marvellous Marvin Hagler's trainers, couldn't resist posing the question to Angelo Dundee, trainer of Sugar Ray Leonard.

"How is Ray going to fight Marvin Hagler?" Petronelli wanted to know during a news conference held Thursday by Dundee.

"We don't give away trade secrets," answered Dundee, who pointed to Petronelli while telling the assembled media: "This guy's been out in the sun too long."

Hagler has been working out in a tiny downtown gym since arriving in Las Vegas on Tuesday and has no plans to open it to either the press or public.

"We've got something up our sleeves a little bit," the champion said. "I'm still putting the final touches on it."

Leonard's training, on the other hand, was opened briefly to the press both Tuesday and Wednesday before

Ray Robinson won the world middleweight title five times and made only seven defenses of the crown.

When Jimmy Braddock took the heavyweight championship from Max Baer in 1935 he was a 10-to-1 underdog.

Henry Armstrong, who held three major boxing titles — featherweight, lightweight and middleweight — began his ring career under the name of Melody Jackson.

being closed for final fight preparations.

On Wednesday, Leonard sparred three rounds with a young southpaw middleweight who had had four professional fights. Leonard got hit repeatedly with a right jab and some boxing observers said they thought Leonard, with his newfound bulk, looked slow and overtrained.

"Gyms are a liar," countered Dundee, who trained Muhammad Ali the majority of his boxing career. "Some guys are gym fighters, some aren't. That wasn't what you're going to see April 6."

Leonard agreed, saying the added 30-13 pounds has made no difference in his speed.

"There are people who may think differently, but I'm faster than any of the people out there," Leonard said.

Dundee said he had heard that Hagler was also having problems with his sparring partners, the triplet brothers of former heavyweight champion Mike Weaver.

Although the banter was light, preparations for Monday night's extravaganza were serious as the pre-fight hoopla moved into the last days. A final press conference featuring both fighters was scheduled today. After that they will be secluded from the estimated 1,000 press who are covering the event.

The stakes are high for the scheduled 12-round fight, with Leonard guaranteed $11 million and Hagler $12 million. It is a fight that boxing fans hope will answer many questions, the main one being whether a 30-year-old former welterweight champion who has fought only once in five years can beat a legitimate middleweight champion who hasn't lost in 11 years.

Odds-makers say Leonard can't, and have made him a 3-1 underdog. Dundee, who watched Ali pull off several miracles, disagrees.

Leonard, who said he weighed 157 pounds, close to the 160-pound middleweight limit, last week, looks in training like a legitimate middleweight, at least in size. He biceps are enlarged and his once-gangly legs have filled out.

Whether Leonard still has the hand speed and has shaken ring rust are questions that won't be answered until Monday night. Hagler, on the other hand, must endure questions about the toll taken in his last two fights, against John Mugabi and Thomas Hearns. His true age is also being questioned, with some saying he is closer to 35 than the listed 32.

Will Giants rise to top of National League West?

By Murray Olderman

At the moment, the managers in the National League West hold center stage. And the key to the 1987 season.

San Francisco's Roger Craig and Houston's Hal Lanier, who were introduced last year, revived moribund franchises. Larry Bowa, making his debut this spring, hopes to do the same in San Diego.

Cincinnati's Pete Rose proved he had more than marquee value as the skipper. And then you have the old-timers: L.A.'s Tommy Lasorda, who bleeds Dodger blue, and Atlanta's Chuck Tanner, perennially optimistic. Their credentials merit respect.

Here is the predicted order of finish in the NL West in 1987.

1. SAN FRANCISCO GIANTS. Roger Craig, guru of the split-finger fast ball, imbued the helter-skelter Giants with the confidence that they can thrive in frigid, airy Candlestick Park. He taught the Giants how to win. Helped by GM Al Rosen's machinations, they are nearing their first title since 1957.

Craig got them over .500 by transforming Mike Krukow into a 20-game winner. He'll convert Mark Davis to a starter, get good relief from Scott Garrelts and pray for runs. That means revivals by both Chili Davis and Jeff Leonard in the outfield. The young hopes are first baseman Will Clark, spunky second-sacker Robby Robinson and enigmatic third baseman Chris Brown.

2. CINCINNATI REDS. It's unlikely Pete Rose will try to extend his playing career unless the Reds can't find a first baseman. A rising superstar in center field, Eric Davis, will be joined on the pucker line by rookie Kal Daniels. The youth movement also finds Barry Larkin or Kurt Stillwell at short, definitely ending the Dave Concepcion era.

Balance that with the experience of Parker, third baseman Buddy Bell and catcher Bo Diaz. All are quite serviceable. Pete's pitching starts with Tom Browning and Bill Gullickson. He's hoping for an effective return of former ace Mario Soto. The bullpen is Jerry Rice of the San Francisco 49ers scored 15 touchdowns on passes in 1986 to lead the NFL in that category.

as strong as any with Ron Robinson and John Franco.

3. HOUSTON ASTROS. Hal Lanier did the most impressive managing job in the majors last year, leading the nondescript Astros to within a shade of the World Series. He was assisted, of course, by the emergence of Mike Scott as the NL's best pitcher. Pitching is the Astro strong suit again.

Scott, Bob Knepper, ageless Nolan Ryan and Jimmy Deshaies start, they're relieved by Dave Smith and Charlie Kerfeld.

The sprouting of first baseman Glenn Davis and right fielder Kevin Bass as heavy hitters provides offense. Bill Doran at second base is a team leader, too. The Astros platoon the other infield positions. The big question: Can they get another productive season out of 40-year-old Jose Cruz, their steadiest hitter over the years?

4. LOS ANGELES DODGERS. Don't overlook Tommy Lasorda's gang. The unexpected slump last year was traceable directly to the injuries suffered by Pedro Guerrero and Mike Marshall, their chief RBI men. If they deliver their usual quota of runs, the Dodgers will be right back on top.

You can't beat that pitching rotation. Fernando Valenzuela, Orel Hersheiser, Bob Welch, Rick Honeycutt. And the bullpen was jacked up by the acquisition of Matt Young from Seattle. Except for Steve Sax at second, the infield is slightly unsettled.

Franklin Stubbs will get a shot at first base. Mariano Duncan has to settle down defensively at short. Ken Landreaux retains center field almost by default. But oh, that pitching!

5. SAN DIEGO PADRES. If enthusiasm, hustle and aggression are the ingredients of winning, rookie skipper Larry Bowa is the key to a resurgence. He displayed those traits as a ballplayer. However, the Padres lost stability by trading off catcher Terry Kennedy and outfielder Kevin McReynolds, and suspending drug-troubled hurler LaMarr Hoyt for a year.

Former Met Kevin Mitchell has been assigned third base. Former Met prospects Stan Jefferson and Shawn Abner have designs on outfield jobs. Rookie catcher Benito Santiago is expected to be this year's whiz. And the pitching staff has been shored up by ex-Oriole Storm Davis. The solid incumbents are top-grade hitter Tony Gwynn and shortstop Garry Templeton. Steve Garvey's age (38) makes him problematical at first.

