Masa mysteries

Joe Soliz Jr. of C. Ramirez and Sons of Hereford explains differences in corn and masa for Hereford school students at a Mexican Culture Fair held Friday at the Hereford Community Center. The fair had many different booths and exhibits detailing the many facets of Mexican culture, and kicked off the three-day Fiestas Patrias weekend celebration here.

Famed pastor to speak Sunday

Rev. Virgil Elizondo, pastor of San Fernando Cathedral in San Antonio, will be the keynote speaker at the annual tardeada, part of the Fiestas Patrias celebration, at 3 p.m. Sunday at the Bull Barn.

Elizondo has traveled a long distance to return to his hometown of San Antonio where he now ministers. Elizondo was ordained in 1963 and took up parish work in the city. After several years, a desire to learn about different peoples motivated him to take up studies in a foreign country.

REV. ELIZONDO

Rather than go east towards the Old World, the young priest took a less-traveled road, to the Philippines to earn a master's degree in pastoral studies at Ateneo University in Manila. Learning from Third World instructors and in the midst of an Asian culture, Elizondo realized that each culture has its own symbols, rituals and images of the divine, but with its own limitations as well. He shaped his insight by going to the other end of the world, the Institut Catholique in Paris, where he obtained his doctorate in sacred theology.

Elizondo returned to the U.S. in the mid-1970s and worked earnestly to spread the message that culture and heritage were essential gifts that benefit and serve to unite all of humanity. During the next 15 years, he wrote several books that dealt with Hispanic culture. Two of his books, The Galilean Journey: The Mexican American Promise (Orbis Books, 1983) and The Future is Mestizo: Life Where Cultures Meet (Meyer-Stone Books, 1988), have assisted readers all over the Western Hemisphere in understanding the true identity and the deep religious commitment of a people that is exhibited through their particular culture. They are realities that usually go unnoticed by the

Circuit Ridin' in 1991

Social Security worker stays busy with area loop

By GEORGIA TYLER
Staff Writer

Two mornings each month, Sue Thompson sets up shop in the Deaf Smith County courthouse. By noon, she has helped between 40 and 75 persons with Social Security problems.

The claims representative for the Social Security Administration is a modern-day relative of the oldtime circuit rider.

She comes to Hereford on the second and four Tuesdays each month. Once a month, she goes to Memphis and Clarendon.

And, twice a month she spends a half-day in Dumas. One of those days she also works in Dalhart for a half-day.

Mrs. Thompson especially enjoys the opportunity to visit in the communities and get to know some of the residents.

She had been working in the Amarillo office for several years before taking her current assignment earlier this summer.

"I did this for four years, then worked in the Amarillo office fulltime, and then went back on the road this summer," Mrs. Thompson said.

On a "slow" day in Hereford, Mrs. Thompson sees between 40 and 50 persons who have some kind of problem or need some kind of help from the Social Security Administration.

"On a busy day, I might see as many as 75 people," she said.

She usually arrives at the Deaf Smith County courthouse a few minutes before 9 a.m. because residents line up early to take care of their business with SSA.

If she can't handle a question or a problem on the spot, she takes a telephone number and calls back later or arranges to see the person on her next visit to Hereford.

Mrs. Thompson is supposed to close up shop at noon and return to her office in Amarillo, but she often spends an extra few minutes winding up business for someone.

The No. 1 need that brings people to see her in the ground floor office of the courthouse is to obtain a Social Security number.

"Probably 80 percent of the people I see need a Social Security card," Mrs. Thompson pointed out.

Others have questions about Medicare, Supplementary Security Income, retirement, disability or survivors benefits.

Helping with Social Security

Twice each month Sue Thompson comes to Hereford to provide assistance to persons with Social Security questions or problems. The Social Security Administration claims representative visits four other cities in addition to the second and fourth Tuesday stops at the Deaf Smith County courthouse.

Social Security numbers are required nowadays for all persons more than a year old.

Schools use Social Security numbers on student records. Most social services, such as food stamps and Medicaid, require a card.

An application for a number for a child must be accompanied by a certified birth certificate and one other document, such as a hospital bracelet or crib card, as well as a parent's identification document.

"When people come to see me to apply for a card, I can look at the documents and check the application, so they don't have to mail them in," Mrs. Thompson pointed out.

An application may be sent in by mail, but the documents must be sent, too, she said, adding that there usually is some reluctance by persons to let the items out of their hands.

The documents must be originals, not photocopies, whether checked in person or mailed, Mrs. Thompson added.

There is one exception to the mail-in application -- aliens holding I-551, I-688 or I-688-A cards must apply for a Social Security number or a replacement SS card, in person, she emphasized. Documents required are the same as those for any other person.

Women who marry and need to put the number in their new name must present a marriage certificate.

To replace a lost card, the applicant should provide some identification, such as a driver's license.

The circuit-riding SSA claims representative spends more time in the office in Amarillo than in the cities she visits.

To say she enjoys one duty more than the other would be questionable, but the trips to Hereford and the other cities afford her an opportunity to feel she is serving the public in a special way.

"By doing this, we save people time and travel to Amarillo or they avoid having to send documents through the mail," Mrs. Thompson said.

Much of the business that people transact with the Social Security Administration also can be done by telephone, she added.

Some years ago, a toll free number was put into service to accommodate citizens with questions or problems that must be handled by Social Security. The number is 1-800-234-5772, but

Mrs. Thompson said a new number may be assigned in the future.

The Amarillo office also takes calls, 1-376-2242 or 376-2243, to help those who need assistance with a Social Security question or problem.

Mrs. Thompson spends most of her office time conducting continuing disability reviews and checking with employers in those matters.

So, the trips to the five Panhandle cities give her an opportunity to see personally those persons who either depend on Social Security now, or will in the future.

Through the years, she has been a frequent guest speaker for businesses, civic groups and other organizations, providing information on the Social Security system.

"One of the things that we try to tell people, especially the young, is to plan for retirement," Mrs. Thompson said.

"You know, Social Security was never meant to be the total retirement program for Americans -- it was supposed to be a supplement," added the 25-year veteran of service with the SSA.

Furr's Inc. ends grocery business

By CHIP BROWN
Associated Press Writer

LUBBOCK, Texas (AP) - Furr's Inc., a 60-year-old grocery chain that became the leading food marketer in West Texas, said Friday it had made deals to sell, close or transfer its 12 remaining stores.

The announcement culminates the divestiture in Furr's by the German investors that controlled the company, said Bill Lang, president and chief financial officer.

The company will now operate solely as a real estate management firm, Lang said.

"I expect Furr's Inc. to be a long-term continuing company," Lang said. "With these transactions we will be out of the supermarket business. But we have a significant real estate portfolio that will be controlled and managed from Lubbock."

Furr's Inc., which started with one grocery in Lubbock in 1929, was acquired out of bankruptcy in 1979 by Rewe Handelsgesellschaft Leibbrand OHG of Frankfurt, Germany. But after the Berlin Wall came down, Rewe-Leibbrand wanted to invest more in rebuilding Germany, Lang said.

"Those investors developed a strategic plan a year ago to... address their energy and resources to opportunities in their own country," Lang said.

The plan included a management-led buyout of 70 Furr's grocery stores. The managers created a new company, Furr's Supermarkets, Inc., and moved to Albuquerque.

Oklahoma City-based Fleming Cos., the nation's largest wholesale food distributor, bought the Furr's distribution centers in Lubbock and El Paso.

That left Furr's Inc. with 24 stores in West Texas and New Mexico, Lang said.

The company sold 12 stores before Friday's announcement.

The disposition of the remaining 12 stores are:

- Four stores, one each in Lubbock, Levelland, Plainview and Pampa, will be sold to Albertsons, Inc. of Boise, Idaho.

Billy Graham Evangelist's 'years are running out'

NEW YORK (AP) - Billy Graham no longer thinks he is going to save America. Armageddon, he believes, is approaching. Even if it is not, his own mortality will prevent him from reviving a nation where good and evil are growing apace: He will be 73 in November, and his doctor at the Mayo Clinic has promised to keep him going only until he is 75. "I know that my years are running out," he says.

This month, in the twilight of his remarkable career, Graham returns to New York, the "graveyard of evangelists" which he conquered 34 years ago with a 16-week Madison Square Garden run that established him as America's preacher.

More than three decades ago, the prospect of the dairy farmer's son from North Carolina taking on the modern Sodom and Gomorrah - and drawing capacity crowds - caught the national fancy. Tall, broad-shouldered and square-jawed, he was the Kirk Douglas of the evangelical movement.

But when he walked through a Manhattan hotel on a recent morning, no heads turned. He walked haltingly, clinging to a handrail, his features furrowed with pain. He was hobbled by a back problem and jet lag from a trip to the Soviet Union.

Promoters of the New York meeting, set for Sept. 22 in Central Park, say it might draw Graham's largest American audience, upward of 250,000 souls. Graham himself says, "If we have 25,000, it will be a good meeting."

He approaches this latest crusade with enthusiasm, but also with weariness; the burden of carrying a $100 million-a-year evangelistic empire on his increasingly frail shoulders often wears on him.

Leighton Ford, the brother-in-law who worked for the evangelist for 31 years, said Graham confided to him late one night after a 1985 crusade, "I just wish I could go to heaven."

What is Billy Graham's legacy? "Two or three centuries from now, he will be among a few names that we remember," said sociologist Jeffrey Hadden of the University of Virginia. "He's clearly a sterling figure in American religious history."

He has become "the most important figure in evangelical Christianity in a half-century," according to William Martin, a sociologist at Rice University who spent five years researching an upcoming biography of Graham.

Billy Sunday was reduced to preaching in small towns at the end of his career. Charles Finney gave up the demanding career of a revivalist to found Oberlin College. Other evangelists' stars rose and fell even more quickly with the changing mood of the country.

But Billy Graham keeps rolling on. The man who once was an intimate of Dwight Eisenhower was the same man George Bush wanted at his side when he announced the nation was going to war in the Middle East.

The man who in 1956 compared the Soviet Union to a gangster set loose to murder and pillage is the same man who granted much-publicized audiences this summer to both Mikhail Gorbachev and Boris Yeltsin.

In the 1950s, he took on communism and complacency. In the 1960s, he reassured evangelicals who despaired in the Age of Aquarius. In the 1970s, he promoted a new way of thinking about the Soviet Union and arms control. In the 1980s, he settled in as an icon of American religiosity.

Throughout, he has been venerated. He has been listed 32 times in Gallup Polls of the world's 10 most admired men, more than any other person.

Again and again, say Martin and Hadden, secular people who are wary of the Jerry Falwells and Pat Robertsons ask, "Tell me why I like him."

For one thing, Martin notes, Graham is a regular guy who can skinny dip with Lyndon Johnson or flip through Playboy at a barber shop without embarrassment.

But he's also an example of clean living. He avoids even the hint of scandal, keeping his office door open when a woman is alone with him and having aides check hotel rooms for uninvented females before he enters.

Early in his career, Graham established pioneering financial controls for his empire. His ministry is run by an independent board of directors. He could make millions from his books, personal appearances and radio, television and film ministries, but he limits himself to a salary of $69,150 a year.

"Graham has rendered evangelical faith legitimate ... in part by being sort of a good guy," Hadden said.

Still, Graham has had to endure his share of critics.

Liberals going back to the Protestant theologian Reinhold Niebuhr have criticized Graham's form of Christianity for relying on emotion and a simplistic view of the Bible, and ignoring social needs in favor of a mass-production approach to gaining converts.

Studies have found Graham's rallies largely preach to the converted. Many of those who answer the call at the end of his crusades have been swayed by techniques such as having the ushers come forward to give the impression there is a groundswell of people committing to Christ.

He also has drawn accusations that he is willing to tread carelessly along the line separating religion and politics in exchange for access to the rich and powerful.

In a gushing letter described in Martin's book, Graham wrote Eisenhower that a brief ride in the presidential limousine was "an unforgettable experience that I shall cherish the rest of my life." Hadden recalled a 1965 National Prayer Breakfast when Graham reassured a Vietnam-beleaguered Johnson that "God came not to bring peace to the world, but a sword." He also championed Richard Nixon before Watergate.

On the far religious right, Graham has been vilified for his willingness to work in cooperation with mainline Protestants, Catholics and others of suspect faith to fundamentalists.

"In relation to others, I used to think that if a person hadn't experienced what I had experienced, he wasn't a believer," Graham said. "It was my own ignorance. I had not had the opportunity to fellowship with people in other communities before."

During the 1957 New York crusade, Graham irrevocably broke with fundamentalists by having the Protestant Council, an ecumenical organization representing nearly all Protestant bodies, sponsor the meetings.

Bob Jones, John Rice and other fundamentalists withdrew their support, but Graham won the gamble that he could appeal to a larger audience without them.

More than 2 million people attended the crusade; it was extended from six to 16 weeks, and emboldened Graham to rent time on ABC for national television broadcasts - the birth of the modern electronic ministry that helped rescue evangelicals from the backwaters of American religious life.

In 1957, a church official warned Catholics away from Graham's crusade.

In 1991, Cardinal John O'Connor is encouraging his flock to participate.

"The Roman Catholics know that I'm not against them; and in my thinking, rightly or wrongly, I represent all the churches," Graham says today.

He also blazed trails for evangelical integration - a singular achievement for a man who grew up in the rural South and was converted at a revival led by Mordecai Fowler Ham, a man accused of racism and anti-Semitism.

Disappointed by the lack of blacks attending the 1957 crusade, Graham hired his first black associate evangelist, Howard Jones.

He also publicly endorsed the Rev. Martin Luther King Jr. Having King speak at a meeting during the New York crusade didn't place Graham in the civil rights movement's vanguard, Martin said, but he was "way ahead of his constituency."

Everywhere he goes, hundreds of churches who rarely had worked together in the past come together to prepare for his crusades. He is the founder of Christianity Today, the leading evangelical magazine, and has been a bulwark of the National Association of Evangelicals since its early days.

In recent years, he has concentrated on uniting evangelicals internationally. His 1983 and 1986 conferences in Amsterdam drew more than 12,000 evangelists from around the world. During his summer visit to Moscow, he helped lead a training school for evangelists.

"I think Billy Graham's greatest legacy will not be a university or any institutions, but it will be the tens of thousands of little Billy Gramahs, itinerant evangelists, not well-educated, but who will do the simple door-to-door sales work of the evangelist," Martin said.

When he was riding high in the 1950s, Graham fueled the image of America as a nation with a special religious calling. He no longer is so certain.

"I used to think in my work we could see a great religious revival sweep America and solve all our problems," he said in a 1988 interview. "That's still the dream, the vision, but it's not the reality."

The reality, as Graham sees it today, is a nation and world moving toward the ultimate battle of good and evil.

To him, the sexual scandals that have brought down other clergymen are no coincidence. "I think we are living in an age when Satan is out to destroy families ... and I think particularly he is attacking clergy," Graham said.

Graham also sees evidence of Armageddon in the upheaval in the Middle East, where the final battle is foretold in the Bible. And, in an observation that carries Messianic overtones, he notes the command in Matthew 24:14 that the Gospel must be preached to all the ends of the world before the Second Coming.

That's what Graham has done before more than 110 million people in 88 countries, and it is what he plans to continue doing as long as he is physically and mentally able.

The evangelist likes to tell the story of how Paramount offered a movie contract after the 1957 crusade. This year, he says, President Bush asked that he alter his crusade schedule to come to Washington during Queen Elizabeth's visit for "the social event of the season."

His response, in 1957 and 1991, was the same: No.

"I'm a preacher. I've got to preach," he says.

"I'm just going to continue the way I am," he says, "until God says, 'That's it.'"

Something to Believe In

Big Brothers/ Big Sisters of Hereford is part of a network of more than 490 affiliated agencies in the United States. Big Brothers/Big Sisters is the only youth service organization which serves the needs of children on a one-to-one basis.

The local agency has been helping children from single-parent homes since 1975. We serve children between the ages of 5 and 18 who need a little extra help in coping. The children are matched with carefully-screened volunteers to serve as role models, mentors and friends.

Because of a limited budget (certainly not a lack of need) the agency must limit its services to about 55 children.

"The success of Big Brothers/Big Sisters in Hereford belongs to the volunteers" who continue to provide a great service for some very special young people in our community," said Alva Lee Peeler, who has served as executive director of Big Brothers/Big Sisters for the past six years.

Peeler, who grew up in Muleshoe, has worked with children all of her adult life. "It was a continuation of my love of working with children to want to become director of the program," she said. "Next to being a wife and mother of two, these children I am privileged to work with have been the greatest blessing of my life."

ELIZONDO

political and economic leadership of the world.

Rather than dealing with European images of Christianity, Elizondo delved into rich folk religious traditions of Mexican-Americans that were rooted in the Indian and Spanish history of Mexico. The traditions include devotional art including altarcitos and capillas, sacred images that serve as a means of communication and concrete relationship between God and man.

He further revealed the power of Mexican-American cultural rituals by holding special ceremonies at San Fernando Cathedral during the Christmas season and during Holy Week before Easter. With a great respect for all denominations, Elizondo's presentations have helped Protestant and Catholic churches throughout the United States to better appreciate the gifts of Mexican Americans and to serve them more effectively.

