County okays EDC funds

By JOHN BROOKS
Managing Editor

Deaf Smith County commissioners, on a 3-2 vote, decided Monday at their regular meeting to go ahead with their funding for the Economic Development Commission through Sept. 30, 1989.

John Perrin, chairman of the nine-member EDC board, told the commissioners that the original concept for funding had changed because the Hereford Independent School District couldn't participate in funding.

In the original plan approved last year, the city of Hereford and Deaf Smith County were each to provide $48,000, or 40 percent, of the EDC's $120,000 budget, with the HISD giving $24,000, or 20 percent.

"We re-evaluated our position, to see what we can do," Perrin said. "We talked to the National Development Council and to an economic development specialist in Oklahoma City, and they felt it would be valuable for us to go forward."

The county had already paid $5,000 of its $48,000 share, and Perrin asked the commissioners to pay the balance in equal monthly payments of $4,777 a month through September.

Commissioners Troy Don Moore and Austin Rose and County Judge Tom Simons voted in favor of paying the remainder of the money. Commissioners John Stribling and Johnny Latham voted against the payment.

Ken Rogers, chairman of the Industrial Development Committee of the Deaf Smith County Chamber of Commerce, spoke to the commissioners, saying he was there "as a taxpayer of this county and as a businessman that is most interested in the growth and development of this community" and not as a representative of the chamber or any other group.

"I am 100 percent for economic development and the use of some tax dollars to support this activity, so I support your efforts in the past and encourage your involvement in the future," Rogers said.

Rogers said the chamber had negotiated with eight "good" prospects in 1988 and was still working with most of them.

Rogers said the chamber has paid most of the expenses for the work with its "already stressed budget," and Rogers has also donated "many dollars in phone calls, fax transmissions and secretarial help as well as my personal time for the benefit of the community, as have many other people," he said.

"We need the cooperation of both parties (Chamber and EDC) to make this work and we need your cooperation," Rogers said. "If the chamber is to handle all of the prospects that come our way, to put the proposals together and do the leg work then it is only fair that the funds for economic development be allocated to help support this activity.

"The bottom line to my being here is to encourage you to continue to support economic development with some tax dollars and to make sure that they are placed where they will do the most good for this community.

"I know that we need help in certain areas but I am not sure they have been properly identified yet. I do know that by working together we can accomplish great things and make Hereford and Deaf Smith County a much better place to work and live."

"People like Ken have spent a lot of energy and effort," said Simons. "We don't want competition, we want a united effort and we should help the chamber in every way we can."

"I am very concerned that we don't head in two different directions. We need these two organizations to work together to plan a package beneficial to all of Deaf Smith County. We are losing tax base by the day, it seems, and we need a successful economic development effort."

Commissioners also voted to let Sheriff Joe Brown replace a jailer and a deputy sheriff in his department.

Brown has been one deputy short since last September, and had tried to work short-handed without success. "We are too far behind on papers," Brown said. "We have stacks of tax papers and warrants that need to be served. We tried to work so we could get by, but there's no one left."

The jailer's position has been open since mid-November.

In other business, commissioners:

--Heard an explanation by Roger Malone, owner of First Printing of Hereford, of the way he devised his bid for the county's printing work;

--Re-appointed all members of the County Historical Commission;

--Appointed Rose as judge pro tem, and named Charles Greenawalt and Maria Garcia to the Child Welfare Board;

--Heard a brief report from Glen Ashton of Hazard Corrections, an Amarillo company that specializes in asbestos "abatement" on the possibility of steps needing to be taken on asbestos around pipes and the boiler in the courthouse;

--Stribling, attending his first commissioners' court meeting, inquired about his Precinct 1 budget for the 1989 fiscal year and asked about steps he could take to improve the precinct's fiscal condition.

The precinct is the only one without a certificate of deposit in the bank, and has a budgeted deficit of $89,000 for FY '89, which extends through Sept. 30.

State legislature opens session

AUSTIN (AP)—State lawmakers gathered in Austin today for the opening of the 71st Texas Legislature with their sights set on prisons, public schools, workers' compensation problems and, as always, the budget.

Among the first orders of business, however, was electing one House speaker and hearing from another.

Three-term Speaker Gib Lewis, D-Fort Worth, was expected to be re-elected to a fourth two-year term as presiding officer of the 150-member chamber, which also was to hear from U.S. House Speaker Jim Wright.

While the first day's work is largely ceremonial, lawmakers will face a number of serious problems before adjourning May 29.

Comptroller Bob Bullock has projected that lawmakers will have an additional $1.6 billion in spendable cash for the 1990-91 budget period, but the Legislative Budget Board has said another $1 billion would be needed to maintain state services at present levels.

"I, along with 149 members in the House, am opposed to new taxes," Lewis said in an interview Monday.

Nothing that lawmakers have passed three major tax increases in four years, Lewis said another tax increase this year seems unlikely.

"The politics is not going to allow it to happen," he said.

Gov. Bill Clements, saying the state's projected income is sufficient, vows to veto any tax increase. "I am set in concrete," he said.

Another element in the budget negotiations this session is the report of the Select Committee on Tax Equity, a blue-ribbon business-government panel that spent 1 1/2 years examining the Texas tax structure.

In its recommendations, the committee called for shifting the tax burden from businesses with heavy capital investment and toward the state's growing service industry. It called for broadening the sales tax to cover more services, modifying the franchise tax paid by capital-intensive business, and easing local government reliance on property taxes.

Bullock has offered a plan for raising the additional $1 billion, generating some quick and positive responses from legislators.

Bullock said lawmakers could avert another tax increase by approving a series of bookkeeping measures, including the temporary transfer of some state money from dedicated special funds into the all-purpose general revenue fund.

"New taxes would have a depressing effect on our (economic) recovery, both real and psychological," Bullock said.

Among those responding favorably to his ideas was Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby, who presides over the Senate. "Generally, Lt. Gov. Hobby liked what he saw. It looks like these proposals form the comptroller are some realistic alternatives," said Hobby press secretary Glenn Smith.

Besides the money hurdle, lawmakers will face a number of other problems during their 140-day session, including:

-Education. Although the 3rd Court of Appeals has derailed, at least temporarily, a lower court order to overhaul the system of state aid to public schools, many lawmakers say change still is needed.

Hopefully, you've been reading about the proposed salary hikes for congressmen. The presidential pay commission has recommended a 50% increase in salary to be given to the upper echelon of the federal government.

The commission recommended that the pay of a congressman be raised from the present figure of $89,500 to $135,000 per year. The commission is a creature designed to take the heat off congressmen. Once the recommendation is made, it becomes law unless Congress votes to deny itself a pay raise.

We all should remember that Congress has flunked the test of good management. Outgo has far exceeded income for many years, and the result is a staggering debt of more than a trillion dollars.

Taxpayers across the nation must think their own congressman is okay, because 98% of those running for reelection got another term in office.

I wouldn't be opposed to pay raises for congressmen if a few stipulations were attached. First, senators and representatives should stop taking fees for speeches made to special interest groups and, second, each congressional office should lay off enough aides and assistants to offset the pay increase.

The fastest growth industry in Washington is the addition of aides and employees to congressional offices. The rules provide for too many aides and they've become so numerous that, in essence, the aides and assistants are running the government.

But perhaps the best solution comes from James Roberts, the highly-respected editor down at Andrews. Give them the pay raise, says Roberts—and if Congress cannot come up with a balanced budget in the first fiscal year, reduce their salary by 25%.

And if they can't balance the budget the second year, hit their salaries with another 25% reduction... and so on until the end of the fourth year. No balanced budget, no pay.

"With no pay, perhaps they'll seek other employment and we can send someone else up there dedicated to balancing federal expenditures with federal income," says Roberts.

Nothing gets a person's attention like a flat pocketbook!

Report calls for cutbacks in FDIC, FSLIC

WASHINGTON (AP)—The Reagan administration today recommended curtailing deposit insurance for bank and savings and loan customers, saying the public will have to bear much of the estimated $100 billion cost of restoring the S&L industry to health.

The White House council of Economic Advisers, in President Reagan's final economic report, said reducing protection for depositors would cause them to more closely "monitor the financial health" of the institutions holding their money.

The administration also sharply criticized S&L regulators for institutions. The top federal S&L regulator, M. Danny Wall, chairman of the Federal Home Loan Bank Board, was scheduled to undergo a grilling today before the House Banking Committee on the most recent spate of S&L rescues.

Both banks and S&Ls are failing in numbers not seen since the Great Depression. Reagan's report notes that the problems will be "one of the major challenges for the next administration" under President-elect Bush.

While Reagan places much of the blame on regulators, the administration's own record has come under fire as well. Critics point out that the administration refused to pay for additional S&L examiners while the problem was developing.

