Farmers hear less-than-rosy reports at TCGA

By JOHN BROOKS

Managing Editor The news producers heard at the annual Texas Corn Growers Association meeting in Dimmitt was, mostly, bad.

Farmers heard that negotiations on the General Agreement on Trade and Tariffs (GATT) may immediately damage agriculture if the United States' position is the final result. They also learned that extension of the current farm program, on a "typical" High Plains wheat-and-corn farm, cropland is planted in grass). could cut significantly into profits.

"GATT is an outrage," said John Ford, a Deaf Smith county native who works in Washington D.C. for the Texas and American corn growers groups. He explained that the agreement could lead to a final farm program developed "not by Congressmen we have elected but by men and women we have not elected."

Carla Hills, U.S. trade representative, is heading the negotiating team in Geneva that is helping form world policies on all goods, including agriculture.

Ford said the approach of the European Community in the agricultural side of the GATT talks is much closer to the long-time TCGA-ACGA stand for a supply management program. He explained that millions of acres have been taken out of cereal grain and oilseed production in the 12country European group, and the EC is espousing a similar approach in the GATT talks.

"The United States, through the executive branch, wants to eliminate all subsidies and give exporters the ability to make a better living," Ford said. "The small farmers will be hurt, but exporters will benefit.

"I cheered when we got that jerk out of Panama, and I was thrilled about the (Berlin) wall coming down, but the Republican Party is our fatal enemy...it doesn't concern itself with rural America."

Ford said cross-section of commodity groups led by sugar had been able to stop the U.S. position in the GATT talks before "and the U.S. position has been discredited in

"The EC wants to be sure farmers get their cost of production and a profit. The U.S. wants to eliminate all subsidies and guarantees, let the rich and the traders get richer, and put West Texas into 100 percent CRP (Conservation Reserve Program, where

"Ask questions of the administration. Who prospers when you eliminate 600,000 farmers?"

Ford did praise the Bush Administration for its stance on ethanol and other "alternative" fuels, and said ethanol could be a part of the solution "but we need the price for our corn."

Dr. Roland Smith of the Extension Service presented an outlook for the future for corn, showing that continuation of the current farm program through 1994 could lead to a reduction in profits for a "typical" small wheat-and-corn farmer in this region from about $50,000 a year now to $10,000 a year by 1994.

"But this is better than a typical farm in South Texas," Smith said. "This same study shows them losing

Smith presented graphs that showed the U.S. carryover corn stocks have dipped dramatically in the last two years since the drought that plagued the Midwest in 1988. The reduction in carryover and increasing demand for corn led to higher corn prices, but a year of normal yield increases "and normal weather, whatever that is," Smith said, could mean lower prices this year. "It will probably be advantageous to be in the farm program this year because of the downside risks," Smith said. However, even greater corn

Yeutter unveils farm bill plans

WASHINGTON (AP) - The Bush administration's "flexibility" plan for farmers calls for reviving the NCA to use with the ARP and ARC, says the USDA.

In that way, Agriculture Secretary Clayton Yeutter said Tuesday, farmers would have more choices in planting crops without being penalized. Farmers often complain that Agriculture Department rules to control production are too severe and often penalize them for not following complicated program regulations straight down the line. Wheat farmers must abide by rules in the wheat program. Feed grains producers following feed grains regulations, and so on. If there is deviation, the acreage base or history of a crop may be reduced, thereby meaning reduced USDA payments and other benefits.

Current law passed in 1985 expires at the end of the 1990 crop season. It generally denies program benefits if farmers harvest crops other than the "program" crop for which they have a base acreage.

A change in the strict rules is being sought by the administration and many farm groups and members of Congress.

The American Farm Bureau Federation favors acreage flexibility, with a couple of stipulations of its own. And the National Farmers Union, which is often at odds with the administration on farm policy, also likes the idea but wants to study the fine print on the administration's plan.

Yeutter explained the administration's version of flexibility at a news conference. It's not exactly a new idea, he said.

Here's how it might work:

Each farm is assigned a normal crop acreage, or NCA, which is the total acreage bases of program crops such as wheat, feed grains, upland and extra-long staple cotton. Plus a farm's historical plantings of oilseeds: soybeans, sunflowers and rapeseed, including canola.

