Enough names okayed to call wet-dry election

By REED PARSELL Managing Editor

Enough signatures have been approved for there to be a wet-dry election this spring in Justice of the Peace Precinct 1, County Clerk David Ruland reported Saturday morning.

More than 1,570 signatures -35 percent of those voting in the last gubernatorial votewere required. Ruland completed a re-checking process at 3:30 a.m. Saturday, clearing the way for county commissioners to call for an elec-

The wet-dry voting must be held within 20 to 30 days following the next regularlyscheduled meeting of the commission, set for 10 a.m. Monday, March 12 in the courthouse. Ruland said he hoped the election would be held April 7, the same day for city, hospital and school. County Clerk Ruland says governing body elections, since that would save the county money.

The process of having a wet-dry election - something Deaf Smith County has not had since 1956 - was initiated by Art Reinauer. The area farmer intends to operate a winery and hopes to place the industry in Hereford. He announced his plans at a Jan. 23 county commission gathering and was in charge of the distribution of petitions.

What voters must decide is if they are willing to allow the presence of packaged liquur stores within Precinct 1, which encompasses all of Hereford and most of the county. Texas law requires wineries be located in areas designated "wet," something Deaf Smith has not been since

One of the 30-year-old's contentions is his winery would encourage new businesses to come here. "I think the timing is right," he said earlier this week. "I

Prior to the Monday deadline for submitting signatures, CAPS encouraged those who had already signed but wished to have their names removed to contact the county clerk's office. Fifteen affadavits were turned in requesting names be striked, though they too had to be submitted by Monday.

Reinauer planted grape vines in 1981 which should be capable of wine production in another two years, he told commissioners in January. He intends initially to bottle, under his "La Escarabada XIT Vineyard" label, wines made in California. As his vines mature, he would like to gradually phase out the imported products.

The unsatisfied, or envious member of a community, is always ready to tear down those who have something he or she wants-and doesn't have.

The last time Deaf Smith County had a wet-dry election, in October of 1956, the issue was defeated by 1,930 to 872-or a total vote of 2,802. That was a record turnout for an "issue" election at the time, but it fell short of the 2,900 who voted in the general election of 1952. According to The Brand files, only one box of the 10 favored the issue in 1956. The Ford community box carried the issue by 24-22. The 1956 article in The Brand reported that it was the first wet-dry election since 1901, when the drys won by 19 votes. The county was "wet" from 1890 to 1901.

Trucking is a vital part of the economic makeup of Hereford and Deaf Smith County, and many citizens are unaware of the struggle the motor carrier industry now faces as a result of exhoribtant new highway taxes.

The American Trucking Association reports a measure approved by Congress in December, 1982, increased the federal tax on gasoline and diesel fuel from four to nine cents a gallon.

But the trucking industry faces much higher costs as a result of the special truck taxes included in the legislation. The heavy-vehicle use tax is the most drastic increase. The current $240 annual fee for an 80,000-pound combination unit will increase to $1,600 on July 1, with additional increments in 1986 that eventually raise the level to $1,900 annually. This is a staggering 700 percent increase in one

"I don't think there's been any tactics of deception," Cook allowed concerning the gathering of signatures. In fact, CAPS was not mounting an anit-election campaign up to Monday's signature deadline, Cook said. It rather wished to make certain peo-

This is a WET petition. It reads: 'It is the hope, purpose and intent of those who sign this petition to legalize the sale of alcoholic beverages...'" The advertisement also pointed out, "The City of Hereford will get only the 1 percent sales tax, and the county will get nothing from stores outside the city limits. Texas state law reads that there shall be no subsequent taxes levied against the sale of alcoholic beverages."

Admitting Hereford needs more businesses, it maintained "no other business is trying to put liquur stores on our streets.'

A U.S. Department of Energy helicopter equipped with a sophisticated radiation tracking system will scan this West Texas city and surrounding communities in New Mexico for the pinhead-sized pellets during the next four to six weeks, said David Lacker, chief of the Bureau of Radiation Control of the Texas Department of Health.

Lacker said the investigation was to begin Friday but was delayed one day to give DOE officials time to calibrate their scanning equipment.

Searches amount to harassment

BOSTON (AP) - Angry fishermen say the Coast Guard's practice of sending gun-toting guardsmen aboard vessels in random drugs searches amounts to armed harassment, but officers say the policy has helped cut down on smuggling.

Salvadoran looks to election

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) - Salvadoran President Alvaro A. Magana says his country is through measuring power "with guns rather than votes" and is depending on this month's elections to chart a course away from human rights violations, death squads and bloody civil war.

Former secretary becomes attorney

DALLAS (AP) - Sue Lagarde has become the first woman to serve as one of five chief prosecuting attorneys in Dallas District Attorney Henry Wade's office.

She went to work for Wade 20 years ago as a secretary. "I knew I had a smart girl," Wade said. "I knew she would make a good lawyer." Ms. Lagarde grew up in a small Louisiana town of 3,000 and learned typing and shorthand by working on her hometown newspaper. She moved to Dallas after graduation from Northwest Louisiana State University and her ability to type 100 words a minute landed her a job with billionaire H.L.

Hunt. "It was interesting for a while, but quite frankly, there just wasn't enough work,"

So in 1964, she went to work the bottom, and watch the ones that bloom," said Wade. "She was a bloomer."

At the age of 36, after a stint as a court reporter, she entered the Southern Methodist University Law School, graduating in December 1975. By June, she was working again as an assistant district attorney, handling misdemeanor

Ms. Lagarde was promoted to handle specialized crime and consumer fraud cases, and then defended county employees in civil lawsuits. She never lost a case in that capacity, Wade says.

She said it was Wade's encouragement that led her to get a law degree.

was once no more real than the fanciful dreams of writers and comic strip artists.

Here are three ideas for your consideration - or, if you are so disposed, for your merriment.

TELECOMMUTING

For many years it has been the style to transport workers to the job. For one thing, workers are considered more mobile than workplaces. For many years it was the only way things could be.

Now, however, we are well into the world of services, as opposed to physical goods, and high and important among those services is the movement of information. It's easier to move information than people.

Why, therefore, shouldn't people stay home and have the work delivered to them electronically rather than commuting to the work? Wouldn't time be saved? And Hundreds of companies are experimenting with the idea. One, New York Telephone, reports a 43 percent productivity rise among information workers who, linked by computer terminals, worked at home two or three days a week. The Work In America Institute, a non-profit group that focuses on productivity, reports positive experiences at companies including American Express and Control Data.

STATISTICAL PROCESS CONTROL

Since SPC is being pushed by General Motors, world's largest manufacturer, it stands a good chance of becoming widely accepted.

Roger Smith, GM chairman, maintains that a new era of cooperation is dawning between General Motors and its suppliers, which is essential "if we're to remain competitive in the international marketplace."

It will be an era, according to Smith, in which GM will be looking "for that superior supplier who can deliver 100 percent good quality all of the time, not just most of the time.

And that, he says, means SPC, which for the layman can be described as the use of These groups tape the latest movies, he said, and Turks living or traveling abroad carry them to their homeland.

Foreign television shows appear to be another source for videotapes. Some tapes distributed in Turkey include the commercials of the foreign show. Others have subtitles in Arabic, Dutch, German or French.

Turkish officials occasionally raid the video shops. ODVI has been raided and investigated dozens of times, Sarol says. But for lack of any legislation on the newfangled business, police in the past were unable to impose any sanctions.

Last November a new copyright law embracing the video business went into effect. The law calls for prison terms ranging from one month to three years for copyright violations, and all video cassettes must have special markings to show that the distributor has the copyright.

ODVI is hoping the new law will bring the video business under some kind of control. The company has signed copyright agreements with the British Broadcast Corp. and another British distributor, the Rank Corp.

ODVI has plans for similar agreements with at least half dozen more foreign distributors, making it tough competition for the freelancing pirates working out of neighborhood corner shops. Last month, the government of Premier Turgut Ozal allowed the importation of video recorders and cassettes

This year the Regency Fund is available exclusively for IRAs and Keogh plans. So virtually everyone can invest up to $2,000 a year tax deferred (more for Keoghs) in a fund dedicated to maximizing the return on your investment over the long term.

Because the Regency Fund has this singular goal, it can endeavor to take full advantage of short-term gains whenever possible. Which makes it ideal for tax-deferred retirement funds where any gains can be consolidated and compounded over the years without being eroded by taxes. Silence outrage

A lot of Americans feel frustrated these days because their voices are not being heard. They elect a President whom they feel can turn things around, but they find he can't do it

They elect representatives to the U.S. Congress who think like they do, but the message of cutting federal spending instead of increasing taxes does not seem to be heard. The economic front is only one problem area, however. It is very apparent that this country has a great many problems are not being solv-

Many of those problems have to do with a breakdown in morality. Look what's happened in America since 1960:

47 million divorces.

550,000 deaths from drunk driving 23 million users of illegal drugs 189 million serious crimes reported

366,000 murders 9.5 million illegitimate births

In addition, we are told that individual tax cheaters cost the government $87 billion each year in lost tax revenues; an estimated 60 percent of employees have, at some time, cheated their employers by theft of merchandise, falsely claiming sick leave, carrying home supplies and tools; $10 billion a year is spent on sex magazines and x-rated movies, and there are today about 10 million alcoholics.

We cannot blame all these things on government. To a very great extent, these signs of national decay are simply the result of what the citizens tolerate without voicing their strong objections.

The Swiss author, Henri Frederic Amiel, said it this way: "Truth is violated by falsehood, but it is outraged by shence."

SAVE THE RABBITS

I bumped into one of those conservationist types the other day. He was horrified because I was eating meat. By the time he finished with me I was almost convinced that I was some kind of a cannibal. He went into great detail telling me how much pain we inflict on the animals of the world. These poor creatures are helpless and yet are slaughtered for the mere pleasure of humans. "Cruel humans," I think, is how he said it.

With a great load of guilt I reached for the · vegetables. The guy said vegetables were healthier for me to eat and would not make any animals suffer. I did fairly well with the corn and peas, but then I got to the broccoli. Who wants a long life that includes broccoli? That stuff just could not have been meant for human consumption.

My wife told me broccoli is better if it has cheese sauce on it. I said, "Cheese sauce is better without broccoli under it." How come we have to eat stuff that must be hidden under a sauce before it can be tolerated? Why not just eat the sauce?

Squash is a case in point. If enough stuff can be added, you can almost get the squash taste hidden. I said almost. The same ingredients can be made into a batter, put on steak, and create a feast for a king.

I am reminded of an old recipe for cooking carp. The recipe says to put the carp on a wooden shingle, cook it over a low fire for about three days. When it is done throw the carp away and eat the shingle. I bet that recipe would work on squash and broccoli.

