Hospice depends on volunteers

CARMEN RAPP

Rapp to manage local TEC

Carmen Rapp of Amarillo has been named area manager of the Texas Employment Commission office in Hereford, effective July 1, it was announced Thursday.

Mrs. Rapp replaces David Hernandez who recently transferred to the area manager's post in Texas City after serving in the Hereford office for five years. Rapp, employed in the Amarillo office for nine years, had been supervisor of the Job Partnership Training Act for a five-county area which included Deaf Smith County.

A native of Oklahoma and a graduate of the University of Oklahoma, Rapp also earned her master's degree at Indiana University. She has been with TEC for almost 21 years. She was in the Houston TEC office before moving to Amarillo.

Rapp's husband, Jay, is associated with Merrick Pet Foods of Hereford and does a popular pet show which airs on various stations. They have a son who has been stationed with the U.S. Air Force at Canon AFB in Clovis the past year and was recently transferred to New York state. They have one daughter who lives in Colorado Springs, Col., and is attending college.

Two get probation

Probated prison sentences were issued two defendants in 222nd District Court.

Sandra Fuentes, 22, charged with tampering with government records, entered a guilty plea and was sentenced to five years in Texas Department of Criminal Justice institutional division, probated five years.

The 10-year TDCJ-ID sentence previously given Christopher Todd Danley, 18, for burglary was suspended after he completed a term in the Special Alternative Incarceration Program -- boot camp. He will serve a 10-year probated term, also, on an earlier conviction. The state had filed a motion for modification of the sentence on that burglary conviction.

Thanks to a combined effort from Deaf Smith General Hospital, Crown of Texas Hospice and local volunteers, area residents now have access to care that carries them comfortably and compassionately through the final stages of life.

The term "hospice" is derived from a medieval word which described a place of shelter and solace for weary travelers on a difficult journey. The word is appropriate to describe the concept of hospice care today, for people dealing with a terminal illness may be on the most difficult journey of their lives.

Crown of Texas Hospice, in association with DSGH, is providing comprehensive care to terminally ill patients throughout this region. Twenty-five people recently completed training to qualify them as hospice volunteers. The trained volunteers are especially important to hospice care, since emphasis is placed on helping patients to lead as normal a life as possible for as long as possible.

Because terminal illness is often defined in conventional health care as a point at which nothing more can be done to cure disease or illness, the perception that "nothing more can be done" often has a devastating effect on both patients and families.

However, even though the disease may be incurable, much can be done to ease the pain and suffering of the patient and to offer relief and support to the family.

Through Crown of Texas Hospice, home care is provided to patients living within the area if there is enough support to safely maintain the patient at home. Volunteers are an important component, since they offer emotional support as well as being available to run errands or provide transportation when necessary.

Hospice care is based on an interdisciplinary team approach directed by a physician and including a highly-trained professional staff which places great importance on respect for human dignity and the values the patient has treasured in life. The members of the team include RNs, LVNs, Home Health Aides, social services, spiritual support and volunteers.

Financial considerations often take on special significance in cases involving a terminal illness. Services provided by Crown of Texas Hospice are covered by Medicare and Medicaid. Commercial insurance may also cover all or part of hospice care. While payment sources may vary, traditionally no patient is refused hospice services because of inability to pay.

As the National Hospice Organization states: "Hospice affirms life and neither hastens nor postpones death. Hospice exists in the hope and belief that through appropriate care and the promotion of a caring community sensitive to their needs, patients and their families may be free to attain a degree of mental and spiritual preparation for death that is satisfactory to them."

Hospice workshop set for volunteers

A training session for volunteers for hospice in Hereford will be held July 9 and July 16 in the Blue Room of the Hereford Senior Center.

Volunteers are needed for a wide range of needs in the hospice program, which has begun as a grassroots effort in the community. The program is coordinated by Crown of Texas Hospice and Deaf Smith General Hospital.

While volunteers for some areas do not have to be trained, training is required for most volunteers who work directly with persons in need of hospice care. Persons must attend both training sessions. The sessions will be held from 8:30 a.m. to 4 p.m. for both sessions.

Anyone who can volunteer for anything, whether it is working with patients and families to things like mowing lawns, buying groceries, running errands or other needs are welcome in the local hospice program.

Persons with questions about the training session, or persons who want to volunteer to help with the local hospice, may call 364-0190 or 1-800-572-6365.

Permit comes first

Marvin Gaddy, inspector for the City of Hereford, explains the application for a building permit that must be secured before construction valued at $100, or more, may be done on homes or business buildings in the city.

Building inspector faces challenges--and some fun

By GEORGIA TYLER
Staff Writer

Whether a Hereford citizen wants to build a new home, put a roof on a house or install new siding on an older home, the first step should be the City of Hereford building permit office.

Cost of the permit for residential construction is minimal but in the long run the stop could be worth the money.

A building permit is required for any project that represents $100 of value in labor and materials.

Obtaining the permit may spare some grief later on because the home or business owner will learn if city regulations are being met in the project.

"All we charge is $10 for each inspection, usually four," said Marvin Gaddy, city inspector. Commercial and business construction permits are based on value of the building job.

Gaddy joined the City of Hereford in November 1987, coming here from Dalhart where he had performed the same duties for that city. He was an electrical contractor before taking on city inspector responsibilities.

A city building code put in place in 1988 and the city's building and zoning ordinance are the framework within which he conducts inspections.

Projects that do not meet city code result in a letter from the city inspector. In some circumstances, legal proceedings even may be initiated if compliance is not forthcoming. A citizen also has the right of appeal to the Board of Adjustment.

Lack of understanding or knowledge of city ordinances usually is to blame when problems arise, said Gaddy.

He remembers a homeowner who erected a carport, with the side abutting the property line.

"I had to tell him that it was in violation of the city zoning and building ordinance," said Gaddy, adding that the homeowner had to take down the structure.

The zoning ordinance Gaddy cited in advising the homeowner of the violation is Section XXII -- Side Yard Regulations, in the Zoning and Building Permit Ordinance No. 1193.

Part A of that section of the ordinance relates to dwellings and specifies that the combined width of side yards shall be not less than 20 percent of the width of the lot. However, the combined width need not exceed 12 feet although each side yard must be at least five feet wide.

Included in this section are classifications R-1, one-family residential; R-2, two-family residential; TH, townhouse; MF, multi-family, and MH, mobile home.

Regulations also apply to the front and back yards of lots occupied by structures.

For the front yard, there must be at least 25 feet from the front property line to the front of the building. A backyard should have a depth not less than 20 percent of the depth of the lot, but it need not be more than 30 feet.

The zoning and building ordinance provides regulations for structures in commercial retail, commercial motel, central business, light industrial, heavy industrial and special use.

Hereford's city government enacted a planning and zoning ordinance many years ago. Although the exact year is not certain, there was an ordinance at least as early as 1954. It was amended in 1975 and re-written in 1987.

In the normal course of performing his duties, Gaddy drives many miles on the city streets of Hereford. His eyes naturally focus on construction projects underway.

And, his eyes immediately search out the required cardboard placard provided at the time a building permit is issued.

"I just automatically look for it," said Gaddy. If there isn't one visible, he immediately seeks out the builder or owner.

Arrest closes chapter in murder mystery

By JOHN BROOKS
Managing Editor

The arrest Thursday of Mario Flores Jr. in a bloody September 1990 murder by no means wraps up the case, according to local authorities who have encountered hundreds of dead ends over the past 22 months.

Flores was arrested in Blackfoot, Idaho, by Deaf Smith County Sheriff Joe Brown and Deaf Smith County DA's Investigator David Wagner. Flores is charged with killing Johnny Martinez, 15, on Sept. 2, 1990 in an abandoned farmhouse southwest of Hereford.

Flores is in Deaf Smith County Jail in lieu of $100,000 bond.

Martinez was last seen alive on the night of Sept. 1 in the parking lot of the Hereford Community Center. Of that authorities are sure. There had been a report of gunshots fired in the parking lot that evening, and officials saw Martinez in the parking lot.

What happened next? Authorities aren't sure. They have heard, literally, hundreds of stories from other youths and some adults who were hanging out at the Community Center that night.

Most of those stories differ in some respect. Some, authorities are sure, were outright lies. Other stories may have been the result of young minds trying to block out the brutal events of Sept. 1-2, 1990.

The story, officials think, went something like this:

--Martinez went willingly, or was forcibly taken, from the community center parking lot sometime around midnight.

--Martinez and several others ended up at an abandoned farmhouse outside of Hereford.

--At some point during the night, Martinez was beaten, choked and hit in the head several times with a blunt object, according to the autopsy report by Dr. Sparks Veazey.

---The boy's body was put under an old sofa. The sofa was burned; officials think persons responsible for Martinez's murder were trying to hide the crime.

The boy was reported missing by his grandparents on Sept. 2. Information about Martinez was placed in a missing persons national network.

His body was found by a child walking past the farmhouse a week after the murder.

The big break in the case came when Oregon officials learned about the case. They didn't believe what they were told, so they called Brown to verify there had been a murder. Officials had questioned Flores several times about the killing. After talking to Oregon officials, Brown went to District Attorney Roland Saul.

Brown and Wagner spent almost a week in the Northwest, flying in small planes from Oregon to Idaho to Oregon to Idaho before arresting Flores and bringing him back to Hereford.

Flores' arrest last week is the end of a chapter, authorities said, but not the end of the investigation. Because of evidence gained through sophisticated equipment from the Texas Rangers, investigators are sure more than one person was at the scene. There may have been more than one participant in the crime. Only the persons who were there know for sure, and no one's telling all of the story.

Five kids going to Lions camp

Five Hereford children will be attending the Texas Lions Camp for Crippled Children in Kerrville for two weeks this month.

The camp, located in the Texas Hill Country, has been operated for over 40 years by Lions in Texas. The camp began as "just" for crippled children; programs now run throughout the year for children and adults. Different camps are held for blind, deaf and diabetic children and adults and well as crippled children.

Children attend the two-week camp at no cost. Transportation to and from Kerrville is also provided by Lions. Activities include crafts, swimming, fishing, horseback riding and many other activities. Children (and adults at their camps) are also taught methods to help cope with their different abilities.

Children from Hereford attending the camp this month will be Antonia Esperanza Barrett, Paul Cervantez, Antonio Carriz, Jr., Enicacio Moreno and Monses Cota.

Clinton is public--and very private--figure

By SCOTT McCARTNEY
Associated Press Writer

HOT SPRINGS, Ark. (AP)—It was 1968, the day after the assassination of Martin Luther King Jr. Riots had scorched black sections of Washington, and Bill Clinton, a kid from the segregated South already determined to be a politician, went looking for part of the world he had never seen.

With a hometown chum in tow, the 21-year-old Georgetown University student slipped a Red Cross on his shiny white Buick convertible and delivered provisions to a ghetto church.

"Bill was very quiet the whole time," remembered the friend, Carolyn Staley. "We got out of the car and walked through the broken glass and burning embers. I said I wished I had my camera. And Bill, a tiny bit impatient with me, said 'Why do you need a camera? You'll never forget this.'"

Life for Arkansas Gov. Bill Clinton has seemingly been one preparatory experience after another, each aimed at a specific goal. Feverishly curious, effortlessly outgoing, always in a hurry to do something, Clinton is described by friends as a "sponge for knowledge," a deep-thinker with an engaging, persuasive personality and a smooth-talker with a gift for gab much like his late father, a salesman.

He is well-read, funny, musical, left-handed and prone to sinus infections. He rarely drinks, sleeps little, and he likes peanut-butter-and-banana sandwiches. He is a runner who battles his waistline and a weekend sports fan. He is intensely competitive - "the veins in his neck turn red," one friend said - and he keeps battling until he wins.

More than anything, Bill Clinton is a tireless competitor who obsessively drills for his chosen sport - politics - with a sense of urgency and a need to be liked by others, for pleasing everyone.

Schoolmates wouldn't be surprised Clinton is the governor of Arkansas and running for the Democratic presidential nomination. Classmate Gary Pate wrote in his yearbook, "I know you'll be a number 1 politician some day," and classmate Ronnie Cecil predicted: "One of these days I expect to be watching the news and hearing that you have done something earthshaking."

"Very few things are accidental in Bill's life," said Jim Moore, a roommate at Georgetown. "He's always been very serious about what he wanted to do in life. He's had a clear vision about where he's going. ... (And) he kind of invented his life - visualized his whole life. He's a self-made personality, I really believe that."

Already graying, Clinton has packed a lifetime of politics into his 45 years, more than one-quarter of that time spent as Arkansas governor.

At age 30, he was elected Arkansas attorney general. Two years later, he became the nation's youngest governor. Now, with five terms, he's the nation's longest-serving governor and in the front of the Democratic pack.

