Solid waste a solid problem

City facing options, potential crises concerning waste disposal

By GEORGIA TYLER
Staff Writer

Since the days when every city and farm home in West Texas kept an old barrel, with the top cut out, for burning trash, disposal of garbage has become a big issue.

And, the City of Hereford is facing some hard decisions in the next few months on handling garbage, known today by the more sophisticated title, "solid waste."

The clock is ticking down to a deadline in October 1993 when the city must be prepared to continue operating a landfill, seek a landfill in the area to accept garbage or invest in an incinerator.

The rules are pretty stringent on solid waste disposal. City Manager Chester Nolen told the City Commission recently. Two government agencies, the federal Environmental Protection Agency and the Texas Water Commission, both have a hand in rule-making.

The EPA functions in solid waste disposal under subtitle D of the Clean Water Act. Texas Water Commission regulations have not come down.

Commissioners at their May 18 meeting decided to abandon the city landfill by the deadline next year. Estimates of costs to continue operation exceed estimates for other methods of disposing of trash.

Besides the expense, maintaining a landfill operation would seem to be laden with a never-ending cycle of new rules from one governmental agency or another.

Even now, there is some confusion over whether the Texas Water Commission's rules will be the same as those issued by the EPA, said Nolen.

If continued, a city-owned landfill must meet requirements in the future under subtitle D:

-- A compacted bentonite clay liner, 2 1/2 feet thick, must be laid on the bottom and sides of the trench, then covered with a 60-mil poly liner.

Bury, bury expensive

...Heavy machinery must compact and bury garbage daily at the Hereford landfill northeast of the city.

How the landfill sanitation system works

After you take the trash to the dumpster, a sanitation truck comes by two or three times a week to empty the dumpster. After your garbage is thrown in the dumpster, everything is fairly mechanized. The truck has a special lift that fits brackets on the dumpster.

The dumpster is emptied into the truck. As the truck makes its rounds, the waste collected is compacted continuously.

When the truck is full, it goes to the landfill northeast of the city. There, the waste is dumped into the landfill. It is again compressed by heavy machinery, and is covered before nightfall with a layer of dirt. Sometimes, workers must scramble to remove old appliances, tires and tree limbs from the landfill deposits.

Recycling not yet paying off

In the best of all worlds, there would be no need for landfills or incinerators -- solid waste could be recycled. But that day has not arrived, yet.

Some months ago, the City of Hereford accepted responsibility for collecting and disposing of recyclable materials after EnCoRe initiated the program.

Metal cans are easily recycled and the city manages to dispose of glass articles. Tree limbs collected in alleys are chipped. City residents looking for mulch may pick up the wood materials without charge.

But plastics are another matter. There is no market now for plastic containers and a building at the landfill is piled high with the materials until a market can be found. Even when an Amarillo firm took plastics, the city lost.

"We got a check for $5.36 for the last load we took over there," said City Manager Chester Nolen. Fuel and personnel for the round trip cost the city $47.

Four hurt in wreck

The Class of 1992 was almost marred by graduation-night tragedy Friday in a two-vehicle accident.

A 1982 Olds Cutlass driven by Turk Blackwell, 18, of Hereford, who had just graduated from Hereford High School, was struck by a 1985 Buick Regal driven by Christy Rios, 16, of Hereford. The accident occurred at 8:12 p.m. at the intersection of Plains and U.S. Highway 385.

Blackwell was going south on U.S. 385 and Rios was going east on Plains. Rios ran the stop sign at Plains and U.S. 385 and struck Blackwell's car.

Blackwell was the only one of four persons in his car to be injured. He was taken to Deaf Smith General Hospital for treatment.

Christy Rios and her two passengers, Bertha Rios, 46, and Nicha Gaitan, 48, were all taken to DSGH for treatment.

Christy Rios was cited for failure to yield right of way at a stop sign.

Two other accidents did not result in injuries. The accidents occurred in the 300 block of Ave. K and 700 block of Country Club Drive.

Baker is highest honor student

Teresa Baker receives a plaque from Hereford High School Principal Terry Russell at Friday's graduation ceremonies after Russell announced Baker was voted Highest Honor Student.

Baker is honored

Teresa Baker was named the Highest Honor Student for 1992 at Hereford High School at Friday's graduation at Whiteface Stadium.

Baker joins a distinguished group of students on a permanent plaque in the HHS office. She also received her own plaque.

The award is voted each year by the HHS faculty and usually goes to a senior who has been exemplary in all phases of school and community life.

Baker was the salutatorian of the Class of 1992. She and valedictorian David Bone addressed the class of 230 and a crowd of 3,000 that jammed the west stands at the stadium.

Baker has been active in band, volleyball, basketball, tennis, Keywanettes, National Honor Society, Student Council and Catholic Youth Organization. She has been named DAR Good Citizen at HHS and was listed in Who's Who in Academics and Who's Who in Sports.

Cross-country car race will come through city

One hundred vintage cars, each at least 50 years old, will travel through Hereford on June 30 in the 10th annual Great American Race.

The race, in the past, has gone across the country on interstate highways. Ken Rogers, local chairman, said this will be the first time the race will use other highways for the contest.

The cars will stop between 10 a.m. and noon on June 30 as they travel from Charleston, SC to Costa Mesa, CA. The local stop will be part of a roundabout leg that begins that morning in Amarillo, a lunch stop in Portales, and arrival sometime that night in Albuquerque.

The cars will stop at Hereford Buick-Pontiac-GMC, 142 N. Miles. Buick is a corporate sponsor of the race. Rogers, working with the Deaf Smith County Chamber of Commerce, said a committee will be organizing the route into town and will be certain the city does a great job of welcoming the 100 participants and the support persons. Rogers said plans will include welcoming the participants along the route through town with a crowd at Hereford Buick to help host each driver and team.

The chamber will announce information for hosting racers during the pit stop during the next few days.

Experts brace for a stormy season on the coast

By EDUARDO MONTES
Associated Press Writer
SOUTH PADRE ISLAND, Texas (AP) - Hurricane Gilbert gave Texans a good scare before turning south into Mexico in 1988.

It was the last time Texas coast residents had to deal with a hurricane warning and the ensuing evacuations. It's been nearly 10 years since a major storm - Hurricane Alicia in 1983 - actually hit the state, and hurricane watchers hope people haven't forgotten what it was like. "Major hurricanes are rare events," said Bob Sheets, director of the National Hurricane Center. "It's likely you'll go through your entire life and never experience a Hurricane Hugo," the deadly 1990 storm in the Atlantic. "But it could happen tomorrow." Research indicates the United States could be facing more frequent and stronger hurricanes during the next 20 years. A similar period in the 1940s and '50s produced 10 major North American hurricanes.

Hurricanes are measured on a scale of one to five, with a Category 3 or above being considered major. Historically, some of the most devastating storms have developed in the Gulf of Mexico, and many have hit Texas, said Hal Gerrish, a hurricane specialist. Galveston County is the nation's third most hurricane-prone county. It was also the site of the country's deadliest natural disaster, the Great Galveston Hurricane of 1900 that killed more than 6,000 people. Two of the 10 costliest U.S. hurricanes, with combined damages totaling more than $4 billion, have hit the state in just over 30 years.

Despite this history, most of the Texas coast's 4.3 million residents have never experienced a direct hit from a major hurricane - defined as a storm with winds higher than 96 mph, according to Hurricane Center statistics.

Fewer than 1 million of them have any hurricane experience.

Wheat field day coming Monday

Stops at three locations are planned Monday on the annual Deaf Smith County Wheat tour, sponsored by the Deaf Smith County Extension crops committee and Texas Agricultural Extension Service. The day's program will begin with registration and refreshments from 9 a.m. to 9:30 a.m. in the ballroom of the Hereford Community Center. First stop on the tour will be at the Jim Cavin farm, northwest of Westway, where nine wheat varieties are being evaluated under dryland conditions.

Dennis Newton, county agent, and Dr. Brent Bean, area extension agronomist, will discuss rotations with wheat and other crops to help with weed and insect control and disease prevention.

Next on the schedule is a stop at 10 a.m. at a site a mile north of Milo Center on U.S. 385, on the Donald Meyer farm. Eleven popular wheat varieties are being compared under irrigated conditions at this location.

Dr. Carl Patrick, area extension entomologist, will discuss wheat insect identification and control measures and integrated pest management techniques that can be used in wheat production.

Last on the day's tour is a stop at 10:45 a.m. at the Raymond Schlabs farm, seven miles north of Hereford on U.S. 387, where 12 wheat varieties are being grown under irrigation. Dr. Bean also will discuss weed identification and control methods.

Concluding the annual event, Dr. Bean and Dr. Patrick will present a program on pesticide management in High Plains wheat at a Dutch-treat luncheon at the Caison House Restaurant.

The two extension specialists also will be available during the tour to answer specific questions about wheat and small grain production methods and practices.

The tour and program have been approved for three continuing education units for private, commercial and non-commercial pesticide license-holders as required by the Texas Department of Agriculture.

The full program will be conducted in the Hereford Community Center, beginning at 9:30 a.m., if weather does not permit the tour.