6. ATLANTA BRAVES. TV exposure on owner Ted Turner's superstation doesn't make this America's team. The Braves are deteriorating. Bob Horner went the free agent route. Arm trouble will keep relief ace Bruce Sutter inactive for another year. Instead of developing their own players, the Braves go for retirees: catcher Ozzie Virgil and aging outfielder Ken Griffey last year, second baseman Damaso Garcia and young outfielder Dion James this spring. The mound corps, headed by Rick Mahler and David Palmer, lacks overall class, and it's spotty in the bullpen. The best of the Braves as he has been for the last decade, is Dale Murphy. One man alone can't bring this franchise back.

Denver, Seattle fail to clinch playoff spots

By The Associated Press

The Golden State Warriors and Seattle SuperSonics entered their games Thursday night with magic numbers of one for clinching NBA Western Conference playoff berths.

It stayed that way. The Warriors, looking for their first playoff berth in 10 seasons, fell to the Denver Nuggets 132-96. Golden State's worst loss of the season. The SuperSonics, who haven't been in postseason play in three seasons, lost to Los Angeles 117-114 as the Lakers clinched a tie for the best record in the conference this season.

Neither Golden State nor Seattle plays tonight — but both could make the playoffs if the Phoenix Suns lose to Utah.

In other NBA games Thursday night, Detroit pounded Indiana 119-73 and Sacramento downed the Los Angeles Clippers 125-115. Nuggets 132, Warriors 96.

Lafayette Lever scored 21 points and grabbed 10 rebounds to lead a balanced Denver scoring attack. Alex English scored 20 points for Denver, while Darrell Walker added 15 and Mike Evans and Danny Schayes 14 each as the Nuggets led by as many as 40 points.

Rod Higgins led the Warriors with 19 points, while Chris Mullin had 16. Lakers 117, Sonics 114.

The SuperSonics lost a lot more than a game. Starting center Alton Lister suffered a broken ankle in the first half.

The 7-foot Lister, acquired by the Sonics last summer in a trade with Milwaukee for Jack Sikma, suffered the injury after making a layup with 6:05 left in the first half. His injury, at first thought to be just a sprained ankle, was diagnosed after the game when he was taken to a hospital for precautionary X-rays.

Magic Johnson scored 34 points, grabbed 10 rebounds and handed out 13 assists as the Lakers clinched at least a tie for the best record in the Western conference. It was the eighth time this season Johnson has broken double figures in the three categories in a game.

James Worthy added 29 points and A.C. Green 17 for Los Angeles.

Pembroke Finlayson pitched one-third of an inning for the Brooklyn Dodgers in the 1908 season and was so inefficient he wound up the season with an ERA of 135.00.

Xavier McDaniel led the Sonics with 35 points while Dale Ellis had 27 and Tom Chambers 26.

Pistons 119, Pacers 73. The Pacers did the opposite of the Warriors and Sonics. They collapsed AFTER clinching a playoff berth.

Indiana beat Chicago Wednesday night for its first playoff spot since 1981. The next night Detroit set a team record for margin of victory.

Vinnie Johnson scored 25 points and Rick Mahorn and John Salley added 17 apiece for Detroit, which pulled within one-half game of idle Central Division-leader Atlanta.

Detroit's 46-point victory margin topped its previous mark of 44, which was accomplished twice, the last time in a 144-100 triumph over Kansas City on Feb. 18, 1973.

Kings 125, Clippers 115. Reggie Theus scored 17 of his 32 points in the third quarter to lead the Kings.

Mike Woodson scored 29 points as the Clippers reached the 60-loss figure for the first time since the 1981-82 season, when they recorded the worst mark in franchise history. The Clippers, who have yet to win consecutive games this season, must win six of their remaining 10 games to avoid equalling that 17-65 mark.

For NBA expansion team

Charlotte is longshot

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — An area figured to have little chance because of its reputation as a hotbed of college basketball has been recommended as the home of a National Basketball Association expansion franchise for the 1988-89 season.

"We were such a longshot candidate," Charlotte team spokesman Dan Lohwasser, said. "People even locally didn't give us much of a chance ... much less coming out No. 1. Of course, it still has to get by the NBA Board of Governors, so we still have some work to do."

The NBA expansion committee recommended on Thursday that Charlotte, Minneapolis and either of two Florida cities, Miami or Orlando, be added to the league by the 1989-90 season.

In a decision that must be ratified by the NBA's Board of Governors, which will meet in New York on April 22, the five-member expansion committee recommended that Charlotte begin play in 1988-89 and Minneapolis the next season. The Florida franchise and its year of entry will be decided in October.

Each franchise will have to pay a $32.5 million entry fee.

If the team owners approve Charlotte's entry, the new team — to be known as the Spirit — will play in the 23,500-seat, $47 million Charlotte Coliseum now under construction. The structure is expected to be completed in early 1988.

Lohwasser said businesses came through with season ticket sales, which totaled 8,900.

The Carolina Cougars, North Carolina's last professional basketball team, moved to St. Louis for the start of the 1975 season in the American Basketball Association.

The committee designated Charlotte and Florida for the Eastern Conference and Minneapolis, original home of the Los Angeles Lakers, for the Midwest division of the Western Conference.

It also recommended expansion drafts in 1988 and 1989 with each of the existing teams being permitted to protect eight players each of those years. No existing team could lose more than one player.

While Charlotte officials were surprised by their top-place finish, team boosters in Miami were shocked for the opposite reason.

"Clearly this is a surprise but one thing I've learned is that with the NBA, there are no surprises," said Lewis Schaffel, a former general manager of the New Jersey Nets now associated with the Miami group.

The 23-team league had voted last October to expand by as many as three teams over the next four years and appointed a committee headed by Richard Bloch, owner of the Phoenix Suns. Seven applicants emerged — the four designated cities as well as Anaheim, Calif., Toronto and St. Petersburg, Fla.

"We felt these four cities rose to the top," Russell Granik, the NBA's executive vice-president, said of the finalists. Although the three sites eliminated all had problems of one kind or another with arenas, Bloch said in a statement issued by the league that he felt "any of these seven markets could, at some point, successfully support an NBA franchise."

Granik said the Minneapolis franchise would play its first season in the Hubert H. Humphrey Metrodome, a football-baseball facility, and then move to an arena in downtown Minneapolis. He said that if construction had not begun on the new site sometime in 1988, the franchise could be withdrawn because the Metrodome's two-day conversion time from football or baseball configuration to basketball was not acceptable over the long term.

Minneapolis officials said that, since the team's proposed starting date would be in the fall of 1989, the new arena should be ready.

Robert Stein, lawyer for the Minneapolis group, said no major decisions would be made until after the NBA board meets, but he indicated there would be few problems.