While I was struggling with my vegetable plate, I had a sudden inspiration. How come the folks who are so intent on saving the animals end up eating the same thing the animals eat? If we all turned vegetarian the animals would starve.

I stared at the gob of broccoli on my plate and wondered how many rabbits in the world would love to have a good mess of the stuff but could not do so because it was sitting there smelling bad. Sheer pity gripped my soul. I decided to do my part to save the rabbits. I will never deprive another one of them of their beloved broccoli. I ordered chicken-fried steak, mashed potatoes with gravy, green beans, and iced tea. The rabbits rejoiced and I ate the food God intended.

Labor union decline discussed

By RICHARD L. LESHER President

WASHINGTON - Scientists are still unsure about how and why the dinosaurs became extinct. There are a good number of theories: climate changes; the dinosaurs' inability to adapt; and their steadfast refusal to wear seatbelts. But the jury is still out.

Now, scientists cannot travel back in time and discover why the dinosaurs went the way of the dodo bird, but perhaps much can be learned from watching the same process taking place today in the continued decline, and perhaps ultimate fall, of America's once-fearsome labor unions. I have watched this process for some time

The Bootleg Philosopher

Phone Bank Talk

Editor's Note: The Bootleg Philosopher on his Deaf Smith grass farm examines a new political technique this

Dear editor:

As everybody with a telephone knows, a recent development in political campaigning is the phone bank. A candidate lines up hundreds, sometimes thousands, of people to sit at phones and call voters during the evening hours asking them to vote for him, or get out to a caucus, or donate some money.

This seems to work, although I don't know why, unless there are lots of people out there lonesome for a telephone call. I have never been that lonesome.

With 8 candidates running for the Democratic nomination for Presdient, each with his own phone bank, you can see some people's phones were ringing off the hook. One woman in New Hamphire said she was getting 5 or 6 calls every night.

I have never run for office, nor have I ever been indicted, but I got to wondering which phone bank works the best. If I were running, I'd instruct my phone bank people to be sure to call only during commercials. Nothing will make more people mad or lose more votes than having their phone ring during a gripping TV drama.

Obviously with 8 phone bank candidates, there aren't enough commercials to go around, which opens up an unfairness situation which I have no solution for. The TV stations do their best, but you can cram just so many tooth paste and headache remedy ads into one hour's program.

If the phone bank idea continues to spread and is taken up by all congressmen, governors, state legislators, county officials and a justice of the peace here and there, there'll be more phones left off the hook than the phone company can handle.

Yours faithfully, and will venture to predict that, should labor unions choose to continue on the path followed by the stegosaurus and friends, the death certificate will read as follows: death by suicide.

The decline in both the political and eocnomic clout of labor union officials that began 30 years ago is largely self-inflicted. In the 1950s labor unions could claim the allegiance of roughly onethird of all working men and women. By 1970, union membership fell to 25 percent of workers. Today, unions represent fewer than one in five American workers.

In the political arena, labor union officials not only represent a smaller percentage of Americans--despite their claims to speak for all working Americans-but also fail to represent even their own members on a vast array of public policy questions.

Thus, while four million new jobs were created in 1983 as a direct result of President Reagan's low-tax, lowinflation economic policies, most labor union "leaders" were lining up to denounce the president's policies.

Poll after poll shows that union members oppose tax increases to cut the deficit and support reductions in federal spending. Where do the union bosses come out on this? They collect dues from their members and spend it to push for more taxes on their members and a continuation of the government spending spree that causes high deficit

What the union bosses are selling, the union members simply aren't buying anymore. We saw this quite clearly in 1980 when the unions launched a full-court press for Jimmy Carter and Walter Mondale. Over 40 percent of union members simply said, "No, thank you," and pulled the lever for Ronald Reagan and his pro-growth, pro-jobs economic policies. Is it any wonder that union members are suing their unions for taking their dues and handing them over to the big-spending politicians without their members' consent? It is any wonder that labor unions now lose more union elections than they win? Or that union members are petitioning more often to have their unions decertified?

Membership institutions that mock their members and ignore their interests quite deservedly lose the loyalty of their members. And more important to those union officials, they lose the members' dues.

Now there has been some marginal willingness on the part of some unions, such as the airline unions, to eliminate unnecessary work rules, which lowered productivity, and to show wage restraint. As a result, the airlines saw employment increase by 5,900 jobs in 1983.

Union members pay good money to have their interests represented by union of-

It's time they got something for their money.

The Weakly Reeder

-a partial view of the news-

By REED PARSELL

In a country where lawyers commonly have the reputation of using their legal knowledge to break the law rather than uphold it, perhaps it is fitting a shady character like Edwin Meese III become attorney general.

One of President Reagan's well-known "role players," Meese two years ago was $40,000 delinquent in several mortgage payments. Eight bills on one and a total of 15 payments on two other mortgages had been ignored. Rather than forclosing the mortgages, Meese's banker granted the politician another one for $21,000.

When accused during last week's Senate hearing of having received special privileges for his being associated with the presidency, Meese weakly replied, "I didn't have any special consideration. Financial institutions try to work with clients, particularly those they have worked with for a long time and in whom they have confidence."

Later, Meese seemingly contradicted himself when claiming he had "no personal knowledge" of a $240,000 granted to a man who bought Meese's California home in 1982. Sen. Howard Metzenbaum, D-Ohio, then cited a memo that referred to the loan. Meese had earlier identified the letter as being in his handwriting. Similar acts of injustice are thought to have been a big reason why Richard Nixon lost the 1960 presidential race to John Kennedy. In 1956, Nixon, Inc, received a $205,000 loan from the Hughes Tool Company, owned by the reclusive Howard Hughes. The beneficiary - a word used accurately - was at the time operated by Nixon's brother Donald and ran a small chain of restaurants featuring "Nixonburgers."

The loan was allegedly given to keep the firm from going bankrupt. It was granted to Hannah Nixon, mother of the two men, with the only security being her corner lot in Whittier, Calif., that was worth less than $100,000. The loan was defaulted on two years later.

In October of 1960, the story broke with Richard shown to have known about the fouryear-old transaction. It was charged by several journalists that Hughes made the loan to help Nixon, then vice president under Eisenhower, in return for favors regarding his varied business interests. Trans World Airlines, for example, was one Hughes company which had a federal suit against it dropped subsequent to the Nixon, Inc. loan.

The Senate should not be willing to allow a proven criminal to head the Justice Department. Then again, the same could be said for the American public and the presidency. In Nixon's case, corruption proved enduring.

Letters to the Editor

School Prayer

Dear Editor:

We know that the president's proposed amendment SJ-73 for the reinstatement of prayer in the public schools is to go before the Senate very soon. We also feel that for the people to be best represented they had best be heard.

I am a 24-year-old housewife with four small children of my own. I have some idea of what they will be facing as they go into the public schools. I have always been so proud of my country, our freedoms and all the things this country was founded upon.

The things that set us apart from the other nations and that have gotten us where we are today.

I have seen these things being attacked from every direction as our foes from within and without seek to destroy what has made us so unique and awesome. I have to fight as our forefathers did for these same inalienable rights that I may preserve the rights of my children.

We have been basking in these privileges and freedoms that our forefathers gave their lives for. The time has come when we must evaluate our lives to see just how much these freedoms mean to us. Pride can hold us up no longer. We must come forth, take a stand and be heard.

If we neglect this call from our country to protect her from the onslaught of those who wish to destroy her, then we most assuredly do not deserve the luxury of the freedoms we have enjoyed. We need to shake off the lethargy that has come upon us from having too long, taken for granted those things that others have suffered and died for. There will never be a sight more pitiful than was that of the mighty Sampson when brought to his knees, head shaven, eyes gouged out, he was made a slave and prisoner by those he once deflated with his bare hands

He became a victim because he let down his guard to those who would destroy him. He would never be the mighty, mighty, mighty man he once was.

And so will be the sad state of our magnificent country if we allow those that would to take from us little by little, that which ha made us strong. Once it is gone our banner will never wave with its former glory. A pitiful ghost of what it once was is all that will remain.

Please, if you value your fredom write:

Hart, Askew share Oklahoma roots By RON WORD Associated

OKLAHOMA CITY (AP) -Can a youngster born on Cherry Street in Muskogee or a man who wore a flat-top haircut at Bethany Nazarene

College find true happiness in the Oval Office? Reubin Askew and Gary Hart think so. Both seekers of the Democratic presidential nomination share roots in the Sooner State.

At 47, Hart is the youngest of the contenders, and his ties to Oklahoma are through Bethany Nazarene College where he was known as Gary Hartpence.

The college, located in the Oklahoma City suburb of Bethany, is a strait-laced church school which still prohibits students from drinking, smoking, gambling and immoral sexual activities.

Dr. Tom Boyd, an associate professor of philosophy at the University of Oklahoma, was a classmate of Hart at both Bethany and Yale divinity school.

"He had a real urgency about things," Boyd said, adding that Hart seriously considered both the ministry and teaching before turning to politics. Hart's name change, from Hartpence, happened long before the Colorado senator talked about a political career, though, Boyd

"He called me up and said, 'Tom, I've changed my name. Everybody in my family changed it. My dad came up with the idea and we've all agreed to it," Boyd

Boyd said when Hart was a college student, he had a passion for the television show "77 Sunset Strip."

"He used to come over and watch it and would try to figure out the story in advance," Boyd said. "We also went to movies together. Since we were both Nazarenes we didn't get to see many movies. It was our start at being normal," Boyd Boyd said he believes that Hart, who won the New Hampshire primary, has a good chance to win the Democratic Party nomination and the presidency because "I've learned that he does what he says he will do."

"Gary is a very honorable man; a very thoughtful man who struggles to understand problems," he said.

He said if Hart has a fault, it would be that "he is driven. But every politician I've known is driven. He has a strong ego, but I don't think he is egocentric.'

John Rosfeld, another former Bethany Nazarene classmate of Hart, said "Gary was always known as a thinker."

"He was not a frivolous kind of person," said Rosfeld, now a professor at Bethany Nazarene.

In an interview with college officials last year, Hart discussed his choice of voca-

"At one time I seriously considered the active ministry as a vocation, but came more and more to see my place of service in the public arena," he said.

"There have been in colleges like Bethany, an unusual tendency to turn our people that became involved that have been affected by Christian philosophical and moral assumptions that can be traced through the Wesleyan heritage ... I think religious beliefs cannot be separated from public affairs," he said.

While at Bethany Nazarene from 1958 to 1958, the philosophy major served as student council president, president of the philosophy club and associate editor of the campus newspaper. He was the 1958 winner of the Good Citizenship Award.