"At Sunday's tardeada, Elizondo will provide an opportunity to understand the cultural treasures that exist in Hereford, treasures that he feels are as important as jobs and education in building a quality life in a prosperous community," said the Rev. Darryl Birkenfeld of San Jose Catholic church. "Father Virgil's address will seek to demonstrate how culture values can unite us instead of divide us, when they are truly appreciated and shared. Such words of encouragement carry a lot of weight, for they will come from a person who lived with people all over the world who were different than himself, in order that he could discover his real identity and recognize his own culture."

Book tells bittersweet tale of 3 cheerleaders

By CHIP BROWN
Associated Press Writer
LUBBOCK, Texas (AP) - In a state where making a cheerleading squad can be a matter of life or death, three sisters and former Dallas Cowboys Cheerleaders have written a bittersweet tale of pom-poms and pageantry on the sidelines in Texas Stadium.

Suzette, Stephanie and Sheri Scholz, who cheered the likes of Roger Staubach and Tony Dorsett during the late 1970s and early 80s, say life as a Cowboys cheerleader was not always as glamorous as the posters and made-for-television movies might indicate.

Their book "Deep in the Heart of Texas" talks about drug abuse, mind control and abnormal dieting in order to fit into the skimpy blue halters and star-spangled white shorts that made the cheerleaders famous worldwide.

The book describes Suzanne Mitchell, who directed the cheerleaders for 14 years before the team was sold in 1989, as a control-crazy sergeant who rarely handed out praise and often humiliated the women on the squad to maintain the upper hand.

Deep in the Heart of Texas, which is based on more than 100 interviews with former cheerleaders, was not authorized by the Dallas Cowboys nor the Dallas Cowboys Cheerleaders Inc.

Kelli McGonagill, current director of the Cheerleaders, said the organization would have no comment on the book. Ms. Mitchell did not respond to requests for comment placed with Cheerleaders.

All three of the Scholz sisters grew up in Lubbock, obsessed with pom-poms and beauty pageants and the dream of being a Cowboys cheerleader.

"Nobody outside the state can quite understand just how big of a deal it is to be a cheerleader in Texas," the sisters write. "Oh, it's an honor to be a cheerleader in Boise or Tallahassee or Kennebunkport all right, but in Texas it's nearly life or death."

The book's release this month came on the heels of the conviction of a woman in Houston accused of hiring a hitman to kill the mother of her daughter's chief rival for a high school cheerleading spot.

The sisters write that being selected to the Dallas Cowboys Cheerleaders is "right up there with your wedding day. Depending on who you marry, it might be even bigger."

Beautiful, buxom women dancing up and down the sidelines at Texas Stadium was the brainchild of former Cowboys president Tex Schramm.

Dallas was the first NFL team to use its cheerleaders as a marketing tool. And the success of the cheerleaders paralleled the meteoric rise of the oil-rich Texas economy in the late 1970s and early 80s.

The sisters claim many of the women on the squad were courted and showered with jewelry, trips and cars by big spenders now under indictment in the state's massive savings and loan scandal.

But for some of the cheerleaders, the fame, which included appearances on episodes of "Love Boat," "Real People" and two of their own made-for-television movies, was simply too much.

Two chapters tell of a Cowboys cheerleader who fell in with a high-class drug dealer and nearly committed suicide after years of cocaine abuse.

Several cheerleaders used cocaine to ease the stress of weeklong work schedules, nightly practice sessions, Sunday performances and countless public appearances, according to the book.

"In the end, a few of the girls found the best answer was stronger and stronger drugs," the Scholz sisters write. "That inevitably meant cocaine, the Cadillac of speed. The girls who were the heaviest into cocaine were among the thinnest girls on the squad."

The use pseudonyms for others mentioned, saying they wanted to protect their privacy.

Staying "scary-thin" was a mandate driven into the psyche of the cheerleaders by Mitchell, who the sisters say once told a squad member, "You are not (yourself). You are a Dallas Cowboys Cheerleader. You can't act or think any way you choose."

"Suzanne herself was thin," the sisters write. "...She looked at fat like a Baptist preacher looks at sex. It was evil...If you were scary-thin, Suzanne liked you."

"The emphasis on an anorexic body was so high, the praise was heaped so heavily on us when we were in that emaciated condition, that we all wanted to look that way."

Several cheerleaders turned to diet pills, diuretics, cellulite cream and fasting to make weight during weekly weigh-ins, the sisters claim.

"Every ripple or bulge will show," the book quotes Mitchell telling the squad after Suzette's and Stephanie's first practice. "You have to earn the right to wear one of those uniforms."

"It's as recognizable as the American flag and I will not let you disgrace it. Unless I see you continually at your best, you'll be put on probation for one game, and then cut if the problem is not resolved. Period."

Most of the cheerleaders were willing to put up with the never-ending demand for a perfect physical appearance and meager pay of $15 a game for the notoriety that came with being on the squad, the sisters say.

The sisters say their book is not intended to trash the image of the cheerleaders, although they know that many current and former cheerleaders will dispute their claims.

"There will be those in the organization who will not appreciate this book, but it was not intended as an expose," Suzette said in an interview. It's simply "a story that had never been told and we feel the book shows all sides, the pros and cons, of being a Cowboys cheerleader."

Suzette, 33, and Stephanie, 31, retired from the squad after the 1981-82 season having cheered for four years and three years respectively.

High Ground program working well

Regional communities are aggressively pursuing new jobs for the Panhandle and the South Plains areas, reaching more than 18,000 manufacturing businesses last year, according to Jerry Hinnenkamp, chairman for Public Relations.

Twenty-four Panhandle communities are members of the High Ground of Texas, a marketing coalition founded in 1989.

"The purpose of the group is a cooperative effort of drawing new jobs to the territory," Hinnenkamp said.

"I see it as an excellent opportunity for communities to work together to accomplish something they can't do alone," said member Red McNatt, executive vice president of the Pampa Area Chamber of Commerce. "There is strength in numbers and it makes sense for us to pool our resources for mutual benefit."

The group promotes the area through direct mailouts of promotional pieces to companies nationwide. The mailouts explain the benefits of relocating to the Plains of the Southwest, Hinnenkamp said.

This year the High Ground has produced two mailouts to Los Angeles, one to New York/New Jersey, and is beginning one to Chicago, Hinnenkamp said.

The High Ground has two goals, Hinnenkamp said. One of those is to be nationally competitive in attracting business and industry to the Panhandle and South Plains. The second is to produce training for community professionals and volunteers in dealing with prospects, he said.

"I've had a lot of training in economic development from Southwestern Public Service and from the interaction with other communities," said member Rick Osburn, assistant city manager in Lovelland.

Currently the High Ground has 10 active projects, Hinnenkamp said. The participating communities will send proposals to these prospective businesses when they receive the companies' criteria for a relocation site. Three businesses identified through the High Ground have visited the area and at least one is still viable, he said.

"It's a low percentage process," Osburn said. "Eventually one will hit right for us and it will be great for everyone."

One by-product of the High Ground is that it has fostered regional cooperation, Hinnenkamp said. Previously, there was no contact between economic development people in the area but now with four meetings a year, the High Ground provides a regional network of support, he said.

"I have been very pleased with the cooperation of the members," said Grady Elder, the executive director of the Plainview/Hale County Industrial Foundation.

Sponsorship of 5 local groups allowed for the start-up of the High Ground of Texas, Hinnenkamp said. They are: Panhandle Regional Planning Commission, South Plains Community Action Corporation, South Plains Association of Governments, Lubbock-Garza Counties Private Industry Council, and Southwestern Public Service Company.

With its $40,000 budget this year, the group is looking at becoming more financially independent from the original sponsorship "seed money" Hinnenkamp said. Membership registration for 1992 goes out in September, he said. The membership fee is $500 per community per year.

Does your bank still return your cancelled checks?

Of course if you bank with us, the answer is yes...and we do it because we still believe that our customers get a lot of value out of having their checks returned.

It costs us a little more in postage and handling costs to do it, but your checks come in handy when you're working on your income taxes...or trying to prove you paid a bill.

Our technology is as advanced as you'll find at any bank today, but we still return your checks. And if that's important to you, we invite you to come bank with us.

Success, happiness

There are two things that every person wants—to be happy and to be successful. How do we attain these goals? The only way I know for sure is explained in the Bible—by bringing joy and happiness to others.

The Bible says, "Life is a gift from God and we must use to God's glory." Every essential of a happy and successful life is a specified requirement of the Christian life.

And there is a big difference between existing and living. "The poorest way to face life is with a sneer," said Teddy Roosevelt. "A little work, a little sleep, a little love and it is all over," said Mary Rhinehart.

So, we must find a way to live life, rather than to endure it. A person may exist for 80 years and never really live, for living is an art that many people never learn.

What can we do, how can we act to make life more livable? An old friend, O.H. Tabor, a retired Church of Christ minister in Lamesa, names a few things:

"Employment is essential to happiness, for idleness breeds discontent, fear, worry and sometimes bitterness. Work is a Christian duty for we are told to 'Work with our hands that we might have to give to them that have not.' Man ought to be happy in his work for such an attitude will turn drudgery into delight. He should work with the idea of serving others. We are not to be ministered unto but we are to minister, and serving others is a fulltime job.

"It is that part of man, to have someone to love, that causes him to keep animals for pets. However, some people are so selfish that they love nothing but themselves. The Lord has supplied our need for someone to love when he provided neighbors, brethren and companions.

"Different people have different talents and we should never complain or grumble when we cannot do as much as someone else. We must be found developing our talents and using what we have. We must do our best with what we have and God will reward us.

"We must learn to accept the inferior in life. It is said that Daniel Webster was twice sought for the vice presidency but he turned it down because he wanted to be President. It turned out in each case he could have risen to the Presidency, but refusing to accept second place often keeps us from rising to first place.

"There is a place for all of us in Christian service. It is said we should be content with what we have, but never with what we are, for we should continue to strive to be better. Self examination does two things for us. First, it keeps us "on the beam," with the right focus on ourselves. Secondly, it will focus criticism on ourselves instead of others, and the person who watches himself will have so much to do that he will not have time to criticize others. It is the fellow who never looks at self who is critical of others.

"We are to look on the things of others; we must bear one another's burdens; we are to rejoice and weep with them that weep. All this is summed up in the Golden Rule.

"The old thought of self interest often comes to light. Too many people are like the young boy in class who was asked by his teacher what he got out of the parable of the Good Samaritan. He said, 'the lesson that I get is, that when I am in trouble, my neighbor ought to help me.'

"If we will learn to find useful work, have someone to love, accept self, examine self daily, cultivate interest in others, keep ourselves fit to live with, live a day at a time and live each day as if it were our last, we will be happy and successful."

Congress Mess

BY VIC SMITH
Florida Times-Union

While there might be a few scattered individuals in it who retain smidgens of intelligence, the U.S. Congress as a composite entity is insane.

This is a body of unsound mind. There is no other way to look at it. Just before its August recess, the Congress passed and sent to President Bush a bill that would extend jobless benefits for people unemployed for six months. Bush, who had threatened a veto, effectively blocked the bill by not implementing payment, which sponsors expected would cost $5.2 billion.

The $5.2 billion figure, taking into consideration the rate at which actions of the Congress itself are forcing people out of jobs, probably will be but a minute fraction of the actual cost, if the bill becomes law in the new session.

Whatever the cost, these Democrat wizards would pay it by adding it to the federal deficit of probably at least $300 billion, a thing that they've already approved. That's right: This Congress has "budgeted" to spend more than it expects to take in, and already is going blissfully about spending additional billions that it knows it doesn't have and won't get.

"Insanity" might be too weak a term to apply to this bunch. Now, I have the deepest sympathy for those who are out of work through no fault of their own. They need help. But in the first place, the federal government has no constitutional authority to furnish this help.

The duty of the central government is to protect, not provide. In the second place, the federal government simply is not just broke, it already is more than 3,000 billions of dollars in the red, and fast sinking deeper.

This means nothing to Washington's numbo-dumbo lawmakers. I honestly believe that they have spent themselves beyond their comprehension of what money is. They have become as starving children turned loose in a candy factory. They have no intention of ever balancing the federal budget because they have no conception of what the term means or how to approach such an impossible, not to mention spoilsport, task.

They have spent beyond their income for so many years, it is the only way they know to go. It is a way of life for them and their careers as professionally politicians, and a way of economic death for the strangling taxpayers and the suffocating nation.

A Florida Times-Union editorial of Aug. 8 dealt beautifully with the disastrous results of a "luxury tax" imposed by Congress last year on boats, planes and jewelry. It was a typically appalling example of the death of reason in that appalling body.

Relying on a study that did not take into account any change of buying habits resulting from the tax, Congress figured it would reap exten numbers of dollars from this "soak-the-rich" scheme.

But the rich didn't get that way by submitting meekly to tax soakings. The rich stopped buying yachts and stuff. National yacht sales dropped by a staggering 85 percent since the law went into effect Jan. 1.

Hatteras Yachts laid off 450 workers. Viking Yachts laid off 1,100 of its 1,400 workers. Beech Aircraft Corp. says the tax has cost it $77.6 million in sales for the first quarter of the year.

A new study indicated that it is costing the government $5 for every $1 collected from the new tax. But are the lawmakers rushing to rectify their mistake and kill their monster by repeal?

You know better than that. "This is the best part" that the editorial pointed out: "Repealing the tax would force spending cuts in the budget, because the government is still budgeting the phantom revenue as real, under the rules of the budget accord last fall.

"It's so bad, it makes you want to cry. Here we have a tax on the rich that is paid for with the jobs of the average worker, and repeal is resisted because money that is not now being collected wouldn't be collected then, either."

If that ain't crazy, what is?

Babbling Brooks

Why is it that I can't stay out as late as I used to stay out?

I'm still a "young" person, statistically speaking. I won't be "over the hill" for another five years, and over the hill, statistically speaking, isn't even over the hill any more.

It's not like I want to go out and get smashed-drunk every night. I quit drinking excessively several years ago, although I still enjoy an occasional non-carbonated beverage. I just want to be able to occasionally go out and have a good time until whenever, and wake up roaring and ready to go, like I did when I was younger.

I don't know for sure when I hit the wall. I think I was about 28 when I noticed my powers of recuperation weren't what they used to be. Now, I'm pretty much a homebody. There are some nights when I've tucked myself in as early as 9 p.m. (which really ticked off my ex, who was too lazy to work and expected me to join her in staying up all night and sleeping all day). Many nights my TV is off before the 10 o'clock news.

I'm definitely an eight-hours-a-night person. If I don't have at least eight hours of sleep each night, I am running on low power the next day. But I can definitely put in more than eight hours of sawing logs. I think my record for this year is 15 hours, and there have been several 12-hour occasions on weekends.

It continues to amaze me how small the world really is.

Case in point: a group of us went to Jolly's on Wednesday on one of these "free" deals they have: if your business card is drawn, you can invite up to 20 people and they all get in free. A friend's business card was drawn, and we were invited.

Among the others was a woman who said she had invited a couple of her co-workers to join our party. She said she was really interested in this guy even though he was about 15 years older than she was.

In came the guy a few minutes later. He was an old buddy of mine from Dimmitt. Yup, sure enough, he's about 15 years older than she is. It was nice to see the guy; it had been about five years since I had seen him last, and it was interesting that not only was he a friend, but also a friend of a friend.

Thomas says past views won't guide judgements

An AP News Analysis
By WALTER R. MEARS
AP Special Correspondent
WASHINGTON (AP) - This judge had been as talkative as the last one was taciturn. But Clarence Thomas said not to worry about his 138 speeches, telling skeptical senators those views won't guide his judgments on the Supreme Court anyhow.

It's a variation on the blank-slate confirmation of Justice David H. Souter in 1990. Thomas came to his nomination with a full slate of speeches and writings, but testified that he's erased them, setting aside ideological and personal preferences in order to be a fair and impartial federal judge.

So far, the strategy seems to be holding. There is no sign that liberal opponents are going to be able to rally more than token opposition to Senate approval of Thomas, 43, a black conservative.

"You've got 'em," applauded Sen. Alan Simpson, R-Wyo. "They're very frustrated by you."

Thomas called his old speeches the musings of "a part-time political theorist" in the policymaking job he used to hold, not of the judge he is now.

Souter's critics couldn't find a paper trail because he had said and written so little on national issues before his Supreme Court nomination.

There's no such shortage with Thomas. The speeches are among 36,000 pages of documents - 10 cartons full - supplied to the Senate Judiciary Committee for his confirmation hearings.

But Thomas said repeatedly that they no longer count.

He said ideological mindsets are part of the baggage a fair, impartial judge cannot carry. "You start putting the speeches away," he said. "You start putting the policy statements away. ... You want to be stripped down like a runner. So I have no agenda."

Like Souter, confirmed a year ago, Thomas is a relatively junior judge on the U.S. Court of Appeals. But in contrast to Souter's silence, Thomas had spent nearly a decade in administration posts, speaking, writing and ruling in equal employment cases.

"My wife said to me that to the extent Justice Souter was a stealth nominee, I am Bigfoot," Thomas said.

But he's no less elusive as a target of Democrats who suspect that once on the court, he will cement conservative dominance that will outlast any of them. Again and again, he told critical questioners that his earlier pronouncements were in circumstances and for purposes different from those required of a judge.

Some he simply disavowed.

That's one route out of the quandary Robert H. Bork described after the Senate rejected his Supreme Court nomination in 1987, following combative hearings on his extensive writings on the law.

