Two bodies examine DA

There appear to be two state legal bodies involved in the longtime investigation of the Deaf Smith County District Attorney's office.

The Panhandle Grievance Committee, an agency of the State Bar of Texas, and the state attorney general's office are both reported to be working on the case.

The Brand placed a telephone call to the state bar on Tuesday and was told by someone in the General Counsel's office that any information regarding the matter should come from the Panhandle Grievance Committee. A.J. Robinson, an Amarillo attorney and member of that committee, said its function is much the same as a grand jury and that he was not at liberty to discuss details of the case.

Robinson said that if and when the state bar or the attorney general decide to take further action on the case, such proceedings would initiate with the 222nd District Court. He added that any time the committee is asked to investigate such complaints, he would hope that quick action be taken on their recommendations.

Sexual abuse of kids considered

Last month, local residents were told, "A lot of rapes occur in Hereford." Last night, a small bunch from this area were informed, "Hereford seems to be a high sexual abuse (of children) area for some reason."

And to think many of you thought this little town was a nice, tranquil place to live.

The rape claim came from JoAnn Dwyer, manager of the Amarillo Rape Crisis and Domestic Violence Center who conducted a seminar here Oct. 25. The other quote was delivered by Bill Holt, supervisor of the area's child protective services program for the Texas Department of Human Resources who spoke at the Camp Fire Lodge Tues-

Since most of the abusers are known to the child - often loved by the kid and respected by others - frequently people disbelieve they could commit acts of molestation. sexual Estimates show, Holt claimed, only one-tenth of incestuous relationships are ever reported to authorities.

Furthermore, of the incidents brought to the attention of area case workers, Holt estimated 90 percent are

Five killed in two plane crashes

EL PASO, Texas (AP) - Stormy weather conditions may have contributed to two airplane crashes that occurred within six hours of each other near this far West Texas city, killing five people, including two children, officials

Four people - two adults and two female children were killed early Tuesday morning when the aircraft in which they were flying crashed in a canyon of the Franklin Mountains north of El Paso, city police dispatcher Gene Garcia said.

El Paso County Sheriff's Deputy Jack Waite said 3 inches of snow covered the ground near the crash and visability was near zero. He said it appeared a wing of the plane had clipped a mountain top.

The National Weather Service said high winds were reported in the area Tuesday, but winds generally averaged about 25 mph.

The four bodies were burned beyond recognition but authorities had tentatively identified the victims as pilot Lyle Foster, 46, of Temple City, Calif., Gordon Coker, 49, of Sante Fe Springs, Calif., and his two daughters, Cynthia Ann, 14, and Becky, 12.

1983 inflation may be lower

WASHINGTON (AP) - Consumer prices, restrained by modest gains in food, energy and housing costs, are climbing at their slowest pace in more than a decade and may even best last year's showing, economists say.

When the final results are tallied, private economist Evelina Tainer said that the 1983 inflation rate "certainly will be a good number."

Consumer prices, as measured by the Labor Department, rose 3.9 percent in 1982, the smallest increase since the 3.4 percent of 1971 and 1972. Those prices were up 8.9

percent in 1981 and 12.4 percent in 1980. Through September, consumer prices rose at an annual rate of 3.7 percent, and most economists expect that pace to hold fairly steady through the final months of the year.

In advance of today's release of October figures, analysts were predicting an increase of 0.3 percent to 0.4 percent, after seasonal adjustment, in the department's Consumer Price Index. That would be in line with the gains of the previous five months. In September, prices were up 0.5 percent after rising 0.4 percent in both July

Since its launch last January, the Infrared Astronomical Satellite has:

-Produced direct evidence that ours is not the only solar system.

-Discovered five comets and recorded more than 200,000 objects in the heavens.

-Found three giant rings of dust in the solar system, huge dust shells around the star Betelgeuse and a mysterious object - possibly an asteroid or a dead comet - that passes nearer to the sun than any planet or known

-Successfully surveyed 95 percent of the sky, found a ring of solid material around the star Vega, bands of dust around the sun between the orbits of Mars and Jupiter, and taken a new look at our own galaxy, the Milky Way.

-Returned more than 200 billion bits of data to Earth, allowing scientists see beyond the dust veils that normally obscure stars in formation or in their death throes.

Ferry sinks near Philippines

MANILA, Philippines (Ap) - A ferry boat capsized in bad weather off a southern Philippine island and about 200 of the 300 people on board are missing, a coast guard official said today.

Commander Wilfredo Mejia, the coast guard's assistant chief of staff for civil and military operations, said 80 people were rescued after the Dona Cassandra capsized Monday off Nasipit Island, 490 miles southwest of Manila.

Mejia said coast guard and navy ships were conducting a massive search and rescue operation" for survivors. The delay in the report by the coast guard is not unusual in the Philippines, where government and military agen-cies frequently do not release information about accidents unless verified by their own staff.

The official Philippine News Agency said the Dona

A survivor, Armando Adlao, 27, said that after the vessel capsized, he saw three lifeboats carrying about 50 each sucked into the sea.

The boat was on a trip from Butuan on southern Mindano Island to the central Philippine island of Cebu.

Jury finds Ford design negligent

CORPUS CHRISTI, Texas (AP) — A man who won a nearly $106.9 million damage award from Ford Motor Co. in the death of his daughter called the Mustang II she was driving a "lighted fuse" and said he hoped the jury verdict would lead to a recall of the automobile.

A state court jury deliberated for six hours Tuesday before deciding that Ford was "grossly negligent" in the design of the Mustang II and awarding William Durrill and his family, of Robstown, $6.86 million in actual damages and $100 million in punitive damages. Durrill's 20-year-old daughter, Devary, suffered third degree burns when her 1974 Mustang II was hit from behind after she and a companion stopped on the side of the road to clean up a spilled soft drink on Oct. 29, 1978.

Miss Durrill died a week after the accident. The passenger, Bonnie Watkins, 20, was declared dead at the scene.

Durrill said the award did not ease his grief over the loss of his daughter.

"We can't win," Durrill said. "But what Ford did was wrong. We have lost and now Ford has lost, and we hope that no one else will lose. We want this vehicle recalled."

Ford attorney William Meredith said no decision had been made on whether to appeal the jury verdict, but Ford spokesman Tom Foote in Detroit said the company felt the award was unjustified and would work to have it overturned

'We regret the occurrence of this tragic accident, but believe the jury award is so unreasonable and unwarranted that it will not be upheld," Foote said.

Durrill said Ford had made several offers to settle the lawsuit, but said, "We weren't after dollars. We wanted a jury verdict on

Ms. Watkins' family also has filed suit. That trial has been scheduled for April.

The driver of the automobile that hit Miss Durrill's car. James Rathmell, who was 65 at the time of the accident, was sentenced in 1979 to two years in the state penitentiary for involuntary manslaughter in Ms. Watkins' death. The jury in that case ruled that Rathmell was intoxicated at the time of the accident.

The Durrills had also filed a civil suit against Rathmell.

The jury found Tuesday that Rathmell was 25 percent responsible for the accident and Ford was 75 percent responsible. The damage award was levied against Attorneys for the Durrills argued during the eight-week trial that Ford knew in 1970 that there were design defects in the Mustang II.