As it does now, the USDA would determine each year whether to apply individual crop "acreage reduction programs" called ARPs, if necessary, to each crop's base acreage. If so, a percentage of the farm's base - with the exception of oilseed acres - must be idled as an "acreage conservation reserve,"

To qualify for price supports and other program benefits, the farmer must comply with the ARP requirement for that crop. In addition, the wheat ARP, 10 acres for his corn sum of all NCA-crop plantings, plus land idled under the acreage reduction programs, cannot exceed the NCA for the individual farm. In return, the farmer is allowed some flexibility without losing benefits or suffering penalties on the farm's acreage base.

"We're proposing that we would establish ARPs, acreage reduction programs, on a crop-by-crop basis, just as we do now," Yeutter said. "In other words, there'll be a wheat ARP and a corn, or a feed grains ARP, and a rice ARP, whatever it may be."

Basically, on the rest of the acreage, the farmer will be able to grow any of the so-called program crops, plus any of the oilseed crops,

"It's really what I would call a modified NCA program ... as the NCA existed back in the '70s or thereabouts," Yeutter said.

In an example, a 300-acre farm included a 100-acre wheat base, a 100-acre corn base, and 100 acres of soybeans. The mythical wheat program included a 5 percent ARP and the corn program a 10 percent

"That means the farmer has to pull out 5 acres of land for his ARP, and then under present law. that means he'll plant 95 acres of wheat and he'll plant 90 acres of corn," Yeutter said. "And then on the other 100 acres he'll grow soybeans or whatever."

Shifting to "the simplest example" of flexibility as proposed in the administration plan, Yeutter said the ARPs would be the same five acres of wheat and 10 acres of corn.

But on the remaining 285 acres, Yeutter said the farmer would be allowed to grow wheat, corn, any of the oilseeds, rice, cotton or whatever.

"And he can plant that in any proportions he wishes," Yeutter said. "If he wants to plant it all to wheat, he can plant it all to wheat. If he wants to plant it all to corn, he can plant it all to corn."

Yeutter described several variations of the plan in which the 300-acre farmer could plant certain crops on his set-aside acres, provided his acres eligible for payments are reduced accordingly.

Oilseeds and experimental crops such as kenaf used for newsprint are among the options under the flexibility plan, he said.

postage rates appear headed up again.

The Postal Service is poised to launch the long, complex process of raising prices on March 6.

Postmaster General Anthony M. Frank says a 30-cent stamp seems likely for first class mail in 1991, although the final price could be from 28 cents to 32 cents. First class postage rose to the current 25cent rate on April 3, 1988.

If things follow the normal course, the new charges would take effect about 11 months after the filing, or in February 1991.

Frank doesn't expect the new proposed raise to play well.

Noting a 5-cent increase would be a 20 percent raise, substantially above the 14 percent he projects that consumer prices will have risen from 1988 to 1991, Frank said recently he was "committed to paying back to the American people that 6 percent' difference.

To do that, he has pledged to keep future increases below the inflation rate and said Tuesday, "We may very well be able to hold increases in rates after the 1991 adjustments to one more increase in the balance of this century."

The Postal Service managed to operate about $404 million in the black for the first quarter of this fiscal year, but the agency expects a record $1.6 billion deficit for the full year ending Sept. 30. The postal service is required to break even over the long run. Frank has cited a number of reasons for the planned 1991 rate increase.

"We were required in 1988 and 1989 to contribute $800 million to deficit reduction even though we don't use a penny of tax money. Health benefit costs are out of control - a problem we share with the private sector," he said.

The first official step in raising rates will be taken March 6, when the Postal Service's board of governors is to vote on the proposed increase.

The independent Postal Rate Commission then will ask for comment - that should produce tons of reports and appeals from various interest groups - and hold lengthy hearings before making its recommendation.

It then will be up to the Postal Service board to put the new rate into effect.

Frank's comments came in a Jan. 25 speech to the Economic. Club of Indianapolis.

Many people believe Gorbachev hopes to step down as party chief in the Communists' anticipated fall from power and concentrate authority in the presidency and popularly elected legislative bodies.

"It has been destroyed by the will of peoples who wished no longer to tolerate coercion," Tass quoted Shevardnadze as saying. The meeting Monday and was originally scheduled to run two days.

Its free-wheeling debate sharply contrasted with previous sessions, when the Central Committee automatically approved policies that had been worked out at higher levels.

A decision to abolish the party's leading role - and allow competing parties for the first time since shortly after the 1917 revolution - would represent a bold domestic gamble.

