Chernenko leads funeral

sociated Press Writer

MOSCOW (AP) - Konstantin U. Chernenko, ideologist for the Communist Party, will lead the state funeral for Soviet President Yuri V. Andropov, whose death leaves Kremlin leaders seeking a new party chief for the second time in 15 months.

As funeral preparations began, the question of succession was unsettled.

In Washington, the White House said President Reagan decided not to attend the funeral on Tuesday and chose Vice President George Bush to represent the United States

A message from Reagan on Andropov's death expressed hope for "genuine cooperation with the Soviet Union to make the world better."

Andropov, the 69-year-old former chief of the KGB, died Thursday, but his death was not announced until Friday afternoon, almost 24 hours later. An official statement said the cause was "heart and vascular insufficiency."

Dozens of Muscovites braved the bitter weather today to gather in knots outside kiosks selling black-bordered newspapers carrying Andropov's portrait and the official death reports.

In the national dailies, Andropov's photograph was Reagan sends VP Bush flanked by statements from the Communist Party and government praising him and assuring Soviets that nation's "Leninist course is unflagging The (Communist Party) will continue perserveringly and purposely to pursue its line."

Flags flew at half-staff in the winter wind over the Kremlin ramparts, at whose base Andropov's body will be interred beneath the hallowed cobblestones of Red Square — the symbolic center of Soviet power.

The House of Unions was prepared for the bier containing Andropov's body, which will lie in state during the first three days of national mourning.

The Funeral Organizing Commission announced that Andropov's funeral would be at noon Tuesday. The nation will observe five minutes of silence accompanied by a three-minute blast of every ship, train and factory whistle in the Soviet Union.

Andropov became party general secretary two days after the death of Leonid I. Brezhnev on Nov. 10, 1982. In June he assumed the post of president, or nominal head of Andropov's death raised these questions: Who will succeed him? What course will Soviet policy — one of the most important factors in shaping the face of the modern world - follow?

Few people expected any radical or swift changes from the conservative and slowmoving Kremlin.

Kremlin watchers were waiting for the announcement of who would head the funeral commission. In the past, that post has gone to the man tabbed to succeed a deceased party chief or other major official.

Andropov directed Brezhnev's funeral and quickly assumed power in the party. But Friday's announcement designating Chernenko left unclear whether the succession question had been settled.

The 72-year-old Chernenko, by right of protocol, is the senior party secretary after the incumbent general secretary.

It is risky to make flat predictions about the shadowy workings of the Soviet Politburo, but few outsiders expected Chernenko to be named general secretary. It seemed more likely that had not been decided, or that if one had been picked, he was chosen from among the younger Politburo members.

In both cases, the job of funeral commission chief would naturally fall to Chernenko, who led the procession of Politburo members at the Nov. 7 Revolution Day parade when Andropov was too sick to appear and who nominated Andropov as general secretary in November 1982.

"The choice, if it has been made, may be a man who does not have the personal power, standing and seniority that Andropov enjoyed and therefore cannot usurp protocol by heading the funeral commission," one Western diplomat speculated.

Among the strong contenders listed by Western analysts are Grigory V. Romanov, 61, head of the party discipline committee; and Mikhail S. Gorbachev, 52, who assumed important domestic and foreign policy roles under Andropov.

Both are members of the Central Committee secretariat, in the past a prerequisite to become general secretary. Chernenko is the only other the company of failing to keep accurate payroll records, failing to disclose them the terms and conditions of their employment and failing to comply with work agreements made with the plaintiffs.

Based on testimony heard Thursday, Robinson will have to determine if Barrett-Fisher should indeed be required to comply with FLCRA regulations.

Defense lawyers for the company say Barrett-Fisher was not a farm labor contractor within the meaning of FLCRA because the plaintiffs were not migrant workers within the meaning of the FLCRA and they were not engaged in agricultural employment as defined by that act.

They also say the defendants were exempt from the definition of farm labor contractor because Barrett-Fisher was a packing shed operator which engaged in farm labor contracting activities solely for its own operation and that Ramiro Ramos, a seasonal employee of the company, was exempt because he engaged in farm labor contracting activities solely for his employer on no more than an incidental basis.

Attorneys for Barrett-Fisher also said on Thursday that the company is exempt from FLCRA regulations because it does not engage in farming.

Three hearings conducted

Three parole revocation hearings were held this week in 222nd District Court.

Donald Cockrum, originally sentenced on a DWI charge, had his probation revoked by District Judge Wesley Gulley and was sentenced to nine months in the Deaf Smith County Jail. He was also fined $1,000.

Anthony Levario, sentenced on a conviction of theft over $200 and under $10,000, was found guilty of violating probation and sentenced to five years in the Texas Department of Corrections. A $2,500 fine was assessed.

Probation was modified and new monthly payments set in the case involving Michael Lee, placed on probation after being convicted of criminal mischief. He had also been charged with violation of probation.

On Friday, Margarito Flores was found guilty of DWI, ubsequent offense. Flores was sentenced to three years in the TDC, which was probated, and fined $1,000. Gulley/ also ordered the defendant to complete a safe driving school conducted by Amarillo College.

Santos Ortez pleaded guilty and was convicted of burglary of a habitation. He was given a suspended sixyear prison sentence and fined $1,500.

"bubble boy," removed from his germ-free plastic environment this week when he developed diarrhea and vomiting, probably can blame his symptoms on his emerging immune system, his doctor says.

Tests in the last week have turned up normal levels of immunoglobulin and plasma in 12-year-old David's system, Dr. William Shearer said at a news conference.

"Something has happened in David's system," Shearer said. "I can assure you this is not an accident." He said he suspects the boy's long dormant natural resistance has been jolted into action for the first time, perhaps by a transplant of one marrow from his 15-year-old sister.

HOUSTON (AP) - A Mexican native has sued U.S. immigration officials for $500,000, claiming they denied him medical treatment for injuries he suffered in a car wreck

The suit was filed Friday in federal court in Houston.

Garcia's attorney, Jose Medina, said his client, an illegal alien who lived in El Campo for several years, was treated at the hospital for multiple injuries for about four days after a car wreck. But when hospital officials discovered the plant worker had no insurance, they notified the INS, Medina said.

Couldn't look killer in eye

BEAUMONT, Texas (AP) - A judge said he couldn't look James David Autry in the eye when he set a new execution date for the condemned killer who earlier escaped death by less than 30 minutes.

"I think this time it's going to happen, and I think he was thinking the same thing. It bothered me to look at him," State District Judge Leonard Giblin said Friday after ordering prison officials to kill Autry with a chemical injection before sunrise on March 14.

Autry stared at the floor as Giblin pronounced the sentence, the fourth set since November 1982.

Autry, a 29-year-old drifter from Amarillo, was convicted of killing a Port Arthur convenience store clerk during an April 20, 1980 robbery. Evidence showed that Autry killed Shirley Drouet rather than pay $2.70 cents for a six-pack of beer.

Challenger glides smoothly

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) - Challenger and its five-man crew swooped out of orbit today and glided smoothly to the shuttle's first landing at its home port in Florida, after a mission of free-flying space walks and failed satellites.

The 100-ton space plane, its dash across central Florida heralded by sonic booms, dropped out of a clear sky and onto a 15,000-foot concrete runway just four miles from the launch pad where the astronauts started their voyage eight days ago. They had traveled 2.9 million miles.

The center-line touchdown, with commander Vance Brand at the controls, came 13 minutes after sunrise, at 7:17 a.m. EST. The runway was flanked by a moat where 150 alligators lurk and wild pigs feed.

'Welcome home, Challenger. Fantastic!" Mission Control radioed as the ship rolled to a stop.

Economists undisturbed by jump

January's bigger-than-expected increase in wholesale prices was a "blip" resulting partly from the harsh winter and doesn't mean the nation is returning to double-digit inflation, a private economist and an administration spokesman say.

Neither the inflation report nor the death of Soviet President Yuri Andropov appeared to have much impact on the stock market or other U.S. financial exchanges Friday. Word had circulated for several months that Andropov was gravely ill.

In Washington, meanwhile, a source in the Federal Trade Commission said the agency's staff recommended that Texaco Inc. be given antitrust clearance for its proposed $10.1 billion takeover of Getty Oil Co., in what would be the largest corporate marriage in history.

Of East-West talks

Europeans hope for resumption

LONDON (AP) - Western Europeans will be concerned above all that the Soviet leader who succeeds Yuri V. Andropov will agree to return to nuclear arms talks and will genuinely seek to relieve the current strain on East-West relations.

Western specialists on the Soviet Union and diplomatic sources here strongly doubted that, whoever takes Andropov's post, there would be a perceptible change at once in the Soviet attitude on arms negotiations. But the hope for dialogue seemed more realistic. Andropov's death was announced in Moscow on Friday, a day after he expired.

Bush to head U.S. delegation

By BARRY SCHWEID Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) —

F. D. DAY HOUSE

The Reagan administration has offered to work with the Soviet Union "to make the world a safer place" and designated Vice President George Bush to head the U.S. delegation to Yuri Andropov's funeral.

Calling for a resumption of arms control talks, Secretary of State George P. Shultz said Friday the Unitethe United States wants to reduce the risks of war by engaging the new Kremlin leadership in "a constructive and realistic dialogue."

Administration officials also are suggesting that President Reagan might try arrange

"get-acquainted" session with the new leader in coming months. Though not expected to be a full-blown summit, the meeting's purpose would be to warm chilly Soviet-American relations that have existed during Reagan's tenure in office.

An official U.S. statement to the Soviet Union extended condolences on President Andropov's death and invited his successor "to respond in kind" to the U.S. pledge to "work to build a more stable and more positive relation-

Reagan sent a personal message of "condolences and sympathies" from his vacation ranch in California and decided not to attend next Tuesday's ceremony in Red Square. U.S. officials said he would be holding meetings at the White House with King Hussein of Jordan and President Hosni Mubarak of Egypt.

Reagan also chose not to attend Leonid Brezhnev's funeral in November 1982. This generated criticism that the president had lost an opportunity to establish direct contact with leaders in the Kremlin.

The president's message expressed hope for "genuine cooperation with the Soviet Union to make the world better," said Larry Speakes, the deputy White House

It was not immediately clear whether Reagan would authorize Bush to hold policy talks in Moscow

Former U.S. national security adviser Zbigniew Brzezinski said in an interview that Reagan should propose through the vice president a "working meeting" next spring between him and Andropov's successor.

