Under-age drinking tackled at meeting

By JOHN BROOKS
Managing Editor

A crowd of over 250 persons packed the Hereford High School cafeteria Tuesday to share concerns about under-age drinking in Deaf Smith County.

Officials with area law enforcement agencies spoke about their plan of attack to curb the problem. In a survey, over 50 percent of current Hereford High School students admitted to taking at least one drink of alcohol with the 30 days prior to the survey. The survey was conducted last spring.

The Grim Reaper also appeared. The Grim Reaper is part of a Hereford High School Student Council project to help remind students in a very visual way the dangers of drinking and driving. Persons at the meeting also watched a film, "The Greatest Heartache You'll Ever Know." It features a Georgia highway patrolman talking about teenage drinking and driving.

The panel included Hereford police chief Caydon Brush (see separate story), Sheriff Joe Brown, Trooper Todd Sediff of the Department of Public Safety, Capt. Jody McCarthy of the Texas Alcoholic Beverage Commission, District Attorney Roland Saul and Alice Eades of Plains Insurance Agency.

Eades hit the crowd where it hurts: in the pocketbook.

She explained that a DWI on a person under 21 would sent rates for an 18-year-old boy, driving a 1989 Mustang with full coverage, from $1,510 a year to as much as $4,688. That doesn't include the cost of a special filing, Eades said.

On the current muscle car of choice, a 1992 Nissan 300 ZX Turbo, the rate would go as high as $7,878 a year.

That is on top of the fine, court costs, community service hours and other possible punishments, said County Judge Tom Simons.

"We as a community need to do something," Simons said. "What that is I don't know." Simons said that the county, at the current rate, could have 360, or more, DWI convictions this year.

"I'm not making a judgment, and many of these people are good people. The only way to do something is for you and I to tell our children it is okay not to drink, it is okay not to be part of the group.

"When you see the consequences, it's horrifying."

Marylin Leasure, who directs secondary school programs for the HISD, said persons who have ideas about prevention efforts should let principals and counselors know. The school usually gets special grants to help fight drug and alcohol abuse by students.

Some of the parents called for a crackdown on persons providing alcohol to under-age persons.

"The kids are getting liquor somewhere," said Sue Schroeter. "If they are getting liquor at store we need to make a very stiff penalty. If they are standing outside an Allsups waiting to buy beer they need to go to court. If they are able to go to a store and buy with an ID, we need to do something.

"We follow them around in their cars and we look inside the cars. Maybe we need to use some of the aggressiveness on who is providing the liquor. If it's parents, let's prosecute them."

McCarthy recounted a sting in Hereford in June 1991 where nine persons were charged with selling alcohol to minors. He said persons who want stiffer laws about selling or providing alcohol to minors should contact State Rep. John Smithce or State Sen. Teel Bivins.

Brown said under-age drinkers in the county will get ticketed.

"This is a new deal for us," Brown said. "We just ordered ticket books, and we've never used ticket books before. We will give citations for all minor in possession violations instead of taking them to jail or letting them go.

"We've been busy in the alcohol business. The jail had 94 today (Tuesday). A lot of them are violators of probation because of alcohol. We have had several good people in jail, hard working people, professional people, but alcohol messed them up."

Setliff, the youngest person on the panel, may have provided the best solution:

"There is a lot of peer pressure, and law enforcement personnel can't do the full job. Families need to sit down with their teenagers and spend some time with them. Since I have been here I have investigated a few fatal accidents, and most are alcohol-related.

"The main issue is we need to sit down and talk with our teenagers. We need to tell them and show them we don't want them to drink."

Brush airs personal agenda After PR faux pas, chief harps on golf course

By JOHN BROOKS
Managing Editor

Hereford police chief Caydon Brush carried out a personal agenda at Tuesday's meeting on under-age drinking at the Hereford High School cafeteria.

Brush, who has been low-key during his tenure as chief, committed a public relations faux pas. It was bad enough to make Mayor Tom LeGate visibly wince. Brush, the first of seven speakers on a panel, said he hoped for a small crowd at the meeting.

"I told my wife on the way over here I didn't know if there would be 50 people or 500," Brush said. "I was kind of hoping there would be 50. Since you all are here, and since we are here to talk about teenage drinking, that's what I will talk about."

Brush then said he was glad the sheriff's office and district attorney's office were cooperating with the city.

"We are enforcing the law more firmly than we have in the past, and more consistently," Brush said. "...A lot of times we are condemned and persecuted for uphold the law, but we want to provide the kind of law enforcement the community wants.

"All I ask is that when you violate the law, ...if you're going to dance, be prepared to pay the fiddler. Some parents are more rebellious than the kids are.

"We want the kind of law enforcement the community wants, but don't tell me about it. If you want to do something constructive, call the mayor, the commissioners. We have heard a lot of negative stuff, but we don't want to get into that tonight. You hear so much you think the whole community thinks like that. Let the people in charge of us know how you feel."

Later in the program, a question about drinking at John Pitman Municipal Golf Course was raised by Brian Cooper. Cooper is youth minister at First Baptist Church.

"We were ready to do that (cut down on drinking at the golf course) with the former city manager (Darwin McGill)," said Brush. "Then he left and we haven't done anything. I would rather be out there patrolling the golf course this evening. I think we should give them proper warning and then do it. I wish the new mayor would instruct the new city manager to tell us to do that right away."

BRUSH

You may be GUILTY!