Hart earned degrees from both the Yale Law School and Yale Divinity School. He work briefly in the Justice Department under Robert Kennedy and as special assistant to the secretary of interior, Stewart Udall.

He was first elected to the U.S. Senate in 1974 and re-elected in 1980. In 1972, he directed the presidential campaign of U.S. Sen. George McGovern.

Hart's political strength in Oklahoma will be tested March 13 at the state's Democratic caucuses, which also will show how much Askew's Oklahoma ties mean to the state's Democrats.

Democrats' delegate process begins March 17 Page 6A-The Hereford Brand, Sunday, March 4, 1984

By BILL SIMMONS Associated Press Writer

LITTLE ROCK, Ark. (AP) - This year, for the first time, Arkansas Democrats are to pick their national convention delegates in a fourphase process of caucuses and conventions. It begins in less than two weeks.

The leaders of most of the other presidential aspirants' Arkansas camps say that former Vice President Walter F. Mondale has the most support in Arkansas because he started early and has a large organization. Spokesmen for challengers John Glenn of Ohio, Gary Hart of Colorado and Jesse Jackson of Chicago say their candidates are gaining ground while Mondale's support is weakening. The Mondale camp says it is holding its own.

Reuben Askew of Florida also is eligible for national convention delegates from Arkansas, but he ended his campaign Thursday. Ernest Hollings of South Carolina had qualified for Arkansas delegates, but announced Thursday his withdrawal from the race. Candidates Alan Cranston of California, who dropped out Wednesday, and George McGovern of South Dakota never qualified for delegates from Arkansas.

Arkansas is to send 42 delegates and 14 alternates to the party's national convention in San Francisco on July 16-19. The process that will produce them includes caucuses in the 767 justice of the peace diistricts in Arkansas, then conventions in the 75 counties, then caucuses in the four congressional districts, then a state convention. None of the national convention delegates will actually be chosen until the congressional district caucuses and the state convention, both of which will be held in May, but no one can become a national convention delegate without participating in the earlier steps of the process. In every phase of the process, the number of people supporting each presidential candidate in that step determines how many of the candidates' supporters will be delegates to the next phase. However, a presidential candidate must have the support of 20 percent of the people participating at each phase to be eligible for any delegates to the next level.

Phase I, a caucus phase: At. 10 a.m., Saturday, March 17, the 767 JP district caucuses are to be held. There can be from 9 to 15 districts per county. These caucuses are open to anyone who lives within the district, is a registered voter and is willing to sign a paper saying that he or she is a Democrat. Douglas Wallace, the state party's executive secretary, says nobody knows how many. people may turn out for the caucuses, but that it might be as many as 40,000 to 50,000. The people who go to these caucuses will pick up to 3,468 delegates and up to 3,468 alternates to the county conventions. If the turnout in some JP district caucuses is smaller than necessary to pick the number of county convention delegates and alternates alloted to that district, the district would pick fewer, Wallace said, and the totals - up to 3,468 would be smaller.

Phase II, a convention phase: On Saturday, March 31, county conventions will be held in the 75 counties. The up-to-3,468 delegates and upto-3,468 alternates chosen for these conventions by the JP caucuses will, in turn, pick up to 1,037 delegates and up to gressional district caucuses.

Phase III, a caucus phase: At 9:30 a.m., Saturday, May 5, at the Arlington Hotel in Hot Springs, the up-to-1,037 delegates and up-to-1,037 alternates chosen to the four congressional district caucuses will meet. There will be up to 277 delegates to the 1st District caucus, up to 266 to the 2nd District caucus, up to 217 to the 3rd District caucus and up to 282 to the 4th

District caucus. The picking of national convention delegates begins here with the choosing of 24 delegates and eight alternates. The 1st and 2nd Districts will pick six delegates each, the 3rd will pick five, the 4th will pick seven. The variations are based on Democrat votes in each district. Each district

1,037 alternates to the con- to the national convention.

Phase IV, a convention phase: At 1:30 p.m., Saturday, May 5, at the Arlington Hotel in Hot Springs, the same people who met in separate congressional district caucuses and chose 24 national convention delegates and eight alternates will meet jointly as a state convention to pick the remaining 18 delegates and six alternates.

A lot of detail decisions may have to be made in the first phase.

should -What candidate's supporters do if, at a JP caucus, they don't constitute 20 percent of the caucus? Wallace says they can join the supporters of another candidate, or they can be regarded as if they hadn't shown up at all.

-What should a JP caucus do if it is supposed to pick four delegates to the county convention, but five presidential candidates each have exactly 20 percent of the people at that caucus? Wallace says there will be no fractional delegates, so there would have to be a decision by lot draw straws or something to determine which four candidates will get one-delegateeach to the county convention although he had as much support as the others.

-What should a JP caucus do if it is picking seven delegates to the county convention, but the people attending the caucus support only two presidential candidates and each group constitutes 50 percent of the people at the caucus? Should each candidate get 31/2 delegates to the county convention? No, says Wallace, each will get 3 delegates, then they should determine by lot which of them gets the odd delegate. "I think it's going to be interesting," Wallace said.

Tryouts next weekend

Semi-pro grid team planned

By STAN GODEK

Sports Editor WANTED: Big quick men who want to play football. Experience not required.

A 1981 Hereford High School graduate is making a bid to establish a semi-pro football team in the city. Matt Morgan, of Amarillo, is seeking 20 to 25 men to play in semi-pro football league. The league began in 1983 with four Amarillo teams, one in Oklahoma City, and one in Wellington. The league is looking to expand this year with possible new teams in Hereford, Pampa, Borger and Lubbock, according to Morgan.

"There are really a lot of guys who like football and prospective members.

would like to play full-contact with pads and helmets. This is not going to be like getting together a bunch of guys and playing in the park on weekends," Morgan said. Morgan said he will be conducting tryouts in Hereford next Saturday and Sunday at 2 p.m. in Dameron Park. Saturday's tryout will be for offensive and defensive kicking specialists. Sunday will be for quarterbacks, running backs, receivers, and tight ends.

Team members are to pay for their own uniforms, which could cost anywhere from $250 to $300, Morgan said.

There is no age limit for making the team, but Morgan said players "cannot play if they're on a high school or college football team, or it they ever plan on playing for college.'

If a player plays on a semipro league, he would be ineligible to compete in college.

The team's name will be the Hereford Warriors and Morgan said he is going to try to rent Whiteface Stadium for home games. The Amarillo teams rent West Texas State University's stadium for its games at a cost of $1,200 a

There will be admission charge to any games played in Hereford. Morgan hopes to reimburse players for the cost of at least part of their uniforms with any profits ob-

Uniforms have to be ordered by April 1. Two-day a week practices should begin some time in July and the season would begin in September. Morgan said the season would include eight to 10 games, plus playoffs.

Games would be played on the weekends. While experience is preferred, it is not imperative.

TEMPE, Ariz. (AP) -Arizona Coach George Allen, who vowed his Wranglers would not lose a game in the United States Football League this season, was at a loss for words after Tampa Bay's victory here - but only temporarily.

Gary Anderson scored two touchdowns and Zenon Andrusyshyn kicked a pair of field goals Friday night as the Bandits used a 17-point second quarter to beat Arizona

"I really don't know what to say," Allen said. "We just made too many mistakes. Penalties (eight for 66 yards) hurt us and we just couldn't run at all (24 carries for 110 yards). We couldn't establish anything offensively. Tampa's a good offensive team - the top offensive team in the league - and they showed it."

John Reaves hit on 13 of 31 passes for 186 yards for Tampa Bay, now 2-0. Arizona, despite two fourth-quarter comebacks and a 204-yard passing performance by Greg Landry, fell to 1-1 before a crowd of 31,264 at 70,021-seat Sun Devil Stadium.

"Even though John didn't have a great statistical game, he played great for us," said Bandits Coach Steve Spurrier. "He kept his poise and he didn't have any turnovers. We played smart and Gary was just something else."

Anderson's 8-yard run gave the Bandits a 10-3 lead with 3:48 left in the second period. The score came four plays and 36 seconds after Tampa Bay's Mary Christian recovered a fumbled punt by Arizona's Lenny Willis at the Wrangler 13-yard line.

With 27 seconds remaining before halftime, Anderson dove over from the 1-yard line to cap a seven-play, 61-yard drive and make it

"We played all out to win. We weren't scared of them," Anderson said. "We played our kind of game and even though we didn't score a lot, we scored enough to win."

After a scoreless third period, Arizona closed the gap to 17-10 on Landry's 27-yard touchdown pass to Trumaine Johnson with 12:22 to go in the game.

Andrusyshyn booted a 49-yard field for a 20-10 lead with 2:55 left.

But the Wranglers rallied again on Landry's 4-yard scoring pass to Wamon Buggs with 59 seconds left to get within three points.

An onsides kick attempt failed, however, and Tampa Bay ran off the final 56 seconds to seal the victory. Andrusyshyn's 27-yard field goal 11 seconds into the second quarter had put the Bandits ahead 3-0. Arizona tied the score on Frank Corral's 21-yard field goal 8:02 later before Tampa Bay took control. Landry finished with 18 completions in 29 attempts and was intercepted once.

Anderson, who became the first USFL player to reach the 100-yard mark in both rushing and receiving in a game last Sunday, had 15 carries for 55 yards and caught two passes for 58 yards.

Although the Tampa Bay-Arizona contest kicked off a nine-game weekend schedule, the action was overshadowed by the announcement that former Oklahoma star running back Marcus Dupree would sign today with the New Orleans

And in Provo, Utah, Steve Young, Brigham Young's All-American quarterback, said he planned to decide this weekend whether to accept

In other signing news, the Express corraled defensive backs Allanda Smith of Texas Christian and Dwight Drane. Smith, a first-team All-Southwest Conference selection last fall, was the eighth player chosen in the USFL draft. He was picked by the Washington Federals, who traded his negotiating rights to the Express for future considerations.

Measuring vitamins

DEAR DR. LAMB became worried after I read your column concerning large doses of vitamin E.

Several years ago, my doctor recommended I take vitamin E for cysts in my breast. I haven't had cysts in

I started taking 400 units and it stated on the bottle this was the recommended daily amount. Recently I purchased a bottle of another brand and the daily recommended dose was 30 IU What is the difference between "mg." and "IU"? I am thoroughly confused.

Also, what is the correct

dosage?
DEAR READER — There are studies that suggest vitamin E in large doses is not always safe. But I'm really not concerned about people who take vitamin E prescribed by their physician.

I'm very concerned, however, about those who take large doses on their own for a variety of medical complaints. In fact, some people who take vitamin E for serious medical problems need medical attention or something more effec-

There are several different vitamin E substances. One milligram (mg.) of alpha-tocopherol is equiva-lent to 1.35 IU (international units); one mg. of gammatocopherol is equivalent to only one-twentieth of an IU. These confusing problems are now being standardized with a measure called "alpha-TE."