Weather experts consider the Gulf coast one of the most susceptible to hurricanes. Here is a list of some of the worst to have hit in the Gulf, particularly Texas:

- 1900
The Great Galveston Hurricane, no category established, killed more than 6,000 residents. It was the deadliest natural disaster in U.S. history.
- 1909
An unnamed Category 4 hurricane hit Louisiana and killed 350 people. No damage estimates available.
- 1919
A Category 4 hurricane, no name, hit the Florida Keys and South Texas, killing more than 600 people. No damage estimates available.
- 1957
Hurricane Audrey, Category 4, hit southwest Louisiana causing more than $696 million in damages and killing 390.
- 1961
Hurricane Carla, Category 4, hit the upper Texas coast, causing nearly $2 billion in damages and killing 46 people.
- 1965
Hurricane Betsy, Category 3, hit southeast Florida and southeast

Louisiana, causing more than $6 billion in damages and killing 75 people.

1967
Hurricane Beulah, Category 3, hit South Texas, causing more than $844 million in damages and killing less than 25 people.

1969
Hurricane Camille, Category 5, hit Mississippi, Louisiana and Virginia, causing more than $5.2 billion in damages and killing 256.

1970
Hurricane Celia, Category 3, hit South Texas, causing more than $1.5 billion in damages and killing fewer than 25 people.

1979
Hurricane Frederic, Category 3, hit Mississippi and Alabama, causing more than $3.5 billion in damages and killing less than 25 people.

1980
Hurricane Allen, Category 3, hit South Texas, causing more than $410 million in damages and killing fewer than 25.

1983
Hurricane Alicia, Category 3, hit the upper Texas coast, causing more than $2.3 billion in damages and killing fewer than 25 people.

WASTE

-- A leachate collection system must be laid on top of the poly so water may be pumped out, then recycled into the fill or treated and discharged.

-- Once a trench is full, a layer of clay, about three feet thick, and six inches of top soil must be placed on top.

-- After the fill is closed, as many as six wells must be drilled at specified spacings for monthly testing to be certain there is no contamination of underground water. Wells could cost $40,000 each.

Currently, expense of operating the city's landfill runs more than $200,000 per year, said Nolen. Direct costs of $189,000 are in employees and equipment while another $20,000 goes into fees and management costs.

The city manager said the additional cost under new rules can be only a guess. An engineering consultant firm estimated annual expense at more than $400,000.

Hauling Hereford's garbage to a regional landfill could be less expensive. Leading a study of solid waste disposal, a Panhandle Regional Planning Commission group has proposed establishment of regional landfills to be used in the 26-county area.

Proposals put on the table by the PRPC committee are predicated on regional landfills in three, seven or nine locations.

In two of the PRPC scenarios, Hereford's trash would go to a privately-operated landfill at Canyon. The third offers an option to a landfill proposed at Dimmitt.

Transportation and landfill tipping (dumping) charges range up to $33.50 per ton. The expense, based on 8,800 tons per year, would be approximately $295,000 per year.

The city would continue garbage collection but the likelihood of the monthly residential charge remaining at $6.50 seems doubtful.

An alternative to maintaining the city landfill or hauling to a regional facility is construction of an incinerator that would produce a minimal amount of ash for disposal but have some revenue-producing capability.

The most notable example of a successful incinerator operation is at Carthage, in East Texas, where the facility operates on a seven-day per week schedule and handles medical waste on a contract basis.

Nolen and the City Commission agree that an incinerator costing about $3.5 million would not be a viable investment unless companies that collect medical waste would contract for disposal at the facility for an extended time.

Before looking further at the incinerator question, the commission decided, medical waste disposal firms should be contacted about possible contracts, even participation in cost of construction a facility.

Commissioner Roger Eades and Nolen were delegated to pursue this course. The $3.5 million price tag includes construction, land, site development, engineering and permits.

The firm retained by the city to study alternatives in solid waste disposal, NRS Consulting Engineers, assembled data on incineration as well as landfill costs.

Cost of disposing of waste, according to the NRS report, could be $47 per ton in a city-owned landfill and $29 in a regional facility. Incineration costs could come in at $54 per ton with sale of steam; $23 with disposal of medical waste and $12 with medical disposal and sale of steam.

Capital expenditure is a major drawback. And, some criticism has been leveled at incinerators.

The City of Waxahachie contracted with a foreign firm to construct an incinerator. However, the effort flopped when the contractor could not put an incinerator on line. After several years, the facility was abandoned.

The incinerator at Carthage and another at Center, also in East Texas, have been very successful and meet standards for emissions with required equipment.

If the City of Hereford follows through on the decision to abandon a municipal landfill, there's still work to be done to the facility in use.

Prior to Oct. 11, 1993, a plan must be developed for closing the landfill and no garbage may be dumped after that date.

HURRICANE

That worries many experts. A recent report from the Hurricane Center says there is danger that many people who have only experienced a weak hurricane or the fringe of the storm may have a false impression of a storm's potential.

With hurricane season beginning June 1, weather and emergency specialists recently toured Texas to meet with residents and warn them to be prepared.

"Don't make a mistake in the next hurricane and think you know what happens," Brownsville meteorologist Richard Hagan told one such gathering.

Sheets, who attended the meeting, also warned that many coastal communities aren't constructing buildings that can withstand a major hurricane.

"There's tremendous development in areas that are very vulnerable and (it's) not very well done," Sheets said.

A universal coastal building code would help reduce property loss, and also ensure there are hurricane-resistant buildings that could serve as "last resort refuges," he said.

But convincing communities to accept more stringent codes isn't easy, said Sheets, who admits to being frustrated by an inability to influence coastal building practices.

"That's been a battle that we've been fighting for the last few years," he said.

It's one hurricane experts don't always win.

Hurricanes are rated according to the Saffir-Simpson scale and given a number from one to five, with five being the worst. Anything greater than a Category 3 is considered a major hurricane.

Here are the categories, and their definitions:

CATEGORY 1 - A storm with winds between 74 mph and 95 mph.

CATEGORY 2 - A storm with winds between 96 mph and 110 mph.

CATEGORY 3 - A storm with winds between 111 mph and 130 mph.

CATEGORY 4 - A storm with winds between 131 mph and 154 mph.

CATEGORY 5 - The most powerful storm, with winds greater than 155 mph.

"It (the attitude) is kind of like, 'It's a rare event and maybe it won't happen on my watch,'" Sheets said.

The outlook seems to be particularly dicey for the residents of the barrier islands, which, while among the prettiest places to live in Texas, are also among the deadliest when a hurricane strikes.

Sheets worries that most coastal evacuation plans don't include contingencies for people who become trapped on the islands.

"The question is: Just what do you do with those people out there?" he said.

A comparatively small portion of the coastal population lives on the islands. Galveston island, home to the largest concentration, has about 60,000 residents; Padre Island, which includes a Corpus Christi community and the town of Port Aransas, has more than 20,000; South Padre Island, has about 1,000.

But their links to the mainland are tenuous - a few ferries and narrow bridges. The ferries become useless as a hurricane approaches and the bridges in most cases are closed before the storm even makes landfall.

And then what? "There's no designated shelter anywhere on this island," said South

Padre Island police Capt. Tommy Atkinson. "If you stay on this island you're on your own. We don't encourage that (staying) at all."

"If we recommend evacuation, they should do that," added Corpus Christi police Chief Henry Garrett. "They should go."

Sheets pointed out, however, that hurricanes can be unpredictable, especially in the Gulf, and could outpace an evacuation.

"The plan now is that everyone is going to get off," he said. "Most people do not have a fall back plan."

"Somewhere we are going to have a large loss of life - in the hundreds - when people are trapped in their cars and it's too late."

That's where a last resort refuge could be valuable, Sheets said, though it certainly wouldn't be a definitive solution. Critics say the presence of such shelters may give people a false sense of security and lead them to ignore evacuation warnings.

The city of Galveston has three, enough to hold about 5,000 people.

"But we have signs that say we do not consider these safe places for protection," said City Manager Douglas Matthews, who also serves as emergency management coordinator.

Galveston, which is protected by a sea wall and will only evacuate in event of a major hurricane, won't open its shelters until five or six hours before landfall "and we don't announce them before then," said Matthews.

"What we try to instill in people is that even a Category 1 hurricane kills," Matthews said. "We try to make sure that complacency doesn't set in, and try to make sure that everybody's ready."

What's next for lottery? New cards, big numbers

AUSTIN (AP) - What's next for Texas Lottery players?

The game that began Friday, called "Lone Star Millions," includes 300 million instant-win tickets.

When those are sold, a second scratch-card game begins. Lottery Director Nora Linares says 200 million tickets are being delivered for that game.

Of those 500 million total tickets in the first two games, 1 million qualify for a series of 12, $1 million prize drawings. Those begin June 18 and run through Sept. 3, Ms. Linares said.

Each of those drawings - being held in 12 cities - will have seven participants selected at random from a pool of about 80,000 ticketholders. Second place will pay $50,000 and third $25,000. Two participants will win $15,000 and two $10,000.

Comptroller John Sharp, who oversees the lottery, has said he hopes to start computerized "lotto" games by mid-September.

In such games, players generally pay to pick three through six numbers daily or weekly in hopes of matching a set of numbers chosen at random by the lottery.

Lotto prizes in other states have reached multimillion-dollar levels.