As public as he has been about his ambitions, there is an extremely private side to Clinton, a person who never discussed with his closest friends his most painful experiences - his turbulent childhood, his alcoholic stepfather, his half-brother Roger Jr.'s drug conviction, his marriage difficulties.

Ironically, it is his private persona that has been at the center of his public campaign lately, as questions of character - a tabloid tale of an alleged extramarital affair, and suggestions that he pulled strings to avoid the Vietnam draft - have dogged him for more than a month.

Friends and family say his sense of urgency, his passion for political and personal popularity, and his desire to make everyone happy stem from the two determining factors of his childhood: the death of his father before he was born, and the alcoholism his stepfather Roger Clinton, who loved his family but abused his wife, Virginia.

"He has a real sense of time ticking away. He's painfully aware that he's outlived his dad," said Ms. Staley, who has been one of Clinton's closest friends for 30 years. "Bill has been bearing many burdens all by himself very quietly."

Clinton was born William Jefferson Blythe IV, named after the father he never knew. His father was a well-liked equipment salesman from Hope, Ark., who was killed in a car accident four months before Clinton was born.

At age 2, his mother left him with his grandparents while she pursued an advanced nursing degree in anesthesiology, leading to a career that would help provide the best for her son, such as sending him to Catholic school for two years of elementary education.

"Everyone knew he was going to run for president--it just happened sooner than we expected. He's been a very professional and a very good politician for as long as I've known him."

"It wasn't easy, but it was worth it. That's been true most of my life. My life has not been all that bad," Virginia Clinton Kelley said.

When Billy Blythe was 4, Virginia married Roger Clinton, the Buick dealer in Hope. He was a good man, Clinton's mother said, who loved Bill as his own son. In school at Hot Springs, where the family moved after Roger sold his Hope dealership and went into partnership with his brother, the boy was called Billy Clinton, and as a teen-ager, legally changed his name.

But Roger Clinton, who died when Clinton was 21, was also an alcoholic, and his drunken abuse disrupted the family so that a friend often came by the house to take Roger out and drive him around town while Virginia and the boys carried on with homework and bedtime.

Clinton grew up quickly. At age 14, he confronted a raging stepfather, coming through his parents' bedroom door and, already a head taller, declared, "Don't ever strike or lay a hand on my mother ever again. Not ever," according to his mother.

"I was 40 years old by the time I was 16," Clinton has said. And he always kept it hidden from his friends.

"I never knew anything about Roger Sr. being abusive," said David Leopoulos, a Little Rock copier salesman and close friend of Clinton's since both were 8 years old. "I was in that house a zillion hours, and it was a tremendous shock when I read about that."

"He's very private when it comes to intense family topics," Leopoulos said.

Mrs. Kelley said Bill was careful to avoid bringing his home when his stepfather was there - a pattern his friends say they never noticed at the time.

"Bill and Roger probably knew the hours that Roger Clinton would be home," she said. "We held each other together. You have never seen a stronger cooperative than Roger and Bill and I had."

When out on dates, Bill always found an excuse to call home, his mother said, "just making sure everything was all right."

Mrs. Kelley, who has a streak of white through her hair and a weakness for horse racing and the jazzy nightclubs of Hot Springs, continued to work, often returning from the hospital with tales of sorrow and injustice she shared with her son and his friends.

"We'd have a kitchen cabinet right there - we talked about everything," Ms. Staley said. "Already, Bill's wheels were turning."

At high school, Clinton was band leader, had the lead role in the school play - "Gentleman Prefer Blondes," according to band teacher Virgil Spurlin - and he and Ms. Staley both won a trip to Washington through a student government competition. There, in the summer of 1963, they met President Kennedy, and had their pictures taken with him.

"I believe then Bill knew he would be a part of that," Ms. Staley said.

Back home, he and his friends lived an "American Graffiti" kind of childhood, without any pranks or public pratfalls or drinking or wrongdoing. Friends say they can't think of a single time Clinton broke rules or got into trouble.

They gathered daily for music and sometimes puzzle races and just talk. Sometimes, Clinton would disappear into thought, so deeply that he wouldn't hear his friends' questions. "Carolyn and I used to joke about it. She'd call me up and say, 'Want to go over and watch Bill think?'" Leopoulos said.

Smitten with Washington and public service, Clinton applied to only one school, Georgetown, and was accepted. He roomed with Tom Campbell, now an airline pilot based in California, who remembers at their first meeting, Clinton asked for his vote for freshman class president.

"He always thought politics could make a difference," Campbell said.

Said another roommate, Christopher Ashby: "It was obvious in those days he couldn't stand for people not to like him, and he would go to great ends to win them over. He wants to be liked by everyone and he works hard at it. If you really want to get his goat, tell him somebody criticized him."

CLINTON

Clinton's ambition at the time was to get the best education he could and then return to Arkansas. He won a Rhodes scholarship and went to Oxford, England, then enrolled at Yale Law School, where he met Hillary Rodham, an urban, sophisticated feminist from Chicago who had graduated at the top of her Wellesley College class.

Clinton returned to Arkansas in 1973 to practice and teach law, and launch his political career with an unsuccessful bid for Congress the next year. He married Hillary in 1975, and a year later was elected attorney general; two years later governor.

"Everyone knew he was going to run (for president) - it just happened sooner than we expected," said Ashby, now a New York banking executive. "He's been a very professional and very good politician for as long as I've known him."

In 1984, personal crisis again struck the family. Arkansas State Police Col. Tommy Goodwin informed Clinton that his half-brother

Astronauts have busy day on July 4th

SPACE CENTER, Houston (AP) - On a holiday often reserved for yard work on Earth, astronaut Green Baker monitored a miniature greenhouse intended to grow crops in space.

Columbia's five-man, two-woman crew celebrated the Fourth of July 184 miles above the Earth on a 13-day scientific mission, NASA's longest shuttle trip yet.

Crew members hung a well-traveled American flag inside Spacelab in honor of the holiday. Commander Richard N. Richards carried the flag on each of his three shuttle flights.

"On behalf of all the engineers and scientists here ... we'd like to wish all of you a happy Fourth of July," payload controllers at NASA's Marshall Space Flight center in Huntsville, Ala., told astronauts Eugene Trinh and Carl Meade.

Shuttle astronauts never have spent more than 10 days and 21 hours in space at a time. Columbia's astronauts, who blasted off June 25 and are scheduled to land Wednesday, will pass that record Monday.

While Trinh and Meade performed various experiments early today,

Baker monitored Astroculture. The miniature greenhouse carries no plants this time, but is being checked to see how well it distributes water and nutrients.

Baker also photographed a barium cloud released by a small rocket NASA launched from Puerto Rico. The releases are part of a project to study the ionosphere and Earth's magnetic fields. The glowing gas clouds appear green at first, then turn purple.

Trinh today finished several days of experiments to measure the effects of temperature differences in liquids. He overfilled a container with silicone oil laced with tiny particles that glowed under laser light, then heated the oil so investigators could observe the particles' circular patterns.

Researchers hope to learn what causes the movements to help them create better high-tech crystals and metals, for uses such as computer chips.

Also today, astronaut Lawrence DeLucas climbed into a waist-high vacuum sack for a four-hour soak.

NASA hopes the depressurization treatment, which forces blood into the legs, will help astronauts cope better when they leave space, where fluids rise into the upper body.

On Friday, DeLucas, the crew's crystal expert, set up protein crystal growth experiments.

The crystals DeLucas activated included interferon, an antiviral substance used to treat AIDS; a protein that regulates blood pressure; and a serum that transports iron from the liver to immature red blood cells.

Researchers hope to develop better drugs with Columbia's protein crystals. Crystals produced in space are bigger and purer than those cultivated on the ground, where gravity hampers growth.

The crew also periodically is turning Columbia so the shuttle's belly and tires are pointed toward the sun. Air pressure in the main landing gear tires is slightly lower than expected, and flight controllers want to warm the tires to increase the pressure.

Except for those heating runs, Columbia has been flying tail-toward-Earth, its most stable position, to protect the sensitive crystal growth experiments, which could be ruined by jolts.

Meanwhile, an Explorer satellite launched Friday from Vandenberg Air Force Base, Calif., reached an orbit of 350 miles to 441 miles above Earth. The orbit was slightly higher than planned and should extend the satellite's life, said mission manager Gilberto Colon.

The Solar, Anomalous and Magnetospheric Particle Explorer satellite (SAMPEX) is supposed to study the kind of matter that formed the sun and planets 4.6 billion years ago.

SAMPEX was the first Explorer launched in NASA's Small Explorer Project, which aims to send small spacecraft on scientifically valuable missions quickly at relatively low cost.

"The satellite soon will collect matter from the sun and interstellar space that's just as important scientifically as a rock from the moon," said program manager David Gilman.

Transplanted Yankee Meno marks first year

AUSTIN (AP) - Texas Education Commissioner Lionel "Skip" Meno knows firsthand what it's like when schools fail to reach a student. He also knows the difference just one teacher can make.

The transplanted Yankee, who moved from New York state a year ago to take Texas' top public education job, was an 11-year-old sixth-grader before a teacher figured out he couldn't read and taught him how.

"They tell me that I faked it well," said Meno, who adds that behavior problems and his family's frequent moves helped keep people from picking up on his inability.

Meno said he has trouble distinguishing sounds and was fortunate to have an "exceptional" teacher who taught him by using flashcards. But he hasn't forgotten the hurt of his early school years.

"It's very painful, because you really think that it's just that you're not as smart as everybody else," Meno said.

At his own first teaching job, Meno worked with teen-agers who hadn't earned high school credit - including one whom he taught to read after a year of work.

"What I found was that an incredible number of those youngsters were very capable - it's just that the system hadn't worked for them," Meno said.

CLINTON

Roger, 10 years younger, had become a focus of a cocaine trafficking investigation.

"He was obviously emotionally upset, and he said handle it routinely, like any other case," Goodwin said.

Clinton didn't warn Roger, or tell his mother, or anyone else except possibly his wife, friends say. Roger was arrested on drug charges, pleaded guilty and served 15 months in prison, then went through drug rehabilitation with his mother and brother.

What strikes some friends most about Clinton is that he has hardly changed at all over the years - still the same Clinton they knew in high school, or same Clinton they knew in college.

"I was overseas for many years and then went to his last inaugural. I was taken by the fact that he was just the same - in all his faults and all his abilities, he was exactly the same. And my reaction was positive to that," Ashby said.

Clinton, said Moore, one of the roommates and now an investment banker, "strikes you as the kind of guy who is too smooth to be very deep, but the fact is he does his homework and is probably better prepared than anyone. He can ambush people who see a glad-handing, good-looking guy and think he's not very deep. That's a major mistake."

As questions rose about Clinton's marriage and his draft record this year, his friends saw perhaps the greatest public crisis of Clinton's public life. On the surface, they say, everything came easy to Clinton - grades, popularity, achievement.

In New Hampshire last month, Clinton and Leopoulos had a heart-to-heart talk so personal it almost surprised his friend of 37 years.

"He asked me some pretty tough questions about himself," Leopoulos said. "He asked me if I thought he was too slick. I thought about it, and then I said, 'Bill, be yourself. Don't go out there and try to do anything different. When people meet you, they see it in your eyes and they feel it in your handshake.'"

"You can't fake what he is."

Making schools work for all students has been the focus for Meno, who came to Texas from a similar administrative position in New York. His refrain is that the mark of success for a school program is whether students are learning what they must to succeed in the modern world.

Meno touts the importance of teachers, citing the need for competitive salaries and more time for staff development.

And he believes in giving schools as much flexibility as possible to develop and adjust programs so that they work for students, encouraging them to apply for waivers from state regulations.

While acknowledging that change can be difficult, Meno says some educators were looking for the opportunity. Many others are testing the idea, watching to see if the chance for flexibility continues, he says.

"What I was asked to do was open some doors," Meno said. "And what I've found is as fast I can get them open, people are going through them."

As part of his effort, Meno has recommended - and the State Board of Education has approved - revamping the standardized testing program to test students in fewer grades but more subjects; phasing out graduation credit for below-level high school courses; and reorganizing the Texas Education Agency to send more money and positions to regional education centers.

Meno's emphasis on student achievement, and his efforts to involve educators in the reform process, get high marks from education groups and board members.

The commissioner's message is, "We are here for the kids. Everything else is secondary," said Brad Duggan, executive director of the Texas Elementary Principals and Supervisors Association.

Education Board member Will Davis of Austin said, "He's got good vision, he's got good priorities, and he's moving with dispatch."

approved by the Education Board.

"I like what I see," said board member Esteban Sosa of San Antonio. "Now ... we need to see the results."

"I have tremendous confidence in the people of Texas that, in the end, they're going to do the right thing for the children. ...The potential is here in Texas to have an absolutely first-class system of education."
--Lionel "Skip" Meno, education commissioner

"For the first time in many years, educators have a strong sense that meaningful, lasting change is possible in our schools," adds Gov. Ann Richards, who appointed Meno.