"A president who wants to avoid a battle like mine, and most presidents would prefer to, is likely to nominate men and women who have not written much, and certainly nothing that could be regarded as controversial by left-leaning senators and groups," Bork said in his book, "The Tempting of America."

That was Souter. That is not Thomas.

But Bork, in his confirmation hearings, debated and defended some of his controversial, conservative positions. Thomas muted his.

"Your complete repudiation of your past record makes our job very difficult," complained Sen. Howard Metzenbaum, D-Ohio. The job for Thomas and the administration team lobbying for him is to win confirmation, and the lament of a Democratic critic points to their headway.

Like Souter, Thomas wouldn't say whether he believes in a constitutional right to abortion, saying that would prejudice a question the court will be facing.

Unlike Souter, Thomas had taken public positions that appeared to mark him an opponent of abortion rights. But he said he didn't mean it.

For example, he said his praise in 1987 for an essay on the right to life was "a throwaway line" in a speech

Dear Speedy:

Just wanted to thank you for your recent endorsement of a community-wide recycling program. I also wanted to pass on another way that newspapers can be recycled as an organic fertilizer, called newspaper pudding.

Add one armload of newspapers to a tub of water. Let soak for two days or until it can be stirred into a pulp. Pour the "pudding" around flowers, tomato plants or any crop to form a one-quarter inch mat on the ground.

This mulch will keep down weed growth, prevent wind and water erosion and reduce leaching of fertilizer. Old newspapers make a better mulch than straw—it costs nothing and is a great way to recycle surplus newspapers!

(This "recipe" was featured in the current issue of "Grassroots," which is the monthly newsletter of the Keep Texas Beautiful program.)

Again, thanks for your continuing support!

Sincerely,
Kerrie Steiert

Dear Editor

We wish to thank local residents for their patience and support of the local recycling program. For all practical purposes, the current collection of recyclable materials is now at a standstill here. The Red Cross location was overwhelmed by the volume of materials and our Amarillo dealer failed to make collection runs on time. The local Red Cross Chapter continues to support recycling here, but never intended to serve as a permanent collection site. Also, our volunteer labor force simply can't keep up with the growing work load.

That's the bad news, but there is hope that the recycling program will continue in Hereford. The large amount of materials brought to the Red Cross site this summer tell us that local residents want to recycle. We believe that our community can generate the necessary volume of recyclables to support a Recycling Center.

On Sept. 16th, EnCoRe will be approaching the City Commission to request help in establishing a community-wide recycling center. We urge any interested individuals to attend the Commissioners' meeting on Monday evening.

Hereford currently dumps about 26 tons of solid waste in the local landfill each day; more than half of this waste is recyclable. The projected life of our landfill, at the present rate of disposal, is five to six years. After the landfill has reached capacity, taxpayers will be looking at hauling waste to a regional dump or opening a new landfill here. Either prospect will be costly. (Current costs of landfill disposal are $3.31 per ton and that does not include collection or transportation expenses.)

Hereford deserves a waste management plan that utilizes recycling as an economical and environmentally-sound means of disposal. We need your help, if recycling is to continue here. Please convey your interest in recycling to your City Commissioner or plan to attend Monday night's discussion.

Again, we appreciate the community's support and welcome any questions or suggestions which you might offer.

Sincerely,
EnCoRe, Board of Directors

Dear Editor:

This letter is to publicly thank Ron Weishaar and John Fuston for their attempts on the School Board to get some semblance of management accountability. We are so brainwashed that the answer to education is "throw the money at it". Give the teachers raises year after year, don't interrupt their pension plans and the problem will go away—our youth will be educated.

Why is there such a rush to enhance teachers pay when the quality of work is down.

It must be as Mr. Veazey says "The taxpayers should at least expect the test scores go up." Where is the accountability from the past? Why aren't the scores up? Poor teachers quality or the students aren't dedicated.

The County paid off the Jail Bonds and broke their commitment to the people and didn't take the tax off. Taxing people is a business. We need the money. Gosh we do good work!

The Hospital Board raised taxes astronomically. Then I see an article in the Brand quoting Mr. Moore that the hospital was never in better shape why were the taxes raised to induce Methodist Hospital to come in and take over the management?

The city hasn't raised taxes, we just continue to raise fees for services.

What happens when the taxpayer's barrel of money runs dry? Anyway, thanks to Ron and John for trying. Maybe it is a start for accountability from our taxing entities.

Sincerely,
B.A. (Börnie) Orel

Between the Covers

By REBECCA WALLS

The new book list this week begins with Lone Star Rising by Robert Dallek. This is a definitive portrait of a great American politician who could be overbearing, crude, and vindictive with his aids while at other times shy, sophisticated and magnanimous.

Columnist Russell Baker described Lyndon Johnson as "a character out of a Russian novel...a storm of warring human instincts; sinner and saint, buffon and statesman, cynic and sentimentalist."

Based on seven years of research in over 450 manuscripts, oral histories, and personal interviews this book one in a 2-volume biography follows Johnson's life from childhood to his election as Kennedy's Vice-President.

At the age of 28, the de facto Congressman Johnson became the best state director of the National Youth Administration. Dallek pays full due to Johnson's short comings, his obsession with being top dog and his willingness to cut corners and worse to get there.

While Lone Star Rising doesn't neglect the tawdry side of Johnson's political career it also shows a man of exceptional vision who worked to bring the south into the mainstream of American economic and political life.

Johnson was able to give the disadvantaged a decent chance and end racial segregation for the good of the nation.

Among the new fiction titles you will find Sidney Sheldon's The Doomsday Conspiracy. Navy Commander Robert Bellamy must investigate the crash of a weather balloon in the Swiss Alps by locating all the witnesses and questioning each one.

This begins Bellamy's journey of terror into the incomprehensible. The scene that lay before the witnesses was grotesque, a "primeval nightmare dredged up from some deep dark depths of primitive man's collective unconscious."

Each witness has a different reaction from fainting and vomiting to uncontrollable shaking. Many thought that Armageddon had arrived.

Point of Impact by Jack Curtis is written in the tradition of Fredrik Forsyth and Len Deighton. Linda Bowman was the first victim of an unknown sniper. There was nothing special about her, a face in the crowd, yet someone picked her out.

That someone held a high-velocity rifle and revealed in his own dark power. A man on the train became the next victim and then it was the young couple drinking at a riverside pub. To the police it was a nightmare, a clever remorseless killer choosing his victims at random. Robin Culley, the man in charge of the case, feels there must be a motive.

From the beginning Culley looks for a pattern, a link between the victims and then the thought occurs to him. What if these people were not the intended victims? Maybe they are merely window dressing, designed to hide a different crime altogether.

Culley is caught in an obsession that leads to a world of fear and shadows that threatens those closest to him.

From Anne Perry, the author of The Face of a Stranger comes a Victorian mystery entitled A Dangerous

Proclamation signed

David Euler (l) looks on as Mayor Tom LeGate proclaims Sept. 22 as Masonic Day. The Masonic Lodge will be open Sept. 22 from 2-4 for an open house complete with refreshments. The public is invited to the lodge located on Country Club Road.

Mourning. There has never been a breath of scandal to touch the aristocratic Moidore family until Sir Basil's beautiful widowed daughter is discovered stabbed to death in her own bed.

This shocking incomprehensible tragedy has hit London's wealthiest and most powerful family. Inspector William Monk is ordered to find the killer without delay but most discreetly.

Monk, still suffering by lingering traces of amnesia following an accident, finds himself further handicapped by a supervisor who hopes to see Monk fail. The young, intelligent and independent Hester Latterly helps Monk grope warily through the silence and shadows that fight to obscure the case.

For those of you who like Mary Higgins Clark, Carlene Thompson's Black for Remembrance may be of interest. Caroline Webb's five-year-old daughter, Hayley, was kidnapped and murdered several years ago. The killer was never caught.

The horror of Hayley's murder tore Caroline's marriage apart. Even though Caroline was never able to forget the profound loss of her first child or passionate, handsome husband, she has been able to rebuild her life.

Caroline is happily remarried with two more children, and working part time for a friends interior design business. But now on what would have been Hayley's 25th birthday a series of events leads Caroline to believe that the nightmare is beginning again.

The community is once again struck by a vicious murderer. It becomes increasingly apparent that the victims have two things in common: 1) they are all connected in some way to the circumstances surrounding Hayley's death, 2) their deaths are gruesomely similar to Hayley's. But the most frightening thing of all is that Melinda, Caroline's living daughter, seems to be the target of special attention.

Hints from Heloise

BLACKBOARD PAINT

Q. We recently moved into a house where the prior owner had turned part of a wall into a blackboard. It desperately needs to have the surface redone. Is this possible? — Angela F., South Bend, Ind.

A. It sure is. Many paint stores carry either black or green blackboard paint. Just follow the directions on the can. — Heloise

SHOWER DRAIN

Dear Heloise: Everyone hates removing hair from the shower drain. I use a cotton swab daily to clear the drain. I don't have to touch the hair or drain and the swab is easily discarded. — Mary Fallon, Rochester, N.Y.

STUCK ON STICKERS

Dear Heloise: A while back someone asked how to remove stickers from wood. My husband had read to use a blow dryer to heat the glue while removing the sticker. When we received an old piece of furniture with adhesive-backed plastic stuck to it, we tried it and it worked like a dream. — Gina James, Hannibal, Mo.

Just remember not to get the dryer too close to the wood or let it get too hot. — Heloise

FREEZING BACON

Dear Heloise: For those who like bacon occasionally, I have found this to be a great freezing method.

Freeze individual strips on a cookie sheet, and when frozen put several strips into a plastic freezer bag. This makes it easy to take as many pieces out as desired for frying. The freezing does not change the texture of the bacon. — Elizabeth Hines, Ventura, Calif.

This method also works well for hamburgers, chicken, pork chops and steaks. — Heloise

Herd turns dramatic drive into 8-7 win

By JAY PEDEN
Sports Editor

A popular reading technique among lazy students is to read only the first and last pages of a book.

The same thing would work on Friday's game between Palo Duro and Hereford. Palo Duro scored seven points with the first possession of the game, but the Herd scored eight points with its last possession to take an 8-7 victory home from Dick Bivins Stadium in Amarillo.

Hereford is now 2-0 under Coach Danny Haney, while the Dons are winless in two starts.

Throughout the game, the Whitefaces relied heavily on the running of tailback Leo Brown (137 yards on 34 carries). For the final drive, they mixed Brown with clutch passing and receiving and came up with a little Friday the 13th bad luck for the Dons. Three different receivers came up with big catches from quarterback Chad Sandoval in the 14-play, 67-yard drive.

The first catch was a 21-yard pass to tight end Derek Mason on third and 10. The ball popped out when Mason hit the ground, but it was ruled a catch and not a fumble.

"I was thinking I didn't have it, but they called it," Mason said. The catch gave the Herd a first down at the PD 46.

Brown had a pair of 4-yard runs sandwiched around an incomplete pass—one that was blocked at the line of scrimmage and nearly picked off. On fourth down and about a yard and a half, Brown ran for exactly what the Herd needed. They had a first down at the 36.

On the next play, wingback Clay Wallace circled around the man who was covering him, came back toward a pass Sandoval had left short and made a diving catch for an 18-yard gain.

That made it first-and-10 at the 18, but a pair of short runs and an incomplete pass made it fourth-and-seven. This time Sandoval threw a strike to split end Tempie Abney coming across the middle for a 9-yard gain to the 6.

Brown ran twice, the second time for a 4-yard touchdown to make it 7-6 Palo Duro.

For a two-point conversion, Hereford needed one more big catch, so Haney went with his biggest receiver: 6'5" Sean Smith.

"I got to pick the side we'd go to," Smith said. "I picked the side with the smallest guy."

Sandoval launched a Polaris missile of a pass toward the west side of the end zone as Smith sprinted that way followed by 5'7" cornerback Lo Pham. Smith went up high and came down with one foot in bounds in the end zone, and the Herd led 8-7.

There were still two minutes left in the game when the Dons got the ball. They got as far as the Hereford 40, but Don quarterback Jermaine Gilbreath overthrew a deep pass right into Hereford defensive back Shawn Fogo's arms, sealing the Herd's win.

"I knew as soon as the play came out it was to that side," Fogo said. "As soon as I saw the pass, I thought there was a guy behind me. Then I saw it was just a poorly thrown pass, so I just came up and grabbed it."

Sandoval fell to one knee twice to run out the clock.

The big passes in the final drive were made possible by Leo Brown's running.

"They jumped up on the line of scrimmage (to defend the run) and forced us to pass," Haney said. Hereford used play-action fakes to Brown to keep fewer defenders in pass coverage.

Brown's success in running the ball was made possible by the Herd's offensive line, which was able to move the smaller, quicker Palo Duro defenders off the ball late in the game.

"The offensive line did a great job," Haney said. "They wore em down...I think they really came of age."

Brown said the line was responsible for his touchdown. "Craig Hiltbrunner and Stephen Blea had some really nice blocks. Everybody was in the grass over there," he said.

Hereford had an excellent chance to score on the first drive of the second half. On third and 7 at their own 33, Sandoval hooked up with Brown for a 36-yard screen pass. It was almost 33 yards the other way, as PD defender Shot Lee got both hands on the ball, but the ball bounced out of his hands and into Brown's.

On the next play, Brown ran the ball 20 yards down to the 11, and Pety Colvin ran it to the 5, but it got no closer. On fourth and two at the 4-yard line Brown was tripped up by PD's Sean Mallory for no gain.

A later Hereford drive was stopped at the PD 34 when Brown was dropped for a yard loss by Sheldon Mallory, again on a fourth and 2.

Haney said the good play of the defense influenced his decisions to go for it on fourth downs. "I knew our defense could hold them," he said.

The Hereford defense did hold the Dons on every series except the first.

The Dons took the game's opening kickoff and drove the ball 55 yards in 12 plays—all runs—for the touchdown. Tailback Tremaine Brown had 35 of those yards, including the last one for the touchdown. Shot Lee kicked the extra point.

For the rest of the evening, the Herd defense held. It faced its toughest test on the Dons' second possession, when a snap went over Fogo's (the punter) head and PD took over at the Hereford 17. PD couldn't get a first down in four tries.

Another time, the Dons got the ball at the Hereford 37 when a stiff wind out of the south blew Fogo's punt into an 11-yarder. Again, PD could not get a first down, and Lee Shot's 50-yard field goal attempt was short.

"We felt really good," Haney said about the defense. "After we snapped the ball over the punter and they couldn't score, when that happened, I knew we were in the game."

End of the drive

Hereford tailback Leo Brown sprawls across the goal line as he scores Hereford's only touchdown in Friday's game against Palo Duro at Dick Bivins Stadium in Amarillo. Moments later, Sean Smith hauled in a two-point conversion pass from Chad Sandoval, giving the Herd a 8-7 lead and eventually the win.

Class of 1992 beats Dons with 'the Drive'

By JOHN BROOKS
Managing Editor

For the 1991 Hereford Whitefaces seniors, Friday's 8-7 win was a bit unexpected, and is being savored more than your average, thrilling, fourth quarter, come from behind, convert on a couple of fourth downs win.

You see, this year's Hereford seniors had never ever beaten this season's Palo Duro seniors.

You can look it up. It wasn't pretty when this year's seniors were freshmen, in 1988. It wasn't much better when they were on the sophomore squad in 1989. The junior varsity game was a little better in 1990, but Palo Duro still won it.

"We won the one that counted," said Tempie Abney, who caught one of the fourth down passes on the final drive that gave Hereford the win. "They probably don't remember that they won those other times, but we did. That makes this really, really sweet."

For a long time Friday night, it looked like it would be 0-4 for the Herd. Palo Duro scored on its first possession, and the Dons clung to the 7-0 lead for most of the game.

Until it came. There will be at least eight more games this season, maybe more for the Herd. There may be more drives, perhaps drives more impressive than the 14-play, 67 yard drive the Herd put together Friday night for the 8-7 win.

If there are better ones to come, then let's see 'em.

Chad Sandoval had misfired on two passes, and tight end Derek Mason wasn't his intended receiver on third-and-10 at the Hereford 33.

"He was the third receiver I looked to," Sandoval said. "They covered the other two receivers, and I hit the drag, kind of."

It was a pass that would have netted a participation ribbon, but nothing more, at any Punt, Pass and Kick contest. But Mason was able to catch the ball, kind of, and pick up 21 yards. He was trying to control the ball with one hand and maintain balance. When he was tackled, the ball hit the turf and bounced free, but the officials ruled it a catch.

"I didn't know if they'd give me that or not," Mason said. "Don't you have to hold onto it a second or something? I really didn't think I had it, but I was trying my best, and they gave it to me."

Two four-yard runs by tailback Leo Brown surrounded a tipped pass that fell incomplete. On fourth-and-two at the PD 38, Brown picked up two and a half to keep the drive going.

That's when Sandoval again hooked up with the third intended receiver, wideout Clay Wallace, for 18 yards on first down.

It was another, uh, loose spiral. Sandoval was looking deep again, but the Dons had everyone covered. Wallace had cut across the middle and was covered, but Sandoval threw the ball behind him. It was the only way he could get it to Wallace without having the ball picked off.

"I saw it was behind me and a little short, but I came back and got the ball," Wallace said. "It was a little low, but I went and got it."

