

Despite Drop in Oil Use

U.S. Trade Deficit Zooms

By The Associated Press

The nation's oil-import bill contributed to producing the third-highest trade deficit on record, even though Americans are using less and less oil.

The Commerce Department reported Friday that January's trade deficit — the difference between the value of imports and exports — had increased from the previous month's $1.8 billion to $5.13 billion.

The gap between imported and exported oil widened to $6.6 billion last month, but the department attributed the increase to changes in the timing of oil deliveries and reporting lags rather than increases in imports.

U.S. oil consumption has been falling because of conservation and the recession, which reduces the demand for residual fuels used by industry and commerce. The Energy Department reported Friday that U.S. oil imports in the week ended Feb. 19 fell nearly 30 percent from a year earlier.

The January deficit was the biggest since the $5.4 billion of last August. The only higher deficit since the department began compiling figures on a comparable basis was $5.9 billion in February 1980.

Petroleum Information International, a trade journal, reported that Venezuela cut prices of its lower-quality oil by between 33 cents and 85 cents a barrel, to as low as $22.06.

Reports from London said Shell U.K. Ltd. and British Petroleum Co. had formally asked the British state-owned oil corporation to open negotiations on the price of North Sea crude. Britain had reduced that price by $1.50 a barrel, to $35, earlier this month, but the companies are insisting on bigger cuts.

Earlier this week, Mexico said it will cut its price Monday by $2.50 a barrel, to $32.50 for its top grade of crude.

Oil prices have fallen in part because of weak demand in the industrialized countries as a result of conservation and recession. Nonetheless, the government reported Friday that a $1.8 billion increase in the nation's oil-import bill pushed the U.S. trade deficit in January to $5.13 billion.

Pamphlet Available To Local Taxpayers

Fred Fox, chief appraiser for the Deaf Smith County Appraisal District, announced today the availability of an eight-page pamphlet which may help district residents save on their property taxes.

According to Fox, the pamphlet explains how the property tax system in Texas operates and highlights possible tax savings available to citizens.

The publication was developed by the State Property Tax Board in accordance with the provisions of the Property Tax Code, which was passed by the 66th Legislature in 1979.

Information in the pamphlet is applicable to property taxes collected by all levels of local government, including counties, cities and school districts.

The pamphlet explains in detail the residence homestead exemptions offered by various taxing units.

Fox stated that school district homeowners are eligible for a $5,000 general homestead exemption and that certain disabled persons and those aged 65 or older may qualify for an additional $10,000 exemption from the value of their property.

"Taxpayers who were 65 or older on Jan. 1 of this year are also entitled to a school tax freeze on the tax bill for their house and yard. The elderly must make application to get the freeze in 1982 or retain one acquired previously," the chief appraiser added.

Homeowners may also be eligible for a $3,000 general homestead exemption for county purposes. This is granted on the portion of county tax levied for farm-to-market roads and flood control.

Owners of agricultural land must apply prior to May 1 to be entitled to taxation on the basis of its productivity rather than market value.

"More complete information regarding tax rendition and exemptions is available from appraisal district personnel," Fox said.

The pamphlet also contains information concerning the operation of the Appraisal Review Board. This board will serve to equalize all property values in the appraisal district.

A section dealing with the process of initiative and referendum has been added to the 1982 edition of the pamphlet. Beginning this tax year, voters will be able to petition an election to limit the amount of tax increase by any taxing unit.

"District residents are encouraged to review the pamphlet and make application for all tax relief to which they are entitled before May 1, when the rendition period ends," Fox added.

Dedication Set For Cowgirl HOF

The official dedication of the new home for The National Cowgirl Hall of Fame and Western Heritage Center will be at 1:30 p.m. on April 17. This ceremony will be at 515 Avenue B or the Marsh Pitman home.

Dr. Lauro Cavazos, president of Texas Tech University, will make the dedicatory address. Six western heritage honorees will be introduced. The chamber singers and high school band will be part of the official program.

On the evening of April 17, the third annual Rhinestone

Roundup will be held. This gala event will be staged at the new site of the Hall of Fame. Again a silent auction will be a part of the Rhinestone Roundup. Committees are busy making plans for this important weekend.

If anyone or business is interested in putting an item into the silent auction to help the Hall of Fame raise money, please call 364-5252. Invitations will soon be mailed, and if you are interested in being on the mailing list, call 364-5252.

More than 2,000 high school students from throughout the area will be competing in athletic events in Hereford the first two weekends of March.

The Deaf Smith County Chamber of Commerce will again sponsor "Super Sports Weekend", with golf and tennis tournaments drawing high school athletes here March 4-6, then track and baseball will be featured March 11-13.

In addition, the Hereford High School Rodeo Club will host the annual Tri-State Rodeo March 6-7. Local residents will have the opportunity to see a lot of exciting events, and many visitors will be in town the two weekends.

Many citizens have read or heard about the new Texas Property Tax Code, but not everyone understands the major changes which became effective Jan. 1.

The main change on the local level is the establishment of an appraisal district—which values all property for tax purposes, provides a single board of equalization, and makes it possible for taxpayers to deal with one office rather than with multiple tax offices.

Besides simplifying the tax process, the change should reduce duplication and save some tax dollars.

These changes have met resistance in many counties, but the process has been accomplished in Deaf Smith and Hereford with little fanfare. This happened, we believe, because taxing units here already were using the same values and because of the spirit of cooperation which has benefited our county in other areas.

All property owners should become familiar with the tax

School Week Activities Planned

March 1-5 is Texas Public School Week, and the Hereford Independent School District has several activities planned on the various campuses in observance of this annual event.

Although no formal programs are planned on the secondary level, all parents and visitors are welcome to visit La Plata and Stanton Jr. High Schools at Hereford High School during the week.

At Aikman Primary School there will be a PTO meeting at 7:30 p.m. Thursday. The second grade will also be presenting a program that night.

At Northwest Primary School a music and physical education program will be presented at 7 p.m. Monday.

At Tierra Blanca Primary School an Open House will be held from 7-9:30 p.m. Tuesday.

On the intermediate level the following activities have been scheduled:

At Bluebonnet Intermediate School an Open House will be held from 7:30-9 p.m. Tuesday, and the sixth grade will present a music and physical education program.

At Shirley Intermediate School no formal activities are planned, but parents and visitors are welcomed to visit during the week.

At West Central Intermediate School an Open House will be held from 7:30-8:45 p.m. Tuesday.

Restrictions Against South Africa Eased

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Reagan administration will ease trade restrictions against the South African security forces, reversing a 1978 policy designed to protest racial segregation in that country, a Commerce Department official says.

Bohdan Denysyk, deputy assistant commerce secretary for export administration, said Friday the administration will lift restrictions on the sale of certain commodities and low-level technology to the police and military in South Africa.

He described the administration's action as "a shift in liberalizing the (export) controls" on goods to South Africa. But he stressed the administration was not condoning South Africa's apartheid — or racial segregation — policies.

"Apartheid is repugnant to us," he said, adding the United States will continue to support the 1963 arms embargo imposed by the United Nations.

The Carter administration imposed the trade restrictions in February 1978 as part of its effort to put pressure on South Africa to end racial segregation and to give its black population full political and economic rights.

Under its new policy, the United States will not maintain special export controls on four categories of commodities and technical data, Denysyk said.

The administration will still maintain controls on the export of helicopters and aircraft to South Africa, Denysyk said. Licenses for export of those aircraft will be approved only if the Commerce Department feels they will not be used in support of the military or para-military, he said.

In addition, controls will be applied on the export of computer equipment to five government ministries, including the ministry of justice.

The export restrictions are being lifted on the general purpose commodities that "could be gotten from other sources" and that "are not part of military and police equipment."

Drastic Drop

Student enrollment in Hereford Independent Schools has dropped from a peak near 5,650 in 1978 to the current 4,727. According to Larry Wartes, assistant superintendent, the drop has reduced school lunch participation and compounded problems with federal lunch reimbursement cuts. He said enrollment usually drops off after October, however this year the attrition rate has been especially sharp in addition to being the lowest enrollment since the late 60s.

Drop in Enrollment Hits Lunch Program

(This is the final article in a three-part series concerning the school lunch program in the Hereford Independent School District.)

By JERI CURTIS
Staff Writer

Management problems are not any different than they have always been, according to Larry Wartes, assistant superintendent of Hereford schools. But the recent drop in school enrollment — at its lowest since the late 60s — has caused less lunch program participation, thus less money to operate.

Wartes said the district is feeding up to 3,800 students a day within the district, a number which actually is not bad. Nearly three-fourths of the students are eating at school.

"The dilemma is this, if you are losing enrollment, you are losing participation," he said. "The answer is participation, though."

"In January 1979, enrollment was 5,359; in January 1982 it was 4,787. This is a loss of 572 students in three years. Of this loss, 355 has occurred in the 1981-82 school year," Wartes explained. "You can see we suddenly have a problem."

How many students eat in the cafeteria determines how much reimbursement the district receives from the government. However, this year the pinch is a bit tighter because government reimbursement dropped from 16 cents to 11.5 cents per meal served. That resulted in a loss of about $30,000 in the school lunch program in Hereford.

"Free lunch reimbursement went up," Wartes added. "But not enough to offset the loss."

The government's five-cent raise for free lunches will only net HISD about $14,000 for the year.

Wartes said something would have to be done to alleviate dipping into the lunch surplus. He said about 15 years ago the cafeteria system started out each school year with about $50,000 surplus, but increases in food and labor costs have shrunk the surplus to about $31,000.

"It keeps getting lower and lower. We've got to have that money at the first of the year to get started and just to have on hand." About 50 to 55 percent of those who eat in the cafeterias are on free lunch programs and another five to 10 are on reduced price lunches. The rest who participate pay the full price. Wartes said those figures have been about the same for the past 10 years.

But the annual three-quarter million dollar business is dragging and Wartes said something will have to be done.

Nationwide, participation has dropped 15 to 30 percent in school cafeterias and in Texas it is down nearly seven percent. Eight districts in Texas have left the school lunch program in 58 schools because of the same problems Hereford is facing.

Meal prices for paying students have increased five to 10 cents this year in Texas. Wartes said some lunches in the state are as high as $1.15 with a majority from 65 to 90 cents. Hereford students pay

Blue Cross Reports

$36 Million Loss

DALLAS (AP) — The president of Blue Cross and Blue Shield of Texas says the company's net operating loss of $36 million last year results partly from benefit payments and administrative overhead.

John D. Melton, commenting on the financial results released Friday, also cited management decisions, data processing conversions, premium ratings, inflation and "over-utilization of health services" as having contributed to the losses.

"I want our customers to understand, however, that we are not attempting to make up for losses for the past two years with our present rates," Melton said. "We are simply rating to assure there are not losses in the future."

The $36 million loss for 1981 compares with a $45 million loss for 1980.

Melton said Blue Cross-Blue Shield last year returned to its members $927 million, or 96 cents of every health care dollar collected.

He also said the company's statutory surplus totaled $35.9 million as of Dec. 31.

Company efforts to improve its statutory surplus position include selling its downtown Dallas office building, coinsuring a "substantial block" of its individual life business and reappraising its property in Richardson, Melton said.

In Austin, Chairman William Daves Jr. of the State Board of Insurance said the loss reported by Blue Cross-Blue Shield represented about 3 percent of the company's gross premium volume of $1 billion. The loss reported in 1980 represented about 5 percent of the company's $900 million premium volume, he said.

Daves said that based on the information filed with his office, "we are satisfied as to the solvency of the company. Continued operations of the company do not appear hazardous to policyholders, certificate holders or the general public."

Clements Says Legalities Prevent Gas Blockade

DALLAS (AP) — Gov. Bill Clements says he supports the idea of a natural gas blockade but that his staff has been unable to find a legal way to halt shipments to other states.

Clements, speaking in his hometown Friday, said he likes the idea of setting up a blockade in Texas to force an end to federal price controls on natural gas.

Jim Nugent, chairman of the Texas Railroad Commission, suggested such a move Thursday in Washington.

Clements said he hired attorneys and consultants were hired "three or four years ago" to explore the legality of stopping natural gas shipments to other states.

"They couldn't find any way to do it," he said. "If he (Nugent) can find a way that is constitutional, I guarantee you I will support it all the way."

Nugent suggested the gas blockade while meeting with the Texas congressional delegation and Texas energy lobbyists.

Treaties May Not Be Best Arms Limitation

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Formal treaties may not be the best way to limit nuclear arms, participants at a University of Texas conference suggested Friday.

McGeorge Bundy, former national security adviser to Presidents John Kennedy and Lyndon Johnson, said the United States should consider moving away from the formal treaty process and make agreements on arms control subject to a majority vote of both houses of Congress.

James Goodby, ambassador in the State Department's Bureau of Politico-Military Affairs, said "the problem with the treaty approach is that it has been affected by the cycle of the four-year presidency."

Joseph Nye, a Harvard professor who was deputy undersecretary of state in the Carter administration, said he thought the treaty process should be retained, but it should not be considered "as the only game in town."

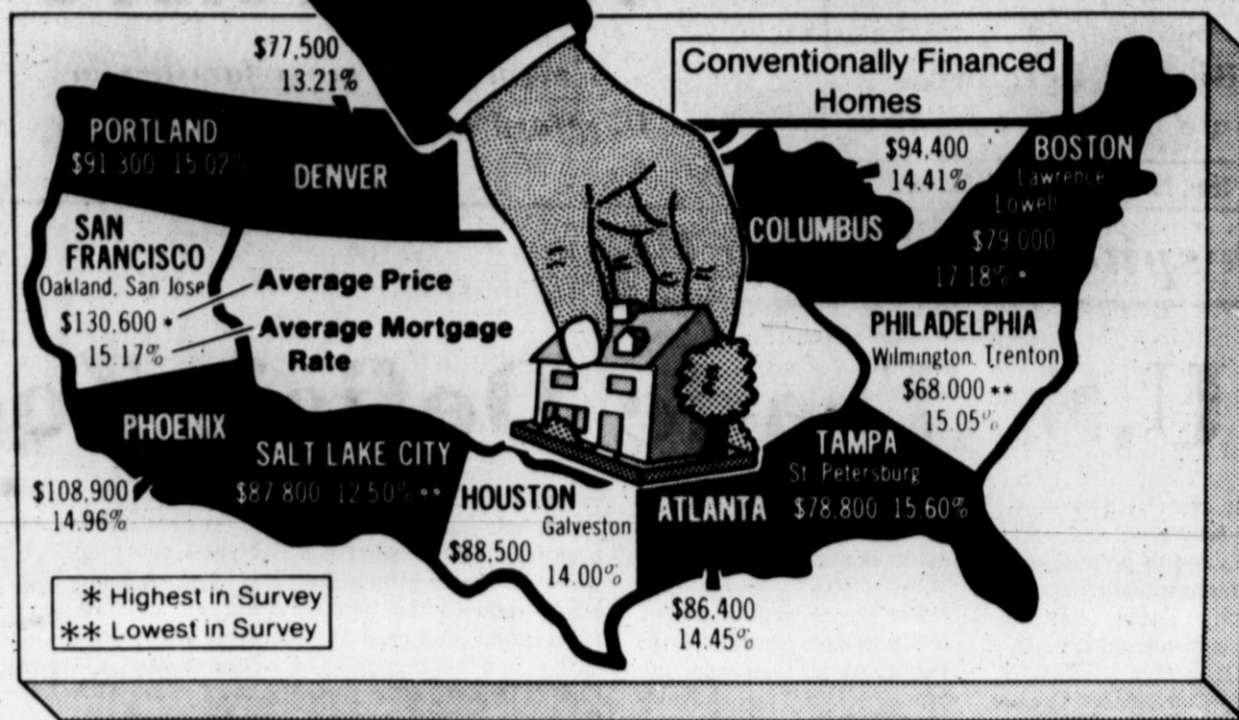

Nye proposed more informal approaches such as regular meetings between U.S. and Soviet officials at various levels to discuss arms issues of common interest.

