Barbara Allen was worried when she got sick at the Smithsonian Institute. So when she got back to Hereford, she went to her doctor. She was surprised when he sent her to a specialist in Amarillo.

After all, her symptoms seemed pretty minor. From time to time, everyone is fatigued, nauseated, and has itchy or crawly skin. So Barbara was shocked when her doctor told her that her liver was being destroyed by her immune system and that she would eventually need a liver transplant.

That was in August of 1983. Barbara got her new liver October 7, 1989.

But that's not how she describes it. Barbara and her husband, Bill, talk about what "we" went through.

"We call it our problem. When we talk about it, we say the things we went through because it was something we faced together," Bill said.

Barbara and Bill had six years to adjust to the idea of liver transplantation. Barbara's condition gradually deteriorated until her doctor told her last spring that the time had come to have a transplant. She wanted to wait longer, but by last spring, her liver was only functioning at twenty percent of capacity.

Last summer, Barbara went to Baylor University Medical Center in Dallas for an evaluation and preparation for the liver transplant. The doctors there told her to go home and come back in October. Bill and Barbara spent the summer contacting family and getting their daughter, Brenda, ready to start college at Angelo State.

Most people have to wait four to six weeks for a new liver. Who gets a liver when depends on how well livers from donors match with a particular transplant recipient.

The Allens were lucky. On a Monday, they went to Baylor for Barbara's pre-surgery preparation. The following Saturday, Barbara got her new liver.

Following the surgery, Bill and Barbara stayed in Dallas in special apartments. The only people in these

"You had a series in the paper on heroes. My husband was my hero during all that time. He just held me up. He's held me up for the past six years. He doesn't baby me by any means. He just doesn't do that. But I remember saying to him when we went for the evaluation in Dallas, the to have to worry about me along with getting adjusted to college. I was taking this man away from his job, causing worry on the boys (Brent, 28 and Blake, 30).

"And he just wanted to impress on me, 'I don't want you to worry. You didn't want this to happen. You didn't cause this to happen. I love you and we're going to do this together.' So with people like that in your life, you can't help but come out of it okay.

Another person who has been a source of inspiration for Barbara is her son, Brent, who lives in Amarillo. He is paraplegic.

Barbara came home for the holidays in December but went back to Dallas until December 30, when she came home to stay.

Having a new liver has given Barbara a new lease on life. She is no longer tired, or sick to her stomach. For the first time in her life she has excess energy, a side effect of her medication.

The other side effects of Barbara's medication are not so pleasant. Steroids, particularly cyclosporine, suppress her immune system so her body will not reject her new liver. Minor side effects include a sense of false hunger and facial hair. Because her immune system is so low, she has to be careful not to be exposed to disease.

Barbara thinks she has recovered from surgery. "But because my immune system is so low, it's a matter of not being around people who are ill, not to hug people. That's one of the hardest things not to do, to just hug your friends and your family. Of course, you don't know who's been exposed or who has the flu bug or something like this. Taking care of myself is important. Really taking care of myself and not letting a rash go for a week without seeing a doctor.

apartments are transplant recipients and their families.

Bill, who is a Certified Public Accountant, took a leave of absence from his job and stayed with Barbara for all but one week while she was in Dallas.

"He was my support group," Barbara said. "Your support group is very important. They stress that at Baylor.

things that you have to go through...It took him away from his job and he's a CPA. I remember saying to him, 'I'm sorry I caused you so much trouble.' And he scolded me and said to me, 'I never want to hear you say that again.'

"I was feeling very guilty at the time. Brenda was going off to school, and the first semester of college has got to be rough. I knew she was going

Delight

She was a hero to us at Brand, North Plains

We've been doing this series on Hereford's Heroes, asking readers of the Brand to tell us about their personal heroes.

Delight Williams was a hero of ours.

Almost anyone can answer the telephone or meet anyone who comes in the door.

It takes a special person to be, well, diplomatic with some stranger who you've never seen or heard, some stranger who just comes walking in or calling up.

I made no difference whether they came in to buy $1,000 worth of advertising or to complain about anything. She would deal with each of them with aplomb. She would have made a good ambassador to Russia back when Nikita Krushchev was pounding his shoe. She would have used her great gifts of sweetness and happiness to disarm Mr. Krushchev.

About a year ago, "Be Happy" was on the radio for what seemed like eight times a day. Every time it would come on, Delight would put our telephone system on "all call" and play the song for all of us to hear. We started giving her a hard time about it. If Delight had a theme song, "Be Happy" was it. I'm glad she heard it, and played it for all of us, during her last week at the Brand.

Delight's position may be filled, but no one will ever take her place.

Just another personal note, then I'll let some of the others talk.

I went through a terrible time in my life not long after I had started here at the Brand. Things didn't work out between me and my wife, and our divorce got a little hateful. Mary Jane would call Delight and tell her this, that and the other. Delight would just sit there and listen and listen. She'd offer Mary Jane a little advice, then Delight would tell me that Mary Jane called and I needed to do this or that.

Delight earned the flowers I eventually gave her.

She also deserved the love that each of us gave her.--John Brooks.

I knew Delight for nearly 17 years, but if I had known her for only a day I would still have had the same admiration for this remarkable lady. She was my confidant, my counselor during good and bad times. More importantly, she was my friend.

I'm certain Delight is looking over my shoulder right now reading this column. Delight, just know we miss seeing you each day at work but our memories of you will keep you with us in our hearts.

There will never be another like you!--Sandy Stagner
(Note: This whole thing is Sandy's idea. You get a gold star!--Brooks)

Delight found out that my husband spends much of his time working out of town and she told me a story about herself to help me deal with it.

Delight's husband was in the service when they were first married. He spent a couple of years apart from Delight. During that time, their first child was born. Not only did the marriage survive, but the child turned out well.

So when Delight told me, "You can do it. It's not easy, but you can do it," she gave me something solid to hold onto.

I only knew Delight for two weeks. It's impossible to imagine how much (and how well) she influenced people who knew her for years.--Cindy Pottorff

Delight was eternally thin and the word "diet" was not in her vocabulary. She loved snack foods and had a drawer full of them. When you were on a diet, as most of us were at one time or another, you could always count on Delight's drawer of goodies when you couldn't stand it any more. She'd never say a word.--Sherry Davis

Delight usually beat me to work (not a particularly difficult feat), and I always looked forward to her greeting when I came in. She was, I suppose, the most genuine person I have known. She was easy to talk to, truly concerned when someone was experiencing some difficulty, and truly rejoicing in another's happiness.

Her activity was amazing, and her wit was always keen enough to provide a quick retort when one was called for. Delight always had a good word, even for those of us who hated "Be Happy"!

Dear lady, you will be missed!--Joe Weaver

I met Delight 18 years ago when we came to Hereford. She never disappointed me in being the kind of lady everyone knew she was.

She was my role model in Hereford. We "shared" office manager duties at the Brand over the years, always trying to please each other choosing the days we wanted off.

If I could even come close to living out the rest of my life with the happiness, health and energy Delight had, I would be a very fortunate person.

She had a large group of fellow employees who loved and respected her, a family who not only loved her but included her in many things they did and made her feel so very special, a host of friends and a faith that one (See DELIGHT, Page 2A)

First in a periodic series of election profiles

By MICHAEL HOLMES
Associated Press Writer

AUSTIN (AP) - Kent Hance had spent most of a rainy winter's day on the telephone talking with potential campaign contributors when his wife, Carol, called from Longview.

After a day of East Texas campaigning, storms had delayed her flight to Dallas and forced her to miss a connection to Austin.

"No problem," Hance told her. "There's a later flight that'll get you into Dallas-Fort Worth around 9 o'clock. There's an American flight at 10 that'll get you home just before 11, and Delta's got one at 10:30. I'll see you tonight."

He never even glanced at a printed flight schedule. "I know 'em everywhere in Texas," he said, and grinned.

At 47, Hance has been crisscrossing the state as a public official or candidate for nearly two decades. In this, his second bid for governor, he hopes that frequent flying will pay big dividends.

"There's a lot of difference in having an idea and implementing an idea. I'm the only one with a proven track record of being able to implement ideas in public service."

His resume includes state and federal offices and membership in both parties. Since upsetting state Sen. H.J. "Doc" Blanchard of Lubbock in 1974, Hance has been on the ballot all but one election year.

He ran for Congress in 1978, defeating the president's son, George W. Bush, and serving three terms. In 1981, he angered fellow Democrats by sponsoring President Reagan's tax cut. It passed, and his 1990 campaign commercials still boast of the feat.

Hance left the safe congressional seat to run for U.S. Senate in 1984, narrowly losing a runoff to liberal state Sen. Lloyd Doggett of Austin. That, Hance says, set the stage for his 1985 party switch.

In 1986, his first campaign as a Republican, Hance was knocked out of the gubernatorial primary by Bill Clements. Clements then resuscitated Hance's political career by appointing him to the Railroad Commission in 1987. He won election to the job in 1988 and grabbed headlines worldwide by attending OPEC oil talks.

Republican gubernatorial candidate Kent Hance, at-a-glance:
Name: Kent Hance
Age: 47
Born: Nov. 14, 1942, Dimmitt
Education: Bachelor's degree, business administration, Texas Tech, 1965; law degree, University of Texas, 1968.
Occupation: Chairman, Texas Railroad Commission.
Career Highlights: Practiced law in Lubbock and taught business law at Texas Tech. Appointed to West Texas State University board of regents in 1972. State senator, 1975-1978. Congressman 1979-1984. Texas Railroad Commission since 1987.
Family: Married Carol Hays; two children.

Hance says all that experience is an asset.

"If you look at what I've done on cutting spending, cutting taxes, taking a strong stand on law and order issues, the public will say, 'We need more people like him.'"

But a lengthy public record also provides fodder for criticism.

Hance was ripped for converting to an anti-abortion stance after voting for abortion funds as a congressman.

Some Republicans said his party switch was opportunistic. He says it was realistic. "Conservative Democrats need to realize that if they're going to be active on a statewide basis, they'd better be in the Republican Party."

Others attack his tenure, saying he has become part of the problem.

"It's what I call the flea looking for a larger dog syndrome," said GOP gubernatorial hopeful Jack Rains.

Murder, suicide, or fulfillment?

Deaths of eight followers prompts investigation

By EVAN RAMSTAD
Associated Press Writer
DALLAS (AP) - A prosecutor investigating the deaths of eight followers of a housewife-turned-guru over the last 12 years is trying to piece together a criminal case with a hard-to-prove premise: that beliefs can kill.

Four followers of mystical leader Terri Hoffman have committed suicide, including two of her four husbands, and two died in apparent accidents. Of those six, two told relatives they suffered from terminal illnesses, although autopsies showed they did not, and at least four bequeathed money and property to Ms. Hoffman.

Then, in November, police linked the deaths of an investment counselor and his wife to Ms. Hoffman's pastiche of philosophy, ancient mythology and metaphysics.

David and Glenda Goodman were found shot to death in their den, two handguns beside them on the floor. On a desk a few feet away lay two purple spiral-bound notebooks in which they recorded their devotion to Ms. Hoffman.

In one book, Mrs. Goodman called "the shooting" the path to success and an escape from the sufferings of the physical world. Soon, she wrote to her husband, he would be able to come and go from the physical world at will, just as, she said, "Terri" can.

The journals tell more: how the Goodmans, both 48, were considering leaving their home to Ms. Hoffman. Their check registers indicated they'd already given her $110,000 over three years, police say.

In addition to the deaths of the eight devotees, a ninth person, a housekeeper, died when the car of one follower plunged off a Colorado cliff.

Assistant District Attorney Cecil Emerson said he's trying to determine whether "mind control" can be legally blamed for contributing to a death, which might require breaking new legal ground.

"It's never entered anyone's mind that you could put together a case like this," Emerson said. "I'm confident we can."

Still, he conceded it would be a long time before he could put the case before a grand jury - if it even gets that far.

"The theme of this investigation is murder," he said. "The reality is probably theft."

So far, investigators have gathered mostly autopsy reports, the files of police investigations into the accidents and the financial records of some of those who died.

No criminal action has been taken against Ms. Hoffman, but two lawsuits have been filed against her.

In 1982, the brother of follower Sandra Cleaver contested her will leaving everything to Ms. Hoffman, including a $300,000 life insurance policy and a house. Six days after the case went to trial, Ms. Hoffman and Ms. Cleaver's brother agreed out of court to split the estate.

She faces a civil trial in March stemming from a wrongful death suit brought by the children of her fourth husband, Don Hoffman, who killed himself in September 1988.

Ms. Hoffman's attorney, Fred Time, said she is being persecuted.

"It's witch hunting," Time said. "She's supposed to have all these tremendous powers - ridiculous. There's no history of that anywhere in the world."

He said the suit and investigation would clear Ms. Hoffman, 51, who he described as a "plain, ordinary person who gets money by counseling people."

How does he explain the number of deaths among her followers?

"She listens to people who are in extremely transient stages of their life," Time said.

Ms. Hoffman told The Associated Press she would answer questions only in the presence of Time, who said he would not allow her to speak to reporters while an investigation was pending.

Ms. Hoffman became known in Dallas in the late 1960s and early '70s for her meditation classes, a blend of mythology and metaphysics in which "masters" were said to be reached.

"A Master is a high, evolved being who has great wisdom," she told The Monthly Aspectarian last year. She described for the Chicago-based magazine her first experience with

"masters," which took place at age 3, saying, "They explained to me that they were beings that sometimes helped people that are in physical bodies or other bodies, and they come to teach them."

In 1974, Ms. Hoffman founded Conscious Development of Body, Mind & Soul Inc. to sell tapes and booklets of her teachings. She sold thousands, Time said, and attracted hundreds of followers.

David Goodman became one of them in the early '70s. He met Ms. Hoffman at Dallas' Southern Methodist University, where he was a business professor and she was teaching a meditation class, Emerson said.

Ms. Hoffman counseled Goodman during his first divorce, they became friends and, years later, made business investments together.

When Ms. Hoffman was sued by Ms. Cleaver's brother, Goodman day she would meet the Lord and Hank would be right there waiting for her. She deserved the best in life, and in my opinion she won.—Lavon Nieman

DELIGHT

It has been said that love is an art. Delight Williams had mastered the art. She gave a special portion of love to everyone she met. She set examples of unconditional love for all to follow.

She was a woman who majored in thoughtfulness, kindness, understanding, encouragement, tolerance and loyalty.