"The tight end (Mason) was the primary receiver, but the linebacker must have been on him. My guy was behind me so I came back toward the quarterback and he found me."

For Wallace, it was the biggest catch of his life. He's a converted quarterback, having led some of those forementioned ill-fated missions against the Dons.

"It took a lot of concentration to catch the ball, and it was so low that my hands were on the ground so I didn't know if it was a catch or not. I thought at least it would be close, and I saw the ref come up and point instead of wave his hands. That felt great. Man, catching a ball like that in a situation like that is the greatest feeling in the world."

Brown picked up three yards on two plays, and Sandoval couldn't find a receiver on third down and threw an incomplete pass.

This time, there was no doubt. Sandoval zipped it over the middle to Abney, who caught it chest high and went to the Dons 6.

"It was a great pass," Abney said. "He put it right where it needed to be. All I had to do was catch it and run."

The drive was alive, first and goal at the 6. Brown picked up two yards on first down, then ran the Herd's favorite, 28 Toss, for the touchdown.

"I knew our offensive line could pull through when we needed it," said Brown. "Steven Blea and Craig Hiltbrunner really cleared them out on the left side."

"That really felt great to score on them. There's no other feeling like it. We know how tough Palo Duro has been every year, and coming up they've been tough on us. It was our last time to play the Dons, and I'm just happy we beat them."

But it was still 7-6, PD.

"I never thought about kicking (the extra point), not in a non-conference game," said head coach Danny Haney.

So they ran a play that is practiced every day. "Coach (T.R.) Sartor gets the quarterback and all the receivers and they work on the ball pass," Haney said.

The thrill of victory

Hereford assistant coach Robert Gamboa (left) leaps for joy after Sean Smith caught a two-point conversion pass to give the Herd the 8-7 win. Also shown celebrating are (left to right) coach Danny Haney, Richard Sanderson (10) and coach Craig Yenzer.

"We might not use it but once or twice a year, but when you have a receiver that's 6'5" you do things to take advantage."

So Haney called for the lob. Sean Smith lined up wide to the left side, ran to the end zone and waited for Sandoval to lob the pass to him.

"It's just like going up for a rebound in basketball," Smith said. "There's not much difference. You just have to time everything, jump and catch it."

Smith wasn't as concerned about catching the ball as he was coming down in bounds as he hugged the west-side boundary.

"I just went up and caught it and put one foot in, then I fell out of bounds.

I didn't really look to see if I was in bounds. I was afraid to check."

"I thought the great thing about it was the guy covering Sean was only about 5'7," Sandoval said. "There's not much he can do on that except interfere. If everyone gets their block and I throw the ball it's bound to work. Everybody did their job. Let's give credit where it's due. The line did its job, and Sean went up and got it."

When Smith went up and got it, the Herd had an 8-7 win that Haney hopes can set up the rest of the season.

"If it had been 7-0 PD, I would have been real disappointed," Haney said. "There would be positives we could have gotten out of it, but it would have been disappointing. We kept the ball a long time, and that was one of our goals. Of course, we would have liked to have put more points on the board.

"But winning it 8-7 helps everybody. It helps our whole program. It gives the kids confidence in themselves. We've talked about the pressure in situations like this in close games. You can talk about it, but until you experience it you never really understand it."

"Now they understand in a big way what it's like to play under pressure and succeed. We've just got to take all of this and build on it."

Strawberry lifts Dodgers over Braves 5-2; into 1st

ATLANTA (AP) - Darryl Strawberry picked the right time to pick on Tom Glavine.

The Los Angeles outfielder, who was hitting .091 lifetime against Glavine, got three of his four hits, including his 24th home run, off the Atlanta Braves' left-hander Friday night as the Dodgers took a half-game lead in the NL West with a 5-2 victory.

"I don't think about the way I hit certain pitchers," Strawberry said. "Tonight was one of those nights where I won the battle."

He also silenced a sellout crowd of 45,769 that taunted him with chants of "Dar-ryl, Dar-ryl" from the start in the opener of a three-game showdown for the division lead.

"I just made a couple of mistakes and he took advantage of them," Glavine said.

"Just because we lost this game, don't expect us to roll over and play dead," Glavine said.

Atlanta had been awaiting the arrival of the Dodgers for the first September series of significance in the city since the early '80s. It resembled a football crowd in the early innings, chanting "Beat LA, Beat LA," before turning its attention to Strawberry.

His homer in the sixth inning lifted the Dodgers into a 2-2 tie and the Dodgers took charge in the seventh when Mike Sharperson doubled, went to third on Strawberry's single and scored on Eddie Murray's sacrifice fly. Strawberry then scored from first on Kal Daniels' second double.

"Strawberry's been hot for a couple of weeks now," Atlanta manager Bobby Cox said. "He's been carrying the club."

The victory enabled the Dodgers to maintain their mastery of the Braves this year. Los Angeles has won nine of the 13 meetings, including six of seven in Atlanta. The Dodgers also snapped the Braves' seven-game winning streak, their longest this year.

As for the taunting fans, Strawberry says he's used to them.

"They boo me, I love it," he said. "It was kind of exciting."

Pirates 8, Phillies 6

Steve Buechele's two-out, two-run double in the ninth inning off Mitch Williams (10-5) snapped a tie and carried Pittsburgh past Philadelphia at Veterans Stadium. The Pirates reduced their magic number for clinching the NL East to 12.

Reliever Stan Belinda (6-5) worked 1 2-3 innings for the victory and Rosario Rodriguez got the last out for his fourth save.

Mets 4, Cardinals 2

Kevin McReynolds' two-run homer in the 10th inning off Willie Fraser lifted New York past St. Louis at Busch Stadium for its fourth straight victory. Howard Johnson also hit a two-run homer for the Mets, his 34th, and now has 103 RBIs.

Tim Burke (5-7) worked two innings of one-hit relief for the victory.

Expos 3, Cubs 2

Gilberto Reyes hit a tie-breaking single in the ninth as visiting Montreal won for the 12th time in 14 games.

Chicago reliever Bob Scanlan (5-8) walked Larry Walker in the ninth and Andres Galarraga singled with one out, sending Walker to second. Reyes then got his third hit of the game.

Dennis Martinez (14-9) allowed six hits in eight innings, struck out five and walked none. Barry Jones finished with a one-hit ninth for his 13th save.

Reds 13, Astros 2

Paul O'Neill drove in five runs with a home run and a pair of doubles, and Jack Armstrong won for the first time since July 2 as Cincinnati routed Houston at Riverfront Stadium.

Armstrong (7-11), making his second start since being recalled from Nashville, snapped a personal five-game losing streak. He allowed five hits and struck out three in seven innings before Gino Minutelli finished.

Padres 13, Giants 2

Benito Santiago had a career-high five hits and drove in five runs as the Padres beat the Giants, who were without manager Roger Craig, hospitalized with chest pains earlier in the day.

Craig, who underwent an angioplasty procedure to clear blockage in his coronary arteries, is expected back next week. Bench coach Bob Lillis managed in his place.

Ricky Bones (4-3) allowed two hits in six shutout innings for the visiting Padres, who have won eight of 10. Trevor Wilson (10-10) gave up six runs and six hits in 1 2-3 innings.

Looking for a sack

Hereford defensive tackle Monroe Timberlake (61) pursues Palo Duro quarterback Jermaine Gilbreath (2) as Hereford's Ramiro Garza (76) watches from the ground. Hereford won 8-7 Friday in Amarillo.

Plantier's shot rocks Yanks

By The Associated Press

The Boston Red Sox couldn't lose. The New York Yankees wouldn't let them.

Pinch-hitter Phil Plantier hit a three-run homer in the sixth inning and surging Boston beat New York 5-4 on Friday night, sending the Yankees to their eighth straight loss and keeping the Red Sox 3 1/2 games behind Toronto in the AL East.

"That's the kind of game that if you're going bad, you don't win," Red Sox manager Joe Morgan said.

The Red Sox, playing without injured Wade Boggs (bruised ankle) and Ellis Burks (sore back), still won for the ninth time in 10 games.

In other games, Toronto beat Oakland 7-6, Detroit beat Milwaukee 3-2, Baltimore beat Cleveland 5-4, Minnesota beat Texas 7-3 in 10 innings, Chicago beat California 1-0 and Kansas City beat Seattle 3-2 in 12 innings.

With two outs in the ninth, Don Mattingly hit a drive that sent right fielder Tom Brunansky to the fence. While Mattingly started his home-run trot, Brunansky went back, leaped and hit his head on the padding.

Brunansky said he stuck his glove above the wall and knocked the ball back into play.

"Once I hit my head, I lost it," Brunansky said. "It hit the backside of my glove. It was out of here."

Mattingly wound up with a double. After an intentional walk to Mel Hall and an unintentional one to Roberto Kelly, Jeff Reardon got Randy Velarde on a popout for his 38th save.

It was a fitting end to another dismal night for New York.

The Yankees left a runner at second base in the fourth inning. They had first-and-third with one out in the fifth and did not score. They put runners on second and third with no outs in the sixth and came up empty.

Then they left the bases loaded in the seventh and stranded another runner on third in the eighth before leaving the bases loaded again to end the game.

"We did some dumb things, and paid for it," Yankees manager Stump Merrill said.

Mike Gardiner (8-7) pitched five-plus innings and won for the fifth time in six decisions. Rookie Jeff Johnson (5-11) lost for the eighth time in nine decisions.

Blue Jays 7, Athletics 6

Kelly Gruber drove in three runs as Toronto overcame Jose Canseco's three-run first-inning homer at the SkyDome.

Juan Guzman (7-2) struck out a career-high 10 and won despite allowing six runs and eight hits in 6 1-3 innings. Tom Henke pitched the ninth for his 32nd save.

Dave Stewart (11-9) had his second-shortest outing of the season, giving up five runs and eight hits in 3 1-3 innings with seven strikeouts.

Tigers 3, Brewers 2

Bill Gullickson (18-8) got his career-high 18th victory, allowing six hits in eight innings, and Jeff Kaiser pitched a perfect ninth for his second save.

The visiting Tigers, who came back from a 2-0 deficit, went ahead in the eighth off Mark Lee (1-4). With a runner on third, Jim Gantner let Dave Bergman's squibber roll by and the ball bounced off the third-base bag.

Orioles 5, Indians 4

Pinch-hitter David Segui singled home Tim Lulett in the ninth as Baltimore overcame a 4-0 deficit at Memorial Stadium.

Gregg Olson (4-5) was the winner and Jeff Shaw (0-5) was the loser. Albert Belle had three doubles for the Indians, who turned five double plays, one short of the club record.

Twins 7, Rangers 3

Kirby Puckett hit a go-ahead single in the 10th inning for the visiting Twins and Kent Hrbek followed with a three-run homer. Terry Leach (1-1) was the winner and Kenny Rogers (9-10) was the loser.

White Sox 1, Angels 0

Bo Jackson singled home the game's only run at Anaheim Stadium and Jack McDowell pitched a four-hitter for his major league-leading 14th complete game. McDowell (16-9) struck out six as he outduelled Jim Abbott, who had won his previous seven starts. Abbott (16-9) pitched a six-hitter.

Royals 3, Mariners 2

Bill Pecota tied the game for the Royals with a two-run single in the ninth and Mike Jackson (6-5) walked Kurt Stillwell with the bases loaded in the 12th. Jeff Montgomery (4-4) got six straight outs for the victory.

Rocky Road

No, that's not your favorite ice cream. It's what District 1-4A teams had this week compared to week one, when everyone but Caprock won.

Friday, Hereford and Pampa (over Amarillo High, 23-21) were the only district teams to win. This week, we'll be waiting on Borger, who was to play Tascosa on Saturday. Other 1-4A games included: Lamesa 35, Caprock 0; Levelland 24, Randall 14; Perryton 13, Dumas 12. Other games of interest included: Coronado 28, Frenship 6; San Angelo 17, Monterey 13; Clovis 14, Plainview 7; Canyon 6, Tulia 0; Brownfield 26, Dimmitt 14; Tahoka 19, Fronia 12; Nazareth 33, Hart 7; Big Spring 21, Estacado 18. Interesting score of the week: If you had told the Odessa Bronchos they were going to score 41 points against No. 9 Killeen, they would have figured they were going to be 2-0. Killeen 56, Odessa 41.

Life goes on without Buddy

By DENNE H. FREEMAN
AP Sports Writer
IRVING, Texas (AP) - No insults. No "Bounty Bowl." No Buddy Ryan.

The Dallas-Philadelphia game on Sunday won't have the theatrics of previous meetings between the Jimmy Johnson-coached Cowboys and the Ryan-coached Eagles the last three years.

Buddy got under Jimmy's skin with his "college coach" needles and the downfield chop-blocking of his kicking specialists.

The game was one neither coach wanted to lose because of their dislike for each other.

Johnson was bombarded by the Philadelphia fans with snowballs in a game at Veterans Stadium. He also has been bombarded by losses. Johnson is 0-6 against the Eagles, who have won seven straight over the Cowboys.

Johnson said there was still some zest to the rivalry but admitted something would be missing without the outspoken Ryan.

"The importance of the game is still there," Johnson said. "Philadelphia is in just as tight a position as we are. But there's no doubt the game will lose a little of its media attention because of all the conversation about Buddy."

Rich Kotite is a much more reserved head coach than Ryan, who was fired and is now a color analyst.

"This is a tremendous rivalry," Kotite said. "All the games are hard hitting and very competitive."

"My personality is a lot different than Buddy's. It's not my nature. I believe in enthusiasm, discipline and aggressive football. Not whole lot to talk about. I'm not a big talker. I believe you do your talking on the football field," Kotite said.

Another missing element is injured Eagles quarterback Randall

Cunningham, who drove Philadelphia the length of the field to win last year's game at Texas Stadium.

Jim McMahon, who replaced Cunningham, is not as mobile.

"It at least puts us more into preparing for a normal offense," Johnson said. "Cunningham presented problems for us that very few quarterbacks present."

Kotite said, "There is only one Randall. Now, everyone on the offense has to raise his level of performance. McMahon has been there before. He has been where everyone wants to go (Super Bowl). I can't think of a better backup to have ready for a game."

Johnson fears the Eagles defense. "Because Cunningham is out, it doesn't mean that Reggie White, Jerome Brown, Seth Joyner and the other members of their great defense won't be playing well," Johnson said. Indeed. The Cowboys lost quarterback Troy Aikman with a separated shoulder last December in a game against the Eagles. Lineman Clyde Simmons drove Aikman into the ground with a legal tackle in the Philadelphia victory.

"Fortunately, we've seen some of that (Philadelphia) style of defense, some against Atlanta and some again with the Redskins," Johnson said.

Both the Cowboys and Eagles come into the game on the rebound. Dallas lost 33-31 to Washington in a Monday night game while Phoenix beat the Eagles 26-10.

"The emotional hangover of that Washington game concerns me," Johnson said. "This game is just so critical. You can't lose back-to-back home games and expect to reach your goals. One of our goals is to have improved play within the division."

The Cowboys were rated field-goal favorites by the oddsmakers for the noon game in Texas Stadium.

Loss of QB Clements hurts Texas

By JACK KEEVER
AP Sports Writer

AUSTIN (AP) - Texas' loss of quarterback Steve Clements has hurt the Longhorns, according to Coach David McWilliams and two analysts who publish football newsletters. One analyst says the worst may be yet to come.

Clements signed with the Longhorns after record-setting years at Huntsville. But after a redshirt year watching the Peter Gardere run the Longhorn's offense, Clements decided to head to the pass-happy Brigham Young Cougars.

He'll have to sit out a year, but Clements said, "BYU throws the football and they always will."

But if Clements had stayed at Texas, he most likely would be challenging Gardere, following Texas' 13-6 loss to Mississippi State, insiders say.

"I don't have to answer that - that's a hypothetical question," McWilliams said.

Clements' departure forced McWilliams to cancel plans to train sophomore quarterback Jimmy Saxton as a running back and receiver, and puts more pressure on third-teamer Chad Lucas, another redshirt freshman quarterback Texas coaches had recruited as a linebacker.

Saxton is No. 2 behind junior Gardere, who was intercepted twice and had only 87 yards passing on 13 completions against Mississippi State.

"Lucas has a very strong arm. He sits in there well but lacks experience. He's overthrowing the ball but at least he's throwing to the right people now," McWilliams said.

"Lucas has got to come around, because we're unable to double train Saxton," he said.

McWilliams was asked on the Southwest Conference media tour if Clements' younger brother Chuck, a high school senior, might sign with Texas now that he would not have to compete against Steve.

"I wouldn't think his brother would come here, after the other one left - that's just a gut feeling I've got," McWilliams said, drawing laughter from the audience.

Analysts Robert Heard of Inside Texas and Jerry Scarbrough of True Orange reviewed Clements' transfer in their recent newsletters on Longhorn sports.

Scarbrough said Clements and his father, Huntsville High School coach Joe Clements, a former Texas quarterback, were "more concerned with Steve's passing stats than they are with winning."

"Texas just recruited an awesome group of offensive linemen," Scarbrough said. "Couple them with the balanced UT offense, and presto, you have the ideal situation for a string-bean quarterback like Clements."

Scarbrough said Steve told friends that he made a mistake, only signed with Texas to make his parents happy, and had been "unhappy with his decision ever since he arrived at Texas."

"It's too bad he didn't follow his heart when he was being recruited," Scarbrough said. "He killed our quarterback recruiting for two years."