Some private analysts also cite the push to deregulate S&Ls in the early and mid-1980s as one cause for the wave of failures. Many S&Ls, particularly in states with liberal laws such as Texas, California and Florida, moved away from their traditional field of home mortgage lending and invested heavily in risky commercial real estate ventures, later absorbing billions of dollars in losses.

The Federal Deposit Insurance Corp., which backs commercial bank deposits, said 222 banks closed or required government assistance to remain open in 1988. The Federal Savings and Loan Insurance Corp., meanwhile, handled 217 insolvencies.

In the final Reagan budget, released Monday, the administration called for spending $64 billion on S&Ls through 1994 and acknowledged for the first time that it does not have enough money coming in to handle the cleanup.

Citing the 1980 decision by Congress to boost the limit on deposit insurance from $40,000 to $100,000, Reagan's economic report said reducing the ceiling "would restore much-needed discipline to the system."

"The scope of federal deposit insurance should be significantly curtailed," it said, although it did not recommend a specific limit.

Crimestoppers offers reward

A $300 reward is being offered by Deaf Smith County Crimestoppers for information leading to the arrest and indictment of persons responsible for the CRIME OF THE WEEK.

Two burglaries occurred recently at Hereford Grain Company locations at Center Point and at Farmers Corner.

At the Center Point location, only a calculator is missing. However, damage was done to a grain moisture meter, a grain sifting pan set, and doors and windows.

At the Farmers Corner location, candy and Coke machines were damaged and change was taken from both machines. Some damage was also done to doors and windows.

Anyone having information should call Crimestoppers at 364-CLUE or 364-2583. Callers on this or any other crime may remain anonymous.

Police arrest three

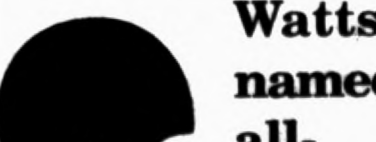

Three persons were arrested over the weekend and Monday by Hereford police, including a man, 20, on warrants for failure to identify himself to a peace officer, no liability insurance and no driver's license; a man, 29, for driving while license suspended and running a stop sign; and a woman, 26, for driving without liability insurance, second offense.

Incidents reported over the weekend included a man who threatened to commit suicide who was taken to Northwest Texas Hospital in Amarillo; two domestic disturbances where officers stood by while the wives gathered their belongings; a female was assaulted near the City swimming pool at Dameron Park; a daughter was assaulted by her father at their home in the 400 block of Avenue E, and charges are expected to be filed; a boy, 16, was assaulted by three other youths in the 700 block of Stanton Street; a domestic violence report in the 200 block of Elm Street;

A dispute over ownership of a pickup in the 700 block of Thunderbird; beer stolen from three convenience stores; a Craig AM/FM/Cassette unit stolen from a car at Blue Water Gardens; two pit bull puppies stolen from the back yard of a residence in the 200 block of Brevard; criminal trespass in the 200 block of North Main; a prowler was chased by a dog from the back yard of a residence in the 200 block of Higgins;

Theft of service for not returning two rented movies; burglary of a business near Veterans Park; $1,500 worth of damage to a car; $5 worth of gas stolen from a convenience store on South 25 Mile Avenue; criminal mischief in the 800 block of South 25 Mile Avenue; assault in the 200 block of Eighth; telephone harassment; and $100 taken in the burglary of a building in the 200 block of 16th.

Budget proposal hits hard on rural Texans

WASHINGTON (AP)--The ranks of struggling farmers and rural hospitals on the brink of financial collapse would swell under cuts President Reagan is proposing in his fiscal 1990 budget, experts say.

Although Reagan's budget would be hard on rural Texas, major defense and energy projects in the state fare well, including $250 million proposed for the initial construction of the super collider and $2.1 billion for the space station.

The big question is whether President-elect George Bush will stick to those recommendations when he takes office, and what the Democratic-controlled Congress will do.

"People have said the president's budgets of recent years have been dead on arrival, but this one's lost in transit. There's more interest in how President Bush will change this budget than in the budget itself," says Sen. Lloyd Bentsen, a Texas Democrat and chairman of the Senate Finance Committee.

Health care officials in Texas say they're concerned about the effects of trimming growth in Medicare and Medicaid by about $5 billion.

The savings in Medicare would come primarily from reducing the fees received by hospitals, often the lifeblood of small, rural hospitals, many of which are on the brink of failure in Texas. Nineteen Texas hospitals closed last year.

Rural hospitals would be particularly hard hit by the cuts because of their dependence on Medicare patients, Jim Haddock, senior vice president for health care finance at the Texas Hospital Association, said rural hospitals have a mix of 60 percent to 65 percent of Medicare patients, compared with urban hospitals, with 40 percent to 45 percent.

Gordon Russell, administrator of the Hi-Plains Hospital in Hale Center, said any cut in Medicare "is going to be a death blow on rural hospitals, which already are suffering terribly."

"We can't stand any more cuts and continue to maintain access to health care in rural areas," said Russell, a member of the Department of Health and Human Services' National Advisory Committee on Rural Health. "Any further cuts would wipe out a bunch of hospitals."

Under Reagan's proposal, Medicare, which provides health care to Social Security recipients, would be cut by $3.2 billion below the projected increase for 1990.

Haddock predicted as many as 20 more hospitals could collapse if the cuts go through. The state has lost about 75 hospitals over the past four years.

Medicaid, which pays the health bills of poor people, would be cut by $1.7 billion over its projected increase for 1990 with the savings coming from reductions in federal payments to the states, which run the program.

Haddock said the state's seven teaching hospitals, capital improvements in hospitals, and the Texas Legislature's efforts to improve its Medicaid system, would also be hurt under the proposed cuts.

Reagan also wrote to slash spending on farm programs by 19 percent or $9.7 billion.

Rep. Kika de la Garza, a Texas Democrat who leads the House Agriculture Committee, said the budget "takes a stance that appears to be deliberately punitive toward agriculture."

He pledged to work with the Bush administration on a "reasonable alternative...the budget cannot be balanced at the expense of farmers who have kept us the best-fed nation in the world."

Kraig Gallimore, who heads farmer and rancher assistance for the Texas Agriculture Department, said that if the cuts go through, "we can expect to see more (farm) bankruptcies and foreclosures, and a continued exodus, not just from the farm, but from rural America."

"It (agriculture) is just the easiest kid on the block to pick on, with the few votes in the countryside," Gallimore said.

Farmers make up less than 3 percent of the population and "they are just tired of the struggle, of the fight to survive. And now the president says they're going to cut their pay. That's pretty depressing," Gallimore said.

On the positive side of Reagan's budget, however, are proposals to spend $250 million to begin construction of the super collider, the giant physics project that is expected to create thousands of jobs in north central Texas. The budget targets completion of SSC construction at a site in Ellis County by 1998.

In fiscal 1990, the proposed budget calls for spending $90 million on research and development and $160 million on initial construction.

Reagan is calling for spending $2.1 billion for the space station, which would be built in part at Johnson Space Center outside Houston; $100 million in Pentagon money for Sematech, the semiconductor research consortium in Austin; $62 million for a replacement Brooke Army medical center in San Antonio; $22 million in construction funds for Naval Station Ingleside near Corpus Christi; $39 million for modernization of the Red River Army Depot in Texarkana; $31 million for construction of Cooper Lake in northeast Texas; and $7.5 million to clean up pollution of the Rio Grande at Laredo.

Experts puzzled over latest British air crash

KEGWORTH, ENGLAND (AP)

Experts examining the flight recorders and wreckage of a British jetliner puzzled over how a brand-new Boeing 737 apparently lost use of both engines and crashed, against 10-million-to-one odds, killing 44 people.

Transport Minister Paul Channon said no evidence of sabotage surfaced in the British Midland

Airways disaster, but Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher would not rule it out. "We rule out nothing, we simply can't," she said.

Pilot Kevin Hunt crash-landed the Belfast-bound jet at the edge of a major highway Sunday night, barely avoiding the village of Kegworth at the edge of East Midlands Airport.

The badly injured flier was being hailed today for his skill.

Investigators' work should be greatly assisted by the survival of Hunt and 81 others on board, many of whom were well enough Monday to describe the last minutes of Flight BD92 as Hunt struggled to make an emergency landing.

Survivor Dr. John McCrea said they had been on the plane for 10 or 12 minutes when "I felt a shudder and I looked over at the left wing," and saw flames. The pilot told them he had shut the engine down and was diverting to East Midland.

"We went on flying for a further five minutes," McCrea said. "The plane seemed to drop...We carried on two or three minutes and there were more flashes over the left side."

Then the captain told passengers to prepare for an emergency landing. "It seemed like only five seconds later we were down," said McCrea.

The plane crashed a half-mile short of the runway, plowing into a grassy embankment at the edge of the M1 highway 100 miles north of London.

Hunt, 43, a 22-year veteran with the airline, was in poor condition with spine and leg fractures.