Even if you aren't actually drinking, you might be guilty of minor in possession if you are at a party where others are drinking. Here's what police plan to do:

- If you are under 17 and not drinking, you will be identified and your parents will be sent a letter.
- If you are under 17 and caught in the act, you will be released only to your parents or to juvenile authorities; you may also be ticketed, just like a traffic ticket. It could cost you $500.
- If you are 17-20 and not drinking, you will be fully identified, police will check to see if there are any warrants for you, and your parents will be sent a letter.

-If you are 17-20 and drinking, you will be arrested, probably taken to jail, and your vehicle (when appropriate) will be impounded.

FBI subpoenas tapes, pictures

LOS ANGELES (AP) - The FBI subpoenaed videotape and photos from news organizations as a crackdown on rioters gathered steam. Meanwhile, the governor ordered thousands of National Guard troops to begin pulling out today.

Some news organizations turned over information willingly; others said authorities were going too far.

Four black men with alleged gang ties were arrested Tuesday in the attack on white trucker Reginald Denny, whose beating was shown on live television and came to symbolize police paralysis during the riot's opening moments.

The four were identified in part from news footage and video taken by bystanders, said Police Chief Daryl Gates, who arrested Damian "Football" Williams himself.

"I would have liked to drop-kick him all the way to the car, but I had a feeling I better not," Gates said.

Williams, 19; Henry "Kiki" Watson, 27; and Antoine "Twan" Miller, 20, were brought in by about 200 FBI and police SWAT team officers in a pre-dawn raid. A fourth man, Gary Williams, 33, surrendered at a police station.

News helicopters showed Denny, 36, being pulled from his rig and beaten unconscious at Florence and Normandie avenues soon after the verdict in the Rodney King case April 29. His attackers looked up at the cameras.

Damian Williams hit Denny in the head with a brick, Miller looted his truck, Watson stomped on his head, and Gary Williams kicked him when he was down and stole his wallet, Gates said.

Damian Williams, Watson and Miller were booked for investigation of state charges of attempted murder, mayhem, robbery and torture, and federal charges of interfering with a vehicle engaged in interstate commerce, Lt. Bruce Hagerty said.

The FBI said they were members or associates of the Crips gang. Six other people were being sought.

Denny, 36, of Covina, was hospitalized in good condition Tuesday, recovering from severe head injuries. In a statement, he said he had no anger toward those who beat him but was glad if police "got the right guys."

The three days of violence, touched off by the acquittal of four white police officers in the videotaped beating of King, a black motorist, left 52 people dead and caused $785 million in damage.

Also Tuesday, Gov. Pete Wilson announced the first withdrawal of the National Guard troops that helped restore order. Four thousand were to leave today. The remaining 6,000 will pull out gradually, he said.

About 3,000 Marines and Army troops left last week.

To identify suspects in other attacks, the government has subpoenaed videotape and photos from TV stations and newspapers. Scores of looters hauled off goods in full view of cameras. Others were filmed setting fire to shops.

KCOP agreed to turn over about 90 hours of tape.

Surgeons hard at work

Dr. Nadir Khuri, a surgeon at Deaf Smith General Hospital, and Josh Bidwell, son of Dr. Robert and Jo Bidwell, perform surgery on a doll at Deaf Smith General Hospital on Tuesday. Hereford youngsters visited the hospital Tuesday as part of National Hospital Week activities. NASA sends 3 out on repairs

SPACE CENTER, Houston (AP) - Endeavour's astronauts got the OK for the first three-man spacewalk in a go-for-broke effort today to bring in a wayward satellite.

"I have my toes, my fingers and my eyes crossed waiting for the mission," NASA Administrator Daniel S. Goldin told the crew Tuesday. "The one thing I ask you all to keep in mind is crew safety has got to be our first objective."

Never have three people walked in space together; spacewalkers usually go in pairs for safety. Spacewalking astronauts risk puncturing their spacesuits, which in the vacuum of space can be fatal.

Astronauts Thomas Akers and Richard Hieb were to help crewmate Pierre Thuot try to capture a $157 million Intelsat-6 satellite that was left in a uselessly low orbit by a miswired rocket two years ago.

On Sunday and Monday, Thuot failed to snare the slowly revolving satellite with a 15-foot tool called a capture bar. His efforts caused the 17-by-12-foot, 4.5-ton communications satellite to wobble dangerously close to the shuttle.

Today, on the count of three, each spacewalker was to grab onto can-sized projections on the side of the satellite and help wrestle it to a halt. Then Thuot and Hieb were to try to lock on the capture bar.

The operation was expected to take six to eight hours.

The satellite will be a total loss unless the astronauts retrieve it, attach a rocket motor and release it, boosting it to a working orbit 22,300 miles high. The shuttle does not have enough fuel for a fourth rescue attempt.

Randy Stone, NASA mission operations director, said the manual attempt became necessary because planners misjudged the satellite's sensitivity to the small amount of pressure applied in using the capture bar.

"It is probably still less than the optimum way to do it, but based on the previous two experiences, we felt like that we ought to go try something different," he said.

Astronauts have captured satellites by hand all three times they have tried - twice in 1984 and once in 1985.

NASA chose Thuot, Hieb and Akers after finding they could squeeze into the shuttle's airlock, a closet-sized compartment that separates the cabin from space.

Those three and Kathryn Thornton, the only woman among Endeavour's seven astronauts, had trained for months to walk in space, and each has a spacesuit aboard.

"I think since we're going to be manhandling the satellite we'll go with Tom, Rick and Pierre," commander Daniel Brandenstein told Mission Control.