In any case, it's fine if your doctor wants you to take vitamin E for a breast cyst, as long as he's able to follow your progress and is certain you're not having any complications. But I must add that breast cysts often disappear on their own. It's equally important for women with cysts to eliminate all sources of caffeine and cigarettes. This appears to be very effective after one year in many

DEAR DR. LAMB - Ou daughter loves physical fitness. But when she jogs, her legs itch until she is nearly out of her mind. If she scratches, they break out into red welts. This is keep-haven't found anyone who knows anything about this. DEAR READER — Take your daughter to see an allergist. Some runners have this problem, although it's rare. It can be caused by an allergic reaction to heat. In those instances it's more apt occur during running in hot or humid weather.

After a medical examination, there are several things your daughter might try. One is the use of antihistamines before she runs, taken on a regular basis. Another trial effort would be to try cromolyn sodium, which is used to prevent asthmatic attacks. But she must see a doctor first.

DEAR DR. LAMB - I've had pernicious anemia for more than a year. I get vitamin B-12 shots twice a month. The anemia has left me with nerve damage in the hands and feet. My walking and balance are affected and so is my ability to judge distance, such as going through a door.

During this time I've also developed seborrhea. The dermatologist really didn't have a cure except for shampooing and using a cortisone salve.

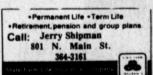

I think my seborrhea is caused by B-12 imbalance, but haven't found a solution. Do you have any sugges-

DEAR READER - If a person with vitamin B-12 deficiency is not adequately treated, he eventually could have nerve fibers degeneration in the spinal cord. This can lead to problems in walking and balance.

This is why anemia caused by a B-12 deficiency can't be treated by folic acid. Folic acid may improve the anemia, but it won't protect the vital nerve cells. The danger of the indiscriminate use of folic acid in large amounts is that it can mask a B-12 deficiency. During this time the damage to the spinal cord can progress and becomes irreversible.

Your seborrhea is not caused by your vitamin B-12 deficiency. Your doctor gave doubtful that it can be cured, but it can be controlled by

Junior Music Festival set Wednesday morning

The Junior Music Festival, Section I, First District, Texas Federation of Music Clubs, and Division I, Na-Federation of Music Clubs, is scheduled Wednesday at the First Baptist Church, 500 North Main, beginning at 8:50 a.m.

Arrangements have been made with Dr. Harrell Holder, superintendent of Hereford schools, for students to be excused from class for the time required to participate in the festival. Parents must send a note to the teachers to this effect.

A dutch treat luncheon is planned following the festival at the Hereford Country Club to honor judges, teachers, parents and other interested adults.

Those wishing to attend this luncheon are asked to make reservations with Mrs. Joe Reinauer Sr. (289-5505) or Mrs. Donald Meyer (578-4486) by Tuesday.

Local coordinators of the Junior Music Festival are the Hereford Music Study Club and the Dawn Music Club. Mrs. Reinauer is chairman and Ann Meyer is cochairman.

Piano, vocal and violin students are scheduled to participate in both solo and ensemble numbers on a noncompetitive basis. Each participant will receive a state certificate with his or her rating. .

Studios to be represented include the Jo Ella Cansler Studio, Evelyn Hacker Studio, Susan Shaw Studio, Elizabeth Criner Studio and Margaret Lyons. Also, the Melodic Lines, Thelma McMinn; and the Dawn Musettes, Ruby Wimberley.

Judges include Eva Miller of Friona, beginning piano;

Linda Kay Murphree of Friona, voice; Betty Hood of Pampa, advanced piano and hymn playing; and Rebecca Rudd of Hereford, violin.

Miller, retired after teaching organ, piano and voice for 35 years, remains active in musical activities in her community. She has been organist and pianist at the First Baptist Church for 37 years and she directed a girls' ensemble, the Trebelaires, for 25 years.

She has been affiliated with the Federated Music Clubs since she began teaching and has been with the National Guild for 10 years.

Murphree received her B.A. degree from Wayland Baptist University, where she was a member of International Choir and trained in private voice. She taught five years in secondary public schools and the last six years she has taught private voice.

She has judged voice competitions at church festivals in the Panhandle area. She is a member of the adult choir and directs a children's choir at First Baptist Church, and she directs Trebelaires, a high school girls' ensemble.

Hood did graduate study at Texas Tech University and was teacher of piano and theory at the Musical Arts Conservatory

She is past president of the Amarillo Music Teacher Association, was local Teacher of the Year in 1983, and is chairman of the student affiliate state participation award committee, Texas Music Teachers Association. She has served as accompanist for festival competitions, symphony auditions, and recitals at West Texas State University.

Rudd, a 1983 graduate of Texas Tech University with a bachelor's in music education, has been a private teacher for five years. She is a member of the San Angelo Symphony, Lubbock Symphony, Roswell Symphony and Amarillo Symphony.

While in high school she was in all-state orchestra, was a soloist at the WTSU concerto festival, received the National School Orchestra Award, and earned 1st division ratings on solos at the area and state solo con-

Goals in Congress ambitious but not realistic

WASHINGTON (AP) -There ought to be a law," an old saying goes.

Apparently the 29 members of Congress from Texas think so too. Last year they introduced 323 bills in the House and Senate.

Their goals were as ambitious and kaleidoscopic as Texas itself: End controls on natural gas. Provide an income tax credit for school tuition. Ease taxes on oil royalty holders. Stiffen sentences for convicted felons. Allow a tax credit for the cost of preparing a tax return.

Cotton may become like white gold

DENTON, Texas (AP) -Fields of soft, fuzzy bolls of cotton that for almost a century have been a mainstay for Texas farmers may glitter more like white gold in years to come.

Cotton holds the promise of a protein-rich food that could become a mainstay for good nutrition. If dreams' of a Japanese company and researchers at two Texas universities come true, cotton could again become king in Texas as its seed becomes a worldwide food.

Research at both Texas A&M and Texas Woman's University has opened the door for development of cotton seed as a food source for humans. The problem of getting the word to the buying public may be solved by a Japanese firm which is buying the only business in the nation that processes the cotton seed kernel for human consump-

Yazaki USA Inc. is in the final stages of purchasing Rogers Cotton Seed Co., a Waco seed firm that for several years has been the only source of the edible seed used by A&M and TWU research kitchens. "We're selling out because we needed worldwide marketing and we did not have the capital," said Rogers' board chairman,

W.T. Rogers. He will continue to operate the seed company under the new contract while Yazaki handles marketing, Rogers said What makes the cotton kernel so important is its high protein content.

It contains more protein than any other nut, including peanuts. One hundred grams of cotton seed flour is 60-percent protein, as compared to 48-percent protein for the same amount of peanut flour, said Carol Shanklin, associate professor of nutrition and food science at TWU. The same amount of allpurpose flour is only 12 percent protein and whole wheat flour is 14 percent. Soy flour is 42 percent protein. By contrast, 100 grams of broiled ground beef or stewed chicken contain about 30 percent protein. Substituting cotton seed flour for even 10 percent of wheat flour in a product will increase the protein content by 50 percent, TWU research shows. In some recipes for brownies and bar cookies, cotton seed flour can replace? all the wheat flour, increasing the protein content as much as 400 percent.

For undernourished people around the world, such a protein increase could be the difference between death and a healthy life.

And to top it off - cotton seeds are tasty. Most people who try them describe the flavor as akin to peanuts, cashews and sunflower seeds, said Rhonda Simmons, research associate for the Texas A&M Food Protein Research and Development Center.

The A&M center distributes what it calls TAMU nuts at conferences and meetings to advertise the product. TWU experts have developed a product called a bolla chip.

Similar in shape to a tortilla chip, it has a delicate, nutty flavor. Currently, TWU officials are working with their attorneys on possible sale of the product to a major company. They hope to work out a deal so that TWU might receive continuing financial Lady Bird Johnson. Curb highway taxes on trucks and trailers. Create a tax break on mortgage payments. Establish a national "Children's Day." Control excess profits on defense contracts. Authorize a medal of honor for a World War II

Like autumn leaves, these and scores of other proposals from Texas fluttered into the benefit to be applied to more research, Shanklin said.

Research kitchens at both universities have tested a whole line of recipes using the kernel, flour and the latest development - flakes. Flakes are being used to replace flour in many of the recipes with rave results, Shanklin said.

Manufacture of the flakes eliminates removing the oil from the kernel, a step that some believe leaves a slight aftertaste, although not as strong as the taste of soybeans. To substitute flakes for cotton seed flour, the cook has only to reduce the oil call, ed for in the recipe, she said.

Eliminating manufacturing steps also lowers the cost of the product - making it even more marketable. A five-pound sack of wheat flour sells for about $1.20 retail, while one pound of cotton seed flour purchased wholesale is $1.75. Flakes are just under $1 a pound wholesale.

Other recipes tempt sweets lovers with cookies and a peanut butter cup-style candy made with cotton butter. There're also pizza rolls with a crust of cotton seed flakes. The university researchers have tested their products on the best judges in the world youngsters in public schools and day-care centers.

The real benefit more than taste, however, was that students were taking in much higher protein levels than they would had they been eating products with wheat flour or peanuts.

Within five years, researchers and producers say the seed can assume a role in the marketplace as a major source of protein.

Cotton has been a staple for cloth production in nations for centuries. For years in the United States, the seed and waste products from the plant have provided cattle with a high protein diet. And cotton seed oil is found in an array of products already on grocery shelves. But humans - and other animals that lacked the double stomach that cattle have for digestion - have been unable to use the high protein substance left after the oil has been removed.

Cotton seed contains a pigment called gossypol that in high concentrations is toxic to humans. In small regulated amounts, gossypol is being used in China as a male contraceptive.

stitutional duty of a congressman - which is to legislate," said veteran Rep. Henry B. Gonzalez, a San Antonio Democrat who last year introduced 31 bills, the third highest among House members from Texas.

But in the Byzantine world of Capitol Hill, legislating is often far more easily talked about than accomplished.

For example, during the decade ending in 1982, or the 93rd through 97th Congresses, members from all 50 states introduced more than 87,000 pieces of legislation. Fewer than 3,600 were passed and signed into law.

Last year, the bills introduced by members from Texas fared little better.

Of the 323, just 17 passed the House and Senate and became law, according to an Associated Press analysis of data compiled by the Congressional Research Service.

Another 15 bills passed either the House or Senate but not both, the analysis

The totals include bills and joint resolutions, which are similar to bills. Not included are concurrent and simple resolutions, which do not have the force of law.

The other pending bills remain alive until the start of next year, when the two-year 98th Congress winds up its business. But if past experience is any guide, most will not make it into the statute books.