Housing and mortgage rates are high all over, but higher in some areas of the country than others. A current survey finds the best housing prices in Denver, the most expensive market in the San Francisco Bay area. The prices are right in Boston, but the mortgage rates are the highest in the country. Salt Lake City comes in at the low end of the mortgage scale. The survey covers only housing purchases financed through banks or other conventional lending institutions. Cities included in larger metropolitan areas are indicated by smaller type.

Reagan Agrees To Withdraw Hart From Civil Rights Post

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan has agreed to withdraw the nomination of B. Samuel Hart to the U.S. Civil Rights Commission after the controversial black evangelist requested that his name be dropped, the White House says.

White House spokesman Mark Weinberg announced Friday night that Reagan "will comply" with Hart's request, which came about a day before publication of reports that he was thousands of dollars behind in loan repayments.

Hart, 50, had been opposed by women's, civil rights, and homosexual groups. The Philadelphia radio evangelist had said he was opposed to the Equal Rights Amendment and busing to integrate schools and he did not consider that homosexuals have a civil rights cause.

In an interview with The Associated Press, Hart claimed his stand against legalizing homosexuality in Philadelphia in 1974 hurt his case.

"They (homosexuals) are found in areas of the press, in the media, and that's fine," he said in an interview from his home.

"But when somebody comes up that is known to have stood against them or against their legalization and they happen to have some reason or some measure of control over the press, then you can understand that that person is not going to get a fair shake," he said.

Hart said he told Reagan in a letter that he wanted his name dropped from consideration to the commission because the controversy and the "harassment of the press" was keeping him from his ministry.

He added that he did not want to prolong "a divisive attitude among the very people that the Civil Rights Commission is intended to help and protect."

The Washington Post and the Philadelphia Inquirer reported in today's editions that Hart owed the Pennsylvania Minority Business Development Authority $23,542 in penalties and delinquent principal payments on a loan, and had missed $28,000 in principal payments on a bank loan guaranteed by the federal Small Business Administration.

The loans, originally $200,000 from the state agency in 1977 and $100,000 from a Philadelphia bank under an SBA guarantee in 1978, financed the construction of a radio station Hart owns in Phoenixville, Pa., near Philadelphia.

The Inquirer quoted SBA spokesman Bob Deitsch as saying the SBA took over the loan from the bank in November. Hart had resumed payments under a new payment schedule, Deitsch told the paper. No telephone number for Deitsch could be found in the Washington area.

The Post quoted an unidentified White House official as saying the White House had not known about Hart's financial problems until this week.

Hart said the reports about the loans were "just part of the harassment" by the press and added there was "no substance" to the notion the stories caused him to step down.

Earlier this week, it was learned that Hart owed $4,400 in back rent and taxes on his radio station, WYIS, in Phoenixville, and had not registered to vote between the early 1960s and last November.

Sen. John Heinz, R-Pa., praised the outcome of the Hart case. "This has been an unfortunate episode from the beginning," said Heinz, who had protested Hart's selection.

"The president exercised good judgment" in accepting Hart's offer to withdraw, he said.

And Judy Goldsmith, executive vice president of the National Organization for Women, said, "We are delighted to hear that Rev. Hart has withdrawn himself from nomination... It is very good news for the citizens of this country."

At a press conference earlier this month, Reagan said Hart was "not against equal rights."

"He (Hart) specifically stated that he is for equal rights for women; he just happens to be opposed to the ERA as a method of getting it," the president said. "I happen to have that same position."

Hart said he was now "just going to settle down with my ministry," the Montco Bible Fellowship in the Philadelphia suburb of Ambler.

Hoover Named Head Of Sherman Campaign

Wanda Hoover of Hereford has been named Deaf Smith County campaign coordinator for former State Senator Max Sherman's campaign for Texas Attorney General. In this capacity she will be helping to coordinate support in this area for upcoming campaign events.

The grand opening of Sherman's state headquarters will be March 1 from 3 to 5 p.m. The headquarters is located in Amarillo north of Peppertree Square and east of Western Plaza and Duniven Lake.

Sherman was most recently president of West Texas State University in Canyon. He served as this region's state senator from 1971 to 1977.

Sherman is seeking the Democratic nomination for Attorney General in the May primary.

Since his statewide campaign will be directed from the Amarillo headquarters, Sherman said he hopes his friends and supporters from throughout the Panhandle will help him celebrate the opening of the office.

75 cents in primary grades, 85 cents in fourth through sixth and 95 cents in junior and senior high.

Although no action has been proposed, Wartes said the attrition rate will cause the district to take some serious looks at the problem before next year.

"If you raise lunch prices and then lose participation, then what have you gained?" he asks. "Our real goal is to feed as many kids as possible every day."

But higher prices may not be the only alternative. Food costs compose 54 percent of the Hereford lunch budget; labor about 40 percent and utilities and maintenance about seven percent.

One alternative to higher prices would be cutting out the fast food line and the snack bar and strictly serve one prepared Type A lunch, Wartes said.

Another would be make management and labor fit the number of kids served.

Wartes said some districts have opted for a central kitchen which delivers food to the schools in an effort to cut maintenance costs.

Some districts in Dallas-Fort Worth have eliminated kitchens and contracted a food service for meals.

"I don't know about contracted service. We have some 65 full-time and part time employees. Do we want more unemployment?" Wartes said.

"It's just different this year because we lost so many kids so quickly," he noted.

"There wouldn't be a thing wrong with our system if our enrollment was up."

work," he said.

The type of items that now will be allowed to be sold to South Africa "clearly have no connection with apartheid or support the administration of it," the commerce official said.

The new controls also apply to Namibia — South-West Africa — which was entrusted to South African protection by a U.N. mandate that has expired.

Last month, the administration extended the ban on all export controls maintained for foreign policy reasons for two months, expiring on Sunday. The embargo had been renewed yearly since it was put in place in 1978.

The Commerce Department is required by law to conduct an annual review of the prohibitions, department officials have said. Officials said this year's review gave the administration its first chance to study them.

The current administration is considered friendlier to the Pretoria government than the previous administration.

Car Explosion Kills Seven

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — A car packed with explosives blew up outside a lumber warehouse near a Syrian army checkpoint in Mosler West Beirut today. Police said at least eight civilians were killed and 27 wounded.

News photographers said the two-story warehouse was devastated by the fiery blast and that two pickup trucks and three cars were burned, but none of the seniors at the Syrian checkpoint 20 yards away was injured.

It was the second car bombing in West Beirut in five days. On Tuesday, two car bombs exploded in an outdoor market, killing 12 people and wounding more than 30.

A bazaar were pulverized and dozens of cars were burned in that blast.

Local newspapers said they received no immediate claims of responsibility for the blast, which occurred in the Ousai neighborhood shortly after 1 p.m.

A telephone caller claiming to represent "the Front for the Liberation of Lebanon from Foreigners" said that group was responsible for Tuesday's explosion. The group has previously claimed responsibility for attacks against Palestinian, Syrian and leftist targets in Beirut and elsewhere in Lebanon that killed more than 200 people last year.

Senator Bill Sarpalius Reports

TOUGH NEW CRIME LAWS

AUSTIN — We have been talking a lot about what we need to do to solve the crime problem in this state, but we haven't talked very much about what we did last session. Here's a look at some crime laws we passed during the last session of the Legislature:

We added elderly people to the list of people protected by the laws protecting children. Now, assault on an elderly person carries a stiffer penalty, like child abuse.

We created a new crime, theft by bomb threat. A person who extorts money by using a bomb threat now faces 20 years in prison.

Punishment is a valid goal of law enforcement, but it really doesn't help the victim much. We wanted to do something for the victim, so we now allow judges to require juvenile offenders to make restitution to their victims. Also, judges can require victims to do charity work.

Before the last session, Texas was the only state that did not allow prosecutors to use oral confessions in a criminal trial. We changed that, although there is a provision in the law that the confessions must be recorded.

Many people have long contended that wholesale dealing in pornography was a function of organized crime. The Legislature agreed last session, and increased the penalty for wholesale dealing in pornography from 10 years to 20 years in prison.

For years, the only legal wiretaps in Texas were those ordered by federal judges and manned by federal officers. We gave local officers the power to ask state judges for wiretaps last session, in an attempt to control drug traffic.

Because of criticism from civil liberties groups, we put strict safeguards on the issuance of warrants for the taps, and on use of the taps after the warrant is issued.

In an effort to stop crime before it starts, we raised the liability for parents for the malicious acts of their children from $5,000 to $15,000. We hope this will make parents more responsible in supervising their children. Even if it doesn't, someone has to pay for the malicious acts of children.

We also passed other crime laws during the last session, but we hope this will give you an idea of what we are doing to stop crime. We are trying, but we need your help. We not only need your support, but we also need your ideas. Write us and tell us what we should do next to fight criminals.

Be Careful With Exquisite Material

COLLEGE STATION — Fantasize yourself in an exquisite garment of fabulous shimmering silk, silk taffeta, satin or crepe—sewn by you.

When sewing with these luxurious and delicate fabrics, keep in mind the type of material used, nature of the fabric and special sewing and care techniques, says Becky Saunders, a clothing specialist.

Saunders is on the home economics staff of the Texas Agricultural Extension Service, The Texas A&M University System.

SILK FABRIC TYPES

Today's silk and silk-like fabrics are made of 100 percent silk fibers, synthetic fibers or blends of both.

Knowing how the different fabrics "behave" helps homesewers choose the right fabric for each particular garment design, Saunders says.

For example, if a garment design calls for soft gathers, look for a fabric that will "drape" easily rather than a stiffer fabric which would make the gathers too rigid, the specialist explains.

Here is a list of some popular silk or silk-like fabrics—and their "behavior" traits:

1) charmeuse—fine, very soft satin-faced crepe with a lustrous surface and beautiful "drape"

2) crepe de chine—fine, lightweight crepe with a smooth, lustrous surface and soft "drape"

3) georgette—lightweight, semi-sheer crepe fabric with a grainy surface which "drapes" beautifully and resists wrinkles

4) noil silk—soft, slightly nubby fabric having a cotton-like appearance.

"Noil" yarn comes from the inner part of the silk cocoon and is shredded, combed and spun like cotton thread. This sportier fabric is less expensive than most silks. It "behave" as pongee and other medium-weight woven fabrics. It acts a bit stiffer than other silks.

In choosing fabric for a certain garment design, remember that weight of the fabric determines its "behavior," the specialist notes.

Lightweight silk, such as organza and crepe de chine, "drape" gently and gather softly, while medium-to heavyweight silks, such as silk taffeta and brocade give a crisp tailored or full look.

For a graceful, loose flowing effect, choose soft sheers, such as georgette, chiffon, batiste or organza, as well as crisper sheers, such as organza.

PRESHRINK SILKS
Before sewing silks, preshrink them, Saunders says.

To preshrink hand-washable silk, dip the fabric in warm water. Then roll it in a towel to remove excess water.

If fabric is off-grain, adjust or straighten it while it's damp. Dry it unfolded over a shower rod. Then press with a dry iron.

To preshrink dry-cleanable fabric steam it on the "wrong" side with a press cloth to protect the finish and avoid spotting, the specialist says.

CUTTING AND SEWING
Before cutting fabric, observe pattern layout instructions and keep the proper grain direction, Saunders instructs.

Fluid fabrics, such as crepe de chine or chiffon show uneven grains easily, she warns.

To prevent fabric from slipping when pattern pieces are laid out, cut on a cork or felt surface or stretch a sheet tightly across normal cutting surface.

In addition, fabrics won't slip if you place them between layers of lightweight paper—shelf paper or tissue. This prevents slipping while cutting.

When pinning, use fine silk pins only in seam allowances, so pins won't leave marks on silk fabric.

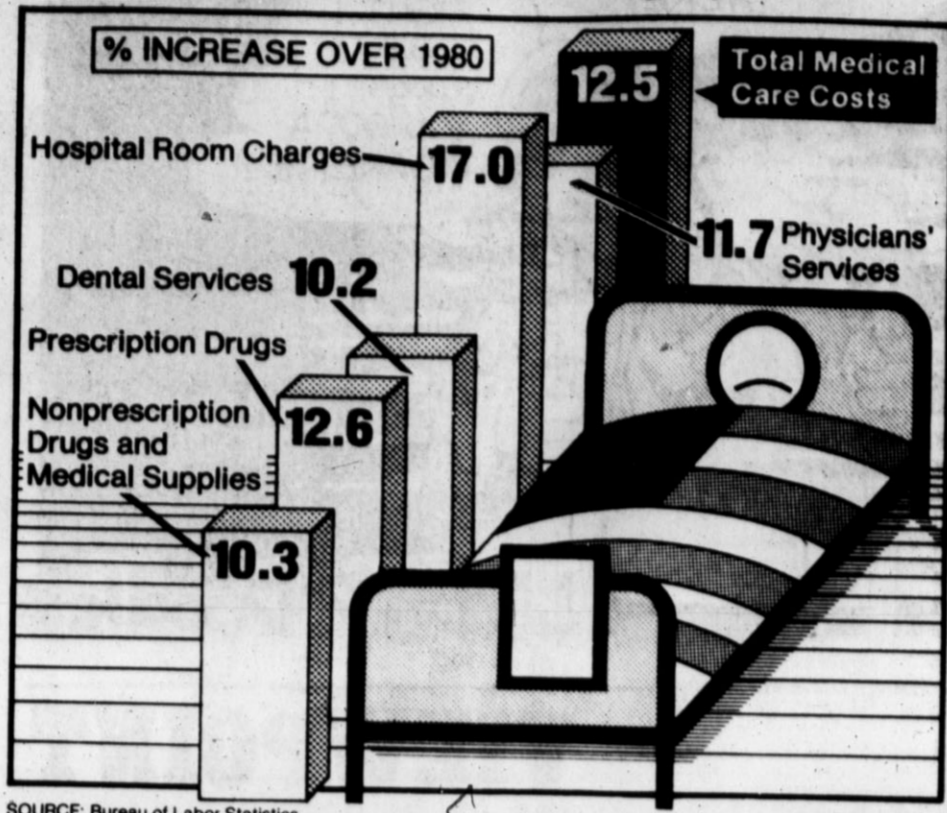

Cut nubby fabrics one thickness at a time since folded fabric sticks to itself and doesn't lay smooth, Saunders says. Pattern matching is easier, too, when you cut single layers instead of double layers.

Leave larger seam allowances for fitting or special seam finishes, the specialist adds.

Grant's farewell

In 1884 the collapse of the Grant & Ward investment house left ex-President Ulysses S. Grant penniless. He then began his "Personal Memoirs," writing while ill of cancer. He completed them four days before his death on July 23, 1885. Grant was buried in a tomb on Riverside Drive, N.Y. where his wife also lies.

AMERICAN MEDICAL CARE The Bill Keeps Going Up

SOURCE: Bureau of Labor Statistics

Hospital room charges led the itemized bill of medical care cost increases during 1981. The jump was the largest for a single year since the federal government began reporting on medical costs in 1935 and almost half again as much as the increase in overall consumer prices (8.9 percent). The steep increases are attributed to rising health insurance system expenditures, labor costs, expensive medical technology and the aging population.

Pine Mills Available

Texas Town for Sale

By DEBBIE K. SOLOMON
Dallas Times Herald

PINE MILLS, Texas (AP) — You can't buy a cup of coffee in downtown Pine Mills. But you can buy the town.

Pine Mills has fallen on hard times. Once a booming trade center with three sawmills, a post office and population of 130, Pine Mills has since become a no-horse town with one junk shop and a population of two. Plus a dozen many cats.

And now Stafford and Charm Shamburger, who have lived here almost 80 years, are selling this East Texas town 40 miles north of Tyler.

Their asking price is $160,000, and it includes their house and junk shop, both located at the only intersection in town.

"Pine Mills is just a wide place in the road," said Jack Humphreys, a Wood County sheriff's deputy. "It's just a junk shop at a dead-end intersection."