The last meeting between the heads of the U.S. and Soviet governments was held in Vienna in 1979 when President Carter and Brezhnev signed the second strategic arms control agreement.

Speculation on Andropov's successor centered on Konstantin Chernenko, Grigory Romanov and Mikhail Gorbachev, the only Soviet officials who are both full members of the Politburo and in the Communist party secretariat.

Chernenko, the chief party ideologist and Brezhnev protege, was put in charge of funeral arrangements. The honor indicated Chernenko, who is 73, might have the inside track to succeed Andropov. A top Reagan administration analyst called him "the best bet but not a shoo-in."

However, other Kremlinwatchers in the U.S. intelligence community and on university campuses thought Romanov, the former party boss of Leningrad, or Gorbachev, who has been in charge of agriculture, were more likely choices.

party secretary on the Polit-Defense Minister Dmitry

F. Ustinov is expected to play a large role in the succession stakes through his position as head of the powerful armed forces, and because of his reported role as day-to-day Politburo chief when Andropov was seriously ill in recent months. Ustinov is said to have been instrumental in Andropov's rise, but at 75, he seems an unlikely candidate for general secretary. None of the other newly prominent or young Politburo members like Mikhail S. Solomentsev, 70, Geidar S. Aliev, 60, and Vitaly I. Vorotnikov, 57, is on the secretariat. Solomentsev may be considered too old unless the Kremlin decides to have an interim leadership. Aliev's Moslem heritage is considered a serious handicap, and Vorotnikov, who only became a full Politburo member in December, is seen as being too fresh.

But, in sharp contrast with the last succession, no candidate appeared to have an absolute edge and none was flatly ruled out of the running one day after Andropov died. The Soviet Union faces the foreign policy issues that arose under Andropov's rule and unresolved questions that he inherited from Brezhnev. Doubtless, the Soviets will publicly continue their hard line toward the United States and its NATO allies on disarmament until policymakers reassess their refusal to negotiate arms reductions in Europe while new U.S. nuclear missiles are being deployed there.

Exxon to conduct bank card test

PHOENIX, Ariz. (AP) - Tucker said. "This new Exxon Co. U.S.A. announced Friday it and Valley National Bank will conduct a test program allowing holders of VNB banking cards to use them to purchase gasoline and automobile products at 81 Phoenix-area Exxon stations.

The test program will begin Wednesday and end March 31, Exxon spokesman Joe Tucker said in Houston.

Purchases made with VNB banking cards will be charged to the customer's checking account, Tucker said.

"When customers make a purchase on the VNB banking card, they will be given an opportunity to make application for an Exxon AutoCheck card using a combined application-purchase ticket," AutoCheck is issued by Exxon and provides a convenient way for consumers to purchase Exxon gasoline and enjoy the cash discount without carrying cash."

He said the cash price of gasoline is typically four cents per gallon less than the credit-card price.

VNB banking card holders who receive an Exxon AutoCheck car may continue to use the AutoCheck card after the March 31 scheduled expiration of the test program, Tucker said.

Tucker said the test was intended to encourage use of Exxon's AutoCheck card and to test customers' interest in using VNB banking cards to purchase gasoline.

Pastor's body found

DUBLIN, Texas (AP) -Texas Rangers were called in Friday to investigate the slaying of a Methodist minister, who had been missing for four days after leaving for a meeting of pastors in Dallas, authorities say.

The body of the Rev. John H. Basham, a 55-year-old father of three, was found by a Palo Pinto County constable Thursday night in his Volkswagen van along Interstate 20, authorities said.

An autopsy was scheduled Friday in Dallas, Palo County sheriff's dispatcher Susan Mills said.

Investigators said they did not know how the minister was killed or how long he had been dead when the van was discovered about 70 miles west of Fort Worth.

Basham's body was lying in the floor of the van, which was parked along the westbound lanes of the freeway, Ms. Mills said. The van last was seen about

The salaries and buying power of Mexican workers would be protected under a government program announced by President Miguel de la Madrid.

In his announcment Thursday, the president said the government has appropriated $7.7 million to underwrite the program, which will affect about 10 million workers.

The plan was met with praise from Jacobo Zaindenweber, president of the manufacturers association, which he called a "totally valid project."

The programs deal with jobs, training and scholarships for workers' children; promotion of cooperatives; housing and recreation.

Letters to the Editor

Senator Sarpalius has asked his constituents to write his office concerning their opinions on the proposal to extend the school day from 8:30 a.m. to 5:30 p.m. In complying with this request, I had several questions and thoughts I wanted to share not only with the Senator but with the public also.

This proposal from what I understand would not only have kindergarten through 12th grades starting school at 8:30 a.m. and finishing at 5:30 p.m., but the school itself would be open from 7:00 a.m. to 6:00 p.m. This would enable those parents who started work early to drop their children off early and vice versa

Jr. high and high school students would use the time between 8:30 and 3:30 for academic studies only. The time from 3:30 to 5:30 would be spent on extra-curricular activities such as athletics.

Grade school students would also have the extra time at the end of the day to be taken on various field trips connected with their studies.

The expenditures created from these changes would be taken out of state revenue taxes such as sales, luxury or gasoline taxes.

One reason behind this proposal was to bring the Texas academic standards up to par with the other stated. Also because of our changing world there were more facts for our children to assimulate and not enough time.

Now you know all I know about this issue, which isn't a lot. Hopefully, some of you know more. By using my common sense and friends as sounding boards, these are a few thoughts that I have come up with. Since when has the government turned the Department of Education into a babysitting service for working parents? Will the time between 7:00 a.m. and 8:30 p.m. as well as 5:30 p.m. and 6:00 p.m. be supervised? By whom? Teachers, trained personel or unemployed babysitters?

Children walking home the winter months is a concern of a lot of parents.

What is the board of education going to classify as extracurricular activities? Anything other than English, math, history and science? What about the fine arts courses such as music, art and drama? Where do the business courses fall in all of

Does anyone know off hand what the average attention span of a grade school child is? Trying to teach a grade school student about 3:30 p.m. would be like talking to someone on a disconnected phone - nobody's home!

Taking grade school children on field trips is an excellent idea if not done in extreme. Remember they have two extra hours. Can you name enough points of interest in a 30 to 35 mile radius of Hereford to fill a school year's calendar? Heaven forbid if you can! Remember this is not just the grade school population of Hereford, but the entire grade school population of Texas being mobilized!

Taxes! Where would we be without some hot dog in Austin or Washington thinking of ways to raise and spend tax money? Some of the expenditures I can forsee are as

1. Lengthening the school day will raise the school's electric and gas bills.

2. Same goes for lengthening the school year - that's a lot of new air conditioning units!

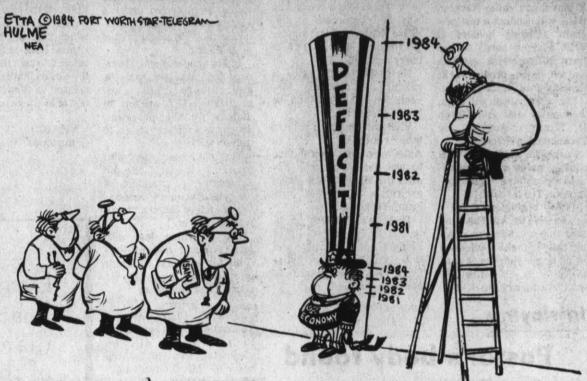

3. The school system will need more buses (remember the field trips!) and more gas to run them.

4. The teachers will need more money. Who wants to work extra hours without extra pay?

The reasons behind this proposal are admirable, raising Texas' standard of education and giving our children more time to learn, but several points are lost in all the idealism.

The Panhandle and other areas throughout Texas have a large transient population and those children, unfortunately, do not receive as high of a quality education as those who are residents. This alone could atone for Texas not being higher in the national ratings. Also I have always believed in quality education not quantity. Without lengthening the school day, take the time and reorganize the system from the inside out. Let teachers their degree than those that are still required and have little or no value in said subject. Incorporate new teaching aids such as computers in grade school. It's true the world is changing and the school system can also, but not by lengthening an already obsolete structure.

The Penultimate Word

OF WAR AND SPACE

I am in the wrong racket. I am trying to make a living writing semi-funny speeches. So far the money has not been great, but at least I don't have to go to deacon's meetings.

Most of the folks around here are also in the wrong racket. Some are trying to make a living farming. Others are trying to make a living off of the farmers who are not making a living.

As long as the top priority in our country is to beat the Russians, the money will be in war and space. Any product produced for either of these endeavors makes the bread. A simple wrench made for a tractor sells for $1.95. The same wrench made for a tank sells for $1800. The same wrench made for a space craft sells for $4000. I am trying to figure out how to get my books into the space program. Folks say the stuff I write is spacey, so maybe I have a chance.

The current space flight is a case in point. They wanted to try a docking manuver. They did not want an elaborate experiment. They announced that they were trying a cheapie. "Rock bottom cost" is how they put it. They built a balloon that was to inflate and hang in space for the ship to practice docking against.

One cheap balloon should cost about 40 bucks. right? In space one cheap balloon is $450,000. The thing blew up, so they were glad they had not spent any big money. Those space people can sure be casual with big figures.

They tried to launch two communication satellites. Now I am sure these things have a lot of sophisticated stuff on board, but how much stuff can you put in a little tin can? These satellites just cost 75 million each. They lost them both. They were pleased to announce that nothing was lost since they were insured. Somewhere there is an insurance company trying to find 150 million to pay off this nonloss.

By golly, we need to find some way to get in on this gravy train. Maybe we could dedicate all of our wheat for fighting wars or stocking up the space stations. If we could get this designation $4 wheat should sell for $60 a bushel with no questions asked.

I wonder if the astronauts need an inspirational tape to listen to while they float around. If I could get in on that deal I might beat old Zig Zigler to the top.

Probably not.

Origin of Martin Feldstein questioned

WASHINGTON - Harvard University is half the answer. The question is, "Where is this guy, Martin Feldstein, coming from?"

The second half of the answer is still up in the air. Martin Feldstein, the chairman of the President's Council of Economic Advisors, is recommending tax increases totaling some $50 billion in

President Reagan has wisely decided against a massive tax hike. This is not surprising. Ronald Reagan camigned for the presidency in paigned for the presidency in 1980 on a platform of lower, not higher, taxes. He has repeatedly reassured the American people and the economy that the third year of the tax cut and indexing are not on the bargaining table. And the economic recovery he presides over is directly attributable to the 1981 tax cut. With employment hitting record highs, the gross national product suging ahead, and inflation down in 1983 to a 16-year low of 3.2 percent, there is no reason the President should turn his back on his successful economic policy of lower taxes and low inflation.