DON AND MARIE LEVERETT

...Their video with Prince won third in contest

Leveretts win third in Merrick contest

Hereford pharmacist Don Leverett and his golden retriever, Prince, won third place in a national video contest sponsored by Merrick Petfoods. The "commercial" for Merrick's Liver Biscuits features Prince doing a "high five," balancing a Liver Biscuit on his nose, "speaking" and getting Don a Dr Pepper from the refrigerator. Leverett received a $250 check at a banquet in Amarillo.

"Prince said he wants to buy himself a set of golf clubs with the money," Leverett said. "He also told me that if he'd had a better supporting actor, he would have won first place."

Leverett raised the five-year-old dog from a puppy and has learned a lot about training dogs "by reading books." He also listens to Jay Rapp's call-in show on KGNC in Amarillo, which is now he heard about the contest.

The Leverett video tied for third with a video submitted by Tina Colson of Cedar Park. The first-place video, shot by Damon Ladd of Amarillo, earned $1,000. Second place, and $500, went to Shelby Brogdon of Graham.

"We're very pleased the contest went as well as it did the first time out," said Garth Merrick. "We decided to do this so people could have some fun with their pets, and we thought we might get a cute commercial out of it."

Lottery riches hard to handle

HOUSTON (AP) - It may be hard to believe, but officials with three state lotteries say many millionaire winners are so stunned by their sudden good fortune they don't know what to do with the money.

Officials with the New York, California and Virginia lotteries say most big winners go right out and buy a flashy new car. They might go on a few trips, buy a new house or fix up the old one. But after that, many of them are not sure what to do with their money.

Lottery officials interviewed by The Houston Post say big winners most often ask:

-Where and how should I invest my winnings?

-How do I find a good financial adviser I can trust?

-How do I know the charities banging on my door are legitimate?

-What kind of taxes will I have to pay?

-And what do I tell all those reporters who keep asking, "So how are you going to spend it?"

Each of the 35 states that have lotteries gives their new millionaires booklets that answer the most commonly asked questions, said Bill Bergman, executive director of the North American Association of State and Provincial Lotteries, based in Washington.

The booklets often include tips on pitfalls, tax information, and suggestions on finding financial advisers, Bergman said.

their experiences and offer advice, said Larry Gray, director of that state's lottery.

Texas, which starts its lottery Friday, has no plans to hand out booklets or show videos, Steve Levine, a spokesman for the lottery commission, said.

But once the computerized lotto games get started in September and multimillion dollar prizes are awarded, Texas may consider giving tips on how to deal with the publicity, he said.

YOUR EYES

VISION CARE FOR THE ELDERLY

As some senses fade, the elderly become even more dependent on those that remain to keep them in touch with their environment. Good vision care can do a lot to improve the "golden years."

"I don't like to complain" is a common phrase we hear--yet the elderly should be encouraged to complain about any changes in vision, especially those in nursing homes and senior residences where glasses may get lost or even exchanged. Oldsters should be encouraged to report headaches, pains around the eyes, mucous discharged and any eye inflammation. When vision is affected, the individual is likely to withdraw from group activities and seem disoriented, yet the only trouble may be not seeing clearly.

Many states mandate a complete eye examination annually for every resident of a nursing home or senior residence. If your parent or other elderly relative is ambulatory, it is best to bring him or her to the optometrist's office for a complete examination.

Jordan leads Bulls back to finals

Herd golf camp set

By CHUCK MELVIN
AP Sports Writer
RICHFIELD Ohio (AP) - The Cleveland Cavaliers had a feeling Michael Jordan was about to go wild. There was nothing they could do about it.

"I sensed that he was going to take over the game. When you have a player that good - I'd give him the ball, too," Hot Rod Williams said Friday night after Jordan scored 16 fourth-quarter points and led the Chicago Bulls past Cleveland 99-94 for the Eastern Conference championship.

The Bulls, who ousted Cleveland in six games, will defend their NBA championship against Portland in a best-of-7 series that begins Wednesday in Chicago.

Jordan was merely human through the first three quarters, scoring 13 points on 5-for-20 shooting as the Cavaliers double-teamed him and cut off his approaches to the basket. He was forced to shoot contested jumpers that repeatedly banged off the rim.

Scottie Pippen and Horace Grant, however, kept the Bulls close long enough for Jordan to come around. The game was tied at 72 entering the final period.

"He didn't struggle, from our point of view," Pippen said. "He missed some shots. That's it. He just didn't get it going at first. But he's our leader, no matter if he's making the shots or not. We're going to go to him when we need to."

The Cavs started the fourth quarter with a 7-0 run and seemed ready to put the game away until Jordan stalled them by sinking a 15-footer. Neither team led by more than five after that.

"I was fighting myself for the first three quarters, because I wanted to win so bad," Jordan said. "I didn't want to think about going back to Chicago (for a seventh game), so I really was fighting myself."

The turning point, he said, came when he drove for a layup and was fouled by Larry Nance on a three-point play that cut Cleveland's lead to 83-81 with 6:32 left.

"That got me going and into some kind of rhythm, and I just started believing in myself," Jordan said.

The Bulls took their first lead of the quarter at 91-90 when Pippen hit a 20-footer with two minutes left. Two free throws by Jordan made it 93-90, but Cleveland's Mark Price sank a 3-pointer for a 93-93 tie with 47.8 seconds left.

Before the Cavaliers could digest what Price had done, Jordan drove to the basket and made another three-point play 10 seconds later that put Chicago ahead for good. On Cleveland's next possession, Price dribbled the ball off his foot and out of bounds, dooming the Cavs' last realistic chance.

On the Chicago bench, coach Phil Jackson breathed a sigh of relief.

"This was a tough year, because everyone expected us to get back to the finals after winning last year," Jackson said. "They held Michael in check for three quarters. We were just waiting for him to bust out and get this game going our way."

Jordan finished with 29 points on 10-for-27 shooting, and he added eight assists and eight rebounds. Pippen had 29 points and 12 rebounds, and Grant scored 20.

Nance led Cleveland with 25 points and 16 rebounds. Brad Daugherty, playing with a sprained middle finger on his right hand, scored 18 points and grabbed 13 rebounds. Williams scored 16, and Price - playing despite a sprained left ankle - had 14 points on 5-of-18 shooting.

"Brad and Mark played through injuries all through the playoffs," Cavaliers coach Lenny Wilkens said. "They gave everything they had. As a coach, that's all you can ask for."

The Hereford Whiteface Summer Golf Camp will be July 6-10. The camp is for boys and girls who are entering the fourth through ninth grades.

Registration forms will be available this week at upper elementary schools and at Hereford Junior High. The offices will be open this week. The forms also are available at Pitman Municipal Golf Course.

Each camper will be taught basic fundamentals and rules of the game of golf. Campers will be grouped by ability level to ensure that each camper receives the most benefit possible during instruction on grip, stance, alignment and swing mechanics for chipping, putting, all irons and woods.

The camp will be conducted by the HHS golf coaches, the Pitman course pro and assistants.

Each day, the camp will start at 9 a.m. and finish at 3 p.m., with an hour for lunch starting at noon. Lunch is not provided.

The fee is $60, which includes tuition, T-shirts, three golf balls, certificates, special awards, range balls and course usage. Registration forms must be received by June 22.

Rangers win as Palmer takes to No. 2 spot

By DOUG TUCKER
AP Sports Writer
KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) - Getting moved to the No. 2 spot in the Texas Rangers batting order was about the last thing expected by struggling Dean Palmer.

After driving in three runs in a 5-3 victory over Kansas City on Friday night, Palmer now is convinced it was a good move.

"The way I was swinging the bat, it didn't occur to me that I'd be a good two-hole hitter," said Palmer, who had been batting between sixth and eighth. "But it's really worked out. Sometimes it can help out a player just to have a little change like that. Maybe it can get you rolling."

Following Geno Petralli's two-out single in the ninth, Palmer drove a 1-0 breaking pitch from Jeff Montgomery (0-4) over the left-field fence, making Kevin Brown (8-3) the major leagues' first eight-game winner.

The Rangers stretched their winning streak to seven.

"It really wasn't a pitch I was looking for," said Palmer, who has eight homers but leads the league with 57 strikeouts. "He threw me a slider on the first pitch. I really wasn't expecting him to come back with it, but he did. He sort of left it over the plate."

Brown gave up nine hits the first four innings but just one after that. He struck out five, walked none and pitched his fourth complete game.

"He smelled the victory," Royals manager Hal McRae said. "He popped the ball better in the ninth than he did earlier in the game."

"The ninth inning was as effective as any inning he's ever pitched because he was right on the edge. He just found another gear," Texas manager Bobby Valentine said.

Kansas City had gone ahead 3-0 in the third. Gregg Jefferies singled, extending his hitting streak to a career-best 15, Wally Joyner singled and Kevin McReynolds singled for a 2-0 lead. McReynolds scored on Mike Macfarlane's single off Dickie Thon's glove at shortstop.

Texas closed to 3-2 in the fifth when Ivan Rodriguez and Thon singled, Palmer hit a sacrifice fly and Rafael Palmeiro hit an RBI single.

The Rangers tied the score in the seventh when Thon singled off Neal Heaton, was sacrificed to second, took third on a wild pitch and scored as Brian Downing slowed and forced a tag play between first and second on Palmer's grounder to second baseman Terry Shumpert.

The official scorer originally credited Palmer with an RBI, but it was taken away when statisticians realized he had hit into a reverse-force double play.