The league didn't specify the problems with Miami's application, although Schaffel said he knew there were some. The city is building a new arena in a downtown area which some critics have said may present parking problems.

Has slowed Astros' outfielder this spring

Can Bass overcome surgery?

By MICHAEL A. LUTZ
AP Sports Writer

KISSIMMEE, Fla. (AP) — Questions always seem to await Kevin Bass' arrival at spring training.

Bass reported last spring expecting to fit into new manager Hal Lanier's starting plans but he didn't know where.

Lanier put him in left field and Bass produced a career best season, finishing fourth in the National League in hitting at .311, fifth with 184 hits, .486 slugging percentage and 287 total bases.

Lanier found Bass to be a perfect fit.

Now the question becomes: Is Bass for real and can he overcome arthroscopic shoulder surgery that has slowed him this spring?

Bass says he can answer both questions.

"The shoulder is going to be fine and I'm going to try to hit .300 just like I did last year," Bass said. "If every man takes it upon himself to give his best then we'll win again."

The uncertainty of last season is gone as far as Bass is concerned.

"This year is a lot easier," he said. "I know I'm going to be in there so I'm just gearing myself for the start of the regular season."

Bass was one of three Astros to place in the top 10 voting for the league's Most Valuable Player trophy. First baseman Glenn Davis was second, Bass was seventh and Mike Scott was 10th.

Bass hit .378 in June and put together a 20-game hitting streak from July 22 to Aug. 13. The streak matched the fourth longest in club history.

Bass also had a "20-20" season, hitting 20 home runs and stealing 22 bases. New York's Darryl Strawberry and Cincinnati's Eric Davis were the only other 20-20 players in the National League last season.

"I've got confidence in my ability. I don't worry about whether I can have another year like last year, I just know that I'm going to try as hard as I can to do it," Bass said.

Bass didn't play in the early spring games, giving his shoulder more time to recover. But he's warmed up quickly, hitting .375 in 15 games going into the final week of the spring.

Bass has 12 hits in 32 at bats as a regular and he's three of six as a pinch hitter.

Ann Landers

Don't wait for hearse

DEAR ANN LANDERS: This appeared in the St. Maria Goretti church bulletin. I saw myself in it and thought maybe you might want to share it with your readers. Many of them are sure to squirm a bit, as I did.—A Reader in Arlington, Texas

DEAR READER: A little squirming never hurt anybody. Thanks for sending it on.

DEAR CHURCH MEMBER: Don't wait until the hearse hauls you to church. If you do, you will go, regardless of the weather. There will be beautiful flowers there, but you won't enjoy them. The priest may say some good things about you, but you won't be able to hear them. There will be beautiful music, but you won't be enjoying it. There will be heartfelt prayers, but they will not touch your heart. There will be friends and relatives there, but you will not worship with them.

Dance planned tonight

There will be a dance from 8-11 p.m. today at the First Presbyterian Church. Music will be by Shadow.

For further information, call Barry or Betsy Ensign-George at 364-0253 or 364-2471.

You will go, no matter how many hypocrites are there. You will go, no matter how much you are needed at home. You won't be concerned about whether you're dressed right. After that final trip you will never have to decide whether to attend church or not. You'll never get another chance. Aren't you glad to be alive and well and have the choice of whether or not to go to church?

DEAR ANN LANDERS: Here is another side of the story to "Empty Promises in Utah," the daughter-in-law who is upset because "Dad" was reluctant to retire and give the business to his three sons.

Our No. 3 son decided to stay with the family business, of which I am president. He announced that the business will be his when we retire. (Wrong). At age 30, "Bob" has made it clear that he will not work himself to death like his dad is doing. (Dad is 57 and intends to retire when he is 60).

Bob spends many working hours on the golf course—says he makes business contacts there. He's a clock-watcher and rarely closes the office because he's rarely the last one to leave.

He has no financial investment in the business and is a poor financial manager. If the business were given to him, his first purchase would be an expensive sports car. When we discussed the possibility of selling the business, he said if we did, he would start his own business and take all our customers.

Why do we tolerate this irresponsibility and brought in new contracts when the business was about to fold.

Family business can be a pain in the neck. Any suggestions on how to avoid the pitfalls?—Mom in Ohio

DEAR OHIO: Unless the kids get along really well with Dad they should go to work for someone else—or for themselves. If they do go into a family business, long-range plans should be made—and I mean everything should be in writing.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I just got married and I've received several gifts that didn't include a card with the giver's name.

I've kept records of all the people I invited to the wedding so I could narrow the "mystery" givers down to a few names. But how do I determine whom each gift is from? Help! I want to respond and thank these generous people.—Mrs. K in Minnesota

DEAR MRS. K: Phone the store. They may be able to help identify the giver.

Planning a wedding? What's right? What's wrong? Ann Landers' "New Bride's Guide" will relieve your anxiety. To receive a copy, send $2 plus a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope (39 cents postage) to Ann Landers, P.O. Box 11562, Chicago, Ill. 60611-0562.

C.R. WALSER

C.R. Walser celebrates 99th birthday with party Sunday

C.R. Walser was honored for his 99th birthday with a dinner and birthday party March 29 at the Easter Community building.

In charge of the arrangements were his daughter, Leatrus Clark of Hereford, and granddaughter, Bobbie Purcell of Summerfield.

Three birthday cakes formed the centerpiece as 76 people attended the birthday celebration.

Walser's children were also present. They included Mr. and Mrs. Guy Walser of Dimmitt, Mr. and Mrs. J.O. Clark and Mr. and Mrs. Hollis Walser, all of Hereford, and D.C. Walser of Amarillo.

Five generations were present from the Guy Walser family: The birthday celebrant, C.R.; his son, Guy; his daughter, Bobbie Waiser Purcell; her son, Don Purcell; and his daughters, Amy, Mandi and Lindsey of Canadian.

Walser has been a resident of Deaf Smith County since 1917. His wife, Della, passed away in 1974.

Rabies clinic Saturday

The Easter 4-H Club will sponsor a rabies clinic Saturday, April 4, from 1-5 p.m. at the Easter Community Building located at the intersection of Farm Road 1055 and 2397 south of Hereford.

Dr. Charles Atchley will be giving the vaccinations.

Cost for the rabies shots will be $5 per animal. The Canine 4-Way shot will also be available at an additional $7 per vaccination.

Records will be filled out on each animal.

The public is urged to bring their pets out for their vaccinations.

The 50-star flag of the United States was raised for the first time officially at 12:01 a.m. on July 4, 1960, at Fort McHenry National Monument in Baltimore.