Martin Feldstein's persistent memos urging higher taxes are a riddle. Mr. Feldstein made much of his reputation as an economist pointing out that high taxes preempt savings and investment and thereby reduce economic growth. The success of the Reagan tax cuts in stimulating investment and growth is a vindication of Mr. Feldstein's academic work at Harvard University. Yet, we are now treated to the spectacle of Mr. Feldstein beating the drums for higher taxes on the working men and women of American. Why? Mr. Feldstein points to his forecasts of delficts above $150 billion for the next four years and pronouces tax increases the only remedy. What about spending reduc-tions? Well, in Washington's theater of the absurd, we have David Stockman enter enthusiast, the once fearsome budget cutter Stockman announced in an interview with FORTUNE magazine tha while "some still think there are vast pockets of fraud, waste and abuse out there. In fact, nearly every stone has been turned over."

There is an old joke about a group stranded on a desert island with nothing except thousands of cans of food. The castaways fear starvation until the economist in the group pronouces the problem solved. "First," he explains, "we assume a can opener." The duet of Feldstein and Stockman has turned this story on its head. They simpstage left. A born-again tax ly assume no can opener. They assume away all solutions except more taxes. Feldstein assumes that lower taxes will not bring economic growth rapidly enough to lower the deficit, and Stockman assumes that the budget cannot be reduced further. Both assumptions are wrong, and projections about the future are like computer programs: garbage in, garbage out. Plug in bad assumptions and you get bad projections.

In economic forecasting, Martin Feldst much to be modest about. He predicted that real economic growth in 1983 would be 1.4 percent. Instead, growth in 1983 weighed in at a hefty 3.3 percent. The U.S. Chamber of Commerce more accurately predictd 3.2 percent growth by incorporating-rather than ignoring--the supply-side stimulus of lower taxes. Forecasts that understate economic growth result in bloated predictions of future deficits. Indeed, underestimating real economic growth by 1 percent will, over a five-year period, overstate deficit spending by $200 billion.

As for David Stockman 's odd assertion that the federal budget is beyond trimming. I recommend that he take a weekend to read the Grace Commision report INDIANAPOLIS (AP) - A man who said supernatural 'controllers" ordered him to humiliate a woman has been sentenced to death for rape and murder, even though the judge accepted his plea of guilty but mentally ill.

James Allen Harris on Friday became the first person in the nation to receive a death sentence after using the guilty but mentally ill plea, according to the National Center for State Courts, a private group.

LUBBOCK - Hereford's girls varsity basketball team ended its 1983-84 season at an even .500 with a 52-42 triumph over Coronado in the Mustangs' gymnasium Fri-

Whiteface sophomore Natalie Sims shot with acute accuracy as she hit more than 80 percent of her field goal attempts and led all scorers with 20 points.

HHS finishes its season with an even 8-8 District 3-5 won-lost record and is 11-11 overall. Coach Larry Sowers' girls were 9-11 last year.

While winding up with a .500 record is nothing spectalular, Sowers looked at the bright side.

"It's better than Caprock's ... better to be 11-11 than 0-22," Sowers remarked after the game.

As far as Friday's contest went, both Sowers and Coronado coach Miles Johnson said the difference was Sims.

"If that little number 14 (Sims) hadn't been so hot, we'd have won the ballgame," Johnson explained following the contest.

Sowers said aside from Sims, Hereford only played eight minutes of "pretty good

"I hate to jinx this gym, but we just don't play well down here. I was pretty nervous before the game ... I'm glad (Sims) was hitting because (junior) Darla (Alford) was just as cold as she could be and (senior) Cathy (Bartels) couldn't buy a basket in the first half." Sowers said.

The Whitefaces played best at the end of the third quarter and the fourth quarter, when HHS connected for 21 points,

Sowers emphasized. The first half was relatively could pull ahead by more than a basket as the teams exchanged leads several times. Hereford held a 17-15 lead at halftime.

The game remained close until the closing minutes of the third period. Sims hit a jumper to put HHS up, 26-25. Then Bartels connected for a bucket, and seconds later, senior Teresa Phibbs swiped the ball from the Mustangs but was fouled as she tried for a layup with five seconds remaining in the period.

Phibbs converted the two free-throw attempts and the Whitefaces were leading, 31-26, going into the final stanza.

The Mustangs opened the final period with a basket, Sims promptly low scoring and neither team answered, swishing three consecutive field goals, to put HHS up 37-29. Hereford was not to be caught.

> The game ended as senior Jan Harwell hit a jumper at the buzzer. Mustang coach Johnson said the tempo of the game picked up in the second half because he changed his defense from a zone to manto-man. "The pace was way to slow in the first half. And I figured it was to Hereford's advantage because they have such an excellent ball-control of-But the strategy, failed because of some timely shots by HHS, Johnson added. Looking ahead to next year, Sowers said his team will be looking for inside people.

"We're graduating all of our post people," the coach said of seniors Angela Richburg, Marty Valdez, and Bartels. "But we got three solid players coming back," he said referring to junior starters Stacey High, Alford, and Sims.

Juniors Kelly Mumau and Carla Alford also will have varsity experience and

Herd loses to Mustangs Friday, 75-64

By STAN GODEK Sports Editor

LUBBOCK - When you're hot, you're hot. When you're not, you're not.

Coronado was hot and the Herd was not, Friday as the Mustangs heated up the net on the way to a 75-64 win over the HHS boys varsity caging

"I bet they shot 60 percent from the field," HHS coach Bobby Decker said after the loss. "It's hard to beat someone when they're shooting 60 percent."

Coronado coach Phil Hilliard said his team played well but not as well as they

"I didn't think we were as high as we should have been going into this game. But it's a mark of a good team when you can beat someone like this (75-64) and it's not your best performance," Hilliard boasted after the win.

The game was marred by some shotty officiating. In the first quarter with the score knotted at 14-14, Whiteface senior Lee Brockman went up for an offensive rebound and 6-foot-5 Mustang senior Steve Price decided to give Brockman an elbow to the face.

Brockman went down as the blow stunned him and chipped one of his front teeth. The referees for some reason declined to call a technical foul, but instead called a twoshot intentional foul.

After shaking off the infraction, Brockman missed both free throw attempts. The teams then exchanged baskets and the first period ended with the score tied at 16 apiece

The Mustang's 6-foot-4 junior Robert Brashear netted all but four of Coronado's first-quarter points. Brashear led all scorers for the game, blasting the boards for 33 points.

The teams exchanged baskets on and off during the second period and at halftime the score stood 34-32, in favor of Coronado.

Mustang juniors Cole Hasie and Todd Duncan got the Mustangs going in the third quarter gunning seven outside shots between them. If Hereford had not sank nine of 10 free throws in the period, the game would have turned into a blowout. Going into the final quarter, the Mustangs led 58-49. The Herd tried a fourth-period comeback and pulled within three, 63-60, after a jumpshot by junior Sammy Suarez, a driving layup by senior Jeff Streun, a short bucket by Brockman, and a free throw by Suarez. Another altercation, this time between Streun and Hasie, seemed to halt the Herd's momentum and swing it back to the Mustangs.

Streun was guarding Hasie, a little to close in Hasie's opinion, so Hasie gave Streun a flagrant shove. When the referees made no foul call, Streun retailiated, pushing Hasie. Hasie then shoved Streun again. This time, the officials stepped in and called a double foul on the two

The call resulted in a jump ball which Coronado won and then proceded to outscored game, Hereford pulled one out of its hat, winning 52-51 in overtime. Hereford intentionally missed a free throw, got the rebound and made the basket at the end of regulation time to send the game in-7-7 in the district and 16-13 to overtime according to JV coach Buddy Allen. Hereford will host Palo Duro, Tuesday, in its final home game of the season.

Speaking of Sports

By STAN GODEK Sports Editor

While attending college, in a land far, far away, I never realized, females could play basketball.

At Central Michigan University, (Hereford residents could better relate to it as the school which produced Dallas Cowboy backup quarterback Gary Hogeboom) I, like most of my peers, only attended the men's basketball games. It was only when I recently began covering the Hereford girls varsity hoop team, (I had to, it's part of my job) that I realized the opposite sex can actually play ball with the same intensity as males.

It always seemed that girls were too worried about breaking a fingernail or spraining an ankle, to run up and down the court, dribbling and shooting a basketball.

Nothing is farther than the truth. The competition level in District 3-5A is fierce at times. I can only imagine what it is like on the college level.

A few years ago there was even a women's professional basketball league. It folded because none, or rather, very few of the games were televised and attendance at the arenas was sparce.

Outside of schools and colleges, women's athletics do not exist. Oh sure, there are golfers like Jan Stephenson. Tennis stars like Tracy Austin, Martina Navrit... err, Billie Jean King, and others.

But these are mostly individual sports. The problem, well maybe it's not a problem, lies in the fact that to be a professional athlete, one must be the best. The sporting fans, with regard to professional team sports, want to

Sims to stay with Detroit Lions

DETROIT (AP) - Running back Billy Sims is "just glad it's over" and says he is anxious to play football for the Detroit Lions next season after a federal judge voided his contract with the Houston Gamblers.

"The bottom line is me getting back out there, playing and scoring touchdowns,' Sims said when contacted at his home in Hooks, Texas, Friday night. "I won my case, and I was right and I don't have anything else to prove. Now I can get back to play like I am capable of without having all this on my mind,"

Sims, an All-Pro running back and 1978 Heisman Trophy winner, signed contracts with both the National Football League's Lions and the Houston Gamblers of the United States Football League last year.

He later filed suit asking that the $3.5 million contract he signed with the Gamblers last July 1 be voided on the grounds that he was misrepresented during contract negotiations by his thenagent, Jerry Argovitz, who now is a co-owner of the Houston team.

"I wanted to stay in Detroit, because that's where I started and I've had some pretty good years there. There's just so much more available to achieve in the NFL," Sims said.

When asked whether he had felt the decision would go his way, Sims said "I was being realistic about it. I really didn't know how it would go, but I was prepared to go with it either way." Sims added it would have been difficult to play his best for the Gamblers but said "being an athlete I would have done the best I could. I wouldn't go out and embarrass myself."