Credit for the high survival rate was being given to Hunt's flying, to airport firefighters who smothered the burning engine and fuel-laden wings in foam within minutes, and to motorists who rushed from cars to help.

Mrs. Thatcher visited hospitalized passengers at Derby Royal Infirmary on Monday, talked with relatives of those killed and went to the scene, where the broken blue and white fuselage lay crumpled among the trees.

Last month she was in Lockerbie, Scotland, the village struck by wreckage when a bomb blew apart a Pan Am jumbo jet on Dec. 21, killing 270 people. She said Monday that she "almost couldn't believe it" when she heard about the new crash.

Channon, who also inspected the Kegworth scene, said, "So far the evidence, although by no means conclusive, is consistent with the right engine having stopped before impact and there are also signs of fire in the left engine."

Asked whether it was almost certain that both engines malfunctioned, the transport minister replied: "That certainly looks probable at the moment."

William Tench, retired head of Britain's Air Accidents Investigation Board, said the odds against a double engine failure on a Boeing 737 were 10 million-to-1. He suggested a "technical mistake such as something incorrect being done to the engines during turnaround (servicing between flights), either inadvertently or deliberately."

BABBLING BROOKS

By John Brooks

By JOHN BROOKS

My granny, who lives out in Coolidge, Ariz., has this "friend" that would make Norm Crosby blush.

This friend mangles words. Every time I talk to Granny on the telephone or get a letter from her, she has a new "word" for us.

Granny decided to compile some of the new words into a little story.

I'll let Granny take over from here. I will provide some translation along the way.

Here's Granny:

The "Cambode-ans" (Cambodians) escaped and hid in a "Kath-a-drill" (cathedral) in the "See-haira Desert" but were "halcanating" (hallucinating) with their "rear-end" (distant relatives about having "sex course" (uh, affairs) with "cheap beats" (deadbeats).

The cheap-beats lived in "condonans" (condominiums) with a "segregated" (?) and some "Klu-Klucks" near some "Palo Verd" (Palo Verde) trees.

They hung out a "no so-lick-tors" (no solicitors) sign and cooked some chicken on their "rotor" (rotisserie) and made some "Pit-tawsh" (pistachio) pudding that was the "con-sis-tee" of butter. They didn't "drool" on it but worried about the people with a "draw" (that's accent, not draw!) that would "hi-jack" (bum) a ride and come in "groves."

One woman would "sainter" by talking about "slurfs" (anything from dandruff to lice) in her hair.

She would say "whim-hands" (keep your hands off me) and "spear-mint" (experiment) with somebody else with your "phonographic" minds!

She wanted to buy herself a new "os-kal-latin" (oscillating) fan and a "Nick-ee" (Necchi sewing) machine and a "humid-fire" for her "dis-infection."

She met many who had used "fass-ettes" (fasteners or zippers) to pull their tongues out so they wouldn't be "lexecuted" (electrocuted) for talking.

Granny says, "This was my first 'illiterate' effort. Next time I'll write about the 'ill-igg-ament' children here that get 'dopted.'"

"She tells me she stays well-read by reading the Arizona Republic every day, and how she won the spelling bee for the entire fourth grade in 1927."

bb

What bothers me even more than my Granny's neighbor mangling the language is that this computer I typed this on understood the words when I ran our little Spell Check program on the preceding information.

On "Cambode-ans" it gave me one choice: Cambodians. Up there on the "Klu-Klucks" it wanted me to type "Ku Klux Klan." On "sainter" it suggested "saunter," and on "lexecuted" it gave me "executed" and "electrocuted."

These things are so smart they'd probably refuse to run for president on the Democratic ticket.

Mike Moon gives program to organization

The monthly meeting of St. Anthony's Women's Organization was held Jan. 3 following Mass at St. Anthony's Catholic Church.

Celebrant of the Mass was Father Hector Madrigal, Minister of the Word was Rosemary Barrett.

The program, "Resources and Support Groups in Hereford and the Surrounding Area" was presented by Mike Moon of Hereford Family Services Center. He discussed numerous agencies associated with Deaf Smith County United Way and other Hereford and Area Resources of Support Groups.

He touched on several programs formed for greater support, such as Inpatient Psychiatric Programs for children and adults and inpatient alcohol and drug treatment programs for adolescents and adults.

The business meeting was opened by Reta Reinart. Jamie Banner reported for the Community Committee that Jan. 22 is the anniversary of the Abortion Laws.

A possible fundraiser, such as selling roses, was discussed. Francie Farr reported for the social committee that the special event for this month is to be held for single adults up to age 30. College-age single adults were to be invited.

The Ways and Means committee reported that an Open House of the Rectory will be held Jan. 21-22 following each mass. Parishioners and friends can view the renovations that have been made to the rectory over the past months through generous donations of time, money, and furniture. Special appreciation was expressed toward Jimmy and Beverly Jesko.

Ann Landers

DEAR ANN LANDERS: Your answer to "Concerned Mother" who was worried because she found her panty hose and her daughter's bikini underwear hidden in her son's room made me realize that you must not know anything about auto-erotic-asphyxiation.

This is a game played by young men usually between the ages of 14 and 21. They dress in women's panty hose and bikini underwear, engage in masturbation, take a rope, toss it over a joist, pull a slipknot in a noose and put it over their head. As the rope tightens it gives them an erotic high seconds before they become unconscious. The weight of the body supposedly releases the knot and the subject regains consciousness. Sometimes, however, the knot does not release and the person chokes to death.

Although hundreds of young men have died as a result of this experimentation, one never sees any mention of it in the papers.

I'm sure the reason for the secrecy is that the families are ashamed to let the circumstances of the death be known. Please, Ann Landers, print this letter and make parents aware of what can happen to their young sons. If you do not believe me, consult with any large urban police department. The police along with the parents are the ones who take down the bodies and it is heartbreaking. Sign me -- One Whose Family Has Been Touched (St. Louis)

DEAR ST. LOUIS: I do know about this tragic accidental form of suicide and have written about it in this space.

I hope all my young readers will realize how dangerous this little game can be. Hundreds of deaths occur this way--most of them unreported for the reasons you mentioned. Thanks, St. Louis, for giving me the opportunity to discuss this topic again.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I am not writing with a problem. I am writing to praise an unsung hero. My stepfather!

"Dad" married my mother 16 years ago. Mom was a problem drinker and had no maternal instincts. She had many boyfriends and a lot of unpaid bills. Dad came into our lives just in time. With his love and support, Mom changed into a different person. My brothers and sisters and I felt loved for the first time in our lives. He helped us to learn and grow in ways I never thought possible. We learned to trust and love for the first time in our lives. (We all had been molested by one of my mother's boyfriends.)

Now, years later, I want to thank this beautiful person. Words cannot express my love and respect for him. He not only changed my mother's life, he gave us all a life we could be proud of.

I cannot tell you his name, because Mom would be embarrassed, but when he reads this I hope he knows it's me. I love you, Dad!--Your Grateful Child year, and want nothing to do with drugs or drug users or men I think are promiscuous or bisexual. Sometimes I insist on condoms and sometimes I don't. Last week I got the news. I tested positive for the AIDS virus.

Stunned? You'd better believe it. I, too, thought AIDS was a gay man's disease. I now know that it is a disease that knows no barriers. It could happen to your daughter, your son, your best friend or your sister. Please urge your readers, before they get caught like me, to use condoms at all times. They aren't 100 percent protection, but 90 percent is a lot better than zero.

Believe me, Ann, I am taking no chances of infecting anyone. Not that I know my days are numbered, I'm trying to cram in all the living I can while I am still in good condition. I am taking better care of myself than I ever have before, eating nourishing food, and getting plenty of rest. Meanwhile I am keeping my problems to myself and confiding in a small circle of friends.

What can your readers do? They can test anonymously if they think there is an outside chance that they have been infected. They can donate money to further AIDS research. They can educate the apathetic heterosexuals who think it can't happen to them. If it happened to me, it can happen to anybody.

P.S. Your readers will probably think this letter is a plant, written by a gay male in order to get support. How I wish it were! Unfortunately for me the story I have just told you is true and I am--HIV Positive in Chicago

DEAR CHILD: What a heart-warmer! I am not going to print the city of origin, nor the gender of the sender. I want every deserving stepfather who reads this letter to think it was intended for him.

DEAR READERS: Here's my laugh for the day:

"What's your age?" asked the magistrate. "Remember, you're under oath."

"Twenty-one years and some months," the lady answered.

"How many months?" The woman hesitated a moment and replied, "Sixty-four."

Dear Ann Landers: I am writing because someone has to bring this to the attention of the general public. Who better than you?

I am a heterosexual woman, divorced, mid-40s, white, upper middle class, living a modestly fast lifestyle not unlike many of my friends.

I carefully screen the four or five bed partners that I may have in a

Dear Friend: With all you have on your mind it was wonderful of you to take the time and trouble to write. People need to know that AIDS is not a disease that only drug users and homosexuals get. Straight people can get it, too. Good luck and God bless.