"(A bill introduction) is the start of a very long and frequently unproductive process in which you're trying to change the course of the country, or some small part of the country," said Jack Devore, an aide to Sen. Lloyd Bentsen, D-Texas, who last year introduced 49 bills, more than any member of Congress from Texas.

Nevertheless, getting one's legislation passed remains one of the few quantifiable measures of a congressman's success - and sometimes a failure to succeed can become an issue in a political campaign.

In the 1978 Senate race in Texas, for example, Democrat Bob Krueger charged that Republican Sen. John Tower had never had one of his bills passed. Bentsen made a similar charge in 1982 against his opponent, Republican Rep. Jim Collins. And this year, Rep. Phil Gramm of College Station is using the same tactic against Rep. Ron Paul of Lake Jackson as both battle for the Republican nomination for the Senate seat being vacated with Tower's retirement.

Fact sheets mailed out to potential campaign contributors by Gramm quote an article from a Texas newspaper saying that none of the bills introduced by Paul have ever been passed into

Voters elect a congressman "to accomplish a purpose," said Larry Neal, press secretary to Gramm, who has made much of his success as co-sponsor of President Reagan's belt-tightening budget legislation of 1981.

"The way in which most people think that's accomplished is by the passage of law," said Neal.

Last year, Paul introduced 32 bills, three times the average for Texas House members and an ambitious package of legislation that, if passed, would change the face of American society.

Included were measures to re-establish the gold standard, abolish the Federal Reserve System, bar loans to international organizations, do away with a broad range of federal regulations, establish a flat 10 percent income tax, make Social Security coverage optional, bar a federal minimum wage and end peacetime draft registration.

Not one of Paul's bills was approved by even a House committee last year. Nevertheless, he continues to send out news releases about still more bills he is introducing this year.

Paul said Congress, and not he, is to blame for his bills being stalled.

'I'm trying to reform this country and you can't do that without a few suggestions," said Paul. "I'm introducing a lot of bills in order to draw attention to the types of reforms we need...

"The fact that (members of Congress) ignore it doesn't say anything about whether (the legislation) is responsible or not," said Paul. "...Congress irresponsible."

However, some congressmen tend to view the flood of bills introduced by some others as little more than a public relations exercise - a way to convince the folks back home that some action is being taken when it really isn't.

"I think many members use it as a political tool," said freshman Rep. Mike Andrews, a Houston Democrat who last year introduced just one bill - for a flood control project in Harris County. "I don't think we ought to use just the filing of bills to impress the folks back home." Congressmen also can and often do - claim credit for legislation which they themselves do not introduce but to which they attach their names as secondary sponsors, or co-sponsors. Last year, members of Congress from Texas were listed sponsors of more than 3,900 bills, the AP analysis found. And when an issue is a particularly hot one, large numbers of congressmen may introduce nearly identical legislation to deal with

Among the congressmen introducing bills to repeal such withholding were a a number from Texas - including John Bryant, a Dallas Democrat; Kika de la Garza, a Mission Democrat; Gonzalez and Tom Loeffler, a Hunt Republican.

A bill to repeal the withholding did pass, but it was not one introduced by any of the Texans.

Rep. Ralph Hall, a Rockwall Democrat, said he favored repealing the withholding provision too but refrained from introducing a bill to do it.

'For purposes of home consumption, I could have introduced the same bill," said Hall, who last year dropped just two pieces of legislation into the hopper.

But Hall said that "it doesn't make any sense to introduce a bill for your home consumption if there's already a bill introduced."

Sometimes, conversely, no matter how much legislation is introduced, nothing seems to happen.

Perhaps no issue appeared so critical in Texas last year as providing additional federal aid to South Texas businesses to help them deal with the economic disruption caused by 1982 devaluations of the Mexican peso.

Bills to provide such assistance were introduced by Tower, de la Garza and Rep. Abraham Kazen, a Laredo Democrat. None passed either the House or Senate.

Kazen said the Reagan administration opposed such measures and it is especially difficult to sell such regional aid to other members of Congress, many whose districts have their own economic problems.

"We were up against a tough rock," said Kazen, who said he still hopes such legislation can be approved this year.

Gonzalez, who had three bills became law in 1983, said it can take years before the right combination of circumstances make Congress receptive to a particular bill. Gonzalez recalled how he first introduced a bill in 1965 to provide $50,000 to the survivors of a law enforcement agent or fireman killed in the line of duty. He said he was "laughed at and I couldn't even get a committee hearing" on the bill.

The came the urban riots of the late 1960s, sparking concern in Congress over the families of such victims. Finally, in 1976 - more than a decade after it was first introduced - such a bill pass-

Now, Gonzalez is sponsoring similar legislation to provide $50,000 to the survivors of any armed services member killed in the line of duty. He said, "I have the same resistance to that. But it's going to pick up and it's going to pass."

Sometimes a member of Congress will be unable to get his own bill passed but can, during committee sessions or floor debate, get at least some of its provisions amended into another bill that subsequently passes.

And such successes are not reflected in oft-cited totals comparing bills introduced with bills passed.

Of the 49 bills introduced last year by Bentsen, for example, only two passed the Senate and none was signed into law.

But one of those bills that never passed was considered of critical importance in West Texas - a measure requiring the Agriculture Department to make government-held feed grain available at bargain prices to farmers and ranchers suffering from the drought.

In early October, Bentsen was able to get the bill's provisions attached on the Senate floor to a dairy assistance measure that eventually passed Congress and was signed by the president. Bentsen's original bill still languishes in committee, but the grain went to West Texas ranchers.

In other cases, a congressman may try to claim credit even though it was not his bill or amendment that was approved.

In September, for example, Loeffler announced he had managed to attach to another bill an amendment that like Bentsen's - would have required Block to implement a livestock feed program for drought-smitten farmers and ranchers.

But later in the month the Agriculture Department announced it was reducing interest rates on emergency loans for farmers. Loeffler told a news conference that he was satisfied with the department's solution and would drop, at least for the time being, his efforts to pass an amendment requiring an emergency feed grain profor the Bentsen amendment mounted, Loeffer said it had been "my position all along" that emergency feed grain should be provided. And after Bentsen's amendment was signed into law, Loeffler's office issued a statement saying that it was Loeffler "who first proposed" such a program. When it comes to major legislative initiatives, committee and subcommittee chairmen and senior members are most likely to see bills passed in their names, largely because of Congress' much-cherished seniority system. A member of Congress is also likely to have a far more difficult time getting a major bill approved if his party does not control the chamber in which he sits. Rep. Steve Bartlett of Dallas must confront both obstacles. He is a freshman, first elected in 1982. And he is a Republican, trying to work in a House controlled by Democrats.

Last year, his first in Congress, Bartlett introduced not a single bill. His only introduction was of a resolution, which would not have the effect of law, expressing the sense of Congress that the federal government should encourage excellence in education. And that resolution did not pass.

because of his situation, he made a conscious choice to try to work through the amendment process rather than introduce bills of his own. He said he had gotten more than two dozen amendments passed in committee or on the floor.

"The point is what gets in the legislation that passes, not who introduces it or whose name is on it," said

Texas clings to morality espicially during election the facade, the pussyfooting

EDITOR'S NOTE -Despite its image as wild and wooly, hard-drinking and fast-living, much of Texas still clings to a certain 19th Century morality. It is part of its charm, or perhaps its curse, depending on one's point of view. But rarely is it more evident than during a good old West Texas liquor election.

SAN ANGELO, Texas (AP) Probably half a hundred rural hamlets once lay claim to being the "wettest little dry town in Texas," suggesting that illegal booze flowed freely if not openly.

Usually both. But up until recently, only San Angelo, population 75,000, the sheep and goat

That came about last year after voters in Tom Green County approved liquor by the drink in an election that some said ran long on emotion and short on validity.

In effect, County Clerk Marie Russell rendered the election meaningless by refusing to certify applications for mixed drink

She maintained it was not her Church of Christ convictions that compelled such inaction. Instead, she said, a series of justice precinct elections dating back to the 19th century apparently took precedence over the more recent countywide election.

Likewise, an uncommonly articulate letter writer named David P. Hughes accused the anti-liquor party of running ads that "pander to irrational emotion." He said one in particular "assaulted my sensibilities with its sanctimonious appeal to irrational fears, supported by questionable statistics."

Meanwhile, records showed that 16 alcohol elections had been held here since Prohibition was repealed in 1933. During those 50 years, voters approved beer sales on and off premise and permitted package liquor stores to operate outside city limits.

Actually, open saloons were legally foreign to all of Texas until the 1960s when Gov. John Connally, a nondrinker, coerced legislators into passing a mixed beverage law on a local option basis. He did so in the name of tourism and convention business.

Reginald Smith wrote that drinking "is a silly, nasty, dangerous, expensive, unnecessary habit."

As the war of words raged on, something called the "American Citizens of Texas" scheduled a rally to protest the refusal by county officials to process the mixeddrink permits.

Arrests threaten all workers

McALLEN, Texas (AP) -Lutheran leaders fear that the arrests of three Americans and three Salvadorans in South Texas could lead to more arrests of Americans involved in the underground railroad and endanger the lives of Lutheran Church members in El Salvador.

An investigator for the church, who asked not to be named, has been in the Valley since Monday piecing together the circumstances surrounding the arrests of Times-Herald Dallas reporter Jack Fischer, nun Dianne Muehlenkamp, social worker Stacey Lynn Merkt and three Salvadorans, Mauricio Valle, Brenda Sanchez-Galan and her 18-month-old child.

The six were arrested at dawn on Feb. 17 on a rural road near Rio Grande City.

U.S. Magistrate Susan Rees Williams will decide Friday whether or not to dismiss charges against Ms. Merkt and Fischer, who, Miss with Muehlenkamp, are accused of transporting illegal aliens. The preliminary hearing was conducted Feb. 24.

But when we have been made perfect and complete, then the need for these inadequate special gifts will come to an end, and they will disappear.

It's like this: when I was a child I spoke and thought and reasoned as a child does. But when I became a man my thoughts grew far beyond those of my chilhood, and now I have put away the childish things.

In the same way, we can see and understand only a little about God now, as if we were peering at His reflection in a poor mirror; but someday we are going to see Him in His completeness, face to face. Now all that I know is hazy and blurred, but then I will see everything clearly, just as clearly as God sees into my heart, and now.

There are three things that remain-faith, hope, and love-and the greatest of these is love.

Fierde February beats destructive path across Texas

Texas (AP) - Fierce February winds, accompanied by a variety of other weather ranging from some snow and rain to freezing temperatures and dust storms, beat a destructive path across Texas this week, creating extensive damage to many agricultural operations, says Dr. Zerle L. Carpenter, director of the Texas Agricultural Extension Service.