"Any driver of a Mustang II is driving a lighted fuse ready to go off," said Durrill.

Foote said Tuesday that Rathmell was driving a 1972 Lincoln Continental at 70 mph and that experts had concluded that the fuel system of any subcompact vehicle would have ruptured under the force off such an impact.

"Ford can't prevent what killed Devary Durrill - the combination of speed and alcohol," Ford attorney Lewin Plunkett said, calling the Mustang II "a good little car.'

"But you hit it hard enough and it's going to break," Plunkett said. "It's not the fault of the vehicle."

David Perry, who represented the Durrills, said Ford was putting the blame on Rathmell because it did not want to talk about the car.

In the trial, Perry maintained that Miss Durrill's Mustang II exploded after impact because the gas tank was punctured by sharp bolts in the differential.

"The real horrible tragedy in this case is it wasn't really going to cost a lot of money to save Devary Durrill," Perry said. "The gas tank did not rupture, but was punctured by sharp objects. They could have remedied that by rounding off the sharp objects or putting a shield around the gas tank."

The Durrills' lawsuit sought punitive damages from Ford, contending the company was negligent in not warning motorists that the Mustang II's fuel tank could rupture. 'We think the purpose of the punitive damages is to make people do right in the future," said Perry. "We think these damages will make Ford Motor Co. do right."

He predicted that the verdict would lead to the recall of the Mustang II, citing the case of the Ford Pinto.

"The reason the Pinto was recalled was because of a $125 million punitive damage verdict returned a few years ago in California," Perry said. "Publicity from that, according to testimony of Ford officials in the trial, was what caused the recall of the "Evidence in this case showed the Mustang II was essentially the same car as the Pinto, but because there was no publicity on the Mustang II, it wasn't recalled," he said.

In April 1982, a Portland, Ore., jury awarded $2.45 million to the estate of a woman who died when her 1976 Ford Mustang II caught fire in a similar accident. Evidence at the trial indicated the auto's gas filler pipe pulled out of the tank when the vehicle was hit by a 1965 Chrysler traveling at speeds estimated as high as 100 mph. Last November, a jury in Fulton County, Ga., awarded $9.3 million in damages against Ford to a 15-year-old girl who was severely burned in a crash involving her 1975 Mustang II.

In both those trials, defense attorneys contended Ford was aware of fuel tank problems in the Mustang II.

In the late 1970s, some Mustang IIs were investigated by the federal Department of Transportation for problems with steering and suspected hatchback defects. Ford recalled some 1977 and 1978 Mustang IIs in blades, the 11th time in six years the company's vehicles were recalled for the pro-

INCEST A

Holt stressed all cases of sexual abuse do not involve penetration. "Much of it is touching, fondling and oral sex," he explained. "Oral sex is quite common, especially among young children."

"Young," Holt claimed, could mean less than one month old. He noted one case where the mother held up the infant child for the father to have oral sex. Holt has encountered "several cases" of two- and three-month-old babies who had gonorrhea.

As most adults are able to do, children can tell the difference between normal and perverse affection, Holt said. 'Just like a kiss from a friend or a kiss from a lover," he pointed out, "the child knows" to what kind of touching he is being exposed.

Incestuous fathers, the supervisor said, often are members of a conservative, deeply-religious family. When asked why they have had sex with their daughters, they often tell Holt, "What do you expect me to do...go out and commit adultery with some whore?"

cestuous fathers are drunks, pedophiles (those generally attracted to young children as sex partners), psychotics and those termed as "polymorphous," who desire sex with anything at anytime.

Often, a family infected by incest involves little or no communication between the mother and involved daughter. "In the majority of cases where fathers molest their daughters," Holt maintained, "mothers know of it and reluctantly give their Holt listed some possible effects to the child being sexually abused are running promiscuity, withdrawal-depression, excessive masturbation and hyperactivity. Some longerterm results may include confused sexual identity, inablity to sustain emotional relationships, impotency-frigidity and poor parenting.

Though there are definite signs one can detect of a child being sexually abused at home, great care must be taken by outsiders not to "jump the gun" with their suspicions, Holt said. By state law, however, anyone suspecting child abuse is required to inform either a child protective service or law enforcement agency.

While rapists tend to be males under 40 years old.

Correction

In Tuesday's page 1 article 'Mood optimistic about loan rating," it was incorrectly reported the San Antonio firm of Kidder, Peabody and Company is granting Deaf Smith County a loan for proposed jail work. Rather, the firm is handling and advising the county on its intent to issue $1.5 million in the form of certificates of obligation.

child molesters are mostly 30 and older. This is due. Holt believes, to the mid-life crises endured by most men. During that period, males tend to lose some of their aggresiveness and become more passive.

"Rape is not a sexual act," Holt said. "It has nothing to do with sex. It has to do with anger. A rapist wants to hurt his victim." Incest or other forms of child molestation, though, usually are intended as tender acts of love, he claimed.

Holt, a former minister, said he has been in the child protective service program for eight years, the last two as supervisor. The number of reported cases of sexuallyabused children has doubled in this area each of the last five years, he guessed.

Helping with some of Holt's speech was Cindy Burnam, one of the two local case workers. The other, though. he did not attend Tuesday night, is Kirk Merker.

Ann Landers

Thanksgiving gratitude

DEAR ANN LANDERS: Recently someone wrote, "You, Miss Landers, could hardly consider yourself a member of the working class..." You wasted no time telling that reader that you had turned out seven columns a week for going on 30 years, without missing a day, and "If that isn't work-what is?"

You deserve a day off and I'm going to give it to you. I am enclosing a column you ran on Thanksgiving in 1979. Run it again, Annie, and spend the day loafing.-Loyal Fan In New York

DEAR LOYAL: I accept with pleasure. And now I'm going to enjoy another drumstick and help myself to some more cranberry sauce. Here's the column, although, I confess, it made me blush.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: Today is Thanksgiving. What better time to let you know how much we appreciate you? A whole generation has grown up and learned about life from reading your column. It would be impossible to calculate the impact you have had on millions of people - not only teenagers, but individuals in every age

Thank you for patching up family fights, settling bets and making communication between children and adults easier. You have sent people to physicians, lawyers, dentists, clergymen, counselors, Alcoholics Anonymous, Recovery, Inc., and dozens of organizations they would never have known about if it weren't for you.

Thank you for discussing human problems most people would be too timid to approach. You have helped me understand homosexuality, masturbation, obsessivecompulsive behavior, abortion, kinky sex, transvestism, "funny uncles," medical problems, emotional problems, sibling rivalry, and made it possible for me to get along with my relatives, neighbors and friends.

Thank you, Ann Landers, for your terrific sense of humor. There have been days when your column was the only laugh I had. You have a way of being funny without being flippant, insulting or hurtful. I have split my sides at some of the things I've read in your column. I've shed a few tears, too. You have also made me and millions of others feel we aren't stupid just because we have to ask someone for advice.