Watts, Mercer make all-state team

Hereford's Brian Watts has been selected to the first team on the Texas Sports Writers Association all-state football team announced Sunday.

Watts, a 6-0, 220-pound senior, was named as a guard on the first team. The Herd's Pat Mercer was named to the second team as a defensive back.

Receiving honorable mention on the all-state team were tailback Keith Brown, defensive end Brad Smith and linebacker Joe Medrano. All of the players made the 1-4A All-District team.

Watts and Mercer were the only area players named to the three-team unit. Sweetwater's Kenneth Norman, a two-way first-team selection, was named the Class 4A player of the year.

Watts was a key player in helping Hereford make the playoffs and record a 9-2-1 record for the season. He was also named on the All South Plains team and the Globe-News Super Team. A starting tackle in 1987, Watts made the switch to guard this season.

"I think he deserves being on the first team," said Hereford coach

Don Cumpston. "He worked hard. He's a great player and we leaned on him because he was the only returning starter on the line."

Watts recorded an average grade of 91 percent for the season and also had 37 "pancakes"--described by Cumpston as a knockdown of a defensive opponent.

Mercer, a 6-2, 180-pound senior, was a two-way selection on the All South Plains team as a wide receiver and defensive back. He made the All South Plains first team as a receiver and defensive back. His individual stats as a second-team defensive back included 62 tackles, seven pass interceptions, three pass breakups and two fumble recoveries.

The Whitefaces had 14 players on the all-district team, with Mercer being picked on the first team offense and defense. Other first-team offensive players were Watts, Medrano, Brown, Jason Scott, Bud Shirley, Kevin Patezold, and Roger McCracken. Second-team picks included Smith, Brown, Benny Gonzales, Kirby Kaul, Clint Cotten and Billy Burnam.

Whitefaces split thrillers with Estacado

By JOHN BROOKS
Managing Editor

Hereford pulled one basketball game out of the fire and almost came away with a second win on Monday night in District 1-4A play at Lubbock Estacado.

Brianna Townsend scored with 13 seconds to play to give the Hereford Lady Whitefaces a 56-55 win over the Lady Matadors.

In tournament play earlier this season, Estacado had defeated the Lady Whitefaces 71-39.

In the boys' contest, Hereford came back from a 24-12 deficit at the end of the first quarter but fell short, 64-62, in the nightcap against the Matadors.

In the girls' game, the Estacado girls grabbed a 16-8 lead at the end of the first period before Hereford kicked its offense into overdrive, picking up 20 second-quarter points. Estacado, however, scored 19 points to lead 35-28 at halftime.

"They couldn't miss in the first half," said Hereford coach Frank Belcher. "I told the girls at the end of the first quarter there wasn't a whole lot we could do differently. They just didn't miss."

"In the second half, though, they didn't shoot the ball as well."

In the third quarter, Hereford outscored Estacado 12-4 to lead 40-39 after three periods.

Hereford led by two points with two minutes left when Carmen Brockman fouled out trying to defend against a three-point shot that put Estacado in front by one.

Townsend hit an 18-footer from just inside the three-point line to give Hereford the lead. After Townsend's shot, Estacado had a chance to win the game at the line, but missed the front end of a one-and-one opportunity with six seconds to play.

Cande Robbins led Hereford with 26 points, while Brockman scored 16 points before fouling out.

"It was a slow-down game, and that was a good pace for us," Belcher said. "We kept them off the boards, and our team defense was great. We stayed in a man-to-man the whole game, and our post players--Carmen, Cande, Shantel Cornelius and Shea McGinty--did a super job on their top girl, holding her to just five points."

"This win puts us in great shape for the second half. There could be a lot of us at 4-4, or there could be some at 5-3 just above us, depending on what happens tonight."

"We just need to take care of our own business. When we played better the first time, we had 31 turnovers and they beat us by 14. We've improved quite a bit since then and we were forced to make up our mind to play."

In the junior varsity game, Hereford took a 49-47 win.

In the boys game, Hereford couldn't quite recover from the big first-quarter deficit, but began chipping away at the lead by outscoring the Matadors 17-14 in the second period and 11-8 in the third quarter to close the gap to 46-40.

Estacado stretched its lead to 10 points with 1:30 to play before a furious Herd rally.

Clint Cotten led Hereford with 24 points while Brad Smith added 14 points.

"We didn't play that bad early, but Estacado is a hot-and-cold team, and they were hot in the first quarter," said Hereford coach Mike Fields. "We finally started some outside shots late, and played real hard at the end, but couldn't quite get the job done."

"We gave ourselves a chance to win. We hit 16-of-19 free throws, but we just need to find a way to win it at the end. Three of our last four games have been decided by a basket or less, so there hasn't been much difference between winning and losing."

Friday, Hereford will be home for only the fifth time this season to host Borger.

"Borger beat Estacado by 5 last Friday, and they only have one district loss," Fields said. "They have a point guard that transferred in from California and they already had a couple of good outside players. They have last year's sophomore of the year back and he can't break into the starting lineup."

"We're due to win one, and we might as well start now. We need to get something rolling, but it's hard to do that on the road. It's a credit to our kids that they're still playing hard and haven't given up."

In the JV game, Hereford lost to the Matadors, 62-39.

NCAA will wait on book about N.C. State rule allegations

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) -- The NCAA will wait until a book on the North Carolina State basketball program is published before deciding whether it contains allegations that should be investigated, the organization's director of enforcement says.

N.C. State officials mailed a letter to the NCAA on Monday asking for an investigation into allegations of illegal activity in the school's basketball program.

"I don't know what's in the book. As I understand so far is that all anyone has is a jacket to a book. And it's being promoted as something detrimental to North Carolina State," David Berst, the NCAA director of enforcement, said while attending the NCAA convention in San Francisco. "I would prefer to wait until there actually is a book and someone reads the book and determines if there's anything in there to be interested in. I'm not inclined to get excited about it until we actually have something in hand."

The letter from N.C. State to NCAA Executive Director Dick Schultz, which is signed by athletic director and basketball coach Jim Valvano and Chancellor Bruce Poulton, cites allegations contained on the jacket of a book called "Personal Fouls" by Peter Golenbock.

"The University has acquired a copy of the jacket of this book, and we are enclosing a copy for your information," the letter said. "Please note that some very serious allegations are made about North Carolina State University and its faculty, student athletes, and basketball coach. Amongst those allegations are illegal gifts of jewelry and cars to players, the changing of grades by faculty and university officials, the passing of large amounts of secret money from our booster club, etc. None of these allegations are true."

"In view of the seriousness of these allegations, we as athletic director and chancellor, respectively, of North Carolina State University are requesting of you an immediate investigation by the NCAA of these allegations."

The letter said the university was prepared to cooperate with such an investigation.

Mark Bockelman, sports information director for N.C. State, said Valvano would have no further comment.

Meanwhile, lawyers for the school "are reviewing the possibility of legal action" over allegations that the school's basketball program committed illegal acts.

"The allegations about the NCSU Athletics Program carried in the Saturday edition of the local newspaper are in my judgment totally unfounded and without substance," Poulton said Monday.

"Unfortunately, the allegations of wrongdoing are particularly injurious to the professional reputations of our faculty and staff and our basketball coach, as well as injurious to the reputations of our student athletes and North Carolina State University."

Poulton's one-page statement was issued two days after The News and Observer of Raleigh published a story about the forthcoming book. The News and Observer said the book was due to be published in February, but the newspaper obtained a copy of the dust jacket and published information on it.

N.C. State General Counsel Becky French said she would contact lawyers for the publishing house Simon & Schuster, whose Pocketbooks division is handling the book. Simon & Schuster said it would have no comment on the matter.

Adam Rothburg, a spokesman for Pocketbooks, said a statement from the publisher was expected to be released, but he could not say when. He said the book had been reviewed by the publisher's legal department but would not elaborate.

Controversial DallasCarter math teacher has been transferred DALLAS (AP) -- The president of a teacher's group says a math instructor whose grading system was embroiled in a controversy over the playoff eligibility of Dallas Carter High School's football team was involuntarily transferred.

Wilfred Bates, 57, was moved to Gaston Middle School as an industrial arts teacher, the president of Classroom Teachers of Dallas said Monday.

"Obviously, I think it's retaliatory," Bob Baker, the teacher's group president, said. "Dr. Bates has been singled out of all the cast of players to be disciplined."

Baker said Bates did not want to comment on his transfer, pending an appeal through school district procedures.

Dallas Independent School District Superintendent Marvin Edwards said that any action was based on a recommendation from Chad Woolery, assistant superintendent for secondary education.

Bench, 'Yaz' are in Hall of Fame

NEW YORK (AP) — Move over Ty, Willie, Babe and Hank. Johnny and Yaz have reached your lofty level, too.

