W. J. (Bill) Smith, who operated the Smith motel in Hereford for a number of years has announced the purchase of a motel in Snyder, Texas, recently.

The public hearing for the gas rate increase requested by the West Texas Gas company will be held at the city hall Tuesday, Sept. 11 at 10 a.m. The public is urged to attend.

W. C. Reynolds, OPS price specialist, will be at the Hereford Chamber of Commerce office Wednesday, Sept. 19 to assist business men who handle toys, games, and Christmas decorations in amending their pricing charts. The deadline for filing this addition to the charts is September 29.

A key ring with six keys on it was left in the Hereford bus station sometime during the month of July. Three of the keys are believed to be car keys, possibly belonging to a Ford. Two of the keys are door keys and the other is a suitcase key. Anyone who has lost these keys are asked to call for them at the bus station.

Superintendent George Graham left for San Antonio immediately after the football game Friday night after receiving word that his mother was ill.

Old Settlers who hadn't been back to Summerfield from 20 to 35 years enjoyed the day visiting with old friends and making new

An address of welcome and the history of Summerfield was given by Will Harris, an old settler. Several others gave short talks telling how many years it had been since they lived in Summerfield.

One of the highlights of the day was the introduction of Mrs. Persy Estes ,who, as Glenna Greer, was the first public school teacher in Summerfield. She was in Summerfield for four months, starting in January 1903. Mrs. Estes recalled that she "boarded in one county, taught in another, and was paid by a third". She boarded with Mrs

Hereford Hardware Takes Play - Off Crown, 15-2

Hereford Hardware tacked third stanza. E. Lemon went the W. Lemon, p down the city softball champion- route behind the plate for the ship at Veterans Memorial park Wednesday night by smothering runner-up Dawn, 15-2.

The loop victors took the first final play-off game from the Dawn nine last week Wednesday by a lopsided 19-2 count.

Dub Hair, with his usual effectiveness, let the losers down with only seven bingles, including a sixth inning round-tripper Robinson, Dawn keystone

All the other hits off Hair were

Hereford Hardware used 11 hits to bring across its 15 tallies including a pair of homers back to back by Barrett and Knox.

The winners did their damage in a big third and fourth inning. Ten of the markers came in a gigantic third and the other five in the foruth.

Dawn's cause was hurt by three errors while the league hamps committed only one. Stan Barrett, Reuben Knox, and Bill Howard sparked the winners at the plate while crush- Stewart, rf

O. R. Culwells Honored Sept.. 1 On Golden Wedding Anniversary

Mr. and Mrs. O. R. Culwell, who live in Childress, celebrated their Golden Wedding anniversary Saturday night, Sept. 1 with a banquet and on Sunday with a reception given in their honor by their children in the Childress

The couple was united in marriage on September 1, 1901, in Weston, Collin county, Texas. Rev. A. Roberts read the ceremony while the couple were seated in a horse-drawn buggy.
A picture of this occasion appeared on each of the place cards at the banquet table. Mr. Culwell was born in Weston, Texas on January 12, 1875. R. Adamson, the maiden name of Mrs. Culwell, was born Collin county on September 19, 1878.

Three years after they married, moved to Donley county, where Mr. Culwell was engaged in farming and later the grocery and clothing business. They moved to Childress in 1938. At the present time Mr. Culwell is op-installment in a series of articles being written about the presidents of various clubs of the city).

When Mrs. Elmer Patterson took over the presidency of the Deaf Smith County Federation of Women's Clubs last year, she was perhaps following her keenest interest in club work that of federation, for she believes that through federation, women have been able to band themseives together to become a mighty force for good throughout the nation.

Mrs. Patterson, the former Miss Bessie Chambers, was born in McLean, one of 10 children. Her parents were one-time residents of Hereford and later of Canyon.

She was graduated from Canyon high school and West Texas State college and while there was awarded membership in the Lloyd Green Scholarship society. She was a teacher at Morton before her marriage in 1931.

She has been a member of many varied groups and organizations since coming to Hereford and she follows several other interests. She has served as president of the North Hereford Home

Eleanor Banks. His wanderings began when he was a very young boy, after he was orphaned early. He was the only child of a Scotch Presbyteran minister and his wife. When ey died, he went to live with uncle. The rigid discipline ere was too much for the boy nd he ran away.

Still in the early teens, he ched the United States from Canada and went into the Union Reading like a well-planned Army. He was mustered out at the age of 18, and with some other youngsters who had no homes, he traveled westward with a wagon train.

> Stopping at a river port with the train, he decided to do some traveling by steam boat. After sailing down stream for some time he went ashore where he decided to spend the winter with some trappers. This was his first experience at being a fur trader, which he did off and on for a few years.