In ruling in Sims' favor, Judge Robert E. DeMascio noted that "the careless fashion in which Argovitz went about ascertaining the highest price for Sims' service convinces us of the wisdom of the maxim, 'No man can faithfully serve two masters' whose interests are in conflict."

In the 20-page written decision, the judge also noted "that there was significant financial differences between the USFL and the NFL not only in terms of the relative financial stability of the Leagues, but also in terms of the fringe benefits available to Sims.

The judge added, "Argovitz was not encouraging a bidding war that could have advantageous results for Sims."

Sims' contract with the Lions will net him $4.5 million in addition to the pension and insurance benefits he is eligible for under the contract the league signed with the players union. Those fringe benefits would not be available to him in the USFL, testimony showed.

After learning of the decision Argovitz said, "it was a tough decision for that judge to make. It was easier to make with him sitting in Detroit. If any other court in the country, other than Detroit, would have heard this case, there would have been a different verdict."

"I don't feel I've been damaged in any way, shape or form," he added.

Argovitz promised to refund to season ticket holders 25 percent of the money they paid if Sims didn't sign.

Arthur Donovan was the referee for 14 heavyweight championship fights, most of them involving Joe Louis.

see the longest homerun, the most dazzling dunk, and, of course the piercing tackles in football.

That must be the reason why female sporting events, at any level, are not as well attended as the male counterparts. There are many people who would argue (and I used to be one of them), that the only reason there are girls or women's athletics at our educational institutions is because the federal government requires it. In the 1970s, Uncle Sam declared equal funding, or something to that effect, for both boys and girls (men and women at the college level) athletics.

This has proved to be quite beneficial. Many females gain athletic scholarships unheard of 15 years ago. Also, athletic competition, enhances, in certain individuals, a person's outlook in other facets of life.

Well, girls track, tennis and golf (why no softball?) are right around the corner at HHS. I never attended any of those events in college

By DON GRAHAM

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) - In 1971, I moved from outside Buda, Texas, (population 498) to Philadelphia, (population 1,949,996) to take a teaching job at the University of Pennsylvania.

It was a big step for me, and like every step in my pursuit of what I still have trouble thinking of as a "career," it was happenstance from the

At the time, I had almost no conception of what the University of Pennsylvania was, let alone where it was in relation to anything else on the East Coast. Many of my friends in Texas still don't. They confuse Penn with Penn State. They believe I taught at Penn State for five years and occasionally one will ask me what I thought of Joe Paterno. I tell them that, overall, he was a nice guy, despite the 5 o'clock shadow he conveys on TV and the incredibly tacky uniforms his team wears.

They wouldn't believe me anyway if I tried to tell them about a Penn game I saw, about the laid-back band and the casual air of the whole undertaking. Way back then, the Quakers played like a bunch of hippies throwing frisbees at a Sunday picnic.

I got the Penn job by the usual route, through interviewing at the annual meeting of the Modern Language Association. The meeting was held in New York and it was my first visit to the Big Apple. It was also my first plane flight. But the really big breakthrough was that I learned how to tie a tie

Two former leaders quarrel publicly

By ELOY O. AGUILAR Associated Press Writer

MEXICO CITY (AP) - A squabble between two former presidents has gone public here, giving Mexicans a rare glimpse beyond the majestic facade that their chiefs of state take into retirement.

The quarrel between former presidents Luis Echeverria and Jose Lopez Portillo has received particular attention because many here blame them for leading Mexico into its worst economic crisis in decades.

It also comes as President Miguel de la Madrid, in office since December 1982, pursues his campaign of "moral renewal" to rid the government of corruption. A federal judge last week issued an arrest warrant for Arturo Durazo Moreno, a longtime friend and colleague of Lopez Portillo who was Mexico City police chief during his term.

The Durazo case is beingcovered extensively in the local press. A cartoon in Excelsior this week showed current officials carrying signs that read "I don't know any Durazo and he doesn't know me" and "I don't know who

A purported "tell-all" book about alleged crime and corruption by Durazo's former bodyguard is a smash bestseller here, even being sold by street vendors.

Lopez Portillo has been seen in public only rarely since his six-year term ended on Dec. 1, 1982. He has spent most of the time since in Europe living in what critics call a "golden exile."

But he broke his silence by responding to an indirect attack made on him by his predecessor, Echeverria, in a soon to be published book.

A paid advertisement appeared in El Universal newspaper reading only, "You Too, Luis?" and signed by Jose Lopez Portillo.

The paraphrasing of Julius Caesar's reproach to Brutus as he fell under the assassins' daggers was placed by Lopez Portillo's former press officer, Francisco Galindo Ochoa, who said he had it printed at his onetime boss'

Galindo Ochoa said other newspapers refused to print

Echeverria says in an interview in the book by his friend Luis Suarez that some officials in Lopez Portillo's administration had alleged wrongdoing by their predecessors in order to create a "smoke screen" to cover their own corruption.

He said charges against some of his collaborators were "unjust in most cases." "All of this covered up what we later saw in PEMEX (the government's oil monopoly) where the completely honest activity of (Echeverria appointee Jaime) Dovali was followed by the deep tragedy Mexicans regretted," Echeverria said.

Jorge Diaz Serrano, Lopez Portillo's appointee at PEMEX, has been in jail since last summer awaiting

The boom that turned Mexico into one of the world's foremost oil producers took place during Lopez Portillo's administration.

The flow of dollars into Mexico was unprecedented and an ostentatious show of wealth accompanied it. Corruption, a longtime tradition in Mexican government, is believed to have reached new

But the world oil glut and dropping prices pushed Mexico close to default on its rapidly mounting foreign debt exceeding $80 billion by the end of Lopez Portillo's administration. The nation plunged into a severe recession, and in stages the peso currency was devalued from about 26 to the dollar to the current 162.

Diaz Serrano and now Durazo have been the most prominent targets of the 'moral renewal" campaign, which also has pushed cases against dozens of less prominent officials.

There have been repeated calls by opposition political parties and in the press for an investigation of corruption to extend to Lopez Portillo himself.

The Mexican press delights in publishing photographs of the four mansions, still uninhabited, Lopez Portillo built for himself and his family on the outskirts of Mexico City. The site has become known as "Dog Hill" - a wry reference to Lopez Portillo's now famous promise shortly before the peso devaluation started to "defend the (value of the) peso like a dog." All the presidents are members of the Institutional Revolutionary Party which has governed Mexico for more than 50 years. In the Mexican system, each president hand-picks his successor for a six-year term. Echeverria continued to expound his populist policies after his term of office and founded a governmentsubsidized Center for Third World Studies. The subsidy was eliminated recently by the de la Madrid's ad-

Economist predicts

Texas farm incomes should rise

COLLEGE STATION -While it may not be a banner year for agriculture, 1984 should bring some improvement in Texas farm income over the depressed conditions of recent years.

'We could have a 10 to 15 percent increase in farm income over 1983," according to Dr. Carl Anderson, economist with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service, Texas A&M University System.

Dr. Anderson sees an increase in farm earnings due to slightly higher prices, fairly steady production costs and continued improvement in demand for farm commodities.

"However, there is a dark cloud hanging over crop producers,' the economist contended. "The potential for overproduction is there. It could take hold again and put farmers right back where they were a year ago-facing surplus commodities and depressed markets."

Government programs are offering farmers higher target prices and larger deficiency payments in 1984 which should boost cash flows for participants, Dr. Anderson noted.

However, the voluntary nature of the programs and the $50,000 payment limitations will not entice enough farmers to participate so as to have a major effect on curbing production.

"Without doubt, farmers will be facing either tighter production controls or lower prices for the next several years," Dr. Anderson said. "At current demand, some crop acreage must be retired. However, the mood in Washington reflects a more flexible farm policy, less government control and market-oriented programs for the 1985 farm bill."

For 1984 farmers with strong management skills in producing, financing and marketing and with little or no debt should do well, says the economist. But agricultural lenders will tighten up on credit condi-tions, with the Farm Credit System and the Farmers Home Administration handling an increasing number of Ranchers, like farmers, could dampen meat prices somewhat.

As far as land values are concerned, Dr. Anderson sees cropland prices stagnating or declining slightly, especially in prime agricultural areas such as the Texas High Plains. But he expects Texas ranchland values to continue to advance faster than the rate of inflation.

It is a common occurrence that many feeder cattle do not eat during the first week after arriving at a feedlot. This hurts weight gains and eventually ends up increasing the cost of beef.

Texas Agricultural Experiment Station researcheres at Amarillo recently evaluated a coccidiostat, Deccox. As well as being a coccidiostat, the compound seems to enhance appetite of stressed calves. The scientists started their work by purchasing two hundred 424 pound feeder calves through an order buyer in Tennessee. The calves were collected over a four day period and trucked 1180 miles to the USDA Research Laboratory at Bushland, Texas.

Upon arrival steers and heifers were split into 2 groups each with 40 steers and 60 heifers. One group received 27 mg of Deccox per pound of feed and the others served as a control.

In the South Plains, where wheat is recovering and providing some grazing, ranchers have been able to cut back slightly on supplemental feeding of range cattle. Elections are our nation's safety valve. Social pressures which might become explosive are thus relieved. So I suppose we have never had an "unimportant" election.

This next one, however, is particularly significant. President Reagan is getting deserved credit for knocking some cents back into the American dollar. Last year's shrinkage of our currency, 3.8 percent, was the least in 11 years. Interest rates are half what were when he took office. Two million new jobs have been added to our economy.

But President Reagan has managed another accomplishment which a professional observer sees as even more miraculous: He has successfully walked the tight wire between left and right. While his performance to date reflects mostly conservative economic and political philosophy, he has created for himself a hybrid image as a pragmatic futurist.

His State of the Union message was an "onward and upward" speech, prescribing bold new strides into space, technology and diplomacy.

There is plenty of room for him to stub his toe between now and November.

A NEW SORGHUM DI-SEASE which, researchers say, could become widespread, has been identified in fields in the Texas Gulf Coast fields in the Texas Gulf Coast area. The disease, a new race of downy mildew, called pathotype 3, damages almost all types of sorghum hybrid varieties currently commercially available. One company does, reportedly, have two hybrids ready for marketing this year which have shown resistance to the new downy mildew. These two seeds were in development when the new in development when the new disease appeared in South Texas, and were developed from a different base than that used for other varieties. Research scientists at Texas A&M are currently working on breeding material which will have resistance to downy mil-dew. These varieties will be made available to commercial breeders when testing is con-cluded, hopefully in the near Indians foresee racing future

By MARK J. KREIDLER AP Sports Writer LAWTON, Okla. (AP) -

On a vast rectangle of land north of downtown and south of the sprawling Fort Sill Army base, leaders of three Indian tribes hope to build their future around a thoroughbred race track.