The election of Johnny Bench and Carl Yastrzemski to the Hall of Fame Monday night was no surprise. The number of votes they got was.

Bench received 431 votes from 47 ballots cast by members of the Baseball Writers Association of America. Yastrzemski got 423 votes.

The size of their mandate put Bench and Yastrzemski in the upper echelon of baseball's superstars.

In order to be elected to the Hall of Fame, a player must be named on 75 percent of the ballots cast. Of the record 447 ballots this year, a player needed 336 votes to be elected.

Bench got 96.4 percent and Yastrzemski 94.63. Only Ty Cobb, 98.2 percent (222 of 226), and Hank Aaron, 97.8 (406 of 415), received higher percentages than Bench. Yastrzemski's percentage was the seventh-highest ever after Honus Wagner (95.13), Babe Ruth (95.13) and Willie Mays (94.67).

Bench and Yastrzemski also set a record for number of votes received. Mays had the previous mark for most votes, with 409 in 1979.

"There's a finality to it all, to reach a level so few people reach," Bench said after learning of his election. "I didn't think of percentage. ... I was just concerned with getting 75 percent. It's pretty elite company to be mentioned with Cobb and Aaron. It's hallowed ground in Cooperstown."

"Mickey Mantle was my first idol, but I played with a lot of special people — Clemente, Stargell and my teammates with the Reds — Rose, Morgan, Perez, Concepcion," Bench said.

Only one other player in this year's balloting received as many as 300 votes. Gaylord Perry, winner of 314 games, finished third with 304 and missed election by 32 votes.

"It's a thrill. It's the culmination of many years of hard work. It's something, as a player, you don't think about," Yastrzemski said of his election. "I was hoping it wouldn't be a disappointment. I was on guard about it. I'm sorry that Perry and Ferguson Jenkins didn't make it."

The election of Bench and Yastrzemski marks only the third time since 1936 that two players have been elected in their first year of eligibility.

Induction ceremonies at the Hall of Fame in Cooperstown, N.Y., are scheduled for July 23. Coincidentally, Cincinnati and Boston will play in the annual game on July 24.

Bench was selected the NL's starting catcher for the 1969 All-Star Game at the age of 22. Before he retired, everybody knew about him.

He holds the record for most homers by a catcher, 327. Overall, Bench hit 389 home runs and won the Gold Glove as catcher 10 times while helping the Reds win four pennants and the World Series in 1975 and 1976.

Bench played in four World Series, hitting .279 with five homers and 14 RBI. He appeared in 11 All-Star Games, hitting .370 with three home runs.

He is only the 13th catcher in the Hall of Fame, joining Yogi Berra, Roger Bresnahan, Roy Campanella, Mickey Cochrane, Bill Dickey, Buck Ewing, Rick Ferrell, Josh Gibson, Gabby Hartnett, King Kelly, Ernie Lombardi and Ray Schalk.

After Hall of Famer Ted Williams retired as Boston's left fielder following the 1960 season, Yastrzemski took over.

He finished with 3,419 hits and 452 home runs. He was named to 18 All-Star teams, won six Gold Gloves as Boston's left fielder and won the American League Most Valuable Player Award in 1967, when he won the Triple Crown and led Boston to the pennant.

In 1967, Yastrzemski hit .326 with 44 homers and 121 runs batted, but it was what he did down the stretch that got the Red Sox into the World Series. Yaz batted .444 with 26 RBI in his last 19 games. In his last 13 at-bats, he had 10 hits.

He also holds league records for most intentional walks, 190; most at-bats, 11,988; most plate appearances, 13,990, and most games, 3,308.

Rangers sign Buddy Bell

ARLINGTON, Texas (AP) — A Texas Rangers official, calling former third baseman Buddy Bell one of the team's most popular players ever, says Bell agreed to return on a one-year contract for the 1989 season.

"We are very pleased to welcome Buddy Bell back to the Texas Rangers," Tom Grieve, Rangers vice president and general manager, said Monday in announcing the deal. "Buddy's experience will be a real asset to our club in 1989."

The 37-year-old infielder played for the Rangers from 1979 to July 1985. He became a free agent after his 1988 club, the Houston Astros, failed to offer him a 1989 contract by the Dec. 20 deadline.

"He will be utilized in a designated hitter role and will also give us added versatility at both first and third base," said Grieve. "Buddy is one of the most popular players to ever wear a Rangers' uniform and we are happy to be able to sign him."

No other terms of the deal were disclosed. The Rangers, with Bell's signing, have 13 of 37 players on their roster under contract for 1989.

Bell, in his earlier stint with the Rangers, batted .295 with 87 homers and 496 RBI in 924 games. He won three team "Player of the Year" awards from 1979 to 1982.

"At the winter meetings in Atlanta, one of his agents came up and said that Buddy had a strong desire to return to the Rangers," said Grieve. "In the meantime, we have talked to him on the phone, and he does want to play in the American League."

Splitting the 1988 season between Cincinnati and Houston, Bell batted a combined .241 with seven homers and 40 RBI in 95 games.

NFL rules that Bengals can use quick-snap attack

CINCINNATI (AP) — The Cincinnati Bengals will be able to use their quick-snap attack in the Super Bowl.

The National Football League says the pre-game statement that prompted the Bengals to drop the quick snap from their game plan in the AFC Championship game resulted in a misunderstanding.

"The Bengals can have a quick snap," league spokesman Joe Browne said Monday evening.

Browne said the Bengals could have used the quick snap in their 21-10 victory Sunday over Buffalo at Riverfront Stadium, and that the league didn't intend to outlaw the tactic.

"I think there was miscommunication all around, including on the part of our office," Browne said.

The Bengals will be allowed to use the quick snap in the Super Bowl against San Francisco as long as they aren't in the process of changing offensive players when they decide to do so, Browne said.

The quick snap became the subject of a weeklong controversy building up to the AFC title game. Bills coach Marv Levy complained about the quick snap, used by the Bengals to get a penalty against a defense for too many men on the field.

Bengals coach Sam Wyche defended the quick snap as legal, and said he was angry when league officials released a statement before the game that seemed to outlaw it.

The statement said that a play would be nullified "if it is deemed by the game officials that the offense gained an unreasonable and unfair advantage by a quick snap of the ball, e.g. a quick snap which is intended to cause the defense to be penalized for too many players on the field."

That's the intent of the quick snap, so the Bengals didn't use it during the championship game for fear of being penalized. They did use their no-huddle offense, which wasn't affected by the ruling.

Wyche said Monday he was still troubled by the way the ruling was handed down before the championship game, and he wanted the quick snap allowed for the Super Bowl.

"I would hope that the Super Bowl will be played under the same rules as the regular season," Wyche said.

The quick snap is part of the Bengals' no-huddle offense. The Bengals gather near the line of scrimmage — in what they call their "sugar huddle" — then set up quickly and snap the ball if they see the opponent starting to make defensive substitutions, resulting in a penalty on the defense for too many men on the field.

The no-huddle approach is designed to prevent defenses from bringing in extra defensive backs or different linemen or linebackers for the next play. The Bengals use the no-huddle much more than any other NFL team — about 50 percent of the time, Wyche estimates.

Browne said Monday evening that the Bengals can have a quick snap to get a penalty on the defense, so long as they're not changing offensive players when they decide to quick snap. That means the Bengals can quick snap if they don't change their 11 offensive players on the field, or they can do so after completing a substitution.

Browne said they won't be permitted to start bringing substitutes on the field, then wave them back off in order to quick snap.

New UTEP coach is scouting for assistants

EL PASO, Texas (AP) — Texas-El Paso's new head football coach is in Nashville, Tenn., today to do some scouting — for assistant coaches.

David Lee spent his first day as coach on the phone Sunday, talking to prospective players and assistant coaches. He said he hopes to assemble his staff at the NCAA football coaches' convention in Nashville this week, and that he plans to name the offensive and defensive coordinators by Wednesday.

Lee, who had been the offensive coordinator at Arkansas since 1984, was named head coach at UTEP

Saturday. The 35-year-old replaces Bob Stull, who took the head coaching post at Missouri last month after turning the Miners from a laughingstock to a bowl team in three seasons.

Lee said his top priority now is to hire assistant coaches so they can go in search of recruits before national letter-of-intent signing day Feb. 8. Lee inherits a team with four offensive and seven defensive returning starters.

"I've been on the phone all day talking to coaches," Lee said Sunday.

49ers bask in glory of surprise triumph

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — The San Francisco 49ers are continuing to bask in the glow of a somewhat unexpected NFC title, taking two days off before they get serious about the Super Bowl.

But the team's veteran players vowed to guard against a letdown now that the 49ers' rocky season is a guaranteed success.

"We're not just going to the Super Bowl," said Roger Craig, who rushed for 68 yards in Sunday's 28-3 victory in Chicago. "We're going there to win."