But Shamburger, 77, who wears a fine black suit and unscuffed shoes to work, is proud of his junk shop.

"People come from miles to get my junk," he said. "It may be just junk, but it's cheaper than the junk they sell in Dallas."

Pine Mills never was incorporated, but the state Highway Commission still considers it a town. Founded in 1850 by the grandfathers of Shamburger and his wife, Pine Mills is noted as the first settlement in Wood County by the county historical association.

Shamburger said he never considered moving away. He opened a general store in the early 1940s, but chain discount stores threatened his business. So 30 years ago, he decided he should specialize.

"I specialize in junk," he said. The junk business has been good for the Shamburgers. When people in Pine Mills need a pipe fitting or dog shampoo or a cherry pitter, they know they can find it at Sham's Place. You can even find an $8 bathtub.

"I have them in every color," he said. The junk business, in fact, has been so good that a few years ago, Shamburger bought a pale yellow Cadillac from a junk dealer who stopped by to sell him some junk. The junk dealer took a cab home.

Shamburger doesn't drive the Cadillac, though, because he doesn't want people to talk. Instead, he drives a beat-up 1968 Buick and stores the Caddy in the garage.

The state of Idaho entered the Union on July 3, 1880.

along with hundreds of pairs of sunglasses and a few dozen toilet bowls that he bought at bankruptcy sales.

"People get jealous," he said, "so I just keep my car in the shed."

The junk business may be thriving, but Shamburger can't give his store away.

He tried to give it to his daughter, who lives with her family in Mesquite, but she wouldn't take it. He calls her a fool.

Personally, Shamburger said, he would rather keep his store than sell it to some investor with a dislike for junk who probably would tear it down.

So why is he selling? "My wife is making me," he said.

Mrs. Shamburger, a rail-thin woman dying of cancer, said she wants to move to Mesquite because Pine Mills has become a lonely place. She reminisces about her childhood in Pine Mills and about the preacher who stopped by once a month to lead hymns.

The preacher doesn't come by any more. And neither do friends.

To a younger generation in East Texas, Pine Mills is just a peculiar old man and his junk shop.

Man Aims to Change Aloe Vera's Image

By SALLY CARPENTER
Associated Press Writer

DALLAS (AP) — Clinton H. Howard has made a career of turning sluggish businesses into million-dollar ventures. And for his next feat, he wants to transform aloe vera's image from sturdy houseplant into that of household staple.

For centuries, the succulent stalks have been used as a home remedy for minor cuts and burns, primarily in parts of the world where the tropical plant grows naturally, such as Hawaii and the American Southwest.

Aloe vera's folkloric roots were damaged, however, when the medical community examined the juice just beneath the plant's skin and pronounced it a laxative.

"Today, we throw that part away," said Howard, president of Ava Care, Inc. It is the water-colored pulp inside the leaf that forms the base of the company's products and that "has a lot of very valuable properties," he said.

Howard's company claims the "most complete line of aloe vera products in the world" — ranging from skin cream and toothpaste to household cleansers and health drinks.

About 37,000 distributors in 13 countries sell some 200 products, including vitamins and cosmetics. Aloe vera products comprise about 35 percent of total sales volume, Howard said. In 1971, when Howard purchased the company — then called Ava Cosmetics Inc. — sales were less than $10,000 a month and the product line was about a tenth of its current size.

In fiscal 1981, revenues were $17.5 million, a 36 percent jump over the previous year.

Growth is projected at 50 percent this year, with about 2,000 distributors coming on board monthly, Howard said.

"We have restructured it from a cosmetics company to a broad-based skin care, cosmetics, health care-type product," he said.

Howard, who estimates the worldwide aloe vera market at about $100 million a year, sees the figure rising to $1 billion in the next few years.

And he intends to be at the forefront of the market through expanded distribution and through the work of the two scientists who run Ava Care's research and development laboratory.

The company has patented one process — to chemically stabilize the aloe vera — and Howard expects more patents to be forthcoming.

"We are really investing heavily in research," he said. "As our research develops products, we will tend to set up a subsidiary to market those products."

Howard also sees an advantage his location in the Dallas area, which he calls "the aloe vera capital of the world."

The primary reason is that some of the world's best aloe vera is grown in Texas' Rio Grande Valley. Howard said the South Texas soil conditions foster better crops than in other places where the plant is grown, such as Florida, Mexico and the western United States.

Although several processors are located in the Dallas area, Ava Care does some processing itself and is building a new plant for that purpose, Howard said.

Armed with a chemistry degree from Rice University and a master's degree from the University of Texas Southwest Medical School, Howard made his first investment with $600 at age 29.

The company, American Biomedical Corp., was the first medical laboratory chain to go public with its stock and subsequently was sold to Revlon for $13 million.

"It was easy to see that that industry was going to boom and change from the mom-and-pop laboratories to the big chains," said Howard.

He repeated his success in the radiopharmaceutical field, in which radioactive drugs are used to treat disease.

"I don't start companies just with the idea of selling them. I start companies and if the circumstances present themselves because of a change in the industry or a change in circumstances, it's better to merge it in with some other company," Howard said.

He launched Ava Care after being introduced to the direct-sales business as court-appointed president of a bankrupt company that he returned to profitability.

"My entire graduate work and background was in the health care field... So what appealed to me was the potential of aloe vera as a natural substance that obviously had healing properties that no one had really developed," Howard said.

Aloe vera, Howard says, can moisturize skin through its enzymes, provide nourishment as a health drink and relieve pain as a topical agent for cuts, burns and scrapes.

Until he can convince the medical community of aloe vera's worthiness, Howard must continue to battle the plant's tarnished image.

Quiet Heroes

Hereford has a lot of "Quiet Heroes," but more are needed.

The quiet heroes we're referring to are volunteer blood donors. They give of themselves, giving blood...the gift of life, and ask little in return.

The Women's Division of Deaf Smith County Chamber of Commerce is conducting a "Quiet Hero" campaign. They are asking folks to sign a card which indicates they would be willing to donate blood at least once a year.

As already pointed out, Hereford has a lot of "Quiet Heroes." Hereford is one of the few cities outside of Amarillo that has enough donors to cover the blood bank needs of our local citizens.

For a number of years, Hereford has been used as an example by Coffee Memorial Blood Bank of what can be done on the local level. The blood bank is a non-profit organization, not affiliated with any charitable agency.

Coffee Memorial was founded in 1950 and has become one of the outstanding blood banks in the country, with the most modern techniques and services. It is supported by citizens, hospitals and doctors of Amarillo and the entire area.

Blood is available from the bank for anyone in the area upon request of a hospital or qualified physician. Blood can be donated to the bank for specified individuals, or it can be used to provide you and your family with insured coverage for future blood bank expenses.

If it's for that feeling of knowing you helped someone in their private war for life, or for insuring possible family blood transfusion needs, or just helping your community keep its blood bank full...you can't beat the satisfaction of being a blood donor.

A large number of Hereford citizens have been helping the blood bank for years and have been on a volunteer call list. The Women's Division is in the process of making new cards for all prospective donors at this time.

If you are 18 years of age or older and would like to become, or continue to be, one of Hereford's Quiet Heroes, fill in one of the cards which can be found at several locations in town—including The Brand newspaper office.

GOP woos the Hispanics

LOS ANGELES (NEA) — "If I can get 35 percent of the Hispanic vote in California this year, I will elect both a governor and a senator. And I think that 35 percent is a realistic goal."

So says Dr. Tirso del Junco, the Cuban-born surgeon who chairs the California Republican Party. He is leading a major GOP effort to woo Hispanics away from the Democrats and to turn them into voting Republicans.

Hispanics represent substantial voting blocs in four states: New York, Florida, Texas and California.

They make up 19 percent of California's population today and are expected to make up more than 50 percent by the year 2040.

Republicans think they should be able to make substantial gains among Hispanic voters. Therefore, they are aggressively stepping up their efforts in the Latino communities, especially in California.

At the forefront of the campaign is del Junco, who is the first Hispanic ever to head a state political party, either Democratic or Republican.

"You have to remember that Hispanics by heritage are conservative, traditional and family oriented," he says. "We are very much law-and-order supporters. These are basically the same values held by the Republican Party."

"We can get this word out into the Hispanic community, not only here but in other parts of the country. I believe that you will see large blocs of Hispanics coming over to the Republican side."

del Junco is spreading this message not only within California but throughout the country in his position as head of the Republican National Committee's Hispanic Advisory Council.

In California, the GOP has established a Spanish-language communications division to distribute materials to the Spanish-language media and to develop other voter appeals in Spanish. The party has opened a headquarters in East Los Angeles, the most heavily concentrated Hispanic community in the state.

The state GOP is also making a concerted effort to woo local Hispanic officials away from the Democrats. Eighty such office holders, almost all of them Democrats, recently were brought together to hear a pitch from the Republicans.

Hector Godinez, prominent in Orange County's large Hispanic community, has announced that he is switching to the GOP, and party officials predict additional defections.

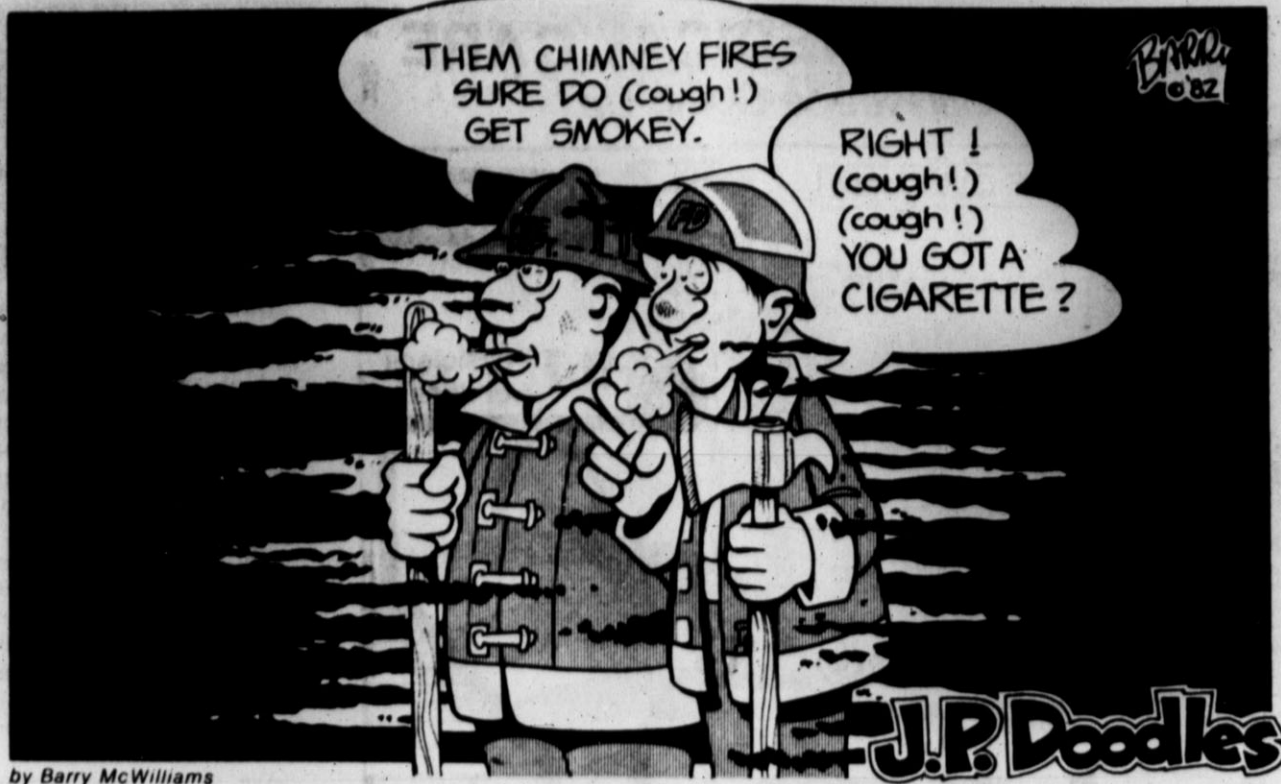

The national party, both here and in other areas of high Hispanic concentration, has started an "outreach" program to school Hispanic Republicans in political organizing and the other tricks of the political trade. Those trained will work as volunteers and paid professionals in Hispanic voter-registration drives planned for 1982 and 1984.

There was some speculation that the GOP's efforts to win over the Hispanics had received a blow when the highest-ranking Hispanic in the Reagan administration, Michael Cardenas, recently lost his job as head of the Small Business Administration. But del Junco does not think that this incident will be a major setback.

"It is simply a case of Mike being shifted from one administration job to another," he says. "It is regrettable the way the publicity was handled. But I have been given assurances at the highest levels of the White House that in the coming months this administration will appoint Hispanics to high-level jobs, and I don't think this incident will have a long-range effect."

"Hispanics are not dumb. They realize that despite all the Democratic Party has promised, both here in California and nationally, Hispanics have not really been given access. All the Democratic social-welfare programs have failed to improve the basic living conditions in the barrios."

"I think that Hispanics will begin to see how badly the Democratic Party has misled them and will come over to us. In 1980, Ronald Reagan got 25 percent of the Hispanic vote. I think in 1982 and 1984 we will do even better. That is what I am working for."

Flashy Statements Don't Help

By Richard L. Leshner

WASHINGTON—AFL-CIO President Lane Kirkland and Vice President George Bush fired salvos at each other during the labor federation's recent meeting in Bal Harbour, Florida. In a vulgar allusion to the 1978 mass murder-suicide tragedy in Jonestown, Guyana, President Kirkland accused the administration of practicing "Jonestown economics" by proposing a budget that "administers economic Kool-Aid to the poor, the deprived and the unemployed." An angry Vice President retorted: "Lane was groping for a headline and trying to play a semantic game. There is no point in who can make the flashiest statement."

No point at all. The Dogfight of Bal Harbour may have provided some high drama for the news media, but now let's take a look at the facts.

The economic policies so disdained by Mr. Kirkland have in the space of a year provided Americans with a 25 percent cut in tax rates, and unprecedented new savings opportunities such as individual retirement accounts.

At the same time, the federal government's commitment to those Americans who need our assistance has remained strong. In fact, spending for the major entitlement social programs will actually increase under the President's fiscal 1983 budget by $24 billion over 1982.

It is in the face of these facts that the AFL-CIO issued its own alternative to Reaganomics at Bal Harbour: restoration of all the administration's proposed budget cuts for fiscal 1983; rescission of major portions of the tax cut package enacted by Congress last year; a new income tax surcharge; and a multi-billion dollar program to "create" jobs. In other words, massive tax and spending increases.

Are these proposals advanced by the AFL-CIO leadership supported by the union's rank and file? It is said that one sure way to get President Kirkland hot under the collar is to suggest that his economic views and proposals are out of step with those of his members.

Again the facts speak for themselves. In a recent Gallup survey conducted for the U.S. Chamber of Commerce, union members expressed the following views on today's major economic issues:

They approve of the economic policies of the Reagan administration by a margin of 50 to 45 percent.

Union members favor additional reductions in government spending by a margin of 60 to 31 percent.

When asked whether the federal budget deficit should be reduced by cutting spending or raising taxes, 58 percent of union members chose spending cuts. Just four percent advocated tax increases.

These findings suggest that a majority of union members not only dispute Mr.

Kirkland's assessment of Reaganomics to date, but they reject his alternative of higher taxes and more spending as well. They are disturbed by the many economic problems that remain, but understand that the track record of the Reagan economic recovery program thus far is encouraging—and it's going to get a lot better in the coming months.

It's too bad that these facts and trends were obscured by the recent hysterics in Bal Harbour.

More People Digging For Treasures Than Dreaming

There is buried treasure in the United States. You may be able to find it with nothing more than the maps they used to give away at filling stations.

Or get yourself a Mississippi River map from the Army Corps of Engineers for $15 and you'll note that the winding Mississippi River is constantly trying to straighten itself.