The Kiowas, Comanches and Apaches believe the future begins on April 26, 1985, when the first gun sounds and horses break out of the gates of what probably will be called Three Eagles Race Track.

Three Eagles is the most important - and controversial - element of a $260 million project that has been described as the most ambitious ever for an Indian consortium. The facility would include low-cost housing for Indians, a hotel and convention center, a specialty shopping center, an office complex and a theme park.

The effort marks a sharp turn into the world of commercial business for the tribes, for whom the project - Kio-Man-Che - is named.

"The old-timers in the tribes are used to the old system of just enjoying their paycheck when it comes from the government every month. The younger members don't want that," says Tony Pokorny, one of the developers of the complex.

"The younger members want to be able to stand on their own two feet. The purpose of this project is the survivability of the tribes," Pokorny said.

But the plan has evoked sharp criticism as well.

Supporters of the complex claim Kio-Man-Che could gross millions a year for its owners; opponents fear a legal and tribal morass that may spin the Indians into financial disaster.

"The problem is the Indian people themselves," says Doc Pewewardy, former Comanche vice chairman. "We don't get along. We can't agree on things. The foundation of this project is weak."

Further, the project's developers have put themselves at odds with some officials by declaring they don't need anyone's approval to construct a pari-mutuel horse track, which in all likelihood would be the first to operate in Oklahoma since voters passed the gambling question in 1982.

At issue is about 2,000 acres of land awarded by the government in 1867 to the three Plains tribes when they agreed to abandon their Western plains for a reservation in southwest Oklahoma, then called Indian Territory.

In all, they hold about 4,500 acres in and around Lawton, which until now has been used only for its industrial development.

The tribes initially refused to work with one another to develop the land, but in 1932 adopted a constitution as the KCA tribe. Though the constitution later was abolished, the KCA Intertribal Land Use Committee is still intact.

The committee decided about 11/2 years ago to pursue Kio-Man-Che, which it said would ensure the survival of the tribes by giving them a constant source of income and, to a lesser extent, employment.

Developers of Kio-Man-Che plan for the race track to attract customers for the first time, and for the complex's intriguing cultural theme to keep them coming back.

At its peak, the complex would offer 2,280 full-time jobs, with hiring preference given to Native Americans; house 1,600 would thoroughbreds quarterhorses; would accommodate 20,000 spectators, and would gross some $100 million a year - all for the tribes.

"This is probably bigger than any other Native American project ever ... we think we'll be a role model for other projects," says Pokorny, of LB&M Associates Inc. in Lawton. "Someday we hope to be a world center of the culture."

While pre-construction publicity handouts from the tribes draw heavily upon the theme of tribal culture for their appeal, it is the race track, and the track alone, that can ensure the success of the project.

Construction of the one-mile oval, which would cost about $50 million, coincides with state voters' passage of the pari-mutuel question, on a county-option basis, in the last general election.

Voters in Comanche County, in which Lawton is located, have not consented to the gaming question. But tribal leaders say approval is not necessary, since the track would be built on sovereign Indian land.

"If racing was illegal in the state, we could not do it. But it's not illegal," Pokorny says. "We cannot ignore the laws of the state, but we can ignore regulations."

The state Racing Commission, which was created after passage of the pari-mutuel question to approve and consulted on the Kio-Man-Che

'They are not applying to for a license," said Dan

"They're proceeding on the assumption that they do not have to go through us.

Ruffs offer their love, hope to unwanted

Associated Press Writer

LANCASTER, Texas (AP) The telephone keeps ringing at the home of George and Alice Ruff, and there's the clamor of voices coming from the kitchen.

Outside, dogs bark and roosters crow to the sounds of construction on the small wooden buildings going up. The front yard overlooking the expanse of farmland is overrun by parked cars and trailer homes.

This is the Ruff House Ministry, where George and Alice have been taking care of orphans, the emotionally disturbed, handicapped and retarded for seven years.

"We have big plans. We've always had big plans. We know we're never going to reach the whole world, but we're going to take care of as many as we can," says Ruff, rubbing a day-old beard he said he forgot to shave because of the "13 things" on his mind.

The 28 people currently living with the Ruffs range from age one to 83.

"Everyone here, with the exception of two (herself and her husband), are emotionally, mentally or physically handicapped. And sometimes I wonder about those two," said Mrs. Ruff, laughing as she strokes a thick white braid that loops around her shoulder.

But it seems Mrs. Ruff, 56, has always been taking care of the needy. There's 83-yearold Albert, who has been under Mrs. Ruffs's wing since 1946, when she still lived in Lawrence, Kan.

"His mother had died and I was taking care of her when she died. She asked me to promise her that I would take care of him as long as he lived, which I did. I'm still working at it.

"He's mentally retarded, emotionally disturbed - the whole bit. He's unable to cope with society because he's epileptic also, and a diabetic," Mrs. Ruff said.

At the time, Mrs. Ruff was married to Albert's brother, who she said was "abusive" towards her.

When we got a divorce, I got his brother," she said. "It was a mixed up story, but that's the way it works."

Albert is how Mrs. Ruff got into the penniless business of mothering the unwanted. In 1961, she began taking in handicapped children in her home in Lawrence.

In 1967, she met George Ruff, 51, while working parttime at a restaurant.

"She was a waitress and I was the boss," said Ruff. "You might say I was messing around with the help."

Mrs. Ruff said neither of the two was "interested in marriage." She had been through one failed marriage and he through two.

"He liked the same things I was doing. See, he's handicapped, physically handicapped, and we got to talking about our likes and dislikes, our desires ... and found out we both had the same desire in life," she said.

Ruff got polio when he was 13. Shortly afterward, a polio vaccine was invented, but Ruff has no hard feelings.

"God has made it a beautiful thing ... he took what the devil gave me and turned it into a beautiful thing because I can sympathize with everybody that's handicapped too. I can say 'look I'm handicapped too. But I did it, you can do it too." On a whim, George and Alice drove from Kansas to

'We were riding around in a car and the temperature was 67, and it was minus 27 in Kansas. So I said, 'Let's come to Texas." said Mrs. Ruff.

Ruff House Ministries is run with this same impromptu confidence. As Mrs. Ruff put it, "we rely on God's help

"So I still have to go out there, mowing lawns, picking up trash - all that good stuff and keep my people busy supporting the home," said Ruff, whose odd jobs help support the household.

While talking with counselors at Mental Health and Mental Retardation, Mrs. Bodensteiner was told about Ruff Ministries. The next day she was sitting in the Ruffs' kitchen, filling out information sheets.

'See, he (Virgil) is not lowlevel enough retardation and he's not high-level enough to be somewhere else," said Mrs. Ruff.

When a new member moves into the Ruff household, he or she is given a room or a bed and secondhand clothes, donated by local charities, if they're needed. Above all, a person is treated with massive doses of love. If they're capable, they're given household responsibilities.

And when the Ruff's feel a person is ready, he's moved into an adjacent "training room," or apartment so that he can learn or re-learn how to run a household.

City officials have told the Ruffs their four mobile homes have to go because they're not in a legal trailer park. For now, city officials have turned their back. The Ruffs are hoping when they look again, they will have some structures up.

Football becomes Perot's current target

EDITOR'S NOTE - He high school football and once sold newspapers on horseback in the black part of town. Despite his millions, he still lives modestly. But now this multimillionaire conserwho has vative. demonstrated his gumption from Vietnam to Iran, is tackling something tougher - the Texas school system. By SCOTT McCARTNEY

Associated Press Writer DALLAS (AP) Sometimes it's hard to remember that H. Ross Perot is for real. During the Vietnam War, he tried to fly Christmas Eve meals into Hanoi for American prisoners of war. He masterminded a spectacular jail break in Iran. And before that, he turned a simple idea into one of the nation's largest fortunes.

Now Perot, the crew-cut, 5-foot-6 founder and chairman of Dallas' Electronic Data Systems, is at it again, and he concedes it's his toughest task yet.

Perot is trying to break Texans of their addiction to revamp the state's belowaverage school system.

And to many Texans, the 53-year-old multimillionaire crusader now seems like a meddler trying to break up a passionate love affair. Perot doesn't flinch.

"If the people of Texas want the schools to be places of entertainment for adults, they've got it," says Perot. "If they want their children to learn and to be successful as adults and have Texas continue to be a rich state with a diversified industrial base after the oil and gas runs out; we better get busy and teach our children something." Texas Gov. Mark White, a Democrat, asked Perot, a conservative Republican, to chair a 21-member panel that will recommend improvements in the public schools. Perot attacked the task with his characteristic tenacity and outspokenness.

He took his panel to all corners of the state to interview of educators, football coaches, parents and school

He outlined the ills he had found in a school system that has three million children and ranks 16th of the 21 states where most students take the Scholastic Aptitude Test. In standardized test scores, graduation rates and average teacher salaries, Texas ranks below the national average. "This is as complicated as anything I've ever attempted," Perot said during a recent interview in his memento-filled office atop EDS' headquarters in Dallas.

"Getting down to what you need to do is probably the easiest part. Working your way through all of the various special interests and the politics and getting the grassroots support is the most difficult part."

His ideas on improving education cover a wide spectrum, but he drew immediate flak by saying he believed too much time and energy was being devoted to extracurricular activities such as band, drill team and football, and by calling for the abolition of those activities in elementary and junior high Football coaches howled.

"Ross Perot evaluating coaches is like me evaluating bankers," says Bay City High School head football coach Ron Mills, whose team was crowned state champion in December in its class.

"Most of them (the coaches) feel the same way I do. He's not qualified to be in that position. And our opinion of the governor has really dropped since he appointed Perot," Mills said.

Dallas Morning News sports columnist Randy Galloway wrote:

"Dream on, Ross Perot. Then wake up to the fact that high school football in this state is much bigger than you and your committee, or Gov. White and his campaign promises."

Perot is now on the counter-

"In today's school system you go and spend a good deal of time playing," he said. "You spend a good deal of time in soft elective courses, you do very little homework and whenever possible you avoid confrontation with rigorous learning. And whether you pass or fail, you are socially promoted.