But first, some time off. The 49ers will return to practice at their training facility in nearby Santa Clara, Calif., on Wednesday and head to Florida on Sunday.

San Francisco can become the first team to win three Super Bowls with a win on Jan. 22 in Miami. Its most recent triumph, in 1985, climaxed an 18-1 season. But this appearance will be a bit like the first one seven years ago, capping a season that did not appear destined for greatness.

Owner Eddie DeBartolo Jr. reportedly did not speak to Coach

Bill Walsh for six weeks after last year's 36-24 first-round playoff loss to Minnesota. He was jubilant after the Jan. 1 revenge win over the Vikings and ecstatic after the triumph at frozen Soldier Field.

DeBartolo hugged Walsh and several players on the sideline and in the locker room afterward, where he was crying for "the first time I can remember." He told reporters this Super Bowl trip is the biggest surprise of the three.

"This one takes the cake," the owner said. "I'm surprised. I never expected this to happen when we were 6-5. But then, I'm a pessimist."

His players claim to be less so, although 13-year veteran center Randy Cross admitted that he "hadn't been planning" on the trip to Miami.

"There were times when the only people who thought we could get there were the 45 players on the team," said linebacker Michael Walter, who led the 49ers in tackles during the regular season and had a team-high 11 on Sunday.

"People were writing us off," he said. "This is an up-and-down team. We had a few weeks where we were the lowlifes in town."

Not any more. Quarterback Joe Montana, who threw for 288 yards and three touchdowns on a day when the Bears' pass rush and 29-mph winds were expected to prevail, has returned to the heights of glory in the Bay area after being the target of criticism last fall.

Even Montana's teammates continued to hand out the compliments long after the game was over.

"I never remember Joe being sharper than he was today," said Jerry Rice, recipient of five Montana TD passes in the last two games. "He read their coverages, he moved in the pocket to buy time, he threw great passes despite the cold weather and swirling winds. He looked like he was having a good time ..."

"Joe's been around a long time, but he just seems to get better every year."

Veteran Bill Terry dies at age 90

Associated Press

When Bill Terry turned 90 last October, his thoughts turned to making the trip to Cooperstown for the summer's Hall of Fame ceremonies. But this year's induction will have to go on without one of baseball's greatest players.

Terry, the last National League player to bat .400, died Monday in Jacksonville, Fla., of natural causes. He was a first baseman with the New York Giants from 1923-1936, batting .341 lifetime, and also managed the Giants from 1932-1941, winning three pennants and one World Series.

Terry, a left-handed hitter, batted .401 in 1930 and few National Leaguers have approached it since.

Woman's Health

CANCER OF THE UTERUS By Robert Park, M.D.

If asked, most women could probably identify and list the warning signs of breast cancer, the most common type of cancer to affect females. Yet, not many women are familiar with cancer of the lining of their uterus (endometrium).

Cancer of the uterus is more likely to appear in older women who have reached menopause, but it can show up in younger women. Women who are overweight, have had very irregular or infrequent periods, have been infertile, and go through menopause at a later age are more likely to develop this disease. Cancer of the uterus is also more common in women who have taken large doses of estrogen without another hormone, progesterone, for long periods of time.

Abnormal bleeding is the main symptom of endometrial cancer. In some cases there may be a vaginal discharge or pain, but these symptoms could be caused by other, noncancerous problems.

At the first sign of abnormal bleeding or any bleeding after menopause you should talk to your doctor. He or she may recommend having a small piece of tissue removed from the uterus to be tested. Although this "endometrial biopsy" can be painful, it takes only a minute or so and is a very accurate way to tell what is causing the bleeding.

Endometrial cancer has a very good chance of being cured when discovered and treated at an early stage. Treatment always depends on a variety of things, including the extent of the disease and the woman's health, but the first step almost always is a hysterectomy—a surgical procedure to remove the uterus.

In the past, there have been concerns that women taking estrogen replacement therapy after menopause run a higher risk of developing endometrial cancer. What doctors now know is that by lowering the amount of estrogen given and adding another hormone, progesterone, the risk of cancer is almost eliminated. It's important, though, that if you are taking estrogen or are planning to, you should understand the risks and benefits of this medication.

The good news about endometrial cancer is that the number of cases are decreasing. You can help keep the news good by seeing your doctor regularly, even if you have gone through menopause, and calling him or her at the first signs of anything unusual.

Secret to excellent beef jerky divulged

LUBBOCK, Texas (AP) — While driving on a long haul across the country, sitting in a deer blind waiting for a 10-pointer buck to show or reading a good book, beef jerky is one snack that helps pass the time.

Jerky, is defined as meat that has been cut into long strips and dried, traditionally in the sun. Many aficionados of the process often cure the meat with salt and other spices before drying the meat.

Preserving meat with the aid of salt can be traced back to the Egyptians. During medieval times, meat was preserved by either dry-salting, burying the meat on a granular bed of salt, or brine-curing, soaking the meat in a strong salt solution.

However, the natives of North and South America can be credited with developing dried beef that more closely resembles the beef jerky prepared today. According to "Food in History" by Reay Tannahill, Indians in the cold northern regions of North America developed pemmican — dried, thin meat slices that had been pounded to shreds and mixed with melted fat and wild berries.

The term "jerky," however, comes from the south American term "charqui," which natives made by slicing meat into strips and soaking them in brine or rubbing them with salt. According to Tannahill, the strips were then rolled up in animal skins for 10 to 12 hours and then hung to dry in the sun.

Today, beef jerky comes in a variety of shapes, sizes and flavors. Some beef jerky connoisseurs prefer a dry, hard jerky while others like thick pieces of dried meat that are soft in side. "The hardest thing I have found about making jerky is trying to satisfy everybody," said Rod Klemke, who along with his wife, Judy, owns Slaton Packing Co.

"You'd be surprised at the clientele that buys beef jerky," Klemke said. "Truck drivers buy more beef jerky than anybody else because they're on the road, and it's better than cigarettes."

Each week, Klemke makes about 55 pounds of beef jerky and several more pounds of turkey jerky.

"You can make jerky out of any kind of meat. They used to make it out of snake years ago," said Dee Simmons, who is one of the owners of Simmons Brothers Meat Market. The company also produces a few pounds of jerky each week.

The best cuts of meat to use in making jerky are flanks and inside rounds, Klemke and Simmons said. The meat is cut into strips between 1/4 and 1/2 inch thick. Klemke uses only breast meat to make turkey jerky.

The secret to making good jerky, according to Klemke, is in the spices and smoking process. And, just as no two chili cooks follow the same recipe, the right spices for beef jerky vary from cook to cook.

Mrs. Klemke seasons the meat with salt, pepper, cure, garlic and monosodium glutamate and lets it marinate for 24 to 48 hours.

"The colder it is, the more time it takes to marinate," Klemke said.

The Simmons brothers, however, marinate their beef in liquid smoke, garlic and a brown sugar cure for about 24 hours.

After the meat is marinated, Klemke hangs it on hooks on a cart, which then is rolled into a smoker to be cooked for about 10 hours. The smoker speeds up the drying process and adds extra flavor to the meat. Another advantage of the smoking process is that the low heat cooks out any fat in the meat.

For the first two hours, no smoke is generated in Kleke's smoker to make the meat sticky. Then, smoke is generated for six hours with the aid of hickory chips. When the meat looks ready to Klemke, he removes the rack from the smoker.

Beef jerky also can be made at home in an oven. The thick strips of meat are laid across or hung by pieces of string from the oven racks. The oven temperature then is set as low as possible and the door propped slightly open to allow air to circulate.

The meat for oven-dried beef jerky should be fat-free because the fat will cause the meat to go rancid. Also, the time involved in drying the meat ranges from 24 to 48 hours, depending on its thickness. The thicker the meat, the longer it takes to cook.

Klemke said that raw meat shrinks about 70 percent during the drying process. He recommended that a beginner making jerky at home not buy more than five to eight pounds of meat because of the cost involved.

The best way to store beef jerky is in the refrigerator. Although the moisture in the refrigerator will make the jerky softer, it can be made harder if set out on a kitchen counter for a day or two, Klemke said.

Meeting held by Auxiliary

The Ladies Auxiliary to VFW Post 4818 met recently in the Post Home. The meeting was preceded by a chili supper.

President Marta Williams opened the regular meeting and conducted it according to ritual. Reports were given, including the report on the auction held Dec. 9, which was termed a success.

At the annual Christmas party, $50 was donated to the Christmas Stocking Fund. Fruit baskets were delivered to veterans of both World Wars and to a Gold Star mother in a nursing home. Several food baskets were delivered to needy families in Hereford.

Secret Pals were selected for the coming year.

Members attending were: Williams, Erma Murphy, Marie Goheen, Betty Boggs, Essie Martin, Edith Richardson, Terry Ryan, Milly Deyke and Leone Buckley.