It is a privilege and honor to have known her. I am thankful for the times we had together. I hope that I can share with others the love she shared with me. I think she would like that.—Kay Crismon

There are many things I remember about Delight.

Delight was a noun, an adjective, an adverb. She was probably the model used when Webster defined Delight. Just saying her name seemed somehow to make a dreary day a little bit more palatable.

She may have been a permanent fixture around the Brand, but she was never considered an antique. I think that's why young people working here were always able to identify with her. Under their critical scrutiny she was what most youngsters envisioned as a role model, "the type of person I want to be when I grow up and become a senior citizen."

From head to toe she was what they considered NEAT!! I would not be surprised to find she was a subscriber to Teen Magazine.

I had the opportunity to be closer, in many respects, than others who worked with her. Not only did she have to put up with me at work, but she had to endure my tenure as her next-door neighbor. That particular aspect of our relationship was probably her biggest test in patience.

More than once she would subtly offer insight on some remedies for the Japanese clover attacking my yard and threatening hers. Last summer she bulk-ordered (four packages) of 99-cent exotic bulbs from upstate New York and asked me daily if I had finally found the initiative to set them out.

Delight was smart like a fox, too. I'll never forget her grapevines. Every summer she would bring over a portion of her delicious green grapes. One summer, the green grape shipments ceased. I attributed the slump to some kind of grape famine, a freak increase in bird population, or more demand from her immediate family.

That's why I was so grateful when, the following spring, she said I could have two of the vines for my arbor trellis. I gratefully dug those grapevines and began a watering regimen that lasted at least two years before they were dug a second, final time.

I will miss the summer evening chats we had while she was weeding her lawn and I was trying to convince her to sell me her prized wedding hoe.

I will miss seeing her decked out in the latest outfit to hit the Esprit, Cambridge or Hang Ten fashion lines. I will miss hearing her tell Mark Nicklaus, "No, we don't charge these classified ads, you'll have to go get the money." I will miss the efforts she went through to entertain children while their frazzled parents placed ads.

But I will especially miss the green grape harvest.—Mauri Montgomery

Hereford Hustlers welcome new business

Dr. F. Ray and Alice Jones cut the ribbon Friday, welcoming them as a new member of the Deaf Smith County Chamber of Commerce. They were presented with their "first dollar of clear profit" and received a membership plaque from new Chamber President Doug Josseland, who welcomed Dr. Jones for having the first new business opening in 1990. Dr. Jones is an ophthalmologist, and is located at 106 Ave. A in Hereford. Bill Harris is president of the Hustlers, the goodwill ambassadors of the chamber.

LIFE

It's (patting the medicine kit) going to donate an organ, their organs will be available for donation. That is not always true, even when one signs a paper indicating that one is donating one's organs. If a person's immediate family decides that organs should not be donated from a loved one's body, those organs will not be made available to people who need transplants.

For this reason, people who want to be organ donors should discuss the matter with their families.

Another reason is to thank friends in Hereford. Barbara says, "My support group includes friends I have here. They called and they still do to see how I'm doing. My friend across the street who came and stayed with me a week. And there are others. I couldn't possibly name them all, but I'm very grateful."

City commission meets Monday

The Hereford city commission will meet at 7:30 p.m. Monday at City Hall.

The agenda includes a presentation from Linda Wyatt, regional engineer for the Texas Department of Health, on anticipated requirements for the sanitary landfill; discussion of a half-cent sales tax for economic development; authorization of bids for seal coating; painting the water tower at the old Swift plant; specifications for repairs to the roofs of the Fullwood Building and the airport terminal; bids for a golf course mower and two pickups; and other business.

Letters to the Editor

Dear editor:
Abortion may be murder, but assaulting the mind of a nine-year-old child is just as terrible. My son found a rolled-up piece of paper in a yard last Saturday. He unrolled it and saw the words "Abortion Is Murder" in large, handwritten letters. Inside the paper was a pamphlet with a full-color picture of a fetus.

I don't object to this type of literature being distributed, but it should be distributed from door-to-door from one adult to another. These items should not be haphazardly thrown into yards for any child to find. This is not something for a young child to find, to worry about, to cry himself to sleep over.

I would hope the persons responsible for distributing this would be more responsible in the future.

HANCE

who's taken to calling him "Last Chance Hance" in reference to the two statewide defeats.

"Jack's a nice guy and he's trying to get a little publicity," Hance responded. "I'm running for governor and discussing the issues. I'm confident I'll win. If something happens and I don't, I'll be happy whatever I do."

Political experience means campaign experience, and Hance seems comfortable on the stump.

His campaign weaponry includes an arsenal of jokes and stories. Ask about the dart board on a campaign headquarters wall, and he tells of an old law client who Lubbock police took to jail rather than the hospital, booking the man while a dart was sticking in his head. The mug shot showed it clearly, and Hance says the man was released.

The key promise of his campaign is a constitutional ban on state income taxes, a message he says the public likes.

"I had a young lady stop me on an airplane just yesterday," he said. "She'd lived in Virginia and paid that income tax. She said, 'Boy, I'm with you 100 percent.'"

He wants a constitutional amendment to require two-thirds support in the House and Senate for any tax increase. He favors electing the state education commissioner and allowing local schools to select textbooks.

Hance has proposed establishing special "drug courts" in the state's biggest cities and banning bail for accused drug dealers.

"I've discussed the issues that I think are important - economic development, banning a state incomes tax, education, fighting crime, fighting drugs," he said. "I've made a difference everywhere I've served. I'm the most qualified person to seek the governor's office."

Ask Dr. Lamb

DEAR DR. LAMB: Two years ago I had a heart attack. I had and still do have a high cholesterol and I have fatty spots under my eyes. They are ugly. How can I get rid of them? My mother, father and two brothers passed away with heart attacks but they never had those fat spots under the eyes. And of all the people I know with heart problems, they don't have these spots either. I am 53 years old and don't want to go through the rest of my life with these ugly fat spots.

DEAR READER: You are apparently describing xanthelasma, which are mostly cholesterol deposits under the surface of the skin. These occur in some individuals with high cholesterol levels — particularly with inherited disorders. And in that case they may be associated with coronary heart disease.

YOUR VITAL FORCE

You may not realize it, but your vital force is expressed through your nervous system, extending from the brain and spine to every gland, tissue, organ, and muscle in your body.

That's why the health of your spine is so essential to the health of your entire body. Any spinal strain or shock, even an awkward move, can sometimes affect the vertebrae and discs, causing irritation to the nervous system. Irritation of the nerves can disturb the body's normal function, causing pain and many other health problems.

Treatment of spinal disorders is essential to good health. Pain-killing drugs won't do the job. They can dull the pain or hide the symptoms for awhile. Pain-killers are not curative in themselves. Given a chance, the natural healing power of the body is often sufficient to return you to good health.

If you are bothered by back pain, headaches, or other symptoms related to disorders of the spine, seek the help you need from a specialist trained to treat these disorders.

Newspapers, like most industries, have made dramatic changes just in the past decade—not only internally but also externally. Most newspapers have converted to some type of computerized typesetting with the final product coming off a big offset press.

At the beginning of the '80s, newspapers had their traditional competitors for the advertising dollar from radio, television, Yellow Pages, coupon promoters and gimmick pushers. And most retailers in smaller towns found that their competitor for the retail dollar was the larger discount store in a nearby larger city.

But no more, points out James Roberts, publisher of The Andrews County News. Now, the newspaper and the retailer find that one of their biggest competitors is the United States Postal Service. With the advent of bulk discount rates for third class mail, the postman is a bigger competitor for both the newspaper and the retailer than the big discount house in the big city.

How many catalogs arrived at your mail box or business during the last three months of 1989? How many pre-prints cluttered your mail during the final weeks of the year?

State Comptroller Bob Bullock has stated that the largest untapped source of sales tax funds left for the state treasury are the sales made from out-of-state catalogs. And the reason the mails have become increasingly cluttered with catalogs, circulars, coupon offers, magazine pitches, bonus prize awards, sweepstakes and dozens of other gimmicks is the special rate given by the post office department to big, mass, third-class mailers.

And it may get worse before it gets better, Roberts reports in a recent column. Now, the supposedly independent postal service has proposed that it be permitted to make individual contracts with 20 or 30 of the top mailers in the country for special treatment, cheap postal rates, and volume discounts. And, a second proposal, if passed would allow the Postal Service to delay a lot of first class mail plus some second-class mail by at least a day. Estimates are that 15 to 30 percent of all first-class mail would be affected.

A lot of junk mail directly affects local retailers and thus, local newspapers. And, if the new proposals go through, it could affect anyone who buys a first-class stamp and expects equal treatment and equal delivery speed. Allowing the postal service to make special deals with the country's largest mailers for special rates and special treatment makes "second-class" citizens, mailwise, of the rest of us.

With Manuel Noriega in U.S. custody and awaiting trial in Florida on drug trafficking charges, one political observer suggested that the Panamanian dictator "took the safest way out." His reasoning was that Noriega has a better chance with the U.S. court system than any other alternative.

With Panama in the news, it's interesting to take a look back at the history of the Panama Canal. You will remember that the world had sought for years some way to have a canal to save thousands of miles of travel around the southern tip of South America. Spain tried to dig a canal in Panama in 1814 but failed. The French tried again in 1883-87 and failed. In 1903, Panama declared its independence from Columbia and that same year the U.S. signed a treaty in which the U.S. would build a canal.

This treaty gave the U.S. the right to set up a Canal Zone where the U.S. would be responsible for the construction, operation and defense of the canal. The most important part of this treaty was the granting of sovereign rights within the Canal Zone to the U.S.

It took 10 long and difficult years to build this canal, from 1904 to 1914. Engineers and diggers labored under trying conditions of disease, landslides and political upheaval in the area. The canal, carved out of the jungle 80 years ago, has a system of locks and equipment that is still used today.

In 1977, Panama had a dictator named Omar Torrijos who informed President Carter that unless the U.S. handed over the canal, he would destroy it. After a lot of bitter debate, this treaty to turn over the canal in 1999 barely passed the Senate. Critics say the treaty had some serious defects, mainly a secret section inserted by the Panamanian dictator which wiped out U.S. rights to keep a defense unit there to protect the canal.

The U.S. has spent billions of dollars on the canal and the Canal Zone, with its American residents, fuels the entire Panamanian economy. It is by far the biggest industry in Panama, a country only 375 miles long and 110 miles wide.

Whether we like it or not, events in Panama have a lot of effect upon all of us. The U.S. is preparing to spend billions now to restore Panama and guess who will pick up the tab?

Bush wins Round 1

An AP News Analysis
By WALTER R. MEARS
AP Special Correspondent
WASHINGTON (AP) - President Bush led with his high cards, defense, foreign policy and the remnants of the Cold War. Democratic leaders praised the president, conceded the hand, and set about changing the subject.

Bush's State of the Union response to the chain reaction "revolution of '89" in Eastern Europe fortells the American politics of the '90s.

Any president has the upper hand when the issues are national defense and foreign affairs, and, for most of the past generation, those have been Republican issues.

The Democrats usually make their case on domestic matters. Even with Bush's poll popularity at record highs, the voters say they think Democrats can do a better job in dealing with problems at home.

With the eased threat from Moscow and the disintegration of its satellite bloc, Democrats think they can shift the voter focus, beginning with this year's election campaign and looking toward the presidential elections of 1992 and 1996.

That would put the emphasis on future campaigns on their strong suit. It would, presumably, spare their future presidential nominees the kind of ridicule Gov. Michael Dukakis faced in 1988 after he was photographed with his helmeted head jutting up from the turret of a tank. At a campaign reunion, Bush jokingly thanked his 1988 advisers for keeping him out of tanks.

Now, 10 days into the new session of Congress, the political advantage belongs to Bush. He won, unexpectedly, with the Senate minority he needed to uphold a veto of a bill extending the U.S. visas of Chinese students, a step he said he had taken anyhow. Then came his two major messages of the year, the new budget on Monday, the State of the Union address to a joint session of Congress on Wednesday night.

Leaving budget bogymen and fine print problems for later, the president issued his surprise call to subtract an additional 80,000 soldiers each from the U.S.-Soviet troop cuts in Europe that are being negotiated.

Even Democrats who had denounced his budget harmonized in praise of that proposal, outlined hours after Bush had telephoned Soviet President Mikhail S. Gorbachev to tell him about it.

That is the kind of diplomatic drama a president can deliver. The Democrats have nothing to match it.

The budget and domestic priorities are politically contested terrain. Nobody is quarreling about troop cuts. And the democratic upheavals that made them practical work to Bush's advantage, even though the United States was not directly involved in the changes that swept Eastern Europe.

House Speaker Thomas S. Foley said the conditions and commitments that led to the disintegration of the Communist empire in Europe were the work of presidents, Congresses and American servicemen from Harry Truman's time.

That counts the Democrats in for a share of the credit, but Bush is the major political beneficiary, simply because he was president when it happened.

So the Democratic emphasis is on change at home. "There are new realities to be grasped, new challenges to be met, and very different battles to be won," Foley said in the Democratic response to Bush.

"In the 1990s, and well into the next century, the central challenge for America will be economic, not military," he said. "The greatest test of our strength will be in our classrooms, not our missile silos. The gravest threat will come not from any nation's attempt at world domination, but from every nation's complicity in the worldwide destruction of the environment."

Those are problems indeed, and there are more built into the Bush budget, deficits now, soaring federal liabilities later. Those domestic headaches may well rearm the Democrats.

But Bush is in charge at a time of chain reaction international change "so striking that it marks the beginning of a new era in the world's affairs." Last spring, Democrats were complaining that he was passively yielding the stage to Gorbachev, failing to respond to Moscow peace initiatives. He silenced that with his first proposal for troop cuts, delivered to the NATO summit at the end of May. Now Bush holds the initiative.

The first round of the 1990 political season is his. But only the first, and it's a long season.

BABBLING BROOKS

The world is truly one community. The Golden Arches have risen in Moscow.

A town just isn't a town without a McDonald's. Moscow is now on an even keel with Hereford and Dumas and Borger and Canyon. In Moscow, they have opened the biggest McDonald's in the world. It has 27 little cash registers where they take your order, and the dining area seats 600 Muscovites.

They are all there eating their "Beeg Mocks." There's no fancy sounding word right off pen of Tolstoy for a Big Mac. Beeg Mock. That's what it sounds like in Russian.

I can hardly wait for them to have that all-time popular promotion, where you go in an say "Two all beef patties, special sauce, lettuce, cheese, pickles, onion on a sesame seed bun" as fast as you can. That probably sounds as bad in Russian as the prologue to the Canterbury Tales does in modern English. Something is lost in the translation.

