Kerr & Kerr Are Selected To Draw New Jail Plans

The Deaf Smith County Commissioners Court on Thursday afternoon agreed to employ Kerr & Kerr of Amarillo, architects-engineers, to design the proposed new county jail, according to County Judge Homer Henslee.

Judge Henslee said that the county board decided to deal with Kerr & Kerr rather than William C. Townes & Associates of Amarillo, who last year drew up a tentative set of plans for the facility, after a special session in which the matter was discussed separately with representatives of both firms.

No settlement as to payment for work accomplished has yet been made with Townes, the judge added.

"We have yet to work out definite plans for the jail," he continued. He said that the county commissioners have not yet reached agreement as to design, manner of financing — through bonds or warrants, or location — either adjacent to the courthouse on the square or elsewhere — for the proposed jail.

SOIL BANK: NEW BONANZA

Payments Here To Exceed $1 Million

More than a third of the dryland acreage in Deaf Smith County has been retired from cultivation for periods of five to 10 years through the soil bank program.

IN ANNOUNCING the tentative totals for the program, Faust Collier, county agricultural stabilization and conservation committee manager, said that payments on acreage that went into the program in 1936 are now being made.

"We were handicapped for a time by a shortage of field personnel to check on compliance with the acreage contracts, but with 10 men now in the field, we are going ahead fast.

 the possibility that the conservation reserve program will actually reduce the surplus of wheat and other basic crops now reported to be in government storage.
PARTICIPATION in the long range program here will amount for a generous slice of the one billion dollar budget President Eisenhower has asked be appropriated for running the soil bank during the next fiscal year.
 It is proving of value, too, in creating at least one local payroll. Collier reports that several members of the new field staff for the ABC office are dryland farmers who sought off-farm work after drought took their turns out of production. The million dollar annual payment due Dec. 31 to landowners will represent a good share of what could normally be expected from our wheat fields before drought, average alignment, and now the soil bank out into the acreage devoted to production of the cereal grain, is the observation of local conservation.

EVEN THE City of Hereford will reap some direct payments from the program. The first act of city officials upon completing the purchase of two farms as the site for the new municipal airport was to place a large portion of the acreage in the program.
 During early discussions of the airport project, city commissioners had speculated about devoting acreage not needed for runways and other facilities to either commercial production of crops, or to use as an experiment farm. But in practice, the city fathers chose to follow the example of several other cities in putting the acreage into grass through the soil bank program.

 Overall participation in the program by farmers in Deaf Smith County represents about 1 per cent of the national total. Slightly more than 1,000,000 acres of land had been placed in the soil bank conservation reserve through Feb. 15, according to preliminary figures announced by the U. S. Department of Agriculture.
 The total conservation reserve payments at that time was estimated at $29,700,000, plus $11,400,000 in practice payments, that is, assistance in helping to establish soil and water conservation practices.

 The balance of the billion dollars earmarked each year for the soil bank program is expected to go for the acreage reserve — annual program and for expenses of administration.

DESIGNERS HAVE ANSWERS

What'll You Wear on Easter?

SILVER GRAY FLANNEL—New in the chiffon-weight wool, news in the crepe jacket with beanie back, news is the slim dress beauty. By Anthony Blotz. White accordingly hat by John Frederica.

EASTER shoppers are having a field day this spring, delighted by the wide variety of silhouettes, fabrics, and colors available in suits and costumes, uncertain about which of the many brand new hat fashions will be most unbecomingly 1957. To help out on this annual Easter quest, some of New York's top designers pick their favorites among seasonal outfits for north, south, east and west.
 The favorite among all designers pulled in the light gray flannel-weight wool suit or costume for wear in the north and west on Easter Sunday, with similar outfits in silk crepe, lace or crepe for the south. For the west, most designers lean toward pastel silk suits or costumes.
 Ben Zuckerman, master of the tailor, suggests a white wool suit as right for the Atlantic seaboard — light-weight, with jacket worn open to show a dotted silk blouse. He wants no part of big heavy hats, prefers a small hat of fabric to match the blouse, trimmed leather pumps, white cotton gloves.
 Mollie Perles, Mrs. Eisenhower's favorite dressmaker, recommends the three-way value of a short jacket costume such as dress and bolero, which may be worn under a coat. If the weather is cold — black — and — white — pink — check wool is her fabric choice.
 Lilly Dache picks for the north-east the light gray worsted suit with slim, peg-up skirt and the straight jacket, worn with a beige blouse and an off-white hat of felt or paper in a turned-up shape with some width, with gray or beige ribbon trim — and beige gloves, white flower for lapel, brown shoes and bag. For wear in the south she suggests a white, separate skirt-suit ensemble with big white hat, turquoise bag and jewelry.
 Karen Burke of the firm of Harvey Bern likes tulle toward in a jacket-and-dress costume, effective in gray and black pincheck, with a white linen collar on the jacket, a small shiny black hat on the head, and in the hand a furled umbrella with a bouquet on the handle. For the south she leans toward a dotted silk crepe dress and bolero.
 Cell Chapman thinks a gray silk dress with flower-up bolero just right for Easter in Chicago, worn with a tailored straw hat, gray bag and shoes. For New York and Boston she likes a slim black dress and jacket with a flowered hat.
 Bruce of Samuel Winston selects a silk dress and jacket outfit, black for New York, in a color for Chicago, beige for Atlanta, gray with a white collar for San Francisco.
 Pauline Trigue says this will be a blonde Easter, and her favorite blonde is a tawny maple sugar shade, spiced with white. She likes it in a sheer worsted suit with short box jacket and a wide-striped silk georgette blouse and matching toque, brown pumps and white gloves — this for the north. For the south she recommends the same color in a silk and cotton jumper dress which looks like a suit. For the east a blonde faulle coat over a black or blonde dress

The Hallmark of Circulation Value

In the same way that STERLING on silver signifies a standard of known value, so is the A.B.C. emblem a symbol of integrity for the circulation of newspapers and periodicals. It means that circulation so identified is measured according to the rules and standards of the AUDIT BUREAU OF CIRCULATION.
 The A.B.C. is a cooperative and non-profit association of 3,450 publishers, advertisers and advertising agencies. Organized in 1914, these buyers and sellers of advertising brought order out of advertising chaos by setting up standards for paid circulation and establishing rules and methods for measuring, auditing and reporting circulations.
 Therefore, the work of the A.B.C., of which this newspaper is proud to be a member, provides you with a direct and valuable service. You can buy advertising as you would make any other sound business investment — on the basis of well known standards, known values.

 At regular intervals one of the Bureau's large staff of experienced circulation auditors makes a thorough audit of our circulation records. The results of this exacting audit show: How much circulation we have; where our circulation goes; how it was obtained; and many other FACTS that you need in order to know just what you get for your advertising dollars. This audited information is published by the Bureau in easy-to-read A.B.C. reports which are available to our advertisers on request. Ask for a copy of our latest A.B.C. report.

HERE'S HOW:

Brighten Your Home with Roses

By VIVIAN BROWN
AP Newsfeatures Writer

THE NEXT TIME your man surprises you with a dozen roses, don't plow them in the nearest old vase or jar. Plan a lovely flower arrangement, display it attractively, and maybe he'll keep those roses coming.

Better still, grow your own roses and maybe he'll visit the florist when your garden beds down for their winter sleep, advises Edna Whitsitt, lecturer, flower arranger and author of "Roses and Home Flower Arranging."

WEDDING CANDELABRA — Remove the candle holders and use as a table centerpiece.

"The rose is a romantic flower, lending itself to beautiful display," she explains. "In colonial days they realized it and combined the distinctive beauty of roses and silver."

There is at least one good piece of silver in almost every home, Mrs. Whitsitt believes. It is something we do not discard from one generation to another. She points out that wedding candelabra, heirlooms such as grandma's samovar, tea or coffee service, bon-bon dishes, water pitchers, Paul Revere bowls and even bread trays may be likely containers for rose flattery, instead of dust collectors in the attic.

Mrs. Whitsitt prefers small needlepoint holders to support her flowers. She puts roses in at least three inches of water as they are "big drinkers."

"It's not necessary to make a design sketch on paper first unless you are exhibiting your roses in a flower show," she says, "but you should have a design plan in mind before you begin your flower arrangement. Good balance, a very good skeleton design and silhouette are what you should strive for."

Another important factor in flower arranging is where it will be used, she says. Low, angular, at-ry arrangements are best for dinner tables so as not to screen out dinner partners, a very high flower arrangement such as one made with candelabra at a formal table, may accomplish the same purpose. A more imposing arrangement may be used on the buffet or tea table. A small, low, uncluttered arrangement is best for the coffee table. After a bit of practice she says, you'll be amazed at how deft you can become with flowers.

Anyone can grow roses, says Mrs. Whitsitt. If climate isn't just right for hybrids, try floribundas—roses that can withstand extremes of temperature. New floribundas offer larger flowers and more constant blooming. If you grow your own roses, it's also a good idea to grow foliage that will be compatible with it in flower arrangements—lex crenata, azalea and cedar evergreens all go well with roses.

BOOKS ... AND SUCH

THE WHITE DEER by James Thurber. Thurber, with his usual wit-tiness, spins this fable with ease. Involved are a king, his three sons, a magical forest, a deer which turns into a beautiful princess and sundry witches, dwarfs, cats and rabbits.

The princess, of course, gives a perilous labor to each of the princes, who are named Thag, Giallow and Jora. She wants Jora to win her hand so she gives him the easiest perilous labor. However, all three princes arrive back at the castle at the same time, all having accomplished their tasks.

The sorcerer has told the princess might just look back into a deer at any time. Thag and Gallow refuse her. Jora accepts, whereupon it is revealed the deer-princess is really the daughter of a powerful northern king, Throg.

That's the story. More than that though are the characters taking part in the spoof. The dialogue is bracing and hilarious. Best of all are the Thurber drawings that are well, Thurber drawings.

AN AUTOBIOGRAPHY by a man once famous but now dead: The Story of My Life by Clarence Darrow. In this book, written in the early 1930s when Darrow was past 70 years old, the famed trial lawyer gives not only the facts of his life, but also his approach to living.

Darrow includes stories of his major trials, the Scopes monkey trial in which he encountered William Jennings Bryan, the Leopold - Loeb murder case and the Massee trial of his later years.

He does a critique on lawyers, court systems, jails and prisons, capital punishment, education and, most important, the why of criminality.

