Senate Committee Studies Labor Bill

Dollar A Day Wage Level Is Main Trouble

William Green Called Into Conference Saturday Afternoon

WASHINGTON (AP)—The senate labor committee failed to reach an agreement Saturday on President Roosevelt's reforestation bill and called a conference with William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, who is opposing it.

Chairman Walsh indicated the bill would be modified to provide more general terms. This might result in elimination of the provision for a dollar a day wage level which the labor federation is fighting.

Redrafting of the bill was predicted by chairmen of both house and senate labor committees as they concluded joint hearing on it Friday, but there was strong support among members of the two committees for retention of the measure's essential outlines.

Chairman Connery called a meeting of the house committee for Monday. He said he would submit a substitute proposal which he outlined at the White House conference Wednesday night but for which he failed to obtain President Roosevelt's approval.

More Liberal Beer Bill Being Prepared For Introduction Monday In Lower House Of Legislature

Revision Of Anderson-Mathis Bill Would Take Off Many Restrictions Probably Allow Sale 'Like Any Other Soft Drink'

AUSTIN (UP)—A new and more liberal beer bill for Texas in formation. The measure will be a revision of the Anderson-Mathis bill, Rep. John Mathis, Houston, announced, and probably will allow sale of beverage "like any other soft drink."

Its authors planned to have the new bill ready for introduction in the house of representatives Monday and to push it through to committee hearing Monday night. Exact contents of the rewritten measure were uncertain, Mathis said, but it will take off many restrictions in the previous one. Since the bill declares 3.2 per cent beer non-intoxicating, he said, it would be "inconsistent to hedge it about" by the restrictions placed in the original bill.

With this interpretation, Mathis allowed sold in grocery stores, filling stations, lunch stands, hotels and drug stores "just like any other soft drink." The new bill probably will provide a licensing fee for dispensers, ranging from $200 on hotels and places where beer is sold and consumed on the premises to a nominal sum for non-consumption sales.

Mathis expressed confidence that 3.2 per cent beer could and would be declared non-intoxicating under the Texas constitution. He had planned to introduce the bill Saturday but the house adjourned until Monday when a recessional rules committee was shot and seriously wounded by his son, Samuel, 17, during a family quarrel at their home in Columbus. The youth described the shooting as accidental. Dr. Lambert absolved him from blame. (Associated Press Photo)

Home Town Talk by Beddy

Among several important reforms in government that are on the way for Texas is reorganization of county government.

Why, after all, must there be a separate set-up of city officials, separate tax levies, separate operations expense, and indebtedness for a county as well as all incorporated towns within it?

You might ask, why there be duplication of taxation of duties of various officials, who serve the same people?

For instance, if a man pays a county ad valorem tax, why not exempt him from a city tax? Or if he pays a city tax why levy a county tax on him too, if you want to put it the other way around.

We have city and county tax collectors, city and county peace officers, city and county road crews, and many other duplications.

Economy in government is the loudest cry here and everywhere. If reorganization of county government so as to place one set of officials, or better still, one man, under jurisdiction of one commission in charge of all governmental duties in a county would not result in great savings to all property owners and other residents, we'd like to know what would?

Carnival Has Large Crowd

Museum Association's Efforts Rewarded Well Here Saturday

Good patronage greeted efforts of Mrs. Mary Bumpass, assisted by Mrs. E. A. Hoppel and Mrs. J. L. Thomas, to raise funds for the West Texas Museum Saturday by an elaborate carnival held in the Deats Storage Garage building.

Although good crowds filed into the building regularly during the afternoon, the drawing power was expected to exert itself later in the evening when Miss Madesta Good was to be crowned queen of the carnival.

Situated around the spacious carnival quarters were many attractive booths with varied interests.

One contained the baby show, which seemed to be demanding its share of attention. Visitors were privileged to cast votes for the four most handsome babies between the ages of six months and two years.

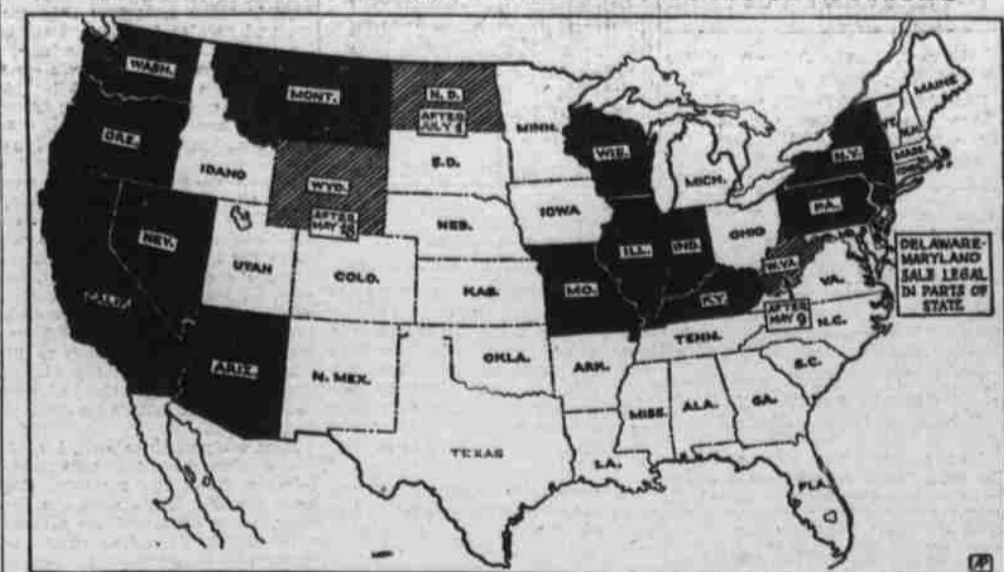

The American Legion and Auxiliary had on display a galaxy of American flags, one reputed to have been in the thick of the bonus army fight at Washington last summer.

Among other oddities, West Ward school had a miniature adobe house. Posters adorning the booth walls were done.

Especially good was the windmill constructed by W. K. Edwards, Jr., for the general science exhibition. Inell Curtiss also had a fine imitation windmill. Airplanes, home made fire extinguishers, and outlays of the city water system added to the display.

East Ward booth contained many clever bits of handicraft. Neatly worked posters and construction paper designs gave life to the display.