Intelsat, a Washington-based consortium of 122 countries, paid NASA $93 million for the rescue attempt, one-quarter of the flight's cost. There were no money-back guarantees.

Endeavour is scheduled to return to Earth on Friday, eight days after liftoff. The flight was extended one day to allow the third rescue attempt.

Newly-released documents show 'arrogant' Oswald

WASHINGTON (AP) - Newly declassified CIA documents on the Kennedy assassination portray Lee Harvey Oswald as 'an arrogant defector who came home from the Soviet Union in 1961 only when assured he wouldn't be imprisoned. The 110-page Oswald file containing documents collected before the Nov. 22, 1963, assassination of President John F. Kennedy illustrate the government's intense interest in defectors and uphold the picture of Oswald as an aloof and abrasive ideologue.

The strange biography of Oswald, identified by the Warren Commission as the lone gunman who killed Kennedy, has long been a cottage industry for assassination aficionados.

Among the many questions surrounding his life are whether his pro-Communist contacts were a motive in the shooting; how was he able to return to the United States so easily after defecting and marrying a Soviet woman; was he a U.S. government agent who got mixed up in a plot to kill the president?

Part of the CIA file includes communiqués between the State Department and the U.S. Embassy in Moscow in 1961 when Oswald, two years after defecting to the Soviet Union, announced he wanted to return home.

Oswald demanded "full guarantees that I shall not, under any circumstances, be prosecuted for any act pertaining to this case." The State Department gave no guarantees but told Oswald, a former Marine, that there appeared to be no impending prosecution.

CIA Director Robert Gates, who turned over the file to the Senate Government Affairs Committee on Tuesday, said the documents represented the beginning of a concerted agency effort to allow public access to the 300,000-page Oswald file. He said they will be open to public review at the National Archives within a matter of days.

"I believe that maximum disclosure will discredit the theory that CIA had anything to do with the murder of John F. Kennedy," Gates told the committee.

But one assassination expert isn't so sure the Oswald file contains anything new that hasn't already been obtained through Freedom of Information Act lawsuits.

"At first glance, it looks pretty familiar," said attorney James Lesar, director of the private Assassination Archives and Research Center. The CIA and other Bush administration agencies, Lesar said, "are making a public relations gesture to show how open they are."

Lesar said the CIA file does touch on areas of interest to assassination researchers.

An October 1963 CIA memo discusses the visit to the Soviet embassy in Mexico City of a man identifying himself as "Lee Oswald." It describes the person as being 6 feet tall with an athletic build, not a description that matched Oswald's slight physique.

The question of whether someone was posing as Oswald in a contact with Soviet officials so close to the assassination is matter of keen interest to assassination scholars.

"There is a lot of interest in whether Oswald was part of a defector's program," Lesar said. "There were other Americans in the military service who defected and the suggestion has been that this may have been part of an infiltration campaign."

Tuesday's hearing was on legislation to release assassination material. Gates and FBI Director William Sessions both said they supported such a goal, but they raised numerous objections to the proposed legislation.

The legislation would establish a judicially appointed review board that would have the power to review and release assassination documents. The president would be allowed to veto the release of any document determined to be a threat to national security.

Welfare mother says evangelist duped her

TULSA, Okla. (AP) - An Oklahoma woman has joined two others suing Texas evangelist Robert Tilton, alleging he duped her of $2,125 in welfare money with promises to make her financially independent.

Eileene R. Gaines of Coweta, a town southeast of Tulsa, filed a lawsuit Tuesday seeking more than $50,000 from Tilton. She alleges fraud and emotional distress.

She is the third Oklahoma woman who has sued Tilton. The other two lawsuits seek $40 million each.

Tilton's attorney, J.C. Joyce of Tulsa, could not be reached for comment.

Tilton and his Word of Faith World Outreach Center in Farmers Branch, Texas, are being investigated by the Texas attorney general's office.

Ms. Gaines said in 1989 she was convinced, based on what Tilton was saying, that she would become financially independent from state aid and that she would be able to provide a home for her four children if she contributed money.

In January 1990, she said she sent $1,125 from her welfare checks to Tilton's ministry.

Ms. Gaines said she acquired a home that she believed God provided for her. But when she lost it a short time later, she says Tilton's ministry led her to believe it was because she stopped contributing money.

She said she sent $500 in November 1990 thinking she would get another home and, saying Tilton's ministry led her to believe she would get the home sooner, sent in another $500 a year later.

CORRECTION

Because of an error in County Court records, a defendant was listed in County Court Dispositions of the Tuesday edition of the Brand as sentenced to 20 days in jail on May 6 on modification of probation assessed on a driving while intoxicated charge.

However, the defendant, Will Garrett Jones, 18, entered a guilty plea on Jan. 18 to a charge of reckless conduct, not DWI, and was sentenced to one year probation. The May 6 court action was modification of that sentence.

The Brand regrets the error.

Tips for eating on the run

Mom calls from work and leaves a message saying she'll be at the office until after eight. Dad walks in the door with just enough time to change his clothes and drop Billy at softball practice before heading off to the condo board meeting. And Sue zips into the kitchen to fix a snack before tonight's big study date.

It's a familiar scene, as American families increasingly must rely on two paychecks, and everyone in the family is constantly on the go.

With time a precious commodity, the '90s lifestyle has led to a decrease in leisurely sit-down family meals.