POLLY'S POINTERS Her secret recipe for macaroni dish

By Polly Fisher

DEAR POLLY — Read the recent letter concerning the leftover macaroni salad made with mayonnaise. The reader warned the dish up, and her mayonnaise-hating husband loved it. Everyone has always raved over the macaroni and cheese casserole that I've made for years. I usually never reveal the secret to them unless they insist on the recipe, which includes the addition of 1/2 cup of mayonnaise. It truly enhances the flavor. When I taste other macaroni and cheese dishes without the mayonnaise, it always seems something is missing. The mayonnaise makes a big difference. — GOLDIE

DEAR POLLY — I think I have a cute idea for an outdated cloth calendar. If I have a grandchild born that year, I circle the date in red marking pen. Then, for his or her first birthday, I make a pillow out of the calendar. I double it over and put in a piece of foam for the filler. The child can play with the pillow. Whenever it gets soiled, the mother just puts it in the washer. I have 14 great-grandchildren, and just about everyone has had a pillow. — IRENE

DEAR IRENE — Thanks for a lovely Pointer — and congratulations on a wonderful family! — POLLY

DEAR POLLY — Masking tape placed on the bottoms of shoes or boots gives them a better grip. This is especially helpful on new ones that Yogurt cheese, frozen yogurt, yogurt salads, main dishes and breads are just a few of the delicious recipes you'll find in Polly's newsletter "Cooking with Yogurt." Send $1 for each copy to POLLY'S POINTERS, in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 93863, Cleveland, OH 44101-5863. Be sure to include the title.

New Missionaries

The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-Day Saints has four new missionaries. They include elders (from left) Arthur Lucardie, Mike Chambers, Dave Hancock and Dan Bird. Each will be serving in various parts of Texas from Fort Worth to San Angelo to Amarillo.

Some people have believed eating dandelion roots could relieve rheumatism.

CHURCH OF JESUS CHRIST OF LATTER-DAY SAINTS

Four new missionaries for the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-Day Saints moved to Hereford last month.

Each of the missionaries will be serving in various parts of Texas from Fort Worth to San Angelo to Amarillo, which is designated as the Texas Lubbock Mission. They will spend three-to-six months in each area, sharing the gospel of Jesus Christ as it is found in the Bible and the Book of Mormon, which contains writings from prophets who lived in the Ancient Americas.

Elder Dave Hancock, 20, is from Fairfax, Virginia. He attended Brigham Young University for a semester before his mission and plans to return and pursue a degree in political science.

Elder Mike Chambers, 20, is from San Diego, Calif. He attended Brigham Young University for a year-and-a-half before his mission. He plans to return and major in civil engineering with a minor in Latin American studies. Both he and Hancock work with Spanish-speaking people.

Elder Dan Bird, 20, is from Manteca, Calif. He plans to attend the Modesto Junior College to pursue a degree in business management.

Elder Arthur Lucardie, 21, was born in Holland and now lives in California. He plans to attend a technical college and pursue a degree in computer electronics. "We are all happy to be here in Hereford to serve the Lord," the group stated.

North Texas woman fascinated by fasteners

By MARY DOCLAR Gainesville Daily Register

SHERMAN, Texas (AP) — Zippers, snaps, laces and even the trendy Velcro strips pale in comparison to what Virginia French considers a clothes fastener that has it all sewn up — the button.

Buttons are Mrs. French's business, livelihood, inspiration and joy. Her family room, spare bedroom and closets are bursting with buttons that spill over into file cabinets and dresser drawers.

She is a prime mover in the Red River, Texas and National button societies, and haunts antique shops, Goodwill and the Salvation Army just looking for a disk with that special something.

Her discourses on buttons are so frequent and lengthy that one couldn't blame her relatives for switching from blouses to pullovers.

But she says she is not alone in her fascination. Buttons trail only stamps and coins as the most popular collectible, Mrs. French says.

Mrs. French wasn't always such an ardent collector. She and her husband, Richard, formerly owned a catering service in Gainesville, and then were far more concerned with brisket than buttons.

"People don't think buttons are of any interest," she said. "But once you've been bitten by the bug, you never get over the illness."

She says she got bitten in 1968 when the Frenches moved to San Antonio to do catering at the convention center for the HemisFair. To adjust to the new city and make friends, Mrs. French decided to try her hand at china painting classes.

"Then this welcome greeter in San Antonio came to the door. She said, 'If you like (china painting) you'd like the buttons,'" Mrs. French said.

So she attended her first meeting of the Cen-Tex Button Club, loved it and joined.

Her first card was composed of cheap crystal buttons.

"This is the most expensive card I have, because look what it's bought me," she said, pointing to hundreds of cards of buttons of every shape, size and design imaginable.

In the Frenches' Sherman home are cabinets bursting with cards, boxes stacked high with button displays and streams of loose disks flowing out from desk tops and plastic bags.

Mrs. French has buttons of every type imaginable — blue and white Bicentennial, Bethlehem pearl, olive wood from the Holy Land, family crest, black glass, brass uniform, kaleidoscope and Lutheran cross.

She has "old" buttons — those manufactured before 1918 — in pearl, ivory, china and wood, and "new" buttons made of plastic, Jasperware and synthetic materials. Many of the buttons are commemorative, sporting prominent and familiar faces from Ronald Reagan to the Beatles. Others depict historic events, such as man's first landing on the moon.

Mrs. French said she doesn't how many cards she has, and won't put a price on her extensive collection. "I just trust the good Lord to take care of them," she said.

The Frenches often travel to button collectors' competitions across the country.

"To me (competing) is a challenge — it's the only way to learn as a collector," she said. "If you don't try, you're never going to learn." She has an album full of ribbons won in the contests.

There are 11 button societies that meet each year for state competition, and some 3,000 members of the National Society that also meet annually to compete in various states.

The competition judges are eagle-eyed, carefully examining each entrant's card to ensure it is properly composed.

They are also sticklers for age, Mrs. French said, being able to tell how long the button has been around through the condition of its shank.

The competitions are also a good place to add to her collection, Mrs. French says.

"You can buy (buttons) from dealers at the state and national clubs — you can get almost any subject you want," she said.

"And most of the dealers are men, because it's a big job to carry all those buttons around," she laughs.

Prices on buttons depend on the age and type of button, but many collectors find themselves able to trade buttons for something that truly strikes their fancy.

"When I first started, I went to the cleaners, and they let me go through their old button box," she said. Additional button goldmines include secondhand and antique shops, Mrs. French says.

"Somehow, when you collect something, you end up collecting everything," she said. "There's no end to it. You can never be bored or unhappy with your buttons."

Which auto company makes what— where?

By JANET BRAUNSTEIN AP Auto Writer

DETROIT (AP) — Volkswagen ads emphasize the West-German engineering of the automaker's Golf, GTI and Jetta cars without adding that they are built in Pennsylvania.

Honda commercials don't mention that the Honda Accord and some Civic models are built in Ohio.

And in one of Chevrolet's TV spots, the camera zooms in on a Chevrolet Spectrum to the automaker's "Heartbeat of America" theme song. There's no mention that the Spectrum is made by Isuzu Motors Co. in Japan and imported by General Motors Corp.

It's becoming harder for consumers to tell whose car they really are buying — a foreign-brand car built in the United States, a U.S.-brand car built overseas, or a car built by one foreign automaker and sold by another.