It was while he was thus oc-cuppied that he discovered the unique burial grounds of the Indians who buried their dead high upon scaffolds. The custom which has often been described the men who took herds of cat-tle up trail to Montana. Here, too, MacDonald saw and knew the Milk river which was also mentioned by cattlemen who trailed their herds northwest. Henry MacDonald was a Pony Express rider at one time and had many adventures and a few narrow escapes from the everraiding Indians who were always on the look-out for the horses provided for these riders. Following this, he did some scout work, mostly looking for horses stolen by the Indians to return them to the Pony Express if and when he found them.

Back he went one winter to trapping wolves, and it was while he was thus engaged that he came to the Mussellshell country which he chose for his

my country," he decided.

He met with some men in the sheep business and since it was ideal country for such, he decided if they could make a success of it he could too. He moved on until he located the beautiful Judith Basin country which he chose as his home site.

For a man untrained and unschooled in such an enterprise, he did remarkably well the first year. He then decided on a vacation. Returning to Washington, he met and won the light-hearted Julia Worthington.

Henry MacDonald was an unique man, with a vital and compelling personality. Julia could not resist this facinating man and though the mode of the new life in the west did not appeal, to her but she could not hold him in the east.

Once there, she made a new life for herself and Mac. Sometimes she met the hard life bravely and again it seemed that life in Judith Basin was going to be too much for her.

The story is of pioneer life and is written in an intimate and unsentimental way. It is warmly human and is a memorial of a remarkable Montana pioneer and his wife. The detailed account of

Doubt, Unfounded Charges Hits American System

"Character assassination" has become the popular weapon of political irresponsibles who seek merely to strengthen their own personal stature at the expense of innocent parties.

This betrayal of the American people's trust is not only distasteful, but cowardly. The popular route for this assassination to follow is to sow seeds of mistrust in the minds of people so they will be willing dupes for unethical practices of the rabble-rousers.

Take the case of Senator Joseph R. Mc-Carthy, Republican from Wisconsin.

He and his office staff were damningly indicted in a unanimous bi-partisan Senatorial report (three Democrats and two Republicans) of the Maryland senatorial race in 1950 where Incumbent Millard Tydings was defeated by a political unknown, John Marshall Butler.

The Republican tactics in the campaign were blasted in the report as "destructive of fundamental American principles" and as tending to destroy "our system of free elections and undermine the very foundation of our government."

Undoubtedly, this was not the first occasion, on either side of the fence, that tactics of this to a were used. It was evidently the first time they were so corrupt that a senatorial committee had to investigate and issue such a roundly damning bit of bi-partisan censure.

The report, concurred in by the members of McCarthy's own party, states flatly that federal and state laws were violated several times by the Republican campaigners.

The report hits the use of "the poison of unfounded charges and doubts" and said they "eat away like acid at the very fabric of American life."

This campaign in which a United States senator was unseated had as its strategy "exploiting the doubt."

An Illinois publicity man, who has admitted he tried to "create the big doubt," according to the Democrats, pleaded guilty to violating the Maryland Corrupt Practices Act, and was fined $5000.

A tabloid called "From the Record" was printed which contained misleading information and even contained a fake photo showing Tydings in Intimate conversation with Communist Earl Browder, made by pasting two separate pictures together, and rephotographing them.

Later, after the charge of unethical practices were being investigated, McCarthy declined to testify before the sub-committee under oath.

As we said before, we're not intimating that McCarthy is the first politician in our time to ever resort to unsavory campaign campaign tactics, but his actions, as attested to by the United States senate investigating committee, are disgraceful and should be above a man representing the people of America in its law-making body.

Especially bad is the action because McCarthy has been such an outspoken critic of seemingly everything that moves or breathes in Washington.

He's making a lot of noise, but what does it mean? Is it just a sham and a fake like his Maryland connivances? We can hardly afford to laugh off some of his charges, but is he the kind of man to be-

You can cry "wolf" too often.

With the Republican party carrying the McCarthy stigma, it's going to have a rough row to hoe during the coming elections unless it/repudiates his tactics.

The American people are fed up with corruption in government as well as irresponsible conduct and unsavory messes like the Tydings affair.

Neither side is completely innocent, and it's a sad commentary on American statesmanship when we have to choose between the lesser of two evils in placing our sym-

Will YOU Be Millionth Traffic Victim in U.S.?

The toll of more than 600 killed in the entire country over the Labor Day weekend is an unwelcome monument to American

It does little good to elaborate on the fact that we kill more through accidents on our highways, in our homes, and on our farms than we do on the battlefields. People just aren't interested in hearing

It is interesting, however, to know that the National Safety Council is preparing a campaign to mark the millionth traffic fatality, who, they estimate, will meet his death during December, 1951.