Texas, which moved into first place in the AL West on Thursday night, now has won 11 of 12. Things are going smoothly for a change.

Cleveland 14, California 2
Albert Belle is hitting home runs as quickly as the Cleveland Indians are winning games.

Wait, that's not a joke.

Belle homered twice Friday night, giving him 11 this season and seven in 22 at-bats over six games, as Cleveland routed California 14-2. The Indians won their fourth straight for the first time since May 31-June 3, 1991.

Belle hit a two-run homer in the fifth off Chuck Finley (1-5) and a solo homer in the eighth off Scott Bailes.

Athletics 5, Orioles 3
Jose Canseco homered in his return from a five-game absence and Mark McGwire hit his major league-leading 18th as Oakland stopped a three-game losing streak.

Mike Moore (6-3) won for the second time in six starts, allowing six hits in six shutout innings. Dennis Eckersley got three outs for his 18th save in 18 chances.

Twins 17, Tigers 5
Kirby Puckett hit the first grand slam of his nine-year career for Minnesota, which routed Detroit 15-0 Sunday night. Chili Davis drove in three runs at the Metrodome as the Twins won for the fourth time in five games.

Kevin Tapani (5-4) won his fourth straight start despite allowing the Tigers to take a 4-0 lead in the second. Kevin Ritz (0-1) made his first start this season after 11 relief appearances and allowed five runs in two-plus innings.

Blue Jays 3, White Sox 0
Roberto Alomar homered off Greg Hibbard (5-3) to break an eighth-inning tie at SkyDome, and Juan Guzman got no decision despite seven shutout innings.

Guzman, who is 6-0, allowed four hits, struck out three and walked four. Duane Ward (2-2) and Tom Henke finished with perfect relief, with Henke getting three outs for his eighth save.

Brewers 8, Yankees 3
B.J. Surhoff, trying to shake a season-long slump, hit a three-run homer and Bill Wegman won his third straight start.

Surhoff, batting .168 entering the game, homered off Greg Cadaret (3-4) in the fourth at County Stadium, his first home run since April 8. Wegman (5-4) allowed 10 hits in eight innings. Greg Cadaret (3-4) was the loser.

Mariners 7, Red Sox 3
Dave Valle hit his first home run since opening day as Seattle ended a 10-game losing streak against Boston dating to last June 12.

The Mariners broke a sixth-inning tie at the Kingdome when Pete O'Brien grounded into a double play with the bases loaded and Jay Buhner followed with an RBI single. Tino Martinez added a two-run double in the eighth.

Phillies nip Astros in 12th

By MICHAEL A. LUTZ
AP Sports Writer
HOUSTON (AP) - The Astrodome is Lenny Dykstra's home away from home.

He's hitting .336 in the home of the Houston Astros, which includes a 12th-inning double with two outs that helped Philadelphia beat the Astros 2-1 on Friday night.

He has a .379 career average against the Astros, his best against any NL team.

"I was just trying to see the ball and hit it hard," Dykstra said. "With guys in scoring position we're hitting the ball well. When we play like we're capable of playing, we can beat anybody."

Dykstra's hit allowed the Phillies to win for the eighth time in their last 12 road games and snapped Houston's streak of six straight extra-inning victories.

"It's weird, it's just one of those parks that I've always hit well in," Dykstra said. "You always know that you're going to play here and you always know the temperature. When I play here I feel positive."

Mountain lion's status causes debate

By RAY SASSER
The Dallas Morning News
DALLAS (AP) - When Bobby Simmons' flashlight cut through the cold January night near Hawkins, Texas, its pale beam illuminated a life-and-death struggle Simmons never expected to witness, at least not in East Texas in 1991.

Simmons' 12-pound rat terrier struggled to free its head from the jaws of a 100-pound mountain lion. Simmons fired a pistol over the lion's head, thinking the noise would make the cat relinquish its prey. Instead, the lion dashed into the darkness, still gripping the dog.

How the lion came to be dining on dogs just 125 miles east of Dallas is anyone's guess. Very little is known about the Lone Star version of "Felis concolor," also known as the mountain lion, cougar or panther.

That lack of information has organizations like the Sierra Club and Audubon Society fuming over the lion's plight. According to Texas Parks and Wildlife Executive Director Andy Sansom, a handful of West Texas lion hunters know more about the animals than do the state's biologists.

In December, the Lone Star Chapter of the Sierra Club filed a petition requesting TP&W to classify the Texas mountain lion as a protected non-game species. Lions currently have no status under Texas wildlife statutes, either as game or non-game animals. Like the coyote, they are considered varmints, making it legal to kill a mountain lion any time the opportunity arises.

A number of factors, said West Texas rancher and lion hunter Topper Frank, have resulted in there being more lions now than in recent memory, a statement TP&W's sparse data supports.

"When I was a kid, you'd occasionally hear about a lion in West Texas, but it was rare," said Frank, who chases lions with dogs about 100 days per year.

Frank said the lion increase started in the 1970s and coincided with an increase in desert mule deer, the mountain lion's primary food.

In the Sierra Diablo Mountains north of Van Horn, mule deer numbers rose from seven per 640-acre section in 1973 to 18 per section in 1979. Relatively speaking, the mountain lions were living in a cafeteria, and reports of lion kills increased dramatically.

During that period, TP&W started a project to restore desert bighorn sheep to the Trans-Pecos, and Frank became interested in the sheep project. Desert bighorns, he said, are the world's most expensive mountain lion food.

Another factor in the mountain lion increase is the West Texas proliferation of hobby ranches. Land is cheap in this section of Texas, so remote it often appears on a separate map.

Non-resident landowners run token livestock, if they bother with livestock at all. They seldom are involved in predator control. Their ranches thus become sanctuaries for mountain lions and coyotes.

To protect the bighorn sheep and mule deer in the Sierra Diablo area, Frank began hunting lions. One day in 10, his dogs are successful at treeing a big cat. Sometimes he kills the lion, sometimes he calls off the dogs and sets the cat free.

"They are magnificent animals," Frank said. "I don't know anyone who hunts them who doesn't have tremendous respect for mountain lions. The last thing I want to do is eliminate lions from West Texas."

When the Sierra Club petitioned TP&W to grant lions protected status, Sansom called a round-table meeting in Del Rio. It was as diverse a group as ever sat across a Trans-Pecos table from one another, protectionists on one side, ranchers and sportsmen on the other.

That TP&W called a round-table to discuss the Sierra Club's petition infuriated many of the principles. These view the mountain lion as a convenient ruse to usurp the power of the private landowner, a group that controls 98 percent of Texas land, and to threaten the very existence of sport hunting in the state. Texas, incidentally, sells the most hunting licenses in the nation.

Roy McBride, a Trans-Pecos lion hunter, put the issue in succinct terms: "The return of the mountain lion in Texas is a real wildlife success story accomplished solely and completely by the total lack of any effort on the part of state or federal government."

"Those of us who are engaged in the control or in research of mountain lions do not consider them as vermin. In fact, they are unequaled in the whole scenario of Texas wildlife, and you will hear us squealing like pigs stuck under a gate if they become endangered."

According to Scott Royder, observations by McBride and Frank and the episodic data on which TP&W bases its belief that lions are thriving in the Trans-Pecos are simply not good enough. He also says that the mountain lion issue is not an attempt to stop hunting for lions or the animals they prey upon. Royder is conservation chairman for the Sierra Club's Lone Star Chapter and is the person who filed the mountain lion petition.

"We don't feel that the scientific information on mountain lions is conclusive," Royder said. "The main thing we need is more information. We also need a mountain lion management plan for the entire state, and that plan should emphasize East Texas. Mountain lions belong to all the people of Texas and I don't believe TP&W is doing a good job of managing mountain lions, particularly not in East Texas."

Three mountain lions were reported killed last year in East Texas, and Royder thinks that's an indication that the animals are trying to expand back into their historic, statewide range. He would like to see them protected in East Texas, at least until they are established.

"I believe we could have a good statewide population of mountain lions without them being a threat to anyone," he said.

Bobby Simmons is not so sure. Convinced that his dog was a goner after the lion near Hawkins bolted into the dark holding the whimpering rat terrier by the head, Simmons followed the sounds and this time shot to kill. The dog, amazingly, survived the ordeal, which leads Simmons to believe the lion was a domestic cat not skilled in the art of killing its prey.

About 30 days later, a second lion was killed just a few miles from Simmons' house. This one was shot as it was eating a pony it had apparently killed. Last fall, a third East Texas lion was shot coincidentally by a deer hunter.

The lion alerts near Hawkins were quiet until early May, when one of Simmons' neighbors went looking for a missing cow and found a tawny cat sitting atop it.

"We don't know where they're coming from or why they would be around Hawkins and not everywhere else in East Texas," Simmons said. "Game wardens say the lions are no danger to people, but we don't want them eating our pets and livestock."

The only two documented Texas attacks by mountain lions on humans have come at Big Bend National Park, where the animals have been protected for decades. Biologists estimate 18 to 24 lions live in the 700,000-acre Chisos Mountains sanctuary on the Mexican border.

Because the vast majority of Texans live in the eastern half of the state, is that why mountain lions thrive only in West and South Texas, regions still controlled by large ranches with few people?