But busy schedules don't mean skipping meals. The nation's food industry has responded to the '90s lifestyle by offering a wide variety of food for busy people to pop into the microwave. Microwaveable food is not a $2.5 billion market, growing at the rate of 36 percent a year, industry statistics show.

Whether families are eating together or eating according to their own individual schedules, they can choose their own microwave meals.

The eagle uses the same nest year after year, adding new material each year.

Bay View Study Club officers announced

Members of Bay View Study Club met in the home of Helen Eades in Amarillo Thursday afternoon, May 7, for their final meeting of the club year. Assisting Mrs. Eades as hostesses were Betty Rudder, Nancy Hays, Beth Burran and Mary Fraser.

The present slate of officers will continue for the 1992-93 club year and their election was confirmed with the theme "Bluebirds and Happiness." President McBride stated that the shelves donated by Bay View to Deaf Smith County Library to assure safe keeping of the rare book collection are in place. A note of appreciation to the club from Librarian Rebecca Walls was read.

The club voted to provide six student scholarships to the Hereford

Community Concert Association series to encourage youth to hear and learn to appreciate all types of music. Each year, the HCCA offers residents an opportunity to hear top professional musical attractions through the association with Columbia Artists management.

Volunteers who will drive King's Manor residents on June shopping trips were enlisted during the business session. Members also offered suggestions for possible programs for the coming club year.

Finger foods were served with coffee and punch from a tea table centered with an arrangement of spring blossoms.

Golfers look to improve at state tourney

Headed to State

When the Hereford girls' golf team hits Austin's Jimmy Clay Golf Course Thursday for the first round of the Class 4A State Golf Tournament, they'll be looking to improve on last year's finish. In 1991, the team was eighth out of eight teams at the tournament, though that's also eighth out of 168 teams in Class 4A.

"When you go down there already in the top eight in the state, that's out of (168) teams in the state," Coach Stacey Bixler said, "but we're looking to move up and compete for a place." The team's play at the Region I-4A Tournament in San Angelo two weeks ago indicates that they could do better this year. At regionals, the Lady Whitefaces led after the first round with a 341, then slipped to second with a 389 in the second round. If they can play like they did the first day on both days in Austin, a championship would be a possibility. "You don't ever know what it's going to take to compete down there," Bixler said, "but I think 340-350, that would put you in pretty good position."

There will be eight schools at the tournament: Hereford, Sulphur Springs, Bastrop, Wharton, Athens, Dallas Highland Park, Austin Westlake and Region I-4A champion Andrews. All but Athens, Westlake and Highland Park were there last year. Andrews won last year. Hereford players will play in groups with players from Andrews, Sulphur Springs and Bastrop. That's encouraging for Bixler. He said that the teams were grouped by best regional qualifying scores last year, and it should be that way this year too. If it is, Hereford is starting in the top four.

Hereford's number five through number one players are scheduled to tee off from 9:30-10 a.m.

Smash

Hereford's Jody Hodges hits an overhand smash. Hodges and his partner, Marcus Berend, won two of three doubles matches as Hereford's junior varsity and junior high tennis players took on Plainview Saturday at Whiteface Courts.

Drexler, Laettner going to Olympics

NEW YORK (AP) - With the additions of Clyde Drexler and Christian Laettner, the U.S. Olympic team is complete. Maybe.

Drexler, the star guard of the Portland Trail Blazers, became the 11th NBA player selected. Laettner, the 6-foot-11 Player of the Year who led Duke to the last two national championships, is the only college player on the squad that will play in the Tournament of the Americas in Portland, Ore., where it must finish in the top four to qualify for Barcelona. Both were added Tuesday.

"I think this team has unlimited potential," said Drexler, who was miffed that he was not an original selection last year. "There is enormous talent and flexibility on this team."

"There were a lot of guys worthy to be chosen, and I think it is a real honor to be considered, and to be selected is an even greater honor."

To be the only collegian on the team is just as special, Laettner said.

Players including Magic Johnson, Larry Bird, David Robinson, Chris Mullin and even Michael Jordan, could be questionable for the Olympics.

Bird has played only one playoff game because of a sore back and Johnson says he will play despite having testing positive for the AIDS virus. Robinson currently is recovering from hand surgery, Jordan has been plagued by back pain and Mullin was hurt in the first round of the playoffs.

The selection committee said it also will consider all pro and college players as alternates in case current members drop out, and it will not have a specific list of alternates.

"We've had some concern, obviously, about Magic, Larry and David Robinson," USA Basketball president Dave Gavitt said. "But we received assurances from all three that they will be completely fit and ready to play. ... But we do have a contingency plan in that all players in the pro and collegiate side will be available to us."

Drexler believes Johnson proved he will have no problems in Portland, Barcelona, anywhere.

"I think the way the All-Star game was played, it dismissed all thoughts of Magic not being able to compete," he said. "The dangers of him competing in any NBA game or any game is up to Magic. It will be a pleasure to see him playing again."

Other members of the team are Karl Malone, John Stockton, Charles Barkley, Patrick Ewing and Scottie Pippen.

"When they say dream team, this really is what it is," said Drexler, who averaged 25 points and 6.7 assists this season. "It will be a pleasure to play with such guys. I think everybody on court will make everybody around them so much better, and I think we will bring home the gold."

There one other collegian seriously considered for the team was 7-1 center Shaquille O'Neal, who has left LSU as a junior to turn pro.