Heard said McWilliams made a mistake in not telling Clements, who was listed No. 3 in preseason, that he had earned the second-team spot in spring training.

McWilliams didn't tell him, Heard wrote, because McWilliams "hates to make decisions. And he will not make a tough one unless there is a cocked gun at his head. ... Steve forced him to make a decision when he walked into Mac's office. In effect, the kid cocked the pistol at Mac's head."

Also, Heard said, McWilliams did not want to offend Saxton's father, James, an All-American senior halfback at Texas in 1961, when McWilliams was a sophomore.

"It would have been better if he (Clements) had signed with another school in the first place," Heard said.

Then, Texas might have signed Jeff Granger or Steve Emerson, both of whom ended up at A&M, or Cale Gundy, the Oklahoma starter, Heard said.

He quoted at least one insider at Texas as saying Longhorn offensive coordinator Lynn Amedee rated Granger, who waited for Clements to choose a school, as better than Clements.

The loss of Clements, which has been widely publicized, "will hurt Texas' chances to recruit a passing quarterback," Heard said. "Other schools will repeat the line they've used since Bobby Layne: Texas QBs don't make it in the pros."

Goddard leads Lumberjacks

By DAVID BOCLAIR
Fort Worth Star-Telegram
NACOGDOCHES, Texas (AP) - Mike Goddard has that special something. Like with E.F. Hutton, people listen.

On Sept. 8, 1990, he had the undivided attention of the Stephen F. Austin offense the instant he walked onto the field late in the first quarter with his team trailing Angelo State. A redshirt freshman, he threw for 197 yards and ran for two touchdowns. A star was born, despite the fact that the Lumberjacks were upset, 28-24.

The next week he became the first freshman in school history to pass for more than 300 yards in a single game and won his first collegiate start, 41-23, against Nicholls State.

"Leadership is my strongest quality," Goddard said. "It's just a God-given thing. I don't understand it. People really just gather around me."

Without him Stephen F. Austin was lost. And lost.

Following the Nicholls game, Goddard was ruled ineligible. An academic advisor had said a three-credit course Goddard completed before matriculating at Nacogdoches counted toward his 24-hour requirement during his redshirt season. No one else saw it that way.

The Lumberjacks won only once the rest of the year.

"It was the most difficult thing I ever experienced," Goddard said. "It's not like I was injured. Watching my friends and teammates struggle..."

But 1991 is a new year. Goddard is not angry about last year. He's that much more eager about this season.

He's still undefeated as a starter. Last weekend, Goddard guided the Lumberjacks to a 50-9 rout of Arkansas-Monticello. The audience is growing.

"It's more so this year," Goddard said. "Because of what happened last year my teammates, the university and the whole town seem to be behind me."

"I'm on a quest for vengeance. I'm the type of person who enjoys that challenge. It makes me exceed."

At 6-foot-2, 191 pounds, Goddard has all the tools. His footwork is equal to his passing. In high school, where he was also a renowned basketball player, he ran an option offense.

Division I schools beckoned. In fact, Goddard said he would attend Tulsa. He only visited the Stephen F. Austin campus on a basketball recruiting trip.

"I liked coach (Lynn) Graves' morals and ideas," Goddard said. Right away I knew I'd feel at home here."

Plus he's close to home. His parents and brother attend many games. Damon, Mike's younger brother, is a defensive back at Spring High School near Houston, but was at last Saturday's game. On crutches.

Damon blew out his knee in a practice.

"It really hit home (seeing him on crutches)," Goddard said. "If anything it gave me more motivation. Knowing he can't play, makes me happier that I can. It makes those long hot practices easier."

How far Goddard can lead the Lumberjacks is up to him. Todd Hammel rewrote the passing records at the school two years ago and led the school to the Division I-AA championship game. The same offense is in place. It's simply up to everyone to listen.

"You always have to shoot for goals that are the highest," he said. "I think this offense suits me perfectly. I wouldn't mind making All-American."

IMPORTANT QUESTIONS

As a prospective buyer, would you walk into someone's home and, in front of the owner, ask what could be done to change a terrible traffic layout or whether the heating or cooling system could be improved? Probably not! You're polite, as most people are. Yet, if a prospective buyer is really interested in a property, those embarrassing questions have to be asked, and answered, before the prospect can commit emotionally and financially to the house. Indeed, it's those searching questions that tell a real estate professional that there is real interest in buying. That's why I recommend that owners make themselves scarce while I show their homes. I don't want to inhibit the prospective buyer from feeling "at home" in a house or asking difficult questions. Sometimes I have to agree, "the layout is poor, but after you buy, it can be improved if you..." As your real estate counselor, I am working for you, so you can count on my loyalty and my sales know-how.

Trio hopes deer scents make them bucks

By ROBBIE GOODRICH
Nacogdoches Daily Sentinel
NACOGDOCHES, Texas (AP) — Deer hunters commonly use a variety of scent products to disguise human scent and attract deer.

Chuck Steagald, Dan Clifton and Sammy Clifton are partners in Great Whitetail Inc., a deer scent business that should be ready to offer its first products this fall.

The scents are made from urine collected from does and bucks.

"There are a lot of these scents on the market," Steagald said, adding that most companies mix the urine with other chemicals and ingredients. "But we decided to go with the pure stuff. Our product will be 100 percent pure, except for a preservative. How can you improve on Mother Nature?"

While there are a number of scents on the market, the local herd is the "only one in Texas to our knowledge" and one of five in the nation used for this purpose, Steagald said.

What is now evolving into a business for the trio started as a hobby a couple of years ago, Steagald said.

Great Whitetail's story began when Sammy Clifton found an abandoned fawn in a roadway ditch six years ago. He took it home and fed it with a bottle, and soon the animal became a family pet. "Bambi" as he is affectionately called, became "the old man that started all this," Steagald said.

"Dan and I were in Alaska working," he said. "We met a man who found out we had access to deer we had penned up. He wanted to buy the urine from us in bulk, market it and sell it in Alabama."

After studying the proposition, the three friends decided it would be "smarter for us to manufacture our own product here and go into business for ourselves," Steagald said.

For the hobby to evolve into a business took two years of research and planning and months going through the process of applying for proper permits and licenses.

"It's very difficult to acquire the licenses and permits that will allow you to keep deer," Steagald said. "There are a lot of legal requirements involved in keeping them."

Large pens were constructed in a wooded area on the property where the smaller deer can be fed and their progress monitored. At other times, the deer wander freely through the pastures and woods, coming up to the pen area at feeding time.

Although Bambi is credited with "getting everything started," Great Whitetail Inc., has grown to a population of nearly 60 deer through the purchase of deer from various universities and other licensed breeders.

"We can only buy from other licensed breeders," Steagald said, adding that the deer originally come from all over the United States. "We've purchased deer from breeders in Louisiana and Texas, from Penn State University and from Louisiana State University."

A Nacogdoches veterinarian took interest in the trio's project and helped them get involved with the state wildlife officials and Texas A&M University.

"We went to Texas A&M on a fact-finding mission," Steagald said, "to research food and care of the deer, and they (A&M) became interested in what we were doing. We've also gotten a lot of interest from the state."

"GetABuck" will be the name of the overall scent available for the first time this fall.

Steagald said the process for extracting urine from the deer is a "real trade secret." The deer are put in a special pen with special lighting conditions. The conditions created in the pen allow the deer to function through a complete cycle, producing the urine.

The men plan to test-market the product in Nacogdoches and within a 50-mile radius of the county. It will be available in sporting goods, hardware and convenience stores.

But the deer herd means more to the three men than just a means of making money.

Most of the animals have learned to trust the men who work with them. The deer will allow the men to walk up to them and pet them.

As Steagald walks through the pastures and pens on the property, he points out each deer, calls it by name and says where it came from. To most people, the deer all look pretty much alike.

"But they're just like kids," he said. "After a while, they develop their own personalities and they're all different."

Three young deer in small pens are still being bottle-fed. One of them was raised in the Steagald's house for the first few weeks and would sit in his wife's lap and watch television with her, "just like a puppy."

As the deer mature, the diets are carefully monitored to ensure the deer get proper nutrients and proteins.

The men are very protective of the animals and fearful that overzealous hunters may take advantage of the deer, so the location of the property, like their "trade secret," is not disclosed.

Hickory clubs bring back past

An AP Sports Analysis
By DENNE H. FREEMAN
AP Sports Writer

DALLAS (AP) — Pat Seelig is a golf historian at heart.

The outgoing president of the Texas Golf Writers Association loves nothing better than playing old golf courses with hickory clubs while wearing knickers. It's getting back to the heart of the grand game the way it was played over 50 years ago.

In early October, Dallas will host the annual convention of the Golf Collector's Society which has over 1,000 members worldwide.

Seelig had the bright idea of showing reporters who might be covering the convention how it was to play golf with hickory, the way it was before steel and graphite shafts came along.

So, he hosted a "hickory hacker" tournament and chose Cedar Crest Golf Course in Oak Cliff at the site.

Why Cedar Crest? Because that's where Walter Hagen defeated Joe Turnesa one-up in 1927 for the PGA Championship using hickory clubs.

It's one of those old great courses, designed by the legendary A. Tillinghast, with small, mounded greens that require a surgeon's touch for chips and putts. Tillinghast was a masher and modern golf architects should go back and study his courses.

Cedar Crest was a pleasure to play, not a dreaded chore like golf can be on some of the penal Pete Dye courses replete with the railroad ties and bunkers deep enough to hide a skyscraper.

John Henry of Ennis provided the clubs. Henry has an incredible collection of balls, clubs and bags. He even found a left-handed set for Shel Gibleon, one of the contestants.

Swinging hickory was an experience.

Everything has to be in s-l-o-w motion. A fast swing is disaster with the whippy hickory shaft.

We played from the women's tee boxes, about where they were during the 1927 tournament.

We used wound balata balls instead of the hard cover surlyn golf balls which don't give as much feel. Quickly you learned that the ball wouldn't go as far as normal. A "killed" spoon (3-wood) might get out there 180 yards or so. If you hit a mashie (5-iron), say, 150 yards, you would need a 3-iron to get the required distance.

It was easy to hit the ball fat or scoop under it with the light clubs.

Putting was a challenge, particularly on Cedar Crest's lightning fast greens.

Using an old hickory putter discovered in the closet, I one-putted three greens in a row, the longest about 30-feet.

Feeling smug, I quickly four-putted one green from 30 feet. The feel of the hickory was difficult to judge.

The round was a kick. The 18-over par 90 felt like a 70.

Then Henry held a seminar after the round. He displayed long nose clubs from the early 1880s, feathery balls made of bull hide and goose feathers, and old rut irons which were used to hit balls out of wagon ruts. He had a gutta percha ball made from the sap of a rubber tree from India.

It was a perfect window to view golf the way it used to be.

It would have been fun to be a golfer back then. For a day, it was good to go back there.

PREP

prevented the Mustangs from scoring.

Leonard Harris scored on first-half touchdown runs of 71 and 20 yards and Deshon Hosea scored on a 65-yard run to lead Willowridge.

Gray, who was shot eight times in the legs and buttocks in a July drive-by attack, was making his first start of the season. He passed for 133 yards and ran for two touchdowns. But he threw three interceptions and fumbled three times.

No. 2 Dallas Carter's defense scored three touchdowns and stifled No. 6 Marshall en route to a 35-6 victory.

The Cowboys' Sherrod Wyatt intercepted a Richard Hall pass and returned it 72 yards for a score in the first quarter. Wyatt later recovered a fumble and returned it 20 yards for another score.

Defending big school champion Marshall, which had averaged 320 yards in its first two games, was held to 36.

The Carter offense was led by Jessie Cornelius' who scored on touchdown runs of 22 and 5 yards.

Arlington Lamar, the top-ranked team in 5A, beat South Grand Prairie 17-16, No. 4 Alief Elsik beat Fort Bend Clements 37-3 and No. 5 Huntsville beat Sillsbee 42-12. Killen beat Odessa 56-41 and Waco, which tied Killen for the No. 9 ranking, beat Converse Judson 28-21.

In Class 4A, top-ranked West Orange-Stark lost to Beaumont West Brook 34-7, No. 5 Lubbock Estacado lost to Big Spring 21-18, No. 8 Austin Reagan lost to Sequin 7-6 and No. 9 Dallas Roosevelt, the preseason No. 1 choice, lost its second straight game, 24-14 to South Garland.

No. 2 Bastrop, No. 3 Burkburnett, No. 4 Waxahachie, No. 6 Houston C.E. King, No. 7 McKinney and No. 10 Austin Westlake all won.

In Class 3A, No. 2 Fairfield, No. 8 Gladewater, No. 9 Newton and No. 10 Navasota all lost.

Quitman, the No. 8 team in 2A, was beaten 35-22 by Mineola, and Class A No. 8 Munday lost 6-0 to Holliday.

Everyone would like to be Troy for a day

By MIKE FISHER

Fort Worth Star-Telegram
IRVING, Texas (AP) - So, you say you'd like to be Troy Aikman, huh?

If you were quarterback Troy Aikman, you'd take the field every week with the fate of the Dallas Cowboys perched upon your shoulders, one of which bears a long, pink scar that is evidence of the pounding your body takes.

You wouldn't trust the horde of backslappers who want your friendship, or the volume of businessmen who want your millions, or the piles of women who dream that you'll catch them when they throw themselves at you.

You still wish you were Troy Aikman?

Damn right, you do.

Aikman nods hello, and the security guard allows him into his Irving neighborhood. Aikman is driving a huge, late-model car, a leather-seated, gas-swallowing luxury tug. He is as out of place in this driver's seat as some 24-year-old borrowing mom's car. Which, in a way, is what he is. Aikman has taken Charlyn Aikman's auto and plans to trade it for a 1991 version of the same car. A surprise gift for Mom. (His parents are divorced and Dad, Ken Aikman, lives in California.)

But as Troy Aikman has always been able to do - in the locker room, in his sometimes strained relationship with coach Jimmy Johnson, in life generally - he does what he can to make the ill-fitting fit.

"It's mostly my upbringing, though part of it is a conscious decision," said Aikman of his personal style. "I was brought up not to brag. I've always disliked people who do. I kept quiet my first two years for those reasons. Also, I hate changes. Here I moved to Dallas, with new people, there were the perceptions that go with my contract, all that stuff."

"Now, I'm going to be myself."

When he was 12, Aikman moved from Cerritos, Calif., to little Henryetta, Okla., a town of 5,000 that Rand-McNally almost skipped. He loves that place, just like he loves Los Angeles, where he played most of his college football at UCLA, and just like he loves Dallas, where he was knighted and packaged as public property as soon as he was made the No. 1 overall pick in the 1989 draft.

Henryetta now has an "Aikman Avenue" and "Home of Troy Aikman" signs on the city limits and will soon have the "Troy Aikman Athletic Complex." (He doesn't want you to know he's helping upgrade the high school facility and is fighting against the name because he thinks it looks like he's "flaunting the money.")

Whatever Aikman gives to his town, it's a fair trade. After all, Henryetta gave him football.

Had Ken Aikman not moved the family from California, Troy would not have played high school football. He would have stuck with baseball, as his California pals did. He would have used his 92 mile-per-hour fastball to give him a career.

But eighth-grade Henryetta boys went out for football. Going into the 10th grade, he contemplated dumping football to concentrate on baseball. He couldn't do it. He couldn't let down his father. As a senior, he led them to a 6-4 mark, only their fourth winning season in 25 years.

Aikman was good enough to earn a football scholarship from the University of Oklahoma. And he was a good enough catcher-shortstop that, the night before the baseball draft, the New York Mets told him he'd be taken by the third round, as long as his signing-bonus request was reasonable. But he had made a commitment to football. He blurted out a signing-bonus figure - $200,000 - he hoped would be too outlandish for the Mets. It was.

Aikman is cool. But he is not hip. "He's got everything going for him," said agent and friend Leigh Steinberg. "Rugged, handsome features, blue-eyed, blond, well-built, man other men like because he's a man's man, but a man who women find attractive, too. And on top of it all, he got sincerity. He treats people well."

Aikman's priorities are pretty straight: He has his religious beliefs, but a beer or two, and a dip of tobacco or two, prove he has his vices. He passed on a trip to Super Bowl XXV because buddy Tom Whiteknight needed him to be in his wedding that weekend.

"Troy personifies all the good things you want a person to be," said Whiteknight, a former backup guard it behind for a moment."

Teammate Daryl Johnston said Aikman can't visit most Dallas restaurants without an autograph-photo session breaking out.

"You might want to be Troy for a day, to see what all that attention is like," Johnston said. "But forever? No thanks."

In Dallas, Aikman is also Most Eligible. Want two scoops?

First, Aikman has a tough time finding a girlfriend.

"The problem is I can't walk in blindly and assume they like me for me," Aikman said. "And I'm not into making new friends."

Second, Aikman does not have a girlfriend, an ex-Dallas Cowboys Cheerleader.

The few conflicts Aikman has experienced have been created, he said, not by personality but by circumstances.

Former Cowboys quarterback Steve Walsh, traded to New Orleans last year after a season and a half of competing with Aikman won't say he doesn't like his ex-teammate. Their problems, both said, were the product of two 22-year-old rookies tossed into a dogfight for playing time.

"When you're in that kind of battle," Walsh said, "it's tough to be hanging around together. Plus, you had other guys on the team taking sides. But Troy's a good guy."