THE BEER SITUATION IN THE VARIOUS STATES

There are 14 states (indicated in solid black) in which beer can be sold as soon as the federal government legalizes it, which will be 15 days after President Roosevelt signs the 3.2 per cent bill. In others a varied situation exists. In some beer can be sold after a specified time; in some it can be sold in certain localities; in others proposed action to license or regulate the beverage is pending. Beer can be sold in North Dakota, West Virginia and Wyoming after dates shown on map. Maryland and Delaware laws permit sale in certain parts of the states.

City School Problems Studied By Committee

Strong Group Of Speakers Set For Sixteenth District Convention Of American Legion Here April 18-19

State Commander Probably Will Be In Position To Attend

One of the strongest groups of speakers ever assembled for an American Legion district convention, will appear here for the 16th district convention April 18-19.

Carl Nesbit, state commander, will probably be able to participate in the district program here, Commander C. L. Bryant said Friday.

Previously it had been announced by state department that Nesbit would be in LaGrange on the dates of the Big Spring convention. However, it is highly probable his plans can be altered to permit his addressing the gathering here.

Col. William E. Easterwood, Dallas, has already accepted a place on the program. E. Earl Earp, former state commander and now a member of the attorney general's department, will also speak here, Bryant said.

Bryant, suffering from ill health, will leave soon for an extended vacation on doctors' orders. However, he said he will be in Big Spring during the convention.

He will be succeeded by Theo C. Thomas who will act as post commander until Bryant returns from his trip.

Details for the program arranged to entertain delegates to the convention are being worked out by committees.

REV. W. C. ASHFORD, above, of Abilene, will fill the pulpit during a revival meeting opening today at the East Fourth Street Baptist church. He will arrive Monday. The local pastor, Rev. Woodie W. Smith, will fill the pulpit today. The meeting will continue two weeks. Rev. Smith's sermon topic this morning will be "The Atonement." This evening he will speak on "The Blood of Christ." Music will be directed by Sam Moreland of Big Spring. Services will be held daily at 10 a. m. and 7:45 p. m. with prayer groups meeting each evening at 7:15 o'clock in the Sunday school rooms.

The regular meeting of the "Men of the Church" of the First Presbyterian church will be held Tuesday, March 28 at 7:30 o'clock. The program will be in charge of various members of the organization. A. E. Chester, the president, will lead the program. Every man of Big Spring who is interested in any way in the church is invited.

Quilt-Making Not Dormant Art, City Federation Show Discloses

Quilt making is not a dormant art, but a flourishing avocation among Big Spring women. Originality, cleverness, uniqueness, and the striking combined with beautiful colors and designs Saturday in the quilt show sponsored by the City Federation women to present one of the outstanding displays of bed covers seen here in years.

To equal the quilts in brilliance were many rugs and afghans, each a beautiful thing. Many of the quilts carried out the flower design, some working in rose cuts, some violets, and others a flower all of their own. No few chose to carry out the Dutch girl motif, this being the design selected by the youngest entrant in the contest.

Preparations For Suit Led By J. F. Lucey

Has Observed Proration But New Plan 'Gets On His Nerves' He Says

DALLAS (AP)—Application for a federal court injunction to restrain the railroad commission from throwing the East Texas oil field wide open, then shutting it down Monday for an indefinite period was being prepared.

Captain J. F. Lucey said he had authorized preparation of papers for the suit. Lucey, a director of the American Petroleum Institute and chairman of the East Texas chamber of commerce oil committee, said he would "be inclined" to seek a federal court injunction tomorrow unless the Texas railroad commission modified its order shutting down all wells in the East Texas fields at 9 a. m. next Monday.

"Of course," he said, when informed that the commission was considering rescinding or modifying the order, "if that action is taken it would obviate the necessity of obtaining an injunction tomorrow. No definite decision in the matter will be made until tomorrow."

He added that the commission's provision in the order that the 10,000 wells in the field flow "no more than 7 a. m. until 9 a. m. before the complete shutdown, is ridiculous, unworkable and impractical."

Many Stars Parade At Ritz Today In "42nd Street"

Backstage On Broadway Made Into Laughing, Roaring Drama

Baxter, Bebe Daniels, Brent, Una Merkel, Ruby Keeler, Kibbee, Sparks, Powell, Ginger Rogers, Walthall, Nugent And Others In Picture

"Three good tunes and a kick in the pants for your wow blackout. Can you make a hit show of it?"

These are the first sentences in Bradford Ropes' novel, "42nd Street," and they color the length of Warner Bros' new gigantic picture of the same name which comes to the Ritz Theatre today and Monday.

In the picture, the words are addressed to Warner Baxter, who plays the role of a veteran stage director with a hundred hits to his credit. What he does in the three good tunes and the kick in the pants form the basis for "42nd Street."

But not quite all of it. Warner Bros. have gathered together in this tale of the Ritz's backstage, a gripping dramatic story of the theatre of today, of the problems, heartaches and tears, the good times, lighthearted camaraderie and carefree days, when there's money in the pocket, forty weeks more of work ahead, and nothing to worry about, all of which make up stage existence.

150 Girls—to the number of about one hundred and fifty—stars, directors, singers, song writers, hoofers, cronies, comics, heavies, juveniles and ingenues—they're all there. And Warner Baxter, Bebe Daniels, George Brent, Una Merkel, Ruby Keeler, Mrs. Al Johnson to you, and you'd better watch for her! Guy Kibbee, Ned Sparks, Dick Powell, Ginger Rogers, Allen Jenkins, Henry B. Walthall, Edw.

has a story that takes its place among the best stories of the stage. More than that, it has a story within that story—a play within a play. Deftly and expertly, it mingles these elements into a spectacular and vastly entertaining whole—a picture that takes rank with the best of this or any year.

No expense was spared in the preparation of this biggest and most outstanding of the all-star musical comedy-dramas of the screen. Lavish sets, gorgeous costumes and dazzling stage effects have been utilized. Everything that goes to make a super-production "super" has been thrown in.

Among the novelties in "42nd Street" is a huge turntable, which is really composed of three turntables, on which groups of dancers prance and turn in intricate and breath-taking routines. Another original sequence is a dance involving a Pullman train's inside. The train, as a climax, folds in upon the dancers.

Warner Bros. were the first to try musical pictures on a lavish scale, and, enough was learned from them to assure the producers that there was a public demand for dramatic pictures with the music and dance. The result of some three years preparatory work on this theme has resulted in "42nd Street," perhaps the first picture to incorporate music and dance into the story in a dramatic manner.

"42nd Street," originally a best-selling novel by Bradford Ropes, was adapted for the screen by Rian James, Broadway columnist, and James Seymour, Lloyd Bacon, son of the late Frank Bacon of "Lightnin'" fame, directed "42nd Street."