In extremely dry Southwest Texas, the winds gusted at more than 60 miles an hour and fanned brush and grass fires over thousands of acres of land near San Antonio in Bexar County, as well as Frio and other adjoining counties, destroying farm buildings and equipment, homes, corrals, and a number of airplanes. Extensive fire damage also was reported in Blanco and Travis Counties, in South Central Texas.

Corn, cabbage and cantaloupe crops in Southwest Texas were at the vulnerable seedling stage, and not only sustained wind damage but were also subject to freezing temperatures which continued at mid-week, Carpenter said.

The strong winds also caused serious erosion problems in many areas of Southwest, West Central and South Central Texas in particular which were already moisture-short, Carpenter said. Tons of wind-whipped dry soils were deposited on highway surfaces in Frio and neighboring counties and had to be removed by county maintainers in order to allow vehicle passage.

A freak snow storm struck the Panhandle and South Plains and the strong winds which accompanied it created power outages and toppled miles of electric fences and let cattle herds out

Calf crop down again

COLLEGE STATION - The 1983 calf crop represented the fifth year of decreased calf numbers in the nation, and perhaps will stimulate improved price levels for producers, says an economist in livestock marketing.

The USDA's inventory report for 1983 indicated that the nation had a 1 percent decrease in calf numbers from the previous year, but in Texas, numbers dropped by 4 percent, according to Dr. Edward Uvacek, with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service, Texas A&M University System. These reductions should be enough to strengthen the market in 1984, he said.

Individual state calf crops varied, however, Uvacek adds. Twenty-one states recorded either the same size or a larger calf crop than in

Some of the snow reached into portions of West Central Texas, but failed to provide much moisture at any location.

In South Texas, showers delayed planting of corn and grain sorghum, but producers planned to resume planting as quickly as field conditions would permit. Planting of corn and sorghum also has started in the Coastal Bend with conditions there favorable, Carpenter said.

Cold soil temperatures and lack of adequate planting moisture further delayed the planting of corn in some areas of South Central Texas. Along the Upper Coast, the soil is too wet and too cold to plant, Carpenter added.

District Extension directors report the following midweek conditions.

PANHANDLE: A light snowfall received over the weekend in much of the area provided some moisture, but the wheat crop needs more. Cattle are in fair to good condition, with feeding still prevalent for animals on native range pastures.

SOUTH PLAINS: A weekend snow storm and strong gusty winds toppled electric fences and allowed cattle herds to mingle, resulting in impromptu cattle roundups by owners. Land preparation and pre-plant irrigation for sugar beets and vegetables is under way. ROLLING PLAINS: Wheat is responding to milder temperatures but moisture is needed in most counties. Water supplies are getting low and recharge of tanks is needed. Fall-seeded oats are being turned under, and some spring oats are being replanted. Small grain pastures are again boosting livestock gains in some areas, although supplemental feeding is still required in much of the district. Potato planting is under way, along with cabbage and onion planting, in some counties.

NORTH CENTRAL: Corn and sorghum producers ex-pect to start planting their crops next week, and soil preparation and planting of early vegetables also continues. Wheat that was recently topdressed with nitrogen is making growth, and clovers and cool season grasses are progressng. Supplemental livestock feeding continues with most cattle in fair to good condition. Orchard pruning is another seasonal activity. NORTHEAST: Wheat is improving and producers are topdressing the crop with nitrogen to boost growth. Hay supplies are becoming tighter as heavy feeding of cattle continues. Spring garden planting is accelerating, and fruit tree owners are pruning and spraying their trees.

FAR WEST: Producers are taking advantage of fair weather to continue land preparation for spring crops. Cattlemen are continuing to provide supplemental feed for cows and calves, as range conditions worsen. Some fruit trees are trying to break buds.

WEST CENTRAL: Most parts of the district received light snow or freezing rain this week, resulting in about .25 of moisture, but moisture remains short throughout the district. Strong drying winds have further depleted moisture supplies. Oats are making poor growth and hay is in short supply. Supplemental feeding of livestock continues heavy, with the calving and lambing season progressing. Spring sharing is also getting started. Land preparation continues for spring planting.

CENTRAL: Rain is needed throughout the district. Shortage of stock water and hay supplies are becoming more critical in parts of the district. Supplemental cattle feeding continues at a brisk clip, and the calving season is progressing. Land preparation for spring gardening is another major activity.

EAST: With adequate soil moisture, producers are making preparations for planting corn. Cool weather vegetable crops also are being planted in some areas. Hay supplies are decreasing rapidly as supplemental feeding of livestock continues. Oats are beginning to make good growth and winter pastures are improving.

UPPER COAST: More rains came to the Upper Coast area early this past week, pushing the moisture level to the surplus category. The soil remains too wet and too cold to plant, so major activities continue to be supplemental feeding of livestock, land preparation and fertilization. Wheat fields are looking good and other Irrigated farms have their watering systems going at virtual capacity as farmers plant corn, grain sorghum and cantaloupes. Freezing weather at midweek was expected to damage seedling stages of these crops. Dry conditions have caused pastures to further deteriorate, and ranchers are providing heavy supplementation for their livestock. The calving, lambing and kidding seasons are progressing. Fires, fanned by the gale-force winds, have been a problem in many areas with dry, dormant brush or forage.

COASTAL BEND: Planting of corn and grain sorghum is under way, with planting conditions and moisture favorable in many areas. Wheat is making excellent growth. Vegetable gardens are being planted. Ranges and pastures are in fair condition, and cattle are showing some improvement. Most ranchers are continuing to feed their stock, however.

SOUTH: Showers up to almost an inch of rain delayed planting of sorghum and corn during the early part of the week, but farmers will resume planting as rapidly as field conditions permit. Cotton planting will follow soon, and hay planting work is under way. The sugarcane harvest is winding down in the Rio Grande Valley, where harvests of cabbage, carrots and broccoli are continuing with good market demand. Hedging efforts on citrus trees have begun on a limited basis, with many trees producing green stems following the freeze die-back. Cattle continue to supplemental receive "Untold thousands are being gypped out of millions of dollars annually by these shysters with their nationwide advertisements," said Everett E. Janne, landscape horticulturist with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service, Texas A&M University System.

"By its very nature, the nursery industry often provides an open invitation to the unscrupulous," Janne said.

"And, after a particularly severe winter such as we have had this year, people are anxious to repair the damaged landscapes, making them even more susceptible to promoters with hit-andrun items or services."

While the majority of nurserymen and garden center operators are honest, reliable businessmen who give full value for money received, there are always a few who are out for a fast buck, Janne said. To help separate the legitimate businessman from the fastbuck artist, the horticulturist offered these suggestions:

Farmers so efficient, 'Uncle' trims them down

Farm Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) - So great is the American farmer's capacity to produce that periodically, unless bad weather steps in first, the government must perform radical surgery to trim it down to size.

Such was last year. After two record harvest seasons and a depressed world economy, farmers idled 77 million acres - the equivalent of the combined cropland of France, Greece, Norway, Sweden, Denmark and Ireland - to try to cut production and boost prices.

But as it often does, nature dealt farmers a devastating blow. A drought, said to be the worst in nearly half a century in the Corn Belt, burned through most of the eastern half of the nation, riddling crop yields.

In all, between the govern-drought, U.S. crop production plummeted 26 percent from the 1982 record.

The centerpiece was PIK a payment-in-kind program that funneled $9.7 billion worth of surplus wheat, corn, sorghum, rice and cotton to farmers who reduced plantings of those crops in 1983.

To the extent that surplus grain stockpiles are being reduced and market prices boosted, PIK was a success. But critics say it was a costly bandage and that fundamental policy changes are needed to help American farmers escape a roller-coaster of boom and bust.

The PIK concept has been laid aside this year, except for a scaled-down version for wheat, but it and other wideranging farm programs of recent years reflect the turmoil that periodically affects American agriculture.

farmers were additionally burdened by the economic recession in the United States and abroad.

But many forecasters say the tide is slowly turning in favor of the farmer. The U.S. Department of Agriculture says farm income may actually increase modestly this year, due in part to billions of dollars in federal payments. As the world economy improves, so will demand for American products.

Problems persist, of course. Farm debt is creeping to new records, and foreclosures are up sharply. Even for those getting by, big debts and high interest rates worker produced enough crops and livestock to feed 4.1 people. It until 1920 for U.S. farm productiviy to double so that one worker could feed an average of 8.3 people.

It was a revolutionary 100 years. Horsepower replaced hand labor. Railroads and the onrush of immigrants sped the development of what was to become a foodbasket for much of the world.

The agriculture revolution has never stopped. After 1920, horses gave way to tractors, and fertilizer and new hybrid seeds boosted yields. Cattle and hogs produced more meat, and cows more milk.

In 1953, a single farmer would feed 17.2 people, with the average rising to 37 people in 1965. Now it's 75.

Today, farmers are going through another of their periodic trials caused, in part, by an ability to produce surpluses that depress prices and reduce incomes. In 1982, the most recent year for which USDA figures are available, farmers had a net income of approximately $22.1 billion, an average of less than $9,200 per farm.

Agriculture Secretary John R. Block has said repeatedly that he is optimistic for the future of farming and that the vast land-idling venture to reduce 1983 crop output was "the largest, most successful farm program in the history of American agriculture."

"Everyone may have a mental image of the 'typical' farm, but it is certain to be wrong if only because there scarcely is such a farm," say two agricultural economists, Harold F. Breimyer of the University of Missouri and Lyle P. Schertz of the USDA's Economic Research Service.

"The only accurate picture is of an agriculture of extreme diversity."

Breimyer and Schertz contend that the traditional family farm "is fading slowly from the scene as many parttime farms and a relatively few large units replace it."

While farm acreage has remained fairly stable since the mid-1930s - about 1.04 billion acres in 1983 — the number of farms generally has declined, from a record 6.8 million in the '30s to fewer than 2.4 million in 1983. That means the size of the average farm has has almost tripled, from 154 acres in the mid-1930s to 437 acres last year. Farm population has declined from about 32.4 million people in 1933 to about 7.2 million in 1980.

"The 'good old days' on the farm are gone, and there are those who lament this change," said Deputy Secretary Richard E. Lyng, the No. 2 official in USDA. "But the ability of one farmer to feed more than his or her family and a neighbor or two is worth a lot.

"It freed a work force for the Industrial Revolution the Wright brothers could tinker with a flying machine rather than feed the hogs or plant the wheat, Dr. Jonas Salk could cultivate microbes rather than maize, so polio is no longer the scourge of children. And the list goes in the top wheat producing county in Kansas, are grappling with one of the biggest economic decisions they'll have to make this year.