Thank you for taking the time to track down the busiest and best-informed authorities in medicine, psychiatry and religion to get answers for your readers. Very few of us could reach these experts and we certainly couldn't afford to pay

Thank you for the help you've given people who are depressed, suicidal, strung out on drugs, alienated from parents, lonely and frightened. You have been tremendously supportive to people who are secretly worried about themselves, thinking they are the only ones in the world who have such "crazy" problems. It's wonderful for them to know they aren't

And thanks for admitting when you are wrong. It takes a big person to do that. I hope you will have the energy for many years to come to travel around the country and make speeches. I heard you speak in San Francisco and I'll never forget it. No one who sees you in person can doubt that you are for real.

Have a happy Thanksgiving, Ann Landers.-True Blue Ann Fan

chairman Patricia Weldon introduced Jim Steiert as the guest speaker when members of Veleda Study Club met Monday in the home of President Joyce Ritter.

Steiert presented a slide program on the ecology, pointing out that man can bring about change for the benefit or the detriment of the ecosystem.

God gave man dominion over the earth and the animals but did not intend for man to foolishly waste these resources. Man must return to the earth that which he takes, said Steiert.

Not only does the ecology provide food, it also provides beauty, serenity and selfrenewal for man.

Steiert also commented on the sportsman's place in the ecology, noting that several species have been brought back from the brink of extinction through the contributions of sportsmen.

The program was concluded with an adaptation of an Indian prayer.

During the business meeting, conducted by Ms. Ritter, the club collect was recited and roll call was answered with members sharing their blessings. The treasurer's report was given.

Communications were received from the American Cancer Society offering to provide club programs. Also received was an invitation from the Classroom Teachers Association to contribute toward a scholarship fund. Members voted to donate $15 to the fund.

The next program, a Christmas party, will be held in the home of Donna Lindeman.

The hostess served refreshments to Marcella Bradly, Betty Gilbert, Ms. Lindeman, Norma Martin, Norma Walden, Carolyn Waters and Margaret Zinser.

THANKSGIVING

Because many families celebrate Thanksgiving in the month of November, a lot of time is spent planning and preparing a special and nutritious feast. Perhaps one of the nicest parts of this traditional day is that families sit down to eat together. What a nice change it can be to place the importance on the company, rather than on the foods involved.

Foods digest better when eaten in a calm, relaxed manner. This Thanksgiving, decide ahead of time to make it a pleasant day-a day to relax and appreciate life itself on Thanksgiving morning, just as you do every morning, and resolve that you will not gain weight. It is easy to eat until you feel stuffed and even uncomfortable, but you will enjoy Thanksgiving even more by eating only until you are comfortably full.

Diet Center suggests that you weigh yourself

CHANGING ROLES FOR WOMEN

Women make gains in traditionally 'male' fields

Men continue to dominate many traditionally male occupations, but women have made gains in many areas. In addition, there has been a decline in the number of women in grade-school teaching and in nursing — two fields that were traditionally regarded as "women's domain."

Dallas remembers Kennedy murder as worldwide reporters watch fateful day in 1963, showers cleared from the sky shortly before noon and political leaders spoke of dreams.

The world again watched Dallas as 1,500 people gathered Tuesday to remember President John F. Kennedy - a block from the site where he was gunned down 20 years earlier.

A lamppost near the spot Kennedy was assassinated became a repository for flowers placed by those who still mourn the popular president's death.

The memorial service drew reporters from around the world to John F. Kennedy Plaza and was broadcast live as far away as Australia.

"This city has never blamed the city of Washington for the death of Abraham Lincoln so it is unfair to blame the city of Dallas for this criminal act," declared former U.S. Sen. Ralph Yarborough, who rode in the motorcade with Kennedy two decades ago.

At a $15-per-plate luncheon after the ceremony attended by about 750 people, Mayor Starke Taylor said Dallasites "bore a double grief" after the assassination.

"Dallas grieves not because the president died in Dallas but because he died at all," Taylor said.

County Democratic Chairman Bob Greenberg, who organized the memorial and luncheon, said the ceremony should serve as a message to the world "that the people of Dallas are moving forward and not backwards ... because we want the best for our country and the world."

Dozens of people milled around the assassination site before and after the memorial ceremony, taking photographs and remember-

U.S. Rep. John Bryant of Dallas read a letter from U.S. Sen. Edward Kennedy expressing regret he could not be at the service.

Kennedy, who attended a ceremony in Washington with his family and President Reagan, asked Americans "to rededicate ourselves to "With hope we chose to the ideals" his brother expressed.

"The future did not die here it never dies; it goes on. Here died one spirit," said U.S. Rep. Henry B. Gonzalez of San Antonio, who also rode in the motorcade.

"Let Dallas be a city of light for the world," added Yarborough.

He called Kennedy "a shooting star" who stirred the youth of the nation and added, "Had he lived ... he would have been re-elected and would have stopped the war in Vietnam."

Massachusetts House Speaker Thomas McGee told the crowd Kennedy's legacy "will endure and furthermore will grow stronger through the years." "What he promised was real and was possible," said Bryant. "John F. Kennedy did not solve the problems of war and peace but he created the conviction that they could be solved."

U.S. Rep. Martin Frost of Dallas said Kennedy inspired countless young people to pursue politics as a career by showing them "that that there is a place in politics for serious people."

"I think if he were alive today he would want us to remember that inaugural address and rededicate ourselves to those ideals," state Sen. Oscar Mauzy of Dallas said at the luncheon.

there was one time in the might have saved Hope's life. In 1962, Hope's road show had just entertained U.S. troops at an airfield in Vietnam. Heading back to their hotel in Saigon, the entourage was delayed while McNulty sorted 4,000 pounds of cue cards.

Ten minutes before Hope's motorcade arrived in Saigon, a bomb went off near his hotel, killing and injuring more than 100 people.

It wasn't until 1974, when William Westmoreland cornered McNulty at a show, that McNulty learned the Army found documents in an enemy bunker detailing plans to kill

Hope and his troupe. A truck loaded with explosives was supposed to blow up his hotel. The terrorists knew Hope's itinerary, said McNulty, but when they couldn't find him at the right time, they parked in a different hotel and blew up the bombs. "The document the army found said that the excuse for not getting our group was that our timing was off," he said. When the story was related to Hope, McNulty said the comic told him, "Saved by the idiot cards again."

Cue-card man saved Bob Hope's life

Tonight, when the legendary comedian is getting laughs on NBC's special, "Bob Hope Goes to College," remember that McNulty is feeding him the lines on macroscopic crib sheets. Since Hope has been having eye problems, McNulty's lettering has grown - up to 10 times for one show last year. It took three days to prepare

The difficulties include ink that runs in rainy climates, dust that sticks between the cards in dry weather and illblowing winds. "One time in Libya the cards went sailing into the sunset," he said.

McNulty said another danger is sabotage before live shows, although he wouldn't specify who might bear his cards a grudge.

Economist offers explanation

Why the economic mess? Because we're human

NEW YORK (AP) - Few there are who do not become impatient with economic disorder, and who therefore demand, of nobody in particular, that we clean up the mess, wipe the slate clean and begin again.

Settle the budget deficit. Make Third World nations pay up. Force banks to write off their bad loans. Correct the trade deficit.

What they ignore, says Jim Griffen, is that humans are imperfect, singly and through their institutions ... and that their economies will, therefore, be imperfect too. In fact, a bit slobbish.

rather than quick and maybe dangerous "solutions."

