Women

President Roosevelt almost called for extra Secret Service men to fend off important politicians while he cast about for members of the Social Security board.

Vice-President Garner and Majority Leader Robinson led the pack in trying to place favorites on the body which must inaugurate one of the New Deal's most difficult experiments. Jack Anderson's Margie Neal of Dallas, a former member of the Texas legislature, and Joe Plumped for a prominent Arkansas politician. They had plenty of company, for the politicians regarded the new agency as just another pie counter.

Democratic women have been peeved at the failure to consult them. They had hoped to offset resentment over the abrupt dismissal of Dr. Amy Stadium from the Federal Parole Board by landing an eminent representative of their sex on the new agency. But in this instance not even the counsel of Secretary Perkins counted for as much as it usually does.

Restraint

While most New Dealers grimace whenever the Rhode Island elections are mentioned, Harold Ickes' PWA-ers are chuckling. Their post-mortems convince them that the voters showed excellent discrimination in some respects.

Unofficially the Ickes rosters note that the voters did not turn down all offers of federal funds for public works as originally reported. What the Yankee electorate did was to reject anything that savored of Harry Hopkins' boondoggling and approve the useful and permanent project favored by Mr. Ickes. They threw out proposals for fish research, ocean beaches, swimming pools and purchase of sub-marginal land. But they adopted a $4,000,000 program of welfare construction sponsored by FWA.

The publicists in the interior department mobilized their typewriters and mimeographs as soon as they excavated these findings. They were eager to tell the glad news to the world. But the second thoughts decided to spare Mr. Hopkins' feelings and they "killed" the release.

Sensitive

A comparatively unimportant incident that attracted no public notice reveals how the relationship between the White House and Capitol Hill has changed in recent months. It throws a clearer light on "Dictator" Roosevelt's altered status than a volume of political polls.

When the president used to slip off for a fishing trip or vacation members showered him with good wishes. On one occasion he hired a brass band to head their welcome-home parade to the railroad station. But when he wanted to go to Hyde Park last weekend for his son's birthday—for the political coming-of-age of another Roosevelt—he thought it wise to sound out sentiment in house and senate.

With legislators growing at a presidential program which deviated from the Washington during August's terrible heat, his advisers worried last they grumble audibly at the boss' repulse. But the leaders brought back word that the boys wouldn't mind if the chief executive took a few days off. Even so, Mr. Roosevelt arranged to speed back on the Sabbath instead of waiting till Monday.

Revenue

"Young Bob" LaFollette has warned senate bosses that they haven't heard the last of his so-called poor tax program. He will re-introduce it at the next session and he confidently expects to pass it in 1937—after the presidential election.

Administrators have cooked up two alternative plans, however. They don't of course, want any more tax legislation before the 1936 contest. And they will have GOP backing there. What they really look for is sufficient recovery so that drastic levies on the little fellow will not be necessary. They hope, by the same token, for a reduction in relief and emergency expenditures.

Privately democratic major domos are passing out word that if Mr. Roosevelt is re-elected they will sponsor a serious study and revision of the national tax system. Their argument for delay is that we must give the recovery program a chance to function before we have a definite measure of the amount of revenue needed to finance the government.

Head Of "G-Men" Gets Threat From Public Enemy No. 1

WRECKAGE OF LOST PLANE IS SIGHTED

Flier Thought To Have Found Plane Wreckage Of Indianapolis Trio

GLENDO, Wyo. (AP)—Flying over Laramie peak, Captain George Smith of the highway patrol Tuesday sighted wreckage of a plane in which three Indianapolis air travelers—Burnside Smith, Dick Arnett and Arnett's bride—were believed to have crashed to death.

The plane was missing since Thursday. Searchers were trying to reach the scene of the crash.

The mountain is heavily timbered. The hunt was started at the request of relatives of Smith, president of the Aero Mayflower Transit company and several other Indiana firms. They said nothing had been heard from him since he left Helena, Mont., last Thursday on a dangerous 800-mile trip to Denver.

