Friend?

"Young Bob" La Follette's antics puzzle the New Dealers. They can't determine whether the black-haired Progressive is a friend or foe, despite his known friendliness toward the President's program.

It was Senator La Follette's mobilization of twenty-two senatorial sock-the-richers which forced Congress to take the President's taxation message seriously and put it on the calendar for this session. The Democrats would have liked to forget it. Then Mr. La Follette precipitated a showdown on the banking bill after differences between the Glass group and the administration were on their way to a quiet burial.

WHAT about that mashie, that driver, that golf bag you've been thinking of buying? Do you need a new swim suit? Beach towels? A new racquet, tennis shoes, slacks?

Just make a list of the things that would raise your scores and make your summer sports more enjoyable. But, before you buy, let us say "fore!" Don't drive your money down the fairway of trade until you are sure the course is clear, until you can see the flag at the next hole. Study the advertisements in this paper, and learn exactly where to get what you want at the prices you can afford to pay.

That is the professional, money-saving way to buy. Though buying is fun, you'll get better results if you make a business of it and shop in your newspaper before you go to the stores.

READY MADE WIFE

BY CORALIE STANTON

Chapter 20 SURPRISE

A footman opened a door leading from the great hall into a long room, all of soft lights and wonderful roses and dull gilded furniture and yellow Italian pictures, and rose-roses everywhere!

The room was empty. They had set some people when they arrived, but an elderly lady, very fashionable, a relative of their host, an elderly man, and his chic, ultra-modern daughter. Glad hoped to get some hints from that girl.

"How lovely to be rich!" chanted Glad to herself, as the footman but the door behind her. "Mr. Albery is a lamb! I love him! Girls on the stage often marry millionaires! I wonder if I shall?"

The door opened again and a tall young man came in, smoking a cigar and whistling light-heartedly.

He had rather thick features, which gave his face a blurred effect, but he was very good-looking, and exuded that curious magnetism that no one can describe. His eyes were hazel, with green lights, very merry; his hair was light brown and thick, but fashionably plastered; his ears were big and stuck out from his head, which was very broad on the top. His evening clothes hid their perfection under an air of belonging to him.

Gladys gave a little shriek. "Jimmy! Jimmy Smith! Here's happiness!"

The young man gave a quick, startled glance round the room; then his eyes came back to Gladys's lovely little figure in the azure-blue frock that Laurie had made her. A dream of witchery, with her grey-blue eyes so delicately inviting his admiration.

"This was like a fairy tale, to find her boy here, the boy of the cigarette case, the boy who had taught her to eat oysters in the grill of the Midland Grand at Manchester, the boy of the stream-lined sporting car in which they had skinned over the roads like a long red-and-white bird!"

"What are you doing here?" he asked.

"Staying here, pet! Are you? I'm with my sister—she's Mr. Albery's secretary."

"Staying here?" He looked at her, and, with a quick movement, took her in his arms and kissed her.

"You're the same cuddlesome cut!" he said teasingly, and lightly pinched her ear. "But, listen, you mustn't know me here! Don't ask questions! There's no time. My name's not Smith. I can't explain now. Somebody may come in any minute. You don't know me, Glad—understand? We've never met before. You're adorable, cutie, and I'll tell you later on. I'm just the same, but I'm not Jimmy Smith."

Now, there's somebody coming!" His voice fell to a whisper, as the door handle turned. "Don't play the fool, or you'll get us both in a hell of a mess!"

It was Mark Albery who came into the room, alone.

He smiled at the two young people. His eyes did not fail to take in Gladys's spectacular loveliness, but it made no appeal to him.

"So you've introduced yourselves—that's right!"

He had the careless ease of the born host, never worrying about his guests, but making everybody feel at home by showing that he expected them to.

Gladys, who had the instinct of luxury in its crudest form, looked at him with flattering eyes, lost in an ecstatic adoration of his sheer wealth.

"I hope my young friend Jimmy Dallas will amuse you, Miss Gladys," he said. "According to his father, he only lives for pleasure. Sorry your people couldn't come tonight, Jimmy. An important political meeting at Cambridge, your father says. Well, he's the kind of a man the poor old country wants. Always puts duty first. There'll be a few young people dropping in after dinner to dance. You'll have to mind your step with Miss Gladys—she's a real dancer, and is going to be famous some day."