There is no comfort for any of us in the fact that we might be the millionth person to die violently in a traffic accident.

To show how people are being killed these days, it is estimated that the two millionth traffic fatality will meet his end in about 30 years as compared with the more than 50 years that will be required to reach the million fatality mark.

An interesting side-light in the compaign by the National Safety Council to keep YOU from being the millionth traffic fatality is a report on the first accident, which occurred in 1899.

According to all known records, that accident occured in New York City in September of that year when a man, who had alighted from a trolley, turned to assist a woman off the trolley and was hit by a passing automobile.

Why, you ask, does the National Safe-"ty Council make such a to-do about who will be the millionth traffic fatality?

It is because ONLY through a concentrated campaign of safety that some of aus may become conscious of our responsibility on the highway and realize that all of us are potential killers if we do not op-Ferate our automobile properly and respect "ALL tules of the road

The accident which claims your life may not have been your fault, but you can be just as dead. You're no good to your family and friends as a mere statistic.

Here are two thought-provoking questions we can ask ourselves: "Will I be the millionth traffic victim?

Will I be the driver who kills the millionth traffic victim?"

A large part of the answer lies with each and everyone of us individually.

This is a free country, if you want to operate your automobile at a high rate of speed, but don't complain if the traffic cop

SUNDAY'S CURRENT QUESTION

Mingled Reaction to "Flying Saucer" Stories in Hereford

There have been reports recently of "flying saucers" in the skies over West Texas. What is your opinion of them?

MRS. FRANCES HOUSTON-I think it is just some more of the same deal we had before with the flying saucers.

IRVING ALEXANDER—Personally I think it's some sort of a secret project on the part of our Air Force or scientists trying to perfect the uninhabited plane. They may be testing some kinds of guided missles.

MAX STIPE-Until I see one I'll doubt that there is such a thing. I really doubt that there is much to it but there might

DR. R. R. WILLS-I think some people need to get their eyes examined. In other words, someone is imagining they are seeing things. They're sort of like back in the dust bowl days when the newspapers didn't have anything to talk about they played up black wiodw spiders. There are such things as black widow spiders I know but I don't think there are such things as flying saucers.

MRS. LOUIS WOODFORD-I don't have much faith in these flying saucer stories. I think they are just a bunch of "windies," however I could be wrong.

MRS. H. E. HENSLEE-I don't know anything about flying saucers except what I read but I think that if there is such a thing as flying saucers they are some kind of scientific ex-

We had a very nice trip and saw some pretty country. We had a few rains and had to sit and sleep in the wagons as we had no tents.

Then we came to a gate on a big ranch and the manager not let the men bring the cattle through the pasture. the men took one wagon and cook with them and started around. The rest of the wagons came through—and we came into Blanco Canyon, where two of my father's brothers had made their home in dugouts. In a few days, the men go in with the cattle. They had found another gate in the same pasture. One of the men got the cowboy down and sat on him while the men of the outfit put the cattle through gate and came on. Later, we had to pay a fine.

After two weeks, we started on toward New Mexico. A few days later we came to where men were working. They were building the Fort Worth and Denver railroad. We followed the road a few miles, then cut across the country again. When we reached another gate, we came inside and camped.

MRS. R. G. JOWELL

Early the next morning, two cowboys came up to the wag-on, talked to Daddy awhile and then invited us to the ranch This was the T-Anchor headquarters. We camped near the creek not far from the ranch house. The cowboys and the man and his wife who cooked and kept house, were very nice which tasted good after eating in camp so long.

The cowboys got Daddy to look for a place to build a home and stay, so we came to Big Spring on the Tierra Blanco and liked the section and the spring so we moved there. That was on July 29th,

We lived in camp until we could make us a dugout. Daddy went to the Canyon (Palo Duro) for logs and poles so it took several days. The cabin was one room with a partition of cloth and a quilt for the door, when it was finished.

Our post office was 50 miles away, Old Tascosa. The men at the ranch would get our mail when they went for supplies.

Since it was Friday and I don't like to start a new job on that day and there are some jobs the day ain't been invented yet I'd like to start em on, I was sittin out here on my farm near Bootleg propped against my favorite tree dain some global thinkin, the man who gets up the earliest, plows the hardest and winds up the tiredest at sundown ain't necessarily accomplishin the most these days, it takes thinkin too, a man can apparently be dozin in the shade but his brain can be racin, how much Johnson grass has Einstein

And I got to thinkin . . . Washington seems to be on its toes, it's takin nearly every step humanly possible and tryin some that ain't to meet whatever emergency the global situation may present, from a rain of atom bombs on American cities to bacteria in the drinkin water to salt in the sugar, but there's one item Washington seems to be neglectin and I will appreciate you usin your influence to call it to its at-

The point is this: while personally I don't believe civilization is gonna be destroyed any time soon, we ain't carried it to a high enough point of perfection yet to invent the bomb to do it with, I'm goin ahead and makin plans for another crop next year, still and at the same time a man can't be sure, some scientist workin late on a new soap for mula may stumble on a chain-reaction idea tonight that'll loop the whole world together in one big whoosh, capable of wipin out all the gadgets we got and all the plants to make em in, along with the people who made em.