"It's going to become so pervasive that it's going to be impossible to keep track from a consumer's perspective," said John Hammond, a partner and analyst with J.D. Power & Associates in Westlake Village, Calif.

While trade disputes publicly emphasize automakers' different nationalities and interests, companies are creating a global network that recognizes few political boundaries. Joint ventures also have blurred distinctions between companies.

Chrysler Corp. ads play up Japanese quality and point out that Dodge and Plymouth Colt subcompacts, sporty Chrysler Conquest and several of the automaker's small trucks are made by Japan's Mitsubishi Motors Corp. for Chrysler.

Chrysler also owns part of Italy's Maserati luxury sports car maker and one-quarter of Mitsubishi, which owns part of Korea's Hyundai, the widely successful maker of the Hyundai Excel and maker of Mitsubishi's coming Precis subcompact.

GM owns part of Isuzu, Suzuki and South Korea's Daewoo Motor Co., which is making GM's new Pontiac LeMans subcompact. GM also owns all of Britain's Group Lotus, a luxury sports car and engineering company, and Vauxhall Motors Ltd., as well as Australia's Holden's Ltd. and Germany's Adam Opel AG.

Ford Motor Co. owns part of Kia Motors Corp. of South Korea, which makes Ford's coming Festiva minicar, and a fourth of Mazda Motor Corp., which designed Ford's Mexican-built Mercury Tracer compact.

Mazda also is building an assembly plant in Flat Rock, Mich., and Ford will sell at least half of the cars produced there under Ford nameplates.

For example, GM's Chevrolet Nova was designed and engineered by Toyota and is made in Fremont, Calif., at a joint GM-Toyota plant that also produces Toyota's FX16 car. Chrysler and Mitsubishi are building a plant in Illinois.

Indeed, a growing number of foreign automakers, including Subaru-maker Fuji Heavy Industries Ltd. and Toyota, are building or planning U.S. factories to escape import quotas set by the Japanese government.

Fortunately for the car buyer, the importance of which country a car is made in has diminished significantly in the last seven years, Hammond said.

"The reason consumers have differentiated about where a car was produced was because of quality and because of price, but based on our research, the gap in terms of quality and to a lesser extent in terms of price is narrowing," Hammond said.

Texas univerty allows alcohol on campus

DENTON, Texas (AP) — After an 86-year dry spell, students at Texas Women's University will now be allowed to have alcohol on campus, officials say.

The change was approved Wednesday by the TWU Board of Regents, said Dr. Glenda Simmons, vice president for student life.

Beth Costa, president of the Student Government Association, said the ban on alcohol, which had been in effect since the school was founded, made it seem "like we're being chastised because we are living on campus."

She said the ban on alcohol didn't stop students drinking because they were able to get it elsewhere.

The new policy permits alcoholic drinks at the clubhouse of the TWU golf course and in dormitory rooms of students who are at least 21, she said.

Organizers of student functions can apply to have alcohol served at their gatherings and members of the community may serve alcohol at campus events, such as wedding receptions.

Faculty groups also may serve alcohol in a "private club environment" on campus, Ms. Simmons said.

Only one person voiced protest to the vote. Regent Fran Chiles of Fort Worth brought several newspaper articles and statistics to bolster her arguments at a subcommittee meeting.

"I think we should take a stand not to let this insidious, deceptive drug on campus," Mrs. Chiles said.

The full board approved the measure 6-1, with Mrs. Chiles dissenting.

Other arguments for the policy change emphasized that TWU's prohibition was out of step with other state universities. The average TWU student is 30 years old, well above drinking age, and a more liberal policy was viewed as easier to enforce.

Regents called for a twice-yearly review of the policy.

Trendy marinated beef skirt more than a fad

EL PASO, Texas (AP) — Fajitas are fun.

Part of the fun is knowing you're hip. Fajitas (fab-HEE-tahs, not fuh-jitters) are a fad that's turning into a trend that's becoming a fixture on Mexican food menus.

Fajitas are marinated meat and any combination of a variety of side dishes rolled in a tortilla (usually flour, but corn if you like). Price range at restaurants generally is $5 to $9 a plateful.

Fajitas have grown so rapidly that their preferred meat — beef skirts, previously thrown away or ground into hamburger — has increased in price since 1978 to $2.79 a pound from $1.79. The beef skirt, or diaphragm muscle, is rare or more expensive in many parts of the country and is often replaced by flank, round steak, or other meats or poultry.

Fajitas comprise 80 percent of the business at the Tigua Indians Restaurant. This place even sells shirts and caps emblazoned with "I (heart) Fajitas at the Tigua Indians Restaurant."

Situated in the 100 block of Old Pueblo Road, the Tigua Indians Restaurant and its more sophisticated suppertime annex — Wynys Restaurant — list "El Paso's First And Only Original Fajitas" atop their menu.

"On a good day and night we sell more than 300 orders of fajitas," manager Juan Lopez said. "Since we added fajitas to our menu about three years ago, the popularity has been overwhelming."

The Tigua Indians Restaurant and Wynys offer beef, chicken or shrimp fajitas, ranging in price from $6.95 to $8.95. Soon to roam on the menu are buffalo fajitas.

Another part of fajita fun is in cooking the trendy dish. About the stiffest intellectual test for a fajita cook is knowing how to tell dusk from dawn. That's how long fajita meat should wallow in its all-important marinade.

"We like to cook fajitas because a different cook can add a different variety to the process," said Nate Campos, head cook and kitchen manager at the Tigua Indians Restaurant. "The marinating takes a long time, but the cooking and the serving are fairly easy and quick."

Construction of the fajitas is fun, too. Everyone at the table gets to work. You just hold a tortilla in one hand, then use the other hand to pile on the meat, plus whatever side dishes you like.

It gets rather hectic. One man's food fight is another man's fajita. Lots of fajita builders load up on everything, and they have a hard time making the tortilla ends meet around the concoction.

Consuelo Forti, who with her husband, Leo, owns and operates Forti's Mexican Elder Restaurant at 321 Chelsea, said guacamole is the most popular addition. "We also have pico de gallo, picante and other things for people to add. Our customers love to make their own fajitas."

Fajitas are fun to smell. Fajitas are the smelliest of all Mexican foods. They aren't classy enough to claim an aroma. They just smell.

Actually, it's the marinade that smells. But it smells good, like the residue crust of chicken fried steak that never quite got out of the skillet.

Campos said soy sauce is the primary marinade ingredient at the Tigua Indians Restaurant. Mrs. For-ti said her marinade depends most on lime juice.

Confused? Lazy? Solution: Retreat to a grocery store and buy fajita marinade off the shelf. Prices range from 79 cents to $3.09. Among liquid marinades are Fabulosa Fajitas, JR's Mesquite Fajita Marinade and Old El Paso Fajita Marinade. Two marinade powders are Lawrence Holland Fajita Marinade Seasoning and Rio Grande Valle Fajita Seasoning.