What happens is that any bend in the river erodes the down-river bank deeper and deeper.

Until the river shortcuts across the neck of any horseshoe bend leaving an area of a few acres to a few square miles drained and dry.

Searching for sunken treasure in the active riverbed would be difficult because of the fast current and shifting silt.

Searching for buried treasure in the now-dry riverbeds is comparatively simple.

Porter Young of Helena, Ark., is a river historian, chairman of the Great River Road Commission.

He has told AP that "Mississippi River is paved with wrecks. Prominent shipwrecks include the Sultana steamboat which sank April 26, 1858, above Memphis, Tenn., when its boiler exploded. Most of the 2,000 people aboard were killed. None of the $150,000 in gold and greenbacks which had been aboard was ever recovered.

The river tends to bury its dead.

The current might carry a sinking boat for many miles before depositing it in a depressed area of the river bottom. There the wreck would soon be covered by sand and gravel.

But where the winding river cuts off some of its own horseshoe bends, of where Army engineers have engineered some 20 man-made cutoffs, parts of wrecks have been found 10 to 12 miles away from the present channel.

The Mississippi, prior to flood-control stabilization of the channel, was such a meanderer that—where it used to divide Arkansas and Mississippi—today part of Arkansas is east of the river.

So where should you start digging?

When the Pennsylvania sank in the late 1800s, Henry Clements, brother of Mark Twain, was killed. And $50,000 in gold went to the bottom. That was above Helena, Ark.

During the Uncivil War a Confederate vessel sank with $75,000 in its strongbox "near Memphis."

The Rhoda steamboat was wrecked from its mooring in the Helena harbor in 1876 and its strongbox was never recovered.

A towboat pulling barges containing lead ingots hit a bridge near Greenville in the early 1940s and went down. A few lead ingots were recovered. Those not yet recovered would be worth millions.

For generations during which the river was a sewer for mid-America it was littered with much trash; sorting that from anything salagable is difficult even with modern sounding equipment.

Also, recovery with heavy machinery would be prohibitively expensive.

But a man with a shovel might make it pay if he knew precisely where to dig.

Then why not?

Mr. Porter suspects "There are a lot more people digging than talking about it."

Penultimate Word

WHY AREN'T YOU STILL MAD, EDDIE?

Where is Eddie Childs when we need him? Before the last election he bombarded radio and T.V. with his "I'm mad" stuff.

There were even bumper stickers around that said, "I'm mad too, Eddie." Now there should be some that say, "I'm mad! Where is Eddie?"

Boy, just when you think you have a great leader, you get let down. Eddie got a tax break, got over his mad and bought himself a baseball team. So much for Eddie.

There must be some lessons in all of this for us to learn. If not some lessons, at least some healthy maybe's...

Maybe, the best way to choose our candidates is by who is mad instead of who leads the polls.

Maybe, it is hard to stay mad in a trickle-down economy if you are the one doing the trickling.

Maybe, oxen being gored is not so bad if it isn't your ox.

Maybe, when your ox isn't being gored, all of the other wrongs don't seem to be so wrong anymore.

Or maybe, the answer to handling the people who bother us is to give them a toy and send them off to play.

We could give Ralph Nader an Atari. Maybe he could make space invaders safe for the world and leave us alone.

We could give Alexander Haig a hockey team to command. He could rattle pucks instead of bombs.

We could buy a Monopoly set for President Reagan and let him play Reaganomics till his heart is content.

Best of all we could buy a Rubik's cube for the congress. Maybe they will get so busy they will forget to pass any laws. Will Rogers said his jokes never hurt anyone but everytime congress writes a joke, it is a law.

It worked on Eddie. Who knows?

Warm fuzzies,
Doug Manning

The Bootleg Philosopher

Pass the Buck

Editor's note: The Bootleg Philosopher on his Deaf Smith grass farm on Tierra Blanca Creek still has his mind on the economic situation, like nearly everybody else.

My theory has always been, when you've got a problem you can't handle, blame it on somebody or something else.

I have now found that my theory has spread to Europe. According to an article I read last night, leaders in France, England, West Germany and other European countries are blaming their economic problems on the United States deficit.

"President Reagan's scheduled deficit of $92 billion is the cause of high interest rates in the United States, and high interest rates there are causing economic disaster in Europe," the leaders announced.

I don't know if those European leaders can get by with telling their people that inflation and high interest rates there are caused by inflation and high interest rates here, but if they can we've got just one course to pursue.

We've got to find some country somewhere we can blame our deficit on.

I understand there are about 200 countries in the world, give or take a few that may have emerged or gone under between the time I wrote this letter and you got it, and while there never has been a Secretary of State who could, offhand, recite the names of all 200, surely we've got experts or as a last resort investigative reporters or unemployed economists who can find at least one country with a proportionately higher deficit than ours. That's the one Washington ought to be looking for. Send out a search team, even if we've got to do it on borrowed money. What's a few dollars more in a deficit nobody can comprehend anyway?

Yours faithfully,
J.A.

Don't Bogart That Cube Puzzle

By KATHY BAKER
Associated Press Writer
AUSTIN, Texas (AP) —

Don't peel the little squares off, don't pull it apart, don't pound it with a hammer — in other words, spare that Rubik's Cube and give one last try at solving the little devil.

That's the cry from two 20-year-old business majors at the University of Texas who have stumbled onto a big business — teaching us dummies who can't do it to solve the confounded, multi-colored, three-dimension puzzle that seems to have countless twists and no solution.

Marc Ostrofsky and Ernest Rapp, both of Houston, estimate there are several million cubes — the real Rubik's or bootlegged versions — and only about 10 percent can be solved by their owners.

The rest are left to languish on coffee tables, their nine-square sides an embarrassing, haphazard assortment of the four different colors.

"Children can solve it because they don't make it hard," Ostrofsky said. "And the other mistake people make is turning it over in their hands. No brain can take that confusion."

So in a two-hour course, Marc and Ernie will teach you six moves, and they guarantee that if you repeat the six moves, you will solve that Rubik's Cube and your friends will either step back in awe or never speak to you again.

And you'll get a handy "tip sheet" that includes such reminders as the center square always dictating the color of the side.

The two planned to teach their first class Sunday at UT, then teach a series of classes at Foley's department stores around Texas. Then they're hoping to go national with the company that owns Foley's.

Ostrofsky said he first encountered the cube when he bought one for his sister, an engineering student. She solved it. But he learned to solve, too, and could do it faster.

"That was exciting," he said, "because I'd never been able to beat my sister at anything."

On the lookout for business opportunities — Ostrofsky has had his own marketing company since he was a freshman — the young entrepreneur visited a wholesale trade mart in Dallas to "see what was hot." The Cube was. So Ostrofsky offered to buy 300 from a California importer.

"But he said he believed in me and sent me a thousand," Ostrofsky said. "When you have a thousand cubes, you don't know what to do with them. But I sold them all within a week."

Later, on a visit to his alma mater, Stratford High School in Houston, he met an 18-year-old student who could solve the puzzle in 25 seconds.

Freddie Reddick is "so fast you can't see his hands move," Ostrofsky says.

He flew Reddick to Austin to help promote sales of the cubes. The promotional notion and a suggestion from UT marketing professor Dr. Robert Leone resulted in the idea for the course.

Ostrofsky and Rapp, who handles the books for the fledgling business, insist there's no end in sight for the popularity — or infamy — of Rubik's Cube.

'Doughnut Dollies' Offered Help

By STEPHEN C. SMITH
Associated Press Writer
MILFORD, Conn. (AP) —

Their tools were large urns of Kool-Aid and "clubmobile kits" filled with construction paper signs, props reminiscent of grade school show-and-tell exercises and games such as "Concentration" and "Go."

They were the "Doughnut Dollies" of the Vietnam War,

"It's been the number one gift toy two Christmases in a row," Ostrofsky said.

Rapp, meanwhile, sees some serious uses for the puzzle.

"It helps you to think in three dimensions," he said. "It really does help your concentration. And it could be used in therapy, for instance for smokers. If a smoker could learn to solve it, they might spend so much time playing with it, they wouldn't reach for a cigarette so often."

But Ostrofsky admits not all adults like it. In fact, he notes, another cube entrepreneur has taken a different approach with a book called "How to (Dis)solve Your Rubik's Cube."

"It shows someone putting a cube in a microwave," he said, as if describing some unspeakable cruelty, "and they're pushing a button labeled 'melt.'"

Mrs. Christie says she felt guilty for surviving the war while so many men she knew had been wounded or killed.

"We did a lot of talking about the feelings...I had of a sense of abandonment. I felt we somewhat betrayed the fellows who really trusted and believed in us," she said. "Sometimes we had moved without saying goodbye. The guys counted on us coming back and we couldn't get back. We talked these (feelings) through for a long time and I eventually came to grips with them."

Thomas, a helicopter crew chief who suffered a severe shoulder injury in Vietnam, said although there likely are thousands of women suffering post-traumatic stress, few seem willing to step forward.

Thomas added that when women veterans approach the VA for help they're usually made to feel unwanted.

But Mrs. Christie has been able to cope, Mrs. Christie is attempting to reach out to other "Doughnut Dollies" and about 33,000 other women who served in a variety of roles in Vietnam and who have been virtually ignored by those concerned with treating post-traumatic stress.

"I'm not a psychologist and cannot solve their problems," says Mrs. Christie. "What we can do is give them support and tell them where they can go to get help and information."

For two weeks, her life was in shambles.

"I was thinking a lot about Vietnam...but my mind was a void in many areas. My kids were scaring the devil out of me."

"I kept seeing this kid in Vietnam rushing down the street with a grenade and they shot him," Mrs. Christie said. "My kids would run up to me and put their arms around me and I would go right up the wall."

She was displaying the symptoms of delayed post-traumatic stress syndrome.

After being turned away at a Veterans Administration outreach center in New Haven because she was not a veteran, Mrs. Christie contacted Claude Thomas, a counselor at the Veteran's Outreach Center in Boston, who helped talk her through the crisis.

Taxability Of Capital Gains

Sixth in a series of "tax tip" articles sponsored as a public service by the Texas Society of Certified Public Accountants.

Q. I sold some stock at a capital gain in March of 1981. I sold some more at a gain in September of 1981. Does President Reagan's tax bill provide for any difference in the taxability of these gains?

A. President Reagan's tax bill provides for lower income taxes on capital gains after 1981 and certain gains recognized in 1981. The top tax bracket for gains occurring on or before June 9, 1981 is 28 percent. For gains occurring after June 9, 1981, the maximum bracket tax rate is 20 percent.

These new rules do not cover gains received in 1981 from installment sales transactions entered into prior to June 10, 1981. However, proceeds received from those transactions in years after 1981 will qualify for the new lower rate.

Q. A fire destroyed two rooms of our house this year. Our insurance lacked $2,000 in covering the cost of repairs. May I deduct any part of this $2,000?

A. Individuals may deduct losses exceeding $100 arising from fires, storms, theft or other casualty as an itemized deduction. This itemized deduction is taken in the same manner as contributions, interest and tax payments on Schedule A of Form 1040.

A special provision permits a deduction on a casualty loss which occurs between Jan. 1 and Apr. 15 of the year following the return year. For example, if a fire loss occurs on March 31, 1982, you can deduct the casualty loss on your 1981 tax return.

In the case of irreplaceable property, the loss is determined by comparing the fair market value of the property immediately after the casualty with the fair market value immediately before the casualty reduced by any insurance recovery.

Q. My wife and I are 60 years of age. All of our children are grown and gone and we are considering selling the house that we have lived in for the past 20 years. Our real estate agent said that it is worth $150,000 and I do not want to sell it and pay tax on this gain. Is there a way I can avoid this tax?

A. For taxpayers at least 55 years of age (in the case of a married couple filing jointly at least one of the spouses must be 55 years of age), a portion of the gain on the sale of a personal residence may be tax-free. There are two principal requirements for this tax-free gain.

1. Taxpayers are entitled to a once in a lifetime exclusion of the gain on the sale of a personal residence. The property must have been actually used as their residence for a total of three years during the fire year period ending on the date of its sale.

2. If the sale took place on or before July 20, 1981, the maximum gain that may be excluded is $100,000 ($50,000 each for married individuals filing separate returns). For sales taking place after July 20, 1981, the excluded gain is $125,000 ($62,500 for married individuals filing separate returns).

Q. My company transferred me to the Dallas-Fort Worth area this year from California. When I sold my house in California, I made a $50,000 profit. Is this $50,000 profit taxable?

A. The Internal Revenue Code permits, under certain circumstances, the gain on the sale of a personal residence to be postponed, perhaps indefinitely. This postponement, or deferral as it is called, works this way: John Doe buys a house in California for $60,000, lives in it for five years, and sells it for $110,000 upon his transfer to Dallas-Fort Worth by his employer-company.

If he spends $110,000 or more on his new residence, the $50,000 gain will not be taxable this year. The gain is used to reduce the tax basis in the new residence. This means that John Doe, when he sells his newly acquired residence for more than $60,000, may then be required to pay tax on any gain unless he reinvests the proceeds in another new residence.

The only restriction on John in these situations is that he cannot defer the gain on more than one house per year.

Nominations For Texas Panhandle Award For Distinguished Service Being Accepted

WTSU - Nominations are being accepted for the Seventh Annual Texas Panhandle Award for Distinguished Service sponsored by West Texas State University.

About 1,500 letters inviting nominations have been sent to individuals, clubs and organizations in the top 32 counties of the Texas Panhandle. A deadline of Friday, March 26, has been set for nominations. Recipients of the distinguished service awards, which have been presented to more than 60 women in various fields since 1976, will be announced and recognized at the luncheon on Saturday, April 17, at the WTSU East Dining Hall.

Nominees must be 18 years of age or older and reside in one of the top 32 Texas Panhandle counties. Nominees do not have to be graduates of WTSU. Individuals and groups may nominate, said Jane Kerr, director of the WTSU Returning Student Program.

Women will be honored in a variety of careers and interests including education, medicine, business, civic service and professional areas. Serving as honorary chairpersons for the 1982 luncheon will be Lennie Sims of Wellington and Helen Shannon of Canyon.

Planning the luncheon as co-chairpersons are Lila Vars, WTSU associate registrar, and Eunice King of Amarillo.

Committee members include Ruth Cross of Canyon; Dixie Surratt, a member of the WTSU Area Advisory Council from Panhandle; Claudia Stravato, Amarillo; Sandra Meek, WTSU dean of student affairs; Sylvia McTague, a counselor with the University Counseling and Testing Center; Dr. Mary Gill, acting head of the WTSU Department of Modern Languages; Ronnie Hutcherson, president of Women Involved in New Goals at WTSU; Earleen Huff, director of the WTSU Children's Center; and Mary Hill, WTSU assistant professor of physical education.

Additional information concerning the awards and luncheon is available from Kerr.

IT'S NOT ONLY the Reaganites who complain about the "bloated and overlapping administrative structure" of government. That charge is also being heard from Chinese Premier Zhao Ziyang, who has promised a large-scale streamlining campaign that apparently began with the forced resignations of more than a dozen elderly government officials.

The Jefferson Memorial in Washington, D.C., was dedicated April 13, 1943, the 200th anniversary of Jefferson's birth.

Ethics Panel Has Hearing

By KATHY BAKER Associated Press Writer AUSTIN, Texas (AP) - A state ethics panel that just held its first public hearing has found it won't be easy to straddle the line between curbing abuse of nepotism laws and inadvertent penalties on small communities full of relatives.

At the Friday session, one witness told Rep. Stan Schlueter, D-Salado, chairman of the Public Servant Standards of Conduct Advisory Committee, that some public employees get around nepotism laws, with spouses in supervisory positions over each other.

James Stallings, who identified himself as a "public servant of the state of Texas," complained that there was such a situation at the Institute of Texan Cultures in San Antonio.

But Schlueter had requested that witnesses stay away from specific grievances and curbed Stallings' testimony.

Stallings then suggested tightening up nepotism standards and establishing a hotline for tips on ethics violations.