"The passing of lions from most of Texas may be inevitable," said Dr. Dede Armentrout, Texas Director for National Audubon Society, an organization that joined the Sierra Club in its mountain lion petition. "What bothers me the most is the fact that we've let them pass from parts of Texas without lifting a finger to save them. Lions are gone from most of Texas without any effort from TP&W to even document their passage."

Armentrout said Audubon favors a statewide management plan for lions, but TP&W must first develop data on the species. That information is difficult to come by.

Dr. Bill Morrill, a biologist who serves as president of Exotic Wildlife Association, questions why TP&W, Audubon or the Sierra Club would suddenly want to get involved in studying mountain lions when available data indicate the animals are increasing.

Morrill agrees with the mountain lion motto adopted by The Davis Mountains Trans-Pecos Heritage Association - "if it ain't broke, don't fix it."

"Sierra Club is interested in the mountain lion because it's a warm and fuzzy megafauna that draws political attention to a region," Morrill said. "Sierra Club is famous for filing lawsuits to force their will upon other individuals or landowners. If we give the mountain lions a status, we're inviting a lawsuit from Sierra Club."

"Morrill is an advocate of landowner rights and credits private landowners for the abundance of wildlife, non-game as well as game species, that thrives in Texas."

"The mountain lion is a political hot potato that has nothing to do with the animal itself," he said. "The real issue is who dictates policy regarding Texas wildlife. If mountain lions are increasing without our help, it makes no sense to change what we're doing."

Landowners, protectionists, ranchers, lion hunters, biologists, game managers - all have different ideas about the elusive mountain lion. According to Sansom, they also have one important philosophy in common. Nobody wants to see "Felis concolor" disappear from the Texas landscape.

Sluggo Willie Stargell posted records for most consecutive seasons with intentional walks and also for most seasons with 100 or more strikeouts.

Rusty Staub, one-time New York Met star, was given his nickname at birth by attending nurses because of the color of his hair.

Are you one of the 7 out of 8 who have not prepared a will?

When you die you must leave behind everything for which you have worked and saved. The question is, "TO WHOM?" If you have a will, you have already instructed the State, attorneys and judges to act according to YOUR wishes. But if you don't have a will, the State will simply distribute your estate according to law.

Without a Will you let the State determine the disposition of your assets, the welfare of your spouse and the guardianship of your children. Probate costs, taxes and fees increase. What's worse, you rob yourself of the privilege of continuing stewardship through designated gifts.

- that drawing a will is too complicated
- or that it is too expensive.

Gardening at the Gazebo

BY CARMEN FLOOD

As the gardening season gets into full swing, the Black House Gardens are abuzz with activity at least one day each week.

The gardeners, all volunteers, bring ideas and expertise from their own gardens, and make adaptation for the best effects in this special public garden. We truly hope those of you who also share this passion and interest will glean some ideas for useful information from this, the second of a series of articles on the Black House Garden.

May is the month of the roses here in the garden, and if you come to visit, you will see that this year is no exception. The new rose bed has been fully planted, and the roses are doing well. Even though we will control their quantity of bloom the first year, so as to allow the root system to strengthen, you should be able to see that the emphasis in this section is on pastel colors, and exceptional fragrance.

The older established rose sections were pruned in the middle of March. General rules for the pruning of roses tell us to create the shape you are looking for at this time, but due to the harshness of our temperatures this past winter, most of the canes were killed back to the crown, and all the dead had to be removed, so the bushes were taken, for the most part, to the ground. This included the Floridundas, the Antique Roses, and the Climbers, which generally need no pruning, except to remove dead canes. If a cane is in good condition at the time of pruning, we generally leave it about knee height.

After pruning, and cleaning away the cotton seed hull which was used for winter protection of the roots, the established roses were fed with a commercial systemic rose food. There are several formulas on the market under a number of brand-names, and can be compared by the individual gardener to ascertain which is best for a given location. The new roses will not be fed for the first year, as the rose food tends to promote bloom instead of root formation. The older roses go into a once a month feeding program and are also given a little iron to correct a deficiency common to Alkaline soils such as ours in the Panhandle. At the end of July, all feeding will stop to allow for a hardening-off the stems, to prepare the plants for winter.

The sensitive Hybrid Tea Roses will begin to be sprayed during May on into the rest of the summer, to help prevent disease and insect damage. We have begun to plant more disease resistant varieties of Hybrid Tea, and if they prove to be as showy as the original ones, we will gladly pass their names onto you. We hope you will come by to see them and let us know what you think.

When you cut roses, or remove spent flowers in your garden, remember to cut back to the healthiest five leaf offshoot on the stem, and cut with a clean, sharp blade, at a sharp slant facing downward. This will keep the plant looking it's best, and help control disease, as well.

You may remember that we plant roses are memorial or in honor of loved ones here in the Garden. If you would like to donate a rose in honor of someone, please call Donna Brockman at the Deaf Smith County Historical Museum.

As you will remember, the unusual, and unseasonal hard freeze last October was devastating to many of the gardens around town, and the Black House Garden was no different. We lost most of our cottonwood trees, and we are also having problems with the Boxwood Hedges which outline each section of the Gazebo Garden. Some were killed outright, while some of them had a good deal of damage, and some only marginal freeze damage. The ones which were killed have been removed, and the others trimmed, some almost to the ground. While this will cause the look of the garden to be somewhat less than perfect for several years, the root systems are strong, and will eventually come back fully and beautifully. We are, however, looking into the possibility of exchanging these plants, which are too frost tender for dependability in this area, with something else that might be more suitable. For the present time, however, the heavy pruning will allow better air circulation, and give the plants an energy boost and a good chance at rejuvenation.

There are a number of new perennial and annual plants being tried in the garden this year, some of which you may be familiar with, and some you may not. Elephant Ear and Impatiens are old stand-bys in many gardens, and we have added Salvia East Freisland and Nigella, as well as a new Verbena called Peaches and Cream, and Copper Plants for color. An herb garden on the northwest side of the house is being planted, and we look forward to an effective display of unusual herbs for your enjoyment.

Members of the garden committee are planning a tour of this garden, and some others in the area in the month of June, weather permitting, and we hope it will be a great deal of fun for all of us, as well as a good fundraiser for the support of the Black House Garden. More information about the tour will be forthcoming at a later date, but we hope you will keep it in mind. Our next article from the garden will be coming in July, at which time we will spend some time looking at some of the perennials which we use here and we think you will enjoy.

Have a cup of cold soup

If you've never thought of summer as soup season, your taste buds may not know what they've been missing.

Chilled soups, in their infinite variety, can be wonderfully refreshing on a steamy day. And because, like their wintry cousins, most are chock-full of healthful things, they're even good for you unlike many other frosty treats.

Using a food processor or blender, it's easy to create low fat, low calorie yet luscious cold soups, combining broccoli, carrots, cauliflower, new potatoes, corn, peas or other seasonal vegetables with fresh herbs, chicken or beef broth and shredded classic Jarlsberg cheese. Mild, mellow and distinctively nutty, part-skim milk Jarlsberg melts smoothly to ensure pleasing consistency, complements and enhances delicate garden flavors.

Or whip a mixture based on strawberries, cantaloupe, peaches, almost any softer fruit, using another very special cheese called Gjetost. Golden brown with "creamy" texture, this relatively low-fat whey cheese lends a delightful caramel accent to well-iced dessert soups, a sophisticated trend.

Navy Pioneer

LA PLATA, Md. (AP) - Benjamin Stoddert (1751-1813) was a merchant shipper who became America's first Secretary of the Navy, in 1798.

Stoddert built the navy up to some 50 vessels and 6,000 seamen and established some of its first navy yards and shore facilities.

He served in the Revolutionary War and in the Continental Congress.

BIRMINGHAM, Ala. (AP) - Former Gov. George C. Wallace was released from a hospital after six days of treatment for abdominal pain.

It was the second time since March that Wallace, 72, has been hospitalized because of pain associated with his paralysis.

He was sent home Monday and will be treated on an outpatient basis, said University Hospital spokesman Hank Black.

Wallace's legs were paralyzed when a bullet fired by a would-be assassin struck his spinal cord as he campaigned for president in 1972.

Raise car headrest

As Americans take to the highways for their summer vacations, a safety and health authority warns that most auto headrests and seat belts are misused. Speaking on safety before the American Chiropractic Association (ACA), Charles B. Johns, D.C., president of the ACA Council on Orthopedics, stated that although automotive safety regulations require headrests and seat belts, reliable studies show that many of the estimated 20 million car accident victims in North America suffering whiplash injuries could prevent that injury if their headrests are positioned properly.

Many of the victims seek out chiropractic care immediately if they are suffering discomfort, but often the cervical damage done by the thrust is not noticed for some time - as much as two years after the trauma has occurred. Or in some cases, the effects may be felt in some other area than the neck region.

Dr. Johns cites studies which show that 74 percent to 90 percent of male drivers have their car headrests set too low to be effective. In some cases, headrests are set so low that they exacerbate the problem. The sudden force of an accident whiplashes the head, often causing nerve, tissue and vertebrae damage in the neck.

"Most people never bother to adjust the headrest. They just leave it the way it came when they bought the car," Dr. Johns stated.

Dr. Johns said that the correct position for a headrest is even with the head and no more than two inches behind the center of the back of the head. "If it is low, behind the neck, the force of an accident could bend the head back over the headrest, causing serious injury to the cervical (neck) area," he said.