Until Tuesday no trace had been found of the ship—a conspicuous yellow cabin model. Ranchers near Laramie peak reported they heard a plane, apparently in trouble during a storm and then saw a flash high up on the mountain that just like a gigantic thumb from the Wyoming plains.

Family Takes Three Million In Five Years

Company Head Says Concern Unable To Pay Dividends Half Of Time

WASHINGTON (AP)—Threatened with contempt proceedings if he didn't answer questions, Howard C. Hopson agreed Tuesday that he and his family had drawn profits of $3,187,000 from the Associated Gas and Electric system from 1929 to 1933, inclusive.

Hopson acknowledged that during half the time covered, the utility system under him wasn't paying dividends on its stock.

Previously Hopson had been threatened by the senate for answering questions "with arguments instead of facts." The lobby committee elicited on account of efforts to influence newspapers against the administration utilities bill.

It also added to its record of the campaign against the legislation testimony that Hopson early suggested an "appeal to the emotions" featuring the connection that the measure would jeopardize the savings of "widows and orphans."

Meat Strike Heads Thrust Demands On AAA For Cut Prices

WASHINGTON (AP)—Five militant leaders of meat striking Detroit housewives thrust upon the White House and the Department of Agriculture demands for lower meat costs and an immediate investigation of packers' profits.

The delegation failed to see President Roosevelt, however, and obtained but little satisfaction from Secretary Wallace.

Led by diminutive Mrs. Mary Zuk, the women were told by Marvin H. McIntyre, presidential secretary, that Mr. Roosevelt was too busy to see them today.

Wallace answered spirited demands for an investigation of the packing industry with an assertion that the drought was responsible for the meat shortage and that the only way to effect a reduction in meat prices was to produce more meat.

He added that he understood a possible investigation of the packing industry was being considered by congress.

READY MADE WIFE

BY CORALIE STANTON

Chapter 37
NEW DECLARATION

"Laurie!"

Laurie hastily dropped the old record book she was handling. She stood in the living room of the Cheyenne flat. She had come to fetch some books she found she had left in the kitchen, a cookery book and a manuscript book of recipes she had copied out.

She had been surprised to find that Rex Moore was there. The porter told her. But he had gone out and said he would not be back until late.

Now he had come in and found her standing in a shaft of evening sunlight that came through the bay window, holding the old working coat that he had left on his chair when he went out.

"A second number, and he would fetch my cookery books that I'd left behind."

"I'm only here for a few days." He looked eager and tremendously alive. As of old, she could feel the strength pulsing from his fingers, as they shook hands. He had just come from the eye specialist. The great man's examination had had the happiest results. Sir Gilbert said he was sure the danger of sudden blindness had passed, for the immediate future at any rate.

"Is Mrs. Budd looking after you all right?" she asked, keeping her voice with an effort to that light, artificial pitch.

"Yes, thanks. But I don't trouble her much. I'm going back to Gretton tomorrow. Albery is going to spend several days down there. I suppose you know that. We are going to do the final tests with the new fuel. Has he told you about it?"

"No, Mr. Albery has not mentioned it again. It was only while I was working on the reports. Is it going to be a success, after all? Have they made it safe?"

"That remains to be seen. It seems a long time since we met, Laurie," he added abruptly. "More than a fortnight. Have you begun your campaign of dropping hints about our matrimonial disputes?"

"Not to any extent," she answered coldly. "Have you told Mrs. Steele?"

"No." His face was hard. "I've thought of nothing but getting ready for the Pacific. By the way, Laurie, you haven't made that appointment yet for me to take you up in the air. Have you forgotten?"

"I haven't forgotten." She forced herself to laugh, but it was strange how, again, words seemed to be put into her mouth. "Perhaps I'll ask you to take me up when you try the new fuel!"

"You can ask for all you're worth," he replied. "I assure you that's not the way you'll make your first flight with me."

"Then, some other time," she said, still mechanically. "I'll ring you up. When do you start for the Pacific?"

"At the end of next week, I hope." The sunshine no longer came through the window. To Laurie the room grew suddenly dark.