Alison Skipworth In Comedy Role Of "Lady's Profession"

"A Lady's Profession," comedy featuring Alison Skipworth, Roland Young and Sari Maritza, will play at the R & R Ritz theatre Friday and Saturday.

The picture centers around a couple of penniless Britons, who possess more ancestors than money, and resolve to balance matters by coming to America, where, so they understand, there's more money than ancestors. Miss Skipworth is one of the pair; Young, cast as her brother, the other. Miss Maritza is the latter's daughter.

Young goes across the ocean first, and when Miss Skipworth and Miss Maritza finally reach New York, it is to find him engaged in the operation of a speakeasy. It's not a profitable venture, however, he explains. The bootleggers who supply him with his stock are terrified at the thought of what will happen to them when prohibition is repealed, and are attempting to force him to take a heavy quota of liquor, which he can't possibly sell.

Miss Skipworth, shocked at the whole idea at first, nevertheless takes a hand in matters. She'll have nothing to do with the bootleggers, she says, and she proceeds, with English stubbornness and English thoroughness, to convince the bootleggers of that fact. She succeeds, and the beaten racketeers are left holding the proverbial bag.

A romance between Miss Maritza and Kent Taylor runs through the picture.

"THE DEATH OF BILLY THE KID"
By John W. Poe (Houghton Mifflin Co.)
This publishing house deserves credit for the number of books it has published throughout the years by Southwestern writers and especially a book "Southeastern Themes and Outstanding Personalities." As far back as 1896 it brought out Andy Adams' "Log of a Cowboy," regarded by cattlemen everywhere as a classic of those early free-range and trail-driving days.

In the course recently given here by Dr. Holden of Texas Tech preserves in print the account of John W. Poe, deputy of Pat Garrett, the sheriff of Lincoln County, N. M., who killed this famous bruid.

The reason for bringing on the book is the dispute over the death of Billy the Kid. There are those who maintain that Billy the Kid was never killed; that the body of some Mexican was mysteriously substituted for his, when Gen. Lew Wallace, governor of New Mexico at the time, expressed his determination to put an end to the reign of terror maintained by this youthful bandit and his associates. John W. Poe, because of that dispute, wrote his account of the killing. It was secure, finally by Maurice Carland Fulton, who provides the introduction for this book.

Mr. Poe resided in Roswell, N. M., and seldom talked about his experience; probably few of his friends knew that he took part in the bringing of Billy the Kid to justice. An English magazine first discovered his part in it and published a letter from him clarifying that Billy the Kid was really killed. In this book he gives the full circumstances; also pictures and diagrams of Maxwell's ranch where the shooting occurred.

Horses Main Support For Holt Picture

Star Is Well-Known Horse Man And Leads 'This Sporting Age' Cast

The oldest and the most thrilling game known to man is brilliantly immortalized by Jack Holt in his latest Columbia picture, "This Sporting Age," an invigorating story of sportsmen and thoroughbred, showing Tuesday and Wednesday at the R & R Ritz theatre.

Considered by its devotees the first among the three great sporting partnerships between man and horse—the other two being steeplechase hunting and racing—polo is not only the "sport of kings" but the best possible training in horsemanship and leadership.

Holt himself, trained for years as an expert horseman and considered one of the finest polo players in Southern California, brings to his role as a Captain of Cavalry, who obtains a berth on the United States team for the international matches, a vigor, sincerity and an adventurous spirit which makes "This Sporting Age" the greatest of more than 100 pictures he has made as a movie star.

Intervened with a fine, dramatic story of the loving friendship between John Steele and his daughter, played by Evalyn Knapp, the excitement and exhilaration of one of the most daring and thrilling polo games ever played at the Riviera Country Club, makes this Columbia picture utterly unique.

In addition to the excellent cast of screen players, such as Evalyn Knapp, Hardie Albright, Walter Byron, J. Farrell MacDonald, Shirley Palmer and Nora Lane, ten of the finest polo players in California and Arizona played in the game that was especially held for the picture.

A. F. Erickson and Andrew Benison were co-directors on this picture, which crackles with excitement and brilliance and the thud of pounding hoofs.

Western Film Features Cody With His Pal

"The Ghost City" Is Friday And Saturday Picture At The Ritz

If personal appearance are any gauge of popularity then Bill Cody is without doubt one of the most popular stars on the screen, for the handsome and athletic hero of "The Ghost City" and other Monogram Westerns has probably made more personal appearances than any other in filmdom.

Bill, whose latest release, "The Ghost City" comes to the Queen Theatre Friday and Saturday made personal appearances in and around New York state for two solid years, and has made hundreds of appearances between pictures in all parts of the country since joining Monogram Pictures.

On a recent tour Bill covered theaters throughout the entire state of Oklahoma, appearing with that popular "Bill and Andy" thriller, "Oklahoma Jim," and he already has been booked for a month's tour of the state of Texas following the completion of his next picture.

In his new picture, Bill, who is co-featured with his little pal, Andy Shuford, does some of the most brutal fighting of his film career in two hand-to-hand combats with Walter Miller, the villain and his henchmen.

Others who appear in "The Ghost City" include pretty Helen Foster, Miller, Kate Campbell, Charles Klieg, Walter Shumway and Jack Carlyle. Harry Fraser, who also made those successes, "The Montana Kid," "Oklahoma Jim" and

Oui, Oui! By Cracky!

GEORGE SIDNEY & CHARLES MURRAY in "The Cohens and Kellys in Trouble" renew their famed joint comedy performances at the R & R Ritz theatre here Thursday of this week.

Miss Mallory Leading Lady At The Queen

'Handle With Care' Wednesday And Thursday Also Features Dunn

She couldn't say "shoes," her slipping tongue slipped and alighted over "slippers," so her sympathetic father supplied her with the synonym "boots," and that soon became her nickname. Boots Mallory it has been ever since, up to and including her recent test for films and the signing of a Fox contract, although on the flyleaf of the family Bible, penned in an old-fashioned feminine hand, it is written daintily and demurely as befits the name, Patricia Mallory.

As "Boots" Mallory, she was prominent in George White's "Scandals," the Ziegfeld "Follies" and "Hot Cha." Now she will be known as "Boots" Mallory of the films. She is a typical show girl, tall, ash blonde and weighs 120 pounds. Her eyes are blue-grey.