"Naturally, I am very disappointed about not playing in the Olympics," he said, "but I truly wish all the team members the very best of luck, especially Christian Laettner. I think that Christian will be an excellent addition to the team. I'll be rooting for the guys to bring home the gold."

Baylor hires hoops coach

WACO, Texas (AP) - Incoming athletic director Grant Teaff got more than 60 applications for Baylor's basketball coaching job, but one name stood out.

Darrel Johnson's solid impression was enough to keep him on the mind of Baylor officials, who announced Tuesday the signing of the Oklahoma City University coach to a five-year contract.

When the search began following the March 27 firing of Gene Iba, Teaff, then only the school's football coach, asked San Antonio Spurs executive Bob Bass to name a candidate he thought would fit Baylor.

Bass named Johnson, who compiled a 73-3 record at Oklahoma City University while winning the past two NAIA championships.

Teaff forwarded the name to the school's search committee, which then made Johnson its first interviewee.

Both Teaff and Johnson called their union a "perfect match."

Johnson said the opportunity to coach at Baylor is a dream come true. He said Tuesday's announcement fulfills his career coaching goals.

"I'm not looking for any steppingstones. I'm hoping to be here for the long haul," he said.

At a news conference announcing his hiring, Johnson spoke of installing an up-tempo style of play that he believes could put the Bears into a national championship.

"Every year there's a Cinderella team in the Final Four. It might as well be Baylor. It can happen," he said.

But school officials insist Johnson's hiring is not a "quick fix" to repair a program that has averaged less than 12 victories per season the last four years.

Instead, the 37-year-old coach was given a five-year contract to lead the program into the future.

"We want to fix it as quick as possible, but... more important to me is building with a foundation that is solid and sound," said Teaff.

Johnson said he is ready to begin winning immediately.

"We have the potential to become one of the top programs in the country. I see no reason why Baylor University cannot become among the nation's elite programs," said Johnson, who was accompanied by his wife Denna.

Bulls take 3-2 lead over Knicks

CHICAGO (AP) - Michael Jordan has a fantasy - a wide open game against the New York Knicks.

That didn't happen Tuesday night, but Jordan led the defending champion Chicago Bulls to a 96-88 victory and a 3-2 lead over the Knicks in their best-of-7 series that continues in New York Thursday night.

"I'd love to go in there and win No. 6, but it won't be easy," said Jordan. "And I'd also like to see one of those wide-open games."

It was anything but Tuesday night, although Jordan tried his best.

He scored 37 points, 26 in the second half. But most of them were tough points, with 15 coming from the free throw line after he was repeatedly hammered by the Knicks.

"The lane doesn't belong to anybody, and if I'm going to get knocked down, I'm going to the hole," Jordan said.

The Bulls could end the Eastern Conference semifinal series with a victory Thursday night. If the Knicks win, Game 7 will be played in Chicago Sunday afternoon.

In a Western Conference semifinal Tuesday night, Utah moved to a 3-1 lead by defeating Seattle 89-83.

Tonight, the Boston Celtics will take on the Cleveland Cavaliers in Game 5 of their Eastern Conference semifinal. The teams are tied 2-2.

The Bulls never trailed after taking a 20-18 lead in the first quarter, but they could never put the Knicks away until Jordan converted a three-point play with 35.9 seconds left for a 92-86 lead.

They were ahead 30-19 early in the second quarter when Craig Hodges came off the bench and hit a pair of 3-pointers. But the Knicks, led by Xavier McDaniel and Gerald Wilkins, kept battling back.

New York came within a point of the lead six times in the third quarter, only to be turned back by Jordan or John Paxson, who finished with 13 points.

There was one more gasp when the Knicks cut Chicago's lead to 73-72 on three straight points by McDaniel. But B. J. Armstrong and Jordan helped open another six-point lead.

Patrick Ewing fouled out with 3:33 left in the game and the Knicks managed to cut Chicago's lead to 89-86 when McDaniel hit a 3-pointer with less than two minutes to play.

McDaniel scored 18 of his 26 points in the first half. Wilkins finished with 19 and Ewing 14.

For a change, the Bulls outrebounded the Knicks 33-29.

Jazz 89, SuperSonics 83

In Seattle, Jeff Malone scored 24 points and Karl Malone 22 as the Jazz grabbed their first playoff road victory in more than a year. In the lowest-scoring game of the series, the Jazz got six crucial free throws from Tyrone Corbin in the final minute.

Ricky Pierce led Seattle with 21 points.

Utah is one win away from reaching the conference finals for the first time in its history. Game 5 will be played Thursday night at Salt Lake City, where Utah was 37-4 in the regular season, the best home record in the NBA.

Spike

Chris Hoover of the Super Team spikes the volleyball. The Super Team, consisting of Hoover and Gary Abramson, played games against the seniors from the HHS volleyball team and against the Hereford coaches, and won both. In a third game, the seniors beat the coaches. The volleyball exhibitions and an auction helped the HHS Key Club raise $1,700 dollars for the Gene Brock Scholarship Fund.

NBA referees allowing rough play

By JIM LITKE
AP Sports Writer

CHICAGO (AP) - What most of us recognized as pushing and shoving (oof!) and grabbing and holding (hey!) and slapping and hacking (whap!), the NBA has convinced its employees to shrug off simply as "physical" play.

As in: "It was one of the most physical games so far." - Chicago's Michael Jordan after the Bulls beat the New York Knicks 96-88 Tuesday night in Game 5 of their Eastern Conference semifinal.

Or: "They played a lot more physical tonight and the refs wouldn't let us play our physical game." - New York's Anthony Mason.