Gladys nearly burst out that Jimmy knew that quite well. She just saved herself. She was angry with him, and for a moment her eyebrows met and her mouth dropped in those thin lines that hinted at an ugly temper.

His name was not Smith; it was Dallas. He had been playing the fool with her in the North. And he didn't want their host to know that they'd met. Well, she wouldn't give the show away now. She'd wait and give him a piece of her mind later on.

Albery, who knew that Jimmy Dallas had been a great trouble to his father, a stern, narrow-minded moralist, with one of those iron wills that must dominate his entire family and surroundings, was inclined to be sympathetic to the young man.

Jimmy seemed to him to be much the same as all those of his class who had grown up in the post-war years of excess and brilliance of crisis and gloom. One couldn't expect those boys to drudge and slave as their fathers and grandfathers had done, building up the great businesses that were now crashing on every hand. Working without respite, under crushing taxation and vexatious labor conditions, for a future that nobody could foresee.

But then Mark Albery was one of those rare men with the Midas touch, a gift from birth. And all his life he had had the remarkable luck to be able to work and play as well. Besides, he was absolutely non-moral; a man lacking in conscience.

The other guests came in. There were some people from the neighborhood, besides the house party, an equal number of men and women.

Gladys sat beside the handsome elderly man with the very modern daughter. Her chatter, so unconsciously egotistic, seemed to amuse him.

She was a little intoxicated by her success. She looked at Laurie,

PIPE-SMOKING BOYS FIND UNCLE

They were successful in a search for their uncle, Stephen Poe, with whom they are shown. (Associated Press Photo)

Further down the table. How quiet she was. Jimmy Dallas was beside her, but she hardly opened her mouth. Something had come over Laurie since her husband's return. She had got kind of dull. Glad was almost ashamed of her sister-tonght. She looked as if all this luxury and gaiety was too much for her.

"That was certainly not the case, Laurie, who had brains and character, and much more imagination than her sister, was far better able to appreciate her surroundings and keep her head at the same time.

But her three hours alone with Albery, although they were working hours, had filled her once again with that curious depression.

And each time she met his eyes and she smiled in his friendly way, she felt that there was something deep in his nature that she could never understand.

Also, she was wondering if Rex Moore were on his way back.

"It's too hot to dance," said Jimmy Dallas to Gladys, some hours later. "I'm melting away. Come into the garden!"

He knew the place well, and led her across a big lawn, through a shrubbery, into a wild garden, where ascleas and sweet-scented peonies in rich tints of rose and apricot and flame made an exquisite picture under the moon.

There was nobody there and Jimmy took her in his arms, squeezing her smooth, peach-blossom face with kisses.

"Flowerface, what a treat!" he murmured. "I never expected anything like this!"

Flowerface! His sweet nickname for her! The girl looked into his merry deceiver's eyes, trying to be angry.

"What did you want to call yourself Smith for, Jimmy? What was the game? Making a fool of me!"

"Darling, I couldn't help myself! Let me tell! My old governor is a perfect terror. He didn't know I was up there at all. Nobody did. I was supposed to be somewhere else. If he'd got wind of it, that I was having fun with the sweetest little girl in the world, I'd never have heard the end of it."

"You mean your father?" asked Gladys suspiciously. "But you're not so darned young—you're not a kid!"

"The governor thinks I am—an infant in arms! He wants me to do nothing but shove away at the bally old business. If he knew I'd been seeing something of you girls up there in Liverpool, he'd think I was heading straight for hell."

"Thank you, Mr. Dallas, I'm quite respectable!" said Gladys furiously.

"Sweet, I'm trying to explain the old man to you! He belongs to another age."

"Still—using a false name!" she objected.

He drew her to him.

Tomorrow, Jimmy and Gladys make a pact.

"Lady Tubbs," Rollicking Comedy, At Ritz Theatre Thursday Only

Many sly jabs at the snobbish rich are taken in "Lady Tubbs," the rollicking Universal comedy playing Thursday at the Ritz theatre, with Alice Brady starred and Douglas Montgomery and Anita Louise in the featured roles.