Darrow obviously is not a professional writer but at times his passages are lucid and brilliant. He is often tart and needing.

The book has the natural limitations of an autobiography, and should be read with those limitations in mind.

It is Darrow as Darrow knew himself and he is a worthy man to meet.

"Ideas that will influence the buying of new retail furniture throughout Texas will be discussed at this convention," Hall declared. Other speakers, in close touch with what's going on in Washington and in the Texas capital, will interpret legislative developments and prospects."

Future Teachers Honor Faculty

In observance of National Education Assn. Week, Hereford High School Future Teachers Club recently entertained faculty members at a program tea given in the high school auditorium.

The program included a showing of the film "A Desk For Billie." Mrs. Claude McDougal, sponsor of the club, was presented with a gift by the president, Carlynn Williams.

Following the program a small reception was held in the Home Ec dining room where refreshments were served from a table centered with an arrangement of red carnations. A birthday cake topped with the letters NEA (National Education Assn.) done in red icing, was featured, and a small cabin representing the first little schoolhouse carried out the theme of the day. Elaine Wagoner and Sandra Caraway presided.

Convention sessions will be held at the Buccaneer Hotel in Galveston. Entertainment highlight of the convention, which opens on the heels of the big Splash Day weekend in Galveston, will be a banquet Monday night followed by dancing. Special sight-seeing trips for the ladies will be conducted, Hall said.

Soil Conditioning Legumes Prove Their Value in Area

By MAX K. SCHRAEDER
Farmers in this district are able to show many fine examples of what can be done to get water into the ground with only a minimum of runoff. We are constantly having these practices brought to our attention in working about the district.

One exceptionally fine practice we recently observed on the Steve Clements farm northwest of Hereford. Sometime ago, Clements started interseeding vetch with rye on one of his fields. This year he has a volunteer stand doing exceptionally well in the same field.

This field has a very severe slope and formerly represented a problem in getting good penetration of his irrigation water. When he first planted this crop, water from a one-inch tube went through too fast. He now waters with a two-inch tube and the water doesn't go through fast enough.

very good cover on the soil. We dug a hole to check the depth of water penetration and found plenty of moisture at three feet. The roots developed by these plants were well distributed throughout the soil. Many of them extended quite deep.

Vetch is an excellent soil conditioning crop and it clearly showed here that it was well worth the effort. Cowpeas are another crop used successfully as a soil conditioner. People who have interplanted cowpeas in their grain sorghums find the same result after they have followed the practice three or four years.

OUR BEST irrigated land takes up water very slowly. After this land has been farmed for a good many years it gradually loses its organic matter and compacts very readily. Using a legume like vetch or cowpeas in your regular crop rotation will not only condition the soil but add considerably to its fertility. Soil in good porous condition will absorb water much more rapidly and result in a greater economic use of irrigation water.

Soil able to absorb and hold moisture will cut down the losses due to tall water. We will be able to get the maximum results from our rains.

We have a good number of farmers now growing vetch, alfalfa or cowpeas as a soil conditioning crop. Farmers who have planted grass will relate the same story to you. Any of these crops will add to the soil's fertility and result in greater production over a period of several years.

We have often heard that a fertile soil is a living soil. There are literally thousands of small living organisms in a fertile and well conditioned soil. Soil that loses its organic material and becomes ash- and compacted can no longer support these organisms. A healthy soil needs a situation where these minute organisms can live and work. We must have them to break down dead organic material, like our stubbles, and turn it into plant food.

The soil needs to be open and porous for these organisms to thrive. A tight, compacted soil shuts out the air and moisture with the result that these minute organisms can not do their jobs properly.

Planting a legume crop is a step in the right direction toward getting a fertile and well conditioned soil.

Ducks Go North With Cold Feet

AUSTIN — Thousands of wild ducks had to return to their northern nesting grounds this spring without their usual sustenance normally gained in the semi-tropical coastal waters of Texas, according to the director of wildlife restoration for the Game and Fish Commission.

He said a meeting of the technical committee of the Central Flyway Council at Denver, was marked by reports that the extreme fall and winter dry weather along the Gulf prompted many ducks to seek fresh water on into Mexico and Central America.

"But," he added, "an unusual number of ducks spent the winter on inland waters in Texas during the past winter."

The director noted that the recent rains generally followed the normal migrating period for the ducks.

He said the Denver meeting, called primarily to discuss new methods of water-fowl management, was marked by optimistic observations that a normal number of both ducks and geese have gone northward for the nesting season. He added that the heavy rains all over Texas bodes good for better wintering conditions when the waterfowl return this fall.

The director said the Denver conference dealt at length with standardizing questionnaires that are extensively used in gathering data direct from hunters as a means of accurately determining annual regulations concerning the shooting periods and bag limits.

Beauty, Happiness Are Easter Theme

While the religious theme is still the predominant note in all Easter celebrations, there are many other customs that bring beauty and happiness to both the young and old.

There is the bunny rabbit—for the very young — hopping through the meadows leaving dozens of beautifully dyed and decorated Easter eggs. There will be Easter baskets and all kinds of candy eggs and nests ready for Mr. Peter Cottontail at almost every home. Baby chicks and ducklings are also a part of the Easter picture.

Children will be happy and gay in new Easter togs for parties and Easter Egg hunts — and most of all on Easter morning to hear the Easter story at Sunday School.

Flowers of all kinds play an important role at Easter too. Lilies rising from consecrated altars will proclaim another Easter day in churches all over the land. And it's fun to visit the flower shops with their wonderful array of beauty and select a special flower for a special person.

Sharing beauty and happiness with others also has a part in the Easter observances in many homes. Some homemakers plan to share special foods with their friends or with those less fortunate during the Easter holiday time.

Janie Bookout, left, and Eugenia Alexander stop by a local flower shop to select Easter flowers for their mothers. Janie favors the lovely shell pink glads and Eugenia chooses beautiful fuchsia colored azelia pot plant. Janie is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Jim Bookout and Eugenia's parents are Mr. and Mrs. F. L. Alexander.

These two five-year-old youngsters share a bit of Easter fun before going to an Easter party. They are Sheldon Jansson, son of Mr. and Mrs. Craig Johnson, 601 W. 4th St., and Kathleen McCaskill, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Gerald McCaskill, 119 Beach St.

David, 3, and Karen Sue Stanford, 4, tell the new baby, 5 months old Kathy, about Easter bunnies and things as they leave for an Easter Egg hunt in Dameron Park. They are children of Mr. and Mrs. Wm. J. Stanford, 106 W. 5th St.

The Easter bunny will get a surprise when he comes hopping around the T. H. Stringer home at 332 Star St. Kelly 12, and Kathy 7, are preparing a nest, and four-year-old Kenneth has his carrots ready as a reward for stopping their way. (Staff Photos)

Lady Lexicographer Produces a New 'Fowler' for Americans

By W. G. ROGERS
Associated Press Arts Editor

NEW YORK (AP) — The girl complained to her boy friend that he kept confusing "as" and "like," and in the hope of correcting this shocking mistake she gave him Fowler — H. W. Fowler's justly famous "A Dictionary of Modern English Usage."

What happened? The boy finally threw Fowler into the fire and got another girl. It happened in a novel, but the story was told by the woman who may be called, though she may blush to hear it — Fowler's opposite number in this country, Margaret Nicholson.

She has just written "A Dictionary of American-English Usage," which is based substantially on Fowler. She has been working on it informally for years, and formally for four or five years.

SHE FELL into the habit of watching people to see whether their grammar showed. In fact, she says, she can sympathize with the boy in the story. Attune your ear to ungrammatical long enough and you hear it all the time, you begin to be conscious of your own speech, you can almost worry about it so much you don't dare open your mouth.

So I was pretty cautious myself; careful to speak as and not like I should, never used "ain't" in all the time I talked to her, proved that I knew a preposition was nothing to end a sentence with; and went out of my way to positively avoid; I mean positively to avoid, split infinitives.

Often the trouble, said Miss Nicholson, was that people went too far out of their way — their grammar actually did show. She thought almost the commonest source of mistakes was the effort to make no mistakes. A speaker ties himself up on knots to be grammatical and comes out with some boggedog or officialese or circumlocution.

MISS NICHOLSON seemed to me to be at neither extreme, but to be a liberal. She believes in basic rules but she also says: "If enough people say it, it's right."

On the other hand she feels it's important to care, and she sees real danger in sloppiness: "Sloppiness in grammar encourages sloppiness in thinking."

She said, too, that as a people are sort of on parade, and she wishes we would take more pains to "package" ourselves attractively.

"A STATESMAN uses a remark so upsetting to the educated person," she suggests as an example of the actual harm sloppiness can do, "that his hearers take time to puzzle over it and miss his next three or four sentences."

She condemned, too, some of the school readers which, in an attempt to start children reading, started them with sentences so simple as to be incorrect: "No wonder they turn to comics, they're not taught to read anything on a higher level."

What about our good writers tomorrow? She answered with another question: "Can there be good writers tomorrow?"

MISS NICHOLSON began this book, which happily retains the marks of Fowler's caustic wit and earnest crusading spirit, while she was head of the publishing department of Oxford University Press, which is publishing it. Though she is now head of Macmillan's contract and copyright department, though she no longer works with dictionaries fore and aft, right and left, and with no card file before her, she still keeps an eagle eye out for the telltale error.

"Officialese" is responsible for large amounts of bad writing, she charges. "Perhaps it began in government offices. It has permeated business and academic circles. It's a fuzzy kind of writing, too long, perhaps due to a man's effort to be impressive or to lack of clarity in his own thinking."

The English speak English better, she says ruefully.

Aged Prospector Turns Salesman

EL PASO (AP) — William Tecumseh Miller, who at 99 says he's getting close to old age, has turned salesman after 89 years spent as a prospector.

"I've gained and lost grubstakes from the Sierra Nevadas to the Bering Straits, and from the Andes to Outer Mongolia," he said in a recent interview.

"I've found some good mines. But every time I found one some lawyer or confidence man got it away from me. I guess that's the usual luck of a prospector." He had to give up prospecting in 1951 when he lost his eyesight. He regained his sight — he had to begin wearing thick glasses — but felt he wasn't up to climbing mountains again in search of ore.

A Bill of Rights for You Parents IT'S: HER POINT OF VIEW

By BETTY BABIONE

Recently someone in the family subscribed to the magazine Today's Health for hubby and me. I might not have known beforehand that this mag even existed, but I used to see copies of it in my grandfather's medical office. It's published monthly by the American Medical Assn., and to my knowledge it can be bought by subscription only.