Distinction
Miss Mallory can boast of one distinction, perhaps not enjoyed by any other player in Hollywood. She made her debut as a public entertainer in a Sunday School Show in Mobile, Alabama, to which city her parents moved from New Orleans soon after her birth.

Displaying an early ability with string instruments, she was much in demand in public and private entertainments and at 12, joined a girls' band in which she played the banjo. At the same time, she developed a marked talent in pencil and charcoal sketching. And her work in this field attracted the attention of George White, the French artist. Later, she posed for a number of oil paintings by Ball and her face

"Land of Wanted Men," was the director and author of "The Ghost City."

In Vaudeville
When she was fifteen, she went into vaudeville in a musical act with which she remained for several months. It was while she was singing in a New York night club that she came to the attention of George White who immediately gave her a place in his current show.

Miss Mallory is a devotee of bowling. "There is no exercise in the world like bowling to keep one's figure," she declares. "It brings every muscle in the body into play."

"Any woman who will bowl two or three games a day and included a small helping of spinach in her diet, never need fear overweight."

"This combination is the best recipe for slenderizing known better than swimming, tennis or horse back riding. I understand, however, that there are few bowling alleys in California, its people preferring outdoor exercise. But I shall find one, never fear."

Miss Mallory's first film for Fox is "Handle With Care," in which she is co-featured with James Dunn.

It will be seen at the Queen Theatre Wednesday and Thursday.

Red Tape Being Clipped Short By New Administration In Applying Far-Reaching Powers, Writer Finds

Objects It To Find Plain Intent Rather Than Exact Letter Of Law; Technicalities Cut Down

By RAYMOND CLAPPER
United Press Staff Correspondent
WASHINGTON (UP)—Common sense is the new administration's guide in applying its far-reaching powers.

From President Roosevelt down through the cabinet this rule of reason is dominant. Red tape isn't dead, but it is out of favor.

Hair-splitting and technicalities are being brushed away to permit the spirit of the laws to be carried out. This is especially important now because of the great powers given the administration in the emergency legislation. These laws are passed hurriedly and defects may show later.

Washington has seen many difficulties arise because of a blind attempt to follow the letter of a law rather than its plain intent. But President Roosevelt has set a new example after the effects are appearing all over the city.

Attorney General Cummings removes his eye-glasses and his stern judicial countenance is warmed by a twinkle of his eyes when the representative of a newspaper which published a full-page beer advertisement after the new law was signed anxiously asks if this is a violation of the bone-dry anti-advertising law which hangs over until April 7.

Cummings' position "Your publisher won't be in any great peril," Cummings says. "He is for a reasonable interpretation of the law. The new law, he explains permits various preparatory activities, manufacturing and preparation of equipment before April 7. Advertising intended to prepare the way for sale of beer after April 7 but not intended to promote illicit sale before, he believes, is in keeping with a reasonable interpretation of the law."

Postmaster General Farley's department sent out orders to look the other way when newspapers and periodicals came through carrying beer advertising which did not promote illicit sale. They were told not to hold up such mail.

Miss Frances Perkins, Secretary of Labor, stands pleasantly confident in her trim little black costume topped by a white feather in her tricorne hat before a glowing committee of senators and congressmen. One of the representatives mutters his most impressive frown and demands to know of the madame secretary whether this dollar-a-day proposed for the civilian conservation corps won't lead all employers to crowd down wages generally to a dollar a day. The little lady awnings a pair of bright round brown eyes full on the questioning congressman.

Miss Perkins "No, I don't, sir, because that doesn't make sense," she replies. And she explains that manufacturers have too much sense to terminate consumer buying power. Another frowning congressman demands to know why the government wants to tear a man away from his family of five which is drawing $12 relief funds and put him in the woods at a dollar a day. "He doesn't have to go," she patiently explains. "This is for those who can and who want to go. And there may be cases in which the family would be better off if the husband had a chance to go out and work instead of sitting around home brooding."

Someone objected to President Roosevelt that this reforestation party and stabilized there. Yet the individual farmer is not interested in averages; he is interested in the price of the particular product of his own farm, and there is serious danger that he will think this bill obligates the government to tax and to subsidize legislation. What is needed is not the setting up of specific objectives, but authority to facilitate the complicated readjustments that have to be made and to stimulate the resumption of trade and production. Nobody knows enough, or can know enough, to foresee in detail the process of reconstruction or the specific objectives which will be attained in the course of it. The wise thing to do, therefore, is to give the Administration ample power, more power than it may need, and to let the use of that power be determined by the judgment of circumstances as they develop.

Rumor Of Dallas Girl's Engagement To Scion Of Vanderbilts Unconfirmed

DALLAS (UP)—Relatives of Miss Adonell Massie, Dallas and Wichita Falls, Texas, society girl whose engagement to Cornelius Vanderbilt Jr., was rumored in San Francisco news dispatches refused to confirm or deny the accounts. "I am sure her parents would not want any publicity about Adonell," said Mrs. R. T. Evans, her aunt.

Mrs. Evans said Miss Adonell's parents, Dr. and Mrs. J. H. Massie would join their daughter at San Francisco and continue on a world cruise with her. The cruise will end in New York. Mrs. Evans expects the party to return here in about a month.

Dr. Massie, a retired physician and wealthy oil man, practiced in Wichita Falls before coming with his family to Dallas several years ago.

Murray Sees Million In Revenue On Beverages, Whether Alcoholic Or Not, And Other 'Silly' Things

OKLAHOMA CITY (UP)—Oklahoma can collect $1,000,000 annually by a tax on beverages—alcoholic or non-alcoholic, legal or not legal, Gov. W. H. Murray believes.

He advocated a sales tax on "all things men use through silly fashions, custom or taste—cigars, cigarettes, sporting goods and especially upon all beverages, made, transported, or manufactured in Oklahoma, whether alcoholic or non-alcoholic."

Thus, the governor explained, the state could collect revenue from the bootlegger or beer runner, expected to be numerous when legal beer comes into adjoining states April 7.

The state would tax beer, outlawed by the state constitution, in the manner the tax commission collects a gross production tax from "hot oil" produced in violation of state laws.

The tax commission cannot disclose the names of men from whom it collects taxes. The penalty for this offense is removal from office and criminal prosecution.

Texas And Wool

Texas broke another world record last year. The state produced 37,105,000 pounds of wool more than the never produced by any American state. It was 4,000,000 pounds more than the state produced in 1931, and 9,500,000 more than in 1930.