All right, say it happens, ten thousand atom bombs and five thousand hydrogen bombs and some newer kinds all go off at once, civilization is wiped out and all that's left is a few scattered families back in the hills, a few people whose bomb shelters miraculously held up and they was in there sweepin out at the time, and a straggler here and there who came out maybe only singed around the edges.

The whole burden of startin civilization all over again would be on them, and here's my point. they wouldn't be equipped to do it. Starve to death as soon as the last can of food they could dig out of the rubble was gone.

I know we got a lot of bureaus in Washington, so many you can some times get elected to a precinct office on a platform of knockin half of em in the head, but they ought to make room for one more. We need a bureau to set out now teachin the people how to get along under pre-historic conditions, how to flake a flint arrowhead, with no tools except a deer horn and no deer horn unless you can stumble on one; how to spear a fish; how to skin a rabbit and save the pelt; how to sew a pair of moccasins; what to sew em with; how to keep a fire goin in a cave for years on end: how to hollow out a canoe; how to dry bear meat in the sun; how to swing a war club; how to paint pictures on cave

Right along with first aid courses and lessons in gettin out of a buildin without confusion and returning to a city after it's bombed, the government ought to be instructing the people in these fundamentals. What we need is a Bureau of Pre-Historic Culture.

I tell you, Washington is sure gonna be in for a lot of ugly criticism if this thing happens and these people emerge from their caves and shelters without even any arrow know-how.

MRS. C. G. BRASHEAR, 87, grandmother of several Hereford residents, was named "Favorite Neighbor of Central Texas" the week of August 19 in a special Temple Daily Telegram feature, according to that Temple, Texas paper. The contest was held as part of "Get Acquainted Week" in Temple. Adjudged as best of 122 nominees, Mrs. Brashear's recognition was based on the sincerity, appeal, and her kindly deeds. She was nominated through a letter wriften by a neighbor, Mrs. Frank M. Jones, shown with her in the above picture. Mrs. Brashear is the widow of a Baptist minister. Her guiding philosophy has been, "I could always find somebody I could help." The honoree is the grandmother of George E. Brashear, Mrs. W. S. Rice, and Mrs. Benny Womble, all of Hereford. She is the mother of George T. Brashear, Corpus Christi, who lived in Deaf Smith county from 1930 to 1941.—Temple Daily Telegram Photo.

While I was at Plainview, Daddy built us a house. I will never forget how it looked that night when I got home, cold and happy. How beautiful it looked! The stove red hot; the walls covered with black paper with big red tacks to hold it on; and a table in the corner with a lamp that shone bright, and on each side some pretty vases. We came home in a carriage after a 70 mile trip with the ground covered with snow. It took a day to mak the trip.

I liked the new home but missed the dugout near the spring as I loved the spring. The water came out of the bank over the rocks and made a big round pool, so clear and still, with grassy banks on three sides tall reeds on the other, with the large stream of water flowing on into the creek. In broken by the cry of a frog caught by a water snake, and at nights the coyotes would come near and give forth their

We had more neighbors now so on July 10, 1889, we had our first picnic. Had a fine time and met our new neighbors. Mr. Jowell brought a boat and we took rides in it on the creek. When we got home that night, we found a new baby brother there. This was Henry Cox.

That fall of 1889 they finished the first courthouse in Ama-rillo. My sister, Minnie, Mr. Louis Bradly, Emmett Powers and I went to a big ball they gave on opening day. It was grand! First of its kind that I had ever seen, with a Grand March to start it.

In 1890, my sister Minnie married and my parents gave her a dinner and dance. This year, Daddy and neighbors hauled lumber from Amarillo and built the first school house in Deaf Smith county. The first year we had a very short term of school because we did not have much of a teacher. Better schools years for '91 and Fall of 1897 I went to Add Ran college at Waco. Then because of shortage of money, came home before the school year was over. Rat, who was sheriff then, met me in Here-ford. And this was my first view the summer, often the quiet was broken by the cry of a from two high-steppers, so we were soon home.

Rat and I decided we would marry, so on September 3, 1899 we made that solemn vow. He rented a little three room house in Hereford and we set up housekeeping.