Some, however, are mindful that it will take time to judge the effect of Meno's work, such as proposals make substantial improvement in student achievement over several years. And in the effort to move education ahead, Meno said it's critical that lawmakers finally fix the school finance system.

Three school finance laws have been thrown out by the Texas Supreme Court in recent years, leaving school districts in a state of uncertainty about their longterm funding. Meno says that lack of stability hurts.

Lawmakers must develop a new plan by next June, and top elected leaders have told school districts there won't be any new state money for public education in the next legislative session.

But Meno said there must be more funds. Texas is among the top of the states in the expectations it sets for students, he said, but "depending on whose figures you use, 35th or 40th in terms of funding."

"If there is no new money put into education, then there will be no improvement in the results," he said.

Meno acknowledged, however, that a funding solution must be politically and financially possible, as well as educationally sound. He said he would look at ways to increase public awareness about the issue.

"I have tremendous confidence in the people of Texas that, in the end, they're going to do the right thing for the children," he said.

That attitude holds true across the board.

"When I first got here, people said well, once I got to know Texas, my optimism would drop off. Quite the contrary has happened," Meno said. "In fact, if anything, I'm more optimistic. The potential is here in Texas to have an absolutely first-class system of education."

ZONING AND THE LANDOWNER

Most communities have zoning laws to control the type development and construction in the area. However zoning is even more important to buyers of land who are planning to build. Most communities have zoning laws that make it impossible for you to build without a local building permit. For instance one community may require a specific amount of acreage for a one family home. If you purchase a smaller lot than the zoning ordinance requires, you may not be able to build the house you want, on the lot you own. Also, look into the type of construction that is allowable in your zoning area. You may have long term plans to build a second floor apartment, possibly for another member of your family or rental purposes. If the property is in a one family residential zone, you may be out that possibility. There is no need to worry about these types of problems if you check with a local Realtor first. We have the answers to your questions about all forms of real estate.

I love living in Hereford, Texas, and working for a community newspaper. There is not a doubt in my mind that, had I made a different career choice, I could be working for a big metropolitan daily newspaper. The main reason that life is worth living in Deaf Smith County, Texas, is people. Neighbors care about each other.

That point really came home to me this week. I had a little health scare at the Great American Car Race program Tuesday morning, with all the symptoms pointing to a heart problem. Some quick checks revealed no bad problems and we were back at work Thursday. Maybe it was the heat or indigestion but we'll undergo some more tests to make sure.

We appreciate all the people who expressed a concern about our health. The telephone lines at The Brand office were kept busy Tuesday and Wednesday with folks calling to see how we were doing. I guess we're all a little surprised when we are the object of caring and concern, but I see it happen almost every day when other folks around the community have a problem.

That's what I like about working for a community newspaper. People are not statistics; they are our neighbors. You can preach about the free press and how we protect your freedoms, but the real value of a community newspaper lies in bringing the community together.

I like the small community newspaper because we devote most of our space to good news. We see all the good things our kids do, and that they're learning something in school. We report all the births, the marriages and we show you that some couples even stay married for golden wedding anniversaries.

We show you that local stores have merchandise you need and it's on sale this week. We report what is going on in all our local governing bodies and how it affects you. We bring the community together by providing information.

And, we love working on a community newspaper because you tell us what you really think. When there's a bad error in the paper, I hate to go to lunch because I know I'm going to hear about it! At least we know you care.

We love this work because the Red Cross chapter brings us a homemade cake just to let us know they appreciate the publicity we gave on one of their projects.

This is a great job because you think we can solve all the problems. We can't, of course, but we usually know who you should call. Sometimes, getting the newspaper involved does help solve a problem and it makes us feel good to serve in that role.

These are some of the reasons I love working for your community newspaper. With the good wishes you have extended this week, it just seemed like a good time to let you know.

In our last column, we commented on a couple of speakers we heard at the Texas Press Association convention in Austin. Lionel "Skip" Meno, Texas education commissioner, was another interesting speaker on the program. He outlined two things he wants to accomplish.

The first is to bring control of a campus back to the principal. Called "site-based management," the concept is for the principal of a high school, junior high or elementary school to have control over how funds are spent, teachers hired and fired, text books used and other items involved in running a school. The administrative staff would only be involved in items that affected the entire district.

Another major change Meno will recommend to the Legislature is in evaluating the performance of teachers. Currently, teachers and principals are evaluated in a number of subjective areas and he calls this "process" evaluation--how well the teacher uses the bureaucratic processes.

Meno proposes that administrators and teachers be evaluated by student performance. In other words, the better the students do, the better the educators are rated. He called this a radical new idea for the education system, but private business has used this evaluation system for 400 years. Businesses and employees are judged by the quality of product that is produced.

Just like everyone involved in public education, Meno also made a pitch for spending more tax dollars to solve the education problems. Yet, almost every study made has shown that money spent per student has little effect on academic performance.

90 YEARS AGO

July 4, 1902--Fourth of July today...it is to be hoped that our citizens will not fail to exploit the natural advantages of our town while among distant friends on the Fourth. ...How many people who are celebrating the holiday today stop to realize that this day is set apart to celebrate our glorious freedom? It is too true that many citizens utilize the day for a "glorious" drunk, instead of observing it as an anniversary of our independence. ...The Hereford College will open its doors for the admission of students on the 10th of September in the new, progressive and beautiful little city of Hereford.

Tune in campaign..on talk shows

By WALTER R. MEARS
AP Special Correspondent
WASHINGTON (AP) - In this talk-show campaign, check local listings for the candidate of your choice. These days, there's usually a one-in-three chance of finding a

White House contestant on television. So there was President Bush, live from the Rose Garden, with questions from an audience chosen among White House tourists. A day earlier it was Democrat Bill Clinton, taking telephoned questions for an hour on network television. And that was the morning after Ross Perot's 90-minute stint on late night TV, on a 10-city satellite hookup, a network version of his planned presidential electronic town meetings.

only to hear him say he was certainly glad to see a Democrat blow something besides an election."

Campaign television, of course, is nothing new. Free campaign television, on the networks, in this volume, is. These are not brief or edited interviews; some are call-ins so spontaneous that a lewd questioner managed to get on the air with Perot.

And they're not risk-free. A questioner called Perot "a pint-sized bully." A self-described supporter asked Clinton about his alleged affairs, saying he should "just skip any weasel words and give us a direct answer." Arsenio Hall, whose late-night show the White House ruled out, said he didn't want Bush anyhow - "My ratings are higher than yours."

But televised talk does give the candidates a route around the news media, directly to the voters. Campaigners have sought that for years, none more ardently than Richard Nixon, who ran the first scripted-for-television campaign in 1968.

It featured 10 regional telecasts in which Nixon answered questions from citizen panels selected by the campaign, which paid for the TV time. Republican studio audiences applauded his performances; reporters were excluded.

Nixon waged a traditional road-show campaign as well, with events often timed for local television deadlines. He even tried TV comedy, turning up on the television variety show "Laugh In" for its trademark one-liner, "Sock it to me."

The rallies, rubber chicken dinners, motorcades and handshaking tours of the traveling candidate remain the form of presidential campaign. But a candidate reaches more voters on a television show - even one with low ratings - than he can hope to contact personally.

And this time, so far, it's free for the major candidate asking. Indeed, Perot's undeclared campaign began on CNN's "Larry King Live," on Feb. 20. That's when he said he'd run if people put him on the presidential ballot as an independent.

"I really hadn't thought it through until Larry really pinned me down there at the end of the program, and I defined a scenario and the rest is history," Perot said on ABC, recalling what he said on CNN.

Sparkle of new American century

Fourth of July fireworks around the country this week will once again symbolize the bright flash of hope and promise set against the backdrop of a dark, night sky. We can rightly celebrate the declaration that Soviet Communism is dead, that our country is at peace and that our nation can now look to a world of hope.

Europe. When the Berlin Wall came down and the Soviet Union collapsed, free people knew which country's example they would use to chart their future: they freely chose America's example of freedom.

For everything we have accomplished in more than 200 years of history, we should be both proud and thankful. Margaret Thatcher, former prime minister of England, recognized that the United States is unique because it is the only country whose very existence was based on an idea, not on conquest or wealth. The idea is freedom. We live free in a country where we can pursue our own dreams. Yet we have not just dreamed, we have acted.

Yet the enemies of freedom still wait for their chance to steal an opportunity. It was just two years ago this month when Iraq made preparations to steal across Kuwait and threaten our energy supplies in the Saudi oil fields. Last year, Communists took advantage of Mikhail Gorbachev's weekend vacation and seized control in the Soviet Union. It was only their previous inoculation of freedom that kept the Soviet people from allowing Communism to reassert itself. This year, the peoples of Yugoslavia struggle over the right to live free. The struggle for freedom now occurs differently than it did a generation ago.

By the willingness of our young men and women to preserve the cause of freedom on foreign shores, America has preserved its own freedom. America's willingness to stand up for the freedom of others has exported the idea of freedom and democracy to many other lands. America has been a beacon of liberty to light the way for countless millions around the world who would be lost and without hope if there were not an America.

By keeping the idea of freedom alive in other nations, we have proven the need for our existence to a world that otherwise might know only about following dictators. By living free, we have shown that this idea of freedom is worth keeping alive. Our example has been followed by peoples all over

Because the Soviet Union has collapsed, U.S. spending for intelligence and defense programs will decline. What we must determine as a nation is whether we will provide the resources for a well-planned, well-managed transition to the capabilities we require for the future. The alternative is to close our eyes and our ears to the very real dangers that remain in this post-cold-war world. As the fireworks flash across the darkened skies this Fourth of July, we should keep our eyes open for the wonderful opportunities we have. But to see those opportunities, we must always remain vigilant.

The largest denomination bill now being issued is the $100, but bills worth as much as $10,000 are believed still to be in private hands.

Escape from Vietnam pays off for professor

By CHIP BROWN
Associated Press Writer
LUBBOCK (AP) - Texas Tech plant genetics professor Henry Nguyen now researches agriculture because he loves it.
He used to study it to stay alive. Nguyen, 38, was a student in Vietnam through the bloodiest days of the war-ravaged Asian country in the late 1960s and early 1970s.
Passing difficult tests to remain in school and avoid military service, Nguyen ultimately escaped Vietnam April 30, 1975, the day Saigon fell to the communist-led North Vietnamese.
Fleeing in a fishing boat with only $10, the clothes on his back and without a goodbye to his family, Nguyen traveled to Singapore and the Philippines before landing in a refugee camp in Pennsylvania.
He worked at McDonald's and in a towel factory as a janitor in Millersburg, Pa., until the factory manager encouraged him to resume his agriculture studies at Pennsylvania State University in late 1976.

Without any transcripts from his days studying agriculture at the University of Cantho in the Mekong Delta, Nguyen took and passed exams for advanced credit.
Translating his professor's lectures with a Vietnamese-English dictionary, Nguyen eventually earned his bachelor's degree in agronomy and later earned his doctorate at the University of Missouri in 1982.
Today, Nguyen is an associate professor in his final year of a $500,000 research grant he won after becoming the first U.S. crop scientist to receive the Presidential Young Investigator Award from the National Science Foundation.
Nguyen, who has helped turn Texas Tech's plant stress and water conservation program into one of the country's finest, says he owes it all to a country that allows success if you seek it.

"I wanted to make a living without being on welfare and have the respect of the people I work with," Nguyen says from his office lined with certificates and honors for his research. "That was all I was asking."
"But in America if you have a dream and are willing to work hard, you can make it."
Rick Vierling is one of three students who have earned their doctorate under Nguyen and walked right into a top research job.
"Henry was driven to succeed before he left Vietnam," says Vierling, who works as program director of the genetics lab for Indiana Crop Improvement in Purdue University's department of agronomy.

"But I am sure being a refugee has made him work extra hard - harder than most. Henry believes his students should work as hard as he does. You are going to benefit from working under him no matter what."
Nguyen, who became a U.S. citizen in 1981, says he is worried more and more students are taking education for granted.
"In my case education was life or death," Nguyen said. "I watched a lot of my friends die in the war because they didn't pass the tests to stay in school."
"My case is the extreme case," Nguyen says. "I don't think a lot of the students today see education as a privilege. This is their future. Mom and Dad may leave them a lot of money, but that will pass. No one can take away your education."

Nguyen says his thirst for knowledge came from his parents, whom he talked to last month for the first time in 17 years thanks to recently established long distance phone lines in Vietnam.
"We had written letters back and forth, but that was all we were able to do," Nguyen said. "It meant a lot to hear their voices."
Nguyen is leading cutting-edge research in the genetic development of crops such as wheat, corn and grain sorghum to thrive in drought conditions.
"Because of what Henry has overcome I would say that he has a very special kind of zeal with regard to conducting research that will benefit people all over the world," said Sam Curl, dean of the College of Agricultural Sciences at Texas Tech. "He has tremendous drive to be a world-class scientist."