I wonder what the facial expression was of the first Russian to eat a Big Mac. Don't get me wrong: I've had my share of Big Mac attacks. But for someone whose diet has consisted of heavy black bread and soup made of beets, that first bite of a Big Mac probably made the ol' lips curl a little.

And do Russians really care that one side of the McDLT package keeps the patty warm, while the other side keeps the lettuce and tomato cool?

It didn't hear mention of a drive-up window in the story I saw on television. Are there enough cars in Moscow to warrant a drive-up window? Is it as hard to understand the people talking to you from the little box in Russian as it is in English?

And the most important question of all: Is it proper for a 16-year-old making two rubles a day to tell a ranking member of the Politburo that his burger's not ready and can he please pull up over there and we'll bring it to you as soon as we can?

They might be working in the frozen whale processing center in Siberia.

In short order.

One of the hard things to adjust to for the Muscovites was all these smiling kids.

McDonald's sent folks over, graduates of Hamburger University, to teach everyone to be chipper, whether they were flipping burgers (even in Moscow they're fried, not broiled) or cleaning tables or waiting on a busload of hockey players.

An unidentified McDonald's worker told the Associated Press, "I smile to everybody and they say, 'What's wrong? Why the smile?' they think I'm laughing at them, because it's very unusual for Soviet people to be kind and to be polite to everybody."

Dmitri Simes, a Soviet emigre in Washington, D.C., doesn't think McDonald's can cut the mustard in Moscow.

"They've had to train people for things they are not conditioned to be: pleasant, efficient, responsible and not steal from the kitchen, the company or the customers," Simes said.

"To deliver the stuff they need at the restaurant, they will need reliable transportation. It doesn't exist. You have to overcome so many bottlenecks inherent in the Soviet system."

Another question I have not yet had answered is whether they sell Coca-Cola with their stuff at McDonald's-Moscow. I was under the opinion that Pepsi had the sole cola concession in the USSR. I've never seen anything but Coca-Cola products served at a McDonald's, in the USA or Mexico.

I would hope that the Russians have, say, 200 million billion trillion Beeg Mock attacks before they have a nuclear one. A Beeg Mock attack is usually prettier, depending on the intensity of the attack.

And whether you have to pull up and have them bring it out to you in a few minutes.

And will McDonald's also have the first heat lamp in Moscow? Inquiring minds want to know.

Things could get ugly, so we'd better watch our step. Now that they've had their first Beeg Mock, they'll want to know the ingredients of the "special sauce." That could end the melting of the Cold War.

It may appease them if we just tell 'em it's mostly mayonnaise.

And Russian salad dressing.

But Russians probably don't know what the heck Russian salad dressing is.

BACKING BUSH

By Dr. Richard L. Leshar
President
U.S. Chamber of Commerce

WASHINGTON -- "They say Wilson has blundered," said the great entrepreneur Thomas Edison in reference to President Woodrow Wilson. "Perhaps he has, but I notice he usually blunders forward." Everyone who ascends to the Oval Office knows the job will require tough decisions guaranteed to provoke controversy and criticism. It goes with the territory. In politics, as in business, there are many sides to every issue, and rarely does an executive encounter a clear-cut question that does not present various shades of ambiguity. Any leader who does not stir up an occasional hornets' nest isn't doing his job.

President Bush is earning his pay. In his first year in office, he has been confronted with a sizzling array of foreign policy crises that would test the mettle of any leader in Asia, Eastern Europe and Central America. He has made many difficult decisions, each one of which has evoked the predictable round of second-guessing and criticism.

Perhaps the least controversial of his decisions was the most dramatic - ousting the outlaw regime of Panama. Sending brave young men into battle is always a hard call, especially in a volatile situation such as prevailed in Panama. But while no one took pleasure in the conflict and destruction that ensued, the American people realized the President's choice was correct. An overwhelming majority support his decision, only a few condemned it.

By contrast, many people have criticized President Bush's low key response to the dramatic upheavals in Eastern Europe. They say he should be moving more aggressively to exploit developments to our advantage. But the President's low profile is precisely the correct tone. Too much overt action or ill-chosen words on his part could only serve to strengthen the hand of reactionaries in the Kremlin who, use the new reforms, possibly leading to violent repression of the fledgling democracy movement.

Of course, that is what happened in China. Of all the President's tough decisions, perhaps the mission he sent to Beijing was the most disputed. After the terrible bloodletting in Tianamen Square last spring, many believe the United States should have nothing whatever to do with China, at least until the current leadership is replaced. President Bush has taken much flak for that one.

But while we are correct to condemn the ruthless repression in China, President Bush is correct that we must not completely sever our ties to the Chinese government. He knows that continued communication and interaction offer our best opportunity for encouraging reform in China, as was the case in our relations with the Soviet Union, Hungary, Czechoslovakia, the Philippines, Chile, Romania and elsewhere.

Reasonable people can and will take issue with the President's foreign policy decisions; that is a fundamental right of democracy. For my book, however, I believe our President has been right on the money in all three regions, and that his soaring popularity rating reflects that fact.

Bennett: drug 'scourge' beginning to pass'

WASHINGTON (AP) - National drug policy director William J. Bennett said Friday that "the scourge is beginning to pass" and the war against drugs is being won.

"If you want to take World War II, people say the battle of Midway was a turning point," Bennett told the Senate Judiciary Committee. "I think we're at Midway, maybe a little beyond."

Bennett said that when he became head of the war on drugs a year ago, "it was by no means certain that we would win it."

"My view has changed," Bennett said. "The war is by no means over, but it is clearly winnable and the momentum, I think, is shifting our way. Indeed, while there is still too much bad news, there are scattered but clear signs that we are beginning to win, the scourge is beginning to pass."

"If we keep up our efforts, indeed, intensify our efforts, we are going to win," Bennett said.

His testimony contained little if anything beyond what the Bush administration presented last week when it unveiled the second installment of its drug-war strategy, calling for a $10.6 billion budget in the fiscal year that begins next October.

For the most part, senators of both parties were not interested in any clash of swords with Bennett over details of the plan.

The committee chairman, Sen. Joseph Biden, D-Del., did ask Bennett to comment on an alternative strategy Biden wrote. It calls for putting more stress on hard-core users, education, treatment and a one-time program to forgive international debt owed by Andean nations if farmers there plant other crops in place of the coca they normally produce.

Bennett said that he agreed with the bulk of what Biden proposed and that any differences were mostly a matter of emphasis. He did say that if forced to choose between education and enforcement he would pick the latter.

The former secretary of education said that education remains his "first love" but that in fighting drugs it represents "a helpful auxiliary."

"I know children," Bennett said. "... That may not be a very rosy view of children, but I do know children."

"It seems to me that it's more than a helpful auxiliary," Sen. Paul Simon, D-Ill., said. "You talk to LeRoy Martin, the superintendent of police in Chicago, and he'll tell you that education should be the centerpiece."

Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass., pressed Bennett on why the administration after barring a number of foreign-made, semiautomatic assault rifles has allowed importers to bring in semiautomatic assault pistols from the same manufacturers which are often only slightly different from the rifles.

Kennedy repeatedly asked why Bennett had not urged the president to bar the pistols as well. The exchange was similar to ones involving the gun issue that have erupted at past Judiciary Committee hearings between Bennett and Sens. Kennedy and Howard Metzenbaum, D-Ohio.

"Why are you silent? Why are you quiet?" Kennedy demanded.

"Because I have given my advice to the president, senator, and that is where it should lie," Bennett said.

At one point, Kennedy asked Bennett if there were any sporting use for the assault pistols, and the drug policy director said he had been told by experts that there was not. "Well, what do you think?" Kennedy asked.

"I don't know a damn thing about guns," Bennett said.

Kennedy pressed ahead, reminding Bennett that police are in danger of being targets of assault pistols. Bennett said that the issue was highly complex and that criminals would always be able to get guns while some others had good reason to possess weapons.

"The world is awash in guns, senator," Bennett said. "This is a cheap, symbolic victory that you are interested in that has nothing to do with reality."

DEATHS

testified on her behalf. And when he left SMU in 1987, she helped him start an investment newsletter.

Goodman married and divorced twice more before he met his fourth wife, Glenda, also a devotee. They continued to adhere to Ms. Hoffman's teachings years after most followers abandoned them.

Ms. Hoffman's classes began to dissipate in 1977 after the suicide of her second husband, Glenn Cooley. Some followers have said they became wary as Ms. Hoffman's meditations and spiritual sessions focused less on learning than on fighting "evil" forces.

Cooley killed himself less than a week after the couple's divorce became final, the first of the nine deaths police now are investigating.

In 1979, Devereaux Cleaver, the 14-year-old daughter of Sandra Cleaver, drowned rafting in Hawaii. Two years later, Ms. Cleaver and her housekeeper, who did not follow Ms. Hoffman's teachings, died in a car that tumbled off a Colorado cliff near land owned by some devotees.

In 1987, another follower, Robin Ostott, shot herself after telling people she had viral hepatitis. Like Don Hoffman, who said he had cancer when he took a drug overdose, an autopsy showed Ms. Ostott did not have the disease she claimed.

A Chicago follower of Ms. Hoffman, Mary Levinson, also killed herself in 1987. Just weeks before, she changed her will to dispose of her estate, valued at more than $125,000, in a manner that could not be traced, her parents told The Dallas Morning News. Ms. Hoffman told the newspaper she did not receive any money from Ms. Levinson, but would not answer other questions.

Ms. Hoffman was a beneficiary in both her husbands' wills, as well as in Ms. Cleaver's and Ms. Ostott's, Time confirmed.

Police have not found a will for the Goodmans, but their journals indicate they considered deeding their house to Ms. Hoffman.

Those writings also suggest they were concerned about tax problems. Goodman lost money in a Dallas investment company whose leaders were convicted of tax fraud last year, Emerson said. Though Goodman was not implicated in any criminal activity, he lost thousands of dollars in the company's illegal shelters. In 1988, he reached an agreement with the Internal Revenue Service to retire a tax debt estimated at more than $300,000, the Morning News reported. The IRS declined to release details of the case.

Goodman's father said the couple broke off contact with relatives and many friends in 1989.

"We had a fine, loving relationship up until then," said Leonard Goodman, 74, of Santa Maria, Calif. "Something very unusual - it turned out very tragic - happened to break that relationship."

He said he would not elaborate while the deaths were under investigation.

The Goodmans' two purple notebooks contain some of the strongest evidence investigators have linking them to Ms. Hoffman.

On page after page, David Goodman, calling himself Jupiter after the Roman god, asks questions of Glenda, addressed as Venus, about their quest to "leave the physical."

In one passage, Mrs. Goodman, apparently writing as a god speaking to both her mortal self and her husband, said: "Just like with the shooting. If you do that, I can make you both a success. That is, can make you yourself. Your spirit."

In another passage, Goodman asks about suffering and his wife responds with an apparent reference to Ms. Hoffman:

"Terri in the physical has also suffered. ... Her advantage is that she is able to leave the physical, although not at any moment she chooses. In time you both as well as Terri will be able to come and go freely at will."

"She is anxious for that day as you are."

Herd coaches 'tickled' with new 1-4A

By SAM W. WALLER
Sports Editor

With Thursday's release of the University Interscholastic League's biennial realignment, Hereford Whiteface coaches were openly optimistic of their teams' chances of increased success.

Actually, "tickled to death" was the phrase most used around the fieldhouse the afternoon of the announcement.

The big change regarding Herd athletics was, of course, the division of the current District 1-4A into two loops. The new 1-4A will comprise Pampa, Borger, Dumas, Randall and Hereford of the old league and newcomer Caprock, which drops out of the state's largest classification for the first time since opening in 1963.

Current district members Estacado, Dunbar, Levelland and Frenship will be joined in 2-4A by Snyder and Lamesa.

"I personally am very excited about the new district because it's smaller," Hereford athletic director and head football coach Don Cumpton said. "We found out being in a large district for four years that because of our program having a large number of seniors every year -- and I think this is true of all our sports -- and we've been forced to start district (competition) early with a lot of kids that don't have a lot of experience.

"And I think being in a smaller district will allow us more time to develop those guys and girls. I think that's going to help us."

All coaches agreed the major advantage of the realignment will be the later start of district competition.

"I think what I said is true for each activity," Cumpton said, "in that you don't have to start district so early.

"A good example of that is boys and girls basketball. A lot of our girls basketball players play volleyball and a lot of our boys basketball players play football. In the past, with a large district, we've been having to start district basketball games the first of December.

"For example, this year those guys had about three days of practice before they had to play a district game. If we're fortunate enough to play in the playoffs in football, we're still not going to start district basketball until the middle of January, which is going to give our kids that do play football and volleyball a chance to get their feet on the ground and develop in basketball.

"I really do think it's going to help our basketball programs. I'm tickled to death about that.

"The same thing in baseball," Cumpton continued. "A lot of our guys that play baseball also play basketball. This year we're starting district baseball right off the bat in the early part of March. Next year we won't have to start until the middle of April because we'll only have 10 district games instead of 16.

"What I'm saying is because of our philosophy in Hereford, where a lot of our kids play a lot of sports, it's going to help us because it gives us time to make the transition from one sport to another. And I think that's going to be a tremendous advantage."

As for the chances of Herd teams making the playoffs, the consensus was that virtually every sport would challenge for post-season action with several squads chasing titles in the new district.

But, the coaches added, getting out of the new league may be a chore.

"When you play Pampa at Pampa they're hard to beat," Cumpton said of the Herd's grid opponents. "When you play Dumas at Dumas they're hard to beat. Caprock coming down from 5A; their whole attitude towards things is going to change completely. They've been the little guy on the block over there and now they're going to be the biggest team in the district. I think they'll be competitive immediately. Randall's got their program on the way up.

"I think it will be real competitive, not a whole lot different than it was. When it gets to district games, you'd better be ready every Friday night."

But, he added, the Herd will have three more weeks to prepare for the district campaign.

"(Non-district games) are important, obviously, but they're not a must-win deal," he said. "The whole idea is to get into the playoffs. Now, instead of winning eight games in football we win five. We've got to gear up for a five-game season and win those five. We're going to try to win them all, of course, but the last five are what's critical now.

"I don't know if it takes any more pressure off of you other than to give you more time," Cumpton continued. "Whenever we get our non-district schedule set we're going to try to win every one of those games. I mean that's important. We'll probably play two or three 5A schools and we're going to have to play well to have a chance to win those games."