Today's Health isn't exactly in big demand by the great reading public — no mystery stories, serials, western thrillers or science fiction epics; much less anything like the expose' of the personal life of Mazie Magoo, star of stage, screen and divorce courts. You guess from the magazine's title that the nature of its contents is practical, but even at that it isn't among the literature that Jane and John Q. Public ordinarily keep around the house.

Anyway I wasn't too hepped up on the idea when we received our first copy in the mail. . . until I read it. Now I've had a chance to peruse several issues, and you can't convince me that there's a better secular magazine printed. The articles are not filled with a lot of medical jargon and technical terms that only a medical doctor could understand; they are written in an interesting manner and in terms easily understood by the lay reader.

Nor does the material deal only with matters medical. One of the objectives of Today's Health is to enhance joy and satisfaction in living. Take for example an article by May Richstone, housewife and mother, under the title of "A Hostess's Declaration of Independence."

This article was written for the benefit of parents who are concerned, one way or another, about their social life that doesn't include the children. It would be of particular interest to the mom who feels guilty if she leaves Junior with a baby-sitter so she and dad can have a night out with friends; or the couple who hesitate because of their children, to have guests for dinner.

SPEAKING OF entertaining at home during the years while the offsprings are young, Mrs. Richstone agrees that it may be a rather hectic chore — that entertaining during these years may be "less the gracious kind than the goodness gracious kind." But, she advises parents to take it as it comes, with the fun mixed with the rue.

Then she closes the article with this bit of philosophy: "We parents are people, too. Part of the job of being good parents is an area of life that leaves the children out; that lets them view us as individuals. We try, of course, to be good parents. With friends, interests and diversions of our own, we have a better chance to succeed."

"As the children mature, with luck and good health we're going to find ourselves endowed with new freedom. But what's freedom without good friends with whom to share part of it? And when is a better time to foster friendships than right now?"

NOW WHAT I've quoted may not affect your aspect on being host and hostess, but it was an interesting article from an interesting magazine. (And, honest in-jun, I don't get an advertising commission from the American Medical Assn.)

One trouble with me is that I get carried away with some notion or other and it takes me a while to get around to the real business at hand: people, places, and goings-on of local interest.

I must make mention of the fact that Police Capt. J. T. Sanderson has been added to the growing list of Herefordites who have made their television debuts. Capt. Sanderson was caught by the news camera during the man-hunt at Vega.

While dwelling on thoughts of the local constabulary . . . that is sure some whoppin' Easter egg hunt being sponsored by Chief Aycock and his crew. Even if a thousand small fry turned up at Veterans' Park for the event, there'd be an egg for each.

Wonder if the Aycocks have eggs all over the house. . . Mrs. Aycock has a Texas-size chore in boiling and dyeing all those eggs before hunt time next Saturday. Just imagine, a thousand eggs? — 83 dozen plus four. Won't that be a mad scramble come Saturday?

And so it seems that the Easter Bunny will come dressed in a policeman's uniform this year. . . he is hoping for good weather and a plenty of eager egg-hunters.

FRISY LITTLE Missy Anita White has become somewhat of a celebrity lately. Four-year-old Anita, who is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Jimmy White, has the distinction of having her picture displayed at the international convention of the Photographers' Association of America in Washington D. C. not long ago.

Having the photo portrait chosen for the display was quite an honor for photographer, John Edwards of Amarillo. But he couldn't have been much more pleased over it than were the Whites and cutie pie Anita. The portrait, incidentally, was entitled "Cutie Pie" and pictured Anita in a precious, smiling pose in her dress, bonnet, gloves and purse — as if all set for the Easter parade.

Some children look so sweet and angelic, and then some just can't help it if the Dickens sticks out all over them. Am thinking in particular of Oren Davis and Rusty Babione (yep, he's mine) when they were caught whilst smearing wet cement all over the garage over at the Abe Davis residence, and then another time when they turned artistic with the green paint. (Marian Davis good - naturally cleaned up both messes, but I'll bet she will be happy if the boys make the next mess over at my house.)

I'm sure there must be stories that can top these (like the time Nick Milburn tried to hack all the bark off of his mom and dad's treasured catalpa tree) and Marjan and I might feel consoled if we could hear about them.

THE TIME is drawing nigh for Lions Club election, and I must say that present Boss Lion, Earnest Langley, takes the ribbon should any be awarded for prize martyr. All year long the club's weekly news letter has gone out with Dub (last year's Boss Lion)

Church Music Is Meeting Theme

A program on Church Music was presented at the Dawn Music Study Club meeting held in the home of Mrs. R. P. Stewart Wednesday. Mrs. H. H. Miller presided.

Miller accompanying; "Alleluia" (Brander) sung by a trio of voices including Mesdames James Alston, Ray Stewart and Bill Carthel, with Mrs. Carthel at the piano.

The Hymn of the Month, "When I Survey the Wondrous Cross," was sung by the group in conclusion of the program.

Refreshments were served to Mesdames H. V. McCabe, Zed Stewart, Melvin May, N. R. Miller, Ted Richardson, James Alston, Orval Galley, Ray Stewart, H. H. Miller, R. L. Johnson, J. B. Caraway and Bill Carthel.

MR. AND MRS. WALTER KREIG (Angel Photo)

Marian Lomenick and Walter Kreig Exchange Vows Here on Saturday

Rev. Alby Cockrell directed the marriage vows when Miss Marian Lomenick became the bride of Walter L. Kreig on Saturday April 6, in the First Methodist Church parsonage. Mrs. Wm. J. Stanford provided appropriate wedding music.

Parents of the couple are Mr. and Mrs. Ross Lomenick and the late Mr. and Mrs. B. F. Kreig of Tulla.

Mrs. Ben R. Plummer served as the bride's attendant wearing a navy street dress with a white carnation corsage. Carroll Kreig was his brother's best man.

The bride chose a cornflower blue linen frock for her wedding. The dress was fashioned with a sleeveless bodice topped with matching Eton jacket, and sheath skirt—she wore a white starched lace hat and white accessories and carried a white Bible topped with Frenched carnations. Her only jewelry consisted of matching mother of pearl necklace, ear rings and bracelet, brought as a gift from the Isle of Capri by her twin brother, Melvin Lomenick, who has been stationed in Germany, with the U. S. Army.

The bride is a graduate of Hereford High School and is presently employed at Blanton Butane Inc. Mr. Kreig attended Tulla schools and spent three years in service with the U. S. Army Air Force. He is employed at Suits Auto Supply Company.

After the wedding the couple left on a short wedding trip to points in California. Upon their return they will reside at 304 Jowell Ave.

Plastic Finishes Make Housekeeping A Breeze

By VIVIAN BROWN
AP Newsfeatures Writer

PLASTIC is getting easier on the eyes. But that isn't all. It's making household chores simpler. Industry now has realized that tables do take abuse, what with spilled food, cigarette burns, chipping and cracking, all of which call on the homemaker for extra effort in cleaning and repairing. These are problems to be met whether the furniture is do-it-yourself painted or expensive Queen Anne antique.

But these days we can have our cake and drop the crumbs too without rewaxing the table, if the table has a plastic surface. One new dining table was a diamond inlay in a taffy beige melamine. Another is in a richly swirled mahogany, faithfully reproduced in plastic.

A sure-to-be-scarred item is the coffee table, always the victim of a spilled drink or cigarette burns. One handsome table with a decorative freeze top and Chinese lacquered ends has a marproof plastic quality.

Beside tables take more of a beating normally than other tables being scarred by dripping medicine bottles, drinking glasses and cosmetics. These are now being treated to plastic finish also. One has a pull-out shelf of white melamine to accommodate breakfast or cosmetics within easy reach. That way you have a surface that may take punishment, but it may be rolled out of sight when not in use.

Drawers of bureaus are plastic lined, in many instances made of styrene that glides lightly on nylon bearings and has a nonwarp quality. Besides their new amount of strength, plastics are being treated more elegantly by manufacturers, designers and decorators, unlike the era that ushered them in when they were relegated only to modern furnished houses.

Designer George Nelson has modeled his coconut chair of reinforced plastic, using urethane foam as upholstery to hold shape. There is a new sofa in the traditional Lawson design covered with Jet black vinyl plastic. An occasional chair is done in palomino vinyl combined with warm brown cane and walnut. There are bright vinyls—persimmon and parakeet blue to compete with the new brilliance of leather.

The unlimited color range of plastic (400 tones in wall tile) offers brighter colors for living areas. There also are all the simulated effects. One may have a Pompeian marble design in a floor tile that looks for all the world like real marble. There are cork floors sealed in plastic to captivate the eye and cushion the foot without leaving scuff marks or furniture scars.

Many new fabric walls that resemble Japanese silk are made of plastic, and washable. These are in Oriental textured effects as well as informal tweeds and linen designs in Ultron vinyl wall covering.

Easy to clean surfaces in the kitchen also lend a hand to the housewife. These days you may have beauty of color, texture and material in home furnishing without paying the penalty in extra homemaking chores.

Garden Club Has Review of Trip Through South

The program was a review of the recent bus trip to Gardens of the South taken by members of the club with Mrs. Ray Cowser giving the review and Mrs. N. D. Bartlett showing slides made on the trip with Mrs. Robert Veigel as commentator.

Plans were made for the tulip tea which will be held in the home of Mrs. Townsend Douglas on April 28 and plans were discussed for the final meeting of the year which will be a luncheon in the Jim Hill Hotel on May 3. New officers will be installed at this meeting.

Members attending the meeting were Mesdames N. D. Bartlett Jr., Tom Carter, Ray Cowser, Townsend Douglas, S. L. Easley, G. W. Edwards, J. B. Harlin, E. W. Harrison, Charles Hood, D. C. Kinsey, Ansel McDowell, Dick Miller, G. P. Owen, Lloyd Pool, B. E. Roberson, D. B. Roberson, Roy Smith, W. J. Stanford, Robert Veigel, Miss Frances Turrentine and the hostess.