He also advises occupants of a car not to recline the seat while the car is in motion because it increases the distance between the head and the restraint, and in addition, puts the occupant in a more hazardous position should an accident occur.

Dr. Johns is critical of the safety devices offered in most cars because of their lack of adaptability to the varying heights of occupants. "many car seat head restraints don't extend high enough for a tall person or far enough forward to really offer the support required in an accident. I am afraid that many auto manufacturers have given away safety for style," Dr. Johns said.

While the owner of an auto cannot be expected to reconstruct the seats, he advised owners to be more aware of the safety devices and the need to use them properly.

Dr. Johns practices in Leominster, Massachusetts.

Chiropractic is the world's largest drugless health-care profession. Doctors of chiropractic are health practitioners who treat neuromusculoskeletal problems. Whiplash induced conditions respond effectively to chiropractic procedure.

Proper stretching can prevent skin splints

Shin splints, a common leg injury among joggers and other weekend athletes, can be prevented with proper stretching and cross-training says an orthopedic surgeon at Baylor College of Medicine in Houston.

Although shin splints can refer to a variety of injuries, the most common pain familiar to many runners occurs along the edge of the tibia bone just below the knee.

The pain is often the result of a series of small stress fractures and muscles pulling away from the bone because of overuse.

"The muscle in the shin area might not offer the necessary support when it is forced to expand too quickly through jogging or other heavy use. The tibia bone in the leg is forced to absorb more shock than it should," said Baxter, a professor of orthopedic surgery at Baylor.

Even though some people are able to continue working out with the pain, Baxter advises against it.

"The pain will force the athlete to compensate with other muscles. Those muscles then risk becoming overused and another injury can occur," he said.

The first sign of muscle pain signals it is time to stop exercising. Overall fitness does not have to cease however, since other exercises can replace the one that led to injury.

Many athletes cross-train, participating in a variety of sports, to maintain overall fitness and avoid an overuse injury.

"Cross-training allows you to continue exercising while giving the injury time to heal," said Baxter. "Cycling or swimming can maintain aerobic fitness without putting stress on the affected leg muscles."

Runners who train frequently on paved or other hard surfaces are most likely to fall victim to shin splints because of the shock of the feet pounding on a hard surface. Aerobics enthusiasts should avoid concrete surfaces for the same reason.

Anyone exercising to lose weight should take extra care to avoid overuse of the leg muscles when beginning a training or exercise program.

More than $700,000 to be awarded during Roundup

More than $700,000 in scholarships will be awarded to outstanding young people at the 1992 Texas 4-H Roundup at Texas A&M University June 8-11.

Roundup is the state's biggest annual 4-H event. More than 2,500 young people will gather this year to practice leadership and demonstrate skills and knowledge gained through work in 4-H projects, said Gayle W. Laine, 4-H youth development specialist with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service.

"The 4-H scholarship selection is one of the main events of Roundup," Laine said. "This year, $722,000 in scholarships sponsored by the Texas 4-H Foundation will be awarded."

"In terms of total awards given, the Texas 4-H scholarship program is the largest one in the nation," said Dr. Lance Bullard, executive director of the Texas 4-H Foundation. "The program continues to grow with tremendous support from the private sector."

"Scholarships are contributed by individuals, businesses and organizations interested in helping young people receive a college education, Bullard said. Recipients are selected on the basis of scholastic ability, need, 4-H participating, leadership and character.

This year 116 outstanding 4-H members will receive scholarships ranging from $500 to $12,000, Bullard said. There are more than 400 4-H scholars attending 34 Texas colleges and universities.

A favorite part of Roundup is the 4-H Food Show. Contestants enter their favorite recipes in one of four categories—nutritious snacks and desserts, fruits and vegetables, breads and cereals and main dish. Each first-place winner receives a $750 scholarship from the Morrison Milling Company.

Young people take part in 40 contests ranging from consumer education to veterinary science, Laine said. The photography contest and exhibit and the 4-H fashion design competition are two of the highlights.

In the photography contest, the top four winners' pictures in the photography contest are displayed in the National 4-Photography Exhibit.

In the fashion competition, sponsored by Wrangler, senior 4-H members compete in three design categories: accessory, apparel and textile. Participants conduct their own design research to develop finished products.

"Roundup is a time for recognizing outstanding young people as well as adult leaders, alumni and sponsors," Laine said. "It's an excellent learning opportunity for thousands of youth in our state."

Mini-meat loves made in a muffin tin are fun for children and cook in about half the time.

Medical Center in Dallas. She is currently employed as a licensed physical therapist by Midland Memorial Hospital.

He received his doctor of jurisprudence from Texas Tech University School of Law in 1991. He is currently employed as an attorney with the Midland law firm of Cotten, Bledsoe, Tighe and Dawson.

BY BEVERLY HARDER

Mildew flourishes in warm, humid weather. Mildew grows best wherever it is damp, warm, poorly aired and poorly lighted, such as in closets, bathrooms and laundry rooms.

Several things help prevent mildew growth. Provide adequate ventilation throughout the house, especially in enclosed spaces. For example, run an electric fan in places that cannot be exposed to outside air easily such as linen and storage closets.

Leave closets and dresser drawers open occasionally to allow moisture to escape. Burning a small electric light bulb in a closed closet will help dry it out. So will heating it with a small, electric heater placed on the floor of the closet. When heating the closet, be sure to follow the directions for safe operation of the heater.

Hang clothes loosely so air can circulate around them. Keep shoes and other articles on shelves, preferably perforated ones, to maintain better air circulation. Be sure things are clean and dry before putting them away.

Dry shower curtains and walls after each shower to reduce moisture in bathrooms. Leave shower curtains open to allow air to circulate in the shower or tub area. Hang wet towels to dry immediately after use or place them in the dryer or air dry to speed drying time and to vent moisture out of the house through the dryer vent.

Commercial products are available that remove moisture from the air in enclosed spaces. Silica gel, activated alumina and calcium chloride absorb moisture from the air. Silica gel and alumina can be dried and reused once they have absorbed as much as they can hold. Calcium chloride is converted to a liquid as it absorbs moisture and must be discarded when it is completely liquified. These products may be available from building supply centers, variety stores or through catalog stores.

LOS ANGELES (AP) - Lana Turner has throat cancer but says she expects to recover because it was detected early.

Keeping all surfaces clean and dry will help prevent mildew, too. Washing walls, floors, tile and other hard surfaces with a chlorine bleach solution will get rid of musty odors and prevent mold spores from growing. Use one-half cup to one cup of liquid chlorine bleach to a gallon of water. Use only on surfaces that are safe to bleach. Rinse with clear water and wipe as dry as possible. Fungicidal products also control mildew effectively.

Ann Landers

DEAR ANN LANDERS: Bless you for having the courage to suggest self-gratification to the 48-year-old women whose husband hasn't touched her in two years. I am nearly 80 now and my youth flashed before my eyes when you said you didn't want to hear from any clergy saying it's a sin.

When I was about 13, our preacher gave me a book to read. It said boys who masturbate would become bald, diseased and insane, lead a life of crime and end up in hell. When my sexual urges became overpowering, I did indeed indulge in what they called in those days "self-abuse" and suffered tremendous anxiety and wretched feelings of guilt. Every morning I woke up wondering if I had gone insane during the night or developed some outward sign that would let the world know of my "unpardonable sin."

That terrifying misinformation carried over to my adult life and it took a long time before I could be a loving husband. Now that I am older and wiser, I see what horrendous damage was done to the youth of our day by hypocritical clergy who surely must have experienced the same urges in THEIR younger days.

Hooray to you for having the courage to say it in print and remove the burden of guilt suffered by millions of healthy, normal people, both young and old.—Raleigh, N.C.

DEAR RALEIGH: When I wrote that response I didn't think it was particularly heroic. It just seemed to be a simple truth that needed to be said. Thousands of readers, however, saw it quite differently. Read on:

DEAR ANN: Thank you for that terrific response to "Zero Self-Esteem." You have done more good than you will ever know. It would be impossible to count the millions of adults who have suffered a lifetime of shame because their religious leaders made them feel guilty about the normal act of self-discovery. Stand by your guns on this issue. A lot of people need your advocacy.—New York Mom

FROM SAN DIEGO: I'm a Navy wife who knows only too well what it is to be separated for long periods of time, from a loving husband. Your advice to "satisfy yourself" was perfect. How wonderful that you had the nerve to print it.

Greenville, S.C.: I was shocked that you would promote self-abuse in your column. I hid the newspaper from my kids. Any more dirty stuff like that and I am canceling our subscription.

Seattle: BRAVO! You are sure to get a ton of mail from the Bible Belt denouncing your advice to the woman whose husband has not approached her sexually for two years. Ignore them, please. Millions of others will applaud your courage. These days when there is so much sexually transmitted disease, especially AIDS, it's the ideal solution. I could not respect you more.

Denver: I'm a 43-year-old man and have not had sex with my wife for six years. Since 1982, she has had three miscarriages and a hysterectomy. Sex, to her, is a burden and makes her feel inadequate. "Mary" is a marvelous person and I love her dearly. We have a fine relationship and get along beautifully. I would never look for a sex partner outside of marriage and she has told me that counseling is out. So, the answer for me is self-gratification. I'm sure it's the answer for millions of other males, even though they would never admit it.