Volleyball coach Brenda Reeh said the addition of Caprock to two-time defending state champion Dumas will make the chase for a third straight playoff berth difficult.

"I'd venture to say that this may be one of the strongest volleyball districts in the state," she said, "because you've got the state champ for the last two years and a team like Caprock who was continually third in 5A in such a strong district behind state champions. It will definitely make it tougher for us.

"Year after year for the past five years Caprock's been No. 3 behind Amarillo High and Tascosa. They have a strong program and are very well coached."

Reeh added that the change will force the Herd raise its level of play.

"The schools that left -- Levelland, Estacado and Dunbar -- most of the time when we played them we had a very good winning percentage. There's no doubt it's going to make it tougher for us.

"One of the drawbacks we've had, especially this year, with our district is that Dumas was such a strength and there were some other teams that definitely were not as strong. And that hurt us. We played a stronger pre-season (schedule) than we did during district.

"In the long run, pulling Caprock in is going to make us stronger. In order to compete with them we've just got to get better. We've raised the level of volleyball in Hereford the last two or three years quite a bit and we're going to have to keep raising it."

As noted by Cumpton, the most dramatic impact of the changes may be seen on the basketball court, where the Lady Whitefaces will be rid of four-time defending state champion Levelland. Lady Whiteface coach Dickie Faught said with only one Top 10 team in the district (Randall, currently ranked third), his squad will be as likely as any to make the playoffs.

"I think it improves our odds (of reaching the playoffs)," Faught said, "because we're in there with those people anyway except that Levelland is out. With fewer teams your chances of making the playoffs go up."

Faught added that five of the top six teams from the current alignment will remain together in the new 1-4A, making the level of competition something of a known quantity.

"It's basically the same teams (competing for the playoffs)," he said, "with the exception of Caprock. And I'd gladly take Caprock over Levelland any day. That's a good trade.

"The south district won't be as strong in basketball because I think, with the exception of Levelland, the better teams are up here."

On the boys' end of the court, Herd coach Jimmy Thomas will have the luxury of anywhere from two to 10 weeks, depending on the success of the football team, to get his players ready.

"That is the biggest thing," Thomas said. "We had three workouts before we had to go play Dumas and all their kids had been in the gym a while.

"Kids need to play as many sports as they can because they're only going to have one shot. This gives us a chance to get all the football out of us and get into basketball shape and get used to running our offenses."

Thomas said that as for matching up with the rest of the new league, the Herd should be in the thick of the race next year.

"Right now," he said, "just looking at returning lettermen, we'd be picked around fourth (in 1990-91). Pampa's got three, Caprock has four returning lettermen, and we'll have three. In each case, except maybe for Pampa, the best players are back.

"It'll be Pampa, Caprock and Borger (picked ahead of Hereford) with Pampa being the favorite just because of their tradition. Caprock's playing some good basketball; they've beaten some good teams in 5A and they'll have four starters back. Randall's going to be better, Dumas is going to be a little weaker maybe and we'll probably be better."

Among the spring sports, baseball is expected to be affected most while tennis, golf and track and field (sports where individual performance is more emphasized) will be in much the same situation as in the past.

Herd baseball coach T.R. Sartor also pointed to the later start of district as a plus.

"The main thing is we'll have two months to practice and a month-and-a-half to play games before we start district," he said. "That can only help."

Concerning the strength of the circuit, Sartor said the Herd will not have a cake walk to the playoffs.

"Estacado's been strong for a while and they won't be in our district any more," he said, "but Randall's coming on and Pampa's coming on. I think it's going to be a real competitive district. Dumas has always been strong up in this part. Caprock finished third in the 5A league last year. I think it's going to be a pretty strong league."

In tennis, with both fall and spring seasons, Coach Luis Zavala does not expect any significant changes in the balance of power.

"It won't make any difference," he said. "The other teams to beat are Pampa and Borger. We have beaten the teams from the south very solidly.

"The good thing is we don't have to play all of those teams now. We can schedule somebody else if we want. If we do play some of the teams from the south (in fall matches and spring dual meets), I can get some of my other players into the lineup and get them some experience. In district you have to go with your top players."

Golf may be the one sport where the Herd will not gain any ground on the leaders with the splitting of the district, according to Coach Stacey Bixler.

"It's not so much the amount of teams in the district that's going to effect us," he said, "as it is the teams that are in the district. The northern part of the golf district has been the strong part of the district anyway, so it's not going to get any easier for us. Pampa, Borger and Randall -- schools like that -- that were in our district were the better teams."

Herd track coach Ron Young said his team will benefit from the change at the district level.

"It just tickles me that Estacado and Dunbar (who have dominated the sprints) are out of there," he said. "That's going to open things up at the district meet."

In girls track, Coach Martha Emerson said her team will still have to contend with Pampa even though the two Lubbock schools are gone.

"Those three teams have been tough. They've been down some in the past few years, but they're still going to give us a run."

Emerson added that her squad hasn't completely escaped Dunbar and Estacado despite the realignment.

"We're going to see them at regional every year," she said. "We have to beat them sooner or later if we're going to make it to (the state meet in) Austin."

Emerson also said the cross country teams, which she coaches in the fall, will not be helped significantly in the new district.

"Randall's won state the last two years in the boys and they won't be any weaker," she said. "And their girls beat us out for first place at district this year, so we've got our work cut out for us."

The new alignment does let Herd coaches know what about half their schedule will hold over the next two years, but Cumpton said it will be about three weeks before details for each sport can be worked out.

"It will be Feb. 21 before we can officially organize our new district and officially let contracts on non-conference games," he said. "We can't do anything official until then. We won't even set up our district schedule until then. We know who we're going to play (in district), we just don't know when and where.

"When we form our new district we'll come up with a constitution and we'll set schedules for all sports. We'll set sights for district meets in tennis, golf and track and draw schedules for volleyball and basketball."

Cumpton added that the smaller size of the loop will make the distribution district meets for spring sports easier to deal with as each school will be able to host one of the events each year.

"Another good thing for our community," he said, "is our district travel. For basketball we have to make four hundred-mile trips down south to Lubbock, Frenship and Levelland. We don't have those any more in district play. The fact that Caprock is coming in gives us a real close district game. It's eliminated a bunch of travel as far as district play.

"Our non-district games we'll probably try to play some of those people. They're down there in a six-team district and we're up here in a six-team district and we're within a hundred miles, so we'll still probably play them a lot. It just gives us a lot more flexibility."

Cumpton said one factor in playing the 2-4A schools will be scheduling games in sports such as basketball on weekends rather than school nights.

YOUR EYES WHEN YOUNGSTERS NEED BIFOCALS

Although bifocals are generally prescribed for older people, some children and teenagers have specific eye problems that make bifocals the lens of choice.

The very nearsighted child who needs strong glasses for seeing distant objects sometimes finds that this high-powered correction interferes with near vision tasks, placing an unnecessary strain on the eyes. Bifocals provide a weaker prescription for reading so the child has better vision and greater visual comfort.

Sometimes a bifocal is prescribed for a child to help his or her focusing skills. There may be no prescription in the upper part of the lens while the lower portion contains appropriate correction. Eye strain is reduced and the problems associated with nearsightedness may be controlled. In some cases of crossed-eyes, bifocals may be effective.

Adolescents and college bound students sometimes find bifocals helpful for coping with hours of studying.

Herd falls, Lady Whitefaces win; 7th graders finish district tourneys

Hereford Whiteface basketball teams came out on the short end Friday with eight teams combining for eight losses in 12 games.

In District 1-4A competition, the varsity and JV squads traveled to Lubbock to take on the Dunbar Panthers. The Herd varsity suffered the only loss of the trip, 72-56, while the Lady Whitefaces posted a 49-41 win.

Hereford swept the junior varsity games with the boys claiming a 56-44 decision while the girls held on for a 36-31 win.

The Hereford Junior High seventh grade teams completed their district tournaments with the girls White team taking the only win in eight games.

In the girls tournament played at Hereford, the White fell to Canyon White, 31-26, in the semifinals before coming back to win the third-place game 32-27 over Dumas Black. The Maroon suffered a 26-21 loss to Valleyview Silver in the semifinals and lost to Borger Red, 21-17, in the third-place tilt.

The boys teams traveled to Dumas for the final two rounds of their tourney with both teams losing twice. The Maroon 23-28 to Canyon White in the semis and 55-44 to Borger White for third place. The White came up short against Canyon Purple in the semis, 40-24, and fell 49-41 to Borger Red in the third-place contest.

Dunbar 72, Herd 56
Hereford matched the Panthers point-for-point during three quarters, but the one period they didn't was the difference.

Dunbar outscored the Herd 21-5 in the third quarter to break open what had been a one-point game.

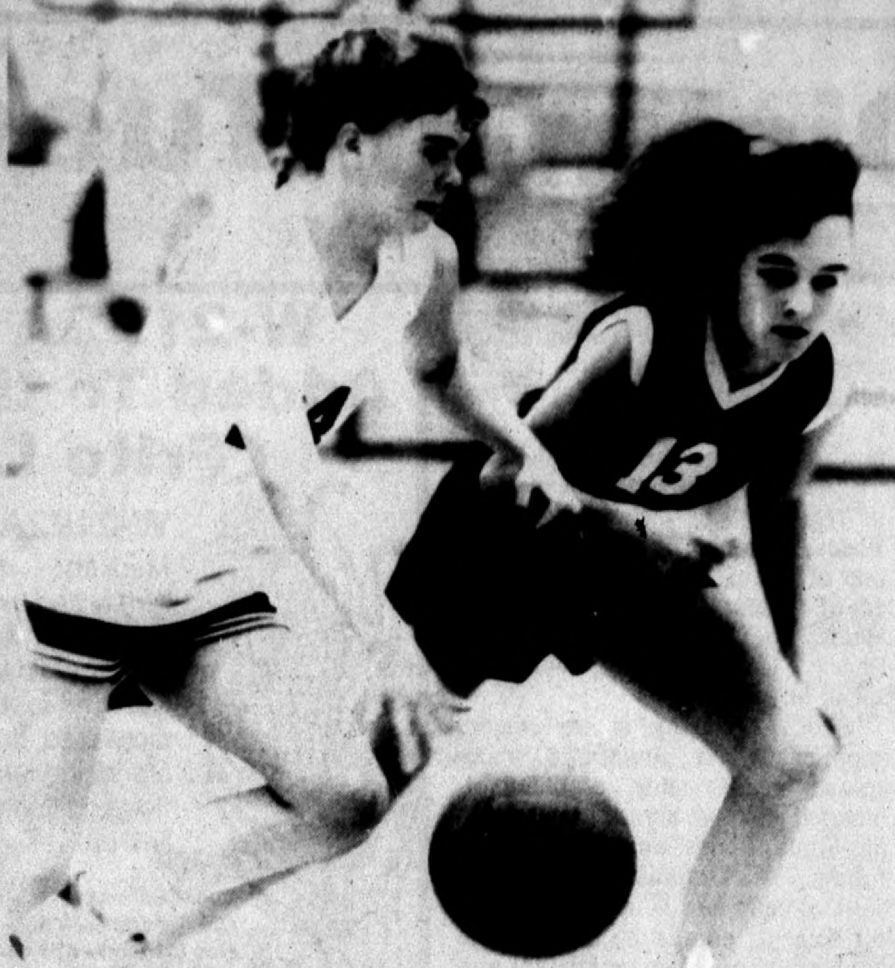

Neither team could take control of the game in the first half as the first quarter ended in a 12-12 tie before the Panthers edged ahead 30-29 at halftime.

Hereford lost its shooting touch in the decisive third period, suffering its lowest-scoring quarter of the season. Hereford warmed up again in the final period to score 22 points while Dunbar held its lead with 21 in the quarter.

Jason Walterscheid led all scorers with a season-high 27 points for the Herd and was joined in double figures by Russell Backus with 17. Leo Brown added five, Chad Schroeder three and Daniel Garcia and Chris Tardy two.

Dunbar placed four of its five starters in double figures. Lady Whitefaces 49, Dunbar 41
The third quarter proved to be the determining factor in the girls game as well with Hereford taking the upper hand in this case.

Hereford took a 16-10 lead after the first quarter behind Shantel Cornelius' eight points before Dunbar used a 14-6 advantage in the second period to lead 24-22 at halftime.

The Lady Whitefaces turned up the defensive pressure in the third quarter, allowing only a three-pointer by Alicia Castilow while Cornelius connected for six of Hereford's 13 points.

Dunbar made a run at the Herd in the final period as Marsha Johnson scored 11 points in the quarter, but Cande Robbins countered with seven to keep Hereford up by eight.

Robbins finished with 17 points to lead Hereford with Cornelius right behind with 16. Stacy White added nine points with Patricia Martinez getting three and Briccna Townsend and Jennifer Bullard two each.

Johnson led all scorers with 18. Herd JV 56, Dunbar 44
All seven Hereford players got into the scoring column as the Herd pulled away late for the win.

The first quarter ended tied at 12-12 with Andrew Tijerina scoring half the Herd's points.

Hereford posted another dozen in the second quarter on the strength of Richard Sanderson's six points to take a 24-21 lead at the half.

Dunbar stayed close through the third period as Hereford got six points from Ben Weatherly to post an 11-10 advantage to lead 35-31.

The Herd put the game out of reach with a 21-13 edge in the final quarter as Sanderson hit for an even dozen. Sanderson led all scorers with 24. Tijerina, Weatherly and Miguel Casas scored eight each with Blake Buckley and Jerry Hardisty getting three apiece and Robbie Greenawalt two.

Charles Moore paced the Panthers with 15.

Lady Whiteface JV 36, Dunbar 31
Hereford picked up a win at the free-throw line, hitting 14 of 33 attempts compared to nine of 19 for Dunbar. Hereford edged ahead in a 4-3 first quarter that saw both teams make only one field goal each.

The Herd built the lead to 16-13 at halftime despite Sheila Thomas' eight second-quarter points for Dunbar. Jennifer Hicks hit for six points from the field in the third period as Hereford pulled away to a 29-19 lead.

The Panthers made a move in the fourth quarter behind six points from Yolanda James.

Hicks led Hereford with 11 points. Melinda Holmes scored six while Brenna Reinauer had five. Jayme Moore, Jennifer Howell, Kyann Lindley, Lori Sanders, Lindsay Radford and Roxanne Torres added two apiece with Cassie Brooks and Teresa Baker getting one each.