- ★ YOUR NEW HOME
- ★ CEILING HEATING UNIT WITH CIRCULATING FAN
Ceiling heating units are ideal for bathrooms, hallways or kitchens. They can be used as the main heat source or as auxiliary heating. A flip of the switch gives you heat where you want it and, if desired, a controlling thermostat can be added for automatic operation.
- ★ RADIANT-CONVECTION WALL HEATERS
This type of electric heating you've seen many times either in portable heaters or in wall-mounted units. Such electric heating units are inexpensive, can be thermostatically controlled and are easily installed. One answer to the problem of heating a room added on.
- ★ RADIANT GLASS, METAL or CERAMIC PANELS
Nearest thing to the warmth of the sun's natural heat rays is electric radiant heat. Heating coils are embedded in a heat conducting material which, through radiation, warms your family, floors, furniture. These units, mounted on wall, near floor, come in various sizes, up to 50 1/2 inches long.
- ★ HEAT LAMPS
Heat lamps are used where quick spot heating is desired — over work benches, in garages, working on the family car, etc. A heat lamp can be inserted in place of a regular lighting bulb, or it can be installed permanently in bathroom ceilings, etc.
- ★ BASEBOARD HEATING UNITS
Electric baseboard heating is completely inconspicuous since it can be painted to match or contrast with wall colors. In practically all homes the heating requirement is met by installation along outside walls only. Furniture can be placed anywhere without interfering with your heating.
- ★ EMBEDDED CEILING CABLES OR PANELS
As in all electric heating your furnace is miles away (at the electric power plant). You turn on a switch and get completely clean electric heat. Continuous coils are run back and forth across entire ceiling area and then covered with plaster or texture paint material. Heating system is completely out of sight.
- ★ THE AMAZING NEW HEAT PUMP
Here's the amazing "heat pump" which uses the principle employed in your electric refrigerator to "pump" heat to you in winter and cool air in the summer. It's a combination unit which costs approximately the same as the central heating and cooling units in conventional use. No matter the outside weather, the "heat pump" adjusts immediately to give you the weather you want inside your home.

Golden Wedding Anniversary Observed at Family Reunion

A Golden Wedding anniversary provided the incentive for a family reunion held here Sunday at the VFW clubhouse.

Husbands Guests at Dinner-Party

Young Mothers Study Club members favored their husbands at a dinner-party given in the home of Dr. and Mrs. H. A. Cavness last Friday evening. Assisting hostesses were Mesdames Hugh Clearman and Stanley Slagle.

An April theme with prediction and appointments. A gold colored parasol fashioned of net and ribbon rising above a bed of blue iris centered the buffet table and miniature parasols opened above tiny flower bouquets to center quartet tables.

Following the dinner games of forty-two were enjoyed with Mrs. Hugh Trimble and L. H. Lookingbill Jr., winning the score awards.

Those attending were Messrs. and Mesdames Hugh Clearman, Clinton Massie, Jimmie Bownds, Gerald Hale, Craig Johnson, Stanley Slagle, Wayne Wallace, L. J. Jones, Gerald McCaskill, Bill Bra-

FEARS WOMAN DRIVER

HOBBS, N. M. — O. L. Voorhees, 45, Hobbs, was booked for leaving the scene of an accident and driving while intoxicated after a three-car accident.

He told police the reason he didn't stop when his car struck another automobile, causing it to slam into a third car, was because he didn't want to get into an argument with a woman driver in one of the cars.

He was arrested along with the hostess, Mr. and Mrs. Hugh Trimble, and the other guests.

Historical Heritage of Texas Is Emphasized in Pioneer Club Meet

Pioneer Study Club met in the home of Mrs. Ralph McCullough Tuesday afternoon for the regular monthly luncheon and program session. Assisting hostesses were Mesdames J. M. Gilliland, Mary Seigler and Myrtle Wright.

A Texas Day theme was emphasized in decorations and appointments with red, white and blue colors predominating. The luncheon was laid with a white linen cloth and centered with small Texas flags combined with red, white and blue stock in a silver container with a large blue ribbon bow adding the blue tones. Other arrangements harmonizing in color and theme, were used about the house.

In keeping with the quotation for the day "Man Builds No Structure Which Outlives a Book," Mrs. Sam Hunter, formerly of Dimmitt and now of Dalhart, reviewed her book "The Moving Finger" which deals with the history of people and times in the early days of Castro County, including many who have moved from Castro to Deaf Smith County.

Other special guests were Mrs. W. L. Stout of Dalhart, Miss Sylvia McCracken of Sioux City, Ia., who is visiting relatives here, and Mrs. Virginia Neilson of Carmel, Calif., who is visiting her sister, Mrs. Ray Johnson of Summerfield.

Mrs. Neilson and Miss McCracken are both authors and both told of their interests as writers.

During a short business session presided over by Mrs. Ray Johnson, president, plans were made for the final meeting of the year which will be held with Mrs. John Patton on May 14.

Members of the club attending were Mesdames Fred Barrett, A. G. Bell, Burl France, E. S. Ireland, Ray Johnson, F. M. Kester, H. E. Miller, John Patton, Wirt Phillips, Mary Seigler, Delmar Sigle, Charlie Waiser, Bess Werner, J. M. Gilliland, Lloyd Lookingbill, Henry Hastings and the hostesses.

Mrs. Scott Tells of Music's Power

Mrs. Howard Scott was guest speaker at the Lone Star Study Club session held Tuesday afternoon in the home of Mrs. C. D. Kelton. Mrs. John Jacobsen Jr., was assistant hostess.

Mrs. Scott spoke on the subject "Music-A Key to International Understanding" pointing out that the universal language of music unites all who hear it. "Music can express all things" she said, relating incidents where music has been used in therapeutic treatments and in teaching Latin American children to speak English, with good results. She concluded by saying "Music may well be called one of God's blessings to be used for the betterment of mankind."

Members present were Mesdames R. G. Blue, W. S. Fluit, Leo Forrest, H. E. Henslee, Jim Higgins, John Jacobsen Jr., Joe Kendall, Vivian Major, G. W. Newsum, Coy Phillips, L. L. Womble, Glenn Witherspoon, Charley Sowell Roger Corbett and the hostess.

Baldness New Problem Among Today's Women

SAME FACE, DIFFERENT HAIR—These wigs designed by Doris Fleischer show the effect different hairdos have on a face. One may assume a glamorous, gainin, sedate or casual pose merely by choosing the right coiffure.

own, but more so to see how remarkable a transformation could be. She was typical of women whose hair gets sparser and sparser, perhaps after an illness.

Doris and Joseph Fleischer, brother and sister team operating a hair business established by their great grandfather 125 years ago, have made their life's work building hair pieces. They estimate there are hundreds of thousands of women in America now wearing them. Miss Fleischer explains: "The reason wigs are not more popular is that they are difficult to detect and the average woman confronted with the problem is likely to think she is unique. Sometimes a girl suffers with half a head of hair, wearing a bandana or hat most of the time to hide her secret. Sometimes all she need do is effect a little fullness at the side of her head or a cap of curls at the crown to fill out her own sparse locks."

Problem pieces are planned, she says, so they may be integrated naturally into one's own feathery wisps. The proof of the effectiveness of the operation is that thousands of women wear these false hair pieces without detection.

Sometimes these extra pieces may change the entire look of the wearer. Miss Fleischer suggests that thin-faced types do not need much hair, perhaps just a little height and softness around the face. Extra length, she says, is needed for a long neck. Fat-faced girls must avoid the heavy, cumbersome looking wig. It is best to have a wig styled just as you would a coiffure of your own hair.

Bangs are built into nightcaps so that wigs and problem hair pieces may be kept in good condition. There are turbans with built in locks, especially designed for emergency shopping.

These hair pieces not only look natural but often flatter the wearer more than her original hair, which may have been thin and unmanageable to start with.

Broadway's Influence On Music Is Studied

Mrs. A. J. Schroeter was program leader for a meeting of the Music Study Club Monday afternoon in the education building of the First Baptist Church.

Continuing the course of study for the season on "America's Music" Mrs. Schroeter gave a discussion of the lesson subject, "In the Orbit of Broadway." She said in part: "There are two types of music, comic opera and musical comedy, that have Broadway as their symbol, if not as their locale. Musical comedy is native to Broadway, but comic opera is an imported European product, and the greatest names in comic opera are European. The most celebrated names in musical comedy are American, such as George Gershwin, Jerome Kern, Cole Porter and Rodgers."

In line with her discussion the two-piano program included the selections "The Donkey Serenade" (Friml) played by Mrs. Schroeter and Mrs. B. Y. Crosthwait, "Minuet in E Flat" (Beethoven), "Tales from Vienna Woods" (Strauss) and "Alice Blue Gown" played by Mrs. Howard Scott and Mrs. John Sims. Mrs. Grady Allison who is leaving Hereford to make her home in Munday, by request sang several selections accompanied at the piano by Mrs. John Sims. Included were "Love Is Where You Find It," "Jeanie With the Light Brown Hair," "Somewhere Over the Rainbow" and other favorites. She was presented with a going away gift from the club.

A special two-piano number was presented by Eugenia Alexander and her teacher, Mrs. Glenn Snyder, who played the orchestral part.

Streu's Diary

DEAR DIARY:
 As I write this, it is snowing and making with freezing drizzle — how am I supposed to know what to advertise —?? Garden tools, lawn fertilizer, weed killer and spraying equipment — or snow shovels, sleds, and gas heating equipment? Actually, it just doesn't matter what the season or the weather, you can find your hardware needs at Streu's — good solid quality merchandise that will give you many years of superb service — and the prices are reasonable. (Boy, am I full of that stuff this morning?)

JUST RECEIVED: Brown Label floor wax, double bit axe handles, spading forks, shovel handles, pipe wrenches, street brooms, car washing mops, tennis balls, table tennis balls and complete table tennis sets, brick trowels, horse shoe nails, and sandpaper. Also a new line of copper and chrome kitchen stuff — bread box, canister sets, spice cabinets, etc. Jean is really proud of this new line — looks as tho' it might brighten up most any old kitchen. We now have almost the full line of K-Venlence closet and kitchen space-savers — cup racks, purse racks, shoe racks, hat racks and so on and on. These are good values and will save you both time and space. See 'em at STREU'S.