DOUGLAS MONTGOMERY AND ALICE BRADY in "LADY TUBBS" at the Ritz Theatre.

The wealthy Ash-Orcutt, of Long Island, violently object to the marriage of his manly son to the niece of a former cook at a railway construction camp, solely on account of the fact that the girl comes from the wrong side of the tracks and can boast of no "family connections." But when the aunt inherits a fortune and returns from England masquerading under the fictitious title of "Lady Tubbs," the obnoxious Ash-Orcutt receives the supposedly noblewoman and her niece with open arms and entertains them lavishly. Miss Brady, as the cook now turned lady, is still not satisfied, however, and with the air of a contemptuous neighbor succeeds in dragging from the closets of the luxurious Long Island mansion a pair of skeletons which the socialites had previously kept from each other. The climax of this story brings a succession of laughable situations, and revelations which prove very, very embarrassing to her.

Jean Calloway And Orchestra Here Saturday

To Play Dance At Rainbow Ballroom In Hotel Settles Beginning 9 P. M.

Jean Calloway, nationally known colored girl orchestra leader, who comes to the Rainbow Ballroom at Hotel Settles with her orchestra on Saturday, August 3rd has been actively engaged in the entertaining business for many years.

The musical background of Jean Calloway begins when she was a young girl. Great orchestra leaders were her weakness and fascinated her. She never failed to watch their every movement; and when every young she made up her mind to become an orchestra leader herself. She let nothing get in the way of her music.

Since the organization of her band, Jean Calloway has changed and changed the personnel of her band until now she has chosen twelve very talented and versatile artists, each one a genius in his line. Jean Calloway and her orchestra have been making friends everywhere, but they have made more progress in the past few years than in the other years combined.

This recent progress may be attributed to the increasing popularity won by broadcasting over the air waves. Hearing Jean Calloway over the air has made the public anxious to meet this band and their famous leader in person. With her personality she is one of the most popular girl leaders in the country.

Jean Calloway has been in demand for single night engagements and it will be a treat for music lovers of this vicinity to listen and dance to Jean Calloway and her orchestra.

Stanton Ranchwoman Visits Friends In Big Spring And Recalls Pioneer Days Here

Mrs. J. E. Milhollon of Stanton was a visitor in Big Spring Wednesday and recalled the days she once lived below Ross City, 20 miles south of Big Spring.

Bob Sanderson was then her nearest neighbor and she considered him pretty near because they could hear his dogs howling across the 3 or 4 mile stretch that separated them. Mrs. Milhollon reported seeing 100 head of antelope drinking at the head of the Concho on which her ranch was situated. Antelope are now so scarce that they are now regarded almost as valuable as the cattle on the ranches bordering the Concho.

Mrs. Milhollon says she has adopted a cowpony from the Rio Grande to "the north pole." She has often helped drive herds. Once she and her husband and an extra hand drove a herd across West Texas. She went along as cook driving the chuck wagon. At night she put the calves on top of the wagon and stood guard the first part of the night while the men slept.

Today whenever Mrs. Milhollon comes to Big Spring she stops by, if possible, to shop, at least to visit, J. and W. Fisher's. She said that when they first came to Big Spring, they put all they had in a one-horse wagon and drove in town to see the father of Joe and Bernard whom they did not know then.

"Going to live here," he asked them.

"Going to try to," they answered, "but we're out of clothes and out of grub."

"Drive around to the back and fill up," was his answer. Joe and Bernard were then small boys. They have grown up to occupy the same place in her heart, their father occupied. She called him the cowman's friend.

After ranching all over this part of the country, the Milhollons moved to Stanton in 1900 where they still live on a 14 section ranch.

Mrs. G. H. Wood Entertains With Summer Bridge Party

Twelve Tables Of Players Assemble At Hotel To Spend Afternoon Competing At Contract Bridge

Mrs. G. H. Wood was hostess for one of the prettiest parties of the week Tuesday afternoon at the Settles Hotel.

Twelve tables of guests assembled at her invitation for an afternoon of contract bridge.

Pastel shades were carried out in the many bouquets of summer flowers that lent the bridge room a charming air.