"I must be getting off," she said, picking up her books from the table.

But Rex Moore was beside her. He took the books from her. His eyes were full of fire.

"Laurie, I've learned something since we parted the other day. His voice was vibrant, full of such a surging emotion that her heart seemed to stop beating. "I can't live without you, Laurie. I love you—I love you, little Laurie! Say you love me! We've been a pair of fools, but it's not too late."

But it was too late.

"Rex, I have done my bit. You irresistible impulse drew her to him. As metal to magnet she was drawn, drawn—until his arms were closing round her to fold her in his strength, as in a tower.

But she started back with a sharp cry.

"You are mad, Rex," she said. "You don't love me. I don't love you. We had that out the other day."

"I'm not mad. Now I'm sane. Laurie, you love me! You can't fool me. I know it that night. Wait for me to come back to you!"

Again his arms seized her to crush out her resistance. But this time she sprang away, throwing back her head, and managed to smile with a pretence of lightness.

"Rex, I have done my bit. You told me the other day I had paid my debt. You mustn't talk to me so wildly. I am going to marry Mr. Albery."

He stared; his arms fell to his sides. His face went grey.

"I see. I used to think you would—before I saw that he was in love with you. I expected it—until as you say, I went mad. Do you mind telling me what he knows about us?"

"I told him the truth."

"What do you mean—the truth?"

He was like a man turned to stone.

"That we were not married. About the trick I played on him and on you."

"But—surely, he'd never forgive that! I told you, Laurie, he'd never stand being made a fool of. But he has said 'nothing to me.'"

"He left it to me to explain, Rex. He does forgive us for deceiving him. And it will make no difference to you."

The man gave a loud, hoarse laugh of fury.

"Of course, he wants you so much! He will forgive anything. And you're going to marry him for his money."

CHAPTER 3

WHAT HAS GONE BEFORE Paroled from the galley after a five year sentence for stealing a loaf of bread, Jean Valjean, with vengeance in his heart, stumbles into the home of kindly old Bishop Blarcoux and finds in him at least one man with faith in the world and willing to trust an ex-galley-slave. With renewed faith, confidence and vigor he starts out to conquer the world anew.

The Road Back

With courage born of the bishop's words, Jean's progress in the next five years bordered on the miraculous. Under a new name, he has established himself in a town in France, and step by step has worked his way up in the respect and esteem of the small community. As M. Madeleine, he has changed completely. There is a streak of gray in his hair, but otherwise he is clean shaven and smiling, cheerful, and good-humored. He has been eminently successful in turning an absolutely bankrupt manufacturing firm into a thriving business organization. We find him in the best of spirits as he bids good-night to a group of prominent townfolk who have come to inform him of his appointment as mayor and magistrate.

There is a knock at the door, and the backslider shows in a man in a police uniform. As the man comes forward, Jean's hands, still holding the candlesticks, drop slightly. It is Javert, warden of the prison-ship. Left alone with the aftermath of a successful and happy day, Jean turns to the fireplace. On the mantelpiece are the bishop's candlesticks. He smiles at the thought of all these symbols have done for him. "We've come a long way together, haven't we?"

"I have denounced you, sir, as an ex-convict."

"Yes, they arrested him last week at Arzas. He goes by another name, Champsathieu, but he was caught for theft. The dates of his disappearance are in the files, but Valjean's record—witnesses will swear to him—a fellow-criminal recognized him. Undoubtedly they have the man, Valjean."

"I made the mistake. I allowed a personal grievance to interfere with my duty. I must be dismissed."

"Now for the first time we learn something of Javert's creed. His confession is in a husky whisper, but deeply and sincerely ashamed and broken by his failure."

"No. There is more to it than that. I, too, have my creed, M. Madeleine. They call me hard and brutal, but I am not—I am just. But I've always said to myself, 'Yes, you're hard, you're ruthless when you are in the right, but look out—some day you, yourself, will trip. Then will you be just?' I swore I would. That time has arrived, M. Madeleine. I have caught myself. I have committed a crime. I have been unjust to what you will. I stand for justice—I have failed."