Fajitas are fun to pronounce. Jack In The Box Restaurants capitalized on the fun by introducing its Fajita Pita a few months ago. This company knew in advance: "Eat a Fajita Pita" is a slogan not easily forgotten.

Ed Wisbrun, president of Odessa Enterprises in El Paso, said the city's five Jack In The Box Restaurants sell more than 1,000 orders of the Fajita Pita daily. "It's our most popular item," he said. "We buy it from our commissary, and it comes frozen and portioned. We can prepare it and serve it in four minutes."

Fajitas feature a heritage that is fun to argue.

One of the most authoritative arguments comes from the Texas Agricultural Extension Service, which says fajitas originated in the late 1930s among Hispanics in South Texas. Fajitas, then, are not a Mexican dish at all, at least not in geographic origin.

The word, though, is hardly Texas. It hasn't even appeared yet in most English dictionaries, which are quick to define the enchilada and taco.

The Texas Agriculture Extension Service reports fajita is Spanish for "little belt" or "sash." The beef skirt is shaped like a cummerbund.

Several Hispanics who grew up in the interior of Mexico say they've never heard of fajitas until recently. Consuelo Forti, though, said fajitas are suspiciously similar to the guisados she knew to be Mexican food. "Same thing, charcoal broiled, or cooked in a pan with onions and tomatoes, then put it all on tortillas."

The greatest fajita fun is in the actual eating. The marinated meat has a unique sharpness. And the ambience at a restaurant is enhanced by a sizzling skillet fresh from the kitchen.

If you don't like your fajita, don't blame it. You just loaded up wrong. So reload.

Change tortillas, sling on a dollop of sour cream or switch hot sauces, grab hold with both hands, forget your manners and chomp away.

TV preachers aren't so money-hungry

NEW YORK (AP) — TV preachers spend only about half as much time seeking contributions as commercial television spends trying to sell products, a University of Wisconsin researcher finds.

On the basis of a two-year analysis of TV religious shows, journalism professor Steven Winzenburg says they don't concentrate on raising money as much as people think.

"The perception of their fund-raising tactics is a bit unfair," he said in a telephone interview. "Some people say, 'all they do is ask for money.' But the extent of it is overestimated."

Based on 40 hours of prime-time commercial TV and 40 hours of broadcasts by ousted TV minister Jim Bakker and religious broadcaster Pat Robertson, Winzenburg said advertising time is about double that of their fund appeals.

They devoted an average 11 percent of their programs to asking for money while sales pitches on commercial television took up an average 20 percent of the time.

That ratio applies across-the-board, Winzenburg estimates, but people tend to get an inflated impression of the religious fund-raising because its "emotional aspect" differs so much from TV sales pitches.

"People get upset by the fact that the emotional forms are so different from the subtle form of commercials. It stands out more in their minds," he said.

Winzenburg, a Roman Catholic who did his study in 1980-81 as a master's thesis at the University of Minnesota, presented results last week to a meeting of the Broadcast Education Association in Dallas.

He said his findings show that TV preachers "don't ask for money as often as people think they do."

The prevalence of that view was brought out this week in results of a New York Times-CBS poll finding that three-fourths of people who watch television preachers say most of them are too preoccupied with raising money.

Also, a Gallup poll found while 46.6 percent of people think most Christian fund-raising is "ethical or honest," a sizable 42.2 percent think only some, little or none of it is.

Winzenburg cites data that 70 percent of the audiences of TV preachers are more than 50 years old, 60 percent of whom are women, and most have little money, few social contacts and consider the TV preachers "special friends."

But they take in tremendous amounts of money, he notes, citing annual receipts of Robertson, $230 million; Jimmy Swaggart, $140 million; Bakker, $129 million; Oral Roberts, $120 million; Jerry Falwell, about $100 million.

Winzenburg said they're judged by different standards from other big-money performers, adding that if critics were consistent they would insist that wealthy entertainers like Bill Cosby spend their money for the needy.

Winzenburg contends the current scandal, in which Bakker quit his show because of involvement in an adulterous episode and complaints against him by Swaggart, will bolster TV religion rather than damage it.

"People who support it will support it more," he said. "Ratings will go up, contributions will increase." He said the scandal is "being used as a rallying point to rally the troops, so to speak."

In the defensive reaction, he said, there's a "lot of blaming of the devil" and the press for the problem, "rather than saying there's a need for more responsibility" in the TV ministries.

In a content analysis of the "talk show" type of program offered by Robertson and Bakker, Winzenburg found distinct differences.

For example, Bakker's shows were 43 percent entertainment, 35 percent religious, 9 percent politics and 13 percent fund-raising.

However, Robertson's shows were 40 percent political, 16 percent religious, 35 percent entertainment, and 9 percent fund-raising.

Besides the talk-show approach, he cites two other categories, the "Sunday morning preaching programs" of Falwell, Robert Schuller and Swaggart, and the "religious specials" such as those of Billy Graham urging acceptance of Christ.

Election to be much closer

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — Henry Cisneros, the first Hispanic mayor of a major U.S. city, says voting in his quest for a fourth term will be closer than expected Saturday because his supporters have been lulled into thinking he'll win by a landslide.

Cisneros, 39, is confident of victory over four other candidates, however, and is concentrating on getting voter approval on a $23.6 million public safety bond package.

One of Cisneros' challengers includes a former city councilman who said the mayor has prospered politically while the city has deteriorated financially.

"The opposition is hard and firm in their view and they will be out and most folks who are supporters of ours will not be out," Cisneros said Thursday.

"They are not as intense about this election. Things are going well and they have no reason to come out, and as a result, the election will be a lot closer than most expect," predicted Cisneros, who was elected to his first mayoral term in 1981.

Cisneros, who political observers say is destined for higher office, said he only wants to be mayor to continue several projects he and the City Council began during the past term.

Cisneros insists being mayor is tougher than any other elected position he might hold.

"There's no way to get away from this job," Cisneros said. "You get away for an afternoon and you have a train derailment and you got to rush back. You get away for the weekend and you have another crisis. I think mayor is more intense than anything else."

Former City Councilman Phil Pyndus, who ran against Cisneros in 1985, is his main challenger again this year.

Pyndus, 65, said spending is up, while city revenues are down and that Cisneros has not been able to attract major companies to San Antonio, the nation's 10th-largest city.

"I think people are sick and tired of Henry, absolutely, positively, from every sector in the city," Pyndus said. "If you ask the question right now, Who is better off after six years, San Antonio or Henry?" the city has deteriorated and Cisneros has a brilliant career."

Pyndus also said the mayor should have taken a bigger role in the scandal at the police department that erupted last year after one policeman shot and killed another officer described as a vigilante.

The shooting cost two police chiefs their jobs and sparked a federal investigation.

But Cisneros' advisers predict he will win by a wide margin as he did in 1985 and they dispute claims that the city is in poor financial shape.