Montana, second in wool production, trailed the Lone Star State with a total of 32,300,000 pounds for last year a drop of around 6,000,000 pounds from the 1931 output.

Texas gathered its wool from the heads of 7,050,000 sheep, a gain of 202,000 head since 1931 and 800,000 since 1930. That's an average of about eight pounds per sheep, if you care for averages.

First in sheep, first in goats, first in cattle, first in farm products and first in a dozen other items that go to make up a great national producing record—that is Texas.

When the markets get back to normal and Texas starts its flood of wool, cotton, beef and whatnot to the consuming centers of the world—what a wave of prosperity will be ours!

By WALTER LIPPMANN
Rapid Fire Legislation

It is plain that the Administration is putting forward its legislative program at a pace which precludes careful study and shuts off the beneficial effect of criticism and debate. Yet there are compelling reasons for pushing on. There are the obvious advantages in putting a completed emergency program behind us. There are also the obvious advantages of acting while Congress and the country are in the mood to co-operate. But in such rapid legislation it is essential to remember that it is emergency legislation and not to confuse it with the determination of permanent policies.

What is happening in essence is that Congress is granting the President powers covering the whole field of domestic readjustments. These laws, which are being drafted so rapidly and enacted so hastily, are not a new and enduring framework of American society. They are an authorization under which the President can deal decisively and simultaneously with a whole series of domestic problems.

Within the scope of these laws the President has enormous discretion both as to policy and as to administration. The American-owned favorite, fell and was eliminated.

One danger signal of this sort is already visible. It is in section 2 of the farm bill, where it is declared to be the policy of Congress to re-establish prices to farmers at a level which will give them a purchasing power equal to that prevailing from August, 1909, to July, 1914. This declaration is the one really dangerous thing in the farm bill, and, in my opinion, it is the really serious mistake of the Roosevelt administration.

For this declaration constitutes a promise to do something which it may be quite impossible to do. It is a commitment which is so undefined that it may be gravely misunderstood. Thus, for example, it is conceivable that the average purchasing power of all farm commodities might return to the pre-war parity. But it is altogether improbable that each farm product can be restored to its pre-war

CHAPTER XVII

Afterward Janet insisted she wasn't frightened. It happened too quickly for that. She wasn't sure whether she saw the gun or heard Rose's scream first. The man growled, "Make it snappy!" and grabbed Janet's purse.

Then in the next instant something burst itself between Janet and the man. A voice was shouting. Two voices. There was a tussle of arms and legs and something fell to the ground.

The gun—oh, the gun!

Rose was pulling at Janet's skirt, whimpering. Janet saw a man's arm raise, saw the gun—but it did not fire. Suddenly the figures lurched apart. The man who had grabbed Janet's purse was running down the street. He turned the corner, was out of sight.

"Oh!" Janet exclaimed, "How will I ever think—!"

She stopped them, looking at the tall young man beside her. Her eyes widened in amazement. "Why Mr. Grant!" she exclaimed. "Oh, I didn't know it was you!"

Jeffrey Grant righted his tie and brushed off his coat. He was breathing heavily. "Good evening," he said. "Glad I happened to be across the street."

Then he bent down and picked up something from the sidewalk. It was Janet's purse. "Here," he said. "Better look and see if he got anything."

There was nothing missing from the purse. And it was then, after all the excitement was over, that Janet suddenly felt helpless and weak. There was nothing to be afraid of now. The chief was gone. But all at once she realized how close the danger had been.

"Oh—!" she said weakly, and then again, "Oh!"

Grant took her arm. "Here," he said, "let's get away from here. My car's just across the street. If there's anywhere I can take you—"

The car was a small and inexpensive roadster. Janet got in and held Rose on her lap. She told the young man where Rose lived and that she was taking her home. It was a street far on the other side of town in the poorest section of Lancaster.

Grant nodded and said he might as well run out there. He went on to explain that he had parked the car and gone into the little shop across the street for matches. He was just coming out again when he heard Rose's scream. Then when he saw the man grab Janet's purse he had made a running tackle. The rest was over almost as soon as it was started.

"But it was wonderful of you!" Janet said sincerely. "He had a gun. Anything might have happened—"

Grant took that lightly. "Oh, he knew better than to shoot!" he said. "These bums who go around grabbing pocketbooks from women and girls only carry guns to seem dangerous. They'd run from a real fight—just as this bird did."

Little Rose had not taken her eyes from Grant's face from the minute they were inside the car. Great, dark eyes that said absolutely nothing and yet said so much. She sat rigidly upright, instead of leaning back as a weary child might have been expected to. Her fingers clasped one of Janet's hands tightly.

Jeffrey Grant didn't ask questions but Janet told him a little about Rose. She explained gently how she and the little girl had become acquainted, about the candy Rose had been trying to sell.

"Well, say—can't we do something about that?" Grant asked sympathetically. It wasn't five minutes later that he stopped the car before a brightly lighted store, entered and reappeared with an assortment of bulky candy bars.

"There aren't to sell," he told Rose. "They're to eat. And see, these are for your brother?"

Even then Rose didn't speak. The evening had been too muc— for her. Her dark eyes related to Janet's questioning, and when Janet smiled and nodded she seemed satisfied and took the candy.

For a while they rode in silence. The streets became darker, the buildings on each side more drab. At length they turned into the street for which they had been searching. Half way down the block Rose pointed to one of the shabby buildings.

"That's it," she said. "That's where I live."

All three of them got out of the car. Rose led the way to the door and opened it.

"Hello, Daddy!" she said, running forward.

For a moment Janet thought there was no light in the room. Then she saw the lamp with its faintly flickering flame. She stepped inside the house and Jeffrey Grant followed her. It was cold, almost as cold as the air outside.

A tall man standing with his back toward them turned. "Rose!" he cried excitedly. "Where've you been? Why didn't you come home—"

He caught the child up in his arms, staring at the strangers. Rose began talking but before she could explain Janet interrupted. "You're Mr. Silvani, aren't you?" she asked.

"Yes, Pat Silvani, that's me. Where'd you find Rosie? What's she been doing?"

There was anxiety, eagerness—

yes, and four—in I'— tone of voice. In the dim light Janet could not see Pat Silvani clearly but she did see that he was tall, well built, thin but dark hair and dark eyes like Rose's.

"I met Rose down town," Janet explained. "She didn't mean to be gone so long only she lost her money." She went on telling about Rose's efforts to sell candy, how they had dinner together and then the frightening episode of the hold-up.