He reasons that if the country went too rapidly from fiscal deficit to fiscal surplus it might truncate the recovery, not just in the United States but throughout the world.

He contends that the imbalance of federal funds and receipts could also be credited with giving thrust to the economic recovery.

"Over time," he agrees, "we have to get there," meaning a position closer to balance between federal revenues and expenditures. But to do so now "would not be responsible in a world setting."

As he sees it, the world setting is one in which the rest of the world, developed and underdeveloped, depends on the U.S. economy to be the engine of recovery, pulling other economies until their own engines turn over. He maintains that to sudlife," has a "brief but impor-denly cut power to the U.S. locomotive by insisting on a balanced budget and payment of debts would "not be a responsible approach to governance." It would mean, he said, "a cold-water bath" for the world, "a replication of the 1930s."

"The grubby reality is that once you get too deeply into debt you just have to work your way out of it," he says.

In accepting human nature, Griffen doesn't insist the world settle accounts now. "Barely enough is enough for now, because another crisis is down the road," he says.

Surveying the economic scene, he concludes that somewhere in the middle is the golden mean - a moderately inflationary recovery in which both expansion and contraction are kept in check.

You might say, he said, that it would be - and in fact is — a recovery in which Americans and those affected by them are "kept moderately unhappy and moderately happy at the same time."

The alternative, he said, would be to "crunch" the U.S. economy and bring devastation to other nations.

THE PHILIPPINES

GEOGRAPHY:

The Philippines consists of 7,100 islands stretching 1,100 miles off the southeast coast of Asia, covering 115,831 square miles. The 11 largest islands are generally mountainous and contain 95% of the area and people.

HISTORY/POLITICS:

The islands, home of the Malay people, were visited by Magellan in 1521; Spain founded Manila in 1571. The Philippines was ceded by Spain to the United States in 1898 and conquered by Japan in 1942; independence was proclaimed in 1946. Head of state (since 1965): Ferdinand Marcos.

50 million, mostly Malay; also Chinese, Americans and Spanish.

ECONOMY:

47% agricultural; 20% industrial/commercial; 20% services. Food-processing, clothing, drug, wood-product and appliance industries; chief crops are sugar, rice, corn, pineapple and coconut. Per-capita income: $779 (compared with U.S. PCI $8,612).

The strategic importance of the Philippines makes U.S. military support vital, the Reagan administration says — particularly because of the Soviet air and naval buildup in Vietnam. Adm. Robert L.J. Long, former commander of U.S. forces in the Pacific, says the Philippines "sits astride the vital sea and air lanes of the Western Pacific," and American forces are positioned for maximum flexibility.

Lawyers discuss possible alibi

GEORGETOWN, Texas (AP) - A Florida roofing company's employment records might prove that confessed mass killer Henry Lee Lucas was not in Texas when an unidentified woman was slain near Georgetown four years ago, according to defense lawyers.

Lucas, a drifter who says he killed 165 people, sat silently in a Williamson County courtroom Tuesday as his court-appointed attorneys hinted at two possible defenses - an alibi based on the Florida records and an insanity plea.

The indictment here alleges that Lucas, 47, killed an unidentified young woman whose nude body was found in a roadside culvert on Oct. 31, Lucas already has been sentenced to life in prison in the stabbing death of 15-yearold Freida "Becky" Powell in Denton County. He pleaded guilty and received a 75-year sentence in the murder of Kate Rich, 80, of Ringgold, Texas.

He faces seven other murder charges.

Defense lawyer Parker Mc-Cullough asked State District Judge John Carter on Tuesday to approve pretrial questioning - under oath - of the record-keeper for Southeast Roofing and Sheet Metal Company in Jacksonville, Fla. Lucas worked for the firm, McCullough said.

"We're not asking for a fishing expedition on this thing. We have reason to believe he was in Florida when this offense occurred," McCullough told Carter.

The judge did not grant the defense request, but told Mc-Cullough to informally question company officials. The judge said he would approve the defense motion if the informal interviews indicate the company has information pertinent to the murder case.

Lucas, a former mental patient who served time in prison for slaying his mother, wore street clothes to the pretrial hearing. He occasionally chatted with his lawyers and Williamson County Sheriff Jim Boutwell.

The trial is set for Jan. 16. Another pretrial hearing is set for Dec. 13.

McCullough also asked the judge for permission to question Ottis Toole, a Lucas friend who is being held in the Duval County jail in Jacksonville, Fla.

Toole faces a capital murder charge here.

McCullough said he wants ermine if Toole was ith Lucas when the uniden exists as to who committed the crime," said McCullough. The possibility of an insanity plea arose when Don Higginbotham, another lawyer appointed to defend Lucas, persuaded Carter to order a psychological exam of the defendant. The judge wants the psychologist to try to determine if Lucas is mentally competent for trial, and whether he was sane at the time of the offense. Higginbotham said Lucas, at times, has not been able to "converse in a realistic and meaningful manner" about

Although some law enforcement officials have said Lucas has given detailed accounts of slayings, Mc-Cullough said Lucas has "given different versions of this offense to attorneys in the case."

Higginbotham said the attorneys' biggest difficulty in working with Lucas has been "primarily in the area of changing stories from time to

"We frankly do not have enough information at our disposal," Higginbotham told the judge.

But Williamson County District Attorney Ed Walsh was not impressed with the defense statements about Lucas' changing stories. The prosecutor said it is not sual for defendants to "play games with police of-his secure and lucrative 40-hour-a-week, stockbroker's job for a nonlucrative 80-to 100-hour-aweek job as a maker of cue sticks. Selling stock wasn't a bad job, Black says, but making cue sticks is the next best thing to dying and going to heaven. The hours don't bother him. The money - or the lack of it - doesn't bother him either. It's the challenge of starting from a plank of raw maple and fashioning from it a cue stick, which is no simple task. Black's cue sticks -"hitters," the pros call them - are made for serious pool players, many of whom are nationally or internationally known. Steve Mizerak, who has won the U.S. Open four times and the World Open, is one of Black's customers. So is Dorothy Wise, who won the Open five consecutive years. November's Esquire Magazine lists Black as one of the three best custom cue makers in the United States.

women's division of the U.S.

A hallway wall in Black's office is covered with pictures autographed by many other professional and celebrity pool players. The reception area of the office has a regulation size pool table, which Black uses mostly to roll a cue stick on to make certain the stick is not warped. He barely has time for a game of pool anymore, and when he does have the time, he plays golf.

"I started making cues in '73-'74 as a hobby, strictly because I saw one custom cue that I was very impressed with," Black says. "So we started out in my garage ... and I just stayed with it. I fell in love with making cues."

He had no background with machine tools or woodworking. All he had, actually, was a great interest in playing

But when he left Paine Webber in 1976 to strike out on his own, he pretty much had to give up playing because he didn't have enough time.

"When I got into cue making I got so involved and put in so many hours I even gave up cutting the grass. My wife decided to do that so it would get done," Black says.

When Black was a stockbroker making cues for a hobby, he attended national tournaments out of his own interest. Marketing consisted of Black showing his sticks to people who eventually ordered hitters for themselves. And the word spread.