Lot of you folks are waiting for Color Television to be "perfected" — for the prices to come down — or for enough color programs to make it "worth while." Ladies and gentlemen, you are kidding yourselves. Despite adverse "sour grape" publicity by manufacturers who are unable to build color TV — Big Color TV by RCA Victor is as big as black and white TV — don't take my word for it — quit people who just don't know — just phone Streu's for a color TV demonstration and find out for yourself!!! As to price — they are an about $50 as of last month — and will go up another $50 this fall — you can trade for a color TV today cheaper than any time in the future. As for programming, there are from 12 to 18 hours of color on Channel 4 and 10 every week, and this time is increasing almost weekly. By late summer or early fall there will be 25 to 30 hours of color per week. Quit listening to the diehards and get on the color TV Bandwagon with RCA Victor Big-Color TV at STREU'S. If the foregoing statements seem a bit belligerent, it's just that I'm tired of "know-it-all" characters who just don't know — blowing and going about color TV.

Noted in the Hereford Brand a picture of a lovely ultra modern jail under consideration — to be located on the courthouse square — I have several pictures of courthouses in the state that have been similarly treated — Gives the same impression as a chrome and glass coffee table in a room full of period furniture — a sunbonnet with an evening dress effect. We have a lovely courthouse — one of the outstanding ones in the state — let's not ruin the effect by cramming modern jails, libraries or other structures on the same block. Please!!

INSURANCE CONFUSION

ALBANY, N. Y. (AP) — New York's new compulsory automobile liability insurance law is giving many visiting motorists the jitters.

Widespread reports that out-of-state drivers are being warned to stay away, because their cars may be impounded if they are unable to produce evidence of liability insurance, has brought official denial from the New York motor vehicle commissioner.

Commissioner Joseph P. Kelly explained that visiting motorists are not required to prove financial responsibility, but may be called upon to do so after involvement in an accident.

OPPOSE LATE DRINKING

SINGAPORE (AP) — Experts trying to make the colony a tourist attraction have roused the antagonism of church leaders by suggesting late drinking.

The experts, at a meeting, were also told that nightspot and hotel managers have been barred by the Singapore Musicians Union from bringing in foreign bands to improve their musical offerings.

Rev. J. R. Fleming, secretary of the Malayan Christian Council, said: "We do not want to attract tourists by making it easier to drink."

Panhandle Paragraphs

Oil Development Should Be On An Orderly Basis

Oil leasing activity during the past two weeks, coupled with wildcat production in neighboring Oldham County, in addition to providing a topic of conversation around Hereford has produced considerable moaning and groaning on the part of hundreds of citizens. The chief complaint centers around the fact that many people do not want to live in the environment of an oil community.

This reaction would, no doubt, come as a shock to most Easterners who figure that everyone in Texas has two or more oil wells. It may even come as a shock to some of us when we analyze the situation—and realize that we are happy with things as they stand. When you get right down to brass tacks, though, there is little reason for alarm.

In the first place, the question of oil is still an unknown quantity. More exploration tests fail than succeed. Right now, it looks as if the oil companies have spent something like $300,000 in leases; otherwise, the changes have been minute.

In the second place, should they discover oil in this area, it is well to remember that things have changed from the heyday development in Oklahoma, East Texas and the Borger era. Snyder was a boom town, but it was an orderly boom; Littlefield, Lamesa, Midland, Brownfield and Perryton are today enjoying the benefits of oil in an orderly fashion. The towns are growing, sure, but the development is basic and sound. In addition, the fact that major oil companies hold a large portion of the leases in this area is an encouraging factor toward orderly development.

Oil development here would mean payrolls. It is even possible that Hereford might become an oil center for supply firms. Payrolls mean business, greater property evaluations and progress. Oil development here, as in many other places, could also mean lower taxes. Such has been the experience of property owners in Andrews, Borger, Dumas and numerous other Texas points.

Finally, and probably the most important of all, is the fact that you cannot do much about it, anyway. People are going to lease their land and, in case of production, they are going to accept the royalty money. Whether Hereford and Deaf Smith County, become an oil center depends largely upon fate. Certainly, we cannot vote it "out" anymore than we can vote it "in."

Oil is the basis of modern machinery and mass production. To wish the industry on other people and spare ourselves is not exactly a Christian attitude. At the same time, we are not so sure that oil production on an orderly scale would not solve many problems for the community as well as for numerous individuals. It is entirely possible that Hereford and Deaf Smith County might become better balanced communities, offering prospective residents an even better place to live and to rear their families.

Instead of complaining, it behooves us to work together in an effort to meet the possible expansion in such a manner that it will serve us, rather than our becoming servants of the new development itself.

EDITOR'S NOTE: It has taken 40 years to produce the "new Soviet man." Where is he headed? William L. Ryan, Associated Press specialist on Russia, underlines some of the fruits of mass education causing uneasiness in the Kremlin today. It is the last of a series of four articles.

By WILLIAM L. RYAN
AP Foreign News Analyst
Another revolution is slowly gaining momentum in Russia today.

Forty years after the revolt against czarism and the subsequent Bolshevik seizure of power, striking changes can be noticed. Russia's present revolution is not one of violence, but of social ferment, spurred by steady though passive pressure on a regime still bent only on massive power.

Old Russia saw centuries of terror, oppression, isolation from a progressing West.

Modern Russia saw horror, famine, mass deportations, purges, and executions. She experienced brief alliance with a deadly enemy, Hitler Germany, and catastrophic war with that enemy. She saw wartime alliance with the West and a violent Cold War against her former allies. She produced fantastic hero worship of Stalin, sudden destruction of the Stalin legend and now the equally fantastic attempt to restore Stalin's ghost to respectability.

Like Czar Nicholas I in 1849, modern Russia's rulers brutally crushed a Hungarian revolution. The reasons were the same — in 1849 to save an autocrat, Emperor Francis Joseph, and in 1956 to save the rule of totalitarian communism.

PERHAPS, however, communism will become its own worst enemy. Most Russians, by Western standards, still are badly off. But many millions are immeasurably better off materially than their fathers. A conservative, property-minded middle class is growing. It is the sort of class Russia never had under czarism. Despite popular conceptions of communism, it is possible now to be a ruble millionaire, to bequeath property, to amass private goods. This is a softening influence, a developing class against the barbarism of the past when there was no middle class such as transformed the West.

Education in Russia is almost universal. To industrialize the nation in its bid for world domination, Soviet leaders had to educate it. Keeping this population sealed off from awareness of the outside becomes progressively more difficult.

The people have more. But they know they deserve even more. They want more of the material things in which Westerners made great advances. They want more spiritual benefits, more room for intellectual adventure, for argument, disagreement, for shaping their own destinies. They are weary of lectures and strictures, of being told "it is necessary . . . you must do this . . . you must think that . . ."

THEY WEARY of being a little

NEW GENERATION—Students at Lomonosov University in Moscow head for a chemistry lecture. Unlike his father, the "new Soviet man" is receiving education. The education is making it harder for the Kremlin to obtain blind obedience.

ashamed of their leaders. Thus the government must, for example, distort the Hungarian story and warn against "slandorous rumors." And once again, as always when the rulers worried, old bogies are trotted out. Russians are told the United States plans atomic war against them. While the motherland is in danger, an excuse exists for whatever measures the rulers adopt to counter pressure from the population.

Only a handful of Bolsheviks seized a promising Russian revolution in 1917. Possibly it was Russia's destiny, in tune with the endless seeking for an absolute answer to all questions and in keeping with a tradition of rule by terror.

Freedom seemed almost a negative sinful idea to Russians. There are two Russian words for freedom. One is "svoboda," meaning freedom as applied to relations between government and governed. Russians had little understanding of the concept. The other, "volya," meant more — a sort of freedom of soul, which could be reconciled with regimentation.

ACCEPTANCE of regimentation was habitual with Russians ever since Peter the Great put large sections of the population in uniform. But Western ideas seeped in, and Russian thinkers began regarding their rulers with a sort of terror.

"Few," wrote Alexander Herzen a century ago, "know what happens beneath the shroud with which the state covers the corpses, bloodstains, military trials, while maintaining hypocritically and arrogantly there is neither blood nor corpse beneath the shroud."

The words could apply to Russia today. Forty years ago Bolsheviks seized a revolution, twisted it, imposed upside-down czarism with regimentation, terror, slave labor, frozen prison camps, secret police. Under Stalin, the regime invited famine in order to crush peasant independence and force collectivization. At the same time it labored to build heavy industry, and military might, while keeping the people poor in life's amenities.

Stalin nailed down his dictatorship by 1938, after years of fearful bloodletting and purges. Before the merciless tongue-lashings of a fanatical prosecutor, Andrei Vishinsky, famous Bolsheviks paraded abjectly before their judges with fantastic confessions. Zinoviev, Kamenev, Rykov, many other Lenin lieutenants died before firing squads. So did hundreds of Red army officers. Thousands went into Siberian exile.

WHEN THE smoke cleared, Stalin was absolute ruler, a "Little Father" image of the old czars, to be worshipped as a demigod. Stalin, the dictator and World War II generalissimo, died in March, 1953.

Lesser men remained. No one of them could fill a dictator's shoes. A mutual protective league — the collective leadership — emerged after ganging up on Police Boss Beria, labelling him imperialist spy and executing him along with thousands of his dread MVD secret police organization.

Nervous over the people's mood, the leaders promised abundant consumer goods. It seemed as if the leaders felt a slow, revolutionary pressure from the growing middle class. There were relaxations of Stalinism, denunciations of Stalin. But it brought ferment, and the leaders once again had to draw the reins.

MANY A RUSSIAN leader proclaims that "all roads lead to communism." But is the Soviet road leading to communism? Has it not already led to an entrenched privileged class, intertwined primarily in keeping what it has and unhappily at the prospect of risking its position for the greater glory of world Marxism?

And isn't the Soviet Union really Imperial Russia in a new guise? Like Russia's last four empires, today's Kremlin eyes the Middle East and Asia greedily. Japan and Britain stopped the czar's restless push outward. Today the United States stands in the way of spreading Soviet "enlightenment."

Russian rulers many times before had forgotten their own backyard in their urge to conquest. While they concentrated on power, they built ferment within the empire itself. The most striking aspect of Russian history is the way it has of repeating itself. Will it repeat itself once more?

TWO BARNs DESTROYED

Two barns near Canyon were destroyed Friday and Saturday nights, one by an explosion and one by a fire. An explosion wrecked a dairy barn belonging to Newton Crain Friday night. The explosion, attributed to a leaking butane heater, wrecked the barn, milking machines and other equipment. Saturday night a fire destroyed a barn about one mile north of town which belonged to Arch Hunsley. Stored in the barn were 3,000 to 4,000 bales of alfalfa and six pieces of farm equipment. The entire lot was destroyed.—THE CANYON NEWS.