Schlueter said the panel was considering a hotline proposal.

David Thompson of the Association of School Boards warned the committee against recommending any nepotism rules that could adversely affect small, rural school districts.

He estimated that between 20 and 25 percent of all superintendents are married to teachers in the same district.

"You could be setting up a situation where a third of the population is unemployed if one third cousin is short-sighted enough to run for the school board," Thompson said.

Jim Pearson of the Public Employees Union recommended that the 15-member panel consider devising a statewide public employee grievance procedure.

The panel plans to present recommendations to the 1983 Legislature.

Decontrol Not Likely

By GARTH JONES Associated Press Writer

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) - Gov. Bill Clements says election-year politics apparently will keep Congress from acting on natural gas decontrol this year.

"I look for action to take place next year when the political climate will be better, particularly in the U.S. House," Clements told a news conference Friday.

Clements said he made his prediction after talking with other governors at the recent National Governors Association meeting and with members of the executive branch and Texas members of Congress. He said he did not talk with Reagan personally.

"The non-producing states are saying if we have decontrol then there must be a windfall profits tax," Clements said. "I just think we are not going to get any legislation this year."

Clements drew the line at backing a recommendation by Railroad Commission Chairman Jim Nugent to block shipments of natural gas to other parts of the country unless Congress approves decontrol.

"I'd like to do it if we could find a way," Clements said. "Since we have been unable to come up with a reasonable, logical plan on how to bring it about, I will reserve comment (on Nugent's recommendation)."

Clements said he thought Texas was being treated "unfairly" because Texan consumers would be forced to pay more for natural gas than residents of other parts of the United States under present federal rules.

On other subjects, Clements said:

- He assumed he had "veto power" on federal plans to place a nuclear waste disposal site in Texas. "My position is that until the federal government has my concurrence after full consultation there will be no such site," Clements said. His position remained the same - that Texas should take care of its own hazardous wastes, "but I have no inclination whatsoever to take care of what is produced in other states."

- He will fight any sort of federal-state relationship where such states with

Viridon Believes Lineup Set

COCOA, Fla. (AP) — Houston Astros Manager Bill Viridon feels he has an almost set lineup, that the Astros will contend for the National League's Western Division title and will be the best team in all his seven years as manager.

So why won't he relax and enjoy the sand and surf?

"Actually, it makes it tougher on me and the people who have to evaluate the players because you are talking about maybe two, three or maybe four positions," said Viridon, who will greet the full squad for the first official workout Monday. "There are not a lot of individuals involved here so it's a little tougher because you want to make the right decisions."

Viridon's infield is virtually set, although Dickie Thon and incumbent Craig Reynolds are expected to provide the most competition for the shortstop position.

"We have a better infield than any I've been associated with," Viridon said.

Viridon has already decided to shift third baseman Art Howe to first base and install off-season acquisition Ray Knight at third.

"I feel with the personnel we have, we are better off with Art Howe at first base," Viridon said, despite early protests by Howe, an excellent third baseman last season. "Art Howe has experience at first base and Ray Knight doesn't."

That will leave fiesty Phil Garner at second base and Alan Ashby catching.

That problem already solved, Viridon basically must make a decision on the comeback efforts of former All-Star pitcher J.R. Richard, seeking a spot on the team after almost losing his life to a stroke in 1980, and Mike Ivie, returning from a bout with mental exhaustion that sidelined him last season.

"J.R. is here doing everything everyone else is doing and basically, trying to earn a job on the club," Viridon said.

Richard suffered a slight foot injury Wednesday when hit by a batted ball and came up with a sore shoulder on Thursday.

Viridon said Ivie reported to camp early and appeared in good shape both physically and mentally.

"Ivie came in in better physical shape than I've seen him in awhile," Viridon said.

As for his psychological condition, Viridon said "I think he has a different outlook, seems to be anxious and I hope that continues through spring training and on into the regular season."

Viridon doesn't feel he has to worry about pitcher Don Sutton, who suffered a fractured knee cap late last season.

"There may be some minor after effects but he's never had a sore arm so as long as his legs are healthy he's not going to have any problems," Viridon said.

The Astros open spring training games March 11 against the St. Louis Cardinals. The Astros open the regular season against the Cardinals in the Astrodome April 6.

Bench Learns Unexpected About Third Base Position

TAMPA, Fla. (AP) — Johnny Bench wanted some tips on how to tackle his new position, so he went to two experts on playing third base — Philadelphia's Mike Schmidt and the New York Yankees' Graig Nettles.

What Bench learned was unexpected.

"Strangely, neither Schmidt nor Nettles seems to do anything alike," Bench said. "Graig plays deep and close to the line. Mike is in much closer and shaded toward the shortstop side."

"What I have to decide is what is best for me. Mike picks up bunts and short hops with his bare hand and is a master of the off-balance throw. That might be difficult for me."

I asked Graig about fielding bunts and he said, "The Yankee pitchers are paid enough to take care of their share of them. I liked that."

The 34-year-old Bench is still listed as a catcher in the Reds' 1982 media guide and he reported along with the rest of the club's catchers and pitchers last week. But he's got his eye on the third-base job left vacant when Ray Knight was traded to Houston for center fielder Cesar Cedeno.

"If I had to catch, I doubt if I'd be here," said Bench. "The aches and pains and the worry about serious injury were getting too much for me to handle. I don't know how much this will prolong my career. I'm not worried about that now."

Instead, after an off-season of personal misfortune, Bench is concerned about mastering the fine points of fielding his new position.

Bench, who had his house burn down and his 1975 World Series ring stolen in the off-season, said he arrived at training camp in a good frame of mind.

"I'm more excited about myself and the team than I've been in a long time," he said.

He said there was a lot of work ahead in making the transition from catcher to third baseman. But he thinks his expertise behind the plate is an indication that he can handle the new position.

"I've always been very quick moving around from the catching position, and I have enough of that left to do the job at third base," Bench said. "But the fine points are there to be mastered."

Bench said he talked to Schmidt and Nettles in connection with his "Baseball Bunch" television show

Nolan Makes Full Circle

DALLAS (AP) — Dick Nolan's first coaching job in the National Football League was with the Dallas Cowboys, as an assistant to Tom Landry.

Friday, Nolan came full-circle.

After serving as a head coach in San Francisco and New Orleans and acting as defensive coordinator last season for the Houston Oilers, Nolan joined former Chicago Bears head coach Neill Armstrong as Landry's newest Cowboy assistants.

"We feel very fortunate to get people of such quality for our staff," Landry said. "We have been equally fortunate in the last couple of years in adding young coaches like Al Lavan and John Mackovic. We thought it was important now to balance youth with experience — and these men are very experienced."

Nolan, 49, will be the Cowboys' receiver coach and will work with Mackovic to coordinate the team's passing game.

Armstrong, 55, will assume the duties of Ernie Allen, a heart attack victim last season who will become a special assistant to Landry.

"Because of Ernie's heart attack," Landry said, "we had to curtail his workload. He will work with me on special projects. Right now, he'll be training Armstrong. Then, he'll be working with me on the college draft."

Ironically, Armstrong became available when he was fired by Bears' owner

George Halas and replaced by former Dallas assistant coach Mike Ditka. Armstrong had coached the Bears for four years.

Joining the Cowboys, said Landry, "was a major decision for Neill, because he had a number of opportunities around the league. We're delighted he decided to make a choice of Dallas."

Nolan's association with Landry goes back to the mid-1950s, when they both played in the New York Giants' defensive backfield. Nolan was an assistant to Landry in Dallas from 1961 through 1967.

Landry said he may add yet another coaching assistant, to be in charge of special teams and the kicking game. "I'll be working on that next week," Landry said.

No Trade Planned For Parker

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) — Pittsburgh outfielder Dave Parker will not be traded to Texas this season, or any other, according to the Rangers' owner.

"The Parker thing" is totally dead," said majority stockholder Eddie Chiles. He had been asked about a trade that would send Ranger outfielders Al Oliver and John Grubb plus pitcher Danny Darwin to the Pirates for Parker and first baseman Jason Thompson.

At Oaklawn Racetrack

Tout Earns Laughs, No Dollars

AN AP Sports Analysis
By DENNE H. FREEMAN
AP Sports Writer
HOT SPRINGS, Ark. (AP) — The tip sheet tout outside Oaklawn Racing Park promised a big winner just for $2. "I gave this horse a bath, dried him behind the ears and put him to bed at nine o'clock last night," the man jested. The tout earned laughter but no dollars from a small group of race-hungry Texans recently. They had made their annual trek from pari-mutuel raceless Texas to Arkansas without being particularly interested in a horse's cleanliness when it crossed the finish line.

Soon, one member of the group was to strike upon a bizarre combination for finding a winner. It, of course, is being patented and under 24-hour guard. However, some details of the soon-to-be published book "How A Texan Who Doesn't Get To Go To The Track Often Can Come Home A Winner" have been released to The Associated Press. It takes a witches' brew of mud wrestling, a broken betting machine, a double-dip ice cream cone, and not looking. This person (no name given to hold the telephone calls down) came upon his race strategy at the mud wrestling trials in a club in downtown Hot Springs. Watching two young ladies have difficulty lifting their feet from the mud, our author-to-be once again filtered the rules of a fast track through his near computer mind. When the Oaklawn track is fast on the inside, it's almost impossible for an outside horse to find the rail quick enough to win. For the horses in pole positions 1 through 5 it's like running an Astroturf while the others are on a beach. Armed with this information, your informant tracked down a burly, tough-looking man to ask him where he got his ice cream cone and did he have a winner. "You can get the cone five concession stands down and I like Bye Bye Sheky in the fourth," the guy growled. This was information too good to be true. The horse was in the No. 2 pole position. (Remember the earlier lesson learned at the mud wrestling?) Savoring the cone (Remember people who eat ice cream always seem confident and give the best tips) in the $5 line, our man noticed something was amiss at the head of the seller's window. ## Owners Accused of Hiding Contract

WASHINGTON (AP) — The National Football League Players Association has accused NFL owners of trying to hide a new $2 billion television contract until a new collective bargaining agreement can be ironed out. The league and officials for all three major networks, meanwhile, deny that such a TV contract exists. The new deal, as described by NFLPA executive director Ed Garvey on Friday, would give the league $400 million a year for the next five years. Garvey said the TV package called for CBS to pay $800 million, NBC $700 million and ABC $500 million for the rights to broadcast NFL games. Garvey charged that the NFL owners knew of the television package during last week's contract talks with the union in Miami, but had remained silent. "The owners knew about the deal but said nothing," said Garvey. "They never put any money on the table and ended the talks quickly to set up a meeting among themselves." In New York, NFL information director Joe Browne denied Garvey's statements. "It is not true," Browne said. "The TV contracts are still being negotiated. However, Garvey predicted that leaking word of the television contract would "pressure" the owners into reaching a settlement quicker than expected. In the opening of the contract talks last week, the players' union made its chief demand 55 percent of the team's gross profits. At the time, Garvey estimated each team's gross profits at $11.6 million, a figure Garvey placed Friday at $15.6 million. "We seriously underestimated their revenues," Garvey claimed looking at a new set of figures the union says it has gathered from recent court cases, public hearings and player contracts. The union's demand for 55 percent of the teams' gross profits would result in a windfall for the players. According to the union, the league's average salary last year was $83,000. "Acceptance of the 55 percent figure would mean the average pay of a player in 1981 would be the minimum pay scale in 1982," Garvey said. The league's current minimum wage is $32,000 for a five-year veteran and $22,000 for a rookie. Talk of the alleged television deal overshadowed the union's picture of the league's finances. The league's 28 teams grossed $438 million in 1981, ranging from a low of $14.15 million for the Cincinnati Bengals to a high of $19.81 million for the Los Angeles Rams, according to Garvey. Average salaries ranged from a high of $106,028 on the Denver Broncos to a low of $64,859 for the Kansas City Chiefs. Largest proved no guarantee of success in 1981 with five of the six largest payrolls — Denver, Pittsburgh, Oakland, Chicago and New England — belonging to teams who failed to make the playoffs. In New York, the NFL Management Council, which represents the owners, announced it would file a grievance early next week with the National Labor Relations Board charging the union with violating the confidentiality provisions of an earlier agreement by releasing information concerning the players' salaries. Garvey, meanwhile, spent Friday afternoon with NLRB general counsel William A. Lubbers asking the board to uphold an unfair labor practices charge filed last year by the union against the management council for failing to release financial data the union says it needs to conduct contract talks.

Coaching Jobs Available With Kids, Inc.

All persons interested in coaching a team this summer are asked to attend a meeting of Kids, Inc. at 7:30 p.m. Thursday at the Hereford State Bank. A need for several coaches is felt in both the T-Ball and Minor Leagues. New rules and regulations will also be discussed at the meeting. Those interested in coaching should attend the meeting or call David McDonald at 364-0517 or Robert Ray at 364-0614.

MIAMI (AP) — Craig Stadler carded 69 for a 135 total and a 2-stroke lead over Andy Bean after the second round of the $300,000 Doral-Eastern Open. TUCSON, Ariz. (AP) — Patti Rizzo shot a 7-under-par 65 for a 136 total and a 4-stroke lead over Janet Coles after the second round of the $125,000 LPGA Arizona Copper Classic. Rizzo's round broke the 6,026-yard Randolph North Municipal Course record for women by two strokes. TENNIS GENOA, Italy (AP) — Vitas Gerulaitis reached the semifinals of the $300,000 WCT Betti Bergamo Tournament with a 7-5, 6-3 victory over Tomas Smid of Czechoslovakia. NEW YORK (AP) — Evelyn Ashford, Joan Hansen, Chandra Cheeseborough, Veronica Bell and Stephanie Hightower led the way at the USA-Mobil Indoor Track and Field Championships with record-smashing performances.

Briefs

Those interested in coaching should attend the meeting or call David McDonald at 364-0517 or Robert Ray at 364-0614. That meant there was only one short line left where a bet could be placed before the race started. It was the $50 window. With the cone dripping over fingers and shirt, the bet was shakily made. However, our man could no longer stand to watch. Finding a bench in a dark corner, our expert sweated out the race. After it was over, he inquired about the winner. It was HIS horse. Our man with the new system (remember you have to get into a line with a broken ticket machine) is hoping it can be out in paperback in another year. Texans who don't get a chance to study horses can always fall back on this one. Race track betting CAN be an exact science.

Malone Scores 43 for Rockets Pacers Pop Spurs; Houston Wins

By The Associated Press
Jack McKinney figures the quickest way to a victory is at a full gallop.
The Indiana coach put the theory into practice Friday night and the Pacers ran off with a 108-100 victory over San Antonio, their sixth victory in eight games and their fifth in a row over the Spurs.
In Friday night's other National Basketball Association games it was Los Angeles 116, Philadelphia 114 in two overtimes; Chicago 116; Atlanta 110 in one overtime; Boston 123; San Diego 110; New Jersey 110, Portland 106; Washington 100, Kansas City 96; Houston 111, Golden State 95; Seattle 98, Utah 97, and Phoenix 131, Denver 122.

"We've changed our offensive theory and our offensive ideas. Our entire offense is based on the running game. It picks us up. We're not slowing down in any area," McKinney said after guard Don Buse scored a season-high 23 points, handed out 10 assists and limited George Gervin, the NBA's scoring leader, to 24 points, nine below the Iceman's average.

Even Stan Albeck, the Spurs' coach, had to hand it to Buse. "His direction of their offense was the key," Albeck said. "Certainly his shooting had a direct effect on the overall game." Buse hit 11 of 14 shots from the field, including one three-pointer.
Johnny Davis added 21 points for the Pacers.
Lakers 116, 76ers 114
Kareem Abdul-Jabbar scored five of his season-high 41 points in the second overtime period as the Lakers ran their winning streak to six in a row and snapped the 76ers' streak at 10 victories.