Mrs. Leeper scored highest of those present, for which she was presented with a pair of Italian cutwork pillow cases. Mrs. Kountz received hand embroidered guest towels for making second high.

The floating slam prize was won last by Mrs. Bristow to whom the hostess awarded lipstick napkins.

A pretty salad course was served at the conclusion of the games.

The guest list included: Mmes. Frank Murry, Steve Ford, Roy Combs, Calvin Boykin, C. S. Blomshield, E. O. Ellington, Noel T. Lawson, O. R. Bolinger, Clarence Hahn, V. Van Gieson, J. B. Young, Emil Fahrenkamp, Ray Lawrence, R. Homer McNew, J. L. Le Bleu, Lee Rogers, Elmo Wasson, Adams Talley, Monroe Johnson, Ashley Williams, Ira Thurman, G. B. Cunningham, Vivian Nichols, Otto Wolfe, Bernard Fisher, Joye Fisher.

New Commanders In Lubbock CCC Area

LUBBOCK (Sp.)—Capt. Walter T. Bolton and Capt. Frank E. Hadden will leave Wednesday to assume command for Capt. J. F. Roehm, District Commander, of the two sub-districts comprising the Lubbock District of the CCC.

Capt. Hadden will journey to Buffalo Gap and receive the transfer of the camps located at Big Spring and Buffalo Gap from Capt. J. E. Cardwell, present sub-district commander of the sub-district under which these two camps have been operating. This territory will be known as Sub-District No. 1 and will later receive new camps at Lamesa, Lubbock and Littlefield.

Capt. Bolton will go to Clovis, N. M., where he will meet and take over command from Capt. Louis D. Cooper, present commander of the sub-district in which the Clovis camp has been operating. The sub-district contains three other camps now in operation, one at Hereford and two at Canyon with new camps at Memphis, Amarillo and Perryton to be added later. This northern sub-district will be known as Sub-District No. 2.

Personally Speaking

THE HIGHWAYS OF BUYING

"FOLLOW the highway markings and you can't go wrong." ... That's the advice the Automobile Club gives you before starting on a motor trip. You follow the well-known, well-marked roads. And you reach your destination the safest, most comfortable way.

Why not follow the same rule in your shopping? Why not stick to the "highways of buying?" They have been just as carefully plotted, and are just as carefully marked as the great motor roads you've come to depend upon. Marked by the trade-names of reliable, advertised products.

The next time you go shopping follow these "highways." Before you start, look through the advertisements in these columns. Pick out the products you want. Notice the trade-names that identify them. And then ask for them, by name. The advertisements are sign-posts to guide you to the best and most reliable merchandise.

them disposed of before he wrestles with utility holding companies. The commission is cleaning out over-the-counter dealers, whose ranks are reputed to number many gyp operators. More than 5,000 applications for registration have been received, and one-third of the applicants showed complete ignorance of the law's requirements. If they sold on that basis, their customers paid and paid paid.

The commission will soon promulgate regulations defining "peddling, fixing and stabilizing"—illegitimate operations. The law forbids "manipulation," but Mr. Kennedy's experts find it hard to distinguish one activity from the other. Final ruling may strengthen the market.

Security

President Roosevelt is extraordinarily fond of Homer Cummings but recent developments strengthen the suspicion that there may be a complete reorganization of the Department of Justice. A likely bet in case Mr. Cummings should step out is Ferdinand Pecora, star investigator.

Mr. Roosevelt is dangling high stakes before Mr. Pecora's eyes to tempt him to undertake the investigation of the A.T.&T. Nothing less than the post of chief legal officer of the country would persuade the brilliant New Yorker to quit his $22,500 judgeship. "Ferd" admits he would enjoy the work of digging into the A.T.&T., but he is 53 years old and seeks security.

The President has another argument up his sleeve. Mr. Pecora believes that a renomination by Tammany next fall is a certainty. But graveyard reports to the White House have it that the Wigwag plans to sidetrack him. They have not forgiven him for bucking them on Jim Farley's fusion ticket in 1933. So Mr. Pecora's future may lie in Washington rather than New York.