And there is the Johnson-Aikman pairing, a sometimes volatile mix. Their strong wills and their inexperience at the pro level may have caused early uneasiness. The presence of Walsh certainly caused some.

"The problems all began, really, when they brought Steve in," Aikman said. "There probably would've been tension no matter what with any two young quarterbacks, but here one of them had won a national championship for Jimmy at Miami. Jimmy didn't want to show favoritism - even though he had to have feelings for Steve - so he kept his distance from us. That caused problems for me."

"I never needed strokes. I just needed more communication."

Aikman and Johnson have wisely kept their disagreements private. And Johnson said he likes Aikman as a person as much as he likes Aikman as an athlete, which is considerably. Johnson lauded Aikman as a person and as a quarterback who can be football's best.

"Both those things," Johnson said, "make for a pretty good bottom line."

While he has been credited with too much power as a Cowboy - he labels as "unfair and ridiculous" the suggestions that he helped fire former offensive coordinator David Shula and that he has any voice in the acquisition of offensive talent - he is, along with Johnson, the hub of this team.

If you are a receiver and want to have success in Dallas, Aikman had better feel comfortable throwing to you. And even if he doesn't recognize his shot-calling power, the people who run this team know how pivotal Aikman is.

That's one reason why today, Norv Turner, an earthy, spotlight-shunning, C&W-lovin' ex-quarterback, is the offensive coordinator. Turner's attack features short, quick throws by the quarterback, relatively uncomplicated reads, and an insistence that the quarterback dump the ball rather than take a sack. The oft-pounded Aikman needs to survive. Or the Cowboys won't.

Aikman is not bothered by the demands placed on him while performing as a quarterback. It's performing as a celebrity, that "leading man" business, that gives him the shakes.

In his back yard Aikman will show you an example of how his high-profile career and his low-profile personality can conflict.

He has a lovely swimming pool back there. Some of the pool's tiles are emblazoned with big blue Cowboy stars, with Aikman's jersey number 8 in the middle of the stars.

"It makes me look egotistical," Aikman said. "Somebody talked me into it. It's embarrassing."

You still wish you could be Troy Aikman?

If you could get rid of that personalized swimming pool, damn right you do.

The Prince of Dallas

Troy Aikman, the quarterback of the Dallas Cowboys and the Metroplex' most eligible bachelor, has a pretty good life--and not just for those reasons.

at UCLA. "He's got a ton of money. He's got everything going for him. But he knows he's held up as an example, and he's never acted too big for his britches."

Whiteknight and Doug Kline, an ex-Bruins linebacker, are Aikman's two best friends from UCLA, where Aikman transferred after a year at OU. Both now live in Dallas and see or talk to Aikman daily. Still, even they aren't allowed full access into his private thoughts.

"I'm not an open person," Aikman said. "Something's really got to be troubling me to have heart to heart talks with anybody. Except maybe my mom. She doesn't judge me, so I can tell her some things I'm not especially proud of."

Aikman's gang hangs out at the same old places, Kline said, where the regulars treat the quarterback like one of them. He avoids new places, where new people think they have the right to tell him how to live his life.

"I have nothing to be ashamed of," Aikman said. "There is nothing wrong with my lifestyle. I know what I do doesn't hurt the team. The hardest thing about my job is not being able to leave

King's Manor Auxiliary sponsors fashion show

By DANEE WILSON
Lifestyles Editor

The King's Manor Auxiliary is sponsoring a fall fashion show and dinner, Tuesday at 7 p.m. at the King's Manor Lamar Garden Room.

The auxiliary has sponsored the style show for the past four years and have found it to be very successful.

"We started planning in July," Marguerite Cole, one of the fashion show chairmen, said. "This year we decided to ask all the merchants to participate. In the years past, we just had one or two show."

Each merchant will show six outfits. The models will then parade through the crowd to allow the audience to see the garments up close and feel the fabric if they wish.

"We have a decorating committee who took care of the decorations. The Pilot Club will serve the meal and Mary Chamas will emcee the event," said Cole.

The meal, prepared by the King's Manor staff, will be bonless chicken breast, new potatoes, broccoli spears, tossed salad, dinner rolls and lemon crepe dessert.

According to King's Manor Administrator Joyce Lyons, proceeds from the show go to help offset the cost of indigent residents and subsidize the cost of care.

"We give about $150,000 in free care each year," she said. "This is one way to help underwrite the expense."

The show will have room for about 300 guests. Tickets are available at King's Manor and Hereford State Bank. Tickets will also be available at the door.

"People have been very receptive in the past," said Lyons. "We have a lot of out-of-town people come. There has been good support in the past."

"People are always ready to see the new fall styles," said Cole. "It is a good way for the stores to show their merchandise and advertise."

Local merchants participating in the style show are Anthony's, A Class Act, Bows and Bubblegum, Brookhart's on Main, Et Cetera, Gaston's, Ginger Tree, Kid's Alley, Little's Fashions, Pants Cage and The Vogue.

Fashion show Tuesday

Ask Dr. Lamb

DEAR DR. LAMB: Could you enlighten me about prominent pectus excavatum of the chest? I am interested in the cause, the effects it has on one's health and causes other than birth defects. Can it be caused from a severe injury?

DEAR READER: Pectus excavatum means the center of the chest bone is sunk inward. It is sometimes called "funnel chest." It is almost always congenital in origin. It can be secondary to rickets or an obstruction in the upper airway. It is not caused by an injury.

Rarely, the deformity will displace the position of the heart or cause compression of the heart and lungs. Repair is usually not done except for cosmetic purposes. In almost all instances, such a deformity has no adverse effects on a person's health, although it may have psychological effects simply because of the person's physical deformity.

In an infant, in the rare case that is caused by an upper-airway obstruction, correction of that problem may actually correct the pectus excavatum.

Dr. Lamb welcomes letters from readers with health questions. You can write to him at P.O. Box 5537, Riverton, NJ 08077. Although Dr. Lamb cannot reply to all letters personally, he will respond to selected questions in future columns.

HISD offers program promoting parenting

Hereford Independent School District is offering a training program that teaches and guides adults toward better parenting with the end result being better children. The program is called New Focus.

The class is limited to 30 adults who must be completely committed to the program, said Cindy Simons. Adult training is Sept. 19-21. Positive peer leadership training for students in the 7th through 12th grade will be held Sept. 21 from 8:30 a.m. to 6:30 p.m. at the Community Center. Sixty students are needed to complete this class.

The class is help young people make responsible decisions, interact successfully with friends and family and helps adults help children by successfully taking control of their lives.

There is no cost or the program that is being funded through the drug free schools and community grant.

The New Focus campus program provides training to assist your faculty in dealing with the pressures an decisions that young people face.

New focus is a process of motivating people toward "internal management" which activates: love, acceptance, concern, interest and respect or others and love, respect and high esteem for themselves.

Internal management generates self control and accountability which motivates people to take responsibility their lives. Internally managed people make positive, healthy decisions. They are in control of their lives and can handle the changes and problems that occur in life.

Externally controlled people are at higher risk of making negative, unhealthy decisions in such critical areas as chemical use, sexual behaviors, suicide, dropping out, eating disorders, running away, occult activities, negative conduct and school performance.

Externally controlled people allow environmental forces, situations and other people to override any internal control they possess.

New Focus trains adults, not only to identify high risk externally controlled youth, but also how to move them toward internal management.

During the intense 14 hour adult workshop participants are trained in to influence young people toward "internal management." Topics include, classroom management, parenting skills, relationship skills, eating disorders, physical and sexual abuse, sexual conduct, depression, dropping out, violence, cut activity and suicide.

Other important adolescent issues addressed are chemical use patterns among young people, pharmacology, co-dependency and enabling, family dynamics, intervention, prevention assessment and recovery.

To sign up or for further information contact Cindy Simons at Hereford High School or Marilyn Leasure at 364-5941.

Rodriguez outlines quinceaneras' history in winning essay

Isabel Rodriguez was scheduled to be crowned as the 1991 Fiestas Patrias Queen at the celebration's annual coronation and dance at the Bull Barn.

Rodriguez was named 1991 queen by judges at a contest held in August, based on her presentation on quinceaneras, a traditional 15th birthday celebration. In her presentation, Rodriguez used pictures, actors and tapes to explain the past, present and future of the tradition.

This is Miss Rodriguez' presentation on quinceaneras.

By ISABEL RODRIGUEZ

PAST
In a Mexican or Mexican American family when a girl reaches the age of fifteen it is considered a very important milestone in her life. It is the time when a girl ceases to be a girl and becomes a young woman. They commemorate this with a celebration called "Quince Anos."

This belief goes back to the customs of Mexican aborigines; the Mayas, Aztecs and Toltecs who are the ancestors of the Mexican people. At this time celebrations were organized for boys as well as for girls. The boy received his weapons and was presented as a warrior to the tribe. He then received respect for being a man in his community. The young woman was also presented as a vital source to the tribe. With her God-given gift to bear children, she could provide warriors for the community. The ceremony for the young woman included the commitment and responsibility she had to the community. The community in turn accepted her as a committed and responsible member.

At times as many as ten children were presented to the tribe. Each child had to choose an old woman and man for Godparents. All the children were to assemble at the dwelling of a sponsor. The priest purified the dwelling and conducted a ritual to expel evil spirits. The Godparents of each girl gave her bright-colored feathers to wear in her hair, they would remain there until she married. The boys had their faces painted with black paint that also remained with him until he married. The children were asked by the priest if they were guilty of committing any obscene acts. If they had, those children were separated from the others. During the ceremony they were given a special food and drink made by the Godparents. With a short stick, that had rattlesnake tails hanging from it, the priest anointed each child with holy water. The ceremony closed with feasting and heavy drinking.

When the aborigines were discovered by the Spaniards in 1519 they began to adopt this ceremony. The Spaniards, however, added a lot more importance to the part God played in the ceremony. Even though the Mayas were religious, the Spaniards were the ones who brought them into the true light of Christianity. At this time people married young, about the age of fifteen or sixteen. So what is now called a Quince Anos celebration was then celebrated at the age of twelve. Thus, it was not truly a Quince Anos, but, this was where originated. The Catholics tend to make a very big celebration. This is where (including the fact that quince means fifteen) we get the title Quinceanera given to the young woman and Quince Anos given to her festivity.

PRESENT

As time progressed the ceremony became less important to the boy, which is why now most celebrations are for girls. In this time the custom has also grown within God. It now has the most emphasis on the awareness and sensitivity on the young woman dealing with the challenges, values, and concerns of the Christian community. While most of the celebrations importance is religious it is also the mark that shows a young woman is now part of society. She is now able to go out with friends socially. With approval of her parents, she can also associate and have relations with male interests.

Before the day of the celebration the young lady must go through a type of retreat to reunite herself with God. The Godparents are mainly responsible for helping her with this, but her family is also involved. The fourteen boys and fourteen girls that will be in the celebration may also help. The fourteen plus herself will represent her age. At times a group of Quinceaneras will choose to engage in their celebration together so they will all retreat together to become closer to God. On the day of the Quince Anos everyone will pray for the Quinceanera so she will have the strength to follow God's path faithfully throughout her life.

During the mass she will be kneeling at the front of the church in front of the altar. Also at the front of the church will be the parents and Godparents of the Quinceanera. They will all be asked to give their witness so that she may renew her baptismal promises. The Godparents will be asked questions by the priest such as: Has she tried to serve Christ faithfully, has she shown compassion to others? The Godparents then give her baptismal certificate to the priest. The parents are asked: has she been helping in the family, and does she try to worship God in mass, the sacraments, and his word? The parents then give her certificate of conformation to the priest. The priest will then ask her if she receives Jesus Christ as her savior, and if she will follow Christ all her life. To all she will answer yes, with the help of the Lord. As a part of the ceremony the Quinceanera is given a medal, a ring, a crown, and flowers.

The priest tells what each gift represents. The medal symbolizes the religious expression of faith. The young woman is placed under the protection of the person represented by the image on the medal. The ring symbolizes the tie and the responsibility the young woman has to the community and to her God. The crown symbolizes the victory the young woman has won in trying to live a Christian life. The flowers symbolize the newness of her commitment.

Some things do vary in the mass, one change is that the Godparents and parents do not always give their witness at mass. Another is that records of baptism are not given during the ceremony. As for the confirmation, some girls are not receiving the sacrament until they are seventeen. So the certificate is not used. The confirmation sacrament should be fulfilled before this time tough. One purpose of the Quince Anos celebration is to fill the gap between the sacrament of Holy Eucharist and the next sacrament. Even though the ceremony is not a sacrament the Mexican Catholic church uses it to keep the youth closer to God while there is not one. In Mexico children are confirmed before receiving Holy Eucharist.

In the festivities, while all vary, there is a very definite difference between the Mexican and Mexican American. In the United States and Mexican border towns the festivities after the mass are like this. The Quinceanera will enter the reception wearing her long dress, usually white, made to her pleasure, decorated with lace and pearls. Following her would be her attendants: The fourteen boys and fourteen girls. The boys would be dressed wearing anything from traditional Mexican attire to a tuxedo. The girls would be wearing a simple dress in the color the Quinceanera has chosen. They will do a special dance then dinner or refreshments would be served. The celebration would continue with dancing.

However, in the interior of Mexico the fourteen boys and fourteen girls has become part of the past. The Quinceanera is accompanied only by fourteen boys. No other girls are in the celebration. Thus, she is in the spotlight. After waltzing with five of those boys there is an intermission. The Quinceanera will change out of her formal dress to perform for her guests, usually by dancing to modern music. When she finishes she will change back into her gown. In Mexico the dress is always a pastel color, opposed to white used in the United States. After she is changed, she will dance with her father, Godfather, uncles, brothers, and cousins. Another difference is that the Quinceanera is always give a gift, a doll. It is to be her last doll. It signifies her departure from childhood.

That would be the end of the celebrating but, the Quinceanera must not forget her responsibility has just begun.

FUTURE

It seems as though the Mexican American youth of today are distancing themselves from Mexican tradition. A lot of the youth do not know the meaning of the Quince Anos celebration. In the future they will be needing encouragement and guidance from adults in order to keep the customs in the church alive.

On the positive side there appears to be a revival in the ceremony for boys; a few boy celebrations are being seen. Now that the sacrament of confirmation is being moved back to be received with the sacrament of Holy Eucharist, Bishop Leroy T. Matteison has written in his pastoral that he wants to start making a celebration for all the Catholic youth. It will be a celebration to commemorate the youths passage to adulthood. Since it is so much like the Quince Anos celebration it will be modeled after it.

Hopefully this will help in the encouragement needed to keep the youth close to the church and the Mexican tradition of the Quince Anos alive.

Ronda Clark honored

The Executive Council of Deaf Smith County Women's Division accepted the resignation of Ronda Clark, council member. She is moving to Lubbock to practice veterinary medicine. Kristi Hollingsworth, a CPS with Cotten & Warrick, has been appointed by the council to fill the term. Pictured from (l-r) are Nell Rhoton, Marilyn Culpepper, Ronda Clark and Jackie Murphey.

A beaver's tail is about 12 inches long, six to seven inches wide and three-quarters of an inch thick. A beaver will slap its tail on the water to make noise and warn other beavers of danger.

Red Cross Update

An OSHA approved Standard First Aid class will begin Tuesday, Sept. 17 at 7 p.m. at the Red Cross Office.

The first section will cover adult CPR. The second section will be held Thursday, at 7 p.m. and will cover bleeding, injuries to bones, joints and muscles, poisonings and other related first aid subjects.

Cost of the class will be $10. Those interested in taking the class are asked to call the office. If you have a current CPR certificate and need the First Aid class you may take only the section of the class. Call the office or further details.

The board of directors will meet Thursday, Sept. 19 for their regular meeting. The meeting will be at noon at the Red Cross office.

Please remember the United Way Fund Drive is underway and each of the agencies receiving funds from the United Way does important work and needs your support.

MINDING YOUR OWN BUSINESS

Don Taylor

Resumé Rational

Last month, four of us were enjoying dinner on the patio of my cousin's elegant home in Lees Summit, Missouri. As is common when friends or relatives gather to catch up on "old times," the conversation turned to "Well, what are you doing now?" Two of the four at our table were unemployed.

One of my jobless tablemates had owned a small business for 16 years. The economy recently forced the liquidation of his firm. The other had worked as a financial officer in a west coast newspaper chain. The company relocated the home office to Virginia, and he elected not to move.

Although the backgrounds of these two men are very different, there are many similarities. They're both nearing 50 years of age, are well-educated and have enjoyed good earning power in their careers. They have strong skills and many years of experience to offer prospective employers. They mailed dozens of resúmes, but both are experiencing difficulty in finding new positions.

In the last six months, I have counseled at least a dozen men and women who were in the job market. Most of us have been there. In fact, many of you who are reading this column may face some similar career choices.

John Nasibitt predicted in his book Megatrends that the average American entering the employment market in the 1980's would make eight career changes before retirement. Even if you are a successful entrepreneur today, you may wish to re-enter the workforce down the road.

A Selling Tool

One of the best tools you can have in the career change game is a good resumé. Unfortunately, resúmes don't come with built-in guarantees. Having a good resumé won't guarantee that you will get the job for which you apply, but it will help you land an interview. That should be your immediate goal - to make the cut and get an interview.