And especially: "If the Bulls want the pretty boy treatment, then they better go to some playground in Chicago. This is a man's game; it's supposed to be physical." - New York's Xavier McDaniel.

The game is also supposed to sell tickets and commercials, and the people who run the NBA are going to find that harder to do with too many more series like the one the Bulls and Knicks are staging. You wouldn't expect what is currently the hottest pro sports league, basketball, to take its cue from the coldest, hockey. But that's what seems to be at work here.

Somewhere on the road to this championship, someone or several people in positions of influence in the NBA apparently decided to (euphemism incoming!) "let the players play." It was nothing so grand as a conspiracy, as some Chicagoans have whined during calls to local radio shows the past few days, or as explicit as telling the men who referee the game to look the other way when most of the pushing shoving grabbing holding slapping hacking etc. takes place.

It was more a case of letting the players define their own limits, a sin of omission rather than of commission. Unfortunately, the result has been the same as in hockey. In attempting to level the playing field, the players have flattened the level of play. Too many stars are licking wounds too often and too many goons are logging too much time, playing much too prominent a role in the outcome.

At the most critical moment yet of their months-long quest to defend the championship they won last June, Chicago coach Phil Jackson fielded a team that - while not quite goonish - was one that you actually needed a scorecard to identify. The Bulls were protecting a 71-67 lead at the start of the fourth quarter Tuesday night, and on the floor in those familiar white uniforms were these very unfamiliar names - Will Perdue, Scott Williams, Craig Hodges, B.J. Armstrong and Horace Grant, the only regular in the bunch.

Jordan, the league's main gate attraction, was on the bench getting a break from the constant banging and a very badly needed breather. Alongside him sat Scottie Pippen, looking mournful and no more acclimated to the rough stuff than he was a few short years ago when, in a playoff series against the Detroit Pistons, he was mysteriously felled by migraine headaches. A few seats farther down sat Bill Cartwright and John Paxson, the remaining starters, looking similarly fatigued.

Not long after the Knicks had hammered them into submission in the opening game of the series, and continuing right up to the pre-game announcements, the Bulls made no secret of their distaste for this kind of play. Jackson, their coach, even made a point of getting himself tossed out of Sunday's game in New York by suggesting to the officials that they might be better suited to work an Australian Rules Football contest than in the NBA.

And afterward he added, "I think people in the league office like this kind of stuff."

Then, not wanting to be labeled a whiner, Jackson reached back for some euphemisms of his own. "We'll have to accept it," he said. "We'll have to play through it."

Johnson crowned Rookie of Year

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) - Larry Johnson didn't plan on being the NBA Rookie of the Year, and when he was late for the Charlotte Hornets' training camp, most people felt he wouldn't have to worry about it anyway.

"I downplayed it all year," said Johnson, who on Tuesday was named the league's top first-year player. "I didn't get serious until the last month when people started telling me I had a chance to win it. That made me think about it."

The Dallas native, who averaged 19.2 points and 11 rebounds a game, got 90.5 of a possible 96 votes in a poll of sportswriters and broadcasters to join such NBA greats as Michael Jordan, Patrick Ewing and Larry Bird, who also were named the league's top rookie.

Denver's Dikembe Mutombo, an early favorite for rookie honors after a great start and All-Star recognition, received 3.5 votes and Billy Owens of the Golden State Warriors got two.

Few people were thinking of Johnson as a contender for the title last November when he finally appeared in the teal-and-white uniform as the Hornets opened their season at Boston. Indeed, fewer even thought he was worthy of a No. 1 pick.

Even within the Charlotte camp, there was debate over whether the No. 1 pick should be used for Johnson or Georgetown's Mutombo or even Syracuse's Owens. Once the season began, Mutombo showed every sign that he would take the rookie title and that Johnson wouldn't be a factor.

Students enjoy DSGH visit

Dr. Robert Clark and nurse Rosa Marquez visit with a student from Hereford Day Care at Deaf Smith General Hospital on Tuesday. Give present with future to graduate

Cap and gown season is upon us. More than 2.5 millions students will graduate from high school this year, and another million will receive their bachelor's degrees.

Many proud parents of high school and college seniors are looking to mark the occasion. Although a young man or woman will likely need a lot of material goods to begin this new phase of his or her life, a parent can do more than write a check to cover some expenses.

One of the most valuable gifts a graduate can receive is an understanding of the importance of establishing a savings and investment program early in life.

Start an investment account-high quality individual stocks or a mutual fund, for example-in your child's name and encourage him or her to make regular contributions.

It isn't easy for young people to put money away for the future, but for the sake of long-term security, it's important that they do. Time is the greatest ally an investor has. Unfortunately, most of us don't learn that lesson until it's too late to take full advantage of it.

Many young people mistakenly believe you have to have a lot of money to start investing. However, many investment accounts require as little as $250 to open. If you add $50 a month and earn an average of 10 percent, in 10 years you'll have more than $10,000.

The real key to investing is discipline-starting early and contributing regularly to your investment plan.

A 20-year-old puts $100 a month into an investment earning 10 percent. At age 30, he stops contributing. By the time he is 45, his investment will be worth more than $85,000.

Minchew and Gene Streun; basses, Mike Bryant, Roy Blevins, Bill Devers, Lanny Cook, Joe Flood, Jerry Jansa, Dr. Trow Mims, Kyle Minchew, Joe D. Rogers and Shawn Stubbs.