The next meeting is set for Monday, Jan. 16 at 7:30 p.m. at the Post home.

Garden Beautiful meets

Garden Beautiful Club met Friday at the home of Mrs. W.W. Gilbreath. Phung Emmons was co-hostess.

After refreshments of coffee, tea, cheese sandwiches, and fresh apple cake were served, Marguerite Newell presided at the business meeting.

Inez Witherspoon reported on the Christmas coffee that was held at the National Cowgirl Hall of Fame where there were 98 in attendance. Approximately $70 was collected to send to Girlstown.

Nadine Hill introduced Robin Roth, who gave the program concerning her trip to Russia.

Two new members, Pat Northcut and Jerry Jackson, were introduced by Newell.

Members present included Ina Mae Gilbreath, Audine Detman, Dorothy Noland, Helen Spinks, Jean Dowell, Margaret Young, Witherspoon, Bobbie Metcalf, Winnie Wiseman, Hill, Newell, Louella Cowser, Dottie Darden, Emmons, and R. Gilbreath.

PALM BEACH GARDENS, Fla. (AP) — It didn't get a lot of publicity although it's their business.

The NBA Public Relations Directors Association recently named Tim Hallam of the Chicago Bulls as its president. The PR group also elected Josh Rosenfeld as vice president, Bill Krefeldt of Utah as secretary and Harvy Pollack of Philadelphia as treasurer.

Budget could punish farmers

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan's last-gasp budget plan to curb Agriculture Department spending by cutting farm commodity subsidies and rural development programs is headed for a chilly reception in Congress.

The budget proposals sent to Capitol Hill on Monday included a plan to cut USDA spending in fiscal 1990 by 19 percent to $42.4 billion from $52.1 billion currently. The new fiscal year begins Oct. 1.

Part of the blueprint included old plans that had been rejected before, such as a proposal to eliminate federal school lunch subsidies for children of upper-income families, requiring them to pay 26 cents more per meal. The savings would be more than $3 million a day.

Rep. Kika de la Garza, D-Texas, chairman of the House Agriculture Committee, said the final Reagan budget "appears to be deliberately punitive toward agriculture" and noted that Congress has already cut federal spending on agriculture by $30 billion since the administration came into office.

"I have never been one to pronounce any president's budget dead on arrival, but I am inclined to think that this one was probably dead before arrival," de la Garza said.

Sen. Patrick Leahy, D-Vt., chairman of the Senate Agriculture Committee, called the Reagan budget "largely irrelevant" but added: "It might, of course, have been designed to make a Bush budget appear kinder and gentler."

Spending on the department's Commodity Credit Corp. programs, which includes wheat, corn and other major crop supports, would decline to a six-year low of less than $11.6 billion from more than $13.8 billion in 1989. The peak was $25.8 billion in 1986.

The budget for CCC spending included $1.1 billion of unspecified cuts that will be decided by the incoming Bush administration and Congress. Future spending reductions in CCC programs could be in the range of $2 billion to $2.5 billion annually for 1991 through 1994.

Leahy said the Reagan blueprint for cutting farm programs raises a question of whether the administration "actually means to disarm unilaterally just two months before the next round of trade talks."

The administration has urged under the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade that all subsidies and other practices that interfere with free trade be eliminated, but the idea hasn't caught on.

"Cutting farm programs before obtaining an agreement from our trading partners to do the same seems likely to undermine our GATT negotiating position," Leahy said in a statement.

Deputy Secretary Peter Myers said no legislation to carry out the CCC proposal would be sent to Congress at this time.

"We're not going to be that presumptive," Myers said. "We're going to say: 'Congress, here's a way you can cut $1.1 billion. Do you want to wrestle with it?' We think the Bush administration should have the prerogative to look at it. It's a recommendation. It's an option."

The Reagan budget proposal for operating CCC's farm programs would include a 5 percent reduction in target prices beginning with the 1990 crops, and slightly larger cuts the following three years. Target prices are used to compute federal payments to farmers when market prices fall short.

Robert A. Denman, director of international and public affairs for the National Farmers Union, said the proposed 5 percent cut in crop target prices for 1990 on top of reductions already specified by the 1985 farm law may be part of the Reagan budget plan but hoped that "it wouldn't necessarily be in a Bush budget" for the nation's farmers.

The 1990 budget seeks to eliminate school lunch subsidies for non-needy children. Needy children would continue getting free or reduced-price meals.

But a child from a family having an income of more than 185 percent of the official poverty line — $21,563 a year for a family of four — would have to pay about 26 cents more per day at the school cafeteria, unless the states or local districts made up the difference.

Overall food and consumer services, which take almost half of the USDA's annual budget, would remain mostly intact, however. Total spending would be almost $20.6 billion, down from $21.3 billion this year. Food stamps, which serve more than 18 million people, are expected to cost about $12.7 billion, compared with almost $12.9 billion currently.

Department budget analysts said that spending for small community and rural development would drop to $3.4 billion from more than $9.4 billion this year. Existing housing loans and grants, at a spending level of $3.36 billion this year, would be terminated in favor of a housing voucher program.

Farm loans of the Farmers Home Administration would be reduced to $3.7 billion from $4.9 billion this year and "will continue the shift from direct loans to guaranteed loans" established by the 1985 farm law, the report said. Guaranteed operating loans are expected to increase to $2.8 billion from $2.6 billion this year.

But FmHA disaster loans, reflecting hoped-for better weather conditions, are expected to decline to around $50 million from $600 million this year.

The budget report said FmHA will continue to help farm borrowers reschedule overdue loans so they can stay in business. However, many have gone under and the FmHA currently holds almost 5,000 farms in its inventory with a market value of about $650 million.

Some increases were called for in a number of USDA programs, including research and education, soil and water conservation, and food safety and inspection services.

Also, the administration seeks $250 million in supplemental financing this fiscal year to help the Forest Service pay for firefighting. A new plan was outlined to partially pay for firefighting in the future by using money collected from timber sales and mining on federal lands.

Officials say farmers need firm budget stand

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — Americans must be better educated about the work and dilemmas of farmers, who themselves should not stand for drastic cuts in federal farm programs, delegates to the American Farm Bureau Federation meeting have been told.

U.S. Rep. Kika de la Garza, D-Mission and chairman of the House Agriculture Committee, held up a copy of the proposed budget introduced by President Reagan on Monday and said farmers rarely are given credit for slashing spending.

Reagan's budget proposes a 19 percent cut in Agriculture Department spending in the 1990 fiscal year, to $42.4 billion, down from the estimated outlays of $52.1 billion in the current fiscal year.

"The Pentagon stumbles over more money in one day than the total agriculture budget for one year," de la Garza said.

"We have complied with Gramm-Rudman. We cut through the muscle. We cut through the bone and now they want us to get down to the marrow," he said. De la Garza said he supported agriculture education programs that would help youngsters learn about the physical and economical hardships of farming.

"We are getting away from the land, the culture and the morals and we need to have (agriculture) language courses in the high schools so they know what we are talking about," de la Garza said.

"We need them to know that a cow is more than 'moo' and they need to know the difference between a cow and a bull or a bull and an elk," he said.

Dean Kleckner, president of the farm bureau, suggested that biotechnology research would help the industry.

"If biotechnology is allowed to develop and grow, it can hold the answer to many of the environmental concerns raised by the widespread use of farm chemicals," Kleckner said.

"Science may devise new breeds of plants and animals that can become disease resistant, thrive on very little moisture or stand great extremes in temperature," he said.

De la Garza and Sen. Charles Grassley, R-Iowa, a member of the Senate Agriculture Committee, said the United States needs to expand current markets and open new ones for American farmers to survive.

"What we have to do is balance the playing field," said de la Garza, who criticized the European Community's ban on hormone-treated U.S. beef into that part of the world.

Grassley, meanwhile, attacked the proposed 50 percent pay raise for members of Congress and urged delegates to express their outrage to their representatives.

Kleckner, an Iowa farmer who also is a member of the Federal Economic Commission, also was enraged about the proposal.

"I venture to guess that very few of us think Congress is underpaid even if this is the second time in recent years that the same congressional committee has told us that it truly is," he said.

U.S. Sen. Phil Gramm, R-Texas, who also spoke to the delegates, said he would vote "no" for the pay increase.

"The timing could not be worse in giving Congress a whopping increase," Gramm said.

More than 5,000 delegates are attending the 70th annual farm bureau meeting, which has included seminars and debates that range from environmental and economic issues to those dealing with stress and alcohol abuse.

The 70th meeting will conclude Thursday.

Astronomers find rare 'star-eater'

BOSTON (AP) — Astronomers have spotted a star as it devoured its companion orb, and perhaps solved a celestial mystery.

Scientists have long argued about how some superdense stars called pulsars could get themselves spinning hundreds of times a second. The question may now be answered by the discovery of a black widow binary — a star that like the spider uses its companion and then destroys it.