Senate

It was "in conference" that Vice President Garner was put on the mileage list. Vice Presidents heretofore have paid their own way, but now they have been raised to an equality with Senators and Representatives. From Texas to Washington and back is quite an item, and Jack is thrifty, with Mrs. Garner also on the payroll for years as a very capable secretary.

Mr. Garner, by the way, looks for early adjournment—and nobody is quite so keen in such matters as Joe Robinson. He also expects Congress to quit soon—and Joe is anxious to return to Arkansas to ward off the forthcoming attacks of Huey Long. If Huey doesn't slip he will devote a lot of time trying to beat Robinson. But Huey may be kept busy befriending his friends who are about to be tried for income tax frauds.

Issue

Although State Department spokesmen have urged the utmost secrecy in discussing neutrality legislation with senatorial sponsors, the differences in viewpoint expressed off the record are fundamental.

The administration opposes the New program because it ties the President's hands completely. Under it he would have to seal the United States hermetically against any contact with warring nations. He prefers to be free to take whatever course events justify. But senatorial isolationists think this smacks too much of the League of Nations' idea of naming an aggressor and aiding the victim of an unjustified attack. Some President, perhaps not Mr. Roosevelt, might thus plunge us into a foreign war.

Mr. Roosevelt favors the Pope resolution licensing manufacture, import and export of arms as a first step. He thinks that is as far as we can afford to go now. But the Nye-Norris-Clark faction will fight for their peace program, even to the extreme of tacking it onto the Pope plan in the form of amendments. There is fire hot enough for a serious blaze in this squabble.

Notes

Congressman Nat Patton of Texas, whose bond-buying is under fire of the lobby committee, reports in his biography that he was born in a log cabin at Tadmor, Tex. The Black lobby committee has been shadowing suspected persons. The GOP national and congressional committees had a scrap and have dissolved partnership. The scandal over juggled Army truck contracts was exposed by Whirligig last year. Now the House committee wants a former Assistant Secretary of War to explain his private financial transactions.

NEW YORK
By James McMullin

Undermining
Maybe the Public Works Administration did mean to help home industry with its ruling that orders for construction materials needed for PWA jobs of more than $10,000 should be filled abroad if the foreign price is 15% cheaper—as it claims. But you'll never make steel men or other conservatives believe it will work that way. New York leaders strongly concur with Eugene Grace that such a small differential would be ruinous because the wage differential is so much greater. There's too much Belgian steel being imported for comfort already without additional encouragement from official sources. The situation has the makings of a first class anti-New Deal issue.

So far the steel companies have maintained remarkable stability of prices and wages since the Blue Eagle bid. This is largely due to the cooperation of big automotive buyers—who have refrained from too vigorous insistence on price concessions. The motor people fear that even a 5 to 10 per cent price cut would inevitably lead to contraction of wages and start another cycle of deflation—which would be very bad for new car sales.

Froth

New York was tickled with the President's cool rebuff to the silver bloc's demand that the price of the metal be pushed up immediately to $1.29 an ounce. The silverites—having failed to convince Secretary Morgenthau that the national welfare demanded more aggressive action—were trying to get his boss to overrule him. They didn't get even half way to first base—and they won't. Comment runs that Mr. Roosevelt has learned he has nothing either to fear or to hope from them.

New

Informed New Yorkers say that Ford plans to give Chevrolet and Plymouth all the run for their money. He knows how to do it. The hope is that he will present a new engine with a 6.5 compression ratio as against a current average ratio of 6.1 or 6.2. The difference amounts to about 15 horsepower and saves fuel. The main problem is to avoid pre-combustion and tests are said to have been fairly successful. Ford also has a cheap Diesel-motored truck coming up. It may be ready for the market within a few months.

Well-posted sources learn that the new model is being prepared for a November showing. Rumors that Ford is cutting out advertising one way street of rising prices which benefits speculators more than anyone else.

But there's a riddle here. The Treasury is only authorized by law to purchase—not to sell. So how come the sales? The answer is that banks which have bought the metal as agents for the Treasury are perfectly free to dispose of it again so long as the Treasury hasn't officially taken possession of it. Insiders believe this is what has happened. Institutions which bought silver for Treasury account to support the market a couple of weeks ago had never delivered it and have since been reselling it—on Treasury orders but without violating the law. The silver Senators are expected to froth at the mouth when they get wind of this circumvention of their wishes.