Robert Marbut Jr., one of the mayor's campaign assistants, said Cisneros participates in openings of new companies each week and travels nationwide to attract businesses to the city.

He said the mayor is pushing the public safety bond package that calls for a police training facility, a police substation and renovations to police and fire stations.

"The public safety bonds are close to his heart," Marbut said. "He thinks we need them because of the crime situation increasing throughout the country and Texas, and we want to be able to have the best training facilities for police to respond to crimes," Marbut said.

Another Cisneros adviser, George Shipley of Austin, said Cisneros has not been seriously threatened by Pyndus, although he said Pyndus' campaign has received support from the National Republican Committee.

"I think they see Henry as a target down the road," Shipley said. "It's an open secret that other political leaders in Texas are encouraging Henry to seek higher office."

Presidential candidate Walter Mondale interviewed Cisneros as a possible running mate in 1984.

Cisneros, who is fluent in Spanish, is the immediate past president of the National League of Cities and is in demand to speak at political, business and academic functions across the country.

"He is the most popular political figure in the state, according to the respected Texas Poll," Shipley said. "Henry articulates the demands that Texans want out of government. He is an able, hard-working political leader."

One of the world's oldest countries, Mongolia reached the zenith of its power in the 13th century. Genghis Khan and his successors conquered all of China, and extended their influence as far west as Hungary and Poland.

Congressmen pressing close U.S. allies on weapons ban

By JIM DRINKARD Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Congressional opponents of apartheid are pressing U.S. allies found to have violated a ban on weapons sales to South Africa to comply immediately with a 10-year-old embargo.

But the lawmakers said following release of a State Department report on Thursday that they were not prepared to go beyond strong rhetoric in condemning violation of the ban.

The report said France, Israel and Italy all had countenanced the sale of weapons to South Africa by companies in their countries, in violation of a United Nations ban imposed in 1977 because of the Pretoria government's policies of racial separation.

Companies in West Germany, the United Kingdom, the Netherlands and Switzerland also had "on occasion" violated the embargo, the State Department found.

"The sale to South Africa of tools which may be used to subvert by force its own people or to attack its neighbors is unconscionable," the congressional group wrote in letters to leaders of the seven nations.

"There are few issues that face sovereign states about which the moral imperative is so certain," they said.

The State Department said the ban has not stopped South Africa from importing weapons from "a wide variety of sources worldwide."

The report, required to be submitted to Congress under provisions of a U.S. law passed last year that imposed economic sanctions against South Africa's white minority government, said some of the sales were made under a cloak of secrecy.

The 1977 embargo, enacted a year after riots in the black township of Soweto produced a global outcry, applies both to direct transfers of weapons by governments and to private arms sales, including weapons and ammunition, military vehicles and equipment and spare parts.

"Israel appears to have sold military systems and sub-systems and provided technical assistance on a regular basis," the report said. "We believe that the Israeli government was fully aware of most or all of the trade."

Two weeks ago, Israel announced it would not sign new military contracts with South Africa and would let existing contracts expire.

The congressional group included House Majority Whip Tony Coelho, D-Calif., House Foreign Affairs Committee Chairman Dante Fascell, D-Fla., and Reps. Howard Wolpe, D-Mich., Mickey Leland, D-Texas, Mel Levine, D-Calif., Charles Rangel, D-N.Y., and Howard Berman, D-Calif.

"All of the countries mentioned countenanced the violations of the arms embargo," Berman said. "We are asking them to come together and build an international and meaningful program to isolate South Africa."

Asked why more could not be done, Berman said, "Let's not get too sanctimonious. There have been many sinners in this field, including this country," a reference to U.S. slowness in imposing sanctions.

In South Africa, Foreign Minister R. F. Botha said when asked about the State Department report, "Because of an arms-embargo imposed unjustly on South Africa for many years, we do not make any comment on that subject."

South Africa has responded to the arms embargo by developing its own "large and sophisticated" arms industry, the State Department found.

Most of the country's major weapons systems — French-designed armored vehicles, Israeli-designed patrol boats and Italian- and French-designed combat aircraft — were in place before the 1977 embargo, the report said.

Several causes for nightmares

By Peter H. Gott, M.D.

DEAR DR. GOTT — My husband is in his early 70s and is a large, healthy, active man. Every few months, he has nightmares for several nights in a row. They are so bad that he gets very violent and I have to get out of bed. Sometimes he remembers them, sometimes he doesn't. He's a moderate drinker and takes a diuretic for high blood pressure. I don't know where to start looking for help.

DEAR READER — Nightmares often are ways in which we try subconsciously to deal with stressful situations. However, alcohol and some medicines can make these dreams worse. Ask your husband to stop drinking for a while and see if he is less troubled by nightmares. At the same time, make sure that his doctor is aware of the problem; perhaps a medication change is in order.

DEAR DR. GOTT — My husband was diagnosed as having cryptitis. Wyanooid suppositories don't seem to help much, and sometimes he has bleeding. Can this condition become cancerous?

DEAR READER — Crypts, or crevices, often form in the lining of the anal area. When these become inflamed or chronically infected, cryptitis results. Antibiotics often will cure the ailment, although surgery is sometimes necessary to remove infected tissue. The condition does not, to my knowledge, lead to malignancy.

DEAR DR. GOTT — One of my breasts is twice as large as the other. This makes it difficult to buy clothes and has given me low self-esteem. How common is this, and can it be fixed?

DEAR READER — To a degree, my answer depends on your age and whether you are male or female.

In a developing adolescent, breast growth can be asymmetrical. Eventually, the other breast will catch up, so if the girl is patient, the situation should resolve itself.

In adult women, disparate breast sizes can be a problem. Although a woman's breasts are seldom identical, the problem — if severe — may require the services of a plastic surgeon. If one breast has grown progressively larger, I would worry about the possibility of a breast tumor. In this circumstance, a doctor should examine the breasts to make sure that a growth is not present.

In adult men, breast enlargement is always abnormal. Certain glandular tumors can cause men's breasts to grow, but in my experience, the most common reason for male gynecomastia (breast growth) is medicine. Many drugs have the potential to produce breast enlargement.

In summary, you should see a doctor who will examine you and make specific recommendations.

DEAR DR. GOTT — What is the difference between myasthenia gravis and multiple sclerosis?

DEAR READER — Myasthenia gravis is a chronic condition, characterized by a progressive or cyclic weakness, due to a defect in the flow of electrical signals from nerves to muscles. It can be treated with medicine or, in some cases, surgery.

Multiple sclerosis (M.S.), on the other hand, is a progressive neurological disorder that results from loss of the myelin covering (insulation) of nerves. Its cause is unknown and it is untreatable by present methods.

DEAR DR. GOTT — Does the term "psychosomatic" refer to physical illness induced by severe emotional stress, or to imagined illness without physical cause?