NEW AIRPORT FUNDS OFFERED CITY

Mayor Ray Keeling was notified Wednesday that Littlefield has been allotted an additional $30,000 for airport improvement by the federal government. This brings the total airport funds available to Littlefield to $61,372. An additional $11,000 was withdrawn April 1, but can be reapplied for later. All funds must be matched by the city. The new allotment is to be used specifically to purchase additional land to increase the length of the present runway from 3,000 to 4,000 feet, and to build an additional runway and taxi strip.—LAMB COUNTY LEADER.

CROP PROSPECTS UP AT PERRYTON

Crop prospects in the Perryton area look the brightest in years following a record breaking moisture month of March, and farmers are wearing smiles of anticipation as the grain sorghum planting season approaches with moisture in the ground. Judge Jack Allen, who with his father, the late S. N. Allen, has kept the official Ochiltree County rain records since 1906, says this is by far the wettest March in the record books. March, 1957, went into the records with a total of 6.08 inches of moisture in Perryton. Total for the year is 7.28 inches. Wheat which was "dusted in" last August and September, and which managed to hang on during the dry fall has come to life and is growing rapidly now. Although much of Ochiltree County's wheat acreage went into the soil bank last fall, there appears to be a good chance for a wheat harvest this year on all of the seeded acreage.—OCHILTREE COUNTY HERALD.

BETTER SAFE THAN SORRY

After the insurance agent left, the city commissioners got to wondering just what constituted the "contents" of the city storage building in the west part of town, which they had just insured for $3,000.

It turned out to be the city dog pound.—THE FRIONA STAR.

Teenage Driving Bill Is Delayed

The teenage driver bill which appears to have been stymied in the Texas legislature is being watched closely by many people of this area, along with those over other parts of the state. Certainly, if the bill secures no action this session, it will in others to follow. In addition, the question is one which is almost certain to appear in every household which contains teenage boys and girls.

Like adults, some teenagers drive better and more carefully than others. Some, in fact, drive better than many adults. For this reason, it appears that the examinations to youngsters should be most rigid, and that they should include the factor of sound judgment as well as mechanical ability.

On the other hand, it is important to recognize the fact that our youth today matures at an earlier age than past generations. Should we penalize ability with blanket rulings, based on age? Also to be considered are hardship cases, and it seems to us that any law along this line should be universal.

In addition, if we are to consider the ability of a youth to drive, we should be consistent and alter, on the same basis, his responsibility in other fields, such as voting, serving penitentiary sentences, marriage and numerous other phases of life where the young man and young woman can now hide behind the shield of being a juvenile.

Unquestionably, if they are mature enough to reap the pleasures, they are also mature enough to accept the responsibilities.

Post Office Fued Poses Questions

The present plight and bickering in the U. S. post office department strikes different people in different ways, possibly often depending on which side of the political fence they happen to stand. There are two distinct and seldom discussed points on the subject, however, from which we may well observe fundamental lessons.

The situation once again emphasizes what could happen in our school system in Hereford, once the American public gives in and starts accepting doles and ultimate federal domination in our public schools. Striking, indeed, is the fact that neither Congress or Mr. Sumnerfield seem to be worrying very much about the people, instead, both are doing their best to carry their point.

Equally serious is comparison between government operation of the postal department on a socialistic basis as compared with other phases of private industry across the nation. Postal service, none too good to begin with, is today going down while service in other lines is constantly improving. Newspapers, like The Brand, have been forced into operating their own delivery system to give Sunday service, which the public demands and expects.

While the post office department offers very little, if any, service not offered 25 years ago, the telephone company (which closes neither Saturday or Sunday) has cut its long distance time, New York to Hereford, by more than 80 percent. All of which causes us to wonder how many cars any dealer would sell today if he stocked only the 1932 models?

True enough, the rates have not radically soared in comparison with other costs, but it makes us stop and wonder how our present post office department would fare in competition with a privately operated postal system, based on aggressive service and a reasonable margin of profit.

QUESTION OF THE WEEK

Hypothetical Oil Field Gets Favorable Response

What would be your reaction if a producing oil field were discovered in this county?

CLAY ANGELO—I think it would be a pretty wonderful thing. I feel even the prospects would start circulating money. Believe it would help the county.

PAUL HOFF—I'd love it! As far as money is concerned, it would be very beneficial. It wouldn't injure farming except maybe in a minor way. If it were a boom town it would hurt, but otherwise it'd sure be wonderful and be good for the area as a whole.

MRS. JOHN VINES—I think it would be very nice. I think it would help the community.

CHARLIE CROWELL—It would increase business a lot. I think oil always helps, particularly if it lasts.

C. W. COVINGTON—It would definitely help business, but at the same time it would hurt the diversified farming. I've known a lot of boom towns that went bust. It has its good and bad points.

MRS. CHARLEY SHIPLEY—It would be wonderful. It would help the town to grow, but I can't say it would help or hurt in the long run. I'd like to see it.

ROBERT THOMPSON—It definitely would be good for the area. In any farming area, oil play definitely helps. I've had experience before at Brownfield and oil sure helps during the short crop years. During depressions, the oil towns are the most prosperous.

DR. WILLIAM LAWRENCE—I think progress is never to be turned down. I think it would help the community in every way.

Ancient Cars Being Tuned Up For U. S. - British Road Race

NEW YORK (AP) — Motorists traveling certain Eastern highways late in April will think time has reversed itself.

Chugging along these roads will be 20 ancient automobiles — 10 of them flying small American flags, the rest British standards.

These ancient cars will be competing in what has been billed as the "world series" of antique auto racing. American old car owners challenged the British to the race, and the British confidently accepted.

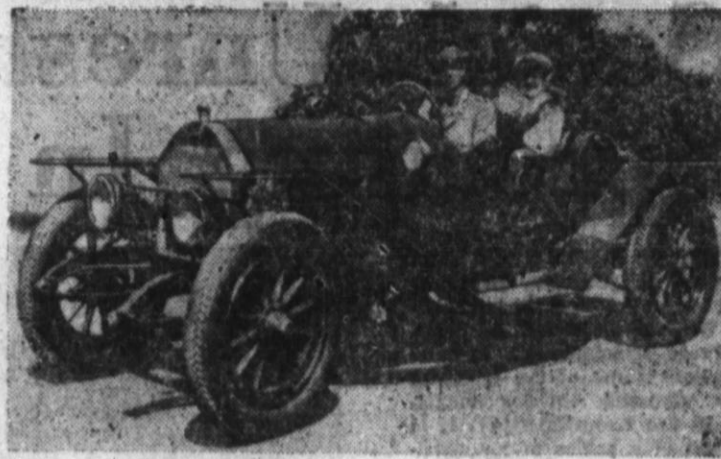

The race will begin April 23 in New York and wind up at the same spot seven days and 500 miles later. In between, the autos will puff over a six-state course which includes rugged hills and twisting stretches designed to test both the venerable vehicles and their drivers, most of whom are more than 40 years old.

Each team will consist of five "Edwardian" cars — those manufactured between 1906 and 1916 — and five "Vintage" cars of the 1916 — 1930 period. Each will carry the driver and one passenger — usually a very patient and understanding wife.

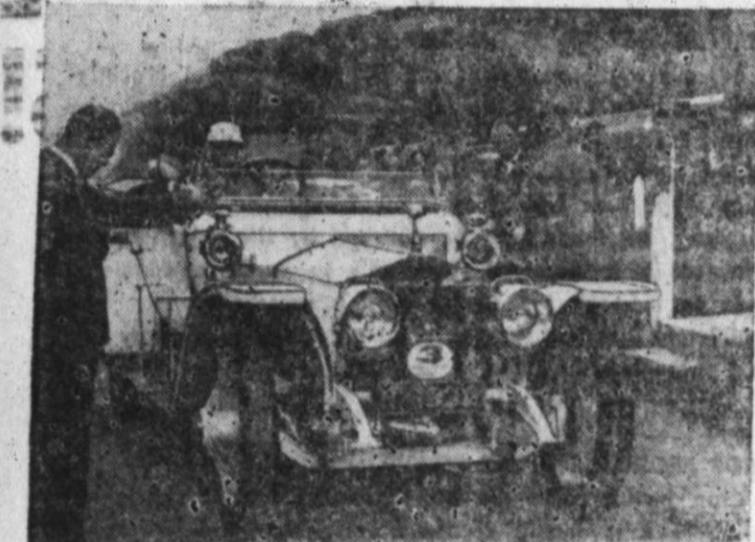

Several gruelling side tests will be put to the autos along the way. In Princeton, for example, there will be a hill climb test. There also will be stopping and re-starting tests; a sharp turn test, parking tests and concours d'elegance. The latter is a kind of beauty contest in which the cars are judged for condition of engine, chassis and body, originality and general appearance.

Points will be given each car and at the end of the race the points will be totaled and a trophy awarded the winning team.

Refurbishing old cars is a hobby that came into its own after World War II in both Britain and the United States. Races have been held in both countries, but this is the first time the best cars

FOR THE U. S.—Mr. and Mrs. Samuel E. Bailey of Philadelphia will be in this 1914 Simplex Runabout, one of 10 ancient U. S. cars which will take on a British team.

FOR THE BRITISH—Stuart J. Skinner will drive his 1910 Silver Ghost Rolls-Royce in British-American ancient car road race. Skinner is shown at a recent race in Britain.

of the two nations have competed. In the United States there are an estimated 15,000 antique car owners. Most of them buy the car for a small price and spend a lot of money fixing it. Some have spent as much as $10,000 on one car.

Among the most rabid enthusiasts in America are Henry Austin Clark Jr., of Glen Cove, N. Y., and Edgar L. Roy, a Roxbury, Mass., manufacturer. Both will be in the April race.

Clark, 39, will be the youngest man in the race. He will drive a 1916 Pierce Arrow, one of 250 old cars he has in a collection which he houses in a museum.

Roy estimates he has put in 3,000 hours getting his 1911 Simplex in shape for the contest. He painted and upholstered it, installed new gears and reconstructed the four wheels. He's expecting big things from his auto when he pits it against the likes of a 1910 Silver Ghost Rolls-Royce and a 1914 Prince Henry Vauhall, two of the cars which will be brought here by the Vintage Sports Car Club of Great Britain.

Asian - African Bloc Becomes Biggest, Strongest In U. S.

By MAX HARRELSON
UNITED NATIONS, N. Y. — One of the most significant developments in the United Nations is the emergence of the Asian-African bloc as a powerful, closely-knit operating unit.