If current theories are correct, the star represents a celestial missing link, a bridge between fast-spinning stars that have mates and those that do not.

The combination of the star and its companion, labeled PSR 1567-20 in astronomers' shorthand, was detected last spring by Andrew Fruchter of the Carnegie Institution in Washington.

At a meeting Monday of the American Astronomical Society, scientists described the significance of the find in understanding the life and death of the stars.

The duo is made up of a pulsar, an incredibly dense dead star that transmits rhythmic beats of radar. It is orbited by a much larger ordinary star known as a brown dwarf.

Astronomers have evidence that the pulsar is transmitting a powerful blast of energy that is literally blowing its companion away. They believe this is the late phase of a long, one-sided relationship between the two in which the pulsar steals matter from its mate to boost its speed, then turns on it with a blaze of atomic particles.

"The companion is being destroyed," said Frederic A. Rasio of Cornell University. "It is constantly losing matter. Eventually it could completely disappear."

The pulsar is one of six known pulsars that spin extremely rapidly. The newly discovered pair is important because they seem to help explain how they get to spin so fast.

"It offers a missing link between two classes of objects," said Steve Maran of NASA's Goddard Space Flight Center. "That's why astronomers are so excited."

A pulsar is the collapsed remains of a large star that has exploded in a spectacular disaster called a supernova. Pulsars emit no light, but broadcast twin rotating beams of radar, like lighthouses in the sky.

While a pulsar is only 14 miles across, its mass is 50 percent greater than the sun. One teaspoon of pulsar matter weighs billions of tons.

Cycling hottest craze

The bicycle was introduced in the United States over 10 years ago as a means of transportation. Today, cycling is the hottest fitness craze and the second largest participatory sport in the country.

Bicycles and related soft goods such as fashion apparel, helmets and accessories comprise a $6.1 billion industry. The Bicycle Federation of America reports that the number of American cycling enthusiasts has reached 85 million people.

Bike sales have almost doubled over the last five years, with bicycle imports up to $12.1 million annually.

Seasoned fitness buffs and beginning exercisers alike are turning toward cycling as a complementary or even as an alternative form of exercise. Why? Because cycling is a cardiovascular, impact-free workout from which people of all shapes, sizes and ages may benefit.

"Over the last 10 years, cycling has grown at an exceptional rate in this country," according to Lewis Rothlein, editor of Women's Sport and Fitness Magazine. "Women are really at the forefront of that growth, with 55 percent of all cyclists being women."

Cycling is a good entry-level physical activity that tones and strengthens the large muscles in the legs with little or no stress on the joints, in comparison to running or aerobics.

It is one of the few exercises in which performance and weight control directly relate to food intake. Not only does cycling before a meal inhibit one's appetite, but also the type of food eaten largely determines workout performance.

According to Carol Adydk, health and fitness spokesperson for Weight Watchers Frozen Foods and member of the Weight Watchers Women's Cycling Team, "To ensure maximum benefits from a fitness program, combine exercise with a balanced diet."

"A high energy sports diet, which emphasizes complex carbohydrates like pasta, potatoes, rice, noodles and bread, will best fuel muscles before and during a ride."

"For cardiovascular development and to burn fat, cyclists should try to maintain 60 percent to 85 percent of their maximum heartbeat while riding," continued Addy.

"This can be determined roughly by subtracting one's age from 220 and multiplying that number by between .6 and .85. This would be the optimal range for heart rate in heartbeats per minute for maximum aerobic benefit."

To build stamina, cyclists should ride a minimum of three times per week, starting with a comfortable distance and increasing that distance by about 10 percent each week, suggested Addy.

In order to prevent injury, pulled muscles and the stiffness that follows a ride, a regular warmup and cool down are essential before and after a cycling workout.

As with all exercise, it is important to consult a doctor before beginning an exercise program.

Contributing to the popularity of cycling is the enjoyment of the sport. Cyclists can maintain or improve their muscle tone, endurance and heart rate while experiencing the exhilaration of speed and fresh air without the tedium of an indoor workout.

Cholesterol testing

Phyllis Cornelius, left, a nursing volunteer for the Deaf Smith County chapter of the American Red Cross, reviews the results of a cholesterol test with a client at the "Treat Your Body Better in '89" Health Fair held Saturday at the Hereford Community Center. The Health Fair was co-sponsored by the Red Cross, YMCA and the Extension Service.

WMU hears program on Mechanics of Home Missions

The general meeting of Women's Missionary Union of First Baptist Church met Wednesday morning in Kinsey Parlor for a program and business meeting.

Bonnie Sublett, president of the group, presided and asked for prayer requests for sick, bereaved, and other needs. Jerry Jackson led the prayer.

The title of the program was "Mechanics of Home Missions." Ella Oglesby, leader, introduced the study. Jackson and Francis Crume performed a skit about doing mission action to stay out of a rut.

Grace Covington and Sublett read the Scripture, 1 Cor. 12:12-31. They emphasized verse 12, which stated, "Christ is like a single body, which has many parts, it is still one body even though it is made up of different parts." They noted that this passage meant the group must work cooperatively with one another to get things done effectively.

Leatrus Clark, Jennie Terrell, and Helen Eades told how the Mount Zion Baptist Association in North Carolina, with its many volunteers from the many churches, carried on their work. That association helps churches join together to do a lot of creative ministries. Clark told about the Thrift Store, Flea Market, "The Oasis." Eades focused on the ministry of the Red Horse Truck Stop. Terrell described the ministries for migrants, prisoners, Baptist students, truckers, hungry people, and homeless people were coordinated. Oglesby closed with prayer.

In the business meeting that followed, Costaline Lee, mission action director, reported on a successful shopping spree at Westgate and Golden Plains. Crume, enlistment/enlargement director, reported on a successful Christmas tea with 47 present.

Sublett announced that ABA WMU Leadership Training is set 7-9 p.m. Jan. 23 at South Georgia Church.

Marie Stringer gave the prayer calendar. She told about a couple she knew in Oklahoma, The Cottens, who ministered in Home Missions.

Loleta Vinson and Clark were hostesses to Thelma Auten, Lee, Lucy Kirksey, Bea Hutson, Opal Robertson, Clovis Seago, Terrell, Margaret Young, Eades, Crume, Clark, Oglesby, Covington, Sublett, Ella Caudle, Eunice Boyer, and Stringer.

Club meets

The Bud to Blossom Garden Club met recently in the home of Phyllis Brown.

Roll call was answered with each member giving an interesting fact about butterflies.

The Conservation Series focused on water and was given by Joanne Blackwell. Each member told what they did around their home to conserve water.

A slide program entitled "Butterflies in Harmony with Nature" was presented by Cathy Richardson.

Jane White gave a report of the December Festival of Trees held at the Amarillo Garden Center.

Members present included: Wilma Bryan, Naomi Hare, Mildred Fuhrmann, Ursalee Jacobsen, Billie Johnson, Jane White, Cathy Richardson, Phyllis Brown, and Blackwell.

Eugenia Toland, former SPGS president, will present "Preparation for Research" at 12:45 p.m. and "Pointers on South Carolina Research" at 1:30 p.m.

Demonstration of Computer Genealogy Programs will begin at 2:30 p.m. Registrants will have an opportunity at the keyboard of various computers to try out software programs for the construction of ancestry charts, family linkage, word processing, modem communications and electronic genealogy bulletin boards. Many of the 24 SPGS librarians will be on hand at the workshop tables in the auditorium to answer questions and to provide research recommendations.

Mardema Ogletree will present "Researching Land Records" at 6:30 p.m. Classes for beginning genealogists will be taught at 1:30 p.m. by Mary McClurg and at 6:30 p.m. by John M. Franklin. For additional details, call Mrs. Ogletree at 799-8748.

Let us show you a Texas you've never seen before.

- All 172 pages in full color
- Each page measures a large 15 x 11 inches
- Presents the entire state in stunning detail
- Appendices and specialty maps of many different features

THE ROADS OF TEXAS is the culmination of a mammoth project that has involved many individuals for over two years. When you get your copy of THE ROADS OF TEXAS you'll wonder how you ever traveled the state without it.

This 172 page atlas contains maps that show the complete Texas road system (all 284,000 miles) plus just about every city and community! Texas A&M University Cartographics Laboratory staff members produced the maps, based on county maps from the State Department of Highways and Public Transportation. The details shown are amazing—county and local roads, lakes, reservoirs, streams, dams, historic sites, pumping stations, golf courses, cemeteries, mines and many other features too numerous to list.

Become one of the first in our community to own a copy of this magnificent atlas.

What they're saying about "The Roads of Texas"

"When you get your copy of THE ROADS OF TEXAS... you'll wonder how you ever travelled the state without it."
Texas Highways Magazine
October, 1988

"For details of Texas terrain, oil company maps and the State's Official Highway Map can't match THE ROADS OF TEXAS."