Because the tops of the carrots were frozen, they cannot be harvested by machine. Harvesting by hand will drive the prices up slightly in the stores.

They're trying to decide whether to harvest the wheat they have already planted, or to participate in the federal government's acreage reduction program and cut it down.

Last year, Dvorak put all of his 800 Sumner County wheat acres into the program and its new brother, Payment in Kind. In return for not harvesting wheat, the government paid Dvorak about 33.5 bushels per acre, which was 93 percent of his 36-bushel per acre five-year average yield.

Dvorak also was allowed to cut for silage or let his cattle graze out the wheat he had agreed not to harvest.

Besides his PIK bushels, Dvorak, 56, qualified for other federal program benefits, including a cash payment for taking some of his acres out of production, government-backed crop loans and deficiency payments.

About two miles away from Dvorak's operation, Yearout chose to harvest his grain last year. He received no federal benefits but figured he would be way ahead. He sigured

China scales down purchases of wheat, corn

WASHINGTON (AP) -China, which ranked seventh in 1982 as a cash customer of the American farmer, dropped to 17th place last year as sales of wheat and other commodities took a nose dive, a new Agriculture Department report says.

According to the department's Economic Research Service, U.S. commodity sales to China in calendar 1983 were valued at $544 million, down 64 percent from more than $1.5 billion in 1982.

The agency said Thursday in a new FATUS report -Foreign Agricultural Trade of the United States - that shipments of wheat to China last year were valued at only $377.7 million, compared to $1.05 billion in 1982. Sales of feed grain were worth $158.1 million, down from $189.4 million the previous year.

Once a big U.S. cotton customer, China bought only $2.34 million worth last year, compared to $177.8 million in

Under a four-year bilateral agreement with the United States, China is committed to buy a minimum of 6 million metric tons of wheat and corn each year. But in 1983, in the wake of a dispute over U.S. textile import restrictions, China scaled back its purchases.

A metric ton is about 2,205 pounds and is equal to 36.7 bushels of wheat or 39.4 bushels of corn.

Moreover, according to the latest figures released Thursday, China still has bought only 932,200 tons of wheat for delivery in 1984, the fourth and final year of the pact.

The trade organization, U.S. Wheat Associates, said the 1983 figures showing China's drop in purchases was expected and that the situation could be even "While China has given assurances that it will purchase additional grain in 1984 to make up for the 1983 shortfall - plus the 6 million tons for 1984 - there is growing concern that it may not buy the two-year total of 12 million tons," the wheat group said in a newsletter to members.

The value of U.S. farm exports declined overall in calendar 1983 to $36.1 billion from $36.6 billion in 1982, the USDA report said. Japan remained as the leading singlecountry buyer with imports valued at $6.25 billion, up 13 percent from 1982.

Ag factors lead to excessive soil erosion in recent years

COLLEGE STATION - Soil erosion by both wind and water is a major problem in Texas and is continually aggravated by some current farming practices and economics.

"The economics of modern farming, larger equipment, high interest rates and careless consrvation attitudes have all led to excessive soil erosion in recent years," said Dr. B.L. Harris, soils specialist with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service, Texas A&M University System.

WASHINGTON (AP) -Farmers who take out price support loans this month will pay a lower interest rate, says the Agriculture Department.

Commodity loans disbursed in March will carry an interest of 9-78 percent, down from 10 percent previously, the department said Thursday. The lower rate also will apply to loans obtained from the Commodity Credit Corp. for farm storage facilities.

a factor in soil erosion, Harris noted. Farmers leasing cropland often cannot afford soil conservation practices. And, unless a leasee has a long-term agreement, he has no guarantee that he will obtain adequate benefit from soil conservation work.

"Improving land management practices is the key to solving soil erosion problems," Harris believes. 'If farmers believe they must continue to farm erosive land, they should follow farming practices that help cut down on erosion."

Contouring and terracing can cut erosion losses in half. Leaving crop residue on the ground can reduce erosion by another 40 percent. Conservation tillage and double cropping also help. Some farmers shy away from these practices because of the costs involved, the specialist said.

"The best solution is to use each acre for what it is best adapted to produce," Harris emphasized. "Soil erosion has increased in areas where more sloping pasture land is now used to grow crops. Returning such land to its original state would all concerned. It would be a way to slow the process of erosion, rebuild the topsoil, and save the land for future

Friends of Library conducting membership drive this month

Virginia Bayne, at left, treasurer of the Friends of the Library, and Joy Stagner, secretary, encourage everyone who is interested in promoting public awareness and support of the Deaf Smith County Library to join the Friends during the annual membership drive this month.

Craig Campbell gets ready to make a big haul at the Deaf Smith County Library, and finds that his stroller will do the job quite nicely. Even a 2-yearold can get in on the fun when his family supports the local library, and this is as good a time as any to show that support as the month of March is the Friends of the Library's annual membership drive.

Between the Covers

By DIANNE PIERSON County Librarian

'Be a friend"... Who are the Friends of the Deaf Smith County Library? They are a group of citizens in our community who have a common concern for the library's active expansion and participation in community life. They have a conviction that good library service is important to everyone. The Friends of the Library organization is a very important one to the Hereford library. It helps your library by working for library legislation and appropriations as well as intensifying community awareness and use of the library.

The Friends of the Library are also sponsors of the family film which adds to the cultural life of our community and provides financial assistance by purchasing special and unusual items which are of great benefit but cannot be purchased from the library's budget.

The average cost of the Family Film is $58 per month, compared to $48 of approximately two years ago, therefore, to continue this service to our community, we urge you to pledge your support to the Friends of the Library.

March will be the Friends' annual membership drive. You may pay your annual dues at the library throughout the month of March. Current officers of the Friends of the Library are: Mrs. Ronald Fuhrmann, president; Mrs. E.V. Stagner, secretary; and Mrs.

Dudley Bayne, treasurer. Other Board members are Bob Wear, Mrs. R.W. Eades, Mrs. Dyal Garner, Mrs. James Glueck, Mrs. Jim Campbell, and Mrs. Glen

Membership dues are as follows: individual memberships $2; organization membership $5; business membership $10; lifetime membership $100.

Beer among abused drugs

DEAR ANN LANDERS: During the Christmas holidays our 20-year-old son (a sophomore in college) came home for nine days. He and his friends were in and out of the house constantly. They put away at least a dozen six-packs every night. When I commented on what looked to me like too much drinking, my husband said, "Don't complain-it's better than hard liquor or drugs."

My sister's college-age children (a boy and a girl) are also big on beer. The boy was involved in a car accident last June and declared legally drunk. My sister was surprised to discover how zonked her son got on beer. She thought it was a very safe drink for teenagers.

When I was growing up, we drank a little on weekends, but very few in our crowd were ever seriously intoxicated. I remember a girl in my high school who passed out. The students talked about it for months.

Am I unduly alarmed, as my husband says? You are in a position to know what goes on, Ann. Please tell us.-Illinois Mom

DEAR MOM: You are not "unduly alarmed." There is plenty to be concerned about. I'd say you are right on.

Beer is an alcoholic drink and alcohol is the most abused drug of all. People who believe beer is "safe" are fooling themselves. Authorities in the field tell us that many alcoholics drink nothing BUT beer.

A three-year survey at Southern Illinois University in Carbondale, Ill., showed that the use of alcohol (beer as well as booze) interfered with the academic performance of one student in every five. One-third of the student body were described as heavy drinkers."

The studies I see most often indicate that 20 percent of all college students (male or female) have a drinking pro-

Part of the difficulty is economics. The beer companies are the most consistently reliable sources for funding campus activities.

Either the colleges must stop accepting money from them or be prepared to accept the consequences. The alternative is for other kinds of sponsors to step in and pick up the tab.

Any takers out there? I can't think of a better investment in human resources at a time when it is not considered unusual for a college student to get drunk two or three times a week.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I married a man with four unmarried children.

I thought they would be no problem because they are adults. I was wrong. My husband and I have not been alone for more than 30 days at a stretch. At least one of his children (occasionally three at a sine) have lived with us while looking for work. They have stayed anywhere from two weeks to 11 months.

These children are ruining our marriage. I feel as if I'm running a boarding house. Any advice?--Florida

DEAR FLO: If they are really trying to find work, you are stuck. When you marry a man with children, they are part of the package. However, you have a right to insist that these unemployed boarders and roomers help with the housework, errands, aundry, etc. Your husband should back you.

Don't get burned by a "line" that's too hot to handle. Play it cool with Ann Lander's guide to "Necking and Petting - What Are the Limits?" Send your request to Ann Landers, P.O. Box 11995, Chicago, Illinois 60611 enclosing 50 cents and a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope.

Louise's Latest

By LOUISE WALKER County Extension Agent

Pattern companies and the ready-to-wear industry have begun to realize that not all consumers are size 10 or 12. For example, pattern companies have added a section to their catalogs for those "size 16 plus," and introduced new designs in this section. More ready-to-wear stores have added sections known as fashion plus or women's sizes. So those who wear larger sizes have a greater choice today.

But with a greater readyto-wear selection, how do you decide what to buy or sew?

Study the latest fashions on the market. Know what colors, textures and styles are in and are available. Choose a style that is fashionable and personally becoming.

Shortening a jacket, for example, may make it look more attractive on your figure. Fullness can be added at the shoulders by soft gathers or pleats at the sleeve

If you are selecting a fabric for a garment, unroll several yards and drape it around your figure similar to a style you are considering. Check yourself carefully in a fulllength mirror. How does the fabric look on you? Does it create the illusion you wish to achieve? Consider what you currently own to coordinate it

Notice the fabric's weight and texture. What effect does the color have? Doe the texture flatter your figure or draw attention to it?

With your goal of looking fashionable and well-dressed for your size, consider combinations of fabrics which flatter your face and figure. How does your height affect the fabric's appearance?

Remember that vertical stripes are not always slenderizing, nor do horizontal stripes always make one appear larger. The stripes' width and color play an important role in moving the eye up and down or across. Stripes may be used to em-part of the body. Diagonal stripes - from one shoulder to hemline on the other side can be dramatic on a larger figure. Check the hemline that is most flattering to you.

Are waist-length or justbelow-the-waist jackets more flattering than hip length ones? Longer jackets are better with pants. Look for designs which feature side or waistline bust darts.

A waistband closing that is concealed in a side pocket may be more flattering. A blouse that has a little fullness around the waist area can cover extra pounds - but not too much fullness since this adds size to the

With a little time and a few pointers, you can take full advantage of the fashion industry's discovery of "size 16 plus" consumers.

SUNGLASSES AT NIGHT

QUESTION: Lately, my teenage son and his friends have taken to wearing dark sunglasses at night when they go out. I suppose they think it's "cool." I don't mind, except I wonder if it can harm their eyes in any way. Can it?