Dunbar was led by Thomas with 12.

Valleyview Silver 26, 7th girls Maroon 21

Valleyview took a 6-2 lead after one period and increased the margin to 14-7 at halftime.

The Vikings added the first bucket of the second half before Hereford went on a 6-0 run to close to 16-13. That was as close as the Herd would get as Valleyview scored the next eight points.

Individual statistics of the game were not available.

Borger Red 21, 7th girls Maroon 17

Both teams took a while to recover from their losses earlier in the day as Beth Weatherly scored the game's first points on a short jumper with 18 seconds left in the first quarter. Regina King put Borger on the board 17 seconds later with a free throw.

Hereford extended its slim lead to 8-5 at halftime behind four points from Karen Manchec.

Borger took over following halftime, scoring the first eight points in the third period to take a 15-10 lead.

The Herd closed to 16-13 midway through the final quarter, but the Bulldogs hit three free throws in the final minute to secure the win.

Hereford was led by Clarissa Ramirez with six points while Manchec finished with four. Jessica Evers added three with Bree Perrin and Weatherly getting two each.

Canyon White 31, 7th girls White 26

Hereford outscored the Eagles 17-11 in the second half to cut the margin to six.

Lori Hammock led the Herd with 13 points and was joined in double figures by Leslie Tatarevich with 11 while Bridgett Beltran added two.

Cambie Thompson scored 14 and Kim Hartman 11 to pace Canyon.

Hereford finished the half by outscoring the Demonettes 7-4 for a 20-11 halftime lead.

Dumas closed to within four points late in the game thanks to a 14-9 spurt.

Hammock led the Herd with 10 points while Kyla Betzen added six. Tatarevich and Sarah Perrin had five apiece with Jenece Baros getting four and Jamie Self two.

Jill Griffen led Dumas with 17.

Canyon White 32, 7th boys Maroon 28

Hereford fought its way to a 16-13 halftime lead and extended the margin to 24-17 after three periods.

Canyon took control in the fourth quarter, outscoring the Herd 15-4 to claim the win.

Farm and Ranch

Corn Growers in Dimmitt Tuesday

DIMMITT -- Controversial GATT negotiations, the 1990 Farm Bill and other topics which will impact area farmers will be discussed Tuesday, Feb. 6 at the 17th Annual Meeting of the Texas Corn Growers Association and Texas Corn Producers Board.

The meeting will begin at 9:30 a.m. at the Castro County Exposition Building in Dimmitt. It will include speakers on farm policy related issues, as well as corn production and marketing. A free lunch will be served by area members of Women Involved in Farm Economics (WIFE) at 12:15 p.m.

"This meeting should help answer many questions area corn growers have concerning GATT and the farm program," said Carl King, TCGA president. "The future of ethanol in Texas will also be an important topic. And presentations given by area crop researchers should provide farmers with information they can use to improve their production."

Guest speakers will include John Ford, legislative affairs director for the American Corn Growers Association. Ford, a former undersecretary of agriculture, will examine what lies ahead in critical farm bill debates in Washington. He will also review the progress of the new ACGA, which is growing in membership nationwide.

State Rep. Pete Laney of Plainview will review legislative activities in Austin. Laney has been a supporter of TCGA's efforts to obtain a state tax incentive for ethanol producers. Kraig Gallimore of the Texas Department of Agriculture will discuss GATT. "He will explain how U.S. proposals in the GATT talks would virtually trade away American's food and fiber policy," said King.

The down trend in agriculture will be examined by Texas A&M University economist Roland Smith. He will project how current farm program proposals will affect the agricultural economy in the next few years.

A statewide corn check-off referendum, to be held this spring will be discussed by Elbert Harp, an area agricultural consultant and former executive director of the National Grain Sorghum Producers Association. There is currently a seven-county check-off region consisting of Castro, Deaf Smith, Hale, Swisher, Farmer, Bailey and Lamb counties.

"A statewide check-off would provide more dollars to fund critical research and market development programs to benefit corn farmers across Texas," said King. "We feel it is important that every corn producer support the referendum."

The state of the ethanol industry in Texas will be discussed by Lois Wales, a spokesperson for WIFE, one of the nation's leading promoters of ethanol production and usage. Hadley Paul, president of Tropicana Energy Co. in Irving, will also speak on ethanol.

Paul's company is an ethanol supplier which anticipates widespread retail sales of ethanol-blended gasoline across the Panhandle-South Plains area in the near future. A Dimmitt convenience store already has the alternative fuel for sale. Its pumps are draped with banners which promote ethanol as a fuel which provides a new market for Texas corn farmers.

Speaking on the past year's producers board activities will be board chairman Weldon Davis. Treasurer Harold Bob Bennett will review TCPB finances, while Jo Beth Shackelford, TCGA treasurer, will discuss the growers association budget.

The research end of the meeting will feature Dr. Pat Morrison, area entomologist for the Texas Agricultural Extension Service in Lubbock. He will review various extension research programs aimed at controlling mites and other corn insect problems.

Dr. bob Glodt, a consulting entomologist from Plainview, will discuss his research on a new and effective method of miticide application through plant banding. His research was funded partially by TCGA. Dr. Brent Bean, area agronomist for the extension service in Amarillo, will look at how a new herbicide may help growers control Johnsongrass in corn.

For more information on the annual meeting, contact the TCGA office at 218 E. Bedford in Dimmitt, or call 1-800-666-8506.

Conservation group hails lower soil erosion losses

WASHINGTON (AP) - Despite a few complaints about federal enforcement, a private conservation group says historic provisions in 1985 farm law will help farmers move rapidly toward eliminating severe soil erosion on much of the nation's cropland by the mid-1990s.

A study of more than 1,000 farms in selected areas across the nation showed the conservation provisions of the 1985 Food Security Act have been a main force in prodding farmers into protecting soil and water resources.

The report, released in Washington Tuesday by the Soil and Water Conservation Society of Ankeny, Iowa, focused on the law's provisions governing the use of fragile, highly erodible land, and wetland areas.

Specific deadlines were set for farmers to comply with Agriculture Department regulations for conservation planning and project completion.

The law also established a 10-year Conservation Reserve Program with a goal of removing 40 million to 45 million acres of highly erodible cropland from production by the end of this year. About 34 million acres have been signed.

Under the program, farmers must plant the idled land in protective grass or trees. In return, they get federal cost-sharing payments to establish the soil cover, plus annual rental payments for 10 years. Those average about $50 per acre annually.

"For the first time in history, receipt of most federal farm program benefits - commodity price supports, agricultural credit and crop insurance - became legally contingent on the application of appropriate land stewardship practices by agricultural producers," the report said.

The law's four conservation parts outlined the Conservation Reserve Program, or CRP, and so-called sodbuster, swampbuster and compliance provisions that the report said have been generally well accepted by farmers.

"We may well accomplish a greater measure of erosion control on the nation's cropland in the next five years than we have accomplished in the preceding 50," said project director Max Schnepf.

"But this report makes it clear that a great deal remains to be done by farmers and by the federal government if we are to realize the full potential of the 1985 farm bill's conservation provisions," he said.

Schnepf said the project began in mid-1988 and the report is the first of several planned for a three-year evaluation.

Norman A. Berg, a member of the society's steering committee and former head of the Soil Conservation Service in USDA, said the farm law for the first time linked farm policies and program benefits to sound conservation practices.

"The law provided leverage we did not have before to curb erosion and protect wetlands," Berg said.

Society officials said the study, which had financial support from the Joyce Foundation of Chicago, was "by no means a statistically valid survey" of all U.S. land. However, the project did entail a close look at conservation work in 22 representative counties.

The report said: "CRP field checks show soil erosion will be reduced 91 percent on land enrolled in the program, although the total tonnage of soil saved may be lower than the USDA has reported."

"Sodbuster and swampbuster provisions, with the potential loss of federal benefits, appear to be discouraging farmers from improperly cultivating fragile land and converting wetlands to crop production." However, there have been violations, and "USDA officials are not adequately monitoring or enforcing the policies in some areas."

"Conservation compliance, which requires farmers to adopt and carry out conservation plans, will result in significant reductions in erosion if the plans are implemented. But final implementation 'will be difficult for a significant number' of farmers unless they adopt additional, low-cost erosion-control practices."

Farm Briefs

WASHINGTON (AP) - An Agriculture Department survey shows wind damage to land in the Great Plains is down sharply from a year ago's near-record losses that resulted from the 1988 drought.

Wilson Scaling, chief of the department's Soil Conservation Service, said Tuesday 1.74 million acres were reported damaged in November and December, down almost 20 percent from 2.16 million acres damaged in the same two months of 1988.

Even so, the damage in November and December was nearly 60 percent above the 20-year average for those months.

Lingering drought and limited snow cover were the major reasons for the damage, he said. "We've had several years of drought with resulting lack of (crop) residue and poor vegetative cover," Scaling added.

Texas, with 576,000 acres reported damaged, accounted for about one-third of the total. North Dakota, was close behind with a state record of almost 553,000 acres damaged by wind.

November and December are the first two months of an annual seven-month season when winds are highest and the soils are driest in the Great Plains. Surveys were made in 541 counties of the 10-state region.

In 1988-89, 14.3 million acres were damaged by wind in the Great Plains, the most since the agency began keeping records. In 1954-55, damage was reported at nearly 16 million acres.

WASHINGTON (AP) - The quality of last year's wheat crop was down slightly from the 1988 harvest, according to an Agriculture Department report.

Of the 13,363 samples checked by the department's Federal Grain Inspection Service, 56 percent were graded No. 1, compared with 64 percent in 1988, the agency said Tuesday.

Ratings by grade are based on a number of factors, including test weight per bushel, damaged kernels, foreign material, and shrunken and broken kernels.

The earth is not perfectly round. Distances measured through the poles are shorter than those at the equator.

Ninety-nine percent of all forms of life that have existed on Earth are now extinct.

Healthy plants absorb pollutants

New reasons for appreciating actively growing indoor plants as family members have been developed by the combined research of several organizations. These organizations believe that with healthy indoor plants they have largely absorbed the main "off-gassing" pollutants from manufactured components of modern buildings.

The tighter the buildings, with only mechanical ventilation, and the higher the content of newly-made building parts or furnishings, the more likelihood of varying degrees and types of sickness reactions, according to clinical ecologists.

The U.S. Environmental Protection Agency says that a cancer death rate of 26,000 per year is also caused by these pollutants.

But now horticultural scientists say that two typical good sized foot-and-a-half or so high, healthy, growing plants per 10-foot by 10-foot room space, in office or home, can absorb and mostly destroy the polluting substances.

They do this through the leaves, the soil and the roots, it is found. The normal beneficial microorganisms in the soil also do their part in breaking down the gasses. Sometimes, activated carbon may need to be added, to help the process.

In closed rooms, without natural ventilation, people also make their own contributions to atmospheric pollution, as do clothing, packaging materials and other manufactured articles. However, the primary offenders in this "tight-building sickness" are formaldehyde, benzene and trichloroethylene.

The National Aeronautics and Space Administration has been especially keen to overcome these problems. Therefore, they joined with the Associated Landscape Contractors of America in sponsoring a study by Dr. B.C. Wolverton that established, with closed-chamber experiments, the effectiveness of actively growing plants in relieving the air of the major pollutants.

In actual rooms being used by humans, though, additional stresses on plants often require replacement of plants every three months or so. People routinely knock off branches, demand that plants be placed in front of air conditioners or heaters, or they over-water and over-fertilize the plants.

Healthful snacks have appeal

Experts now say that proper nutrition in childhood can greatly influence later eating habits, as well as reduce or prevent health risks ranging from obesity to cancer, clogged arteries and heart disease.

Parents know that children love between-meal munchies, and snacks and children seem inseparable. This is especially true during the winter months when youngsters spend more time indoors, and the amount of time spent watching television and snacking increases.

Realistically, you cannot expect your youngster to always eat healthful snacks, such as carrot sticks while watching "Bugs Bunny" or a bowl of oat bran while watching "My Little Pony." But, there are wholesome treats you can add to your menu that are fun to eat, and still contribute to a healthy diet.

Here are some tips on healthy food and beverage snack alternatives. These treats have kid appeal and are ideal for when children are watching television. -Air-popped popcorn is fun to munch, and it's high in fiber and low in fat. Skip the butter and use as little salt as possible. Beware of the store-bought microwave varieties which often contain added fat and sodium. Be sure to read the labels.

-Apple sauce is a convenient and healthful snack that is fun to eat. It has no fat, and its natural sweetness appeals to kids of all ages. The single serve containers are also perfect for lunch boxes or backpacks.

-Pretzels are a big hit with children. They're crispy, crunchy and much lower in fat than potato chips or corn chips. Unsalted pretzels are an even healthier option.

-Offer your kids 100 percent fruit juice instead of colas, which have little nutritional value. But be sure to watch labels to ensure that the juice you're buying is the real thing. Fruit "drinks" are often diluted and, as a result, offer less nutrients. For a special warm winter treat, try heating apple juice and mixing it with cinnamon.

Rabbits are rarely found deep in forests. They prefer places where bushes or clumps of tall grass are available for hiding.

In 1890, a St. Louis physician ground up peanuts and produced a product that would revolutionize sandwich making and become the hit of the lunch box set. It was peanut butter.

BRANDED Women

By Sandy Stagner

For me, the advantages of being a woman far outweigh the disadvantages.

For instance, my husband opens the car door for me when we go out. He remembers all the holidays with little gifts. He still sends me flowers. He's sympathetic when I'm not feeling well. He always offers to take me to dinner and a movie. And he pays the bills.

I don't see that there are too many disadvantages other than going through child birth (but that's over fairly quickly) and having the dreaded annual Pap smear.

Of course, it's wonderful that there is a technique which has been developed to detect cancer but just going through the procedure year after year after year is maddening for me.

For weeks preceding my doctor's appointment, I began thinking about the examination. The more I think, the more apprehensive I get. I'm not sure why I dread it so much, perhaps because I feel so vulnerable wrapped up in only a sheet for hours at a time. Think about it. What if there's a fire or a tornado or it's near closing time and the staff simply forgets about you and locks you in the office overnight?

From the moment I walk into the waiting room, I began to get skittish, not at the thought of any discomfort that I may experience, which is always minimal, but because I simply don't like lying on a table naked as a jaybird.