Andrew Toney, who led Philadelphia with 27 points, put the 76ers up 99-97 on a jumper with 10 seconds to go. But Abdul-Jabbar sent the game into overtime with a pair of free throws. He hit on 17 of 27 shots from the field. He also had 19 rebounds and five blocked shots.
"He carried us tonight," said Lakers Coach Pat Riley. "The guy's got just about everything he's always had."
Bulls 116, Hawks 110
Reggie Theus of Chicago sent his game into overtime by sinking a rebound at the buzzer to tie it 100-100. And in the fifth period, Artis Gilmore's hook shot with 25 seconds remaining broke a 110-110 tie, then Ricky Sobers added four points to snap the Hawks' five-game winning streak.
Theus had 23 points for the Bulls. Eddie Johnson had 27 for Atlanta.
Celtics 122, Clippers 110
Boston withstood a late Clippers charge and rode Larry Bird's 24 points past San Diego.
The Celtics saw a 21-point lead shrivel to 109-99 with 3:57 to play before Kevin McHale's two baskets got Boston untracked and halted the threat.
"Being a young club, we're not prone to have patience at that time," said Clippers Coach Paul Silas. "Then Boston came back and scored a few times and we couldn't come back after that." Michael Brooks had 24 points for San Diego.

season-high 27 points, then rookie Frank Johnson scored six of Washington's final seven points as the Bullets snapped a three-game tailspin and handed the Kings their fourth consecutive loss and their 14th in a row on the road.
Kansas City, led by Mike Woodson's 16 points, had a final chance to win it after Jim Chones sank a free throw for Washington with three seconds left. But Phil Ford missed a three-pointer at the buzzer.
Suns 131, Nuggets 122
Len "Truck" Robinson scored 32 points and guards Dennis Johnson and Walter Davis teamed for 44 more as the Suns handed Denver its fifth straight loss and moved into third place in the Pacific Division, one-half game ahead of the Warriors.
Dan Issel had 35 points for the Nuggets. Their coach, Doug Moe, was thrown out of the game, drawing two technical fouls for protesting a call too vehemently.

Rockets 111, Warriors 95
Moses Malone pumped in 43 points and hauled down 23 rebounds and Elvin Hayes added 25 points and 13 rebounds as Houston buried the Warriors.
Golden State, which trailed by as many as 18 points, got within five with 3½ minutes to go, then the Rockets scored 12 of the remaining 13 points. Purvis Short had 24 points to lead the Warriors.
Sonics 98, Jazz 97
Utah built a 15-point lead in the second period, then Seattle began pecking away. The Sonics caught up at the end of the third quarter, the two teams played virtually evenly the rest of the way, then Jack Sikma's two free throws with eight seconds remaining gave Seattle the victory.
Sikma led the Sonics with 24 points. Adrian Dantley had 36 for the Jazz.
Wally Walker, one of Seattle's starting forwards, missed the game and will be out of action for an undetermined length of time because of a broken right index finger apparently sustained Thursday night in a loss to Los Angeles.

South Alabama Comes To Life in Playoffs

By KEN RAPPOPORT AP Sports Writer
The South Alabama basketball team spent all season following the leaders in the Sun Belt Conference race.
But the Jaguars are making up for lost time in the post-season playoffs.

After finishing last in the regular season, Coach Cliff Ellis' team has a fresh outlook today as the result of Friday night's 77-75 overtime victory over Jacksonville in a Sun Belt quarterfinal playoff game.
The victory earned the Jaguars a berth in tonight's semifinals against Virginia Commonwealth, which finished runner-up during the season. South Florida, 66-59 conqueror of North Carolina-Charlotte, will face league champion Alabama-Birmingham in the other semifinal contest. The winners play Sunday for a bid to the NCAA playoffs next month.

South Alabama was down by 43 points early in the second half Friday night, but fought back with a 14-2 run to get within striking distance of Jacksonville. The Jaguars managed to put the game into overtime tied at 69.

"Defense was the biggest key that brought us back from the deficit," Ellis said.

Phil Green, a 5-foot-9 guard who scored the winning field goal with five seconds left — his only points of the game — commented, "It felt great coming from a 13-point deficit. The team decided that we weren't going to lose after losing to Jacksonville twice this year in overtime."
Tony Hafley scored 21 points and Rory White 16 to lead South Alabama's offense.

Meanwhile, Willie Redden scored 20 points to pace South Florida's victory. South Florida iced the game with five free throws in the final 30 seconds.

"When the team hits the free throws, we win," said South Florida Coach Lee Ross. "When they miss the free throws, we lose."

In the only games involving ranked teams, No. 4 Oregon State walloped No. 20 UCLA 72-38 and No. 16 San Francisco defeated Loyola (Calif.) 96-73.

The Top Twenty
Danny Evans scored a career-high 26 points as Oregon State rolled past UCLA to clinch at least a tie for the Pacific-10 Conference basketball title. The Beavers, 16-1 in the conference and 21-3 overall, can wrap up their third consecutive Pac-10 crown with a victory over Southern California today.

Oregon State never trailed in the contest, jumping to a 24-12 lead with 7:52 remaining in the first half. Evans, a 6-6, 165-pound junior who played sparingly before this season, hit 11 of 15 field goal tries, most of them from long range.

"It is a great accomplishment on the part of this team," said Oregon State Coach Ralph Miller, who had to replace his main three starters from last year's squad.
"We did what we had to do," Miller added. "We shut down their forwards and took care of the ball."

Center Wallace Bryant scored 20 points and freshman John Martens added a collegiate-high 19 as San Francisco, playing without star Quintin Dailey, beat Loyola.
Dailey, sixth leading scorer in the nation, decided to "remain in his room rather than play in the basketball game," but plans to play in tonight's game against West Coast Athletic Conference leader Pepperdine, said Dailey's lawyer, George Walker.

Dailey pleaded innocent Friday to five felony charges in the alleged sexual assault on a nursing student on the USF campus.
Unranked Teams
In other action, Paul Little scored 16 points and David Lardner added 12 as Ivy League-leading Penn swept to its 11th straight victory, 65-56 over Dartmouth; Craig Robinson scored 17 points and grabbed eight rebounds to lead Princeton to an easy 66-50 victory over Harvard; Bob Coleman's 10-foot jump shot with 5:57 left put Iona ahead to stay in the Gaels' 45-41 win over Fordham and Eric Clarke's 20-foot jump shot with seven seconds left, halted a late Brown comeback bid and gave Columbia a 67-65 victory over the Bruins.

Also, Lafayette Lever sparked a second-half comeback with three straight baskets to lead Arizona State to a 70-69 win over Stanford;

Dwight Anderson and Maurice Williams combined for 38 points to lead Southern California to an 80-68 victory over Oregon; Greg Palm scored 23 points and grabbed 11 rebounds to lead Nevada-Reno to an 83-82 overtime victory over Montana State and Butch Hays and Michael Chavez each made a pair of free throws in the closing minutes, allowing California to hold off Arizona 63-59.

Hurdle Stars Are No-Shows In Track Meet

NEW YORK (AP) — Archival hurdles sensations Renaldo Nehemiah and Greg Foster were no-shows. So was sprint champ Stanley Floyd. Billy Olson failed to set another world mark in the pole vault despite a second chance after three misses.
Long jumper Carl Lewis won his specialty but pulled out of his anticipated double in the sprints. Mary Decker Tabb, the newest women's distance queen, was on hand, but only to fire the starting gun for the women's mile.
Tom Byers won the main section of the Pegasus Mile, but only finished third on overall time behind unheralded Jim Spivey and Frank Assuma, who ran 1-2 in the first half.

Nets 110, Blazers 106
Ray Williams scored 22 points and Buck Williams had 21 for the Nets, who rallied from 14 points down in the fourth quarter. But it was Darwin Cook's steal and basket that knocked off the Trail Blazers.
With the score tied 106-106, Cook swiped the ball from Portland's Bob Gross and put in the layup that gave New Jersey a lead it never relinquished. The Trail Blazers missed their next shot and rookie Albert King sealed the victory with a jumper 14 seconds from the buzzer.

PATCO Lawyer Wants To Question Who Talked To Feds Before Vote

WASHINGTON (AP) — An attorney for the air traffic controllers union says he wants to question a White House staffer who reportedly talked with a member of a federal agency before the panel voted to decertify the union. In documents ordered released Friday by a federal court, the FBI said White House aide Robert Bonitati asked Leon B. Applewhite of the Federal Labor Relations Authority when the vote would occur. Bonitati, a special public liaison assistant to President Reagan, is the White House contact with organized labor. The FBI called him "Bennati" in a report based on an interview with Applewhite after the decertification vote last Oct. 22.

"Bennati never questioned Applewhite concerning the outcome of the FLRA vote," the FBI said. "However, Bennati did ask Applewhite as to the predicted time when the vote would be rendered." Richard J. Leighton, attorney for the Professional Air Traffic Controllers Organization, said that if Bonitati initiated the contact, it could be construed as pressuring Applewhite to vote to decertify PATCO as the controllers' bargaining agent.

"It's highly unusual for a White House official to be talking directly to a decision-maker about when he's going to issue a major decision," Leighton said.

The FBI documents were made public on order of the U.S. Court of Appeals, which is hearing PATCO's appeal of the decertification decision, and has ordered an investigation into pre-vote contacts the three FLRA members may have had with outsiders.

Leighton said he wants Bonitati to testify at a hearing an administration law judge plans to begin Thursday into the question of outside contacts.

Efforts to reach Bonitati through the White House switchboard Friday night were unsuccessful. Applewhite told the FBI he did not believe any private discussion he had prior to the vote was improper.

Other allegations about outside contact were previously reported to the court by the Justice Department, which said the source of its information was Henry B. Frazier III, another voting member of the FLRA.

Brown Trial Resumes Monday

GALVESTON, Texas (AP) — The capital murder trial of prison inmate Eroy Edward Brown resumes Monday after a delay caused by disagreements among lawyers about the wording of the judge's charge to the jury.

State District Judge Henry Dalehite, saying he did not want to sequester the jury, Friday postponed final arguments in the trial until Monday and dismissed the jurors until until 9:15 a.m. Monday.

Defense lawyer Craig Washington said he was satisfied with the judge's charge to the jury, but prosecutors still had several objections Friday.

"There are just some things I am not going to give up on," special prosecutor Mike Hinton told the widow of Wallace Pack, the prison warden Brown is accused of murdering.

Hinton, refusing to elaborate, would say only that his objections to the charge involved "legal matters."

The courtroom Friday was overflowing with spectators. Dalehite said he may consider moving Monday's proceedings to a jury assembly room that seats about 250 people. Brown, 31, of Waco, could be sentenced to life in prison or death by injection if he is convicted.

Brown, who is serving a 10-year sentence for aggravated robbery, is accused of drowning Pack in a drainage ditch last April 4. Prosecutors have said they may also try Brown in the shooting death of Ellis Unit farm manager Billy Max Moore.

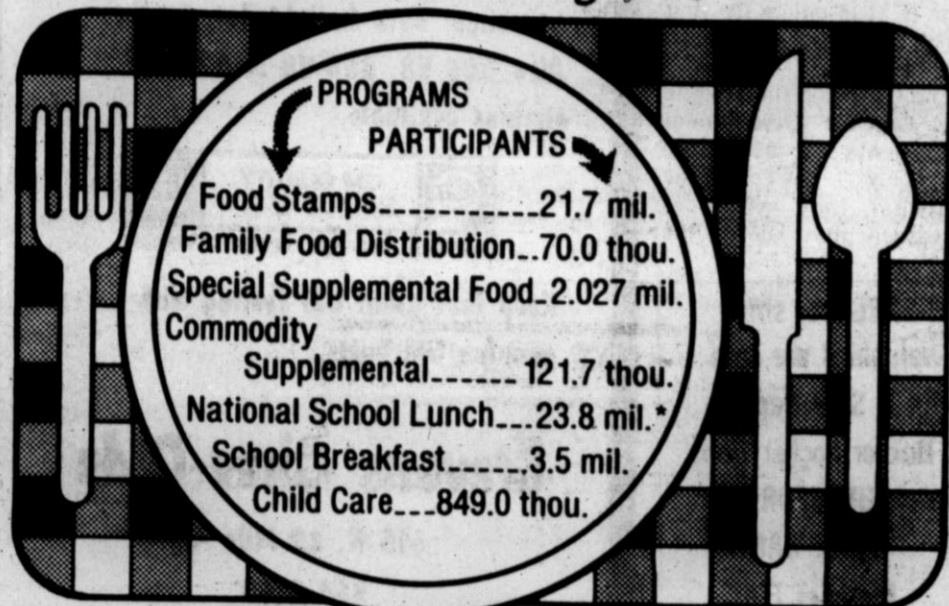

Defense attorneys say Brown acted in self-defense after the inmate was threatened by the two prison officials after he talked about an alleged theft ring involving prison vehicle parts.

Several inmates and former inmates have described Pack as a violent man who tortured and drugged inmates and ordered the beating deaths of several prisoners.

But many top TDC officials, called to the stand by the prosecution, testified that Pack was a deeply religious, non-violent man and that he never was the subject of complaints by prison inmates.

Williams Compared To Mass Murderers

By DAVID FACE, Associated Press Writer

ATLANTA (AP) — Prosecutors compared Wayne B. Williams to history's most notorious mass murderers but his lawyers called him a scapegoat for the slayings of 28 young blacks, and said the evidence against him barely fills a thimble.

The jury considering two murder counts against the 28-year-old black man got the case Friday after closing arguments. Before retiring for the night, the jurors deliberated 2 1/2 hours in the courtroom where the trial has been under way for nine weeks.

The eight blacks and four whites on the jury were scheduled to resume deliberations this morning. These were speculation they might also deliberate Sunday if no verdict is reached before then.

If convicted, the free-lance photographer and aspiring talent scout could receive a maximum penalty of life in prison.

In a day filled with emotional pleas from six lawyers, District Attorney Lewis Slaton had the final word before the jury.

"You will have to be responsible for putting Wayne Williams back in the community," Slaton said. "It isn't us."

But defense lawyer Mary Belome pleaded with the jury not "to put the seal of approval on the execution of a scapegoat."

She placed a thimble on the bar in front of the jury and said, "I leave this with you — a thimbleful of evidence, which is not enough for a conviction."

Williams is charged with murder in the slayings of Nathaniel Cater, 27, and Jimmy Ray Payne, 21, two of 28 young blacks whose deaths during a 22-month period shocked the nation and instilled terror in Atlanta's black community.

No arrests have been made in the 26 other slayings, but prosecutors presented evidence in 10 deaths of young blacks in an effort to show a pattern of slayings that relates to the deaths of Cater and Payne.

Prosecutors built their case on fiber and hair evidence.

Assistant District Attorney Gordon Miller summarized the fiber evidence taken from the bodies of the 12 victims that matched 38 sources in Williams' home and car, including hair from his head.

Miller said those findings "as if the defendant had signed his name on the death warrants of those 12 individuals."

Defense attorney Alvin Binder called his client "the most misunderstood young man I have ever met in my life."

Binder turned to Williams and asked the jury to look at this pudgy, fat little boy, and I'm going to call you boy because you're the same size as my son."

Binder then escorted Williams to the front of the jury box, patted him on the stomach and said, "look at him, ain't no muscle there, and there's nothing sinister about him either."

Slaton, who compared Williams to Attila the Hun, Adolph Hitler and Idi Amin, called Williams "crafty, cool, cunning," a homosexual who hated other homosexuals and poor young blacks.

But, Slaton said, "it took a stupid person to drop Cater's body from the Jackson Parkway bridge just because he cased it and didn't see anybody. We had them (a police stakeout team) hid Car 54 and the Keystone Kops got him. He's failed again."

Williams, who once compared the FBI to the Keystone Kops and the Atlanta police to the television comedy, "Car 54, Where Are You?," first came to police attention in the pre-dawn hours of May 22.

He was stopped that morning near the bridge after an officer underneath reported hearing a loud splash in the Chattahoochee River. Two days later, Cater's body was found in the river 1 1/4 miles downstream in an area where Payne's body was found a month earlier.