On average, managers and personnel directors may spend less than a minute with your resumé. That's sixty seconds to decide whether your resumé - and you - go into a discard pile or survive for a second or third review.

A few years ago, I reviewed more than 60 resúmes for one job opening. Finding the right six candidates to interview was difficult. Fortunately, many potential employees made my job easier. Their resúmes were sloppy, contained misspelled words and were addressed to "whom it may concern." Those with errors were eliminated on the first cut.

Professional Tips

I recently talked to several personnel professionals, executives and successful job applicants. Here are nine of their tips on writing resúmes.

- The resumé must be perfect with no typos, misspellings or misused words.
- It should be brief. Two pages is the consensus on "proper length." However, every one of the recently successful job candidates admitted that they exceeded the "proper length" rule. One executive who landed a highly sought-after and very visible position used a seven-page resumé. It was first-class.
- Custom tailor your resumé for the job you are seeking. Highlight experience and skills that most closely match the job description.
- Do your homework. Check out the company and the position. Discreetly talk to others who are employed by the firm. Find out all you can about the company's mission and operation.
- Use good quality bond paper and a high quality printer or typewriter. Remember that your resumé may only get 60 seconds of review.
- Tell the truth. Your integrity is at stake, so don't get creative or play loosely with the facts.
- Be direct and concise. Eliminate unnecessary words.
- Be certain your telephone number is easy to find. Remember that the objective is to get called in for an interview.
- Custom write your cover letter -- to the person and for the job.

TEC corner

The Hereford office of the Texas Employment Commission (TEC) is a state agency with several services available to employers and job seekers in Deaf Smith, Parmer and Castro counties.

This will be a special feature over the next few weeks, focusing on each of the services that the Hereford office offers to the three counties. The articles in coming weeks will feature employment services, Job Training Partnership Act, targeted job tax credit and special programs.

--Employment service is what most people identify with TEC. This is where job seekers are matched with employers with job openings.

--The Job Training Partnership Act (JTPA) is a federally-initiated program that allows employers to be reimbursed for training wages of employees, while one the job training, or select classroom trained applicants for hard to fill job openings.

--Targeted job tax credit (JTTC) is a federal tax credit that an employer may be eligible for by hiring individuals that qualify for the tax credit.

--Special programs including Project RIO, a method of reintegrating an ex-offender into the work force; Job Corps, a vocational training program for persons ages 16-21; JOBS, a co-agency initiative with the Department of Human Services, assists clients with specific work search skills.

Although the services are varied, the Hereford TEC office staff is committed to serve the employers and job seekers of the area with assisting in the economic growth of the area.

Ann Landers

DEAR ANN LANDERS: My morning mail brought multiple requests for donations to worthy causes, free offers (if I buy $40 worth of junk), four catalogs offering everything from pantyhose to government surplus army blankets and real estate bargains, and then I ran across this jewel of an essay that said it all so much better than I could. I laughed out loud.

Want to share it with your readers?—Mr. R. in Des Moines

DEAR DES MOINES: The piece is a hoot. If you find out who authored it, please let me know so I can give proper credit.

A Pauper's Plea or Gimme a Break

DEAR SIR: In response to your request that I send a check, I wish I could, but the present condition of my bank account makes it virtually impossible. My shattered financial condition is due to federal laws, state laws, county laws, city laws, corporation laws, liquor laws, mother-in-laws, in-laws and outlaws.

Because of these laws I am compelled to pay a business tax, an amusement tax, a head tax, a school tax, a poll tax, a gas tax, a light tax, a cigarette tax and of course, there is always that inevitable income tax. I also must pay a business license, car license, hunting license, truck license and dog license.

I am required to contribute to every charitable, fraternal and maternal organization which the genius of man is capable of putting together for the purpose of extracting as much money as possible from every person, living or dead, who has a mailbox and a city address.

I am told that for my own safety, I am compelled to carry life insurance, property insurance, liability insurance, burglar insurance, tornado insurance, accident insurance, termite insurance, unemployment insurance, old age insurance, hurricane insurance and fire insurance.

My business is so closely supervised by the government that it is no easy matter for me to figure out how much is mine and how much belongs to Uncle Sam.

I have been inspected, expected, suspected, disrespected, rejected, examined, re-examined, informed, required, summoned, fined and commanded until I have provided an inexhaustible supply of money for every known need, desire, hope and dream of humankind.

I can tell you honestly that, except for the miracle that happened just yesterday, I could not enclose this check. However, the wolf that has become a stationary fixture at our front door just had pups. I sold them this morning and here is the money I owe you. Yours truly.—Mr. Any Person, USA

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I recently married a man who has his Ph.D. I, too, have a Ph.D. I am repeatedly addressed as "Mrs." while my husband is referred to as "Dr." I don't mind being called "Mrs." when we are addressed as "Mr. and Mrs." but I get annoyed when people refer to me as "Mrs." and my husband as "Dr."

It appears that some people can't believe that a woman could have a doctorate. This is difficult to believe since we live in a town surrounded by six colleges and universities that employ numerous women Ph.Ds.

What is the proper way for people to send correspondence? Should it be "Mr. and Mrs." or "Drs. So-and-So"?

Your guidance would be appreciated.—Lexington

DEAR DR.: The correct salutation for married Ph.Ds is "Dr. John Doe and Dr. Mary Doe." It is generally conceded that Ph.Ds should not use this title socially.

What can you give the person who has everything? Ann Landers' new booklet, "Gems," is ideal for a nightstand or coffee table. "Gems" is a collection of Ann Landers' most requested poems and essays. Send a self-addressed, long, business-size envelope and a check or money order for $4.85 (this includes postage and handling) to: Gems, c/o Ann Landers, P.O. Box 11562, Chicago, Ill. 60611-0562.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I realize that you have printed several letters in an effort to shore up "Florida Wreck," the woman whose husband, after 17 years of marriage, left her for an old flame he ran into at a 20th high school reunion. I hope you will find room for one more, from a male.

"Wreck" needs to know that once she gets over the shock, she will be able to think rationally. She needs to give herself time.

High school reunions are not the only catalysts for such behavior. My wife ran off with a member of her folk-dancing group. Until she was gone, I never realized how unhappy I was and what a poor marriage we had.

Having survived the experience, I feel qualified to give "Wreck" some advice: View this as a golden opportunity to start over. Listen to your inner voice that says you're better off without him. Throw out the garbage. There are some terrific men out there who would appreciate a woman who will play fair. I know because I am one of them.—W.J. in Madison, Wis.

DEAR MADISON: Thank you for re-opening this subject. A great many readers had a lot more to say and asked to be heard. Read on:

DEAR ANN LANDERS: Please tell "Wreck" in Florida that she will get over it but it's going to take time. After 23 years of marriage, my husband dumped me for a 20-year-old moron whose brains are in her bra.

After this happened, my friends wised me up. It seems that he had been running around with baby sitters, carhops, and other jailbait types for 15 years. At last count, the rat had cheated on me with at least 11 teen-age girls.

I feel OK now, thanks to some wonderful counseling. Every day it gets a little easier. My children have been beautiful and life is getting good again. The worst part was that I was such a fool not to have recognized the signs. I want to tell all the women who read your column that if something doesn't feel right in your marriage, do some investigating. It may be painful to learn the truth but it will set you free.—Charleston Survivor

DEAR CHARLESTON: Thanks for some excellent advice. Here's more:

DEAR ANN: "Florida Wreck" could have been me, right down to the number of years she had been married and the number of children. This is for her:

Expect to go through hell for a while but everything will be OK.

Hold yourself together for the children's sake. Be strong enough for them to lean on. Remember they, too, are bewildered, let-down and feel betrayed. The best thing I did was pack them in the car and head for a long vacation. I wanted them to know that we were still a family and could have fun together. I cried behind my sunglasses most of the way and I was scared to death. But I knew if I could survive the traffic in Boston I could live through anything.

Don't get involved in a rebound marriage. The general rule is to give it one or two years. I say that's not long enough. Four or five is more like it. It's wonderful to date, but steer clear of another lifetime commitment. I didn't and regretted it.

Keep the kids in touch with their father. In fact, push it. They need him in their lives. Down the road you'll know it was the right thing to do. They'll love and respect you for it. Mine did.—Louisville

Feeling pressured to have sex? How well-informed are you? Write for Ann Landers' booklet "Sex and the Teenager." Send a self-addressed, long, business-size envelope and a check or money order for $3.65 (this includes postage and handling) to: Teens, c/o Ann Landers, P.O. Box 11562, Chicago, Ill. 60611-0562.

Extension News

Whether it's in a brown bag, a lunch box or a tote bag, many children will carry a school lunch every day. Often when kids come home with the stomach cramps, diarrhea or even vomiting, it's diagnosed or dismissed as "just a bug going around." It may be a "bug," but not the "flu bug" often suspected rather the "bug" may be foodborne illness.

Packing a carried lunch does require some food safety precaution especially since the lunch may be standing at room temperatures for several hours before being eaten. Bacteria that causes foodborne illness live and grow at room temperatures. In fact, between temperatures of 49 degrees Fahrenheit and 140 degrees F., enough bacteria are grown in two hours to cause illness.

The key to packing a safe lunch is "keep hot foods hot, cold foods cold, and everything clean." Here's why and how:

Some foods need to be kept either cold (below 40 degrees F.) or hot (above 140 degrees F.). These are the perishable foods like meats, poultry, seafood, eggs and milk products (including yogurt).

In fact, any moist protein-containing foods are susceptible to bacterial growth because the bacteria that cause foodborne illness need a food source, protein in this case, and moisture to grow.

Meat salads like ham, chicken or egg are especially susceptible to food germs because they are handled a lot during preparation and hands can spread germs.

If cooked, ready-to-eat lunch meats are a sandwich choice, pay attention to "use-by" dates. These products may contain a special type of bacteria that can grow slowly at refrigerator temperatures.

Ideally, you should store lunches in a refrigerator to keep them cold, but this often is not possible.

Lunch boxes, especially insulated ones, will generally keep foods cold much better than paper bags. Cold devices such as a commercial freezing gel, a container filled with ice or a frozen drink will help keep lunch connects chilled. Advise children to place their lunch in as cool a place as possible, never in the window ledge in the sun.

Porcupines are excellent swimmers because their quills are hollow and help keep them afloat.

To keep foods hot or for several hours, a thermos designed for hot foods will work. Be sure the thermos has been adequately washed before each use. Before pouring a hot food in, rinse the thermos with boiling water. Bring the food to as high a temperature as possible before pouring it into the thermos. The food should be hot to touch when eaten.

Keep everything clean when preparing lunches to avoid spreading bacteria that causes the illness. Be sure that utensils, hands and work areas are clean. Wash food containers, including the thermos and lunch box itself, after each use. Wrap foods in a clean wrap. If using brown paper bags, use ones purchased only for that purpose. Bags which have carried groceries may already be contaminated from insects or food leakage.

Occasionally, foods that don't need to be kept hot or cold may be a desirable lunch choice. These foods include dry meats such as beef jerky, peanut butter and some non-perishable cheeses and cheese spreads.

Canned meat, poultry and seafood products that can be opened and eaten immediately are other options, as fresh fruits and vegetables, breads and cereals and nuts. Some packaged read-to-eat foods now on the marketed in individual size servings, such as canned fruits and puddings, make a nice addition to a carried lunch.

Remember that food can be contaminated with enough bacteria to make you sick without looking, smelling or tasting bad. Keep carried lunches safe by keeping everything clean when preparing and packing lunches. Plan a balanced menu of healthy foods that have been properly prepared. Be sure meats are thoroughly cooked. Avoid using leftovers that have been in the refrigerator for an extended time.

Keep hot foods hot and cold foods cold. Don't allow these foods to remain at room temperatures for more than two hours. If perishable lunch foods aren't eaten, throw leftovers away.

Educational programs conducted by the Texas Agricultural Extension Service serve people of all ages regardless of socioeconomic level, race, color, sex, religion, handicap or national origin.

YOUR EYES

KIDS AND CONTACTS

Many youngsters today — even very young ones — are wearing contact lenses successfully. Today's lenses are more comfortable than ever, and disposables obviate the need for special care. What contacts especially offer is enhanced self-esteem for the child and improved self-image in an environment where a child with glasses might still be ridiculed. Contacts may be safer than conventional glasses, too, because they don't get knocked off or broken during play. Optometrists are able to examine and prescribe for very young children — even those who cannot read or describe what they can and cannot see. If impaired vision is corrected in time, seeing well enough to read the blackboard may improve a child's chances of learning to read well and get good grades. Visual development may not keep up with rapid growth spurts, so it is extra-important to plan regular complete eye examinations.

MULTIPLE ROOF BREAKS INTENSIFY GREAT CURB APPEAL

Floor Plan Designed for Best Space Utilization

FEATURE HOMES
BY W.D. FARMER, A.I.B.D.

The conventional system of home plan design usually locates the living room and dining room on one side, the breakfast room and family room to the other side and the foyer and kitchen through the middle. This is true with this plan with the exception that the family room is totally to the rear of the plan and it has a private stair to the second floor of the house. The kitchen, breakfast, family, laundry, garage entry and sun deck are beautifully arranged for great family living. A central full bath and a guest or convalescence room are included on the main floor.

A tremendous luxury master bedroom suite is the focal point of the second floor. It includes a large luxury bath with separate shower, a walk-in closet and a tray ceiling is incorporated.

Two additional bedrooms and a bonus room are on the second floor, all of which share a central full bath. There are two open rail balconies, one at the head of the main foyer stair and one overlooking the family room.

The traditional exterior is constructed of stucco and includes an ornate window treatment, combined hip and gable roof style and adequate breaks in the perimeter wall to accomplish a pleasing effect.

The plan is Number 3321. The total heated square footage is 3,350. All W. D. Farmer plans include special construction details for energy efficiency and are drawn to meet FHA and VA requirements. This is a computer generated plan. For further information write W. D. Farmer, P. O. Box 450025, Atlanta, GA 30345.

Question-Answer

Q. - We have a Hotpoint refrigerator with a top freezer. Whenever the compressor stops, we hear a sharp thudding noise. This noise first appeared about three months ago as a quiet thud which has gradually gotten louder. Now the refrigerator has started to rattle. We're afraid it might explode one of these days. Will it? And what should we do to quiet it down?

A. - There's no danger that your refrigerator might explode, but your thudding and rattling noises sound as if one of the internal suspension springs that mount the compressor may have broken. What you are hearing is the motor and pump assembly on its subframe hitting against the side of the compressor case that surrounds the entire compressor assembly. The only real cure is to have the compressor replaced.

Coyote, Eikenberry in NBC movie

Peter Coyote and Jill Eikenberry star in Living a Lie, a world premiere telefilm airing Monday on NBC. Coyote plays a small-time rancher whose sudden behavioral changes lead his wife (Eikenberry) to fear he may have been involved in a deadly crime.

By Amy Schmidt

Not even a bunch of good ol' boys can keep a good woman down. That's the overt sentiment of NBC's new telefilm Living a Lie, debuting Monday, Sept. 16, and starring Jill Eikenberry (L.A. Law) and ruggedly handsome Peter Coyote (Outrageous Fortune).

Living delves much deeper than that, however, posing the universal, if disquieting, question: Will we lie to protect the ones we love? — Most surely, we will. Take, for instance, the familiar example of a co-dependent wife who calls in sick for her alcoholic husband.

In penning Living, scriptwriter Dalene Young was inspired by a phenomenon not so different — the tales wives of Klansmen tell. Young gives Living a Western twist, but the result is a story fascinating to watch unravel:

Joanne (Eikenberry) and Matt (Coyote) have managed to hold their marriage and family together despite the loss of their small ranch to "Chicanos," "wetbacks" and "beaners" allowed to buy up the land with government subsidies.

One night after closing down the local bar, Matt and his drunken buddies come upon a rural, Spanish church and engage in a little unholy revelry. On their way out, Matt's "successful" friend Lonnie — "Uncle Lonnie" to the kids — does Matt a favor. "Mean when he's sober, and meaner when he's drunk," Lonnie steals a chalice and subsequently torches the little building, unaware a pair of teenage lovers is trapped in the basement.

As the incident becomes the talk of the town, Joanne begins unearthing little clues that her husband, an honest and loving man (or so she thought) may be involved. Wracked with guilt, Matt cannot bring himself to confess to his sweet wife that he is the "monster" who committed the crime.

Jill Eikenberry, the star of Living a Lie, is also returning for another season on the Emmy-winning L.A. Law.

And why should he confess and risk going to prison? Nobody else in town seems to care. Lonnie's even had a pendant crafted for his wife from a stone inlaid in the lifted chalice.

But as each day gets easier for Matt and the culpable coterie to live with the crime, it gets more difficult for Joanne. She starts to turn "weird," as her kids say. The consensus among Matt's pals is that he needs to put a lid on his wife.

Living a Lie is not without flaws. Despite authentic panoramas of a wind-swept Arizona plain set against the backdrop of the snow-capped Rockies, the film is a Hollywood-ized version of the West. No self-respecting cowgirl would be caught dead in miniskirt and cowboy boots as Eikenberry is, and the gals in the local beauty shop could surely stand to tone down the twang. Likewise, if word travels as fast in small towns as Young would have us believe, the boys ought not to be discussing their dirty deed in crowded taverns.