Once I'm on the table donned in my fashionable white "toga", I never know what to do. If I stay in a sitting position until the doctor arrives, my sheet keeps falling down around my waist (of course, it will be eventually there anyway). If I lie down, do I fold my hands on my lap or put them behind my head and pretend this is the most relaxing, pleasant time of my life or do I put them by my sides only for them to keep falling off the table?

The worst time to get a Pap is in the summer. With the refrigerated air on full blast in the room and after waiting for an hour, one tends to turn blue. It's like being put in cold storage waiting to get inspected by the USDA.

I'm not a patient person so in order to get my mind on something other than the examination, I play mind games. I also sing songs to myself and when I get so bored that I'm ready to jump up and leave, I start counting the little holes in the ceiling tiles.

After what seems like half the day in which I would have had time to watch "Dr. Zhivago" and "Gone With The Wind", the doctor arrives grinning ear to ear and tries to make conversation, "Well, Sandy, how are the kids? What's been going on at work?"

Cut the chit-chat I think to myself. The psychology isn't working on me. I'm nervous so let's just get on with it.

I have a difficult time relating to someone when lying in "that" position. I can't see the doctor's face but I can hear him singing. I always have the urge to sing along, clap my hands, jump down and do a little jig.

Last year, after having some "female" problems, I was referred to a specialist. Although I had met the good doctor on several occasions, I had not gone to him as a patient. I was embarrassed and very nervous about him giving me a Pap. There's a vast difference in visiting with someone with your clothes on than in just your birthday suit.

I had a brilliant idea minutes before my appointment. I got a paper sack, cut out two holes for the eyes, and drew a nose and mouth on it and headed for the hospital.

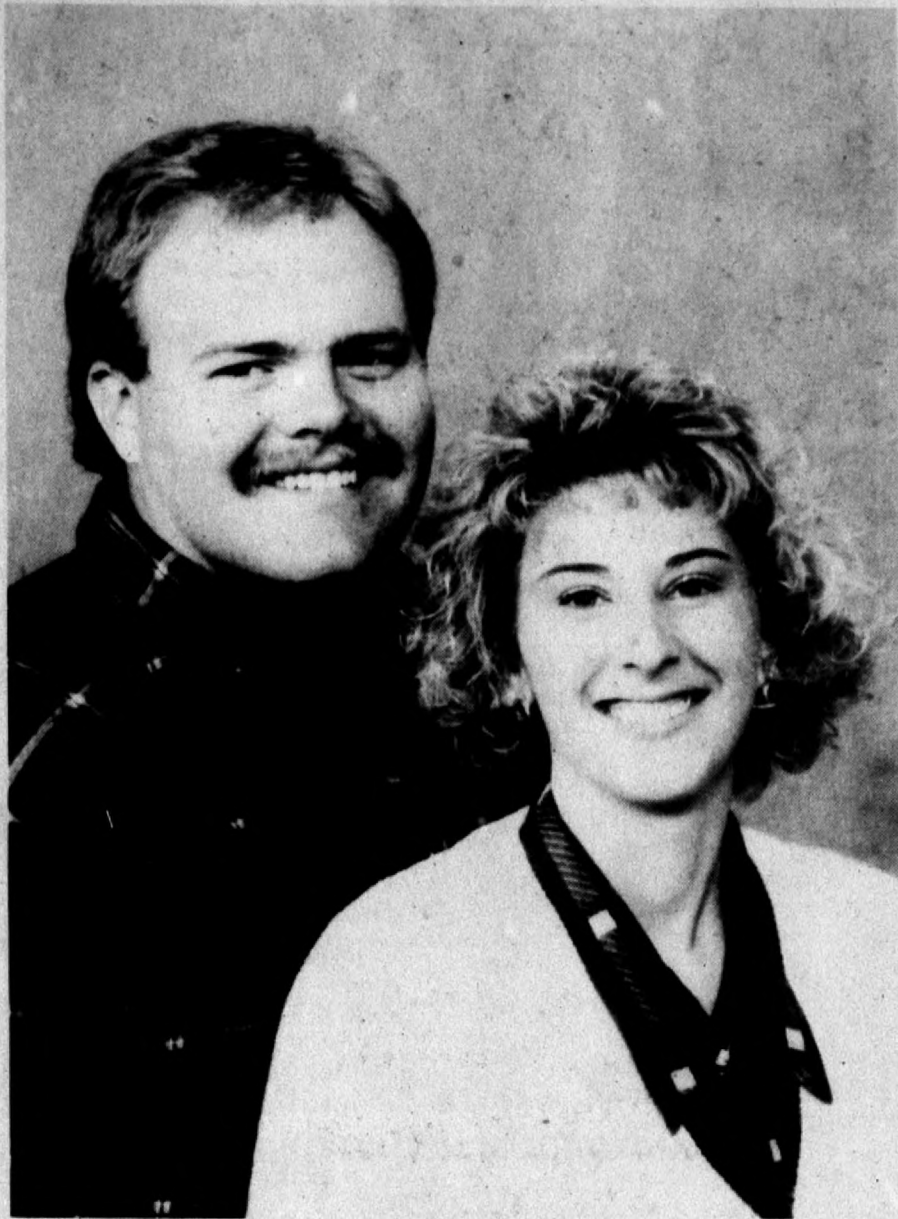

I had also made a sign saying, "You have heard of the unknown comic, well, this is the unknown patient."

As the nurse was escorting me to the examining room, I put the sign on the door. I went in, got undressed, wrapped up in the sheet and placed the sack over my head. I felt infinitely more comfortable perhaps like the ostrich does with his head buried in the sand.

Within a few moments, I hear a knock on the door asking if I was ready to be examined. The doctor walked in, took one look at me and my sack and I'm sure thought, "This lady doesn't need me, she needs a shrink."

Anyway, we had a good laugh during the examination which helped put me at ease.

I still have my sack and will gladly loan it out on request. Just give me several days notice since it is quite a popular item.

Lip color creates illusion

NEW YORK (AP) - If your lips are too thin, too full or uneven, follow these easy steps with lip color for a perfect pucker for Valentine's Day.

A lighter color in the center of the lip will give the illusion of fullness. So for thin lips, says Clairon, maker of cosmetics, dot lips with concealer, then gently rub with loose or pressed powder to blend. Fill in entire lip area with a lip pencil in a shade slightly lighter than your natural lip color. With a lip brush, accent the corners with a darker color, then smudge the edges to soften. Remember, a lighter color in the center of the lip will give the illusion of fullness.

For uneven lips gently sponge foundation around the lipline, then correct your lip's imperfection with a lip pencil outline. Fill in with lipstick the same shade as the pencil.

Dot full lips with concealer and outline with a pencil that matches your lipstick. Fill in with a matte color since glossy lipsticks make full lips look larger.

You can make glossy lip color look matte by peeling back one layer of tissue and gently pressing it against your lips after applying color. Brush loose powder over the tissue and remove the tissue.

Weight Loss Pill 'Baffles' Scientists

WASHINGTON - Scientists are baffled by a new weight loss formula that causes people to lose weight even though they don't change the way they normally eat.

Studies published in respected scientific journals such as The British Journal of Nutrition say that cyamopsis tetragonolobus, an ingredient often used to thicken ice cream, can cause permanent weight loss without dieting or exercise. Although several explanations for the weight loss are suggested, the most likely according to scientists, is that the ingredient seems to "trap" high calorie fat particles, decreasing their absorption in the intestines.

Scientists at National dietary Research, an organization committed to the research and development of nutritional solutions to world-wide health problems, have successfully isolated and incorporated cyamopsis tetragonolobus into an improved formula that greatly enhances the potential for weight loss over the ingredient alone. Called Food Source One, the revolutionary new formula provides a three-way scientifically designed process to help prevent calorie absorption.

The mechanism by which Food Source One works to decrease body weight is a complicated process called nutri-bonding. When chewed and swallowed immediately before meals, high calorie fats are replaced with lower calorie nutrients, thereby providing optimum nutrition and a minimum number of fat calories as explained in an instruction sheet that accompanies the tablets. The instruction sheet should be followed for optimum results.

Between the Covers

P.D. James has a new novel, Devices and Desires. A psychopathic killer has been terrorizing the area, strangling one woman after another. Commander Adam Dangleish has moved from London to the remote headland called Larksoken and the converted windmill he inherited from his aunt. But he cannot escape from murder. He and the police are desperately trying to stop the slaughter.

Devices and Desires draws us, like Dangleish, into a web of hatred and violence. An extraordinary cast populates the nightmare: Alex Mair, director of the Larksoken Nuclear Power Station; Neil Pascoe, anti-nuclear campaigner; Hilary Roberts, the station's administrative officer; Ryan Blancy, a painter; and Miles Lessingham, operations superintendent. Inevitably one moonlight night, murder at last reaches the headland, and just as inevitably Dangleish finds himself involved in it.

Another mystery this week is by Dick Francis, entitled Dead Cert. It is about a horse race, as you might have guessed. Alan York was looking at an all-too-familiar sight: the back of champion rider Bill Davidson astride the great race horse Admiral. All was going as expected, Bill Davidson was about to win his 97th steeplechase. The February fog was getting denser. It was impossible to see much farther than one fence to the next. The silent surrounding whiteness seemed to shut out the riders; isolating the string of riders from the crowd. It was an eerie, severed world in which anything might happen. And something did. "Admiral met the fence perfectly. He rose to it as if flight were not only for the birds, and he fell. Aghast, I saw the flurry of chestnut legs thrashing the air as the horse pitched over in a somersault, and I heard the crash of Admiral landing upside down after him. Bill lay on the ground, his eyes were shut. Admiral had fallen across Bill's unprotected abdomen, and he was trying frantically to stand up. As my horse pressed on away from the fence, I felt sick as if I'd been kicked in the stomach myself. There had been a quality about that fall which put it straight into the killing class."

W.E.B. Griffin, best known for his Brotherhood of War novels, has written another book in his equally dramatic saga, The Corps.

Counterattack sweeps from the devastatingly surprise attack on Pearl Harbor to America's first bold counterstrike against the Japanese on the beaches of the Guadalcanal. It is the story of the men of the Marine Corps, their loves and loyalties, of an elite fraternity united by a tradition of courage and honor as they enter the battle that will determine control over the Pacific.

From Washington, D.C., to the Philippines, Pesacola to Australia, old faces and new, generals, colonels, privates, sweethearts and wives, find themselves with the challenge of their lives; to defend, to dream, to love and to win.

Dana Fuller Ross, author of the popular Wagons West series, has begun a new saga, Oregon Legacy, The Holts: An American Dynasty Volume I.

When covered wagons rolled along the Oregon Trail, crossed the Rockies, and brought the first settlers to the magnificent American West, one man became a legend in his own time. He was wagon master Whip Holt, and his blood ran hot with the kind of courage needed to tame a wild land. His indomitable spirit has been inherited, along with vision of a proud American West, by his descendants in a family so extraordinary, so destined for greatness, that the whole world will know their names: The Holts.

Two more books on the best-seller list are: Vineland by Thomas Pynchon and Drive: The Story of My Life by Larry Bird.

For those of you who want or need the take a trip, come check out our travel books, here are just a few: Discover the Backroads of the Pacific Northwest by Louise Quayle. Discover the lush rain forests of Washington to the high desert of Southeast Oregon.

Discover the Shores of the Great Lakes by Catherine Calhoun. Discover the Great Lakes stretching from New York State through northern Minnesota and continuing deep into the forests of Canada.

New England: Land of Scenic Splendor. Travel across six states: Rhode Island, Connecticut, Massachusetts, New Hampshire, Vermont, and Maine and wonder at the beauty of this historic land.

Great Historic Places of America by David Brownstone takes you from Plymouth Rock to Pearl Harbor including over 250 full-color illustrations presenting scores of the greatest American and Canadian Historic places.

MR. AND MRS. MARK LUCHSINGER

Nuptials spoken in Hawaii

During an afternoon wedding ceremony Dec. 27, 1989, in the Kukuiohono Gardens in Kauai, Hawaii, Candy June Creel of Lubbock became the bride of Mark David Luchsinger of 309 Ave. J.

The bride is the daughter of Dorothy and Jack Earl Creel of Lubbock and the bridegroom is the son of Drs. Vincent and Lou Luchsinger of Baltimore, Md. and Mr. and Mrs. Don Anderson of Lubbock.

The ceremony was officiated by the Rev. Ron Lowery of Kauai. His wife was in attendance.

"Just In the Nick of Time" was the special recorded musical selection played at the ceremony.

The bride wore a floral designed tea-length dress in colors of lilac, pink and green. It was fashioned with a sweetheart neckline, fitted natural waistline and full skirt. She carried a bouquet of lilac and white orchids accented with white satin ribbon streamers.

Following the wedding ceremony and honeymoon, the bridal couple were honored with a reception Jan. 27 at the home of the groom's parents in Lubbock. Special guests included Brit and Doris Brittenham of Santa Fe, N.M. and guests from Hereford, Clint and Margaret Formby and Buddy and Alva Lee Peeler. The bride recently resigned from a kindergarten position in Lubbock. The groom is employed as a sales manager of KPAN Radio Station.

PITTSBURGH (AP) - Jazz guitarist George Benson gave a pep talk to a would-be musician suffering a rare form of cancer. Then he backed up the kind words with a valuable gift.

When 22-year-old David Romito talked with Benson after a show here last fall, it gave him hope.

"Benson talked with me a long time," Romito said this week. "He knew I was sick, of course, and said he knew somebody who once was given only six weeks to live - and the person is still living 10 years later."

Romito admired Benson's guitar, a six-string Ibanez, and the singer offered to send him an identical one. The instrument arrived at Romito's home last month, he said.

Romito plays guitar, sings and writes music. He was diagnosed in 1985 with rhabdomyosarcoma, a muscular cancer, but says he's continuing to focus on his musical career.

The proceeds of the dinner are used for the charitable works of the Knights of Columbus, particularly their work with the deaf and the youth.

Tickets for all you can eat are $5 for adults; $3 for children under 12; and children under six are free. Take out plates are available and sausage to go will be available. Tickets may be purchased at the door or from any member. This year 3,000 pounds of Polish sausage, 400 pounds of potato salad, 200 pounds of beans, and 60 gallons of cole slaw will be served.

The secret recipe for the Polish sausage was brought to this country from Poland over 130 years ago by the great grandparents of two of the council's members. Only these two know the recipe.

Extension News

BY BEVERLY HARDER
County Extension Agent

Recent publicity during the past two decades has encouraged people to reduce their consumption of total fat and saturated fatty acids. The reason for the interest in reduction of these fats has been because diets high in total fat, saturated fatty acids, and cholesterol play a major role in the high levels of blood cholesterol found in millions of Americans. Saturated fatty acid is the key dietary factor raising blood cholesterol levels. In contrast, dietary cholesterol has a smaller effect on blood cholesterol levels.