Fort Dodge, Iowa: "The Mayo Clinic Family Health Book" (1990) backs you all the way. Here's the passage: "Masturbation is normal and healthy. It is a way to release sexual tension, give yourself pleasure, savor sexual fantasies and curb impulses to engage in sexual activity that may not be appropriate."

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I'm a 20-year-old woman who has to talk a friend out of suicide at least three times a week. "Tom" says that his life depends on me and that if he doesn't live to see his 22nd birthday, it will be my fault.

I met Tom when we were both in high school. Some of the kids made fun of him because he has a congenital deformity. As a child, he had several surgeries on his face and looks pretty good but not completely normal. I felt sorry for him and became his friend.

There was never any romance between us, and I was sure he knew that.

Last year, Tom introduced me to a pal of his because he thought we would be perfect for each other. He was right, but now he regrets it because he wants me for himself. Tom has been sending me flowers and expensive gifts, and when I tell him to please stop, he becomes angry.

He is beginning to make my life miserable by phoning at least 10 times a day, and I'm not exaggerating. He sometimes calls at 3:00 or 4:00 in the morning and wakes up everyone in the house. When I tell him he has no right to phone at such hours, he starts to cry and says that he has a gun to his head and that if I hang up he will kill himself.

I've begged him to see a psychiatrist but he refuses. What can I do? This guy is driving me up the wall and I feel totally helpless.—Trapped in Texas

DEAR TEXAS: You and your parents should meet with Tom's parents at once to make sure they know how important it is for him to get professional help.

Tell Tom, in their presence, that you will no longer allow whim to hold you hostage to his sickness and it is up to him to try to get well.

Offer to phone him occasionally at your convenience to chat, but tell him not to phone you because you are getting an unlisted number. Then do it. Tom is mentally unstable. If, heaven forbid, he should take his own life, it is not your fault.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: When I read the letter from "Earnest But Numberless," who complained about people who leave messages on answering machines but fail to leave their phone number, I knew I had to write.

I work in a store and spend hours every week calling customers about their special orders. I know very well that a big part of the problem is the kind of greeting that is put on the answering machine. It is frustrating to hear, "I'm not home—leave a message," because you have no idea whether or not you're reached the correct number.

Another annoyance is when you run into a 4-year-old kid who instructs you to leave your name. I'm sure the parents of these children think it's cute, but I can assure you that most people don't appreciate being instructed by a 4-year-old.

I ran across one nut recently who had trained his parrot to say, "Wait for the beep." That darned bird gave me the creeps. Maybe I'm crazy but I think a person has the right to expect a human voice on the other end of the line when he makes a call.

It's too bad some people don't realize the telephone is not a toy. It is truly one of the most fantastic inventions of the age and should be accorded the dignity it deserves.—A Michigan reader

DEAR MICHIGAN: Your message came through loud and clear, and I thank you.

Board members elected

Adrian ISD trustee elected to association committee

The Texas Association of School Boards' (TASB) Legislative Advisory Council recently elected Morris Blankenship, a school board member from Adrian Independent School District, to serve on the association's legislative committee. The legislative committee is a standing committee of TASB's Board of Trustees.

Blankenship was one of four school board members elected by the statewide council to the post. More than 20 TASB council members vied for the position.

As a member of the association's legislative committee, Blankenship will join the TASB trustees currently serving on the committee to help finalize TASB's legislative program for 1993 and assist the association in reacting to and developing legislative initiatives. The Adrian trustee will serve a two-year term (until May 1994) on the legislative committee, which will meet in July in Laredo during TASB's quarterly board of trustees meeting.

TASB is a voluntary, non profit, statewide organization serving local school districts in Texas. The association's membership includes 1,056 school districts, 67 tax appraisal districts, 47 junior colleges, 55 cooperatives and the 20 regional education service centers.

Teach your children how to avoid crime

No parent can be with a child every hour of the day, so it is essential for kids to learn how to avoid crime or potentially dangerous situations on their own.

Children should be warned about sexual abusers, kidnappers, strangers around the school or neighborhood and what to do in an emergency at home, advises the National Crime Prevention Council.

The council, whose symbol is McGruff the Crime Dog, has these suggestions to help children survive in a potentially dangerous world.

First and foremost, make sure children know their full names, addresses and telephone numbers, and how to use a home or public phone in an emergency.

Walk the neighborhood with your children, showing them safe places they can run for help, such as a store or neighbor's house, and threatening places to avoid, such as wooden areas, vacant lots and abandoned buildings.

Tell children never to accept gifts or rides from strangers. Encourage your kids to walk and play with friends, not alone, and to stay in well-lighted, open areas.

Never have a house key around a child's neck—it's a telltale sign you won't be there when they return home.

If children must spend time at home alone, have them check in with you or a neighbor when they arrive. Warn them never to let strangers enter the house or apartment, and tell them not to enter if a door is ajar or a window is broken.

Organize your neighbors and work with the schools to establish a "McGruff House Block Parent" program to help children who are scared or in trouble.

More than 100,000 children in America are sexually abused each year, often by a relative or acquaintance. Teach your children that it's not right for anyone to touch them in a way that makes them feel uncomfortable.

Birthday candles are one way to make light of your age.

ON THE ROCKS

In springtime, nearly every valley in the Ozark Mountains of South Missouri, boasts a bubbling, gurgling little creek. Every hundred yards of these nameless tributaries are characterized by a dozen twists and turns, more rocks than you can number, and pools of clear, pure water. A few years ago on a rocky ledge near one of these streams, my six-year-old daughter, Christi, taught me a very valuable lesson.

We were sitting in the warm spring sun with our chins resting on our knees. "Daddy, why does the water run in the bottom of the little creek?" she asked. Her question snapped me out of my reverie. As a father I've grown accustomed to questions from out of the blue, and yet they still catch me off guard sometimes. As I searched for a suitable answer her little voice came again, "Why, Daddy?"

I tried to explain that water always seeks the lowest level and follows the path of least resistance. To my surprise she accepted that answer without the usual, "But why is that, Dad?" We continued to watch the water ripple over the rocks I remember thinking that many people are like the water, willing to follow the path of least resistance. They are willing to drift along life's stream bed with little care for what might lie around the bend.

As I pondered this tidbit of wisdom, Christi stepped off the rocky ledge and said, "Daddy I don't want the water to run over this big rock. I want to use it for a picnic table." I patiently explained that the water wouldn't change course because she wanted to play on one of the big rocks on the bottom. "But I want it to," she pouted. With her lower lip extended, she picked up a big rock and splashed it in the water.

Although I was vaguely aware that Christi was carrying rocks and dropping them into the water, my mind returned to other thoughts. As I struggled with business decisions, Christi moved the creek.

Change The Channel

Well, she didn't move the creek exactly, she just changed the channel. Because she wanted to play on the big flat rock, she built a dam which diverted the flow of water. Soon the sun dried the surface of the rock and her picnic table was ready. We enjoyed a wiener roast on "table rock" that very evening.

The lesson that Christi taught me that day is that we do not have to accept anything that we have the power to change. The rock she wanted to use as a table weighed several tons. We could not have moved it with a tractor. However, the water which made the rock unusable could be diverted. Christi simply changed the channel.

Don't Move The Rock

In our everyday lives we all face problems: Rocks too big to move. Instead of focusing on the problem, look for solutions. Orville and Wilbur Wright would never have flown by flapping their arms. However, they wanted to fly so they built an airplane.

Henry Ford wanted to sell Ford cars to everyone in America. However, cars cost so much to build that not everyone could afford one. Ford changed the way cars were built, and made the infamous Model T affordable for the common man.

Christi's lesson on the rocks has 2 points. First, don't concern yourself with what you cannot do, but concentrate on what you can do.

Second, you must persevere. Christi did not understand fully what she was doing when she started piling rocks to make her dam. But because she moved the rocks, the channel moved. She simply persevered until she got what she wanted.

Question/Answer

Q. My hot-air furnace system is equipped with a power humidifier. The water in our area is hard and my system incorporates no water softener. The plastic basin and carousel of the humidifier must be cleaned regularly. The problem is a hard sediment that forms on the basin and carousel is extremely difficult to remove. Do you have any suggestions to make removing the sediment easier?

A. The hardened sediment that forms on the basin, carousel and flat assembly in your humidifier can be softened by soaking these parts in a solution of 50 percent white vinegar and warm water for about half an hour. The sediment can then be removed easily and the items cleaned. Rinse each component thoroughly and wipe it dry before putting the humidifier back together. If you don't, the circulating air will pick up a vinegar odor for a while.

A tradition continues in Sunday's 'Tony Awards'

Sunday on CBS, Glenn Close serves as host for The 46th Annual Tony Awards, live from the stage of the Gershwin Theatre in New York City. Honoring Broadway's best performers, designers, directors and productions, the telecast includes numbers from this year's nominated musicals. Close is herself among the nominees.

Glenn Close helps honor Broadway's best

By Steven Alan McGaw

The first Antoinette Perry, or Tony, awards were presented on April 6, 1947, in the ballroom of New York's Waldorf Astoria Hotel. Serving as host was Vera Allen, Perry's successor as chairwoman of the American Theatre Wing, which sponsors the awards, and entertainment was provided by Ethel Waters, Mickey Rooney and David Wayne.