Pat Silvani's voice lost its fear. Janet introduced Jeffrey Grant and Silvani asked them politely to sit down. There were two chairs in the room. Janet took one of them and Grant settled himself on an upturned box. It was not until Janet was seated that she saw the other figure in the darkness.

At first she saw just the "ace," Tommy, of course, the crippled brother Rose had mentioned. He lay on a cot at the side of the room. He had propped himself up on one arm and was listening eagerly to all that was being said. Janet spoke to him and Rose, remembering her candy, rushed forward to share it.

"You've been good to my kids, miss. I certainly thank you! They don't get much candy. They don't get much of anything since I've been out of work so long."

He told them about trying to find work during the last two years. Odd jobs, a few days or a week here and there, were all he'd been able to get. Two years before Pat Silvani had worked steadily for a construction company. He was a brick mason and a good one. On the last two jobs he'd been foreman. He and his wife, whose name was Rose also, and the children had lived in a little bungalow in a new part of town. Pat was paying for the bungalow, so much each month. He had a little money in the bank. Pat Silvani had been determined to get ahead—to give his Tommy and Rose better things in life than he'd had.

Then without the slightest warning the construction company had "gone under." Pat Silvani didn't know why. He just received a notice that there wouldn't be any more work. The company was bankrupt. For a while Pat laid brick on another job. Then there wasn't anything. No one was putting up buildings. No body needed a brick mason. Pat worked in a garage for a while. Times began to get harder and he couldn't make the payments on the bungalow. They moved to a cheaper place and finally to this. Rose found that she could get work cleaning in an office building nights.

"Rose!" Pat Silvani said bitterly, "who used to be the smartest operator in the Vanity Fair Beauty Shop—scrubbing floors; she don't complain though. She gets 25 cents an hour and it's all we've got to live on!"

Pat Silvani's voice died down again. The smoldering fires in the dark eyes died down, too. He looked what he was—a man beaten. Janet sat forward. "Mr. Silvani," she said, "there must be jobs somewhere! I'm going to see if I can't find one for you. Maybe I won't be able to, but I'm going to try."

"Sure," Jeffrey Grant put in. "I was thinking the same thing. I know quite a few fellows and I'll ask around."

They left a little after that. Rose came forward as Janet was saying goodby and flung both arms about her. "You're nice," Rose said softly, "I like you!"

Janet and Jeffrey Grant went out into the night. Neither of them spoke until they were in the roadster. Then Janet said impulsively, "I didn't know people were living like that. Isn't it terrible?"

The young man nodded. "Do you suppose they'd take money? I was sure—"

"I don't know," Janet said, "but there must be other things we could do. Oh— not of things! Maybe we could sort of adopt them—the whole family, the way people do at Christmas."

"Why sure! Sure we can!"

As Janet met Jeffrey Grant's eyes she was thinking, "Why, he's really nice-looking!"

with the suggestion that he hurry up and help the fellow out.

"Don't be silly," Mr. Noone replied. "I throw those things in the waste basket."

"What do you mean?" we asked in surprise. "Certainly you are not so selfish as to refuse to disclose your system."

"I haven't got any system," Mr. Noone replied. "There are no systems. At least, there is none that will work. The truest words ever spoken were that all horse players must die broke."

"Then why on earth do you send out selections every day if they're no good? If your selections are not sure winners it seems to me like a pretty cruel joke."

"Listen, selections are nothing more than an expert's guesses at best. If I was right half the time they'd build me a monument that would make Washington's look like a fire plug."

Our conversation with Mr. Noone left us amazed. It seemed impossible that a sport as old as horse racing—it was mentioned in the Iliad (XXIII 212-650) would not have seen the development of a system whereby man could eliminate guesswork in picking a winner. It seemed so impossible that we could reach but one conclusion—a system awaited the first person who really put some thought on the matter.

So we thought for two days. And then it came to us like a flash. The horse-power system! Once you knew the horse-power of the various thoroughbreds, naming a winner would be as simple as picking a Packard to beat an Austin. What we mean is, there would be little likelihood of a 36-h. p. horse outrunning a 72-h. p. horse.

Once we hit upon the system, the rest was simple, for all we had to do was figure out the horse-power. That was the work of a moment. Using the age, weight, owner and width of withers as a guide, we devised a formula whereby a grammar school child can figure out the h. p. of any given horse. Here it is:

HN (horse's name) plus PP (post position) X EF (Early Foot) X WTS (wt of saddle cloth) minus TIPA (total number paid admission) equals Y which, when divided by CSG (coat stall gates) equals hp, which is the mean pressure of the horse's legs in lbs. per sq. in. or the speed with which he can carry one jockey one furlong in one minute.

Grant nudged and said he might as well run out there. He went on to explain that he had parked the car and gone into the little shop across the street for matches. He was just coming out again when he heard Rose's scream. Then when he saw the man grab Janet's purse he had made a running tackle. The rest was over almost as soon as it was started.

In strange contrast to Green's contention the bill constituted "a form of sovietism," the committee were told by a communist leader, Herbert Benjamin, that his organization was "unqualifiedly opposed" to the measure.

Benjamin, speaking for the national committee of unemployed councils, said it would "legislate a system of forced labor." He demanded unemployment insurance count the odds in favor of an early conflict. They believe economic conditions in the various countries will keep the Europeans from doing more than making faces at each other. They see possibilities of a virtual state of war without organized fighting.

It is reasonable to expect the nations may find war too expensive a pastime in these days when they get right down to the issue.

Arms—
Madame Rosika Schwimmer vows this one is true. She is the Hungarian pacifist who was refused American citizenship some years ago because she refused to swear she would bear arms in defense of this country.

"On the same day the court denied me citizenship," she says, "the same court granted citizenship to Zangara because he said he would bear arms and LOOK WHAT HE DID WITH THEM."

An army transport four days before they went out of office.

The three left New York February 28 bound for San Francisco. Their congressman's rate on the army vessel is $1 per day for subsistence. Two of them took their automobile along. The War Department says "the regular rates" were paid for these cars.

In addition these three collected government mileage allowances to return home. None of them live in San Francisco or even on the Pacific coast. One is from Massachusetts, another from Iowa and the third from Minnesota.

Personal

You have never heard such screaming as the old line Democrats set up when Sanford Estes, a self-confessed Republican, was reappointed Director of Prisons.

They bore down on Attorney General Cummings to such an extent he had to plead an alibi. As an old line Democrat himself he knew how they felt. So he laid all on Mr. Roosevelt.

Orders for the Estes appointment, he said, came from the White House.