"If I had to do it over again, the first thing I'd do is go take a course at a vocational school," he says.

Black started, he recalls. with all the wrong tools. And he experimented with 'thousands of dollars worth of glue" before finding the five glues he uses in each stick.

He had to learn about moisture contents, grains and weights of various woods, finally settling on maple, one of the key ingredients in both the shaft and the butt of a cut stick.

"In the shaft I have to have very clear, straight-grained Canadian hardrock maple," he says. "In the butt I like to use birdseye maple, which has a lot of grain activity."

The prongs - the pointed designs near the middle of the stick - generally are inlaid with thin sheets of wooden veneer that are dyed and made in France. Woods such as ebony or rosewood also are used in prongs.

The prongs serve both style and function. "It's becme a traditional design, but also, when you are laminating woods together, you are minimizing your chances of warpage."

In the small but tidy office and shop Black works on any of four lathes. The shop, clean and organized with no clutter, is evidence of a perfectionist. And perfection is what it takes ato make a cue stick, he Black's wife, Ardis, spends from 20 to 30 hours a week doing the books, handling shipping and putting the leather 'wraps" on cue sticks.

He is not making money, even though he makes and sells about five sticks a week that start at $200 each. "I have a good time and enjoy it," Black says. "Sure, I would like to get it to a point where it supports itself. But my wife and I keep saying bigger is not better. We want to be better at it and keep striving for that."

Herd cagers open season

The Hereford Whitefaces opened the 1983-84 basketball season on a winning note at Levelland Tuesday night with a 51-44 victory over the

"I was real proud of our press and using 10 players in the game," Coach Bobby Decker said this morning. "We caused a lot of turnovers with the press, and our players had a minimum of mistakes for the first game."

The Herd jumped to a 10-7 lead in the opening quarter and upped the advantage to 24-16 at halftime. The margin was 12 points going into the final period, 37-25.

Jeff Streun led the Whiteface scoring with 12 points, and two other gridders made the transition to the hardwoods by tallying 11 each--Eric Walterscheid and Lee Brockman. Rounding out the scoring were Kevin Redus 5,

Sammy Suarez and Mike Scott, 4 each, and Blair Rogers and Gomer Garcia, 2

The Whitefaces hit only 9 of 16 free shots. "We need to work on our foul shooting, because 56 percent is not good enough at the foul line," noted Decker. The Herd hit 21 of 56 from the field.

Portland sets mark; Dallas clips Spurs by 118-117

WILLIAM R. BARNARD P Sports Writer

With 1:12 to go in the game nd Portland leading 146-111, Denver Coach Doug Moe sent he Nuggets into their boxind-none defense.

When Moe noticed the coreboard flashing that the Trail Blazers were approaching their team record of 150 points in a game, Moe called a timeout Tuesday night and told his players, 'Let them have it. You understand what I'm saying, don't you?"

The Nuggets then took defensive positions, but let Portland players drive to the hoop five times without getting in their way. With no opposition, Portland easily surpassed the record.

With a few seconds to go,

NEW YORK (AP) - If the slugger Ron Kittle to the news that he is the American

League's Rookie of the Year

Portland's Clyde Drexler had the ball at midcourt, and while a few Nuggets players walked off the court, Drexler drove to the basket to score the Blazers' final two points at the buzzer of the 156-116 National Basketball Association game.

In other games, it was Philadelphia 112, Detroit 108; Golden State 102, Washington 101; Atlanta 104, Indiana 93; New York 117, Boston 113 in double overtime; Dallas 118, San Antonio 117; Kansas City 118, San Diego 99; Houston 118, Phoenix 96 and Utah 130, Los Angeles 126 in overtime.

Moe's instruction that his players not try on defense apparently was motivated by frustration over his team's lack of defense against the

Chicago's Ron Kittle wins

"What makes that (the final minute) any different from the non-defense we put up against them in the first and second quarters?" Moe asked. "We didn't guard anybody all night long. At least at the end, we didn't play defense due to coaching instruction."

Ironically, the Blazers set the previous team record of 150 points in 1977 against San Antonio, then coached by Lafayette Lever scored 14 of his 22 points in the fourth quarter, when Portland scored 44 points, to lead six Trail Blazers with 19 points or more. Drexler, Kenny Carr, Wayne Cooper and Calvin Natt scored 20 points each, while Jim Paxson added 19.

During the AL Championship Series, Kittle said he didn't quite reach the goals

he set for himself this season.

But he told ABC Radio Sports

"I set my goal higher than possible so you have to really

I like to work at them. I think

Tuesday night:

Portland, which took control of the game by outscoring the Nuggets 43-26 in the first quarter, also set a team fieldgoal record for a single game, connecting on 65 of 100 attempts. The Blazers outrebounded Denver 51-26.

Kiki Vandeweghe scored 26 points for the Nuggets, while Alex English added 24.

Moe shrugged off the Nuggets' poor effort, saying, "We were beat after the first quarter. After halftime I told the guys this game was gone and we better start worrying about tomorrow night. When your effort is so poor against a good club like Portland, you might as well mail in the score."

Moe said he was not disturbed by the 40-point defeat because of the team's history of bouncing back from poor games.

Last season, the Nuggets lost one game 146-102 and won their next outing. On another occasion, they lost by 19 points and won by 37 in consecutive games.

Jazz 130, Lakers 126

Utah's Thurl Bailey broke a tie at Los Angeles with his tipin with 1:20 left in overtime, snapping the Lakers' sevengame winning streak.

Knicks 117, Celtics 113

The Knicks won their sixth game in seven outings and handed Boston its fourth straight setback as Bernard King and Rory Sparrow scored 24 points each and combined for the final five points in the second overtime at New York.

After waiting with his family at their home near Gary, Ind., Kittle broke out the champagne Tuesday night when he received the telephone call informing him of the award. When he was asked if he wanted to play next year with the White Sox, who captured the American League West before losing to the Baltimore Orioles in the playoffs, Kittle said:

"I hope to be with the (Chicago) Cubs . . . I mean the Sox." Then, laughing, he said: "I think it's the bubbly I'm drinking. The bottle was gone in 10 minutes. I'm sending someone out for another one right now."

Sooners to face 'Big Red'

Nebraska's football team is like the overweight, awkward kid, butt of the jokes of his neighborhood pals, who decided to hone his muscles, develop speed and then come back and kick dirt in all of their faces.

The "Big Red" is an awesome, grind-it-out, pointa-minute machine which not only has cemented its position as the No. 1 college power in the country but is so solid and strong that its admirers contend it could compete respectably with some of the clubs in the National Football League.

"In my mind, this is the finest offensive college team I have ever seen," says Bob Devaney, who coached the Cornhuskers for 11 years, starting in 1962 before moving into the athletic director's office and turning the "Xs" and "Os" over to Tom sometimes in the country, the Huskers did not become a potent bowl force until the 1970s, after they'd had a couple of hard and uncomfortable looks at Bear Bryant's skinny, bare-legged kids from Alabama. In 1966, they played Alabama in the Orange Bowl. At the time, they were the scourges of the Mid-West and they showed up in Miami with a team of big, bruising heavyweights who made Bryant's boys look as if they belonged in a lower league. But the Bear's sinewy legions faked their huskier foes right out of their cleated shoes, leaving the Huskers puffing with a surprise 39-28 victory.