Binder noted defense testimony that officers on the stakeout team had been drinking and sleeping on duty and said they were "unworthy of belief."

Slaton reminded the jury of the testimony of a black man who had said "nobody cares about black killings in Atlanta."

Diablo Canyon Testing Delayed Until Summer

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Testing at the Diablo Canyon nuclear power plant will be delayed at least until summer because of another safety-related design error — this one involving valves like those that failed in the 1979 Three Mile Island crisis, authorities say.

All of these problems that we're finding with the design of the plant are, in varying degrees, related to safety or we would not have suspended the license," Jesse Crews, the Nuclear Regulatory Commission's western regional director for reactor programs, said Friday.

The builders, he said, inadequately considered that earthquake motion could increase with the height of a structure.

The utility had designed all equipment above floor level to meet effects expected at 140 feet, Crews said. But the power-operated relief valves, mounted atop pressurizer and steam generating vessels, are substantially higher than that, he said.

"You will undoubtedly find that (earthquake) acceleration is higher," he said, "and they may well have to add supports or strengthen the supports of those piping systems."

He said the problem would probably take several months to correct.

When similar valves stuck open at TMI in Pennsylvania in 1979, reactor cooling water escaped and a relatively small problem grew into a major crisis.

But a spokesman for Pacific Gas and Electric Co., Dick Davin, said the situation at Diablo cannot be compared to that at TMI. PG&E owns the Diablo Canyon plant.

RISING UNEMPLOYMENT

SOURCE: Bureau of Labor Statistics NEA/Mark Gabrenya

Unemployment rates continue upward toward new postwar highs as the economic recession continues. Some 9.5 million Americans were out of work at the beginning of the year, 8.9 percent of the civilian labor force, up from 7 percent in July when the recession started. Government breakdowns by employment groups, above, indicate that joblessness is most seriously affecting young people, minorities, women and blue-collar workers. Previous record unemployment rate of 9 percent was set in May 1975. Economists do not expect the economy to strengthen appreciably until late this year.

Space Agency Will Lose Money Selling Flights As Bargains

By HARRY F. ROSENTHAL, Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The General Accounting Office says the space agency will lose millions of dollars on each shuttle flight because it is selling the flights to defense, commercial and foreign users at bargain prices.

It is ironic that at a time when NASA's programs are suffering due to budget constraints, they are locked into a pricing policy that encourages STS (Space Transportation System) use at NASA's expense and at the expense of its space science, applications and aeronautics programs," says a new study by GAO.

The National Aeronautics and Space Administration has booked shuttle flights for years in advance. The shuttle is scheduled for its third test flight on March 22 but won't carry fee-producing cargo until it becomes operational later this year.

The GAO study said the projected cost of a standard space shuttle mission had increased from $16.1 million in June 1976 to $27.9 million as of September 1980.

The figures, which are based on the value of a dollar in 1975, do not include the increases resulting from inflation. According to the Consumer Price Index, goods that cost $1 in 1975, cost $1.75 by the end of 1981.

Design changes for safety and other reasons, material cost increases far above the inflation rates and a shorter lifespan for some of the shuttle components have made the shuttle more expensive than planners anticipated. The shuttle's wheels, for example, were to have been changed after 36 flights; instead they will be swapped after every flight.

Based on estimated costs, NASA in 1977 established a 3-year $18 million fixed price for commercial, foreign and other U.S. civil agencies' launches. The Defense Department, considered a special class of customer, got even a better rate: $12.2 million per launch for six years.

Even that was a bargain. NASA estimated the cost of its first eight operational flights at $116 million per flight and its total estimated budget for 44 flights through fiscal year 1985 at an average of $57.5 million per flight.

To charge a price equal to the cost of a launch in the early years of the program would have been counter to NASA's goal of encouraging users of expendable launch vehicles to switch to the shuttle. Therefore, NASA priced its flights on a 12-year-average and not on a year-to-year basis.

Civil, commercial and foreign users will reimburse NASA $270 million for their first 15 flights costing $862.5 million, GAO said. For 13 flights costing $747.5 million, the Defense Department will pay NASA $158.6 million. Thus, GAO concluded, NASA is subsidizing the users to the tune of $1.18 billion the first three years of operational flights.

The GAO said the price to the Defense Department represents "consumable costs only" — the cost of the external tank which is discarded after launch, the solid rocket boosters which are recovered and used again and refurbishment of the shuttle's three main engines.

"A recent NASA estimate," said the GAO, "shows the consumable cost per flight to be $21 million rather than the $12.2 million provided for in the NASA-DOD agreement."

"At an $8.8 million per flight undercharge, the 29 DOD flights in the first six years will run up a $255.2 million tab which NASA must fund from its appropriations," the report said.

Asked by GAO to comment, the space agency said it is renegotiating a new launch price with the Defense Department and that its pricing policy is being reviewed for possible change.

NASA also denied short-changing its own research programs because of increased shuttle costs, blaming the cutbacks on budget constraints.

1982: Year of the Eagle

In the bald eagle's 200-year reign as this country's national symbol, the big, majestic bird has graced many a building, coin and document. The national symbol even landed on the moon with Apollo 11.

This year, from March 14-20, the eagle will serve as the symbol for yet another event. For the first time, National Wildlife Week, an educational effort sponsored annually by the National Wildlife Federation, will

Dr. Jay D. Hair, executive vice president of the NWF. "For many Americans, the name Roosevelt has come to be synonymous with 'hope.' If any one animal could represent that abstraction, it's the bald eagle. He represents our hope—for freedom, courage as Wildlife Week chairman. Other more general themes have included 1949's "This is Your Land—Conserve It," and 1971's "Wildlife—Who Needs It?"

Endangered species have often been the subject of wildlife week themes, as in been avoided. This bird never should have been forced on to the endangered species list."

A major goal of Wildlife Week is to educate students, conservationists and the general public about the plight of the eagle. Close to five hundred thousand education kits will be distributed to focus on the plight of the bald eagle, now an endangered species in most of the "lower 48" states.

The theme of the week, "We Care About Eagles," will also help commemorate 1982 as the "Year of the Eagle," marking the 200th anniversary of the bald eagle's selection as this country's national symbol. Actor and environmentalist Robert Redford will serve as the "week's" honorary chairman.

Coincidentally, Americans will observe the "year of the Eagle" in the same year that they commemorate the 100th birthday of Wildlife Week's creator, Franklin Delano Roosevelt. It was FDR who proclaimed the first Wildlife Week in 1938 to rally public support for the nation's wildlife.

"It's appropriate that we remember the eagle and FDR in the same year," said and for the continued health of the environment. That hope has kept National Wildlife Week going—ever since Roosevelt first called for it 44 years ago."

Specific kinds of wildlife have been named in National Wildlife Week themes only three times in the past. In 1952, the NWF asked Americans to "Save the Key Deer," a tiny deer found only in the Florida Keys. A year later, the Federation made the same plea for the prairie chicken. In 1962, Americans were asked to think about "Waterfowl for the Future."

Otherwise, the Federation has generally chosen broader themes for Wildlife Week. Last year, the theme was "We Care About Oceans," with Walter Cronkite serving 1956 and 1974, when themes were "Endangered Wildlife" and "We Care About Endangered Wildlife."

Habitat protection has also been the subject of several observances of this "week." "Provide Habitat" was the theme in 1969, "We Care About Wildlife Habitat" was 1975's slogan, and in 1976 it was "Save Our Wetlands."

The Federation hopes that the slogan "We Care About Eagles" will call attention to the fact that many wildlife species, including the bald eagle, are now endangered in the United States.

"The bald eagle is probably the most visible example of an animal whose survival has been needlessly threatened," said Hair. "We made the bird our national symbol in 1782. Then we started destroying his habitats, polluting the streams from which he feeds, and shooting him from the sky. With a little more planning, those abuses could have schools throughout the country. Robert Redford has narrated public service announcements for radio and television that describe the eagle's struggle to survive.

As a leader in the fight to save the national bird in the contiguous states, NWF has established fur refuges in prime eagle wintering areas since 1974. The Federation also conducts a mid-winter bald eagle survey each January to determine the number of eagles wintering in North America. And at the Federation's Raptor Information Center in Virginia, researchers work to identify critical bald eagle habitats and to maintain a data "bank" on eagles and other birds of prey.

The Federation also offers a $500 reward for information leading to the conviction in federal court of anyone who kills a bald eagle. Eagles have been protected by federal law since 1940. NWF has presented $6,000 in rewards since it began its reward program in 1972.

Pilot Not Immediately Aware of Icy Runway

By JANE ANDERSON
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — It was 11 seconds after touchdown before the pilot of a World Airways DC-10 that plunged into the icy ocean Jan. 23 off Boston's Logan International Airport knew he was in trouble.

"No braking," Capt. Peter Langley said as his jumbo jet roared down runway 15-R at 7:36 p.m. in the freezing rain and mist with 210 people on board. The plane was going about 138 miles an hour.

Fourteen seconds later, Langley repeated the words, "No braking, oh (expletive)," and nine seconds after that, he said his last words on the cockpit voice recorder, "We're going off the end."

Almost simultaneously, his co-pilot, Don Hertzfeldt, told the air traffic control tower, "World's going off the end."

A transcript of the last 26 minutes of cockpit conversation before Flight 30 ran off the runway into Boston Harbor was released Friday by the National Transportation Safety Board.

Among the questions that still puzzle investigators are where the plane touched down on the 10,061-foot runway and whether it touched down soon enough. The cockpit voice recorder provided no clues.

The cockpit of the plane broke off as it careened at 69 miles an hour between a rock outcropping and an electrically-charged pier, dumping the flight crew and some passengers into the frigid water.

Two passengers who were not strong swimmers — Walter Metcalf, 69, and his son, Leo, 40, of Dedham, Mass. — apparently drowned. Their bodies have not been found. Thirty-nine people were injured.

The transcript begins at 7:10 p.m. with co-pilot Hertzfeldt saying he has received reports that "braking condition is fair to poor ... use caution" and that "...all field surfaces covered with a thin layer of ice."

An entry made at 7:25 p.m. in the airport's snow-and-operations log said, "All plowed surfaces wet, mostly covered with 1/4-inch layer packed snow and ice with widely scattered thin slush patches."

In the 42 seconds from touchdown until the cockpit broke apart, the DC-10's speed went from 138 miles an hour to 69 miles an hour. Even with no braking ability, the slowing could have been the result of reverse engine thrust alone.

When the plane landed, it was 32 degrees on the ground. Passengers later said that after they scrambled to the runway, the surface was as slick as a skating rink, making it difficult to stand up.

Several hours after the accident, the airline said everyone aboard was accounted for. Three days later — only after anguished relatives of the Metcalfs asked persistent questions — airline officials found a passport belonging to one of the men and said they were missing.

The Metcalfs were among last-minute passengers who boarded the flight in Newark, N.J., after Delta and People Express canceled flights from Newark to Boston. Flight 30 began in Oakland, Calif.

Sherman Is Top Choice

Former State Senator Max Sherman of Amarillo is the Dallas Bar Association's top choice for Texas Attorney General.

The Dallas Bar Poll, the first formal assessment of opinion in the race, placed Sherman at the top with 471 votes compared to 372 for his nearest competitor.

"The Dallas Bar recognizes competency on a non-partisanship level," said Orrin Harrison, chairman of the Dallas Bar judiciary committee.

Sherman, a Democrat, is seeking his party's nomination in the May 1 Primary.

The Bar Association released its poll results this week in which a total of 1,656 Dallas attorneys voted.

"I'm very pleased with this evaluation of my qualifications by fellow attorneys," Sherman said. "Since the Attorney General is the chief legal officer of the state, this kind of appraisal is very welcome."

Sherman has been a practicing attorney for 17 years since graduating with honors from the University of Texas Law School.

In 1971, he was elected to serve Panhandle District 31 in the Texas Senate, a post Sherman held until he resigned in 1977 to become President of West Texas State University in Canyon.

In 1971, he was elected to serve Panhandle District 31 in the Texas Senate, a post Sherman held until he resigned in 1977 to become President of West Texas State University in Canyon.

Sherman has based his campaign on extensive legal and administrative experience.

The candidate spent most of last week on a swing through South Texas, where he met with civic leaders and public officials in Brownsville, McAllen and Laredo to discuss how the Attorney General's office might be more effective.

During this week he will be in Fort Worth, Dallas and Borger. He is to be honored with a dinner at Phillips High School on March 5.

Stamp Collectors Enjoy Interesting, Educational Hobby

John Schneider has a large display of stamps at the Deaf Smith County Library. He began collecting stamps about 15 years ago and has built up a large collection which has come in handy several times when his grandchildren needed an interesting school project.

By LINDA CAUDLE
Family News Editor

Stamp collecting is more than just a hobby, according to John Schneider and Bill Phipps, two local collectors. It is also a way to keep track of notable historical events, it's educational, and it gives one something of value to pass on to future generations.

Phipps, a city inspector, started collecting stamps when he was a child, as a member of the Boy Scouts. During World War II, he was the Postmaster at the Prisoner of War Camp south of Hereford. "I have almost every new stamp issued in the United States since 1935," he said.

Schneider is a retired electrician who took up stamp collecting about 15 years ago. Along with Nolan Grady, Hereford Postmaster, and Dr. M.C. Adams, two other interested collectors, Phipps and Schneider want to start a stamp collecting club here in Hereford.

They are asking all interested persons to meet this Tuesday night at 7:30 p.m. in the Southwestern Public Service Reddy Room, 325 Lee Street. This organizational meeting is open to everyone of all ages, and interested persons from surrounding towns such as Friona and Dimmitt are also urged to come.

"One of the purposes of starting a club here," said Phipps, "is so that people can trade stamps and buy from one another. We also want to give advice such as how to sell valuable stamps and how to soak stamps off of envelopes without damaging them."

"Another purpose of a club is to help eliminate misconceptions people have about stamps and collecting, for example, a stamp can be valuable without being old," said Schneider. "Unique characteristics of a certain issue, or if the issue was only printed for a short length of time—these things can make stamps valuable," he added.

And with value comes monetary worth. All stamps keep getting more valuable as time passes, and unusual stamps, such as limited edition (commemorative) stamps get even more valuable. Certain rare collections can be worth hundreds of dollars, and even more.

According to Phipps and Schneider, there are many things about stamps which the average person does not know. For example, there are four grades of stamps: fine, very fine, extra fine, and superb, describing the quality of the design, the perforations, watermarks, etc. For collecting purposes, there are used, un-used, and mint stamps. Used have been postmarked, un-used were to be mailed, but were removed from the envelope so contain no gum on the back, and mint stamps have never been stuck on an envelope.

Every U.S. postage stamp has a first day cover on its first day of issue. Only one (or sometimes two) post offices in the nation are authorized to issue it on that day, and usually that location has some relation to what is on the stamp, such as a George Washington stamp being issued from Mt. Vernon. "If the post office is small, the U.S. Postal Service usually brings in special equipment and about 17 men from Washington D.C. to help, as people order the first day covers from all over the world," said Phipps, adding that first day covers just started being made in about 1940.

The United States first started printing postal stamps in approximately 1864. In 1962, the first stamp especially made for Christmas was issued.

Other interesting stamps are the gold and silver stamps, some of which are included in Schneider's and Phipps' displays. "Sterling silver replicas were the first instance in which the U.S. Postal Service authorized anyone else to make a stamp," said Schneider. These replicas are of the 1980 World Olympics at Lake Placid.

Twenty three carat leaf gold stamps are limited edition replicas of various commemorative stamps. Phipps has Jimmy Carter's and Walter Mondale's likenesses in these gold stamps, having obtained them from Scotland, as the United States does not print stamps with likenesses of a living person. Foreign countries have been making gold replica stamps for about 20 years, while the United States has only been authorized to make them for about six years," said Phipps.

Schneider mentioned that his collection has been very helpful on several occasions when his grandchildren needed an interesting school project. There is so much history wrapped up in postage stamps, he commented.