It could send the discredited Soviet ruling party the way of its fraternal Communist parties in Poland, East Germany, Czechoslovakia and Hungary.

On the local level, people across the country have recently forced the ouster of Communist officials found to have used their posts to obtain special food supplies and other perquisites unavailable to the average citizen.

People must wait on lines for scarce consumer goods, some of which are rationed in some areas.

Outside the Kremlin's Spasky Gate on Tuesday, Central Committee member Vladimir P. Anishchev was asked about the consensus at the gathering over the Communist Party's future. "All unanimously think it has become obsolete. It has no meaning," he said.

Partial transcripts of Tuesday's session, in which 51 speakers took the floor, indicated that Gorbachev's proposal satisfied neither radicals nor hard-liners.

Delegates interviewed outside the Kremlin and on Soviet TV said the platform needed to be more specific, that in positioning himself between reformers and conservatives Gorbachev was satisfying neither.

HOUSTON (AP) - Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby says the state's school finance system could be revamped without ising taxes, but it would mean cutting aid to larger school districts.

"We could meet the mandate of the Texas Supreme Court without spending another dime. I have a computer printout showing how to do it," Hobby told about 700 attending a luncheon Tuesday at the Hyatt Regency Hotel.

But this would cut aid to the Dallas Independent School District by $59 million a year, to Houston by $38 million a year and to Austin by $25 million a year," said Hobby, who is not seeking re-election.

"I expect them to move faster than normal because nine of the senators on the ag committee are up for election this year. They want to have something on the table to present back home."

Smith said Congress is facing pressures from budget reduction needs, environmental and conservation concerns, market orientation, international competitiveness, and requirements for target price, loan and acreage reduction programs.

"They will start with a fine-tuning of the 1985 Farm Bill, from all indications from the House and Senate," Smith said.

In three possible program scenarios Smith presented, the only one that led to an increase in net farm income would be a program that would hike target prices in line with the inflation

Lady Whitefaces close with loss

The Hereford Whiteface basketball teams made their final road trip of the season Tuesday, dropping both boys' and girls' varsity games to Estacado while the JV squads posted wins:

The Lady Whitefaces ended the season with a disappointing 42-34 loss while the girls' junior varsity wrapped things up with a 57-12 blowout.

In the boys' games, the Herd dropped a 77-66 decision to the Matadors and the JV pulled out a 68-67 win in two overtimes.

Estacado 42, Lady Whitefaces 34 The Lady Matadors used a 14-9 advantage in the second quarter to take the lead for good in the season finale for Hereford.

The second quarter saw Hereford lose its shooting touch as Cande Robbins made the only two field goals in the period. The Lady Whitefaces hit only two of 18 shots from the floor in the period while six different Lady Matadors got into the scoring column.

Estacado posted a 10-9 edge in the third period behind eight points from Patrice Conwright and added another point to the lead in the fourth with a 12-11 performance.

Hereford was led by White and Robbins with 13 points each. White finished with three three-pointers in the game. Shantel Cornelius added six points and Brienna Townsend two for the rest of the Herd's scoring.

Estacado was led by Conwright with 15 points and Angie Alexander "We just didn't play very well," Lady Whiteface coach Dickie Faught said. "We weren't able to get the ball inside like we needed to and it hurt."

The Lady Whitefaces finish with a 15-14 overall record and a 9-7 mark in District 1-4A in Faught's first year. Faught said he was pleased with the advances the program made in one season despite the disappointing end.

We made a lot of progress for one year," he said, "especially since we could have folded our tents when we were 4-9. But the girls didn't give up and played tough all season.

The Herd managed to cut the margin 12, trailing 55-43 at the end of the third period, as Jason Walterscheid canned three treys to score 11 points

Hereford shaved another point off the Mats' lead in the final quarter as Backus hit 14 straight free throws for all of his scoring in the period. Backus' performance at the line offset Smith's 11 points for Estacado.

"Our shot selection was not very good," Herd coach Jimmy Thomas said. "We still had a chance after they took the lead, but we kept throwing it up from all over the court, and you can't do that against a team with Estacado's talent."

Estacado placed four players in double figures, led by Smith's 26 while Millner had 17, Andre Brooks 14 and Michael Irvin 12.

The loss drops the Herd to 7-18 on the season and 3-11 in district.

Lakers blaze past Portland in OT

By BILL BARNARD AP Basketball Writer

The Los Angeles Lakers and Portland Trail Blazers watched each other from afar for more than half the season. The first of their four meetings proved worth the wait.