The next year, Nebraska sought revenge in the Sugar Bowl. The scenario was unchanged. Nebraska was big, tough and slow. Alabama looked like skin and bones. Quickness prevailed: 34-7.

Then something began happening out in the corn country. Devaney, who was coach at the time, denies that these experiences were a factor but the Cornhuskers discovered that speed, not size, was the best barometer of football

But they took it a step farther. They learned that a big man could be as quick as a little man. So they melded the two elements - size and speed — to produce the best winning average in college football for the last 20 years.

They beat Georgia 45-6 in the 1969 Sun Bowl, start of six straight bowl triumphs, one of them a 38-6 revenge triumph over the Bear and 'Bama in the 1972 Orange

That was the Cornhusker class of 1971, with Johnny Rodgers at tailback and Rich Glover at nose guard, which was acclaimed not only national champion but the "best college team ever" by the Sporting News and others.

The best, that is, until now. "This year's team may be even better than '71," concedes Devaney.

The Husker offense is spearheaded by the No. 1 Heisman Trophy candidate, Mike Rozier, a 5-foot-11, 210-pound thunderbolt out of Camden, N. J., and a ballfaking Houdini named Turner Gill, who pulls the trigger on the Huskers' option attaxck. Rozier, a Walter Payton type with great moves and natural instincts, is college football's top ball-carrier, averaging 176.6 yards a game eight a pop - with 28 touchdowns. For his threeyear career, he is nearing the 5,000 yard mark.

Gill is both a running and throwing threat. Wingback Irving Fryar, 6-2 and 200 pounds, is another Johnny Rodgers. With Rozier, they have been piling up scores as high as 84, 72 and 60-plus for an average of 60 points a game.

The offensive line averages 6 feet, 4 inches in height and 270 pounds in weight. Dean Steinkuhler, a 6-3, 270-pound guard, is the leading candidate for the Outland Trophy.

With that kind of offense, who needs defense?

The economy's upturn has led to some consumer optimism. More people plan to make major purchases this year than have already done so, according to a Business Week poll. In addition, there has been a marked growth of shopper interest in such big-ticket or luxury items as personal computers, new cars and new homes.

Pattern may be broken

NEW YORK (AP) - A familiar pattern, accepted by management and labor for the past 20 years, seems to have been broken by a hodgepodge of factors that includes fear and the dollar's value.

Though not certain, it appears now that a falling jobless rate isn't likely to be followed quickly by much higher wages, once considered almost automatic. Even some union leaders agree that the pattern, dating to the early 1960s, may be broken next year.

Perhaps the most often cited reason is an oversupply of workers, documented by an 8.8 percent civilian jobless rate that one union chief says leads to a classic, wagedepressing supply-demand problem.

William Winpinsinger, Machinists & Aerospace Workers president and member of a Conference Board panel on the labor outlook, said the pool of available workers also condemns the unskilled to "continuing and chronic joblessness."

Merrill Lynch's Jack Lavery explains that while the jobless rate has fallen sharply, it remains high by most yardsticks. He believes a 6 percent to 7 percent rate would be needed before wage pressures are felt, "well below the 8 percent rate we expect by the end of 1984."

In some industries unemployment remains much higher than the overall rate. In October more than 15 percent of workers in construction were idle and the rate in manufacturing was 9.5

Also helping to break the pattern is the attitude of businesses, many who cut costs in the recession and want to keep them cut.

Audrey Freedman, chairman of the Conference Board's panel, says having survived back-to-back recessions in the 1980s, "corporate survivors are not going to revert to inefficient operations now."

Ms. Freedman, an economist with the board, a research organization supported mainly by business, says "there will be no wage explosion in 1984 even as the recovery continues."

Behind the new efficiencies are many reasons. Companies are scared by past economic volatility and fear it might develop again. Others are more concerned about foreign competition in domestic markets.

Behind the foreign competition is more than the usual complaint - goods produced at low wages. And the dollar is valued so highly that foreign-made goods undersell domestic items in the U.S.

So additional pressure is added to the U.S. job market and to corporate managers already in the midst of costcutting programs.

There also is the factor of deregulation. Many transportation firms have inding it necessary to hold down and sometimes cut wages to meet competition resulting from deregulation. These factors, and the deep recession that just ended, have led to a leveling in the rate of hourly wage increases, with the thirdquarter increase amounting to only 5.4 percent, lowest since the mid-1960s.

Next year, the Conference Board panel says, first-year wage and benefit raises in major union contracts are likely to be a "modest" 5 percent. Based on a 5 percent inflation rate, also projected by the panel, that would mean no real increase at all.

Green receives letters

WASHINGTON (AP) -Before he signed an order on Aug. 24, 1982, requiring the breakup of the Bell System, U.S. District Judge Harold H. Greene read a lot of letters from the public.

A few attacked his qualifications as a judge. Most simply pleaded with Greene to stop the Justice Department from dismantling the American Telephone & Telegraph Co.

"Please stop this catastrophe," wrote one woman from Milwaukee.

"What a crock," wrote a Houston man. "You should apologize to the company and the public for a grotesque miscarriage of 'justice,' leave AT&T alone, permit them to engage in any business they wish and then you go back to chasing ambulances. Or even better, get an honest job.'

"I hate what you, (Assistant Attorney General William) Baxter, the Justice and antitrust departments have done to AT&T," wrote a Kansas woman. "You have destroyed 100 years of hard work on the part of AT&T, the best telephone system in the world."

How did AT&T get into this

The answer requires some knowledge of the history of telephone service in the United States.

For the past century, AT&T's basic mission was to extend "P.O.T." - plain old telephone service - to every American who wanted it at a reasonable price; a goal known as universal service. Operating under an agreement worked out in the early 1900s by Theodore Vail, then AT&T's president, the Bell System accepted government regulation and committed itself to universal service in exchange for protection of its monopoly.

AT&T then organized itself accordingly. Laboratories had the job of developing and applying technology to products for the phone network. The Western Electric Co. manufactured those products. The Bell operating companies served as AT&T's connection with customers. qAnd Long Lines built and managed the national network that tied the Bell companies and independents alike together.

As long as the monopoly was intact, the system worked. According to the Commerce Department, more than 92 percent of the nation's households have a telephone. AT&T maintains that everybody who wants telephone service can get it. But the goal of providing universal service could not be pursued without erecting a complicated "cost-allocation system" within the Bell

Long-distance callers ended up bearing a rising percentage of the costs of constructing and maintaining local phone networks, subsidizing local rates for everyone, including neighbors who called each other but made no longdistance calls. Urban residents helped subsidize rural residents. Everybody benefitted from slow depreciation rates for equipment, although everybody paid more over the long run as a result. It was inevitable that other companies would see business opportunities within that subsidized system. New technologies provided the means to exploit them. Scientists perfected microwave radio for telephone transmission, introduced the computer age with invention of the transistor, and developed new telephones and telephone switching systems, along with satellites, lasers and fiber optic cables of pure glass. At first, AT&T and its regulators tried to ignore the effects of technology on the company's monopoly. But by the late 1960s and early 1970s, the Federal Communications Commission and the courts had begun questioning the AT&T setup, based on the premise that a vertically integrated monopoly represented the cheapest means of providing telephone service.