Award, an honor he said epitomized his relocation to America.
"I still have the envelope the announcement of the award came in. The return address says simply 'White House, Washington, D.C.'" he said with pride.
In 1990, he won the Young Crop Scientist Award from the Crop Science Society of America.
Surprisingly, chemical engineering, not agriculture, was Nguyen's first choice of study in college back in Vietnam.
"I didn't pass the tests to go into chemical engineering," Nguyen says with a chuckle. "I passed the agriculture test. So I figured if I wanted to stay out of the fighting I better keep going with agriculture."

Big quakes trigger small ones

LOS ANGELES (AP) - Southern California's magnitude-7.4 earthquake amazed scientists by prompting a sharp increase in the number of smaller quakes around three volcanoes and other areas hundreds of miles to the north.
The Landers quake, one of two powerful jolts that struck Sunday, set off "a sudden surge of triggered seismic activity" in northern California, the U.S. Geological Survey said in a statement Friday.
The wide-ranging seismic activity was remarkable because the quake's epicenter in the Mojave Desert was 530 miles south of the Mount Shasta volcano, where tremors were triggered, said Geological Survey scientist Paul Reasenber.

The magnitude-7.1 Loma Prieta quake, which killed 63 people in the San Francisco Bay area in 1989, prompted other quakes only about 65 miles from its epicenter, he said.
Scientists are developing theories to explain how the jolt could have affected underground stresses over such a large area.

Increased shaking at the eastern side of the Sierra Nevada in Long Valley started only eight minutes after the Landers quake, the Geological Survey said.
Long Valley is a 10-mile-by-20-mile crater, known as a caldera, created by a huge volcanic explosion 730,000 years ago. The resort town of Mammoth Lakes sits inside the caldera.
Increased seismic activity also was recorded at northern California's Mount Lassen volcano during Sunday's quake.

The Landers quake didn't cause increased quake activity along the San Andreas Fault in northern California, the agency said.
President Bush declared disaster areas in the two areas hit last week by the Landers quake, in San Bernardino County, and a 6.5 quake that struck a few hours later near Big Bear in Riverside County.
The quakes killed a 3-year-old child; injured more than 400 people and caused at least $92 million damage.
Although water service was restored Thursday to about 25,000 people in the Yucca Valley area, up to 10,000 residents remained without water Friday, officials said.

"One time, I asked the man doing the work if he had a permit and he told me the owner had it," Gaddy said about an experience. "When I talked to the owner, he said he thought the builder was supposed to get one."
When the inspector believes a violation has occurred, he sends notification to the owner, explaining the violation and asking that changes be made to conform with the city ordinance.
In some cases, the owner may be required to remove a structure or stop work on one being constructed.
The owner has recourse, though, through a provision of the ordinance. An appeal may be made to the board of adjustment. Certain rules apply for appeals, also.
A resident dissatisfied with the board's decision may look to a court of law for redress.
With hindsight, a resident who has run afoul of the planning and zoning city ordinance can see that a phone call or visit to the city inspector's office could have allayed the problem.
City personnel explain regulations. The complete ordinance can be purchased for the nominal sum of $5. It could be money well spent.

USA gets revenge on Puerto Rico

By BILL BARNARD
AP Basketball Writer
PORTLAND, Ore. (AP) - Team USA took advantage of its first chance to pay back the world for a five-year losing streak.

Playing for the first time against a team responsible for continuing the string of defeats in international competition, the new-look U.S. basketball team routed Puerto Rico 119-81 Friday night behind Karl Malone's 22 points.

Eleven of the 12 Puerto Ricans who beat the United States 73-68 last summer in the semifinals of the Pan American Games were here for the rematch at the Tournament of the Americas.

But 11 NBA players are now on the U.S. squad that qualified for the Olympics with four blowout victories. Only Christian Laettner was present for the 1991 defeat in Havana.

Brazil, the team that started the U.S. losing streak in 1987, met Venezuela in the other tournament semifinal. All four of Friday night's semifinalists already have qualified for the Olympics starting this month in Barcelona.

The tournament final will be held Sunday.

Magic Johnson scored 16 points and Clyde Drexler 15 for Team USA. Scottie Pippen had 10 points and 11 assists.

With Larry Bird sidelined by a sore back for the fourth consecutive game and John Stockton questionable for the Olympics because of a broken leg, the Americans again started slowly, leading just 10-8 five minutes into the game.

It was 14-8 when Malone replaced Charles Barkley after he was knocked to the floor into an end zone camera, cutting the back of his head. Malone made the free throws, the first of his 16 points in the final 13:05 of a half that ended with Team USA ahead 62-34.

Chris Mullin, hitting better than 50 percent of his 3-point attempts in the tournament, increased his team-leading 3-point total to 13 in five games with two in the first half. Mullin scored all of his 12 points in the first 20 minutes.

Jose Ortiz, a former teammate of Malone and Stockton on the Utah Jazz, scored 18 points for Puerto Rico. Jerome Mincy, a former college player at Alabama-Birmingham who scored 22 points in the game at Havana, was held to three.

U.S. coach Chuck Daly again tried the two-center lineup to start the second half, and Patrick Ewing and David Robinson combined for 10 points in a 16-5 spurt that made the score 77-39 with 15 minutes left.

Puerto Rico then settled down to play the United States even, 42-42, the rest of the way. It was too late to affect the outcome, but it enabled the Puerto Ricans to play the closest game against Team USA in the tournament.

The previous closest game was 128-87 against Argentina.

It's Agassi vs. Ivanovic in Wimbledon men's final

WIMBLEDON, England (AP) - Andre Agassi swept aside John McEnroe 6-4, 6-2, 6-3 today to reach the Wimbledon final for the first time.

He will face Goran Ivanovic, who defeated Pete Sampras 6-7 (4-7), 7-6 (7-5), 6-4, 6-2 in the other semifinal.

McEnroe, playing in perhaps his last Wimbledon, couldn't cope with Agassi's crushing service returns and pinpoint passing shots.

The match lasted just one hour and 51 minutes. After McEnroe hit a backhand volley long on match point, the two embraced warmly at the net, with Agassi patting his opponent on the cheek.

McEnroe's serve let him down against Agassi at crucial moments. He doubled faulted twice on break points in the first set, and double faulted at deuce in the first game of the second set as Agassi broke.

But the key factor was Agassi's ability to step into the ball early and return to McEnroe's feet or whip it past him as he tried to rush the net.

On the few occasions when an exchange developed, the point usually ended with Agassi firing passing shots, cross-court or down the line, some kissing the chalk.

Yankees rally to beat Rangers

By The Associated Press
The New York Yankees aren't obsessive about these comeback victories. They'd just as soon take early leads and coast.

But it's more than simply an accident that the Yankees have won 22 of their 39 wins this season in come-from-behind fashion, including Friday night's 9-6 win over the Texas Rangers.

"Comebacks are not the idea," said Yankees manager Buck Showalter. "But it's been pretty good for us lately."

Danny Tartabull capped a six-run seventh inning rally with a three-run homer as the Yanks overcame a 5-2 deficit with a 12-hit attack.

"It doesn't surprise me," Showalter said. "It's not a position you want to be in. Once you're behind, you can't flounder in self-pity. You've got to do something about it."

The comeback came on the heels of Wednesday's rally from a 6-0 deficit as the Yanks overtook the Kansas City Royals, 7-6.

Don Mattingly added a two-run single and Mel Hall had an RBI single as the Yankees sent nine men to the plate in the seventh. Mattingly went 3-for-5 to extend his hitting streak to 15 games.

Pat Kelly started the rally with a bunt single, Andy Stankiewicz singled and Kelly scored on Hall's single. Hall went 3-for-5 with two RBIs, including a run-scoring double in the eighth.

A fielding error by Ranger shortstop Dickie Thon on Roberto Kelly's slowly hit ground ball loaded the bases off loser Jose Guzman, 7-6.

Mattingly lined reliever Kenny Rogers' first pitch for two more runs, then Tartabull lifted a 1-2 pitch into a cross-wind that barely cleared the wall in right-center for his seventh homer of the year.

"We're not trying to do that," Tartabull said. "We have the ability to do that because we have guys who can swing the bat. When you have so many in the lineup, someone's going to get to you. The pitcher's going to make a mistake and the batter's going to be ready for that."

The big seventh inning handed the victory to Melido Perez, 8-6, who yielded nine hits over six innings.

"Melido caught a needed break tonight," Showalter said. "It was good to see him perk up as we scored those runs."

Guzman was breezing along with a 5-2 lead and a five-hitter heading into the seventh before the Yankees erupted. His 12 strikeouts matched a career high and equaled the most in a major league game this season, set previously by Boston's Roger Clemens.

In other games, it was Toronto 10, California 1; Milwaukee 7, Kansas City 3; Baltimore 6, Minnesota 1; Chicago 2, Boston 1 in 10 innings; Cleveland 8, Oakland 1; and Detroit 6, Seattle 4 in the first game of a doubleheader, and Seattle 11, Detroit 0 in the second.

Dodgers' rookie debuts with shutout

By The Associated Press
A doubleheader sweep and the pitching of Pedro Astacio have the Los Angeles Dodgers thinking the next week might not be so bad after all.

Astacio pitched a three-hitter and struck out 10 in his major league debut as Los Angeles swept the first of four doubleheaders in a six-day span, beating Philadelphia 2-0 in the nightcap Friday at Dodger Stadium.

In the opener, Bob Ojeda tossed the Dodgers' first complete game in 23 tries for a seven-hit, 5-1 victory.

The Dodgers' doubleheader run, caused by four postponed games during the civil unrest that began in South Central LA on April 29, concludes with three consecutive twinbills against Montreal beginning on Monday.

Elsewhere in the NL it was Cincinnati 7, Pittsburgh 3; Atlanta 3, Chicago 0; San Diego 6, Montreal 4; and San Francisco 4, St. Louis 1. Houston at New York was postponed by rain.

Reds 7, Pirates 3
At Three Rivers Stadium, Chris Sabo had a three-run homer for one of Cincinnati's nine extra-base hits and Tim Belcher pitched out of constant trouble.

Pittsburgh stranded nine runners in the first six innings and twice left the bases loaded in losing their second straight in the weekend matchup of NL division leaders.

Cincinnati gave Belcher (8-6) a three-run lead in the first against 10-game winner Randy Tomlin (10-5). Billy Hatcher reached on a force-play grounder and Barry Larkin had one of the Reds' season-high six doubles ahead of Sabo's eighth homer.

Braves 3, Cubs 0
At Atlanta Stadium, Tom Glavine pitched a five-hitter for his major league-leading fifth shutout and became the NL's first 12-game winner.

Dallas man brings sports to projects

By CATHY HARASTA
The Dallas Morning News
DALLAS (AP)—Here was Speedy. And Nokie. And Hit Man. And Money Mike. They stood outside the Turner Courts housing project, a group of pre-teen boys embarking on their daily ritual. It began at 5 p.m., when the man, William "Mookie" Smith, handed out pairs of red boxing gloves.

This would be the dinner hour in many parts of Dallas. But in this neighborhood, bordering Rochester Park in South Dallas, the red sparring gloves are more reliable than mealtime. Smith's sports programs ease some of the emptiness near the park called "Bonton" by the locals. Smith, a former Wilmer-Hutchins High School basketball star, said his goal is to use sports to reach the kids before the gangs and drug dealers do. Here in Bonton's shadow, Smith must be fast, flexible and quick-thinking.

Smith, however, rarely relies on his still-sharp basketball skills to get the attention of children in this low-income setting. In fact, he contends that setting basketball stardom did him few favors. Instead, Smith stresses the parallels between strong study habits and progress in individual sports such as boxing.

When his dark-blue Jeep Cherokee pulled up on a recent day, children ran to meet Smith. One little boy showed off his right shin, which had been grazed by a bullet during a drive-by shooting. A small girl toddled up to Smith with a "cake" she had made from sand and twigs.

Smith, 30, had a wide smile for each child. And a nickname. "It makes them feel special," he said. "At first, they thought I was the police. It took them time to trust me."

Speedy, 10, whose name is Greg Randel, stood close to Smith as he handed out the 14-ounce gloves. In Speedy's eyes, all glints of purely childish glee appeared long extinguished. His gaze stayed locked on the gloves. When Smith took a step, Speedy moved to stay close to the man.

Since Smith took an interest in Speedy's development, the boy has won numerous Junior Olympic boxing awards, Smith said.