Portland, trailing 62-45 early in the second half, had a chance to win when Magic Johnson fouled Terry Porter with a half-second left. But Porter made only the second of two free throws, tying the score 113-113 and forcing overtime.

Despite having Johnson on the bench with six fouls for the first time in a regular-season game since the 1983-84 season, the Lakers prevailed 121-119 to extend their lead in the Western Conference to 1 1/2 games over the Blazers, who still have the second-best record in the NBA.

All outsiders were banned from the late-afternoon game on Tuesday because the two teams had brawled when they first met 10 days ago.

Anyone who wonders what happens when you really take the home crowd out of a game can forward their queries to Atlanta High coach Eddie Johnson in this town of 6,500 about 150 miles northeast of Dallas,

'Fans not being there played a big role," said Atlanta coach Eddie Johnson. "It was like being on a neutral court. Our kids are emotional. They play better with the crowd behind

With not much more noise than the sound of the ball thumping and sneakers squeaking, the Atlanta Rabbits crashed after leading by as many as 10 points in the second half.

Not having to worry about any verbal harassment from Rabbit fans, Gilmer players calmly canned 13 of 15 free-throw attempts in the final quarter. Atlanta meanwhile was rattling the rim.

The home team scored the first two points in overtime, but the Gilmer

Buckeyes scored the next 11 to cruise to victory.

"We were trying to protect the integrity of the programs in both the schools," said J.D. Cox, the Atlanta school superintendent, prior to the game. "What our biggest fear is is that you will have fans ... whose one ambition in life is to get something started."

Sonny Long, a sports writer for the Atlanta Citizens Journal, called it "the best game nobody saw," and there were plenty of local residents who wanted to watch the District 15-3A

Bailey Marshall, UIL director, two or three other high school games have been closed to the public in Texas over the past 10 years, either for crowd control or for disciplinary reasons.

"It is a message to everyone concerned that we're going to control it (fighting) one way or the other," said Marshall. "It's to get the attention of everybody concerned that we're not going to have it."

Cox said if the two teams meet again in the playoffs, that game will be open and played in a bigger gym with more crowd control. With the victory, Gilmer is 6-2 in district play, with two games remaining. Linden-Kildare is second at 5-2, and Atlanta is 5-3.

Charity Hill, an 18-year-old Wal Mart employee said most people in town learned the game had been closed to the public through reports broadcast on local radio and television stations. She said many people weren't even concerned and had a much bigger priority, as far as athletics are concerned.

"Yeah, football," she said.

"You've got to do the best you can one year at a time, or from season to season, for that > Born and reared here in the heart of one of the most productive, if not the richest, agricultural centers of the nation, Marnell was quick to point out that he believed it is the people who make the turnrows work: "Without question, it's the people who make Hereford what it is today--the people are the county's greatest assets.'

> As a matter of record, this Deaf Smith County farmer-stockman joins an impressive roster of state and national agribusiness and professional leaders who hail from Hereford--from the air waves of radio and the printed page of the newspaper media, on the professional side, to lawyers, accountants, artisans and educators. And in agribusiness, Hereford's list of leadership is Number One in America. Currently and in recent years, Hereford-based residents have headed organizations representing the cattle feeding industry, sugar beet producers, vegetable growers, cattle raisers, cropland spray applicators, grain handlers and even the lowly legume

The Young Farmers group is an aggressive set of commodity producers who, along with the 4-H Booster Club, head up the annual Hereford Stock Show which has mushroomed into a fivecounty district event that recorded 171 entries in the 1990 show. And in turn, at the end of a four-day run, a full house of bidders at the Hereford Bull Barn doled out big bucks to the champion exhibitors of the junior league.

The Hereford Young Farmer Chapter is composed of around 20 members who take active roles in assisting boys and girls in community projects hinged to agriculture. The current officers include Jeff Mercer, president; Kevin Urbanczyk, vice president; Dennis Schilling, secretary, and M.D. Franks, treasurer.

Marnell's Western heritage of the High Plains dates back to the turn of the century when in 1908 his grandparents, Walter and Elizabeth Marnell, homesteaded 12 miles northwest of Clovis, N.M. Married in 1905 at Parsons, KS., the pioneer farm couple was among the few that survived the early years of turning shortgrass country into cultivated farms. As told by Mrs F.A. "Speck" Marnell in a history of Deaf Smith County, "Three other couples homesteaded but Walter and Elizabeth were the toughest, the only ones to prove their claim. They lived in a dugout and even suffered the hardship of a fire which destroyed all of their Elizabeth Marnell taught school while her husband broke out the new farm during those first years on the New Mexico plains.