Javert goes on: "What I have always demanded for others—the law, good or bad, but the law to the letter—I now demand for myself."

MANY CLUBS ARE NEEDED BY WOMEN GOLFERS IN NATIONAL TOURNEY

MINNEAPOLIS (AP)—The nation's top-flight women will swarm over Interlachen Country club the last week of this month to battle 6,672 yards of woods, lakes, fairways, and greens for honor and fame in the national tournament. Every club in their bags will be brought along by the great and near-great among the feminine sharpshooters, for Interlachen is that kind of course; the course that Bobby Jones subdued in 1909, the year he made his grand slam in golf.

She Smiles At Democrats With 'Gimme'

Miss Pugh wanted to be a secretary and now, she says, "I seem to be."

WASHINGTON (AP)—When "deserving Democrats" come to town with the "gimmies" they walk un-expectedly into one of the most effective smiles in Washington. It beams from the very large, gray eyes and the flashing white teeth of Madeline Pugh, a Des Moines, Ia., girl, who is famous because she has said "No" to some 30,000 people since June, 1933.

A new circle was organized by the members of the East Fourth Street Baptist W. M. S. for the younger married women and called a Junior W. M. U. circle. Mrs. Emrie Rainey was hostess for the organization meeting. At the election of officers, Mrs. Rainey was made chairman; Mrs. L. E. Craig, co-chairman; Mrs. Roy Lee, recording secretary; Mrs. Pat Adams, publicity chairman.

Suzanne Fisher, petite West Virginia soprano, is coming back to America after five years on the stages of Berlin and Paris.

By ABELAIDE KERR PARIS (AP)—Suzanne Fisher, youngest West Virginia songbird, will realize a life's ambition this winter when she steps on the stage of the New York Metropolitan Opera House to sing for "the home folks."

For five years Miss Fisher, who is a graduate of the Cincinnati Conservatory of Music, has been studying in Germany and singing at the Berlin Staatoper and the Opera Comique here. industries. I say despite his claims unless he's responsible for the dust storms we had." This from one of the leading industrialists of the east. Here's the news behind the news:
After several months of extensive examination and careful study research engineers and chemists have confirmed that just acts as an abrasive on moving parts of machinery. This is especially true of the dust storms along the Mississippi basin. These dust clouds carried some 20 different mineral constituents. The same storms swept up, through and over the whole of the Atlantic coast. It hit and damaged the leading industrial centers.

Recovery—
The dust storms were continuous. There was no letup for months. It got into factory machinery, automobiles and farm equipment. The industrial research group found that minerals in the dust clouds wore out bearings with incredible rapidity. Automobiles affected were given a life of only six months to a year. Machines are showing complete wear and tear. Farm equipment and implements are almost worthless—though it is possible they may be used for harvesting this year.

Orders already pouring into supply plants check these findings. The orders are not for repair material but for actual replacements. An avalanche of this business is expected within the next six to 12 months. The demand for machinery and steel and all things that depend upon moving parts will be unusually heavy.
"It means big things for all kinds of machinery manufacturing companies no matter what type of machinery it is. The dust storms may turn out to have been a blessing in disguise. If it's what we think it is then we have not only turned the proverbial corner but are actually on our way to recovery."

Waiting—
From the start President Roosevelt wanted relief workers to get to work so that unemployed men will switch to private industry should a job present itself. Manufacturers, however, took the low pay offers only for a slight better than relief wage levels.

Officers Sport New Uniforms

Big Spring police department now gives the appearance of a real police department. New uniforms for regular duty officers have been received and are now worn by policemen. In the picture, left to right, are Officers L. A. Coffey, Alfred Moody, E. B. Bethel, Denver Dunn, J. M. Choate, Chief of Police J. T. Thornton and City Judge Tracy T. Smith.