"Speedy is my recruiting tool for something positive," Smith said. "What I do is try to fill the same needs as a gang. Most of these kids have never known their fathers. Many of the mothers are drug addicts. Nobody ever made these kids feel important until the gang, where you have to live up to your billing. Peer pressure got them in, and it's going to take peer pressure to get them out."

Smith directed the Boys & Girls Clubs of Greater Dallas Inc. storefront facility at Turner Courts from the fall of 1990 until April, when he resigned to launch Young Athletes in Action. Smith said the venture combines sports with practical life skills and community service.

"In those kids, Mookie sees himself," said Webb, who first played basketball at the West Dallas housing project in which he and Smith grew up. "Mookie could always attract kids. I patterned my basketball game after his. He was probably the best athlete in all sports, the guy who could play with guys two or three years older. Mookie was our idol."

Though Smith no longer works for the Boys Clubs organization, he said he owes the kids his continued presence at Turner Courts, a Dallas Housing Authority facility. He crams as many as 20 kids into his Jeep most Saturdays. Then they are off to compete in a Junior Olympic track meet or a regional box-off.

Smith said he makes it a point to supervise the children until a responsible party arrives home. He sometimes has a long wait.

"I've seen him out here at midnight," said Dallas police Officer Kelsey Hines, who patrols Turner Courts.

"I wish there were more like him," said Phillip Teague, who works for the Dallas Housing Authority and visits Turner Courts. "This is the man down in this area."

Inside the shabby apartment that serves as the Boys Club storefront extension, two tall shelves of trophies testify to the achievements of Smith's programs. He worked with several hundred young athletes during his tenure. They won more than 40 trophies in sports, including boxing, track, baseball and football.

"This one is my favorite," Smith said as he ceremoniously straightened one of the large trophies on a high shelf. It was the 1991 Southwestern District Box-off Junior Olympic Team Championship trophy. "These kids have delivered."

Smith finds their turf is far more threatening than the urban Dallas of his childhood.

"When I was in high school, everyone wanted to play basketball," said Smith, an All-Metro and All Greater Dallas first-team selection at guard his senior year in 1979. "Now, when a young drug dealer pulls up in a parking lot, he draws a bigger crowd than a basketball game. It's combat."

Smith, 6-0 and trim, conducts his daily sparring practices under a huge tree across the street from Turner Courts. On rainy days, the kids work out with a speed bag in the storefront apartment's kitchenette. The speed bag's frame looks skeletally over an old gas stove.

Smith had urged the Boys Clubs to build a recreation center in the small playground where the tree's shade serves as his boxing gym. For now, the tree and the kitchenette will have to do.

"We ad-lib, and we go for it," Smith said cheerfully. "You have to be creative. You have to free-lance. The area is starving for something."

Smith said he encourages the athletes to consider their individual strengths. The last thing he wants is to set them up to fail, he said.

"Track and boxing just take guts and heart," he said. "In track, if you're not fast, there's always the long jump. In boxing, there's the power punch. I tell them to try it for a week. The appeal of sports is not what it used to be in the ghetto because of the money a kid can make selling drugs."

The ritual of a sports workout gives structure and stability to the lives of kids such as Speedy, Smith said.

The kids caught Smith at his own game on a recent afternoon. He was playing pick-up basketball. He still had his shooting touch.

"Most of them never knew I was a basketball player," Smith said. "I want people to know Mookie as something other than an athlete."

Smith said he does not regret that basketball did not work out for him.

"When I was a jock, I took the world for granted because I was a superstar, scoring almost 30 points a game in high school. My attitude was, 'You owed me.' Probably the best thing that happened to me was the end of my basketball career," Smith said.

It ended on a flat note, after his mother's death and a series of recurrent injuries during his college playing days.

Smith, who lacks 12 credit hours for his degree in health and physical education from the University of North Texas, said he drew some interest from free-agent scouts and a few offers to play in Europe. But the game's old thrill was gone for him.

Smith said he gained a sense of direction from Navarro College basketball coach Lewis Orr. Smith helped Orr with basketball camps after he left UNT. Smith, whose father is deceased, said he felt inexplicably drawn to Orr.

"When I played for him, I thought he was the meanest, hardest person," Smith said. "I thought he was cruel and that he hated me. He ended up being a big part of my life. He helped me try to be a person, instead of just an athlete."

Orr said Smith's charisma worked wonders on and off the court.

"He was one of the most talented players to come out of the Dallas area," Orr said. "Today, he would be one of the guys who could do it all. He had that uncanny ability to keep everybody loose. Kids flocked to him. I felt he could have been one of the finest recruiters in basketball."

Smith said teaching and coaching in a conventional academic setting never appealed to him. He said he is taking correspondence courses toward his degree while he tries to make Young Athletes in Action work. It allows him to improvise in meeting the neediest children's needs. As much as their needs stagger him, he loves his work.

"I can't explain it," he said. "I find the kids a turn-on. It's real fine. They challenge you to be a good person. They know. They be watchin'."

Smith stood in the shade before sparring practice the other day. The crowd of boys around him kept growing, listening as he described the plot of a play in which the drug dealer died in the end.

A long, black car inched slowly down the street that divides Turner Courts from the playground. But the kids kept their eyes on Mookie Smith.

Daisies won't tell but they're named from the Old English for day's eye because the plant's blossoms close at night and open at dawn.

TDA lifts ban on fungicide, allowing use all over state

LUBBOCK -- A crisis exemption allowing use of Tilt fungicide to control northern leaf blight in corn has been extended from 10 counties along the Gulf Coast of Texas to include the entire state.

The exemption, under Section 18 of the Federal Insecticide, Fungicide and Rodenticide Act (FIFRA), was pursued in early June by the Texas Agricultural Extension Service and Texas Agricultural Experiment Station. It was approved by the Texas Department of Agriculture for only 10 Gulf Coast counties. After finding the fungus on the High Plains, the Extension Service plant pathologist at Lubbock pursued an extension for the entire state. Approval was given July 2.

Northern corn leaf blight is caused by the fungus Exserohilum turcicum, explained Dr. Harold Kaufman, Extension Service plant pathologist. It is spread by airborne spores produced on debris from infected plants of the previous season.

"One-week-old lesions about an inch in length then produce spores that are blown to other plants in the field, to nearby fields or to plants many miles away," Kaufman said. Lesions develop first on lower leaves and appear as tan spots about one-fourth inch wide. These elongate along the length of the leaf. The lesions are easily identified about a week after infection when they are about an inch long, the plant pathologist said. The lesions continue to grow until about half an inch wide and six inches long.

The fungus is favored by high humidity and temperatures in the sixties and low seventies. Dry weather and temperatures of 80 degrees Fahrenheit will retard growth, but fields under pivot irrigation may have a favorable microclimate even during these generally unfavorable conditions for the fungus, Kaufman said.

Growers should be checking for northern leaf blight, Kaufman advised.

"Fields that were known to have northern leaf blight in 1991 should be the high priority," he said.

Application of Tilt should start when lesions reach an average of five per plant, he said. Tilt fungicide should be applied at the rate of four fluid ounces per acre in a minimum of 15 gallons of water per acre with ground application equipment, or a minimum of five gallons of water an acre with aerial equipment. Subsequent applications may be made on a 7 to 14 day schedule, depending on weather conditions.

Limitations include a 24-hour restriction on reentering a treated field. Application shouldn't be made within 21 days of harvest. Only four applications of four ounces each, totaling 16 fluid ounces of Tilt can be used on an acre each season. Livestock shouldn't be allowed to graze or feed on Tilt-treated forage, fodder or straw.

WTRT announces office promotion

WTRT names office foreman

The new central office foreman for West Texas Rural Telephone Cooperative is Keith Hacker, center, replacing Dan Dotson, right, who retired at the end of June. At left is Johnny Flores, who will continue as a central office technician with WTRT.

Promotion of Keith Hacker to the position of central office foreman for West Texas Rural Telephone Cooperative has been announced by Tom Hyer, general manager.

Hacker assumes the position formerly held by Dan Dotson who retired at the end of June after serving as central office foreman since 1985.

Hacker joined WTRT in 1983 as a cable crew member. He worked as a radio installer for WT Services, Inc., a wholly-owned subsidiary of WTRT prior to becoming a central office technician in 1985.

Hacker, a Hereford native and 1982 graduate of Hereford High School, has attended a wide range of courses, including telecommunications, maintenance, microwave radio and administration as well as fiber optic end equipment.

He also has extensive experience in computer operations in the telephone central office in Summerfield. He is the son of Morris and Gwen Hacker of Hereford.

Johnny Flores of Hereford, who has been a central office technician since 1990, will continue to work in the office.

Farm loan applications being taken

Applications for emergency farm loans for losses caused by adverse weather conditions are being accepted at the Farmers Home Administration (FmHA) office in Hereford, FmHA county supervisor James D. Webb said today.

Deaf Smith County is one of 28 in Texas recently named by Secretary of Agriculture Edward Madigan as eligible for loans to cover part of actual production losses resulting from the adverse weather.

Webb said farmers may be eligible for loans of up to 80 percent of their actual losses or the operating loan needed to continue in business or $500,000, whichever is less. For farmers unable to obtain credit from private commercial lenders, the interest is 4.5 percent.

"As a general rule, a farmer must have suffered at least a 30 percent loss of production to be eligible for an FmHA emergency loan," Webb said.

"Applications for loans under this emergency designation will be accepted until February 22, 1993 but farmers should apply as soon as possible. Delays in applying could create backlogs in processing and probably over into the new farming season," Webb said.

FmHA is a credit agency of the U.S. Department of Agriculture. It is authorized to provide disaster emergency loans to recognized farmers who work at and rely on farming for a substantial part of their living. Eligibility is extended to individual farmers who are U.S. citizens and to farming partnerships, corporations or cooperatives in which U.S. citizens hold a majority interest.

The FmHA office in Hereford is open from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. Monday through Friday.

Reception planned for Draper

The public is invited to attend a reception from 2-4 p.m. Wednesday, July 8, in honor of Argen Draper. The event will be held in the Heritage Room of Deaf Smith County Library.

Hosting the reception will be members of the Wyche Extension Homemakers Club in which Draper has been a member for over 18 years. Refreshments will be provided by members of other local extension clubs.

Draper was recently honored for her 50-year membership in the American Home Economics Association. The AHEA held its national convention recently in Denver, Colo. where Draper was given special recognition.

The honoree has worked for the Texas Agricultural Extension Service for 31 years and has been honored on numerous occasions for her outstanding leadership abilities.

Women's Division picnic set

Members of the Women's Division will meet for their quarterly meeting and picnic at 7 p.m. July 9 at the Cowgirl Hall of Fame and Western Heritage Center. During the salad supper, recognition will be given to various committees and the woman who has signed up the most new members in the Women's Division will be named Queen for a Day. At left, Kim Rogers who served as co-chairman of the Little Miss Hereford Pageant, and Linda Daniel, co-chairman of the 1992 Miss Hereford Scholarship Pageant, look at one of the new displays at the CHOF shown by Georgia Sparks. Sparks serves as chairman of the honoree selection and research committee at the CHOF and is a member of the Women's Division welcome committee.

Reports heard by Rebekahs

Hereford Rebekah Lodge #228 met in regular session Tuesday evening with 21 members present.

Noble Grand Shirley Brown presided as reports were made. Sixteen visits to the sick, 55 cheer cards, 17 dishes of food and 20 memorials were recorded.

Members voted to make a $50 donation to the Disaster Relief Fund at Fritch.

Lydia Hopson was presented a certificate of perfection in unwritten work by Lodge Deputy Mary Lou Weatherford.

Murrays attend convention

A Hereford couple, Robert and Shirley Murray, attended the recent 67th annual convention of the Texas Elks State Association, held in San Antonio.

Murray is exalted ruler of Hereford Lodge 2269.

Shirley Murray is Hereford lodge sweetheart as well as sweetheart of the Panhandle district. She represented the district at the meeting.

A special guest at the state meeting was Grand Exalted Ruler Lester "Ted" Hess of Wheeling, W.V. While in Texas, he also visited the state Elks' major project, the Diagnostic Center for Handicapped Children at Ottine.

Presiding during the convention's sessions was Dean Provost, state president, who announced that TESA provided $47,700 in scholarships for Texas youth, in addition to local lodge scholarships totaling $66,000.

Between the Covers

By JOE WEAVER

The Summer Reading Program is past the half-way point and over six hundred kids have enrolled. About half that many join us on Tuesdays for activities at the library. We expect a bigger showing this week, though, because the featured activity is the movie The Rescuers Down Under. Because of the large group expected, and since the movie runs over the usual hour, there will be two showings: the first at 10:00 a.m. for those whose last names begin with A-M, and the second at 2:00 p.m. for N-Z. There is still time to enroll a child in the program.