Marnell pointed out that his father was 2 when the family moved to the Hereford area in 1920, staking their roots in a farm 6 miles north of Hereford on U.S. 385. This farm remained in the Walter Marnell family until 1956. Their children included John, Mary, Ellen, Joe, Dick, Ike and Speck (F.A.). Mrs. Marnell passed away in 1947 and Mr. Marnell died in 1955.

"But we stopped raising Nazareth Community. Denise vegetables about five years ago when graduated from Nazareth High School energy costs got too expensive to raise in 1982, and speaks of her grandparents as another pioneer farming family, Mr. and Mrs. Phillip Acker.

> Marnell's work in the Young Farmer group goes back to 1973 when he approached graduation from high school: "During my senior year in high school, I probably did more work out here with the Young Farmer organiza-tion than I did showing livestock. appetites of the exhibitors and their There were only six Young Farmers here when I first got into it and now we have 20."

All of the Hereford Young Farmers Stock Show effort is voluntary work on the part of both, city and country folks. The Young Farmers handled the physical end of the show, such as organizational programming, the penning and judging of livestock entries from the five-county area, with the 4-H Booster Club doing most of the hustlin' for bidders.

While taking vocational agricultural courses during his high school years, Marnell was active in Hereford Stock Shows which at that the was four-county events. He also exhibited livestock at numerous regional and state livestock shows, such as Amarillo and San Antonio. Amarillo, however, has not held regional winter stock shows for many years. The Hereford Stock Show is now the largest winter livestock judging event in the Texas

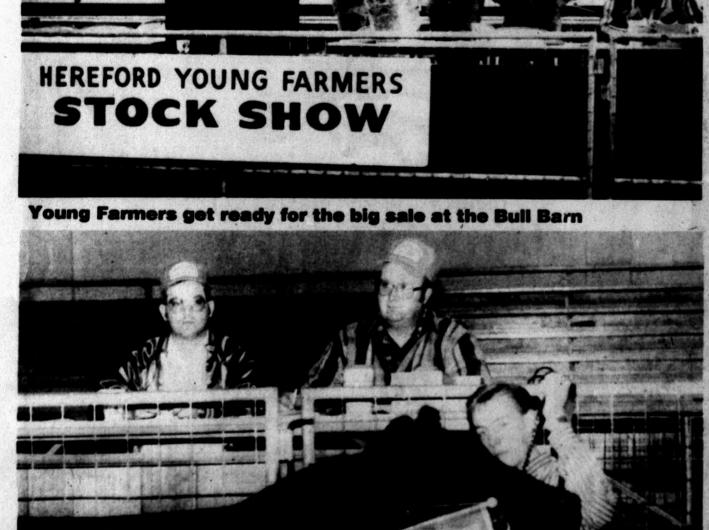

Though most of the top animals in the recent four-day exposition were sold at premium prices, a select set of the entries will move on to regional and state competition in such cities as San Antonio, Houston and Fort Worth. Marnell spoke highly of the Hereford High School vocational agricultural leadership, with Bill Bender and Kevin Kelly being the current instructors of vo-ag activities. Despite a wind-chill of around 16, the Marnells and their daughters, Cindy, 22 months, and Katie, 5 months, were among the dozens of families who turned out for the recent Hereford livestock exhibition...neighbors among neighbors working sideby-side in a community effort.

Tiny tots played make-believe over and through Bull Barn corrals while their older brothers and sisters manicured stock for the critical eye of a judge or for the selling chant of auctioneers Jack Howell and Kenneth Gregg. Steaming plates of food straight relatives and friends as the Young Farmers and Boosters put everything in order for a grand finale of the 1990 Hereford Stock Show--the auction sale.

Though many entries fell under tough competition, these youngsters took defeat in stride and were already making plans for the 1991 show. As it has been said in times before, farm youngsters grow up in a hurry and their city cousins who handle livestock achieve a perspective on life seldom found in other leagues. This is the world of Gerald and Denise Marnell, an exacting world of agriculture that gives no quarter nor asks none.