Mr. Roosevelt has regulated his new job quite differently from other recent presidents.

He does not arise as early as advertised. He rarely comes to his office before 10 or 10:30. Some business is transacted at the White House before he leaves. He usually lunches at his desk. Grapefruit and lettuce salad are always a part of the menu.

When he begins to feel tired of his desk in the afternoon he chucks the job and goes riding or back to the White House for a change of surroundings. Sometimes he leaves as early as 3 or 4 p. m. Then later on he will come back to finish up.

The intimate business is done in the mansion proper. That is where the close friends are received.

Investigation

The man behind the guns in the Senate stock market inquiry now is Senator Bulkley of Ohio. He lets others do the talking. He does the directing. Chairman Fletcher and Senator Glass are too busy with other matters to give the subject the attention it needs.

Bulkley thinks he will be ready to shoot with the private banking material in about three weeks.

War

Our government has heard confidentially that Poland is mobilizing. Her airplane forces particularly are supposed to be ready for instantaneous action.

There is no need for alarm in that situation unless some German in Danzig happens to murder a Pole or some Pole decides to do away with a German.

All the surface indications point to war. Everyone here now knows that the State Department has been very excited about it. Feeling there has eased somewhat since Premier MacDonald began his peace maneuvers. It is still too anxious for comfort. The dopesters believe a war may come within two months, two years or five years. It all depends on what the hotbeds do.

The school affair is at present under control of 7,800 school districts presided over by between 28,000 and 30,000 trustees responsible for employing approximately 45,000 teachers. There are counties with more trustees than teachers. The average cost per child in the entire state for supervision alone is $4.16—or more than one-fourth of the state apportionment to the public schools.

It appears the people may be given an opportunity to vote on the constitutional amendment that would be necessary to put into effect the county unit form of government.

Of people who have become solidly aggressive in their cries for lower costs of government are consistent they will approve the amendment and allow for savings of millions of dollars to taxpayers.

Revival Ends This Evening

'You Can't Proclaim One Thing And Practice Another' Says Spann

The revival meeting at the First Methodist church which has been under way since last Sunday will continue through today.

The pastor, Rev. J. Richard Spann, who has been doing the preaching, delivered a strong, pointed sermon Friday night directed especially at church members who, he declared, "profess a standard that is noble and worthy and go out and live in shame."

"No one is more capable of seeing the shortcomings of the church than the preacher. But it is not because of God but because men like you have been such poor liars" that the church is handicapped, he declared.

"The language of action is the only kind the world knows today. It is not what you profess, or the church you belong to, or the creed you claim but the way you live that is counted," he told a large congregation.

"You can't act one way and profess another," he said. "I would claim to God that some of you mothers could have been called into a conference I had recently with a girl of our town, as she told me of temptations that had come to her and a tragedy that had befallen her. I asked her whether her mother had not taught her the right way to live. She replied,

R. F. C. Board Must Obtain New Records

Applicants Must Be Re-Enrolled And Detailed Reports Filled Out

Every man seeking employment from Reconstruction Finance Corporation funds allotted the county must be re-enrolled and a detailed form filled out for him beginning Monday.

The county committee in charge of administration of R. F. C. funds has received the forms from Lawrence Westbrook, state relief commission chairman appointed by Governor Ferguson.

The "case record" is to be made out for every person to whom relief is granted and is to be used thereafter each time that the person is granted an additional amount of work or direct relief.

Each case is to be serially numbered in a book provided for that purpose according to the serial number. The family name and the Christian name of those applying are to be secured and the present address as well as previous addresses. A careful list of the children and others living in the household is to be secured with their earnings, if any. Full information must be obtained concerning former places of employment of all persons applying and the kind of work they have done. Present income of the family and what resources they have such as relatives who can help, insurance and compensation from the government also must be obtained.

Warburg

James Warburg—son of Paul Warburg and former president of International Acceptance Corporation—is rated a strong possibility for Assistant Secretary of the Treasury. His experience in Germany should come in handy if expected German complications develop. Also he was anonymously useful behind the scenes during the bank holiday.

"They say" KILLED BRUTUS

Brutus was a good dog, the friendly, tail-wagging, smiling kind of dog. Wanting to be petted he jumped upon the lady, who was frightened. The person she told this to said Brutus had jumped and snapped. The next person had said Brutus was frothing at the mouth. Some boys saw Brutus and threw stones. Brutus ran. "Mad dog! Mad dog!" the boys cried. Brutus was cornered and shot.

From gossip to scandal is a short step, and heaven help the person or thing against whom the public mind is poisoned.

Successful merchants and manufacturers are those who realize the mischief that can be created by "They say." These business men, determined to say the truth, themselves, about their own merchandise and service, employ advertising to protect themselves and the public from half truths, from falsehoods and from the common garden variety of ignorance that works havoc among the very best of intentions.

These merchants and manufacturers are under no delusions. They know they cannot tell untruths about their products and get away with it because there is nothing that will bring ruin so fast and sure as to turn the bright, white light of publicity on inferior wares or unsatisfactory service.

Advertising forces manufacturers to compete for your trade and your dollars. It compels the offering of better merchandise, better service, fair prices. You can trust the advertisements in this paper!

Sports Parade

Gene Sarazen once remarked over a glass of beer that "just about the purest amateurs in sport are the golf professionals who move from one tournament to another."

This was before the day of decimal point beer so everybody attributed Gene's apparently cockeyed remark to the inner workings of the amber fluid and let it go at that. But today we happened across a table showing the leading money winners of the winter golf campaign, and we are inclined to believe that Sarazen knew what he was talking about.

This table, issued by the Professional Golfers Association, listed the leaders as follows: Craig Wood, $4,855.08; Paul Runyan, $4,092; Denny Shute, $4,036; Horton Smith, $2,947.99; Johnny Revolta, $2,318; Charlie Guest, $1,028.83; Walter Hagen, $1,895.75; Harry Cooper, $1,788.83; Olin Dutra, $1,599; Al Espinosa, $1,384.50; Willie Hunter, $1,370; Leo Diegel, $1,359.70; Al Watrous, $1,295; Ray Mangrum, $1,150; Gene Sarazen, $1,050; Ed Dudley, $1,050.

The list includes most of the biggest names in golf, and yet your biggest winner falls short of $5,000 and the game's greatest player—the man who holds the British and American open championships—stands down at the bottom with less than $1,100. Try and name another ranking sport where the kingpins make as little as they do in golf.