The Hereford Chamber Singers has presented two or three concerts annually for the community since its inception in 1974. The group has also provided musical entertainment for many different community functions. The purpose of the group is to allow adults to have an opportunity to sing in a choral setting outside of a church choir with other select voices. Its motto is "Human relations Through Music" and has carried that motto and its music throughout Texas and to the countries of Romania and Australia.

A spokesperson for the group said, "The presentation 'Spring Fling' is guaranteed to be a worthwhile evening of musical entertainment which will be enjoyed by the entire family. Everyone is invited to attend."

Advice for business travelers

Getting work done while on the road is a major challenge for business travelers. Begin effective ill be easier and more profitable if you follow these simple rules.

1. Though you've probably made the best deal for airfare, don't forget to check if the hotel offers discounts to business travelers. Most do, although they don't always publicize it.

2. If your flight is canceled, don't run to the ticket counter to book another flight. Go to the closest phone. You'll avoid the lines and beat the rush.

3. Make sure you stay at a hotel that has the business services you need (i.e., computers, faxes, photocopiers, secretarial support).

4. Don't skip your workouts. Use the hotel's fitness center. Exercise will relieve stress and help keep your energy up. A good workout will also help reduce jet lag.

Ann Landers

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I am a 37-year-old woman, married to a man who is kind, loving, well-educated, hard-working and completely devoted to me. It's his first marriage, my second. A large part of my fascination with "Gerry" was the fact that he was so shy. I have always felt that sex is a special act and I could never be attracted to anyone who treated it casually.

My first husband was my only sexual partner before Gerry. Realistically, I did not expect Gerry, at the age of 38, to be a virgin. He told me about a few relationships he had had and it didn't bother me.

After we married, I learned that during his single years Gerry had had sex with a long list of women I know. When I confronted him he admitted it and said I was silly to let it bother me. Frankly, I feel betrayed. Every time we make love, I have visions of the other women who have been in my place and it makes me sick. Now I feel there is nothing special about our lovemaking since he has shared this part of himself with so many others.

I love Gerry, but his past torments me and I don't know how to pretend it doesn't matter. Am I wrong about this?--Deceived in Providence

DEAR PROV: Your signature defies logic. Gerry didn't deceive you. You knew he had slept with several women before he married you. What you didn't know was how many. At this late date, it doesn't matter. He's your husband now, so forget the past and enjoy the present, or there might not be a future. If you can't do this alone, seek counseling.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I met my wife during World War II. I loved her from the moment our eyes met. We were married soon after.

In a few years we bought the nicest house in the neighborhood. It had four bedrooms, two bathrooms, a full basement and a garage with an apartment overhead. I loved the house and was proud of it. We made many improvements over the years.

My wife is a terrific bargain hunter and shops constantly. But now there is only a narrow path through our home, basement, garage and overhead apartment. Only one door is available for entering and leaving. You can't even get into the garage or the apartment. Junk is piled to the ceiling in both places.

No one drops by anymore because they know we will not invite them in. Our grandchildren can't come over because there is no place to sit or sleep even though all the bedrooms are furnished. This breaks my heart.

I am 70 now and retired with a nice pension. My wife still works and makes good money, but she spends most of it on worthless junk. The woman saves everything. We have cereal boxes that are 30 years old. She spends between $300 and $700 a month. We have no savings and she cannot understand why.

I love my wife very much and I know she loves me. All I want is a home I can be proud of--one our children and grandchildren can visit. I've given up hope that this will ever be. Any advice?--Sad in Ashland, Ky.

DEAR KENTUCKY: Many women get a great deal of satisfaction from finding bargains. Your wife, however, has gone beyond normal limits. Her compulsion to buy is a form of mental illness.

You have expressed genuine love for this woman. I hope she loves you enough to seek professional help so that you can have a normal life--complete with visits from your grandchildren. Perhaps you can hasten her recovery with the lure of a huge garage sale. Good luck.

Planning a wedding? What's right? What's wrong? "The Ann Landers Guide for Brides" will relieve your anxiety. Send a self-addressed, long, business-size envelope and a check or money order for $3.65 (this includes postage and handling) to: Brides, C/o Ann Landers, P.O. Box 11562, Chicago, Ill. 60611-0562.

ATHENS, Ohio (AP) - Terry Anderson, soon to write a book about his experiences as a hostage, has won another journalism award.

He will receive the Carr Van Anda Award from Ohio University's E.W. Scripps School of Journalism next week, spokesman Bryan McNulty said Tuesday.

Last week, Anderson accepted a $245,500 award from Freedom Forum, a media think tank. He begins a yearlong fellowship next month to write a book.

Anderson, chief Middle East correspondent for The Associated Press when he was kidnapped in 1985, was the longest held American hostage in Lebanon. He was released in December.

When to see your doctor

A major health initiative has been launched urging millions of Americans with frequent heartburn symptoms-which may be a sign of a more serious medical problem-to seek medical advice and a treatment plan. The educational initiative, by the Glaxo Institute for Digestive Health (GIDH), features a nationwide television and print consumer awareness program.

Digestive diseases affect more than half of all Americans at some time during their lives, according to the National Institute of Health. They're the second leading cause of disability due to illness in the nation, resulting in 200,000 absences from work each day.

The initial focus of the digestive disease awareness is heartburn-one of the most prevalent digestive symptoms in the United States today-and addresses evidence that some Americans may be ignoring frequent heartburn and self-medicating with antacids. A televised message entitled "It's nothing serious..." will run during prime time shows, network evening newscasts, morning shows and cable programming, reaching four of every five adults over age 35.