ANSWER: Sunglasses are designed for outdoor wear in bright sunshine or under glare producing conditions. They ould not be worn at night, particularly when driving Sunglasses substantially reduce the amount of light entering the eyes and seriously decrease the ability to see objects under conditions which are normally marginal at

Grover Cleveland

Grover Cleveland is ranked, according to the State Department, as both the 22nd and 24th president of the United States. He is the only chief executive to serve two non-consecutive terms. Elected in 1884, he was defeated for re-election in 1888 by Benjamin Harrison, though Cleveland led in the popular vote. He recap-tured the presidency in 1892 by defeating Harrison.

Dobbs, Talk repeat vows here changed by Nora LeAnn Dobbs and Lonny Howard Talk, of San Francisco, Calif., Saturday evening in the Frio Baptist Church with the Rev. Sam Ogan, pastor of Sanborn Baptist Church in Amarillo, officiating.

Two candelabra decorated with English ivy and silk bows adorned the front of the church and a unity candle was placed on the center of the altar.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James Dobbs of Summerfield and the bridegroom is the son of Edmond Talk and Mrs. Opal Talk, both of La Vernia, Texas.

Matron of honor was Karla Fellers and best man was Danny Alvarez of San Francisco. The bride's sister, Kerri Dobbs, served as bridesmaid and Randy Fellers was groomsman.

The bride's uncle, Jim Cassels of Guymon, Okla., seated the guests, and Brian Cassels of Guymon, cousin of the bride, lit the candles.

Flower girl was Sarah Patton of Pima, Ariz., niece of the bride and daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Patton.

Cynthia Streun, pianist, played wedding selections. "We've Only Just Begun" and "The Lord's Prayer" were vocalized by Selenda Baldock of Plainview.

Given in marriage by her parents, the bride wore a white, floor-length dress of lace over taffeta. The high neckline was trimmed with lace and ribbon, featuring a yoke framed by a deep ruffle, and the skirt formed a flounce in the back trailing to a cascade of lace.

Her veil, which was attached to a headpiece trimmed with white silk flowers, was a fine double-layered illusion with tapered cut. The bride wore diamond earrings, a gift from the groom, a matching pearl necklace, and her great-grandmother's wedding ring.

The bridal bouquet, a cascade set on a base of white lace and lavender and purple streamers, featured lavender and purple silk carnations, rose buds, English ivy, and Bells of Ireland. It was placed on top of the bride's mother's. wedding Bible which was also carried by her sister in her wedding.

The matron of honor and bridesmaid wore lavender chiffon, floor-length dresses with sheer, ruffled sleeves and carried small cascades of lavender and purple silk carnations and rose buds.

Renee Patton, sister of the bride from Pima, Ariz., registered guests at the reception which followed in the church fellowship hall.

The bride's bouque centered the refreshment table, which was covered with a candlelight tablecloth accented with bows. The three tiered wedding cake was decorated with garlands of lavender daisies and a fountain underneath.

Cara Herrera served the bride's cake and Freda Davis served the groom's cake. Punch was poured by Georgia Smith and coffee was served by Kay Paetzold. As the couple left for a wedding trip to East Texas, the bride wore a lavender dress with ruffled sleeves and a corsage of lavender carnations and roses. They will be at home in Hereford after

West Central, along with other elemtary school in Hereford, is initiating a reading management system in which specific objectives are identified and pursued through a variety of educational approaches until mastered.

Work on the program has been utilized to reach primary objectives in using reference skills, the index and writing an invitation. Students have also experienced understanding poetry, interpretting the feelings and motivations of a character, creating scenery, being filmed on video tape to critique themselves and speaking before an audience as well as having a positive and meaningful experience with classical literature.

Preschool program offered for four year-olds

A preschool program for four-year-old migrant children is offered in each of the six elementary campuses of the Hereford Independent School District.

The program is designed to enrich the experiences of migrant children and to better prepare them for the regular kindergarten curriculum.

In order to qualify for the program, the child must be four years old before Sept. 1 of the year registering for school. The child must be classified as either an active or a former migrant and must have at least one family member affiliated with agriculture.

Each class is allowed to have a maximum of 20 students and is staffed by a certified kindergarten teacher and a full time teacher's aide. The daily schedule of each program coincides with elementary grades one through three where classes begin at 8:15 a.m. and ends at 2:45 p.m. Lunch is offered in the cafeteria of each campus and snacks are provided each

A unit of Texas being studied at Northwest

On Jan. 9 the third grade classes of Northwest Primary School began a unit of study entitled, "Texas, Our Texas. The purpose of this study is to teach to boys and girls important facts about their state in order to have a better understanding and pride in where they live, their neighbors, and their heritage.

The children have been very eager to participate in the discussion, special art projects, and other activities designed to acquaint them with the facts about our state. Flags covered with red, white, and blue tissue paper were made to symbolize the Lone Star Flag of Texas. Students glued popcorn tinted blue with powdered tempera on pictures of bluebonnets to designate the state flower.

The state tree is the pecan. Trees were made by each student by dropping a small amount of tempera paint on a sheet of paper and blowing it with a straw to form a tree.

Any child desiring to do something extra made his own project at home and then brought it for exhibition. Such projects have been salt maps of the state denoting the

Students welcome Laotion children

The bilingual program at Northwest Primary School has students of a different nationality to work with this year. Laotian people have moved to Hereford and have enrolled their children in school.

Four of the students have never been to school a day in their lives. They were fearful and frightened of their new surroundings and of school. They had to adjust to American food.

The boys and girls in the second grade at Northwest took the Laotian children under their wings, and the Laotian children were on their way to learning

Dance look. (If you missed the movie, that's somewhat tattered sweat clothes). Adding color to once-gray sweatshirt fabric, designers have cut holes in strategic places, cropped pants at the ankle or above and ripped out the neck and sleeve bands of the traditional sweatshirt and

At Sunset Beach, the Flash Dance styling has been applied to a lightweight cotton jersey for summer (much cooler than sweatshirting). It's then trimmed with Ariel, a parachute cloth look-alike that breathes and takes color beautifully.

Another strong trend can be seen at Sunset Beach, as well as in the Hang Ten line knit spliced with mesh or fishnet. Usually seen in T-shirts that blaze with color, you'll also find it in pant pockets or as trim on shorts.

Pants will come in every length imaginable--from below the ankle to the Stripes continue to be the most universal pattern, with plaids beginning to show up, especially in the softer tones. Florals are huge and stylized with giant hibiscus or cabbage roses bursting from a background of foliage. Important, too, will be the animal prints - zebra stripes, eopard spots or reptile scales making an impact, especially

Statue of Liberty topic of contest

The students at Bluebonnet Intermediate School have become very interested in the nations' project to restore the Statue Of Liberty.

A contest to draw the statue for the cover of the February issue of the "Bluebonnet Times" was begun to spark an interest in the entire school. Several students entered and a winner has been selected. The sixth grade students in Virginia Jackson's Language Arts class put the newspaper together each month with the help of the students and teachers in all the classrooms.

A year ago when the pro-ject was first begun, the class then in the sixth grade chose to send a $50.00 contribution to the foundation. They received a certificate of appreciation and were entered in the Register of School Contributions to be displayed at the museum of the statue. This year the sixth graders

Students compete in science

Each spring students at Shirley Intermediate School have the opportunity to compete in the field of science. The Science Fair for 1984 will be held in March.

All students are urged to participate in this event. By participating in the Science Fair it is felt that the students will learn to think and plan creatively and will be able to carry these plans on through the final construction of their projects.

Classification of enteries are botony, zoology, chemistry, physics, medicine and health and earth and space science.

The projects are judged on scientific knowledge, creativity and construction. In years past students in the advanced science classes at Hereford High have been the

"Am I?" she responded. After prodding, she told the Women enjoy good roles

To Americans, fear and fantasy are big lures. Fans of horror and science-fiction films are still buying tickets in huge numbers — although domestic rentals of those kinds of movies are down slightly. Experts attribute the erosion to the thriving home-video market and the pay-cable TV industry.

By FRED ROTHENBERG AP Television Writer

NEW YORK (AP) - Finally, the legitimate complaint that .television doesn't offer good roles for women is becoming an old wives' tale.

Sunday night, in a continuing march toward meatier roles in TV movies and more leading parts in TV series, stunning remake of Tennessee Williams' "A Streetcar Named Desire," and Suzanne Pleshette is her sassy old self in the debut of CBS' "Maggie Briggs."

The actual title of Miss Pleshette's first series since "The Bob Newhart Show" is 'Suzanne Pleshette Is Maggie Briggs," a recognition of her controlling influence on the project. As co-creator, she hand-picked the cast.

CBS has four series beginning this month, and all have women playing New Yorkers in the starring roles.

Besides Miss Pleshette as a New York newspaper reporter, there's Lila Kaye as a TV cooking-show host from Brooklyn in "Mama Malone," Jane Curtin and Susan Saint James as divorced women pooling their kids and resources in a Greenwich Village apartment in "Kate &

The first episode of "Maggie Briggs" exhibits a good

Allie" and Sharon Gless and dose of street-smart humor and nice comedic meshing between Miss Pleshette and McMillan Kenneth ("Ragtime"), a real pro who plays Walter Holden, Maggie's newspaper buddy of 15 years.

Maggie is distressed because, in a move to save the dying New York Ex-Ann-Margret shines in ABC's aminer, she's been transferred from hard-news assignments - "the quality stuff," she says - to the paper's "Modern Living Section," which, she argues, specializes in fashion, movie reviews and where to find the best Mexican food. It's a small ensemble cast, wih extras constantly floating by in the manner of the hyperactive "Hill Street Blues." Maggie and Walter don't seem to get much work done, and there's no apparent reason why they or their welltailored editor (John Getz) are considered good journalists.

In "Streetcar," Blanche is as fragile as crystal, a walking nervous breakdown. Raised a proper Southerner on a plantation, she can't square her upbringing with the tatters of her life that include alcoholism, a busted marriage to a homosexual and her own repressed sexuality. Sister Stella (Beverly Tyne Daly as New York cops D'Angelo) is pregnant, and in the return of "Cagney & her husband, Stanley Kowalski (Treat Williams), is a vulgar bully. But Stella is willing to forgive because, she tells Blanche, "There are things that happen between a man and a woman in the dark that sort of make everything else seem unimportant."

DEAR POLLY - Some time ago, I moved to another state. To pack my dishes and pictures, I wrapped each in paper towels. I bought the cheapest ones or the brands on sale. When I unpacked in my new home, I kept the paper towels, folding them and putting them in a box. I then used these towels to wipe off spills on the floor or counters and to wash windows. — E.K.