This is a painful situation for unions organized to aid tradesmen. The PWA pays nice rates but doesn't furnish enough work-hours to permit income returns anywhere near what could be regarded as good.
Trade union leaders are all upset about it. They don't like it at all. They are raising thunder at American Federation of Labor meetings. The heads of the A. F. of L. know it is wrong but are afraid to fight FDR. He has the upper hand at this time. Political interests say they are merely waiting for 1936 to pull some fast demands.

Progress—
The Rural Rehabilitation Administration is one unit that is making progress. This despite red tape delays in the $4,800,000 relief program. Administrator Morris L. Cooke is said to have received live offers from organized utility systems. Real offers to extend service to some 250,000 farms. That would be reaching more than a third of the farms now without any electrical service whatever.

There was a time when utility companies said it just couldn't be done. Said the cost would be high and the return so small it would put some organizations in the hands of receivers. Now it seems otherwise.

Should the RRA accept the offers made by the utility boys, it would take the whole of its allotted $100,000,000. But Mr. Cooke isn't rushing. He will not say whether he does or doesn't accept until he receives plans and figures on estimated construction costs and proposed rates to consumers.

What is annoying the utility interests is that Administrator Cooke will hold off giving any funds to the utility plan until cooperatives and municipalities file applications of their own. Then he will make comparisons. But the REA is showing progress regardless of political opposition in some spots.

Faulty—

Since a federal district court held the AAA unconstitutional 1,112 cases for recovery of payments have been filed against the government. Temporary injunctions have already been granted in 509 instances.

The cases prevent the AAA from collecting processing taxes. A new legal angle is to be instigated on this very matter. A New York brewing company is to start action against its processor. The brewing company refuses to pay the tax that the processor pays to the government. It will go a step further. It will demand that all monies paid be refunded saying the act was found unconstitutional and therefore the processor should have known it was faulty and therefore collections were illegal. (A supreme court ruling once stated that all people should know when a law is unconstitutional.)

Superstition—

The banking floor is large—like that of a fair-sized ballroom. One of the senior officials of the institution ran across the floor. He was making a bee-line for the paying teller's window. When he hit it he slipped $2 on the slab. Out shot two $1 bills in return. As the banker turned he sighed with relief. That changed quickly as he spotted your correspondent watching the whole affair.
"Don't misunderstand, Schneider. I'm not superstitious. Not by a long shot. But this afternoon I am to handle the first really big loan this bank has arranged in years. You know how it is—I don't care to take any chances."

knows that his promotion, pay and prestige lie at the mercy of the men on Capitol Hill. The navy department suffers from the same inferiority complex.

That accounts for the department's private request that Rep. Maury Maverick "lay-off" his attack on naval intelligence. The unnamed Texan has embarrassed three guards of naval secrets—Capt. Puleston, Commander Kirkland and Commander Clement—by exposing their black list, which includes some of our leading religious, social and political citizens. Mr. Maverick has been informed that he may provoke a court-martial if he doesn't let up.

Slump—

Harry Hopkins has only two months left in which to boost relief employment from the present meager 125,000 to 3,500,000. He can't do it—and the result is a combination of hedging and prodding. The public is cautiously advised to get ready for disappointment, and Hopkins is lapped into frantic activity by White House pressure. He has rushed through several lists of projects that ought to be carefully examined but it's a case now of jamming things through.
Gen. Johnson's job in New York looks big but it's a midge compared with Hopkins' task. Hopkins must spend $2,000,000,000 and be quick about it—and he must sledgehammer governors who stand in the way. They want money spent on projects that will not hire workless men in great numbers. Hopkins is forced to waste time thrashing out these matters. His state agents are squabbling with state authorities in spite of everything that Hopkins can do. The gigantic work-relief program isn't working out at all as was advertised.

Notes—

Cuban commercial interests are setting up a permanent office in Washington to work for revision of the trade agreement. . . Ray Moley's pentle swat at administration spokesmen who advocate low tariffs and thus lose Rhode Island elections is traceable to his feud with Secretary Hull. . . The AAA lads are changing programs, trying to keep up with nature's wheat and hog vagaries and to pacify embattled housewives. . . Wallace now has $30,000,000 with which to subsidize farm exports—except cotton.