You must remember, too, that Craig Wood's $4,855.08 is not clear profit. For not since the lush days of the room have tournament officials guaranteed "name" players expenses and a bonus for playing.

In these days all players, virtually without exception, pay all their expenses at all tournaments.

When a golfer's professional takes to the trail that leads from California to Florida and up into the Carolinas, he knows that to make worthwhile money he must win not one tournament, not two tournaments, but three or four tournaments. And he also knows that his chances of accomplishing such a feat are slim indeed.

What makes him do it, then? According to Sarazen he does it because he can't help it.

"A golf professional is a golf professional," Sarazen said, "largely because of one thing—he's nuts about the game. It's about the only thing that means anything to him. He'll undergo all sorts of hardships and privations in order to keep swinging away. I've often wondered how some of the boys manage to keep body and soul together. But they always seem happy, so let's not worry about them."

All right, let's don't.

Big Spring Not To Enter League

After receiving no intimation that Big Spring would be successful in their application for entrance to the West Texas semi-professional baseball league, fans voted Friday night to withdraw further plans for entrance.

An invitation was extended Saturday morning by W. D. Holcombe, inviting representatives to be present at a meeting to be held in San Angelo today to consider Big Spring, but was disregarded due to the fact that it was received too late to stimulate dying hopes.

Lois Madison extended a plan for forming a semi-pro loop in the trade territory around here. It was argued that this plan would make a more compact circuit, less expensive, and much less time would be taken from player's businesses.

Fans in the following towns have been asked to attend a meeting here April 2 to complete plans for the loop: Colorado, Lorraine, Combs, Lamesa, Ackerly, Midland, Odessa, Crane, Foran and Stanton.

A committee composed of Billy Bass, Babers, L. Madison, Paul Elanck, Troy Gifford, Floyd Martin and Sammy Saine, will confer at 8 p. m. Monday to outline a method of procedure.

Bank President Held For Killing Of Examiner, Who Purportedly Had Caught Him In Shortage Of Funds

Accused Formerly Lived In Barstow; State Banking Examiner Relates Telephone Conversation

HEADRICK, Okla.—A troubled banker was held in the Jackson county jail at Altus while investigators attempted to learn details surrounding the fatal shooting of W. C. Ernest, state bank examiner, just after he had closed the Citizens state bank here.

J. C. Brock, president of the bank admitted he shot the examiner, but said, "I thought I had to." Ernest was shot in the head as he turned from a telephone after advising State Bank Commissioner W. J. Barnett at Oklahoma City, "I have closed Brock bank."

Murder charges were filed against Brock at Altus, Jackson county seat late in the day.

"Justified" At Altus, Brock repeated: "I was justified in doing what I did; that is the only statement I have to make."

The only details entirely clear were those given by Barnett concerning his conversation by telephone with the examiner, Miss Virginia Doane, stenographer for the banking department who accompanied the examiner to Headrick from Altus this morning had just stepped out of the banker's office when the shooting occurred.

"Mr. Ernest had been sitting at a typewriter," Miss Doane said. "He and Mr. Brock had been talking; I won't tell what they said until I have to. They were still talking when I left the bank on an errand for Mr. Brock."

She said that when she returned to the office, Ernest was lying on the floor dead. The young woman then ran out of the bank screaming for help.

Upon being advised of the shooting by Miss Doane, Commissioner Barnett ordered W. B. Jones, bank liquidator of Frederick, to take charge of the bank. State officers from Oklahoma City joined county officers in the investigation. Brock was arrested by Sheriff H. A. Savage and taken to Altus for questioning.

Ernest, who had been a bank examiner for 18 years, leaves his widow and two children. Brock also has a family.

Talked With Both Men Barnett disclosed he had talked to Brock as well as Ernest just before the shooting.

"Ernest told me he had caught Brock in a shortage and that he recommended that the bank be closed and taken over by the department. I told him to close it and to give me the facts by telegram. Then Brock talked to me."

"Don't close the bank, Mr. Barnett," he said. "If there's any shortage chargeable to me, I'll make complete restitution but if you close the bank, it'll ruin me."

"I told him that I'd be a poor chief if I did not follow the recommendation of my examiner. Yes, that's right, but can explain, Brock said. Then I got Ernest back on the wire and told him there was no change in instructions."

The bank has capital stock of $15,000 and deposits of approximately $59,000 which were under a 20 per cent withdrawal restriction under the bank moratorium law.

Commissioner Barnett said he was assigning two of the department's attorneys, Scott Ferris, Jr., and P. J. Winkler, to assist the prosecution at the request of William Weatherford, Jackson county attorney.

Seated at Typewriter Barnett said Weatherford informed him the evidence showed Ernest was seated at a typewriter writing a telegram to the bank commissioner when he was shot through the back of the head.

Brock first entered the banking business at Post City, Texas. He moved to Headrick from Barstow, Texas.

Ernest, who lived at Cheyenne and Elk City, before moving to Oklahoma City, was widely known in southwestern Oklahoma. He had been associated with the banking department for 22 years.

"I noticed that an extremely bright, fiery thread extended backward from the main mass before it spread out into the gaseous brightly shaded tail, which may have been between 50 and 100 miles long," he said.

"It was impossible to tell whether the meteor gradually disintegrated or struck the ground." Frank Williams was flying 50 miles west of Albuquerque when the whole sky was suddenly illuminated "as if some one had turned on a great blue electric light."

Farmer Finds Fragment Of Meteor Which Flashed Across Panhandle Skies; Fliers Describe Display

STRAFFORD (AP)—A small fragment of the great meteor which early Saturday morning swept through the southwestern skies in a brilliant pyrotechnic display was discovered in a wheat field about seven miles south of here early Saturday.

Ed Hart, farmer, found the fragment at the edge of his wheat field. Green wheat and grass had been burned and scorched. The fragment, a molten metallic mass, was of flat shape, weighed about four pounds, and was extremely heavy for its size. It was not imbedded in the soil, and had become practically cool.

AMARILLO—A gigantic meteor lighted the skies with awesome brilliance in five southwestern states before dawn Saturday and, with a thunderous tumble that rattled doors and windows, apparently disintegrated on its earthly plunge.

Persons in various localities of the North Texas plains region, the Oklahoma Panhandle, southwestern Kansas, southern Colorado and New Mexico expressed belief the meteor or fragments of it had fallen nearby.

Two air mail pilots of the Transcontinental and Western air line flying near Amarillo and Albuquerque, N. M., had uncomfortable closeups of the heavenly visitor.