We have a couple of new displays this month...both of them keeping to the summer theme "Discover A New World." Wally Walker has been collecting elephants in all sorts of configurations for about four years, and he is sharing them with the library during July. The pachyderms are different sizes and made of various materials, but Wally's favorite is the ceramic "bathing" pair. Wally is the son of Thomas and Sandra Walker and will be in the third grade this fall at Aikman.

Coke is as American as hot dogs, baseball, apple pie and Chevrolet, but Jeanette Ramey's collection of Coca-Cola memorabilia includes cans from China, Puerto Rico, Germany, and one printed in Arabic (we think). Jeanette and Peyton have been collecting for about twenty five years and her favorites are the 1901 replica bottle, one dated December 25, 1923, and a "personalized" bottle.

A few weeks ago, a patron commented that our fiction reviews were not thorough enough. Last week, another patron said that I needed to review more non-fiction. With 69,000 volumes in the library, and twenty new ones each week, I decided to follow Ricky Nelson's advice..."You can't please everyone, so you got to please yourself."

For some odd reason, since I have been in library work I have seen more books and read fewer than any time in my life. Most of what crosses my desk does not appeal to me to begin with, and cursory glances through the chapters only reinforce my original opinion. Once in a while, though, I find something on the shelf that grabs my attention and compels me to read. Such was the case with Voyage Of The Iceberg. I'm not exactly what you would call a Titanic "buff," but I do enjoy stories about that great ship that has fascinated so many for so long. The book is an interesting account of the infamous berg from its formation in Greenland to the impact with the Titanic, and includes an enlightening narrative of what was going on in the North Atlantic in 1911-12. It is a little dated, having been published between the time of the wreck's discovery and its subsequent exploration. Some of the book, by necessity, is conjecture, but most of it is informative and entertaining with some surprises thrown in.

(Can you name the ship, besides the Californian, that saw Titanic's rockets and refused to respond?)

Salad supper, picnic set July 9 at CHOF

The Deaf Smith County Chamber of Commerce Women's Division's quarterly meeting is planned at 7 p.m. Thursday, July 9, at the Cowgirl Hall of Fame and Western Heritage Center.

All those planning to attend the outdoor picnic are asked to bring a salad for the Dutch treat supper and to dress casual as games are scheduled.

According to Women's Division President Rita Bell, during the business session, the Queen for a Day will be announced. The award will be presented to a member who has signed up the most new members in the organization. Also, special recognition will be given to committees.

Members of the executive committee will serve as hostesses. Those wishing to attend are asked to make reservations no later than July 8 by calling the Deaf Smith County Chamber of Commerce office, 364-3333.

Arrowhead Mills honored

COLLEGE STATION -- Arrowhead Mills, Inc., a whole food company in Hereford, was cited for outstanding service to 4-H June 9 during the 1992 State 4-H Roundup at Texas A&M University.

Jennifer Hicks, District I 4-H council provider received for Boys Foster, president of Arrowhead Mills, a special plaque by the Texas 4-H Foundation, the service organization of the Texas Agricultural Extension Service 4-H and Youth Development program.

Arrowhead Mills was recognized for its "dedicated service and support of the Texas 4-H program and for (its) constant effort to help provide the best opportunities for Texas young people to enhance their personal growth and development."

The company has worked with the Extension Service for 11 years, providing educational programs and materials on the use of whole foods in food preparation and nutrition for use in 4-H programs. Since 1985, Arrowhead Mills has co-sponsored the district 4-H Better Bake show, which promotes using one of the Panhandle's major agricultural products--wheat.

Arrowhead has enabled young people to get a look at marketing and the diversity of agricultural products.

Through the sponsorship of county contests, the company has provided opportunities for young people to participate in planning, preparing, serving and evaluating foods made with wheat. Youth have participated in tours, receiving on-site education in food processing, packaging and distribution. These activities have inspired some 4-H members to pursue careers in dietary food technology.

Arrowhead is the recipient of the Friend of 4-H Award from Deaf Smith County and is recognized each year for its contributions to the Better Bake Show.

Arrowhead Mills honored for service to 4-H

Jennifer Hicks, center, of Hereford, received a plaque on behalf of Arrowhead Mills for the company's service to 4-H at the 1992 State 4-H Roundup recently. Presenting the award were Dr. Lynne Thibodeaux, left, assistant director for 4-H and youth, and Dr. Zerle Carpenter, director of the Texas Agricultural Extension Service.

New energy resource display at Canyon

An elaborate energy information exhibit has just been completed and installed at the Panhandle-Plains Historical Museum by the staff of the Texas Energy Extension Service at Texas A&M University. The displays, funded by the Governor's Energy Office, are a gift to the Panhandle-Plains Historical Museum and will become a part of the museum's permanent collection.

Kathleen Casey, Texas EES museum project coordinator says the gift to the Panhandle-Plains Historical Museum was part of a project that included gifts of energy resource displays to 10 other museums in Texas.

"We've seen a real increase in the desire for energy information from people contacting our office," Casey says. "We see the displays as another way to make this information available."

The display is a 22-foot long, free-standing wall containing information on renewable energy resources. The exhibit highlights the application and location of hydropower, wind, geothermal, biomass, and solar energy resources in Texas. In addition, the exhibit explains the role of energy conservation and electricity.

Using a format that appeals to all ages, the display incorporates graphics, photographic and interactive devices to communicate facts on the various resources, says Jackson Price, designer of the displays.

"We tried to make the displays educational and interesting, but fun, too," Price says. "We feel that the graphics and interactive devices we've included will entertain while they inform."

Diane Brake, interim director of the Panhandle-Plains Historical Museum, says she is delighted to have the renewable energy resource display as a part of the Museum's permanent collection.

The exhibit is located in the Natural History area on the lower level of the Museum. Museum hours are 9 a.m. to 6 p.m. Monday through Saturday and 2-6 p.m. on Sunday. For more information about the energy exhibit call the Museum at 656-2244.

YOUR EYES

How Good Are Vision Screenings?

Widescale vision screenings offer some benefit to the community. They do catch some eye problems. But they should never be confused with complete eye examinations by an eye professional.

School vision screenings, for instance, most often test a student's ability to see 20/20 on a distance eye chart. This may serve to identify the youngsters who cannot see the blackboard, but it does not test for near-vision acuity, the use of both eyes together, tracking a line of print and other visual tasks. Often, an alert teacher's observations of a child's difficulty may be more important in spotting a problem than are the formal screenings.

Whether in school, factory or a mobile health unit, a screening is not likely to include internal and external examination of the eye and tests for all the skills that go into vision. The best way to protect eyes and your eyesight is through a complete examination by your optometrist.

Christine Cruz served as maid of honor and Brandon Flood was best man.

Bridesmaids were the groom's cousin, Amanda Dominguez; the bride's sister, Yolanda Chavez; the bride's cousin, Stephanie Noriega; and Audra Allen.

Serving as groomsmen were the groom's cousin, Richard Perez Jr., Eric Cortez, Kent Sinnacher and Steven Kuper.

Padrinos were the groom's uncle and aunt, Richard and Nora Perez, providing the Bible and rosary; the bride's uncle and aunt, Adan and Margie Chavez, the lasso; the groom's uncle and aunt, Arnold and R.C. Lafuente, coins; and the groom's brother-in-law and sister, Josa and Baldina DaRado, cushions.

Escorting guests were Bryan Bentley, Edward Castillo, Jerry Gallegos and Johnny Rodriguez, the groom's cousin.

Flower girls were the groom's niece, Amanda Dorado, daughter of Jose and Blandina Dorado; and Kelly Schlabs, daughter of Tom and Joyce Schlabs.

Ring bearers were the bride's cousin, Anthony Ortiz, son of Rick and Dubelia Ortiz, and Andy Lugo, son of Bobby and Linda Lugo.

Candles were lit by the bride's sister, Lisa Chavez, and the groom's cousin, Sonny Perez.

Sharon Cramer accompanied vocalist, Roy Vera, the groom's cousin. Musical selections included "This Is the Day," "Eagle's Wings," "Pan De Vida," "May God Bless You," "Trumpet Voltaire," and "Jesus Joy of Man's Desiring." The groom sang "Nuptial Blessing" to the bride.

Presented in marriage by her father, the bride was attired in a white regal satin gown featuring a scalloped V-shape neckline, Edwardian sleeves accented with lace medallions and studded pearls, and a fitted bodice encrusted with pearls and sequins and crowned with clusters of jeweled flowers and molded medallions. Attached to the elongated waistline was the sheath styled slim skirt. The back of the gown formed a V-shape low back with molded medallions centered with a candy box bow. A runner of pearl buttons further enhanced the gown's back. The Queen's court cathedral-length train was accented with European lace cut-outs studded with pearls and jewels and centered with tear-dropped lace medallions studded with pearls. The hemline was double edged in delicate borders of matching European lace.

The waist-length double wrapped illusion veil formed a net pouf which was dotted with pearls. It was attached to the back of a triple heirloom crown created from Austrian crystals and tear dropped pearls.

The bride carried a bouquet of white silk roses and tear dropped pearls entwined with lace ribbon.

Her jewelry consisted of a single strand of pearls and matching pearl earrings given to her by the groom.

Bridal attendants were attired in teal tea-length dresses which featured sweetheart necklines, full gathered sleeves, fitted bodices, elongated waistlines and full circular skirts accented at the backs with large bows. Each carried a small bouquet of peach, white and teal flowers. The maid of honor wore a similarly styled white dress.

Lisa Chavez and the bride's cousin, Amanda Chavez, invited guests to register at the dinner and dance held at the Hereford Bull Barn. Mariachis played during the dinner and "Animacion" played at the dance.

Diane Hanna, Connie Recio, Romelia Fuentes, Dora Rodriguez and Nora Perez served cake.

The tables at the reception were covered with white cloths and were centered with bouquets of teal, clear and peach balloons.

The head table, which seated the bridal couple, their parents, and attendants, was covered with a white lace cloth accented with teal bows. Floating over the table was a large rainbow arch of teal, clear and peach balloons.

The cake table was covered with a white lace cloth with peach bows. Behind the table was lattice work entwined with peach and teal ribbons and flanked by two tall silk trees.

The bride's six-tiered white cake was adorned with peach, teal and white silk flowers and greenery. The groom's German chocolate cake featured a U.S. Coast Guard helicopter figurine.

Leaving for a wedding trip to San Antonio, the bride wore a two-piece black and white polka dot dress.

The couple will make their home in Brooklyn, N.Y. at Manhattan Beach.

The bride is a 1991 graduate of Hereford High School and attended South Plains College in Levelland where she was studying to be a registered nurse.

The groom, a 1990 HHS graduate, is currently serving in the United States Coast Guard stationed at Air Station Brooklyn Floyd Bennett Field. He is in search and rescue operations.

Out of town guests represented El Paso, Amarillo, Abilene, Ballinger, Austin, Seminole, Lubbock, San Angelo, Del Rio, Dumas, Tulia, Fort Worth, Dimmitt, Dallas, Miles, Quitaque, Mathis, Plainview, Canyon, Snyder, and towns in California, Iowa, Florida and Missouri.

A rehearsal dinner was held in the backyard of the bride's parents' residence, 214 Cherokee.

Ann Landers

DEAR ANN LANDERS: You recently printed some statistics about American women having problems with food and body image. This is a sad commentary on our culture. What's at issue is a dangerous, pervasive obsession with thinness. Serious dieters are getting younger and younger. Fourth-graders are trying to slim down. I view this as a tragedy. Don't you?--Indignant in the U.S.A.

DEAR DIG: I do indeed. What we need is a high-powered campaign to glorify the Rubenesque woman and get off the "thin is in" kick. Your outrage and that of thousands of others who wrote is justified. Read on:

DEAR ANN: Who decided what the "ideal" woman should look like? Who puts thin women on the covers of magazines and relegates the full-figured woman to the back pages in ads for "plus-sized" clothing?

Who told women they need to buy diet books, enlist in diet programs and join fitness centers so they can rid themselves of those unsightly excess pounds before the oh-so-important bikini season?

I am a 6 foot tall female whose doctor said I had to cut down on fat due to high cholesterol. My cholesterol didn't go down but my weight went from 130 to 116 pounds. I knew I was much too thin, but when I looked for help to gain weight everything I saw, read or heard assured me that I was PERFECT!

Women who value their health should go by their doctors' weight charts and throw out the fashion magazines before they become anorexia or die of starvation.--K.D. in Waterloo, Iowa

DEAR WATERLOO: Did I get letters on this? You'd better believe it. Here's more:

DEAR ANN LANDERS: American women's obsession with weight was not generated in a vacuum. Pressure from the media to be thin is overwhelming. Fashion magazines feature emaciated females who are depicted as successful, wealthy and sexually desirable. The overall message is, "If you aren't thin, you're a loser."