Many health organizations, such as the American Heart Association, National Cholesterol Education Programs, National Cancer Institute and others, are now recommending a reduction of the total fat content of the American diet, around 40 percent total, down to 30 percent of the total calories.

Fat we eat contains fatty acids that are saturated or unsaturated, these are terms that refer to the chemical structure of the fatty acids in the fat molecules. Unsaturated fatty acids are divided into two kinds—monounsaturated fatty acids and polyunsaturated fatty acids. Food fats contain a mixture of these three kinds of fatty acids. When a fat contains a large proportion of one kind of fatty acid such as saturated fatty acids, then often it has been classified as being higher in that particular fatty acid.

Saturated fatty acids are found primarily in the following foods:

1. Animal products, particularly meats and poultry with large amounts of fat and many dairy products.
2. Coconut oil, palm kernel oil, and palm oil are also very saturated.
3. Some of the saturated fatty acids in vegetable oils are also made more saturated by a process called hydrogenation.
4. Commercially-prepared and processed foods made with vegetable oils or with saturated fatty acids like butter and lard can also be high in saturated fatty acids.

Polyunsaturated fatty acids are found primarily in plant products—including safflower, sunflower, corn, soybean, and cottonseed oils; nuts; and seeds—and in fatty fish. Major vegetable oil sources of monounsaturated fatty acids are primarily olive oil and canola oil.

In order to help reduce fat in the diet and keep blood cholesterol at normal levels, you should:

1. Eat less high-fat food (especially those high in saturated fatty acids).
2. Replace part of the saturated fatty acids in your diet with unsaturated fatty acids.
3. Eat less high-cholesterol food.
4. Choose foods high in complex carbohydrates (starch and fiber).
5. Reduce your weight, if you are overweight.

Educational programs conducted by the Texas Agricultural Extension Service serve people of all ages regardless of socioeconomic level, race, color, sex, religion, handicap or national origin.

HINTS FOR YOUR HOUSE

Keep household metals gleaming

By READER'S DIGEST
For AP Newsfeatures

It's easy to restore the sparkle of tarnished copper, brass, pewter or silver with the wide variety of modern commercial polishes available today.

In addition to removing tarnish, most contain tarnish retardants that help the metal keep its shine longer. In some cases, however, simple homemade polishes that cost much less can do the job just as well. Here are some tips on cleaning and polishing household metals:

All Metals

- Use one side of an old cotton sock to apply polish, the other to buff.

- To avoid damage, use only a polish made for the kind of metal you are cleaning.

- Buff or wash away all polish. Any traces remaining on the metal will hasten tarnishing.

Brass and Copper

- If a piece is lacquered, wash it in lukewarm sudsy water, then rinse, dry, and buff with a soft cloth.

- Wash unlacquered pieces in hot sudsy water and rinse. Apply brass or copper polish with a soft cloth or brush. Let polish dry thoroughly, then buff with a clean, soft cloth.

- If the metal is only slightly tarnished, make your own polish by mixing equal parts of salt, vinegar and flour. Rub the paste on with a soft cloth. Salt is corrosive; rinse the piece thoroughly before buffing it.

- To produce a dull finish, mix rottenstone and linseed into a heavy cream. Apply with a soft cloth and rub vigorously. Wipe off excess, then polish with a clean, soft cloth.

- To remove corrosion or stubborn stains, rub with salt and vinegar or use a piece of lemon dipped in hot vinegar and salt. Wash, rinse and dry. If spot still persists, try a commercial polish.

Silver

Fine silver should be used frequently, not packed away for special occasions. Use enhances its beauty.

- Wash silver flatware immediately after use in hot sudsy water, then rinse it in clear hot water. To avoid water-spotting, dry the pieces with a towel instead of letting them air-dry. Most silverware is dishwasher-safe, but hot dishwasher temperatures can loosen hollow handles or dissolve a decorative oxidized pattern.

- Dip polishes will remove an oxidized pattern as well as tarnish. For oxidized silver, use a commercial cream or paste polish instead.

- Use a dip polish with silver-plated flatware. Harsh rubbing with an abrasive polish can remove the soft, thin outer layer of silver.

- Because silver is tarnished by sulfur compounds in the air, wrap it in tarnish-inhibiting fabric or tarnishproof tissue paper.

- Keep rubber bands and plastic food wrap away from silver. They can stain or corrode.

Pewter

- Modern pewter (britannia metal) is an alloy of tin, antimony and copper. It resists tarnish and usually needs only an occasional wash in warm, soapy water. Rinse well and dry thoroughly.

- To maintain old pewter, just dust it, then burnish it with a soft cloth. The tin and lead in old pewter may cause a brown tarnish. A bath in washing soda may help to remove it. Caution:

Don't eat or drink from old pewter utensils because the metal can transfer lead to the food.

- Polish modern or old pewter with a commercial pewter cleaner as directed on the label. Or make your own modern pewter restorer with ingredients available in hardware and other stores. Here's how:

- For pewter with a dull matte finish, prepare a paste of pumice and water (or rottenstone and vegetable oil if finish is very dull). Apply with a soft cloth and rub gently. When dry, polish with a clean, soft cloth. Wash, rinse and dry.

- For shiny pewter, use automobile polish or mix a paste of powdered whiting and denatured alcohol. Wash, rinse and dry.

- To remove corrosion on pewter, rub it with extra-fine (grade 000) steel wool dipped in vegetable oil.

Protect, preserve your driveway

By POPULAR MECHANICS
For AP Newsfeatures

An asphalt driveway needs regular maintenance to protect and preserve it. Cracks invariably develop and must be filled. The entire surface should be sealed every year or two.

Before you patch cracks or holes, it's important to remove loose gravel and bits of asphalt. Clear weeds and dirt from the area with a wire brush or trowel, followed by a shop vacuum or leaf blower. To remove dust, hose down the area, then let it dry.

You can fill wide cracks and potholes with blacktop patch, a prepared asphalt sold in 60-pound bags. Fill the prepared hole about halfway with blacktop patch and compact it before filling it the rest of the way. Mound the material slightly, then flatten it down hard with a tamper. You can make your own tamper by fastening a scrap piece of plywood or particleboard to a length of 2-by-2. Use a flat shovel to cut away excess so the patch will be level with the surrounding surface. Freshly filled spots should cure for about 90 days before they are sealed. You can patch in the spring and seal in late summer.

As an asphalt driveway ages, narrow cracks develop along the edges. To repair these cracks, clean them with a wire brush and vacuum the loose material. Then fill them with an asphalt crack filler that pours from a bottle. This leaves a patch resembling tar strips on an old highway. However, you can subdue the effect by brooming a small amount of fine sand into the filler.

There are three types of sealer for a blacktop driveway. An asphalt base sealer, the most expensive, should be used only on new asphalt or on a surface that has been previously sealed with the same material. Tar emulsion sealers are the least expensive and probably the most popular because they seal against gasoline, oil spills and drips. A third kind is a tar base sealer which contains fine black aggregate to give it extra body. This is used to fill large areas of cracking and to provide traction on steep drives. A 5-gallon can of sealer will cover about 350 square feet.

You can mix fine sand with standard tar base sealer to give it body. However, the surface will take on a salt-and-pepper appearance as the sealer wears.

The outside temperature should be about 60 degrees F when you apply sealer. The driveway must also be prepared before application. Cut away grass that grows over the edges so the sealer can cover them. Sweep the driveway clean, concentrating on dished areas where rainwater and dirt collect. Then hose down the driveway.

Look for water beads on the surface that indicate oil or gasoline. Remove softened material from these spots and replace it with blacktop patch. You can work around the patch when you apply sealer to give the spots time to cure. If there is no softening, use strong detergent or trisodium phosphate and hot water to scrub away oil or gas residue. Then rinse the area thoroughly.

If you use the more expensive asphalt sealer, make sure the pavement is dry before beginning the application. If you use tar-base sealer, keep the pavement damp. Spread all sealers as thinly as possible using a squeegee and then a brush. Two thin coats are better than a single heavy one. You should be able to walk on the sealed area after 12 hours and drive on it after 48 hours.

Questions and Answers

By POPULAR MECHANICS
For AP Newsfeatures

Q. - I have a septic system problem. Once a year, I have to dig up my tank cover and clean out the tank. We have a water softener which uses about 20 pounds of salt weekly. We switched soaps, softeners, etc., but nothing helps. Waste foods and grease are kept to a very minimum. Can you help?

A. - Cleaning or pumping out a septic tank once a year really is not that bad. Most health departments recommend the tank should be cleaned every two to four years, depending on use. Even when a septic system is functioning properly, the tank should be cleaned periodically, or at least inspected for sludge buildup.

Apparently, the waste water from your water softener regeneration process discharges into your septic system. This is a potential problem, especially if the leaching field is installed in a finely textured clay-type soil. The salt brine in the waste water is not broken down by bacterial action as it passes through the septic tank on its way to the leaching field.

As the salt accumulates in the field it can, and often does, clog the voids in the soil, thereby damaging and shortening the life of the disposal field. The waste water from the water softener should not discharge into your septic system. It should run to a separate dry well or onto the ground surface away from the leaching field, plants and shrubs. Be sure, too, that this discharge area slopes away from your water well if you have one.

Q. - I have double-hung windows in my home, with cords and weights, and I'm tired of fixing broken cords. Could you tell me how to replace them with springs? What type of springs are available? Also, after I replace the cords and weights, how do I insulate the hollow space and what type of insulation should I use?

A. - If you like the lifting action of the counterweight on the double-hung window, you should replace the broken sash cord with metal chains, which are available at hardware stores. The chain won't fray or become brittle with age and break.

You can also replace the weights and cords with metal pressure channels. These channels do not provide lifting action, but they have spring-action strips on both side jambs that hold each sash securely in any position. This ensures a snug fit that prevents rattling and minimizes cold air leaks.

Before installing the channels, you can insulate the wall cavity for the cord and weights by loosely stuffing it with fiberglass. If the area is inaccessible, you can fill it using an aerosol foam insulation.

Q. - The previous owner of my house installed a kitchen-range hood vent that exhausts into the attic. I will soon have my roof replaced and, at the same time, will run the vent through the roof. However, the pipe from the hood into the attic has a 7-inch diameter and I want to reduce this to 4 inches before extending it through the roof. Will such a reduction cause a dangerous buildup of grease in the pipe?

A. - Yes, it could be a problem. The particles of grease that are in suspension will be deposited mainly on the reducing coupling and the walls of the 4-inch diameter extension. All kitchen-range vent-pipes should be inspected periodically and cleaned if necessary, but since the reducer and extension would be located in the attic, they would probably be forgotten. The resulting buildup of grease would be a fire hazard.

The existing vent pipe should be extended through the roof without reducing its diameter. In addition to being safer, your exhaust fan will operate more efficiently without the added resistance that would result from the reduction. The pipe should be flashed properly at the roof joint, and have a storm collar and a rain hood. Also, if there is no damper over the fan, one should be installed.

(For further information on any home problem, write to Popular Mechanics, Readers Service Bureau, 224 West 57th Street, New York, NY 10019. Phone 212-649-3127.)

Final audtion Feb. 17

The last audition for the 25th season of the internationally acclaimed musical drama "TEXAS" is scheduled for Saturday, Feb. 17, in Canyon at West Texas State University.

The director needs to fill 140 salaried positions including 32 singers, 14 actors, 25 dancers, six instrumentalists and 16 technicians.

Cast members play nightly to full houses of 1,600 persons from every state and over 100 foreign countries.

Set beneath the towering cliffs of Palo Duro Canyon near Amarillo and Canyon, Paul Green's "TEXAS" opens its 25th anniversary season on June 13 and plays nightly except Sundays at 8:30 p.m. through Aug. 25. Rehearsals begin May 20.

The audition in Canyon on Saturday, Feb. 17, will be held at the West Texas State University Mary Moody Northern Hall from 11 a.m. to 5 p.m. with dancers at 4 p.m.

Previous auditions were held in Phoenix, Ariz.; Stillwater, Okla.; and Dallas, Huntsville and Lubbock, Texas.

Anyone, 18 years or older, may audition for "TEXAS." Men and women must bring a picture and reference.

All voice ranges are needed, and singers should bring one prepared number of their choice. An accompanist will be furnished or a singer may bring his own.

Since singers also fill minor speaking roles, each should also prepare a one to two minute memorized monologue.

Actors and actresses are required to present a memorized monologue, not to exceed three minutes, that will accentuate the outdoor voice and presence and also to perform a short vocal number.

The dancers should have ballet or modern dance training. Men and women are required to wear appropriate workout clothing.

Musicians are needed who are experienced in string bass, acoustic guitar, banjo, accordion and with concert training in violin.

"TEXAS" is a combination of historical romance, spectacular sound and light, and colorful music and dance. Told by a cast of 80, "TEXAS" relieves the settling of the Panhandle and the coming of the railroad.

Indians perch on rocks, a real train rumbles across the prairie, cowboys ride the range and a realistic storm rocks the audience as thunder roars and lightning strikes.

Over two million people have enjoyed the production, written by Pulitzer Prize winning author Paul Green.

Under the direction of Neil Hess, company members not only have an opportunity to play to full houses every night but also to receive expert instruction and valuable exposure.

For an audition brochure, reservations for the show or more information on "TEXAS", call 806-655-2181 or write P.O. Box 268, Canyon, Texas 79015-0268.

Hints from Heloise

TISSUE HOLDER

Dear Heloise: I have attached an extra toilet-paper holder to the inside of a kitchen cabinet under the sink. When I have a small spill, I simply unroll some tissue and clean up the mess.

I buy the least expensive tissue to hang there. It helps to save a few pennies and my paper towels are saved for bigger spills and other tasks — A Reader, El Paso, Texas

To help save our natural resources, use a sponge to clean up small spills and the paper towels for larger ones.

I'm working on a book on recycling hints. Send in your best recycling hint to share with others. I'll pick 100 of the best hints and the senders will receive an autographed copy of my book to be published in April 1990, to coincide with Earth Day 1990. — Heloise

SPAGHETTI SAUCE

Dear Heloise: I used to cook spaghetti and canned spaghetti sauce in two separate pans. Now, when I drain the spaghetti into a colander, I rinse out the pot and heat the sauce in it. This saves having to wash two pans and when the spaghetti is drained I simply add it to the sauce. — Mrs. Ruth Marshall, Berkley, Mich.