"In the new school system," Perot said, "you'll work, strive, sweat, study at night and pass or fail."

The typical Texas high school senior spends an hour a night on homework - about 15 minutes per subject, Perot says. The typical Texas high school senior also spends 15 to team or football, he adds.

"We've got the greatest bands, football and drill teams in the country. If Dr. Bell ever publishes a chart on that, we will be No. 1," he said the day after Education Secretary Terrell Bell released new figures showing Texas ranking very low nationally in education. Perot will deliver his report to the governor March 1. He says the keys are recovering the school day for learning, putting a "great teacher" in every classroom, developing strong parental support and building the finest elementary school system in the country. He has also said most teachers' colleges in Texas should be closed because they graduate il-

'We can't afford not to spend this money on these children. We can break the welfare cycle by spending this money intelligently."

When the report is written, Perot will get back in his Lear Jet and take to the stump, selling his ideas to a skeptical public.

Selling is his forte; he's been doing it since he was 6.

Perot, the son of an independent cotton broker, grew up in Texarkana, Texas, during the Depression. He sold magazines on the street until he took a paper route at age 12. The route was in the black part of "People said you couldn't sell newspapers in that part of town because no one could read. So I got the paper to reverse the rates: the paper cost 25 cents a week - 71/2 cents went to the paperboy and 171/2 cents went to the paper. I got them to reverse that and I went door-to-door selling the paper and delivering it on horseback," he said. "The typical paperboy was making $5 a week. I got up to where I was making $35 to $40 a week."

W. Lee O'Daniel was retiring from the U.S. Senate and as he was cleaning out his office in 1948, one aide told him he had an unfilled appointment to the Naval Academy. He asked if anyone wanted it, and the aide said "this boy from Texarkana has been writing us for several years."

"Give it to him," the senator said, and Perot was became president of his senior class.

After the Navy, Perot went to work for International Business Machines, selling IBM computers in Dallas. In his fifth year, he filled his annual quota by mid-January.

Perot took his simple idea to IBM executives. The company sold computers, but did little in the way of programming. Perot proposed establishing a programming division to grab the other 20 percent of the market spent on software.

IBM turned him down. Today, about 80 percent of the computing dollar goes into software, and billions of dollars go to Perot's company, EDS, which develops software and computer systems for large organizations and corporations, and is contracted by Medicare and Medicaid systems in many states. EDS, started in 1962 with a $1,000 Perot check, has 13,000 employees in 12 coun-

In its last fiscal year ending June 30, 1983, EDS had revenues of $651.6 million and earnings of $58.6 million. Perot's personal stock is worth about $550 million, not including the $334 million worth of stock placed in trust for his family. He also owns an oil company and some real estate. Forbes Magazine said he is one of the 10 richest men in the world.

He drives a Chevrolet, lives as modestly as one can live with his wealth.

'When I started EDS, it was a classic case of a good idea at the right time," Perot said. "A few years ago, I saw (IBM Chairman) Mr. (Tom) Watson and he said 'Ross, tell me again. Did you know the ratios would change?' And I said, 'No, Mr. Watson. It was just that the 20 percent looked good to me then and it didn't look like much to you.'

"I didn't know it was a good idea at the time. There was no market for our services and we had to go out and convince people we could do good work for them. Then five years ago, suddenly a multibillion-dollar market developed for our services."

With customers knocking on the door of EDS every day, Perot has turned the daily duties to president Mort Meyerson.

He gets involved in his crusades - he calls them "projects" - in part because he has the time, money and energy to carry them through. He says he has no desire to run for public office because he would then have to be accountable to the voters and would have to off to Annapolis, where he divest his business interests.

Henry Kissinger brought Perot to public attention by asking him to lead a publicity campaign to improve Vietnamese treatment of American prisoners of war. That campaign included Perot's unsuccessful attempt to land supplies in Hanoi on Christmas Eve 1970.

In 1979, two of Perot's employees who had helped construct a national health care system in Iran were taken prisoner by the Shah's falling government. Diplomatic efforts to free them failed, so Perot put together a team of EDS commandos that provoked a jailbreak of 11,000 inmates, rendezvoused with the two EDS employees at a hotel and sneaked out of the country across the Turkish border. Perot himself had gone to the prison during the escape planning.

The Iran episode is chronicled in a best-selling Ken Follett book, "On Wings Of Eagles."

Gov. White's predecessor, Bill Clements, appointed Perot to lead a "War on Drugs" campaign in Texas that resulted in laws broadening police capabilities in investigations of drug dealers. He also campaigned for and won the relocation of a major electronics research group to Austin.

His friends saying rebuilding Texas' educational system is just par for the course.

Dallas entrepreneur Norman Brinker, a longtime friend, says education falls in line with Perot's other interests.

"If you look at drugs and what drugs do to education, and when you think about the strength of our nation and education, there is a connection. And think about business - if we are not educated, we will not be competitive in the long run," said Brinker.

"One of the things I really like is people who stand for something. Ross stands for perfection. (And) I like people who are willing to stand up to solve a problem and not just talk about it and that is Ross."

in a cause, Perot devotes all his waking energy to it.

"Ross is fascinating

laughing and joking about something, there is an intensity behind him. He can still be relaxed and casual and all of a sudden he'll look at you with that intense Ross Perot

Perot said the attacks launched against him over the football issue bother him only because they detract attention from the issue of educa-

"So I try to shove thoughts like that out of my mind," Perot said. "Indulging in various forms and shades of self-pity is a waste of time." His ideas have drawn support from metropolitan educators and even some coaches.

Dallas schools Superintendent Linus Wright, who already has enacted some of the requirements and changes Perot favors, is a big supporter.

More resistance to educational changes comes from within education than from the public, Wright said.

"I think there are very few people who can bring about the major changes we need, and he (Perot) is one person who can," said Wright. "This takes somebody not only with the courage but also with the conviction and competency to deal with these people."

"When football has a priority that it has in our state, where it is almost a sacred institution, of course there are going to be a lot of screams,' he said.

"(Perot) created the issue through shock treatment. I haven't seen the people come around to him yet. But because it is such a radical change, it takes time to reorient people. My recommendation to him and his committee is that it will take a year to educate the public before the Legislature feels the need to make changes."

Gene Mayfield has been a winning head football coach in Texas since 1954, except for a brief foray into private MIDLAND, Texas (AP) -After enjoying the best of times and enduring the worst of times within a three-year period, residents of this oildependent West Texas city are searching for a condition almost unheard of in the oil industry - stability.

In 1981, the oil-based economy of the Permian Basin hit an unprecedented high. People from every corner of the earth flocked to the area, lured by the millions of dollars that were flowing as freely as the oil.

But in 1982, just as the champagne corks were popping, the bottom fell out. An overabundant supply of oil and a more cautious approach by investors caused an economic downturn for Midland and nearby Odessa, leaving the thousands of newcomers jobless and the two cities in one of the most devestating oil busts in recent history.

This year, the oil-based economies of Midland and Odessa are leveling off and oil executives say they hope their industry, which is gain-

'Right now, we're in a situation where we're rebuilding," said Ed Thompson, executive director of the Permian Basin Petroleum Association. "We see things settling out here now. Our companies are beginning to rehire and we're starting to get over everything, which is just what we want to do.

all a lot."

"One thing's for sure - we don't want the industry to be like it was in 1981 again because that was abnormal."

The boom that brought to the Permian Basin thousands of "get rich quick" seekers was the result of fevered investors eager to get in on the last few months of a tax shelter, Thompson said.

The Reagan administration established changes in the tax law for 1982 that lowered to 50 percent the maximum deductable that an oil investor could take under a tax

Thompson said investors poured as much money as possible into the oil industry in the final months of 1981 because they saw the diminished tax advantage in year. Independent producers also are starting to drill more again, he said.

Perot says he believes he will win in his education battle, but concedes he always believes he's going to come out ahead while he's in a fight.

And Ms. Gittings and Midland Chamber of Commerce spokesman Randall Lee said housing and construction is beginning to show signs of recovery.

Employment also has improved in the two cities. Ms. Gittings said Odessa's jobless rate for December 1983 was 6.9 percent, while Lee said Midland had an end-of-theyear rate of 5 percent.

"It's taking us longer to recover than we expected," Thompson said. "But that's because the boom was so good. Everybody here was enjoying the good life."

He added that "everyone can again if we'll learn our lessons. To have a good stable industry, you have to be careful, you have to make wise decisions. I think everybody was hurt so bad

Vocational Education Week observance begins

Mayor Wes Fisher signs a proclamation declaring Sunday through Saturday as Vocational Education Week in Hereford.

A pig and lamb trailer was constructed by the Hereford High School agriculture IV class last year as its shop project. The class is currently constructing a large gooseneck trailer.

Sharon Mayfield presents one of the coloring books made by students in the office duplicating practices class to Todd Richardson, who is enrolled at the Hereford Day Care Center

First year cosmetology students are shown with 'adopted' sister Olivia

Guerra during the Christmas holidays. As one of their projects they presented Olivia with a new permanent, new wardrobe and other gifts.

Beginning today, this week has been designated nationally, statewide and locally as Vocational Education Week. Vocational education is an important part of the curriculum at Hereford High School where 427 students are currently enrolled in one of the 13 programs.

There are 13 teachers: three teaching homemaking, two agriculture and one instructor each in cosmetology, electrical trades, building trades, office duplicating practices and automechanics.

Vocational Education:

Creating Partnerships for Excellence

There are six cooperative programs in which the students attend school half a day and work in their chosen field for half a day. These include marketing and distributive education, coordinated vocational academic education, industrial cooperative training, vocational office education, home economics, cooperative education and agricultural cooperative part-time training. Kenneth Helms is vocational director and Betty Mercer is vocational counselor at the high school.

Billie Young, cosmetology instructor, (at left) explains the program to Carlean Moore's home and community service class from Stan-

YMCA receives large donation

The Meadows Foundation of Dallas recently donated $21,000 to the YMCA building fund to be used for all purpose and nursery facility. Rick Brown, YMCA president, signed the contract accepting the terms Thursday afternoon in the presence of Jerry Morgan and Tom Burdett.

Algur H. Meadows created the Meadows Foundation in 1948 for the benefit of the people of Texas so that the fortune he had accrued could enrich the quality of life for the people of Texas.