DEAR READER — Psychosomatic illness refers to disease that is produced by emotional factors. This used to be a popular wastebasket diagnosis. Tuberculosis was formerly believed to be physical "consumption" caused by intense emotions. We now know that it is a bacterial infection. Similarly, peptic ulcer and asthma used to be considered psychosomatic. We now recognize the physical bases of these illnesses. Currently, it is popular to think of heart attacks as a form of emotional illness because people who have this disease are often hard-driving, competitive individuals. With time, as we come to understand heart disease more fully, I am certain that our focus on the stress and emotional components will become less important.

"Hypochondriasis" is the term that refers to imagined illness without physical cause.

DEAR DR. GOTT — Three months ago I had cataract surgery and a lens implant. I've told the doctor that I could tell time and see the numbers on the TV better before the operation, and that things now have a distorted look. He flatly said that wasn't true, tested my eyes and prescribed a new lens for the eye that was operated on. I did tell the truth and am depressed by his response. What should I do now?

DEAR READER — Seek another opinion from a second ophthalmologist.

AIDS

Countries with the most cases

Source: World Health Organization

NEA GRAPHIC

Early in December, 78 countries around the world reported a total of 36,538 cases of acquired immune deficiency syndrome to the World Health Organization. This count does not include people who had already died of the fatal condition. However, WHO officials believe the incidence of AIDS, particularly in Latin America, has been under-reported.

Names in the News

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Actor Garrett Morris, whose line about baseball was "berry, berry good" on "Saturday Night Live," plans a pep talk to the Los Angeles Dodgers.

"I'm going to tell them to keep their eye on the ball," Morris said Wednesday. "They had a bad year last year. Pedro Guerrero was injured. I hear he was carrying a bag of money to the bank and he sprained his leg."

"Baseball's been berry, berry good to me" is what most people seem to remember about my five years on "Saturday Night Live," Morris said.

NEW YORK (AP) — With a chorus of "There's No Business Like Show Business," Mary Tyler Moore, Lynn Redgrave and the rest of the cast of the Broadway comedy "Sweet Sue" moved across the street to the show's new home.

"I've never changed theaters within the same city, least of all across the road," said Ms. Redgrave, 44. "It's kind of fun."

The cost of moving approximately 40 feet across West 45th Street to the Royale Theater was around $70,000. The Music Box Theater was leased to a new production, "Les Liaisons Dangereuses," necessitating the move.

The two stars, carrying stuffed animals, a garbage can, a chair and other assorted theatrical necessities, stopped traffic Wednesday as they made the trek from old home to new.

ATLANTIC CITY, N.J. (AP) — The new Ms. Senior America is a 63-year-old grandmother who is working toward her pilot's license.

"You can bake only so many batches of cookies and read so many books," said Mabel Hoffman of Chaneyville, Pa., who was selected among 22 contestants Wednesday in the sixth annual pageant.

Ms. Hoffman performed a humorous monologue while wearing a costume that depicted a female character on her right side and a male character on her left.

In the evening-gown competition, she wore a bright red gown encrusted on the top with sequins. "This is the dress that knocks their socks off," she said.

During the "philosophy of life" portion, she said that even though her skin may have wrinkles, "I will not lack enthusiasm and wrinkle my soul."

Ms. Hoffman said she and her husband, Frenis, ran a 104-acre farm before retiring several years ago. They have a son, daughter and four grandchildren.

Along with her new title goes a $500 commercial speaking course, a portrait, week-long stays at several resorts and nationwide appearances.

The pageant is run by Senior America Inc., a non-profit social-services organization based in New Jersey.

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Grand Ole Opry humorist Minnie Pearl has been selected for the American Cancer Society's annual Courage Award presented by President Reagan.

The award is the cancer society's highest award given to an individual who has had cancer.

In 1985, Miss Pearl underwent a double mastectomy and implantation procedure because of breast cancer.

Miss Pearl, 74, has been performing on the Grand Ole Opry since 1940.

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Maxim Shostakovich, son of the Russian composer Dmitri Shostakovich, is making his debut in TV commercials and says it's for a good cause.

He said Wednesday that he filmed grocery ads to help raise money for the financially strapped New Orleans Symphony, where he is conducting and his son, Dmitri, is playing the piano in a four-night "Shostakovich Times Three" series.

The advertisement is a 30-second spot for Schwegmann supermarkets showing the tuxedo-clad conductor emptying a grocery bag to find coffee, other goods and a clarinet inside. With a shrug, Shostakovich leans into the camera and says, "Making groceries is like making music," and then he blasts a note.

Poll shows half of 'most admired' are churchmen

PRINCETON, N.J. (AP) — Half of the 10 men picked in a new Gallup poll as most admired by Americans are churchmen, described as an unprecedentedly large proportion.

They are Pope John Paul II, Baptist minister-politician Jesse Jackson, evangelist Billy Graham, South African Anglican Archbishop Desmond Tutu and Anglican hostage-negotiator Terry Waite.

In the rankings, President Reagan and Chrysler head Lee Iacocca topped the list, followed by the pope; Jackson; Graham; former President Jimmy Carter; Tutu; Waite; Sen. Edward Kennedy, D-Mass.; and Vice President Bush.

BIRMINGHAM, Ala. (AP) — With lawsuits involving the church and ministers multiplying, Samford University has established a new Center for Study of Law and the Church.

NEW YORK (AP) — An Orthodox Jewish leader says young American Jews are becoming more Orthodox and "unlike past years, they no longer merely formally identify with Orthodoxy," they practice it.

Rabbi Milton H. Polin, president of the Rabbinical Council of America, also says there is a trend of Jews from small towns, particularly in the Midwest, to move to larger cities.

Because of the movement, he says, "we may soon have major problems" taking care of small-town Jewish institutions such as Jewish cemeteries "because there is no one there to do so."

In the 1800s by some estimate, the average American wife gave birth to 13 children.

CLASSIFIED ADS
 Classified advertising rates are based on 14 cents a word for first insertion ($2.80 minimum), and 10 cents for second publication and thereafter. Rates below are based on consecutive issues, no copy change, straight word ads.

TIMES	RATE	MIN.
1 day per word	14	2.80
2 days per word	24	4.80
3 days per word	34	6.80
4 days per word	44	8.80
5th day FREE

Ten days (2 free) is $15.80 minimum; 15 days (3 free) is $23.80 minimum; one month is $31.80 minimum.

CLASSIFIED DISPLAY
 Classified display rates apply to all other ads not set in solid-word lines—those with captions, bold or larger type, special paragraphing, all capital letters. Rates are $3.95 per column inch; $3.25 an inch for additional insertions.

LEGALS
 Ad rates for legal notices are 14 cents per word first insertion, 10 cents per word for additional insertions.

ERRORS
 Every effort is made to avoid errors in word ads and legal notices. Advertisers should call attention to any errors immediately after the first insertion. We will not be responsible for more than one incorrect insertion. In case of errors by the publishers, an additional insertion will be published.