This comparative newcomer is not only the United Nation's largest organized bloc — or group, as its members prefer to call it — but it also is the most active and the most influential.

It includes 27 countries, one-third of the 80 U. N. members. When it presents a solid front, as it often does, it can play a decisive role on any world issue. During the Middle East crisis, the group has acted as a unit consistently.

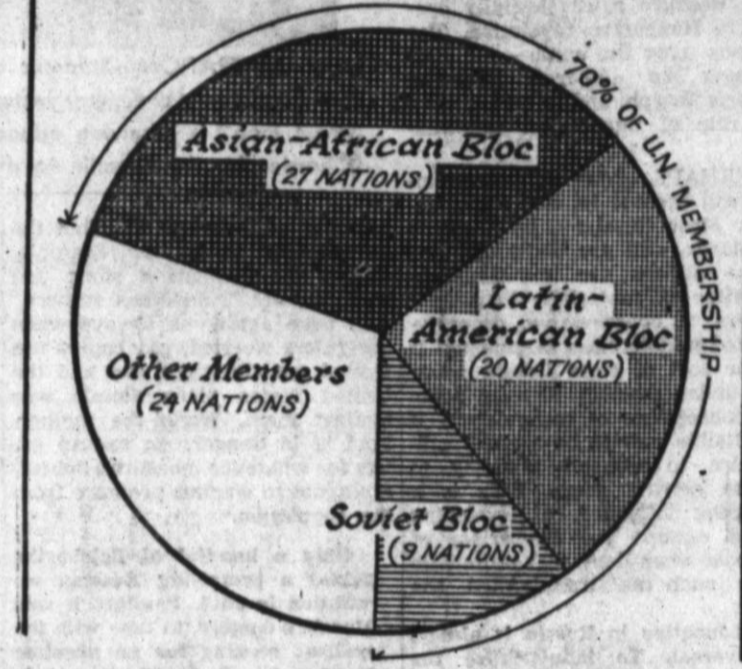

The Asian - African group furthermore is the only U. N. bloc which has any prospect for immediate expansion.

The 20-nation Latin American group, once the largest in the United Nations, has not increased its membership since the world organization was formed with 51 members.

THE OTHER major group — the nine - member Soviet bloc — added four new members in 1955, but the admission of any new Communist countries does not appear imminent, although there are several candidates. These include Outer Mongolia, North Korea, North Viet Nam and Red China.

The Asian - African group is expected to get one new member in September — the new country of Ghana in West Africa. Other prospective members in the near future are Nigeria, Somaliland Malaya.

Major Blocs in the United Nations

While the Latin American and Soviet blocs have been active since the beginning of the United Nations, the Asian - African group was non-existent as an organized unit until after the Bandung Conference in 1955. The Arabs had met informally with a few Asian countries as early as 1950, but the actual organization of a bloc — with a monthly rotating chairmanship — is a comparatively recent development.

Originally the group had only 17 members, but it added six in 1955 and four more in 1956.

Nationalist China and Israel, although meeting geographic requirements, are not members of the Asian - African bloc. They were automatically excluded since neither had been present at Bandung and attendance there was made a condition for membership in the group.

THE SOVIET bloc is the only one which always votes as a unit.

Both the Latin American and Asian-African groups seek to agree on major issues, but each member is free to vote as it chooses.

On some issues, particularly so-called Cold War questions, the Asian - African group is split with some supporting the West and some abstaining. Only now and then does the Soviet bloc gain any group.

The Asian - Africans, on the other hand, usually get the support of the Communists and the Latin Americans on colonial issues. And this presents a combination which is giving the colonial powers a bad time in the United Nations.

One big group of U. N. members still remains unorganized — the non-Communist countries of Europe. Occasionally, these meet informally — as do the British Commonwealth countries and other smaller groups — but they have no formal arrangements or organization.

The Meaning of the Cross

No event in human history has been as variously interpreted as the death of Jesus Christ. And yet there is no reason for these various "interpretations."

The Bible's statements on the death of Christ do not need interpreting as much as they need reading. A mosaic of Bible quotes will suffice to illustrate:

"Christ died for our sins." — "Who His own self bore our sins in His own body on the cross." — "God commendeth His love toward us in that, while we were yet sinners, Christ died for us."

"Christ suffered for our sins, the just for the unjust." — "Christ died for the ungodly." — "Christ hath redeemed us from the curse of the Law, being made a curse for us." — "Behold the Lamb of God which taketh away the sin of the world."

"Whom God hath set forth to be a propitiation (reconciliation) for our sins, and not for ours only, but also for the sins of the whole world." — "The blood of Jesus Christ, His Son, cleanseth us from all sin."

Remember, the above are not interpretations. They are simple Bible statements. The Scripture, then, leaves no one in doubt as to why Jesus died. He died to pay the punishment and to remove the guilt of all the sins of all the world — so that all who in faith accept Him as their Ransom and Redeemer might go free.

That, and that above all else, is the message of the Christian Church to the world today. Have you found your pardon in that Word?

Hemline Hysteria—Baloney!

NORMAN HARTNELL—The dressmaker for the Royal Family views his model, Azetta, wearing the spectacular evening gown, "Caesar's Wife," from his spring collection.

By LEONARD LEDDINGTON
LONDON (AP)—Long skirts or short skirts for 1957 — it's all a lot of high-class baloney, madame. This year's styles, says Norman Hartnell, won't be set by anyone but you.

Hartnell, who dresses Britain's royal family, insists he's not getting mixed up in any controversy over the rise or fall of the hemline this spring.

"It doesn't matter where we put it," Hartnell says. "The women who buy our dresses have the hemline fixed just where they want it."

"The designer presents, but the women decide. The ladies always have the last word."

Hartnell, who became Britain's first dressmaker back in 1923 when he was 22 and fresh out of Cambridge University, made the collection of clothes Queen Elizabeth took on her recent state visits to Copenhagen and Lisbon, as well as those planned for her visit to Paris later this spring.

HARTNELL, now 55, prepared the dress collection for the Queen's mother in 1938 when she paid a similar state visit to the capital of feminine fashion.

There is lots of white, silver and gold among the royal colors for the Paris visit. "The Queen wears the bright scarlet sash of the Legion of Honor and her dresses must be designed accordingly," Hartnell said.

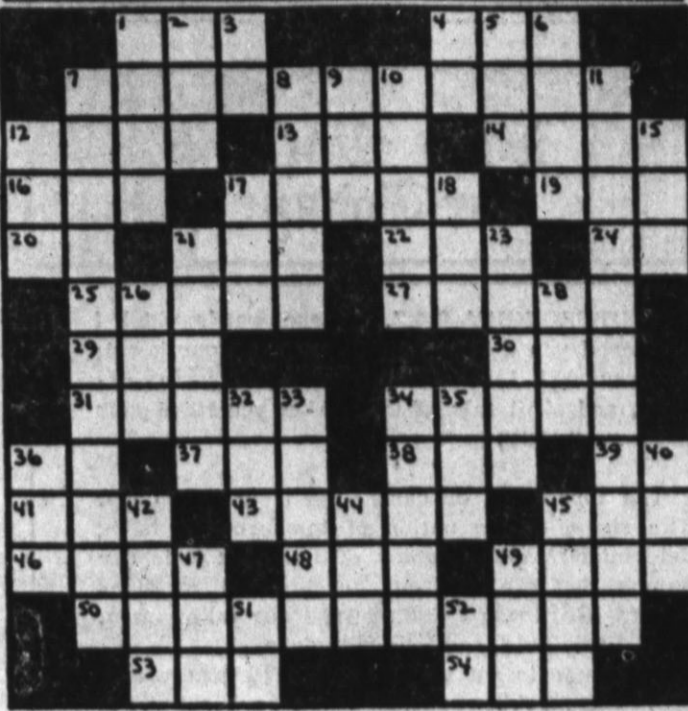

Daytime dresses of the royal spring wardrobe are similarly gay — they must be of clear colors visible from a long distance — but the materials must be able to cope with unsettled weather of April in Paris.

HARTNELL recently showed a few choice items of his new spring collection to Princess Margaret and the Queen Mother. But he doesn't expect many orders for the new spring clothes from Princess Margaret this year. "She took quite an extensive wardrobe on her African tour last year and her clothes don't 'date,'" Hartnell pointed out.

He has one stirring gown — a slick, classical creation called "Caesar's Wife," the lady beyond reproach — which is a highlight of the new collection.

It is a strapless white gown in what Hartnell calls "the Roman line" — the kind of dress that's certain to draw long, low whistles in even the best circles. It's drawn tight about the body so that the wearer has to take tiny steps. A thin embroidered band of gold runs down the front to lift the floor-length hemline to ankle length for a peek-a-boo inverted V in the center.

That old Roman effect, even in 1957, is pretty devastating.

Hartnell's salon is a fairyland setting of perfumed air, glittering crystal chandeliers, thick fiesta blue carpeting and dove grey walls. And all of Hartnell's young ladies, from the receptionists to the salesladies (they're called vendeuse in the expensive Hartnell bracket), wear individually designed dresses, all in dark Hartnell green.

HARTNELL gives afternoon showings of his new spring collection on a daily basis to a selected audience of British blue bloods. The prices, by normal haute couture standards, aren't terrific — somewhere between 100 and 200 pounds ($280 to $560) per dress would be about average.

Unlike the Paris fashion houses who sell mainly to dress manufacturers, most of Hartnell's customers are private buyers just picking up a thing or two.

Any dress chosen by the Queen or Princess Margaret, Hartnell declares, is immediately withdrawn from the showing. The rule is that nobody in Britain wears what the royal women wear.

825 "borrowed" pigs gain 1 2/3 pounds a day

Last year Purina Dealers "borrowed" a total of 825 pigs from hog farmers in their neighborhoods. They fed them for four weeks in their stores . . . on Purina Pig Startena. Here is the record those pigs made:

Average starting age 5 weeks
Average starting weight 25 1/2 lbs.
Average weight at 9 weeks 64 1/2 lbs.
Average daily gain 1 2/3 lbs.
Lbs. pork per 100 lbs. Startena 55 1/2 lbs.