And if all goes well, somewhere on the other side of the 20th Century, Cindy and Katie Marnell perhaps will take their turn in the Hereford Bull Barn show ring-a halter rein in one hand and a show stick in the other..looking straight in the eyes of a staunchy judge and praying for a little luck.

Can accumulated sick leave be cut by owner?

Dear Commissioner Nabers, Last year our company was sold to a New York company. Our office is based in Dallas. Texas. The new company said this past year (1989) our sick time would be changed and all past sick time saved would be lost. Some of us had between 100 and 70 days accumulated over past years. They changed the new sick leave policy to 10 days per year, and if not used during the year, you lose any days not taken. My questions

1) When the new company took over, did we lose past accumulated sick leave?

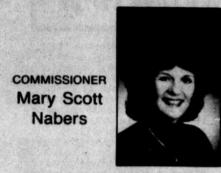

2) Is the past owner of the company liable for the time that was lost?

3) Is a New York company bound by Texas law? Please advise all of us who have been affected by this -change.

— Concerned

Dear Concerned, This is not what you probably want to hear, but the short answer to your question is that a new business owner can establish any sick time policy it wishes. Sick leave is not required by law in Texas. A company is not required to make any provisions at all for sick leave. If your former company had its policy in writing, there may be grounds for a breach of contract suit to recover lost sick pay under that old policy. You should consult an attorney

Dear Commissioner Nabers, If I fire an employee for being rude to customers or because I have had numerous customer complaints, why should I have to bring a customer witness to a TEC hearing to prove my case? I have lost cases on this point and I feel it is very unfair. Do you people realize how impossible it is to ask Abilene, Tx. CUSTOMERS to participate in a procedure that does not affect them? I think the employer community ought to know that this is one area in which they are always going to

"The exciting news for employers is it's a far more robust pool than we had imagined," said Thomas W. Moloney, senior vice president of The Commonwealth Fund, a philanthropic foundation that commissioned the poll.

"The United States is expected to face a severe labor shortage by early in the next century," he said. "This report should encourage business to look toward capable, committed older Americans to fill many of these

Moloney said the findings run counter to popular perceptions that there are few older Americans who are available, capable and willing to return to work in the kinds of jobs that are in

The findings are based on a 1989 national survey by Louis Harris and Associates Inc. of 1,751 men aged 55-64 and 1,758 women aged 50-59, with 43 percent of those surveyed not working. The different age groups for men and women were selected to catch them at the times when more people traditionally drop out of the work

The survey found the retirees' main reason for wanting to return to work was to do something useful, cited by 71 percent. Sixty-four percent said working keeps them feeling younger, 46 percent said they were bored about the patent process and who without a job, 45 percent said they would like to turn their ideas into

WASHINGTON (AP) - More than needed extra spending money and 43 percent they needed money for essentials.

> The survey data was analyzed by ICF Inc., a Washington consulting firm, which concluded that of the 1.9 million older people who are willing and able to work, 1.1 million are highly committed to and capable of rejoining the work force.

> These people said they need a job for financial reasons, are physically able to do key tasks such as driving or using a calculator, are seeking work and have reasonable wage expectations, are willing to work under difficult conditions such as standing up or on weekends. They are also willing to take jobs that are in demand such as sales, word processing, clerical positions, day care and managerial

> These retirees also had education. job skills and experience largely comparable to those of their counterparts still in the work force, the poll

Seventy-five percent were high school or college graduates, compared to 85 percent of those still working. Sixty-four percent had five or more years of experience on their last job, compared to 77 percent of current older workers.

Most also were willing to work under difficult conditions: 83 percent would take seasonal jobs, 60 percent would work standing up, 73 percent would work alone, 60 percent would commute more than 30 minutes and 54 percent would work evenings and weekends.

"What we see here are capable, educated, experienced people who want to get back in," Moloney said. "These are people who certainly should not be at the age of retirement."

Moloney said the study did not analyze why these people left the work force before age 65, but they may have been forced out of their jobs, quit because of family demands or thought they had enough retirement income to stop working.

Hints from Heloise

DEAR HELOISE:

With all the emphasis on recycling these days, I thought I would tell you about my hint.

I recycle the lids to fabric softener and liquid detergents by giving my basement furniture and storage cabinets "booties." Since the floor is a little damp and storms do cut off the electricity and sump pump at least once a year, these booties prevent rust stains on the tile from the metal storage cabinets, shelves and chairs. This also prevents water stains on the legs of the wooden furniture I have

At the kitchen sink I place soap scraps into one with a small sponge standing in it. When the need arises, I add a little water and use it for a quick dish- or pot-scrubbing solution.