This week sees the nationally syndicated premiere of Street Justice, an action series with powerfully dramatic undertones. Bryan Genesse (left) and Carl Weathers star.

'Street Justice' offers action

By Steven Alan McGaw

There is no formula for sure success in television. Casting, plotting, style, direction, all are important but offer no guarantees. Research can sometimes pinpoint tastes and predict winning combinations, but nothing can replace the indefinable chemistry of stars, story, script, etc. — vital elements when producers seek viewers' attentions week after week.

Stephen J. Cannell Productions would seem to have found that balance with Street Justice, debuting this week in syndication around the country. Labeled an action/adventure series, the show really focuses on the relationship between its two male protagonists, played by Carl Weathers and Bryan Genesse.

Weathers stars as Adam Beaudreaux, a big-city detective and Vietnam vet. While in-country, his life was saved by a boy whose missionary parents were slain by the Viet Cong. There evolved a deep, mutually protective bond between the child and the American soldier, himself an orphan.

That bond is severed, however, when Beaudreaux is sent back to the United States. He vows to return for the boy, Grady, and tries, but the child cannot be found. Carried by hope and inner resolve, Beaudreaux makes for himself a successful career as a police officer, but never loses faith that Grady will again be a part of his life.

After 20 years, Grady (Genesse) does, indeed, return. Their reunion is uneasy, as Grady questions his friend's vow, and Beaudreaux senses the gulf created by time and tragedy.

Grady tells of orphanages and a grim decade in a Vietnamese prison, but evades other questions. Beaudreaux realizes Grady is no longer a trusting boy, but a troubled young man, quick with his words and martial-arts skills, yet searching for a sense of belonging.

Street Justice's main asset lays in the winning chemistry between the likable Weathers and the handsome, intense Genesse. Both deliver intelligent portrayals, unwilling to rely solely on the show's more high-octane moments.

STAR NOTES

Christopher Noth observes 'Law & Order'

By Lisa Otoupal

First there was Car 54, Where Are You?, which made America laugh at the antics of two bumbling cops. Then Adam 12 gave TV a more realistic shot. The public loved the human drama of Hill Street Blues, but the down-and-dirty side of the streets was often missing.

Now there's Law & Order, a new intense, hour-long show filled with cops, thieves and lawyers. On the front line is Christopher Noth, playing hardened but human police detective Mike Logan.

The son of former CBS News reporter Jeanne Parr, Noth was born in Madison, Wis., raised in England, Yugoslavia, Spain and Connecticut before attending Yale School of Drama. After Yale, the darkly debonair actor portrayed Hamlet at the American Shakespeare Festival in Connecticut and went on to featured roles in theaters from coast to coast.

Noth appeared on television in the miniseries I'll Take Manhattan, the NBC movie Killer in the Mirror and Hill Street Blues. His big screen career includes roles in Off Beat, Smithereens and Baby Boom.

Before undertaking his role on Law & Order, Noth decided to get the facts about being a cop by observing detectives of New York City's 34th Precinct, which has the highest homicide rate of any precinct in Manhattan, N.Y.

James Garner is a con-turned-city councilman in NBC's Man of the People, debuting Sunday.

TIME OUT

Michigan State looks to end luck of Irish

By Steve Paschal
 Michigan State fans remember "the catch" all too well. The Spartans, looking to knock off Notre Dame for only the fourth time in 21 years, took a 19-7 lead into the fourth quarter of last year's game against the top-ranked team in the country. But, the Fighting Irish scored early in the quarter to cut the deficit to 19-14, then pulled off their second, last-minute comeback over a Michigan team in two weeks when quarterback Rick Mirer's long pass was deflected into the waiting hands of Adrian Jarrell at the Michigan State two-yard-line with 45 seconds showing on the clock. Notre Dame scored seven seconds later, leaving the Spartan fans staring in stunned disbelief at a scoreboard that read Notre Dame, 20, Michigan State, 19. Saturday, Sept. 21, the Spartans, who went on to finish the season with an 8-3 record that included a 17-16 Sun Bowl victory over Southern California, travel to South Bend, Ind., to play the Irish in a game to be televised live on NBC's Notre Dame Saturday. Michigan State, led by all-American receiver Courtney Hawkins and running back Tico Duckett, is looking to overcome the "Luck of the Irish" and break a three-game losing streak at Notre Dame Stadium. The Irish should contend for a national title.

Judy Woodruff serves as host of Eat Smart, an informative special debuting Monday on most PBS stations.

What would you do if you could be a TV soap writer?

By Candace Havens

Dear Candace: I am an avid fan of The Young and the Restless, but sometimes I get so mad. How long is this thing with Sheila (stealing Lauren's baby) going to last? Let Scott find out what she did and let him and Lauren get back together with their own baby. Put Sheila in jail where she belongs.

And David — let's expose him, too, throw his butt in jail and let Nina get on with her life. Leanna Love — that story line is so sick. If she wants a baby so much, let her meet a man, fall in love and then get pregnant, the way it is supposed to happen.

Poor Rex and Katherine. Can't they be a loving couple again along with Brad and Tracey? And when is Paul going to open his eyes where his secretary is concerned. She loves him. Why can't he see this?

Boy, I wish they would let me write this show for a couple of weeks. I would clean house, and when the dust settled, a lot of people would be happy. I didn't even want to say what I think about wicked little Victoria. —Imogene Pasley, Williams, Calif.

Dear Reader: I'm with you. It is time to clean house on The Young and the Restless, and I think you are just the woman for the job. But I do have to say, without the bad guys and the turbulent relationships, the soaps would be pretty boring. Thanks for writing in.

Dear Candace: I started watching All My Children a few years ago, and my favorite couple from the beginning was Dixie and Tad Martin. I'd like to know when Michael E. Knight is coming back to the show, and why he had to leave in the first place. —Nature Riney, Pilot Point, Texas.

Dear Nature: Knight left the show to pursue other interests, namely prime time and movies. He left the show on good terms, so if he doesn't find the kind of work he is looking for, there is always the possibility he could return. The first time he left the show he moved to Los Angeles, but this time he has opted to work out of his home in New York.

I want to hear from you! If you have a favorite soap scenario you would like to send off about, or a question about the soaps, write to Candace Havens, Soap Talk, P.O. Box 961009, Fort Worth, Texas, 76161-1009. © TV Listing Inc.

'Peter Pan' flutters onto Disney Channel

By Dan Rice

Some boys never grow up, and some movies never get old. On Sunday, Sept. 15, The Disney Channel will finally bring Peter Pan to the small screen. The timeless tale of the perpetually prepubescent Never-Never Lander and his little fairy sidekick remains one of Disney's finest animated features. You'll believe a boy can fly.

If you're still in the mood for dreams coming true, try the story of the little girl who grew up to become a princess, by way of movie stardom. A&E's Biography presents Grace Kelly: The American Princess, a documentary about the respected actress who married the prince of Monaco. Told with film clips, celebrity interviews and home movies, this special premieres on Tuesday, Sept. 17.

For frosty vistas way up high, join The Discovery Channel on Tuesday for Colorado...Picture Perfect, as three photojournalists journey to the state's most beautiful resorts in search of the perfect mountain winter portrait.

From breathtaking scenes to death-making scenes, the camera has seen it all. During the second World War, Joseph Goebbels sent thousands of filmmakers to the front lines to provide battle images for the Nazi propaganda machine. While hundreds of them died in action, their work lives on. On Sunday, see the truth and lies caught on film in A&E's Eye of the Dictator.

Kids go back to future with 'Reading Rainbow'

By Sherry Jones
The magical blending of books and the creative use of public television help introduce children to 10 new and exciting adventures premiering this fall on Reading Rainbow. Host LeVar Burton, also known for his role as Lt. Cmdr. Geordi La Forge on the syndicated show Star Trek: The Next Generation, hopes each half-hour episode of Reading Rainbow will encourage young viewers to find out more about the things that interest them.

Starting Monday, Sept. 16, Burton takes children to see a wacky female inventor from the Stone Age, Thomas Edison and a machine from the future that is full of surprises. Also, read along as a boy tries to build his own time-traveling apparatus in Alistair's Time Machine.

Tuesday, Sept. 17, follow The Adventures of Taxi Dog, taking kids behind the wheel in York City.

New Mexico's Pueblo Indians use the earth to help them with their art. Wednesday, Sept. 18, Burton meets three Indian artists as he visits Taos Pueblo in Taos, N.M. Follow the journeys of a young Indian boy as he tries to find a special gift to give his people in The Legend of the Indian Paintbrush.

These, and more adventures, await children as they open their eyes to what books have to offer on Reading Rainbow.

Study Shows Almost Anyone Can Lose The Excess Weight

Almost anyone can lose weight today. That's what physicians and patients are saying at THE DOCTOR'S CLINIC. Dr. Gerald Parker and Dr. John Taylor, owners of the clinic, did a survey and found approximately 93% of their patients lost weight under their program. They actually thought the results would have been higher if more of those who didn't lose would have come back and discussed the problem with them.

We have visited with Dr. Parker, Dr. Taylor and some of their patients at the DOCTOR'S CLINIC at 4714 S. Western. Dr. Parker said he's amazed at the results they are getting.

"If anyone would have told me five years ago, or even six months ago, we could do this well, I would have thought they were nuts," Parker related. "The new studies that have come out in the past year alone are amazing. I'm sure most people read the articles in the news last summer. They took a group of men, aged 60 to 80, and increased their lean body mass. This group lost enough fat to make them look and feel 20 years longer."

He continued . . . "there are studies that have shown the body contains two kinds of fat — called brown fat and white fat. The brown fat acts like the good guy and helps rid the body of the dangerous white fat usually found around the waist area and upper body. There are also co-factors that make insulin more efficient in metabolizing fat, proteins and carbohydrates so the body needs less insulin and burns fat more efficiently.

Dr. Taylor mentioned the fact that studies on ATP, also known as adenosine tri-phosphate which is part of the energy equation, led to treatment for chronic fatigue syndrome. They also found overweight people had 20 to 30 percent less ATP in their cells. Now it was proven — what was long suspected — people are different. It's not just what they eat. But studies also proved that calories are not the same and that plain old calorie counting was not the answer. As we age, our bodies tend to increase in fat content and muscle weight lessens.

Dr. Parker mentioned that their efforts are not just focused on weight loss, but also on decreasing the ratio of fat to lean body mass. This helped the men in the 60 to 80 age group look younger and feel better.

Parker noted that athletes are now using some of this research to build muscle mass safely without steroids. He also noted that some are taking other things besides steroids through the black market that could be just as dangerous as steroids. "People need to lose weight or build body muscle with the help of a physician," Dr. Taylor stated. "It's much safer and a lot more effective."

"There are two secrets to weight control," he stressed. "Communication and maintenance. If the patient will discuss with us any problems, we can almost always find the answer for them. And if they will go on a maintenance program for a period of time, they can usually keep the weight off."

And now, thanks to the new information, weight loss patients can even cheat to a limited extent and get away with it. Dr. Parker and Dr. Taylor conducted an informal survey of patients starting the diet over the Christmas holidays which is usually the most difficult time to diet. The amazing result was 92.3% of the patients lost weight!

If you have a stubborn weight problem, THE DOCTOR'S CLINIC may have an answer.

Crane Insulation and Roofing

Jack Crane - Owner

"Be sure to mention to Jack that you saw this ad"

When it comes to agricultural and commercial property improvements, few things can conserve energy more than the walls of your buildings. The walls and the roof can become the most energy saving parts of your property, when you call the pros at Crane Insulation and Roofing in Gruver, phone 806-733-2222.

This prominent contractor specializes in agricultural and commercial urethane roofing AND insulation and features the ZTR line of mowing equipment.

It is said that your roof represents only about 3% of your building involvement; its value is out of all proportion to its cost; for a roof acts as a guardian of your building and all its contents.

Just as you take inventory of any possessions periodically, you should check up on your roof. Let these roof specialists examine your roof for they may find that it is in good condition, ready for many years of service, or they may find defects that can easily be remedied, but which if neglected might soon dangerously weaken your roof. Or again they may discover that your roof is so badly worn that it needs a new covering to protect it and to prevent a costly leak.

This reliable firm also features a wide variety of insulating ideas for the conservation-conscious farmer, rancher and businessman. They'll spray in affordable urethane insulation for the walls of your farm and shop building and all metal buildings.

For your mowing needs, check out the line-up of ZTR (zero turn radius) mowers. Crane Insulation and Roofing carries a variety of models for all needs and all budgets. Financing and leasing are both available with approved credit.

The editors of this 1991 Fall Business Review are pleased to recommend Crane Insulation and Roofing to our readers as one firm who does the job right at an honest price. Call them for all your agricultural and commercial insulation and roofing needs at (806) 733-2222 in Gruver!

NEW BREAKTHROUGHS IN TREATMENT OF HEART DISEASE AND CIRCULATION PROBLEMS

Amarillo Physicians Credited With Saving Oklahoma Physicians Life

Dr. W.A. Miller, who practices in Woodward, Oklahoma, believes chelation therapy saved his life.

"I have seen numerous people whose lives have been saved," he related in a letter recently. "This treatment is called chelation therapy and is used to treat all kinds of medical problems. It is especially useful in people with poor circulation. ALL HEART PATIENTS, DIABETICS, STROKE PATIENTS AND PEOPLE WITH HIGH BLOOD PRESSURE SHOULD CONSIDER THIS."

He continued that anyone who wants to "just feel better and live longer" should be receiving this therapy and considers himself fortunate to find doctors that give this treatment.

The treatment, according to Miller, has allowed thousands of heart patients to avoid by-pass surgery. It has helped thousands of heart patients that were a "poor" surgical risk to lead normal lives. Numerous patients were sent home to die because surgery was not possible. Yet though chelation they have been able to extend their lives comfortably. Stroke patients have recovered without major disability. Diabetics have been able to lower their insulin requirements or stop it altogether. Chelation can prevent many of the problems diabetics have in life such as leg amputations, heart attacks, kidney problems, etc.

Miller writes that this treatment is so remarkable that the Food and Drug Administration once put it on its list of frauds. It seemed hard to believe something was that good. Thanks to studies at Walter Reed Army Hospital and the American College of Advancement of Medicine, the FDA took it off its list of frauds and apologized.

According to Miller, his problems actually began in 1975 when he found out he had diabetes. It was soon necessary for him to begin insulin therapy. His feet began to feel tingly and he felt he was walking on two-inch cushions. He also began having a lot of pain and itching in his legs. Before long, he started having a lot of chest pain and abnormalities in his

EKGs.

In January, 1982, he notice his second toe on his left foot was dark and that he had some red streaks going up his ankle. It was at this same time that he and his wife saw a program on television about Dr.'s Parker and Taylor in Amarillo on the treatments they were giving a lady from Kansas who was about to lose her leg. The results were tremendous.

"We immediately got in our car and headed for Amarillo and got a motel room there," he related.

"My wife and I both went to the DOCTOR'S CLINIC and had the tests run to see if either of us were candidates for chelation or hyperbaric oxygen treatments. I began both treatments on that day and my wife began chelation. The doctors didn't guarantee results, but we both felt we had nothing to lose and everything to gain.

Both Miller and his wife are elated by the results and believe that if they had begun these treatments sooner, they would never have needed bypass surgery.

"I am sure that I would not be here today if it had not been for the treatments I had taken," he told us. "Chelation and hyperbaric oxygen have helped lengthen my life and make it a more quality life to live."

He writes that the treatments will eventually pay for themselves because it only costs a fraction of what by-pass surgery costs. The bad news is that only about 500 physicians are specially trained in this technique in the United States, including Dr. Gerald Parker and Dr. John Taylor at the DOCTOR'S CLINIC in Amarillo, Texas. For more information on chelation call the American College of Advancement in Medicine at 1-714-583-7666 or the DOCTOR'S CLINIC at 1-800-355-8263.

Chelation is not the answer for everyone, sometimes surgery is indicated. It can prove beneficial in many cases, however and is well worth considering.

Adult and Adolescent Careunit Hospital Program

Palo Duro Hospital - Canyon

655-CARE

1-800-556-2273

Ben Bynum, CADAC - Program Director

Understanding what happens to people who become dependent on alcohol or other drugs takes the knowledge of professionals. It is sad to realize that many people shy away from dealing with alcohol and drug dependency problems, and fail to seek help for loved ones who display symptoms of substance abuse. It is sad, too, to realize that many who suffer from such addictions are adolescents and even children.

Help is available in this area at Adult and Adolescent Careunit located at The Palo Duro Hospital at 2 Hospital Drive in Canyon, phone 655-Care (2273) or toll free 1-800-556-2273. Outpatient programs are offered. Outpatient treatment enables one to seek professional help without disrupting or sacrificing one's job or family life. They also offer Intervention Education which helps family members learn to assist their loved ones in seeking help.

Their intensive treatment programs are expertly staffed by doctors, psychiatrists, certified alcohol/drug counselors, and human relations specialists. Counseling is available to all, regardless of income. Services will be located for anyone. Businesses and organizations may contact Adult and Adolescent Careunit for information regarding employee assistance programs.

Continually progressing to keep up-to-date with new information in this specialized field, they strive to provide the best care and treatment available. Adult and Adolescent Careunit invites your inquiries at any time, and encourages you to call for help soon. The editors of this 1991 Fall Business Review recommend Adult and Adolescent Careunit Hospital Program to anyone with alcohol or drug dependency problems!