AT&T was even chafing a bit at the old setup itself. It was restricted to the business of providing communications service, even though Bell Labs was exploring other fields, particularly com-

By 1972, the MCI Communications Corp. was operating a single microwave telephone link between Chicago and St. Louis. By 1973, MCI was almost bankrupt because of AT&T's refusal to give it the local connections it needed to operate a long-distance network. In 1974, the FCC ordered AT&T to provide those connections.

That same year, the U.S. Department of Justice, having watched AT&T's behavior through negotiations with MCI, went to court to prod the company. Federal prosecutors charged AT&T had used its control of the local Bell networks to freeze out would-be competitors not only in the long-distance business, but also in equipment. AT&T had been requiring customers who purchased non-Bell equipment to pay a monthly fee called a "protective coupling arrangement," ostensibly to protect its network from shoddy equip-

AT&T denied the charges of anti-competitive conduct. But on Jan. 8, 1982, eight years after the suit was filed and 10 months after the trial began, the company announced it was settling.

By NICOLAS B. TATRO Associated Press Writer

TEL AVIV, Israel (AP) -In Israel's army of civilian soldiers, spit-and-polish is often scoffed at, rank does not always have its privileges, and privates tell prime ministers what they think about policy.

The army of 130,000 regulars and 310,000 reservists reflects the faults and strengths of Israeli society as a whole. It is made up of shopkeepers and farmers, clerks and plumbers whose opinions span the political rainbow and who have made individualism a hallmark of the military.

"In every tank and every armored personnel carrier, you have representatives of contradictory political philosophies. Everybody knows what everybody thinks, but there is no need for a soldier to be in agreement with his superiors on the political level," said army spokesman Brig. Gen. Yaacov Even.

Bureau questions White House

By JAMES GERSTENZANG Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) -The Justice Department is investigating, on President Reagan's orders, the disclosure of secret recommendations made two months ago that the United States increase its military operation in Lebanon, a government source says.

The source said that the FBI has questioned White House and foreign policy officials about the disclosure.

According to another source, Robert C. McFarlane, Reagan's special Middle East envoy at the time and now his assistant for national security affairs, had made the military recommendations and complained that their subsequent public disclosure endangered his life. He was in the Middle East at the time.

Details of the secret investigation were tightly held and even the fact that it was taking place was considered classified.

Several senior White House officials refused to discuss it at all and sources who said anything about it spoke on the condition that they not be further identified. At the Justice Department, spokesman Tom DeCair said "We don't comment on investigations."

The investigation was said to have begun shortly after stories appeared in network television broadcasts, newspapers and on wire services that McFarlane had recommended the use of U.S. workers to sign secrecy artillery and airpower in Lebanon.

That recommendation was said to have been discussed at a National Security Council meeting in the White House Situation Room on Saturday, Sept. 11.

The Post said Clark complained to Reagan about the leaks the following Monday morning, Sept. 13, and that Reagan, also angry, assembled his senior advisers to discuss the situation.

According to the Post account, they discussed the wording of a letter to be sent by Reagan to Attorney General William French Smith requesting a formal investigation.

At the time McFarlane was making his proposals about Lebanon, firing from Druse Moslem militia positions around Beirut had killed several Marines who were part of the multinational peacekeeping force in Lebanon. This was six weeks before a suicide bomb attack killed 239 Marines at their

Beef usage climbs again

COLLEGE STATION --Consumer use of red and processed meats, such as luncheon meats, has steadied after recent declines compared to the use of poultry and fish.

That finding in a recent report of the American Meat Institute and the National Livestock and Meat Board spells good news for livestock producers and others in the meat industry, a meat specialist, claimed.

"Basically, the report provides positive information for those in the meat industry," according to Dr. Dennis Stiffler with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service. Texas A&M University System. "It notes that while consumers are still concernwith health considerations--obesity, caloric intake, fat and cholesterol--when buying food, there is less emphasis on price than previously thought. Major concerns seem to be quality and convenience."

The report was based on 1,050 telephone interviews with grocery shoppers and was a follow-up to a similar survey conducted in 1981 by the same agency of Yankelvich, Skelly and White, Inc.

Major findings were these: -Reductions in meat consumption noted in 1981 appear to be leveling off.

-The market climate appears to be a more favorable one for the meat industry to get its message across.

-Regarding key issues on meat consumption, data suggest that the health issue is a "mixed bag," that price is a factor but mainly among heavy users, and that the two weeks.

lifestyle appears to be the key in determining consumption

'Today's lifestyle along with health concerns appear to have a major impact on meat consumption," Dr. Stiffler said in reference to the report. "The 'convenience' factor of foods is a key issue regarding active lifestyles and single member and nontradtional households.

"On the other hand, the 'price' factor is mainly a concern among heavy meat users-traditional and larger families," Dr. Stiffler added.

The report also gave some insight into the use of fresh beef (other than ground beef) over the two-week survey period. Data showed that fresh beef was served in 82 percent of the U.S. households during the period, with an average consumption of 3.4 times. It also showed that 7 in 10 users noted no change over the past year in their frequency of beef con-

Additionally, heavy beef users were found to be mainly young, blue collar families with a median age of 34 years and a median income of $19,400. Children in these families were generally under 13 years of age. On the other hand, moderate to light users of beef were somewhat older and were from smaller households, with a median income of $16,000.

Ground beef was reported as the most widely used fresh meat, being served in 89 percent of U.S. households during the survey period. Average consumption among users was 3.3 times during "The Day After" lifts ABC

LOS ANGELES (AP) -ABC's much-discussed nuclear war movie "The Day After," in what was virtually a solo effort, propelled ABC ahead of CBS to win the Nielsen ratings for the week ended Nov. 20.

ABC won the week although the movie was its only entry in the Top 10 and eight of the others were CBS programs. The movie's rating of 46.0 and share of 62 percent gave ABC a tremendous boost over CBS and NBC.

CBS won the week before and remains ahead for the season to date. Third-place NBC also had one show in the top rank.

The movie, which attracted 100 million viewers, devastated its Sunday night opposition. The opening chapter of the NBC miniseries "Kennedy" was in 54th place. The CBS lineup of comedies also fell below their usual rankings.

ABC won the week with an 25.2 or 21.1 million.

average of 20.4 in the A.C. Nielsen Co. ratings. CBS was second with 19.1 and NBC was third with 13.5. The networks say this means that in an average prime-time minute 20.4 percent of the nation's TV homes were tuned to ABC.

The rating of "The Day After" fell short of breaking any viewing records. It became the most watched made-for-television movie, but overall it ranks after such series programs as the final episode of "M-A-S-H" and the 'Who shot J.R.?" episode of "Dallas."

CBS kept its lead among the evening news shows. CBS had a rating of 14.1 and ABC and NBC tied with 11.5.

58 at Kenneth Norris Jr. Cancer Hospital, where he had been undergoing treatment for cancer of the ureter, hospital spokesman Gordon Cohn said.

The tall, balding actor who played the fatherly Sgt. Phillip Freemason Esterhaus on the acclaimed series was known for his soft-spoken eloquence and his admonition to patrol officers, "Hey! Let's be careful out there!"