The GIDH is also sponsoring a toll-free patient information number, 1-800-232-GIDH, a patient newsletter, Inside Tract.

Jobs, med care big rural issues

AUSTIN (AP) - Small-town mayors say more job opportunities, more diversified economies and better health care are among the most important issues facing rural Texas. Forty-five percent of rural mayors responding put job opportunities at the top of the list, "making it by far the most important issue," according to a new survey by the state comptroller's office.

Because the rural job market often is limited, many small town Texans must commute long distances to work.

More than three-fourths of the mayors said a "significant number" of residents in their towns were employed elsewhere. The average commute was 28 miles each way, ranging up to 80 miles.

According to the latest issue of the comptroller's publication Fiscal Notes, 127 of 593 mayors surveyed by mail in January responded.

Ranked second to increasing job opportunities was diversifying the local economy.

The local officials said recruitment of new industries is "a key to economic vitality in small communities," the report said. "A large- or medium-sized firm can provide jobs, increase the tax base and cut down on the number of residents who commute to work."

Third on the mayor's list was local government revenue, and health services was fourth.

Texas leads the nation in hospital closures, and one-fourth of rural counties lack a hospital. Half the rural counties have a critical shortage of primary care physicians, the most common providers of medical care, according to federal studies.

Also on the mayors' list of concerns is the educational level of their cities' residents and the quality of education, ranking seventh and 10th respectively.

"Education has been an essential element in creating new jobs in the rural counties that are prospering," the comptroller's report said.

"Companies look for a skilled work force as part of their decision to relocate. The rural counties whose residents are better educated have more industries based in their communities and are better able to attract new investment," it said.

According to a 1989 Texas A&M University report, 50 percent of adult rural residents have completed high school, compared with 66 percent in metropolitan counties. Also, urban residents are twice as likely to have a college degree, 19 percent compared with 10 percent of rural residents.

When asked for solutions to the most critical problems, the mayors most frequently said the state should cut government regulation and stop issuing mandates without also providing the funds to carry out those orders.

The report said mayors cited recent state-ordered requirements to improve water and sewer systems, and additional requirements for landfills.

The mayors also cited need for more economic development efforts and increased state grants and loans.

Parents, kids show concern

Parents and children showed concern during Tuesday's meeting about under-age drinking at the HHS cafeteria.

Clinton using phone message across US

PORTLAND, Ore. (AP) - Call 1-800-772-8683 and you'll hear the voice of a familiar politician summarizing his platform and issuing this call to arms: "Together, we can take America back." He'll even give you a chance to donate money.

Jerry Brown? No, Bill Clinton.

The Arkansas governor hasn't forgotten the "forgotten middle class" that has been central to his campaign. But as the primary season winds down, the presumptive Democratic nominee is broadening his message in ways that might sound familiar to rivals past and present.

With the Democratic race down to Clinton and Brown, Clinton increasingly has been pushing political reform and urging voters to register their frustration at the polling place - centerpieces of the Brown campaign.

Other Clinton campaign lines echo the themes of populism, pro-business growth and fundamental change trumpeted, respectively, by vanquished rivals Tom Harkin, Paul Tsongas and Bob Kerrey.

It's not that Clinton hadn't raised those issues before. But strategically, it made sense for Clinton to highlight differences with his competition. One by one, as his rivals fell by the wayside, Clinton gave more prominence to some of their favorite - and proven - campaign themes.

During the campaigning for Super Tuesday in March, along with the Illinois and Michigan primaries a week later, Clinton sounded a populist economic theme that would have made Harkin proud and made appeals designed to attract the Iowa senator's labor base. Harkin, of course, was gone from the race by then.

At that time, Tsongas was the main competition, so Clinton stuck to a "people first" theme and derided the former Massachusetts senator as the candidate of Wall Street.

Soon after Tsongas suspended his campaign in late March, Clinton once again was sounding the pro-business lines he had offered earlier in the race.

"I think we can do well in the West because I think people in the West want a pro-growth Democrat to pull this country together," Clinton said last week in response to a question.

The comment echoed one Tsongas gave during the Colorado primary contest.

"We can do well here because people are ready for a Democrat to talk seriously about growing the economy," Tsongas said a week before Colorado's March 3 primary.

Clinton also sprinkles the phrase "fundamental change" into his speeches these days, borrowing the favorite slogan of Kerrey, the Nebraska senator whose campaign ended not long after Harkin's.

On Monday, Clinton even sounded a bit like Virginia Gov. L. Douglas Wilder, who quit the Democratic contest before the first votes were cast in New Hampshire.

Wilder's theme was "fiscal responsibility" - a government that lives within its means. When asked by a Teamsters leader from Oklahoma what message Clinton wanted spread in that conservative state, the governor replied:

"You can go home and tell people I know how to spend money but also to refrain from spending money, and I know how to put economic growth first, which is what we've got to do now," Clinton said.

It was a mix of some staple Clinton rhetoric of dash of Wilder with a touch of Tsongas.

Clinton aides are quick to note that none of the themes are new to Clinton. In fact, he touched on all of them in his announcement speech last fall.

And there is nothing unusual about politicians taking a cue or two from their rivals.

By the end of the 1988 campaign, Democratic nominee Michael Dukakis was sounding the populist slogan "I'm on your side" - not much different from the primary theme of Rep. Richard Gephardt of Missouri.