He was born in Georgia and used his talent, education and determination to build General American Oil Co. in Texas into one of the nation's largest independent oil and gas production companies. He was dedicated to the free enterprise system which had enabled him to accumulate great wealth that he shared with others.

Meadows created the Foundation so that his giving could continue after his death. He challenged his family and advises to carry forward his dedication to invovlement in philanthropy.

The areas in which the Foundation gives today include health, education, social service, civic and cultural programs and the arts. Over 500 different organizations have received support form the Meadows Foundation since its creation. Operations, programs, endowments, capital expenditures and research are all eligible for support from Meadows Foundation grants.

Thomas speaks to Young Homemakers

Garth Thomas met with the Young Hereford Homemakers Tuesday night to discuss the importance of keeping one's family history.

He told the group that forms to help people begin their search of ancestors and keep accurate records of known information are available through the Genealogy Society.

Thomas suggested beginning with oneself and then going back to parents and grandparents, etc. He said that pictures are always important as they help to "bring history alive" for future generations.

Ann Landers Let him yell

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I need an answer and can't take a chance on getting a letter in the mail. My husband opens everything. The problem, of course, is him.

Karl is a compulsive saver. He even dries out paper towels and puts them away to be used again. He saves newspapers, magazines, rubber bands, paper clips, boxes and string. Several closets are filled with junk, and I am not allowed to touch anything.

A few months ago Karl had to go to the hospital for surgery. He told me he had some money saved for our old age and that we were going on a nice vacation if he recovered from his operation. I asked what bank the money was in and he wouldn't say, so I started to search around the house. After a couple of days I found his wad stashed in the attic-in an old box he had covered with aluminum foil. There was $11,000 in 100s, 50s, 20s and 10s

I took $2,000 for myself, figuring I was entitled to something for my years of scrimping and doing without. We never had a vacation. It was always a trip to my folks' place or his. Cheaper that

Karl wasn't home from the hospital two days before he discovered that $2,000 was missing. He has been swearing and yelling at me ever since. Should I go to work and pay him back, or figure I was entitled to what I took? I am 65. He is 71. What do you say, Ann?-Buffalo Reader

DEAR BUFF: I am sure you have figured out by now that Karl is not playing with a full deck. I suspect also that you have become accustomed to his yelling. I say let him yell. You are entitled by law to half of everything he has. Too bad you didn't take $5,500.

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) -John Rosen is mad at Mazda. He hates Hondas. He despises Datsun, is revolted by Renault and turns purple when he sees a Porsche.

But John Rosen isn't as picky as he sounds. He hates ALL foreign cars, regardless of color, seat material or number of engine options.

The proud owner of a 1959 Dodge Coronet dubbed "Kitty," Rosen rides at the helm of the Foreign Car-Haters of America.

A disgruntled auto worker? A mad-at-the-world Motor City man? Not exactly, though many of the club's members are steel workers, auto workers and others affected by imports of foreign cars.

Rosen himself is a 38-yearold Englishman, who came to this country 12 years ago.

He fell so deeply in love with American wheels that he gave up a job as a male stripper to take over a decaying garage in San Francisco. renamed it American Classic Motorworks, and began repairing and restoring faithful, if tired, U.S.-built

On Feb. 5, his plucky band of Detroit-lovers vented their spleens by demolishing a Datsun with sledgehammers.

His members display such pugnacious bumper-stickers on their gas-guzzling American-built cruisers as, "Hungry? Out Of Work? Eat Your Foreign Car" and "I Don't Brake For Foreign Cars."

"It all boils down to patriotism," he says. "Every one of our members has one powerful conviction - that only idiots drive foreign cars, and foreign cars make idiots out of normal people."

There are other reasons for

DEAR CAL: No truer words were ever spoken. The most disheartening news, according to Dr. Vincent DeVita, head of the National Cancer Insitute, is that smoking by women nearly doubled the lung cancer death rate between 1970 and 1980. Additional testimony to the damage done by cigarettes: lung cancer is expected to pass breast cancer next year as the leading cause of death among females.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: Our once beautiful (and vain) mother died a few days ago. She went from 145 pounds to 78 and requested a closed casket.

Culp sisters exchange vows in double ceremony

A double wedding ceremony was performed Saturday afternoon in Community Church for Melanie Jean Culp, bride of Shannon K. Wilburn, and Julie Diane Culp, bride of Kerry L. Tooley. Dorman Duggan, pastor, officiated.

Mr. and Mrs. Niles Culp of 316 Western are the brides' parents, Wilburn is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Jerry Wilburn of 1500 Brevard and Tooley is the son of Mr. and Mrs. L.W. Tooley of 2010 Ave. H.

Two 15-branch candelabra holding red tapers trimmed with greenery, as well as a large white basket holding an arrangement of white gladiolas, red carnations, baby's breath, greenery and bows decorated the church altar. Pews were marked by red bows.

During the traditional wedding march after candles had been lit the brides presented their mother with a long stem white rose, and as the couples marched out following the ceremony, they presented their mothers-in-law with long stemmed white roses.

Bridesmaids included the brides' cousins, Kim Bryant of San Marcos, Corie Culp and Shannon Taylor of Amarillo.

Serving as groomsmen were the bridegroom's brother, Kelley Wilburn, Tony Ramirez and Frankie Garcia.

Escorting guests were the bridegroom's brother, Randy Tooley; the brides' brother, Mike Culp; the brides' cousin, Todd Culp; and Tooley's nephew, Tommy Combs of McCauley.

Flower girls were the bridegroom's sisters, Lori and Jodi Wilburn, and the bridegroom's niece, Rhonda Tooley, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Randy Tooley.

The bride's nephew, Kirk Culp, son of Mr. and Mrs. Mike Culp, was ring bearer and the brides' cousin, Patti Widner of Bedias, Tx. was candle lighter.

Principal wedding selec-tions included "Our Love" sung by Tonya Landers and Eric Alexander and "Here We Are Together" and "After All Those Years" vocalized by Paul and Mimi Vancil. Ms. Vancil also played the piano.

The brides' parents gave their daughters in marriage. Julie was attired in a Victorian style gown made by her aunt, Mrs. Norman

She also wore a small derby hat covered lace with a veil attached at the back. She carried a bouquet of red and white silk roses with baby's breath and red and white satin streamers. Her jewelry consisted of a diamond pendant, a gift from the bridegroom, and an opal pin belonging to her grandmother, Mrs. Grady Morton.

Melanie's wedding dress featured a satin bodice and made with a lace trimmed V-shaped neckline. The long lace sleeves were trimmed with ribbon and lace and the gown's bodice and skirt, made of bridal satin, were covered with chantilly lace and ribbon.

She wore a picture hat covered in chantilly lace with an attached veil, and carried a bouquet of red and white silk roses with baby's breath and red and white satin streamers and a small white Bible covered in lace, which was a gift from the bridegroom's parents.

As good luck pieces she wore a diamond pendant which was a gift from the bridegroom and a wedding band belonging to her grandmother, Mrs. Morton.

Bridal attendants were attired in street-length winter white lace peasant styled drsses featuirng red satin sashes. Their winter white picture hats were trimmed in red satin bows and they carried long stemmed red roses with baby's breath and red streamers.

Flower girls wore short red dotted dresses trimmed with winter white lace and satin sashes and carried white baskets filled with red and hite rose petals.

Leslie Brush and Christie Culp, the brides' sister-inlaw, registered guests at the reception held in the church fellowship hall.

Serving the brides' cake was Rene Cole, and the bridegrooms' German chocolate cake was served by Tooley's sisters, Linda Combs and Marlene Bustamante. Punch and coffee were poured by Tonya Landers and Kim Foster.

The base of the brides' wedding cake consisted of four smaller cakes decorated with garland and bordered with large shells iced in white butter cream icing with red roses and moss green leaves arched on four sides. The bottom border was also done in

Nevada Dance Theatre

A performance by the Nevada Dance Theatre is scheduled Feb. 21, as the second program of the Hereford Community Concert

Association to host Nevada Dance Theatre

Nevada Dance Theatre, under founder and artistic director, Vassili Sulich, will perform at 8 p.m. Feb. 21 in the Hereford High School auditorium as the second program in the Hereford Community Concert Association's 1983-84 season.

Termed "the cultural jewel of the state of Nevada," the dance theatre is the only professional ballet company in the state.

Since its first performance in September of 1972, the unique company has acquired local acclaim and national recognition for its innovative and highly professional performances.

In 1979 the Nevada Dance Theatre opened its own school, the Academy of Nevada Dance Theatre. primarily to teach children and train them as future dancers for the company. The company gives lecture demonstrations in the schools of Las Vegas and Southern Nevada.

SPINNING The women of colonial households had to make every single garment that the family and slaves wore. She made the clothing from flax and wool that was produced on their property. The women of the house wove all their bedding, rugs, window and bed hangings, and twine. There was a long process from the plant to the cloth, It was very wearsome, yet women always took this work for granted.

First place essay reflects life in America

Sheep were imported from England, even though they were hard to raise, because of the wolves in America. While trying to get their flocks of sheep going, they had to rely on flax.

The men in the family had to do some of the work because flax was so heavy and required twenty different dirty and dusty operations before it was ready for spinn-

Wool took many steps before it was ready to spin, but the women did all the work except for the shearing. Both flax and wool had to be drawn through two hatchets or comb wires until they were soft fluffy strands of fiber. While spinning, the women moved back and forth in rhythm to the wheel. It took practice and quick steady hands to spin in fine thread.

Even after spinning the thread was not ready for weaving. First, it had to be bleached, backed in ashes and hot water, rinsed, beaten and washed repeatedly, then spread out on the grass to

The finest thread was used to make a dress or Sunday coat, or a pair of curtains. They were usually dyed a soft color. Every housewife had a pot of clay dye handy, mostly indiago blue, that was bought from a peddler. The women also had the colors red, yellow, and purple.

Carding and spinning were done daily. In early settlements the loom was in the kitchen, but later it was moved into a special room. Some people even had their own weaving house.

Weaving took three different steps and steps had to be repeated three thousand times to weave about three yards of cloth. Today we can only marvel at the skill of colonial women.

Reagan studying Marine timetable

SANTA BARBARA, Calif. (AP) - President Reagan is studying a timetable to withdraw U.S. troops from Beirut, but it seems all but certain that most of the 1,400 Marines will be off the ground and on Navy ships offshore within a month.

Under the plan, which was presented to Reagan on Friday, a token force of 200 Marines would stay behind to guard the U.S. Embassy in Beirut.