Also, one lid will hold five tubes of lipstick. The colored caps can be used to add charm to organizing a dresser and/or desk.

My husband even uses them at his workbench to sort screws and nuts, and we use them to mix small amounts of paint for crafts and hobbies. - Nancy Bailey, Hyattsville,

Thank you for the great recycling hint. If we could all find just one useful way to reuse an item that we would normally throw away, our refuse dumps wouldn't fill up so quickly.

Anyone else who has a favorite recycling hint or conservation hint, please share it with us. — Heloise

LETTER OF THANKS

Dear Heloise: In cleaning up after Hurricane Hugo, I found a new use for nylon scrubbers. Mine was excellent for removing the sticky residue left on my windows from taping them. The nylon scrubbers beat the knives and razor blades my friends used. -Elizabeth Moore, Garden City, S.C.

Glad you are OK and that good ole nylon net can help! - Heloise

DEAR DR. LAMB: I hope you can help me. I have tried just about every antiperspirant and deodorant on the market and I can't stop the terrible underarm odor or wetness. It's very embarrassing and it ruins the fabrics so that the odor won't even wash out. I shower and shave under my arms every morning. I'm desperate. Please tell me what to do.

DEAR READER: Most antiperspirants are of limited help. They are usually made of aluminum salts that act to clog the sweat glands. They are adequate for most people with mild problems, but not for the heavy sweaters.

Wetness from sweating is one thing, but odor is slightly different. The odor that persists is usually caused by bacteria that live just under the surface of the skin. Most soaps will not remove these bacteria because they cannot penetrate the skin to kill them. In that case, no matter how often you wash, how clean you are, or if you shave under your arms or not, the bacteria will persist. So will the odor.

There are several approaches to your problem. You might eliminate the odor by using soaps that will penetrate the skin to kill the odorcausing bacteria. These are Dial. Safeguard and Palmolive Gold. If that doesn't work, ask your doctor to prescribe pHisoHex (hexachlorophene) for you. I have discussed its use in Special Report 99, About Sweating and Body Odor, which I'm sending you. Others who want this report can send $2 with a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for it to THE HEALTH LETTER/99, P.O. Box 19622, Irvine, CA 92713.

Use of scarves discussed

LaJean Henry presented a program demonstrating the use of scarves at the recent meeting of the Garden Beautiful Club.

Members met in the home of Dorothy Noland with Bobby Metcalf serving as co-hostess.

President Nadine Hill opened the meeting by reading a thought for the day. Minutes were read and committee reports were given.

Coffee cake and fruit cups were served to Louise Axe, Ruby Carmichael, Audine Dettman, Jeane Dowell, Phung Emmons, Rosalie Gilbreath, Hilda Havens, Jerry Jackson, Camelia Jones, Marguerite Newell, Pat Northcutt, Helen Spinks, Bessie Story, Incz Wither-spoon, Margaret Young, Hill, Metcalf. Bea Hutson and Ina Mac Gilbreath.

The next meeting will be March 2 with Inez Witherspoon serving as hostess. A tour of Arrowhead Mills is planned for the group.

Ladies Golf Association to meet

The Ladies Golf Association will meet for a business session at 7 p.m. Tuesday, Feb. 13, at the Hereford Country Club.

All interested women are invited to attend the meeting. Among the agenda items to be discussed will be future tournaments.

If the sweating problem persists without the odor, and can't be controlled by antiperspirants on the market, your doctor may prescribe some medicines that help in some cases. These are Pro-Banthine and medicines that block the action of adrenaline — the beta-blockers such

If that fails, you may want to try iontophoresis. This uses a small electrical current delivered to the area to actually dry up the sweat glands. There is a device called the Drionic instrument that is useful for this. I have discussed it in the Special Report I'm sending you.

DEAR DR. LAMB: I would like to know about hydrocephalus. All I know is that it's a build-up of water in the brain. Can hydrocephalus endanger a person's life? How long does a person with hydrocephalus live? DEAR READER: You have a separate circulation through the brain and spinal cord and the membranes that encase it. The fluid filling this space is called the cerebrospinal fluid (CSF). Some of this clear fluid is withdrawn when you have a lumbar puncture. The fluid comes from the circulation and fills the cavities of the brain.