Society trumpets this message constantly. Even commercials for products that are not beauty-and-fitness oriented feature thin women. Men are not blameless for women's obsession with weight. Most men I know admit that a woman's body plays an important role in whether or not he is attracted to her.

Men seeking "companionship" through personal ads in magazines and newspapers often state that the desired mate must be "thin," "slender" or "trim." Women rarely impose similar body-type requirements when they seek male company.

Can you estimate the research that would result if 150,000 American MEN died from eating disorder complications? Have you ever heard a male colleague feeling guilty for eating a few potato chips or a slice of cake?--Jane in Massapeque

DEAR JANE: The last word is from "Ms. Michigan." Here 'tis:

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I just read your wake-up call for women who are "borderline nutty" on the subject of weight loss.

I was one of those "borderline nuts." You failed to say anorexia and bulimic women have severe emotional problems and their obsession with weight is not strictly vanity. Like many others, I thought if I were thin my life would be perfect. Instead, I almost killed myself.

We are not nutty. We have real problems that need medical attention.--Michigan

DEAR MICHIGAN: Get out the wet noodle. I really slipped a stitch on that one.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I have four children who are successful in

Question and Answer

By POPULAR MECHANICS For AP Special Features

Q: For more than a month, our refrigerator has produced a very offensive odor. We have checked the drain from the back and underneath, both are open. We have removed the freezer bottom and back, and found nothing. We washed the inside of the refrigerator with hot, soapy water to no avail. Please help.

A: Unplug the refrigerator and remove the food, shelves, ice cube trays and icemaker bin. Discard the ice. Place the food in an insulated chest. Wash the inside of the refrigerator and all interior parts with a solution of two tablespoons of baking soda per quart of warm water. Clean everything again with a mix of dishwashing detergent and warm water. Rinse and dry all surfaces.

Next, pour a solution of vinegar and warm water through the defrost drain system. Remove and clean the water collection pan located underneath the refrigerator.

Reassemble the refrigerator. Leave an open box of baking soda in both the refrigerator and freezer. Add the food, but throw away anything that's stale.

Plug in the refrigerator and check it after three or four days. If the odor persists, spread activated charcoal (available from pet stores) on a cookie sheet in the refrigerator and another in the freezer.

If the odor is still there, this remedy is more involved: Remove the food again, tightly stuff the refrigerator and freezer with balls of crumpled newspaper. Put two cups of water in the refrigerator door and close it. Let the refrigerator run for three or four days, then clean out the compartments with soap and water. Repeat if necessary.

Eliminate any lingering odors by using Kleen-Air. According to its manufacturer, place the bottle of Kleen-Air, with the flip-top open, next to the refrigerator's intake air vent. The product eliminates odors in the air, but not smells embedded in the walls of the refrigerator. The product is nontoxic and will not harm foods. One bottle lasts a year, and is sold at appliance parts distributors.

GIVE ME LIBERTY

"I know not what course others may take, but as for me, give me liberty or give me death!" - Patrick Henry

Who can forget those words uttered by the bright young lawyer from Virginia as he addressed his state convention in the late 1700's. For more than a decade in the Virginia House of Burgesses, Patrick Henry spoke eloquently on liberty, freedom and independence. George Washington attended in 1765 and likely supported Henry's positions on the early resolutions. Thomas Jefferson was too young for politics at that time. However, he often stood in the doorway and listened as Henry addressed the House. Later, perhaps inspired by Henry's early speeches, Jefferson would display eloquence of his own. Our founding fathers spent much of their time seeking the blessings of liberty and independence. Liberty is one of the "unalienable rights" spelled out in the second sentence of the Declaration of Independence. Liberty is set forth in the preamble of the United States Constitution as one of the reasons for its creation.

What is this liberty? For what did our founders fight? Is it worth fighting for today?

True meaning of liberty

George Benard Shaw said, "Liberty means responsibility. That is why most men dread it." Montesquieu wrote that liberty is, "the right to do what the laws permit."

To this writer, liberty means freedom. Freedom to choose, freedom to learn, freedom to speak and freedom to act within the framework of the laws of this great nation. True liberty is simply freedom with responsibility.

I love to celebrate our liberty on Independence Day each year. I thank God for our liberty. I am grateful for our nation, our leaders and our freedom. Liberty is worth the price all have paid to date. It is worth the price that all will pay in the future.

Jonh F. Kennedy spoke of this commitment to liberty in his Unaugural Address in 1961. Kennedy said, "Let every nation know, whether it wishes us well or ill, that we shall pay any price, bear any burden, meet any hardship, support any friend, oppose any foe, in order to assure the survival and success of liberty." May it always be so.

One Nation under God

John Adams said, "Our Constitution was made only for moral and religious people. It is wholly inadequate to the government of any other." Daniel Webster said, "Liberty exists in proportion to wholesome restraint." James Madison said, "We have staked the future of all of our political institutions upon the capacity of each of us to govern ourselves according to the Ten Commandments of God."

Yet, today, there are those who wish to take any reference to God out of public affairs. The Constitution, they claim, guarantees separation of Church and State. It does not. Read the first amendment. The words separation, church and state are neither mentioned or implied.

What early Americans fought for was the liberty to be one Nation under God. John Quincy Adams points this out as he reflected on the battle with England for our liberty. Adams said, "The highest glory of the American revolution was this: it connected in one indissoluble bond, the principles of civil government with the principles of Christianity."

The riots in Los Angeles, the killing, the burning, the looting would never have occurred if those involved would have accepted the responsibility that comes with the freedom. Following the Ten Commandments would put an end to killing, stealing, coveting and hating. The problem is not lack of liberty and freedom, but rather lack of responsibility to protect it.

I accept the responsibility. I will start a riot over a beating, a basketball championship or a cancelled concert. I will work within the system to right injustices and preserve equal opportunities. But please, dear God, give me liberty.

4-H trio nets $28,000 in new scholarships

"Bringing Home The Bacon" might be what Deaf Smith County 4-Hers Jill Dutton, Jim Bret Campbell, and Jennifer Hicks felt when they recently netted a total of $28,000 in scholarship money from the Texas 4-H Foundation Opportunity Scholarship Foundation. Scholarship applications were submitted in March with only 103 youth invited to interview in June. Scholarships were made on the basis of academics, 4-H experiences, and personal interview.

Jill Dutton, daughter of Bill and Teresa Dutton, received the C.W. Davison Scholarship for unrestricted categories. The $4,000 scholarship was the highest amount awarded in this category. Jill has been a Gold Star, I Dare You county recipient and carried projects focusing on swine production, bread and food & nutrition, consumer decision, sheep and beef in her ten year 4-H career. Jill plans to pursue an Elementary Education degree at San Angelo State University in the fall. Her long term goal is to equip herself to improve the educational system and educate tomorrow's leaders.

Jim Bret Campbell and Jennifer Hicks received the highest scholarship amounts presented at State Roundup. Each were recipients of $12,000 scholarships from the San Antonio Livestock Exposition and were two of four that received this award.

Jim Bret Campbell, son of Jim and Brenda Campbell, was a County Gold Star and I Dare You Recipient and carried forth a successful 10 year 4-H career in beef cattle, sheep, horticulture food & nutrition and consumer clothing projects. Jim Bret will enter Texas Tech University in the fall with a major in animal science. Jim Bret plans a future as an animal geneticist.

Jennifer Hicks, daughter of Mark and Susan Hicks, has served the District 4-H Council as President and has been a member of the State 4-H Council. Jennifer is a nine year member of 4-H and was a County Gold Star and I Dare You recipient. Jennifer carried 4-H projects in food & nutrition, clothing, sheep and goats, swine, dairy, safety and health, gardening, citizenship and dog care. Jennifer plans to pursue a career as a registered dietician and has received previous scholarships in the 4-H program as a National Record Book winner in food and nutrition and a State Food Show Winner.

their marriages and careers. I have always tried to treat them in an even-handed way when it comes to matters such as college tuition and loans for home purchases. It has been my policy to charge a modest rate of interest for the loans in order not to favor one child over the other.

Recently my oldest daughter asked for a two-year loan to help finance a larger home. Both she and her husband have good jobs, but they wanted to avoid using non-liquid assets. In making her request, my daughter said she had never felt that a parent should charge interest and she wanted her loan to be interest-free. This made me uncomfortable, but I agreed to the loan and said I would consider making it interest-free.

Shortly after, my daughter called to ask for the money. As in the past,

I mailed her a check accompanied by a note to sign and return to me. That note was an agreement to pay interest. I included a repayment schedule. To my surprise, she cashed the check and returned the note with the reference to interest crossed out. Subsequently, she has been making her monthly payments to me on principal only.

In a recent visit to her home, my daughter and I discussed the situation but we were unable to resolve the issue. She contended that I had encouraged her to believe I would NOT be charging interest. I told her I was sorry about the misunderstanding, but my position should have been clear when she received my check and the note requesting her signature.

Is my loan policy unreasonable? How would you handle this?—Carl in Akron

DEAR CARL: For openers, I would never charge a child of mine interest on a loan. Since it is your money, however, you have every right to do with it whatever you wish.

Apparently when you told your daughter you would CONSIDER her request to get the loan without interest, she assumed you had agreed to honor her request. She should not have crossed out the reference to the interest, however, without checking with you to make sure her assumption was correct.

Since it is your policy to charge your children interest on loans, this young woman should pay it, just as the others did.

Stars turn out for AIDS awareness special

Linda Lavin, Robert Guillaume (pictured) and Bruce Davison serve as hosts for In a New Light, a two-hour information and entertainment special about AIDS airing Saturday on ABC. Included in the program are excerpts from the musical Heart Strings and appearances by Reba McEntire, Dustin Hoffman, Anita Baker, Clint Black and many others.

Advertising profits go to charity

By Suzanne Gill

This spring, tennis star Arthur Ashe felt media pressure to go public with information about his own health that he had kept private for four years: He is infected with the HIV virus, the precursor to AIDS.

By keeping his own counsel, Ashe had hoped his life would not be overshadowed by AIDS. Yet only weeks after his forced announcement, he is a participant in a television special conceived to focus attention on the disease. In a New Light, airing Saturday, July 11, on ABC, is a star-studded, emotional appeal to individuals to take part in the fight against AIDS. The special features a variety of performers, from Anita Baker, Paul Rodriguez and Clint Black to Carol Burnett, Joel Grey and Dustin Hoffman. Some sing or give dramatic readings; all offer personal reflections on the impact of AIDS in their lives. They are not always eloquent, but they wage a war of attrition on our emotional defenses. Their backdrop is the AIDS Memorial Quilt, which now includes some 20,000 panels representing one tenth of those who have died in this country from the disease.

Executive producer Joe Lovett did not set out to make this special. The former 20/20 producer was — and is — producing a documentary about Heart Strings, a touring musical show about the experience of being or loving a person with AIDS. But Heart Strings, with its cast of unknowns, was turned down by ABC's prime-time chief, Robert Iger, when his late-night counterpart Don Beuth approached him with the idea. It needed stars, Iger reportedly said.

Fourteen months later, In a New Light is packed with stars, beginning with Elizabeth Taylor, who briefly introduces the show, and Linda Lavin, Elizabeth Taylor, founder of the American Foundation for AIDS Research, introduces the show.

Robert Guillaume and Bruce Davison, who are its hosts. A celebrity edition of Heart Strings was staged in February and taped for the special.

With star power to spare, In a New Light was offered to advertisers at full rates, and ABC has earmarked the show's profits for an AIDS charity.

In its two hours, the special offers a number of messages. First, there's no reason for anyone not already infected ever to contract the disease; its spread can be halted through changed behavior alone. Second, it's a subject people need to talk about, not hide from. (In an ice-breaking comedy routine, Andrea Martin puts a condom over her foot.) Third, women contract the virus more readily from men than men do from women. Worldwide, half of all AIDS patients are female.

Two toll-free telephone numbers are provided during the show. Both are hotlines of the Centers for Disease Control in Atlanta. The first directs callers with general questions, while the second is a source of information about government drug studies open to those already infected with HIV. There are only 40 operators to respond, however, so viewers are asked to write down the numbers and phone in later.

For all the party atmosphere, brave smiles and star turns of In a New Light, one stark fact remains. We live in an age of complete disclosure, when no detail of life is too personal or private to be hidden from the public eye, as Arthur Ashe discovered. It seems an age of idolatry, but it is an age of distrust. We dare trust no one; our very lives are at stake if we do. In this way, at least, AIDS has touched us all.

SOAP TALK

Reader defends sex on soaps

By Candace Havens

Dear Candace: I recently read your response to a letter from a Days fan. The fan's name was John Haskins and he was complaining about the sex scenes in soaps.

I'm sorry, but sex sells and it helps the ratings. And it's only a show on television. I wish I could be as naive as Haskins about what goes on in the world, but this stuff happens in real life here in my hometown. —Sharon Cooper, Morehead, Ky.