On Sunday, May 31, CBS airs The 46th Annual Tony Awards from the stage of the Gershwin Theatre in New York City. Glenn Close, a Tony winner in 1984 for The Real Thing and a nominee again this year for her performance in Death and the Maiden, serves as host for the awards, and celebrities likely to appear in the show include Broadway veterans Hal Linden, Linda Lavin, Carol Channing, Patti Lupone and Matthew Broderick. Among the nominees are Gregory Hines (Jelly's Last Jam), Jane Alexander (The Visit), Alan Alda (Jake's Women) and Judd Hirsch (Conversations with My Father).

The American Theatre Wing has served the community in a variety of ways since 1917, a full 30 years before the first Tony was handed out. The group first coalesced as Stage Women's War Relief, designed to aid the war effort (and they did, selling over $10 million in Liberty Bonds). Men joined the group in 1920. The Wing's ranks swelled during the second World War and its projects diversified, from entertaining troops with the stage, radio and film versions of Stage Door Canteen to establishing a regular cadre of volunteers to contribute time and good cheer to hospitals housing returning veterans.

Peacetime brought a new agenda. For many years, the Wing operated a school, training vets and others in all areas of the theater. Alumni include Charlton Heston and James Whitmore. Ray Bolger, Alfred Lunt and Martha Graham lent their skills as instructors.

"To serve the community, that's the point," says Isabelle Stevenson, the Wing's president since 1966. She believes the Wing meets the challenge. "Our hospital program, for instance, sends live, professional theater to hospitals, nursing homes and AIDS centers all over the city," she says, also pointing with pride to the Wing's Saturday Theatre for Children program and the twice-yearly Working in the Theatre seminars, which are available on video to schools and universities around the country.

A new program, instituted last year, enables high school students to see Broadway shows at greatly reduced prices. Afterwards, the young players, many of whom are attending their first production, are taken backstage to meet cast and crew.

SOAP TALK

Beck from 'Dallas' to 'Santa Barbara'

By Candace Havens
Dear Candace: I have been enjoying reruns of Dallas on TNT. I am pleased to see a certain actor. I think his name is John Beck. Is he the same actor who recently joined the cast of Santa Barbara? He was an attorney on Dallas and is now a judge on SB. I mainly want to know if he is the same actor and is it merely coincidence that he plays the same kind of role or is it typecasting?
—Marie J. Agee, Portland, Ore.
Dear Reader: Dallas' Beck does portray David Raymond on Santa Barbara. He has the look of someone in the legal profession, but he was not typecast. He auditioned for the role as any one else would have.

Dear Candace: I've been watching Guiding Light for a long time. I've been particularly interested in the love triangle involving Blake, Alan-Michael and Eleni.

Don't you think it's about time for Blake to get the hint and leave Eleni and Alan-Michael alone? —Sandra Eglin, Williamstown, Maine.

Dear Reader: Alan-Michael is definitely going to be busy over the next few weeks with the appearance of Musette. There is a possibility that Sherry Stringfield, who plays Blake, will be off the show by summer, so things could get interesting.

Dear Candace: Is Heather Tom, who plays Victoria on The Young and the Restless, the same girl who played Victoria as a little girl? —E.P., Greenfield, Ind.

Dear Reader: Tom took over the role when the writers decided to age the character a few years ago. Ashley Nicole Millan portrayed the younger Victoria.

Dear Candace: I grew disinterested with Days of Our Lives for a while, but I'm once again a faithful fan, especially since my two favorite characters are back, Marlena (Diedre Hall) and Roman (Wayne Northrop).

I would like to know if the Bo on the show now is the original one. He looks exactly the same except for his smile.
—A. Smith, Pigeon, Mich.

Dear Reader: Robert Kelker-Kelly took over the role of Bo Brady this past fall when Peter Reckell, who created the role, left to pursue other interests.

The efforts of Oregon's indigenous people to preserve the dwindling wilderness is one of the situations examined in EarthTech '92, airing Friday on PBS. The show coincides with the international Earth Summit in Brazil.

What's black & white, green all over? Earth Summit news

International reports highlight PBS special
By Suzanne Gill
Great documents are often named for the places, large or small, where they were signed. Versailles, Yalta and Camp David are three such points, where the coordinates of principle and necessity crossed and common ground was claimed.
This month in Rio de Janeiro, Brazil, the United Nations has similar hopes for the international Conference on Environment and Development, or Earth Summit, as it is being called. Convening for two weeks, the summit hopes to attract heads of state and environmental leaders from every corner of the globe to establish working agreements on conservation and planning that will guide and govern the global village in the next millennium. With a few exceptions, the Earth Summit has been overlooked in the national media. For TV viewers without cable, PBS' EarthTech '92, a two-hour special airing Friday, June 5, on most affiliates, may be the only in-depth TV coverage available.
Host Scott Simon, anchor of National Public Radio's Weekend Edition, Saturday, introduces the special, which will feature 17 prepared reports from news organizations based in Japan, Australia, Canada, Brazil and Kenya, plus the U.N.'s own Department of Public Information. Airing in the Summit's early days, the special, says Simon, will trace "the outlines of working agreements beginning to develop between the industrial world and the less industrialized world."
The EarthTech reports cover topics from city planning in Australia and garbage disposal in Japan to flood containment in Thailand and the encroachment of the Sahara Desert on the once-fertile waterways of Mali. "We'll have a better sense, once

Will 'Superman 5' Fly; reader's query a real Lulu

By Taylor Michaels

Q: I heard that Alexander and Ilya Salkind are going to produce Superman V. What's the scoop? Could you give me an address to reach them? —S.H., Claremont, N.H.

A: The Salkinds are indeed beginning to talk up another chapter in the Superman saga, but the producers still appear hesitant to map out any firm details. However, they have revealed that the forthcoming picture will more or less "begin at the beginning," with little regard to plot lines of the past sequels, or the previous stars, for that matter. Christopher Reeve, whose career was built upon the Superman roles, won't necessarily return, according to the Salkinds, but his presence or lack thereof is still up in the air.

You may write the Salkinds in care of Warner Bros. Inc., 4000 Warner Blvd., Burbank, Calif., 91522.

Q: I am a big fan of the actor who plays Chris Peterson on Get a Life. Can you please tell me where I can write to him?

Christopher Reeve:
Man of Steel still?

Also, what is his marital status? —K. Provost, Germantown, N.Y.

A: The character of Chris Peterson, the juvenile delinquent in a man's body, is played all too convincingly by Chris Elliott.

Elliott was working as an NBC guide in New York when he had the presence of mind to allow the then-insignificant David Letterman a tour (with his mother) for the children's admission price. After Late Night began to air, Letterman repaid his quirky friend by offering him cameo appearances in such roles as "The Guy Under the Seats," which opened the door for his current starring role on Fox.

Elliott, the son of radio comedian Bob Elliott, lives in New York with his wife and two daughters, and you may write to him in care of Fox Broadcasting, Box 900, Beverly Hills, Calif., 90213.

Q: I'm going crazy trying to recall a movie I saw on TV years ago. It starred Lauren Hutton, and she lived in a high-rise and someone was watching her with a telescope. Please, can you tell me the name of the movie, and can I rent it on video? —N.K., North Tonawanda, N.Y.

A: I'm fairly certain the picture you are describing is 1978's Someone's Watching Me!, a solid made-for-television movie directed by John Carmenter which, unfortunately, is not currently available in video stores.

Q: What is the name of the actor who played Hogan on Hogan's Heroes? Did the police ever find out who killed him? —Eleanor Mills, Tigard, Ore.

A: Col. Robert Hogan was played by actor Bob Crane, who was brutally murdered on July 29, 1978.

Crane began his career as a musician, becoming a well-known radio personality in Los Angeles in the late '50s, which in turn led to a co-starring role on The Donna Reed Show. In 1965, he jumped at the chance to star as the off-beat POW leader in Hogan's Heroes, an extremely successful show that made him a bona fide celebrity.

While still a major star, he returned to the theater and toured the country. One night in a Scottsdale, Ariz., hotel, he was bludgeoned to death in his sleep. The authorities have developed a number of theories over the years, but a lack of evidence has prevented an indictment in what they are sure was the result of an intricate murder plot.

Q: Is Lulu Roman from Hee Haw the same person who starred in Hazzard Corner as Boss Hogg's wife? My sister says no, but I say yes. Who's right? —J. Eller, Hartsborne, Okla.

A: The full-figured Roman has appeared regularly on Hee Haw since 1969, with only a brief hiatus in the '70s to sort out a drug problem. Roman did not appear on The Dukes of Hazzard as Lulu Hogg. That honor belongs to actress Peggy Rea.

HAVE FUN at the Movies

EXCELLENT GOOD FAIR POOR DON'T WASTE MONEY

The Hollywood mantra, "If you film it, they will come," may hold true for some of this week's new films... Go directly to:

SISTER ACT: Starring Whoopi Goldberg and Maggie Smith. A brassy, streetwise, lusty, second-rate Las Vegas lounge singer, in short the opposite of a nun, is forced to hide in a convent to protect herself from gangsters.

witnesses a mobster murder. The police protection program puts her in a convent of devout nuns and Deloris goes from chased to chaste. However, with an imperious mother superior (Maggie Smith) breathing down her wimple, Deloris finds this refuge more reformatory than sanctuary - until she picks up the baton of the convent choir and coaxes the blues right out of their souls -- and hers. Yes, this is most irreverent comedy, but truly funny comedy.