CAULIFLOWER

Dear Heloise: You know how cauliflower sometimes gets little brown spots? It's still too good to toss out, but it's a pain to cut off all those spots. I found a good solution: Take a potato peeler and lightly remove the spots. — Cindy Klein, Aberdeen, S.D.

BLT

Dear Heloise: When I make a bacon, lettuce and tomato sandwich, I use imitation bacon bits instead of real bacon. Same great flavor, but much better for my diet. — Bea Albrecht, Sand Lake, Mich.

Abundant Life

This Is Living BY BOB WEAR

Many life qualities generally associated with the young are not for the young only. Enthusiasm, the desire to learn, and looking to the future can and should be maintained throughout the whole life span. The person who wishes to live well all along the way must begin early development of good attitudes; wise self-discipline; reasonable, but meaningful goals; a well-established and maintained faith; and a spirit of gracious acceptance. If we grow as we can and should, these and related traits will become stronger and more effective in their workings.

"The minute a man ceases to grow, no matter what his years, he begins to grow old in the worst sense of the term." —Barton.

There is no period of life that is better than any other one, unless it is what we call maturity. Each one has its advantages and its drawbacks, but each one can be made satisfactory, and about whatever we wish it to be. This can be, if, all along we have been giving priority to the time-tested elements—which help make living the meaningful experience it was intended to be.

Too many people permit themselves to get old before their time, and others over-emphasize the normal characteristics of advanced years. This is not living at its best, and there is no good reason for doing these things. Of course, the unjustified stereotyping must be ignored.

"Like a morning dream, life becomes brighter and brighter the longer we live, and the reason of everything appears clearer. What has puzzled us before seems less mysterious, and the crooked paths look straighter, as we approach the end." —Richter.

With a good value system in place, with reasonable expectations, a full appreciation of blessings, wise acceptance of the unchangeable, and an enlightened faith; we are well-equipped. This is living.

Improving parenting skills class to begin on Tuesday

Developing discipline skills in place of punishment; learning to encourage, not praise; becoming able to mirror image feelings and helping children learn to develop critical thinking skills for decision making will be just a few of the areas taught in a parenting class to begin on Tuesday morning at 9:30 a.m. at the County Extension office.

Ten workshops will be held in the presentation of the Systematic Training for Effective Parenting Course. The classes will be held from 9:30-11:30 a.m. and will be taught by County Extension Agent, Beverly Harder.

Enrollment will be taken on the first class on Tuesday. Further information may be obtained by calling the County Extension office at 364-3573.

Educational programs conducted by the Texas Agricultural Extension Service serve people of all ages regardless of socio-economic levels, race, color, sex, religion, handicap, or national origin.

East's breakup jolts defense sector

WASHINGTON (AP) - The cracking of the communist East bloc has opened a path to profound change in U.S. defenses, and the fallout for military chiefs and soldiers, weapons makers, political leaders and taxpayers is just coming into view.

"A revolution in military affairs could be in the making," says William Kaufmann of the Brookings Institution think tank and a frequent consultant to the Pentagon.

The precise features of this transformation are fuzzy but the direction is clear: smaller Pentagon budgets, fewer troops and a shrinking pipeline of new weapons.

The most frequently asked questions now are how radically will the military be reshaped, and will Congress switch defense dollars to social programs such as housing and education that were squeezed during the Reagan administration's military buildup?

Military planners already are rethinking traditional defense strategies - while trying to hold together the North Atlantic alliance - since few now believe the fractured Warsaw Pact armies pose a major threat to Western security. The glue that has kept NATO together for 40 years is fear of a surprise Soviet invasion of Western Europe. With those fears now fading, will NATO come unstuck?

While even the Pentagon's biggest supporters in Congress see more relaxed East-West relations, some caution against assuming that democratic reforms and moves toward free-market economies in Eastern Europe would last if Soviet President Mikhail S. Gorbachev was ousted.

"A return to past Soviet behavior is the biggest risk we must consider in reordering our priorities and restructuring our own defenses," Sen. John Warner of Virginia, the ranking Republican on the Senate Armed Services Committee, said recently.

Even so, the new world order means running a new-look U.S. military on less money - perhaps a lot less. President Bush proposed to Congress a slight trimming of defense spending, to $292 billion, for the budget year starting Oct. 1. Pressures are great on Capitol Hill to wield an even heavier ax.

"The reality is that we must plan on our defense budget going down several percentage points every year for the foreseeable future," says Gen. Colin L. Powell, the top U.S. military officer as chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff.

Kaufmann says military spending by 1999 should be cut to half today's level.

The new austerity, in turn, translates to tougher times for military contractors. The arms industry boomed during the Reagan administration and now employs one in five of the nation's manufacturing workers and one-third of scientists and engineers. The boom may not bust, but some industry workers and their communities already see reason to worry about layoffs and pay cuts.

"There can be a dark side" to the outbreak of peace, Ohio Gov. Richard Celeste said at a special conference of small- and medium-size military contractors Jan. 24.

The jobs of about 200,000 Ohio residents depend on the defense industry. Other states, including California, Virginia, Washington, Maryland and Missouri, are even more closely linked to the health of military contractors.

The bright side, in the view of many economists and defense analysts, is that the expected Pentagon savings during the 1990s could be converted to a "peace dividend" - money to combat homelessness, build new schools, repair old roads and bridges, intensify medical research, combat drug abuse or cut taxes.

Wrong number, wrong place, right person in freak phone call

WACO (AP) - It was the wrong number but the right person who answered a pay telephone when a woman was walking through a shopping mall in this Central Texas city.

When Susanne Henderson's yard worker was on the other end of the line Tuesday night, the woman thought at first that she was on Candid Camera. "It was kind of like, 'Where are the cameras?'" said Mrs. Henderson, a marketing specialist for Southwestern Bell Telephone. "I wondered what was going on. I wish a camera had been on my face. I must have looked really strange."

Mrs. Henderson, who said she can't resist picking up a ringing phone, heard one in Richland Mall as she was shopping with her daughter, Lacy, and a friend for slippers to the upcoming Junior League Charity Ball.

"Hello, Mrs. Henderson?" the voice asked.

On the line was the man who tends her yard, reaching out to ask her about gardening needs.

A glance at the number on the pay phone - which varied from her own at home by two digits - solved the mystery.

The misdialing had changed a couple of 6s to a couple of 9s to find Mrs. Henderson among hundreds of people wandering through the mall.

"It was a question of a dialing the wrong number, ringing the wrong place and getting the right person," said Mrs. Henderson. "My hair got big. I was weird all night and happy the next day. It was just too, too much."

She said she was considering phoning Baylor University, a private college here, to find a professor who could calculate the odds of her call.

"I was speechless," she said. "It was the first time in my life that's happened."

The Motel Inn in San Luis Obispo, Calif., was designed by Arthur Heinman, who originated the word "motel" in 1924.

HAVE FUN at the Movies

EXCELLENT GOOD FAIR POOR DON'T WASTE MONEY

VIDEO RENTAL MOVIES

Going to the movies these days is a little like eating Chinese - three hours later and - well, you know the rest. Movies seem to be released so fast and furiously these days that we don't have time to think about them, to reflect upon them and, well - to savor them. Not like we used to. Maybe today's world is just too fast. Or, maybe I'm feeling sad because we've lost another great movie personality.

Ava Gardner
1922 - January 25, 1990

Ava Gardner was one of those rare and wonderful people with "star quality" that you just couldn't help but like. And - that face! She was once voted the world's most beautiful woman. Now, thanks to video, she'll be one you can remember and savor. Her best films on video are...

THE SNOWS OF KILIMANJARO: (1952) With Gregory Peck and Susan Hayward. This movie, based on the Ernest Hemingway short story, is a very broad and colorful canvas of foreign adventure. It's the story of an author, (Gregory Peck) lying injured on a slope of Africa's most famous mountain. The shots of Kilimanjaro and the Africa wildlife are wonderful.

Peck (an Ernest Hemingway type writer/hunter) begins reflecting upon his life. He is trying to decide if he has found any meaning to his past. Susan Hayward is the wife at his side. Peck's remembrances take him from Africa to Spain to the Riviera and back again. You can just guess who shows up in his past; beautiful, sympathetic, in-love-with-him, Ava. This is definitely one of the better renderings of a Hemingway story; brilliantly acted by Peck, with good performances by everyone. Would be rated PG.

Four Boxes

MOGAMBO: (1953) With Clark Gable and Grace Kelly. Mogambo is a remake of the great 1932 classic film Red Dust that also starred Clark Gable. In this remake Clark Gable again plays the great white hunter who dallies with an unsophisticated married woman (Grace Kelly). The married lady and her gentlemanly husband are on a safari with Gable. However, true to the code, Gable returns to the arms of the jaded lady (Ava Gardner) who truly loves and understands him. Ava is terrific as the woman with a past (and a sense of humor). The film was directed by John Ford. Would be rated PG.

Three Boxes

THE BAREFOOT CONTESSA: (1954) With Humphrey Bogart, Edmond O'Brian, and Rossano Brazzi. This cynical story is about some not-so-nice Hollywood types who pick a naive dancer (Ava Gardner) out of a Madrid nightclub and mold her into an international movie star. The dancer is actually a simple, unpretentious soul who never really comes to grips with all that transpires. After reaching fame and fortune, she marries an Italian nobleman (Rossano Brazzi) who, unknown to her, is impotent. Humphrey Bogart plays her chief mentor during her acting career and tells the tragic story of her life in flashback. Ava is stunning. Would be rated PG.

Three Boxes

ON THE BEACH: (1959/Black & White) With Gregory Peck and Fred Astaire. This movie is a very thoughtful version of Nevil Shute's novel of the same name. The effect of a nuclear holocaust (that has seemingly destroyed the rest of the world) on a group of people in Australia makes for an engrossing drama. Peck and Ava are lovers awaiting the inevitable fallout. When a radioactive cloud begins to descend upon this apparently last human enclave, Peck, a submarine commander, ups anchor in a last ditch effort to find any possible survivors. There are excellent performances by everyone and the film remains today a powerful antiwar statement. Would be rated PG.

Four Boxes

THE NIGHT OF THE IGUANA: (1964/Black & White) With Richard Burton, Deborah Kerr, and Sue Lyon. See this Gardner movie more for the cast than the film; this one is better enjoyed "at home". The story is based on the Tennessee Williams play about an alcoholic former clergyman (Richard Burton) who is forced to take a menial job as a bus tour guide in Mexico. He subsequently becomes involved with fellow passengers Ava, Deborah Kerr and Sue Lyon. Iguana, directed by John Huston, is sometimes dull and often confusing. But the cast (and Ava) is great - you'll have a good time watching them. Would be rated PG-13.

Two Boxes

THE KIDNAPPING OF THE PRESIDENT: (1979) With William Shatner, Hal Holbrook and Van Johnson. The title of this movie really tells it all. Third World terrorists kidnap the President of the United States (Hal Holbrook). Secret Service chief, William Shatner intervenes. Ava is the love interest. The acting overall is excellent; the suspense is taut and the direction is tightly paced. Would be rated PG.

Three Boxes

So many of the really great Ava Gardner films have not yet been released: The Killers (1946), Show Boat (1951), Pandora and the Flying Dutchman (1951), The Sun Also Rises (1957), and The Little Hut (An excellent, often overlooked 1957 comedy)...Goodbye Ava - thanks for the memories.

Hulce 'feels' Mississippi

LOS ANGELES (AP) - During the filming of NBC's "Murder in Mississippi" in Georgia, Tom Hulce slipped away to get a feel of the real-life locations where three civil rights workers were abducted and killed in 1964.

Hulce plays Mickey Schwerner in the two-hour movie, which NBC will televise on Monday. Blair Underwood is James Chaney and Josh Charles is Andrew Goodman. Jennifer Grey also stars as Schwerner's wife, Rita.

Schwerner was a social worker who came from New York to join Chaney, Goodman and others in a voter registration drive in Mississippi.

Their deaths near Philadelphia, Miss., helped change the course of the civil rights movement. The story tells of the events leading up to the murders during the so-called "Freedom Summer." The FBI investigation of the deaths and its aftermath was told in the feature movie "Mississippi Burning."

"Blair, Jennifer and I went to Meridian, where they were based in Mississippi," Hulce says. "They were having a memorial for the 25th anniversary and it was a wonderful opportunity to see and hear a lot of people in the movement. I wanted to travel the same roads they had traveled the day they died. You just have to look around and it's much easier to climb into the story."

"We shot a good portion of the story in territory that still has an active Ku Klux Klan. We were very low-key about what we were doing, but it got a little real sometimes. We recreated a riot to integrate employment at a department store. Not all of the crowd activities were scripted. It's amazing how people know what to say."

Hulce, an Oscar nominee for his role as Wolfgang Amadeus Mozart in "Amadeus," most recently was seen in "Parenthood." He has completed a role in the upcoming movie "Black Rainbow" and was the brain-damaged garbage collector in "Dominick & Eugene."

After doing "Murder in Mississippi" he returned to New York where he is now starring on Broadway in Aaron Sorkin's "A Few Good Men," a courtroom drama about a Marine Corps murder.

"I wore a goatee for the role because people in Mississippi called Mickey the 'Jew with the beard,'" Hulce says. "I think they had a specific agenda for his future. He was the one they wanted the most because he was an outsider. Chaney was from Mississippi and Goodman didn't come to Mississippi until the day he was killed."

"Mickey's singular ability was to make everyone feel comfortable with him. He was excellent in making people feel good about themselves. The segregationists felt threatened by his presence."

The movie begins when Schwerner arrives in Mississippi to help organize the black voter drive. As an outsider, he is immediately confronted by suspicion and bigotry. Schwerner and Chaney take time to forge a good working relationship in the movie, but in reality they were already good friends.

"Segregationists usually tend to be portrayed as morons," Hulce says. "These were intelligent people who believed they were right. There were people in positions of influence who were willing to help them. Mickey had been threatened. A black church they used as a headquarters was burned. He knew the risks, but he believed strongly in what he was doing."

Hulce grew up in Michigan and studied at the North Carolina School of the Arts. He made his Broadway debut opposite Anthony Perkins in "Equus." He had begun as understudy to Peter Firth, who also played the role in the movie version. The play was written by Peter Shaffer, and when it came time to cast the movie adaptation of his play "Amadeus," Hulce became a contender and was selected over some heavy competition.