Dear Reader: Thanks for your comment.

Dear Candace: I love to watch Jack (Matthew Ashford) and Jennifer (Melissa Reeves) on Days of Our Lives. I heard that Reeves is pregnant and also that Ashford's wife is pregnant. What I want to know is if they are the same person in real life; are Reeves and Ashford married to each other? —Tracy K., N.M.

Dear Reader: I can see where you might be a little confused. Reeves is pregnant, but she is married to Scott Reeves (Ryan, The Young and the Restless). Their baby was due in June. On the show, Jennifer won't actually have her baby until September.

Dear Candace: I've watched As the World Turns since it began 35 years ago. I've never missed an episode. But lately I've been upset about how bad the show has become. I've always enjoyed the scenes with Emma on the farm. It all seemed so real and cozy. It was the best part of the show. I couldn't believe it when Cal went to bed with that crazy Lucinda a while back. I liked the show because it always seemed to have morals, unlike some of the others. But now it is just as bad as the rest of them. I'm 88 years old and I want to see more of the wholesome scenes with Emma on the farm. —Isabelle Pfeiffer, Mauston, Wis.

Dear Reader: What an incredible viewing record! Thank you for your comment.

Dear Candace: I'm writing to ask if Tad Martin is returning to All My Children. We miss him. —Elinor Wells, New Braunfels, Texas.

Dear Reader: I wouldn't be surprised to see Michael Knight (Tad) show up in Pine Valley some day soon. For the moment, Knight is busy planning his wedding to actress Catherine Hickland.

Abby on 'Homefront'; Clara Bow remembered

By Taylor Michaels

Q: My husband and I love the ABC show Homefront. Recently, my mother told me she read in another column, Dear Abby, that the show is being canceled. Please tell me it's not true! If it is, why? I know it's very popular in our area. —J. Rucinski, Esmond, Ill.

A: It's refreshing to know that Abby is branching out. Once satisfied with dispensing advice on party etiquette, she must have realized life's true happiness comes from television criticism. However, the plain truth is that Homefront has not been canceled and is only on summer hiatus while new episodes are being developed for the fall, when it will move to Thursday nights. Homefront was a successful show for ABC this year in their prime-time Tuesday lineup.

Q: I work in a retirement home for

merchant marines. A resident there was once the shipmate of (actor) Cliff Robertson during World War II. When Ralph Edwards recalled Mr. Robertson's life on This Is Your Life in 1971, this man was invited to participate. He is so proud of that experience. He is not in good health. Could you tell me where to write to Cliff Robertson, in hopes he might consent to write this man? —Dee Bryson, Newport, N.C.

A: You may write to Robertson in care of his agent at ICM, 8899 Beverly Blvd., Los Angeles, Calif., 90048.

Q: I've been trying to recall the name of a western I saw on TV with Robert Preston. He and his family were traveling in a covered wagon and Preston kept rattlesnakes in a bag. Can you help? —Jessie Snyder, Fort Worth, Texas.

A: The Chisholms first aired on CBS as a miniseries in 1979. The story of a family's arduous journey westward co-starred Rosemary Harris and Ben Murphy. It proved so popular that the network brought it back as a series the next year. But when Preston's character passed away, so did the series.

Q: Can you tell me what Roy Rogers' real name is? I saw it on TV but can't remember what it was. It's the name of a wild animal but I can't think of which one. —Jennie Reese, Halfway, Mo.

A: A leopard can't change its spots, but Leonard Slye can and did change his name to Roy Rogers.

Q: I'm interested in knowing what happened to Clara Bow and her husband, Rex Bell. I'm an oldie, and she was my favorite — she was so pretty. I know she made Hoopla, The Fleet's In, Dangerous Curves, Wings and a couple of others. —M. Semenak, Ironwood, Mich.

A: Clara Bow passed away in 1965, three years after husband Rex Bell.

Bow's film career was a bittersweet testament to the end of an era, where many silent-film stars were lost in the shuffle to movies with sound.

After eloping with Bow in 1931, Rex Bell's career as a Western star slowed but didn't end until 1961 with a bit part in The Misfits, which starred Clark Gable and Marilyn Monroe. Bell was elected lieutenant governor of Nevada in 1954 and ran unsuccessfully for governor in 1958.

TIME OUT

ABC presents 'Thorpe Awards'

By Jeff Thompson

Bob Saget, star of Full House and America's Funniest Home Videos, will serve as host Monday, July 6, when ABC presents the first Jim Thorpe Pro Sports Awards.

Presenting the awards for achievement in football, baseball, basketball, boxing, hockey, auto racing and other pro sports are Hollywood stars and sports celebrities including Dyan Cannon, Leeza Gibbons, Wilt Chamberlain and Bo Jackson.

The awards fall into 10 categories, with special tributes for the recipients of the Lifetime Achievement, Individual Achievement and Thorpe Legacy awards.

Judging is done by a "blue-ribbon panel" of sports heroes and distinguished sports journalists. The combination of athletes and journalists on the judging panel is intended to ensure the credibility of the awards.

Named for Jim Thorpe, the awards honor the memory of the man widely considered the best all-around athlete of the first half of the 20th century. Thorpe (1888-1953) was an American Indian who endured bigotry in the sports world long before Jackie Robinson's time. Thorpe is one of only two athletes ever inducted into four sports halls of fame, but he is most widely remembered for having been stripped of two Olympic medals after it was revealed that he played a season of semi-pro baseball in exchange for room and board.

'Addams Family' less icky; still kooky

By Chris Carpenter

The Addams Family, the clan with high-brow New Yorker origins and a recent big-screen rejuvenation, may be the only new Saturday-morning show anticipated by adults and kids alike.

Thirteen animated episodes are being developed for ABC by Hanna-Barbera, and producer Ron Myrick, who's just seen the first raw film from the overseas animation house, is pleased. Myrick promises a "stylized" version of cartoonist Charles Addams' original characters different from anything Addams before.

"For instance, we've made Gomez debonair and quite handsome, but we've also made him more athletic and trim than Addams' strip character." Purists may not appreciate this homogeneous head of household, but at least John Astin will continue to supply his voice.

Along with fresh animation, Myrick says originality oozes from the fine supporting voices, which include Carol Channing, Rip Taylor and Edie McClurg. Each of the stars will have a chance to shine.

"Eight of the episodes are 21-minute, single stories," Myrick says. "Five, however, are divided into 11-, 7- and 3-minute segments dealing exclusively with only a few family members."

With the show's talent pool and the apparently endless appeal of Addams' kooky characters, look for The Addams Family to rule the block on Saturdays this fall.

James Cagney won the Oscar for his performance in 1942's Yankee Doodle Dandy, the film he said was his favorite. TNT celebrates the actor's life and career in James Cagney: Top of the World, premiering Sunday.

'Nothin' from nobody: Cagney did it his way

TNT salutes movies' toughest tough guy

By Steven Alan McGaw

Versatile James Cagney played many roles in his long career, from the singing cowboy in The Oklahoma Kid to the fast-talking executive in One, Two, Three. He played Bottom in Max Reinhardt's A Midsummer Night's Dream and won an Oscar for his portrayal of hooper George M. Cohan in Yankee Doodle Dandy.

But for most filmgoers (and generations who've seen him on television), James Cagney was a tough guy; self-reliant, city-bred, he used his fists and his brains to get what he wanted. "I don't take nothin' from nobody," Cagney snapped in a typical role, and no one doubted it for a second.

Cagney's distinctive film legacy is paid tribute in TNT's hourlong James Cagney: Top of the World, debuting on Sunday, July 5, with additional showings scheduled on July 6, 8, 17 and 18. Longtime Cagney-fan Michael J. Fox serves as host of the program, which includes film clips, interviews with co-stars Jack Lemmon and Mae Clarke, reminiscences from Cagney's daughter Casey, and vintage moments with Cagney himself.

The program offers behind-the-scenes information, like how Cagney came to star in Yankee Doodle Dandy. Accused of being a communist by the House Un-American Activities Committee, Cagney was cleared by chairman Martin Dies in 1940. Still, the actor feared a tarnished image and saw the film as a means to clear up any doubt in the public mind about his patriotic or political leanings.

Also interesting are the many references to Cagney's inventiveness in his films, like the famous "grapefruit scene" in Public Enemy (a last-minute addition), or many of killer Cody Jarrett's best moments in Raoul Walsh's fiery White Heat.

When Michael J. Fox met Cagney in 1985, Cagney was 85 years old, and in poor health.

"But when we shook hands," Fox remembers, "his grip was so strong, it was like he was saying, 'Kid, I could still knock you on your ass.'"

NEW FOREIGN VIDEO RELEASE

EUROPA, EUROPA: (1991) German and Russian with English subtitles. A quick-witted Jewish youngster stays alive during the Holocaust by passing himself off as a Nazi. Agnieszka Holland's film is the true story of Solomon Perel (Marco Hofschneider), whose impersonation was so convincing he was made a member of the Hitler Youth. In a way, the lad's survival is too much stuff of rousing movie adventure; certain episodes sustain the horror in original ways while a light directorial touch often makes truth seem stranger than fiction. Rated R for mature themes. Nominated for Best Foreign Film.

BATMAN RETURNS: Starring Michael Keaton, Michelle Pfeiffer and Danny DeVito. Four Boxes

Probably the first sequel to ever be better than the original. Inspired new casting (Pfeiffer and DeVito) and sixty million dollars in special effects make this PG-13 dark comedy a visual spectacle. However, with all of the hype, you would have to be recently emerged from a lead-lined cave not to know that Batman Returns is exciting, darkly funny and awe-inspiring. What you also need to know is that the sequel is very much a PG-13 film and not for children under 13. It is violent and scary. If your very young children want to be included in the Batman mania, rent the TV series. For the sequel Four Boxes

NEW VIDEO RELEASES

THE ADDAMS FAMILY: (1991) Starring Anjelica Huston and Raul Julia.

There's not much plot, but little is needed in Barry Sonnenfeld's spirited, visually adventurous movie based on the Charles Addams drawings and the 1960's television series. Anjelica Huston makes a slinky Morticia, mistress of the apple-pie-normal house of doom, and Raul Julia is an elegant Gomez. But as adept as the performances are, the mission is little more than to create a look and set up the next gag. That understood, the casting is ingenious, the design droll and the camera tricks dazzling in a lavish, funny revival that goes well beyond the limits of its original sources. Oscar nominated for Best Costume Design. Rated PG-13.

LET HIM HAVE IT: (1992) Starring Chris Eccleston and Tom Courtenay.

Pete Medak's eerie, meticulous film looks at the life of Derek Bentley (Chris Eccleston), a slow-witted teenager who, despite a jury's recommendation of mercy, was executed as an accessory to murder in Britain after World War II. Taken into a gang by his younger friend Chris (Paul Reynolds), a streetwise hoodlum who pulled the trigger but was too young to be executed, Derek takes to a life of crime despite the efforts of a loving father (Tom Courtenay). As he did in his film, The Krays, Peter Medak contrasts the obliviousness and overprotectiveness of parents with the temptations faced by their children. A thought-provoking and troubling story, and a well-made film. Rated R for violence.

GRAND CANYON: (1992) Starring Kevin Kline, Danny Glover, Steve Martin, Mary McDonnell, Mary-Louise Parker and Alfred Woodard.

Director Lawrence Kasdan's (The Big Chill) yuppie version of angst among LA citizens. Danny Glover is a tow truck driver who comes to Kevin Kline's rescue when his car gets stuck in a seedy section of LA. Kline and Glover are from different social and economic backgrounds but form an unlikely friendship, which changes their lives forever. (Steve Martin shows a darker side of the city as he becomes a victim of violent crime.) Somehow, the film manages to show how life does imitate art. A sometimes funny, always thoughtful drama about people with real problems and the good that can come from what seems to be a disastrous situation. While the film moves slowly, the dialogue is almost poetic. Depending upon your mood, this movie could be up-lifting or a memory play from hell. Rated R.

RESTORED EARLY SILENTS

The first four titles in a series of newly restored silent films are available from Milestone Film and Video. Together the four make up a sort of travelogue of exotic corners of the earth. Often the action is fast and furious.

GRASS: (1925) A documentary of a trek across Arabia and Persia by 50,000 nomads in search of fodder for their hundreds of thousands of animals. Man and beast stream across rivers and clamber up and down mountains in one long and stupendous brawl with the unforgiving terrain.

TABU: (1931) A dramatic feature about mysticism in the South Seas. The film won an Academy Award for cinematography.

90 DEGREES SOUTH: (1913) An account of Capt. Robert Scott's fatal march to the South Pole. The documentary has been restored by Britain's National Film Archive.

IN THE LAND OF THE WARRIOR CANOES: (1914) A drama about the Kwakiutl Indians of Vancouver, British Columbia.