"I would be optimistic that it (redeployment) would be completed in a month's time," one administration official, who wanted to remain anonymous, said Friday. But he added, "I want to stress that is premature until we have finished talking to the multinational force partners as well as Lebanon."

The official also expressed optimism that Lebanese President Amin Gemayel could hold his position despite the deteriorating situation in his country.

Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger on Friday presented to Reagan the timetable for withdrawal of U.S. troops to Navy ships offshore, according to deputy White House press secretary Larry Speakes. But the plan will not be announced publicly until next week.

Meanwhile, the State Department reported that 512 people, most of them U.S. citizens, were evacuated from the Lebanese capital Friday aboard helicopters and small boats and were RONALD Howdy! Ready for another one of my letters? Mother says these letters are an easy way to keep the baby book up to date. To my knowledge, Mother hasn't written one word in mine. She just cuts newspaper articles from the paper and puts them in a box with my pretty book.

Mother doesn't seem to get in a hurry with those baby books. Allison's has not one word. Stuart and Bryan's are current through the month Allison was born.

On Jan. 9, I found my hands. Now, a month later I use them to grab things to chew. I like to sit at the table in someone's lap so I can reach the napkins, placemats, and plates. Lettuce all covered with salad dressing feels funny squishing through your hand. Mother made the remark

Yea, I know you want me to stop when I start to school. Well, I might and I might not. Oh, I've learned to untie my shoes. That keeps mother hopping. Shoes and socks are such a nuisance. Why, Mother, the only time you ever wear shoes is when you leave the house. I've even seen you kick off your shoes driving home in the afternoon - lots of times.

I'm outgrowing things fast. At over 16 pounds, I'm in size 9 months clothing. The infant seat is near to becoming history. I love my car seat. It sits me high in the car and I can watch everything outside

My only food is milk. Mother is amazed that I can sleep all night long on just milk. Something about starting my older brothers and sister on cereal at one month so they'd sleep all night long. I've been sleeping 12 hours since I was 2 months old on a total milk diet.

I've had three colds but they were all when I was much younger, from 6 weeks old to 3 months. Boy, do I hope I miss the terrible flu that's going around. My daddy and brothers were really sick with the stuff. Daddy lost 15 pounds. If I lost that much. there wouldn't be much left of

Federal grand jury to consider murder charges

DEL RIO, Texas (AP) -Three men charged in the slaving of U.S. Customs inspector Richard Latham have been ordered held until a federal grand jury can consider indictments.

In a one-hour hearing Friday before U.S. Magistrate Durwood Edwards, an FBI agent testified that the men told investigators they robbed a jewelry store in Ciudad Acuna, Mexico - across the Rio Grande from Del Rio and abducted Latham when he tried to inspect their car at the border.

The only witness called by Assistant U.S. Attorney Daniel Maeso was the FBI's Dan Weatherman, who said the men admitted taking Latham hostage at the Del Rio border crossing on Jan. 27 and killing him after stopping near Eagle Pass, about 55 miles southeast of Del Rio.

Ricardo Cortez Valasquez, 21, Rafael Calderon Valasquez, 26, and Samuel Olguin, 27, all of El Paso, have been charged with the killing of Latham.

No jobs, hope for 30,000 farmworkers

Like a boxer in a grade-B movie, the tip of South Texas is in the corner, clutching the ropes while pummeled by forces beyond its control.

In December, unemployment in the Valley was already a cool 19 percent, largely attributable to the plummeting Mexican peso and the resulting halt in border retail sales.

But that was before La Helada, literally the ice cream, blew down from the Arctic and savaged the delicate citrus and winter vegetable crop that keeps the Valley economically sound.

Now, unemployment hovers in the 30 percent range, with some estimates running as high as 40 percent.

The broad expanses of tropically lush, green palm trees and fruit plants have been reduced to a mass of brown shards. Everywhere, the ground is dotted with molding oranges and grapefruit.

It remains to be seen whether the Valley will stage a classic Hollywood comeback, bouncing off the ropes and vanquishing its opponent with a surprise burst of energy.

But for the 30,000 or so farmworkers whose livelihoods depend on the fruit and vegetable harvest, conditions are likely to get worse before they get better.

"We've never had a disaster like this before," said Molly Ramirez, a Valley native who is disaster assistance coordinator for the Texas Employment Commission. "It's not like a tornado or hurricane where you see the damage and you go in and correct it.

Sarandon's flics unloved

Associated Press Writer

BEVERLY HILLS, Calif. (AP) — Susan Sarandon was beginning to wonder if she would be known in life as the star of unloved movies.

Though she was nominated for an Academy Award for best actress last year for her work in "Atlantic City," she points out that the movie languished for a year without a releasing company. Paramount Pictures finally gave it a half-hearted release, until the film started winning

Her newest movie - "The Buddy System," with Richard Dreyfuss - is a gentle story about a divorced mother and a budding author who befriends her son. There's no violence and no blatant sex - which may be why 20th Century-Fox waited a year before releasing it.

"I can understand what happens. Because there is no sex, no violence, they don't know exactly what to do with it. If the marketing people can't find some way to sell a picture, they can't fight for it. There's the constant danger that if they attach their names to selling a failure, they're in trouble."

Miss Sarandon was in "The Rocky Horror Show," which wasn't released at all, but became a cult classic - a "midnight" movie that played in neighborhood movie houses.

Though she lives in a metropolis and maintains a wide variety of interests, Miss Sarandon admits that she is basically lonely. That doesn't bother her.

"I have a solid, extended family that I've worked hard to maintain," she said. "Most of us are artists of various kinds, and artists move around a lot. So I'm alone a great deal, but I think loneliness is a part of the human condition."

Miss Sarandon came by acting accidentally, through marriage to Chris Sarandon while both were studying at Catholic University in Washington.

HAVANA (AP) - Alicia Alonso, Latin queen of the ballet, flashes a foxy smile when asked how old her daughter is.

"Young enough to be my daughter," she says with a

And her grandson? The smile only widens.

Her grandson, she might have said, is the world's only professional dancer to have his grandmother as prima

At 62, Alicia Alonso dances on - a legend whose career reaches back to the pre-World War II roots of New York's great ballet companies, and forward toward tomorrow's "people's ballets" in Cuba's countryside.

She has had to overcome many handicaps, most of all the threat of blindness. Five operations for a detached retina and cataracts have repeatedly interrupted her

'When I was 9 years old, they told me, 'You cannot dance. You are too fragile. And I worked and worked," she said. "Later, after each eye operation, they told me, 'It's finished. It's finished.' I have made my career with the word 'No."

Her sight problems have forced her to make adjustments. "I have to work harder to get my balance, to get sensations of stage, places," she said. "It means concentrating, working hard."

She first made her reputation as a teen-age dance sensation on Broadway in the 1930s, then moved to Ballet Caravan - later called the New York City Ballet - in 1939, and to New York's American Ballet Theater in

The critics raved about her superb control, stunningly swift turns and powerful jumps. In later years, the grace and balance of her adagio dancing has been her forte.

She returned to Cuba in 1948 to form a ballet company with her husband, Fernando Alonso, from whom she was later divorced. The Alonsos, alienated from Fulgencio Batista's corrupt regime, left again in the late '50s, returning in 1960 after Fidel Castro took power.

Castro promised the Alonsos $200,000 and challenged them to establish a worldclass company. The National Ballet of Cuba, now with 120 dancers, remains a family affair - Miss Alonso's daughter, Laura, 44, is a com-son, Ivan Moreal, 24, is a dancer. Does she think about retiring?

"While I'm still able to dance, I dance," she says. "Nobody will ever know when I will retire, because one day I will just say, 'I will dance no more."

She smiled again. "So, you see, you have to go to all my performances if you want to say, 'I saw her last.""

Jimmy Swaggart

Show eyes evangelist

By GEORGE W. CORNELL

AP Religion Writer NEW YORK (AP) Television evangelist Jimmy Swaggart, background, methods and style rarely have been detailed in the media, is given a searching look by a new documentary being aired next week.

But Swaggart doesn't want to talk about it. At his multimillion-dollar headquarters at Baton Rouge, La., a spokesman said the only word from him was "no comment."

Asked for just simple facts about Swaggart's operations, the spokesman, David Van Gorder, declined to provide any information, even such innocuous bits as Swaggart's

He is 48, and, according to the new documentary, a high school dropout with no formal theological training, but who has become "one of the most popular and powerful" TV preachers in the world.

Several stations, in Boston and Atlanta, dropped his show, refusing to sell him time, charging distorted swipes at Roman Catholicism and Judaism. He's still seen and heard on about 550 outlets nationwide.

The hour-long "Frontline" documentary, "Give me that big-time religion," is being presented by the Public Broadcasting Service Monday evening in most areas.

It says Swaggart has the biggest audience of any electronic evangelist, with more than 2 million watching him weekly, the independent rating service, Arbitron, says. Counting audiences in 32 other nations, his staff says his annual audience totals 500 million.

A "preacher, entertainer, businessman," Swaggart is described. The documentary samples his preaching, explores his huge World Ministry Center at Baton Rouge and interviews him and admiring supporters.

says, adding that he "could be a billionaire" if he sought it, but "everything goes into the ministry. The family is not enriching itself."

The salary of him and his wife, who serves as treasurer, is put at "more than $100,000," relatively small in comparison to the group's cited annual budget of more than $75 million. As with other television evangelists, most of the money goes for buying TV time.

"They're under severe economic pressure," says sociologist William Martin of Rice University, a one-time minister himself, a graduate of Harvard Divinity School and commentator in the documentary.

Swaggart is shown repeatedly pleading for contributions.

Unlike evangelist Billy Graham and some other TV evangelists, Swaggart's organization does not belong to the Evangelical Council for Financial Accountability, which requires various standards, such as regular, audited financial reports, the documentary says.

Swaggart, a cousin of rock-country singers Jerry Lee Lewis and Mickey Gilley, is a minister of the Assemb God, a Pentecostal denomination. Born in Ferriday, La., he began preaching as a traveling evangelist at Catholic Bishop Stanley Ott of Baton Rouge last summer met with Swaggart to try to reduce misunderstanding, but said afterward that Swaggart continues to hold views and make statements that misrepresent Catholicism. Ott said he still hoped for progress in resolving the problem.

What this country needs is an electronic gizmo that buzzes when you address a last year's present to the person who gave it to you in the first place.