"It's sort of like losing your old man," said Charles Haid, who plays Officer Andy "Cowboy" Renko in the He noted that Conrad con-

The Newspaper BIBLE

THREATENED BY A STORM AT SEA

The officers in charge of the prisoners listened more to the ship's captain and the owner than to Paul. And since Fair Havens was an exposed harbor--a poor place to spend the winter--most of the crew advised trying to go further up the coast to Phoenix, in order to winter there; Phoenix was a good harbor with only a northwest and southwest

Just then a light wind began blowing from the south, and it looked like a perfect day for the trip; so they pulled up anchor and sailed along close to shore. But shortly afterwards, the weather changed abruptly and a heavy wind of typhoon strength (a "northeaster," they called it) caught the ship and blew it out to sea. They tried at first to face back to shore but couldn't, so they gave up and left the ship run before the gale. We finally sailed behind a small island named Clauda, where with great difficulty we hoisted aboard the lifeboat that was being towed behind us, and then banded the ship with ropes to strengthen the hull. The sailors were afraid of being driven across the quicksands of the African coast, so they lowered the topsails and were thus driven before the wind.

The next day as the seas grew higher, the crew began throwing the cargo overboard. The following day they threw out the tackle and anything else they could lay their hands on. The terrible storm raged unabated many days, until at last all hope was gone.

Prosecutors release few details of brutal killings of four suspects accused of capital murder will likely go to trial next March in connection with the stabbing deaths of three teen-agers at Lake Waco who were "in the wrong place at the wrong time," a prosecutor says.

Kenneth Franks, 18, of Waco, and Jill Montgomery and Raylene Rice, both 17, of Waxahachie, were bound, tortured and stabbed to death in July 1982, McLennan County District Attorney Vic Feazell said at a news conference one day after four men were indicted in the

"Kenneth, Jill and Raylene had hopes, dreams and plans for the future, just like anybody else," Feazell said. "They had friends and loving families. Now all that is left of Jill, Raylene and Kenneth are memories."

Mundeer Mohammed Deeb, a 24-year-old Jordanian national; David Wayne Spence, 25; Gilbert Melendez, 28; and his brother Anthony Melendez, 24, were indicted by a grand jury Monday. They could be sentenced to life in prison or death by lethal injection if found guil-

Feazell said the suspects

WACO, Texas (AP) - One will be tried separately with the first trial probably getting underway in March.

Feazell said prosecutors will show that the four men conspired to kill the teenagers, whose bodies were found July 14, 1982, at Speegleville Park.

'Most of the details of the brutal crime will come out in pre-trial proceedings and during the trial, but there is an issue of mistaken identity involved, and it seems the children were just in the wrong place at the wrong time," Feazell said.

He declined to elaborate on the mistaken identity theory, but said that three of the suspects reportedly were involved directly in the killings and one "conspired and was instrumental in plotting the murders."

"Murder for hire is a possibility," Feazell said. Deeb was charged in September 1982 with murder in Franks' death, but was released a week later after passing a polygraph test. All four men are in custody, authorities said.

Feazell said the teen-agers were tortured and the two girls were sexually abused.

The laxative habit

DEAR DR. LAMB - I am a 54-year-old lady and have a problem with constipation. For the last 25 years I have taken laxatives regularly, two or three times a week.

The older I get, the less they seem to work. I have tried switching to several different kinds of laxatives, tried prune juice, drank more water, but still notice a definite slowing down. Even enemas do not seem to work as well as they used to.

I'm afraid one day soon nothing will work. What solution do you have for my problem? I am irritable and often have slight headaches. I feel sure constipation is the reason, since I am otherwise

DEAR READER - Your mistake was starting the laxative habit. Now you will probably need professional help to get off the habit and, it is hoped, to train your bowel. It is generally true that the chronic laxative user finds that laxatives become less and less effective over time. But other factors often enter the picture. Many people do eat less as they get older. That means less bulk for the colon. And decreased physical activity also plays

You may be hooked on the false idea that you need to have a bowel movement every day. If you don't have much bulk in your diet, there is no such requirement. To put it bluntly, if you don't put any fuel in the furnace, there are no ashes to haul.

The laxative habit often results in premature emptying of the colon. It may take a couple of days - or longer, if you don't have much bulk - to refill the colon. The bowel-conscious individual can't wait that long and takes another laxative, again emptying the colonprematurely and keeping the cycle going. Soon the colon no longer responds to Nature's own natural stimu-

So see your doctor for some supervision and, meanwhile, review the amount of bulk in your diet and your exercise program.

DEAR DR. LAMB -Would you please discuss steamed foods and how to count the calories? People say it would be a good way for my husband to lose weight - to eat steamed foods and fresh fruit.

My husband had bypass surgery three years ago and is also a diabetic. He is 5foot-11 and weighs 197 pounds. I would like to know if he should eat so much fresh fruit. DEAR READER Steaming is an excellent way to prepare foods without adding fat. Since there won't be any fat added in preparation, you can figure the calories will be close to those in the uncooked food. The exception would be from the loss of some fat from meats, which is to the

But if you start with a fatty food, it will still contain a lot of fat calories.

Fresh whole fruits are less likely to cause a problem with your husband's diabetes than juices. Raw apples will not increase the blood glucose level. Try to use apples and bulky fruit.

And if his doctor approves, get him to walk regularly, increasing his walking time gradually. A daily long walk will help him a lot in losing weight.

Charity groups find cupboards bare

HOUSTON (AP) Thousands of poor families whose Thanksgiving was salvaged last year by holiday baskets from charity groups will have to do without special meals this year, officials say.

Workers with the Houston Metropolitan Ministries and Living Word Outreach say emergency requests from the unemployed and the poor have depleted their food sup-

"If somebody's really starving, we'll find a way to feed them," said John Counts, pastor of the Living Word project. "But if you're looking for a Thanksgiving basket, I don't know where to send them." Last year, more than 2,000 families received Thanksgiving Day packages of canned goods from Metropolitan

Ministries, a non-profit agen-

Another 1,000 people picked up similar baskets from Living Word Outreach, a churchrun group. Both organizations operate daily emergency food programs for thousands each year. The food shortages are expected to last through Christmas.

"It's going to be a depressing holiday season for a lot of people," said Rina Rosenberg, director of Metropolitan Ministries.

Salvation Army and Star of Hope Mission officials said their agencies would serve Thanksgiving meals at their downtown facilities as usual, but Ms. Rosenberg noted that the Star of Hope is geared predominantly for homeless, single males. She said she knows of no agency providing any special holiday arrangements for families this

Ms. Rosenberg said her group had given three-day food supply packages to 31,000 people by October. For the whole of 1982, only 20,000 people received the emergency rations. At the first of this week, Ms. Rosenberg said, 14 of the 75 groups involved in that emergency program were turning hungry residents away because their pantries were empty.

"It's getting drastic," she said.

Counts said his group is now screening families who ask for food. In many cases, the Living Word group now requests evidence of financial hardship, he said.

Previously, Counts said, the church essentially had an open door policy. 'But we started finding out that a lot of these families were going from one pantry to another," he said. "We have to be selective."