When pigs are only a few days old it's time to start crowding them to make the cheap gains and growth that usually mean extra profit on market day. A sure way to do this is to start pigs on Baby Pig Chow . . . proved by research . . . proved in the feedlot. It takes only one 50-lb. bag per litter. Then switch to Purina Pig Startena through weaning. You should have little

Rogers For Hike In Tax Allowance

By TEX EASLEY
 Special Washington Service

WASHINGTON — Rep. Walter Rogers of Pampa, with six children of his own, is definitely in favor of a larger tax allowance for dependent children.

He calls attention in a "news letter" to his introduction of a bill to increase the deduction from the present $600 to $750 and goes on to say that some colleagues had asked why he didn't propose a $1,000 allowance.

"Let me say," he explained, "that I would have no objection to an amendment to my bill adding $1,000 for each child. The reason I placed the exemption at $750 was, because of the number of children I have. One member suggested that I had better not go too high on children's exemptions or someone might decide it was a private bill for the primary benefit of the Rogers family.

"I assure you such was not the case, but if anyone needs evidence that $600 is insufficient and unrealistic as an exemption with which to raise a child, let them come by the house sometime and I will be glad to entertain them for two or three days. I have one boy who tore the claws off a hammer. Don't ask me how he did it. I don't know, nor does he, according to his report."

Thirty-three wood mosaic portraits of presidents, handmade by a Longview businessman and lawyer, are on exhibit in the lobby of a big Washington banking firm.

The creation of James B. Mason, the 19 by 24 inch portraits contain more than 400,000 pieces of tiny chips of vari-colored wood. Mason uses razor-sharp knives as his "brushes," refuses to use any stain, dye or tint. This poses a special problem. He never had found a natural blue wood to use for the eyes of the presidents who had blue eyes.

As a youth in Durham, N. C., Mason started collecting various kinds of wood — he says he has used more than 200 varieties in his portraits.

Rep. Clark Thompson of Galveston and Rep. Bob Poage of Waco report receiving mail from all over the country urging congressional action to require humane methods of slaughtering livestock at the big packing plants. The mail is coming to them as members of the House Agriculture Committee.

Bible Words for Today

DEUTERONOMY 6:6,7. "These words which I command you this day shall be upon your heart; and you shall teach them diligently to your children, and shall talk of them when you sit in your house. . . ." (RSV)

The foundation of our nation is in its homes. The shape of the nation of tomorrow is being determined in the homes of today. It is in our homes that we get our fundamental attitudes toward life, toward God, toward our fellow men, toward the Bible, and toward the church.

The home is not what it was a few generations ago. The machine age has taken work out of the home and sent the home into the crowded city and town. There the home has become a combination dormitory and restaurant and the father is often something between an absentee owner and a house guest.

Although we cannot make time stand still and avoid all change, in this one thing we must never lose the lessons of the past; we must make God the center of every home. In our homes we must both teach and practice love of God and love of our fellow men.

Trouble was lots of folks didn't notice that this was in Mullins, S. C. — not Charlottesville. And the number happened to be the same as that of Mrs. M. E. Patterson here. After her telephone rang most of the night she asked the Progress for help — an item to make it clear that the service was in far away South Carolina.

Household Tips

Does your family enjoy stuffed baked potatoes? Try adding a little cooked browned sausage meat to their filling next time you prepare them.

Improvise your own curry powder with these ground spices: pepper, ginger, cardamom, cumin and turmeric.

Add butter, curry powder, currants (washed and drained) and pine nuts to cooked rice; reheat. Delicious served with chicken or lamb.

Grapefruit sections, added to a prepared gelatin dessert, give refreshing flavor.

Ever prepare baked grapefruit? Cut the fruit in half and loosen the sections. Spread the top with light brown sugar and place in a very hot (450 degrees) oven until the sugar begins to seep down.

Ever combine tomato juice and clam juice for a cocktail? Chill well!

Pricking a pastry shell well with a fork on the bottom and sides, before baking, helps to keep the crust flat.

Ever mix cream cheese with a little cream or milk and chopped dates and nuts to use as a filling for spice layer cake? Nice!

What to do with those leftover egg yolks? Add them to eggs you are planning to scramble or to a custard-type pie filling or pudding.

Save the liquid from canned asparagus. It makes a fine cream soup.

Pakistan Partridges Arrive In Panhandle

AUSTIN — Reinforcements for the first batch of seese partridges obtained from far-away Pakistan for experimental stocking in the Texas Panhandle have begun to arrive, according to the assistant director of wildlife restoration. He said one consignment of 120 of the game birds, which are almost the same size as bobwhite quail, is being processed and that another shipment of 100 additional birds is expected to be ready for release by May 1. These game birds, which come from the drier parts of West Pakistan, are being tested in the rugged barren areas of the Palo Duro Canyon, southeast of Amarillo. The original consignment of 88 seesees was turned loose last spring. The assistant director said few reports have been received about the first release but said project personnel were unable to locate the birds. "They have been swallowed up by the wild country and we won't begin to worry about survival until the additional numbers have been released and have had a fair chance to set up housekeeping and begin trying to raise their families." HE DID say that more than ordinary attention will probably be given the Palo Duro Canyon country hereafter since the seesees will be on one side of the wilderness and the recently released aoudad sheep will be on the other side. The seese partridges, described as a hair smaller than ordinary quail, were obtained from Pakistan through the United States Fish and Wildlife Service which coordinated the requisition through the United States State Department. The assistant director said the sturdiness of the fleet game birds was "pretty well tested" in the transfer from their Pakistan habitat to Texas. They were in Far East quarantine three weeks and in New York customs quarantine three weeks. Only two days were required for the actual flight from Pakistan to New York. Then came an overnight trip via air freight from New York to Dallas, from where the six crates were trucked to the Panhandle.

The 120 feathered immigrants in the first 1957 shipment survived the ordeal remarkably well, with only two reported "in puny condition." These birds, and the second batch of 100, were in charge of Wildlife Biologist Richard DeArment of Wheeler, pending final release under the supervision of A.S. Jackson, chief biologist for the Panhandle. JACKSON SAID he is hopeful that some of the transplanted game "will take hold" as a means of supplementing native species which have been so hard hit by recent drought and by growing shortage of natural habitat. He said "there is some optimism" for the future of another imported upland game species—the red-legged partridge, a larger bird, released in Cottle and Lipscomb counties also in the Panhandle. However, additional time is needed before the success or failure of the transplant can be determined. The third shipment of redlegs was placed on the open range in February this year. They are about twice the size of bobwhites. Jackson said at least some redlegs survived their first sharp winter weather test. He flushed three of them in Lipscomb County after the recent blizzard which was particularly severe in that area.

TALENTED MRS. ADAMS HAS HER FINGERS IN MANY PIES

By JANE EADS
WASHINGTON — Like many wives of top government officials, with a crammed schedule of official and social engagements, Mrs. Sherman Adams still manages to devote a good share of her time to her family, her private interests, and her hobbies.
 The gentle-mannered, alert wife of the President's top assistant admits she probably has her fingers in more pies than she should, but she is blessed with an energy, enthusiasm and efficiency of which her New England forbears would be proud. Besides, she says, "it's fun to be busy."
 Currently, she is wearing many hats. She's publicity chairman of an exhibit of needlework, designed and executed for the Washington Cathedral by a group of nationally prominent women, to be held April 13 through 25. She helped organize and is vice chairman of the Washington Cathedral Needlepoint Committee sponsoring the project.

 She has designed an enchanting needlepoint cushion for the bench in the Cathedral bride's waiting room, as well as kneelers for the Bethlehem Chapel, and has encouraged a group of White House wives to come to her home every Monday to work on other needlepoint. Among these are the wives of Brig. Gen. A. J. Goodpaster, White House staff secretary; Murray Snyder, assistant secretary of defense; Harold Stassen, special assistant to the President, and L. Arthur Minnich Jr., assistant staff secretary.

Mrs. Adams, a member of the Congressional Club since her husband served a term in the House before becoming governor of New Hampshire, is a member of its program committee.
 In the studio she fixed up in her home, a handsomely remodeled barn and mill, the stone part of which dates back about 150 years, she has invited a group of friends to share painting lessons once or twice a week. Mrs. Stassen and Mrs. Snyder are in the group along with Mrs. Carlos Romulo, wife of the Philippine Ambassador, Mrs. Perceval F. Brundage, wife of the budget director, and Mrs. Robert Madison.
 Many of the paintings in her home are her copies of masterpieces in the National Gallery, done to "learn techniques." Original art also adorns and gives personality to her home, like the tiles

Her eldest daughter, Mrs. William S. Freese of Pittsfield, has presented her with four grandchildren; another daughter, Mrs. William M. Hallager of Scarsdale, N. Y., with three. Child's Eye Blinking Usually Nervous Habit

By DOROTHY V. WHIFFLE, N.D. AF Newsfeatures

THE STONEHURSTS brought little Bill in for a complete physical examination.
 "Bill seems healthy enough," said Mrs. Stonehurst, "but I especially want you to examine his eyes. We think he must be near-sighted."
 Bill was 4. He was a jumpy little boy. In the waiting room he darted from one toy to another, playing with each but a moment at a time. Both his parents were after him much of the time.
 "Bill, pick up that truck before you fall over it."
 "Bill, did you see the fish over here?"
 "Bill, stop running around and let Daddy read you this nice story."
 When it was time for Bill to be examined both his parents came into the examining room with him. They directed his every move—or at least tried to. He was shown the small steps and asked to get up on the examining table.
 "BILL, GET UP on the table," said mother.
 "I'd like to see your teeth, with this light," I said, "please open your mouth."
 "Open your mouth," echoed mother.
 "Would you like to blow out the light?" I suggested as the mouth examination was finished. "Blow out the light," said mother.

Bill he just sat there and blinked his eyes. They couldn't stop him from doing that — they were his eyes.

"See what I mean, doctor?" said Billy's mother. "Look at his eyes. He's doing that all the time. He can't seem to see without blinking his eyes every other second."

THERE WASN'T anything physically wrong with Bill's eyes. His blinking was his way of saying: "I want to do something all by myself." The more his parents talked about his blinking in front of him the more he was aware that this one thing he could do.

Eye blinking is almost always a nervous habit — very, very seldom does it indicate anything wrong with the eyes. However, it's always a good idea to check up on the eyes to make sure that there's nothing wrong.

Why some children blink their eyes and some develop other nervous traits it's hard to tell. What Bill needed was first to have his parents stop, completely, talking about his eyes.
 But Bill needed more than that. He needed to be permitted to make a few decisions for himself and to be allowed to lead his own life.