Oil

Discovery of two promising new oil fields is likely to complicate the industry's problem of keeping production under control and prices up. Anahuac in Texas—near Houston—and Rodessa in northern Louisiana both look like big times. Humble Oil thought it had Anahuac sewed up when an independent operator acting without benefit of trained geologists—sank a well at a guess and brought in oil. Humble had to rush out and buy up surrounding real estate at suddenly marked-up prices to protect itself. By spending freely it got control of the situation, which means that this field—though rich—will be developed slowly.

Rodessa looks more like a free-for-all. A couple of big companies are in there—but they are understood to be more interested in quick cash than conservation.

Air Travelers Prefer Sleeping in Pajamas

NEW YORK (UP)—Pajamas in dark shades are women's favorite sleeping garment for air travel and only rarely is a nightgown worn. This conclusion was reached by Anne Clegg, American Airlines stewardess, after observing habits of travelers on sleeper planes for the past year.

Nine out of ten times the garment is of a dark color, she noted, but she hesitated to set any ratio on pajamas as compared to nightgowns.

The first survey of its kind in Germany showed 15,500 public libraries available to 45,000,000 persons.

are untrue. The present curtailment is understood to be merely the usual tapering off before a new number is brought out.

Electric

Keen New York observers predict that the next era of prosperity will be electrical and that it should be well under way by 1940. They figure that with maximum distribution it should be possible to market 20 billion dollars' worth of electrical appliances in five years with at least a doubling of present power output. But not more than half that is estimated as possible unless purchasing power gets off a relief basis.

Needs

Security house commissions are now thoroughly regulated and codified. Excessive charges to customers are virtually impossible. You hear it said—with reference to the flood of legal talent trying to collect fees from Paramount-Public—that what the country needs now is a Securities Act for lawyers.

Sidelights

Ten years ago nearly three-fourths of the energy produced in the U. S. originated in coal—now it's less than half. That's one reason the industry is so pale and wan. Add signs of recovery... Williams College had over 500 applicants for this year's freshman class with room for only 220. So Father Coughlin's central bank bill only drew ten votes in the Senate. New York is as pleased about that as a kid with his first ice cream cone.

Young Russian Beauty Obtains Dramatic Role

Marina Schubert, daughter of the noted singer Nina Koshetz and an accomplished musician herself, wins her opportunity as a dramatic actress in Paramount's "Car 99." Miss Schubert is featured with Fred MacMurray, Sir Guy Standing and Ann Sheridan in this film based on the adventures of the Michigan State Police. The picture comes Wednesday and Thursday to the Lyric theatre.

Barely out of her teens, Miss Schubert has already lived in half the capitals of the world. Her earliest memories are bound up with the terrors of the Russian revolution from which she and her distinguished mother were able to escape by secret flight. Her early childhood was spent in Constantinople, Athens, Rome and Paris. She came to the United States when her mother received an offer for a concert tour. She attended school in New York City, and, at the age of 17, decided that she, too, could sing. She had developed her voice, tutored by her mother. For months before she faced a camera, Miss Schubert worked in the Paramount music department, where her voice was "dubbed in" for other actresses. "British Agent," with Leslie Howard, was her first big opportunity and, shortly after, she appeared in "Enter Madame." Her work in the latter picture won her a contract with Paramount, and subsequent leading roles in "All the King's Horses" and "Car 99."

Miss Schubert is featured with Fred MacMurray, Sir Guy Standing and Ann Sheridan in "Car 99." Adapted from The Saturday Evening Post stories by Karl Detzer the picture portrays the adventures and exploits of the Michigan State Police, famous motorized anti-crime force.

Intermediate League Meets On Church Lawn

Members of the Intermediate League were entertained on the church lawn Tuesday evening with a jolly party. Mrs. Horace Penn who sponsors the league in the absence of Mrs. E. N. Robinson, now visiting relatives in Virginia, was present and directed the games.

After the games sandwiches and lemonade were served to the guests.