With a local stamp collecting club, these enthusiasts would like to get a Benjamin Franklin School Stamp Club going in the local schools. These clubs are designed for fourth through sixth graders. Presently, there are about 43,000 of these clubs in the United States, and collectors anticipate 75,000 by the end of the school year.

Bill Phipps has this collection of stamps on display at Hereford State Bank. The first day covers shown around the outside of the display are just a few of the colorful first day of issues which Phipps has acquired since he started collecting stamps as a child.

Tuesday Evening 7:30 p.m.

The new 20 cents "Love" stamp was issued Feb. 1 as a definitive (or regular) issue rather than a commemorative issue, as it would be if it were issued only for Valentine's Day or a similar one-time occasion. As a definitive issue, it will be available for a longer period of time and in larger quantities than a commemorative issue, so that it may be used for other special occasions such as birthdays, anniversaries, and weddings.

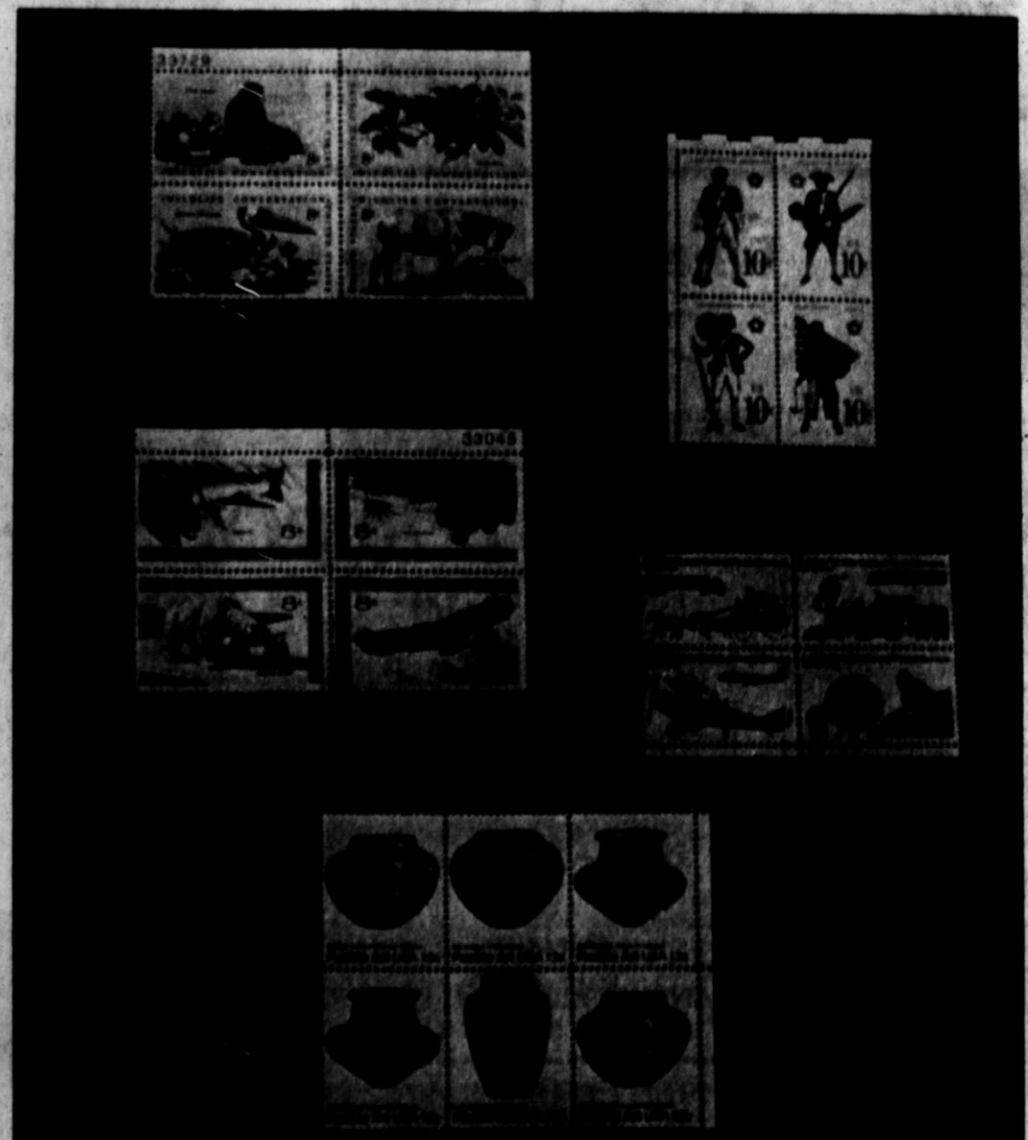

Chattanooga, Tenn. will be the issue site for a 10.9 cent Transportation Series coil stamp on March 26 featuring a hansom cab, a two-wheeled, one-horse transport vehicle used during the latter half of the 19th Century. This stamp is a bulk mail stamp, available in precanceled form for qualified bulk mailers, such as fraternal and non-profit organizations.

Nolan Grady, Hereford Postmaster, shows his display of stamps which are mounted by category on a large board. Grady has been

Postmaster for 21 years, and says that he's "just a casual collector."

These stamps are just a few of the colorful stamps which are a part of John Schneider's and Bill Phipps' collections. Both men have special displays containing some of their more unique stamps set up at the library and Hereford State Bank, and encourage all interested persons to come to an organizational meeting Tuesday night to try and get a stamp collecting club going in Hereford.

Hacker, Bagwell Exchange Wedding Vows

Miss Sonya Maria Hacker and Larry Joe Bagwell of Nacogdoches were united in marriage during a late afternoon ceremony Saturday at First Christian Church with the Rev. Mac McCarter officiating.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Joe Hacker of 119 E. 15th and Mr. and Mrs. Bob Bagwell of Snyder are the bridegroom's parents.

Four free standing brass candlelabras were arranged at the church pews. Spiral and straight candlelabras, trimmed with greenery, flanked the church front and the centerpiece consisted of fresh-cut flowers of the bride's chosen colors.

The bride's sister, Miss Sabra Joette Hacker, served as maid of honor and the bridegroom's father was best man.

Bridesmaids included Debbie Hacker, of Nacogdoches, sister-in-law of the bride, and Sharon Kunkel of Carrollton. Serving as groomsmen were Lewis Helberg of Dallas and Shelley Hacker of Big Springs, brother of the bride.

Mr. and Mrs. Scott Hall were honorary attendants, and ushers were Stacy Hacker of Nacogdoches, the bride's brother, and the bride's cousin, Marc Sigle of Amarillo.

Other members of the wedding party were the bride's brothers, Santry and Stefan Hacker, serving as ring bearer and candlelighter.

Principle bridal selections were sung by Sabra Hacker, accompanied by organist Linda Gilbert and trumpet violinist, Ray Jenkin.

Music chosen consisted of "Trumpet Voluntary by Clark," "Come Share My Life," "Make Us One," "God, A Woman and A Man," and "Joy of Man's Desire."

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore an original design bridal gown of ivory organza and French chantilly lace. The Queen Ann neckline was accented with a dainty ruffle and the lace bodice and long tapered sleeves were emphasized with seed pearls.

The A-line pleated organza skirt, edged in lace, swept into a full-length train and her bridal hat was trimmed with veiling flowers and lace.

Her bridal bouquet consisted of cascading flowers of pink, white and red roses and camellias with babybreath. Completing her bridal attire, the bride carried a penny, marking her birthdate, and wore her mother-in-law's pearl necklace and a diamond necklace given to her by her father on Valentine's Day.

Burgandy gowns, depicting an off-the-shoulder look with a group of tiny straps, circular were fashioned with pleated skirts. Each wore a chiffon cape held by a silk flower and carried one long stemmed silk rose.

Immediately following the service, was a reception held in the Friendship court area of the church.

The bridal bouquet, arranged around a single candle, was used as the centerpiece and the three-tiered wedding cake, which was highlighted by a water fountain, was decorated with cascading roses.

Margaret Williams served the cake and punch was served by the bride's cousin, Valerie Freeman of Fort Worth. Others assisting included Betty Henson, Nancy Shaw, Nell Culpepper, Edith Hunter, Mrs. Boyd Vaughn, Mrs. Burke Inman, and Mrs. Ted Panciera.

Leaving for a wedding trip to the Inn of the Mountain Gods in Ruidosa, the bride wore as her traveling costume a green skirt with a cream colored blouse and beige jacket. Her accessories included beige shoes and a corsage of pink roses.

The couple will make their home at 4814 Jade St. in Nacogdoches.

A 1978 graduate of Hereford High School, the bride attended Texas Tech University, is a member of Delta, Delta, Delta Sorority and is a recent graduate of Braniff Education Systems.

Red Cross Update

By BETTY HENSON
Executive Director

Special thanks to Janelle Davison and Hope Torres for their assistance as volunteer office staff. I really appreciate their sharing their time and talents with us.

The Uniformed Volunteers will have a special meeting to plan for the Chili supper Friday, March 5, at the Red Cross office. The meeting will be held at 2 p.m. and will take the place of the regular luncheon on March 11.

The Board of Realtors will meet Tuesday, March 16, at the Red Cross office. This will be a luncheon meeting.

March is National Red Cross month and we will be celebrating with our annual Chili Supper and recognition of our Volunteer of the Year. We are taking nomination for that honor now. Please write a brief note on how the person that you would like to see honored has helped the Red Cross in its activities and send it to Box 1371 or bring it by the office at 101 Avenue E.

Please remember to reserve the night of Saturday, March 27, for the Red Cross. Help us Help.

The following is the text of President Reagan's Red Cross Month Proclamation:

"The Red Cross provides help to the destitute, the suffering, and the distressed and, in so doing, nourishes those basic attitudes and values essential to mankind's survival.

"For 101 years the American Red Cross has provided a humanitarian banner under which men and women of goodwill unite. By joining and serving, each American can become a 'Good Neighbor.'

"As our nation looks increasingly to the dynamic forces of the private sector to address the problems of our communities. The Red Cross' role of channeling and coordinating volunteer efforts into productive activities will grow.

"Recognizing its expanding responsibilities, the Red Cross has recently undertaken an ambitious, ten-year program to help improve the health of every American. This program is based on the simple concept that individuals play the principal role in reducing major health risks to themselves.

"Through membership in the Red Cross, we can reach out to the world, to our country, and to our community—not only to help those in adversity but also to arm ourselves and others with information to deal effectively in matters of health and safety.

"Moreover, we can help the Red Cross fulfill its traditional responsibility of providing essential communication, welfare, and educational services to members of our armed forces in time of peace or war.

"Although chartered by Congress to perform specific duties, the Red Cross relies upon the time and funds of each of us to carry out its work. I urge the American people to assist our Red Cross by giving financial aid and volunteering their time so that, as the 1982 Red Cross theme says, 'Together We Can Change Things.'

"Now, therefore, I, Ronald Reagan, President of the United States of America and Honorary Chairman of the American National Red Cross, do hereby designate March 1982 as Red Cross Month."

Some fall prey to temptation, but most of us tease it until it attacks.

What this country needs is a bowling ball trophy that doesn't fall apart once you get it home from the awards banquet.

'Texas' Auditions Planned In Canyon

Try-outs for the production of "Texas" will be held from 1-5 p.m. Sunday March 7 in the Northern Hall Arts Building on the West Texas State University campus.

Dancers, actors and singers are invited to exhibit their talents. If selected, they will join the 1,000 who have spent summers in Palo Duro Canyon during the past 16 years presenting the world renowned musical drama "Texas."

The directors, led by Royal Brantley, will hear the auditions. He and others will look for: command of the stage, a voice that can be heard outdoors, actors who understand character motivation and who can convey a variety of emotions.

Some summers as many as 88,000 people have come to see this musical romance of the Panhandle by Paul Green, and the experience of playing to these audiences for sixty nights in this magnificent canyon has been a bridge into professional theatre for many of the cast members.

For more information write to Box 266, Canyon, Tex., 79015.

Jacks, Alexander Wed Saturday Evening

An early evening candlelight ceremony was the setting for the marriage of Barbara Ann Jacks and Rowan Brent Alexander, both of Tulsa, Okla., Saturday at First United Methodist Church. The Rev. Jarrell Sharp, pastor, officiated.

Parents of the bride are Mr. and Mrs. Harold Jacks of 220 Hickory, and the bridegroom's parents are Mr. and Mrs. Dempsey Alexander of 540 Willow Lane.

Two brass candelabras, holding 16 tapers, and entwined with fresh greenery, were arranged on either side of a matching brass kneeling bench. A large bouquet of white gladiolus, yellow daisies and blue carnations were placed on the back alter table.

Arranged with the unity candle was a bouquet of yellow daisies and miniature carnations. As the bride was being escorted down the church aisle by her father, she presented a long stemmed yellow rose to each mother. The bride's sister, Mrs. Sonya Cash, was matron of honor, and serving as best man was Kent Herring.

Bridesmaids included Becky McGilvary, Sony Cash and Lisa Artho of Vega. Groomsmen were Rockne Alexander of Denver, Colo., Randall Alexander of Amarillo, Dennis Artho of Vega and Dale Tarr of Lubbock.

"We've Only Just Begun", "The Lord's Prayer" and "Wedding Song" were vocalized by Donna Kendall, who was accompanied by Elaine Calkins.

The bride wore a floor-length antebellum gown of nylon organza and re-embroidered chantilly lace over bridal taffeta. It was designed with a Berth Collar, natural waistline, long tapered sleeves and a bouffant skirt.

Inserts of lace enhanced the fitted bodice, sleeves and the skirt's ruffles which fell in tiers to the hemline and swept to the back of the gown forming a chapel length train.

Here three-tiered bridal veil of imported illusion, with a border of matching lace, drifted from a coil of lace and seed pearls.

The bridal bouquet was formed by clusters of white stephanotis in a bed of gypsophilia with white throat orchids and miniature carnations, resting on a white imported lace and blue Picot ribbon tied at the back. The same imported white lace and Picot ribbon streamers were accented with love knots and stephanotis.

For something old, the bride carried a hand-embroidered handkerchief made and passed down to her by her great-grandmother. A string of pearls from her mother was worn as something new and for something borrowed, the bride wore her sister's wedding gown.

As a good luck piece, she wore in her shoe a 1960 birthdate penny and to complete her wedding attire, she wore as something blue the traditional wedding garter.

Bridal attendants' gowns of baby blue chiffon were fashioned with slightly raised waistlines, standup collars, front and back ruffles and yokes trimmed in lace. The illusion sleeves were also trimmed with lace at the cuffs.

Nosegay bouquets of yellow and white daisies with blue miniature carnations were carried by the bridesmaids. Each bouquet was tied with a lace Picot blue ribbon and was arranged in white lace baskets.

Mothers of the couple wore corsages of yellow roses framed with white miniature carnations and trimmed with yellow ribbons and leaves.

Susan Tarr of Lubbock invited guests to register at the reception held in the Fellowship Hall of the church.

Covered with a light blue cloth with a white lace overlay, the bride's table was centered with a silver epone candelabra with blue tapered candles holding an airy arrangement of yellow and white daisies and blue carnations.

A navy blue cloth covered the bridegroom's table and a chocolate cake was used as the centerpiece.

The three-tiered bridal cake, divided with pillars, sat atop a three-tiered lit flowing fountain surrounded by a white flower ring. The cake was lavished with ruffles, ribbons, roses and forget-me-nots.

Sisters-in-law of the bridegroom, Beverly Alexander of Englewood, Colo., and Yvonne Alexander of Amarillo, served cake; and Denise Albracht assisted serving coffee, nuts and mints from the tables appointed with silver services.

As here going away costume, the bride wore a two-piece light blue suede cloth pantsuit with a champagne colored blouse. Completing her outfit, she wore a blue and white rosebud corsage.

The couple will make their home after March 2 at 1100 South Date Court in Jenks, Okla.

The bride, a 1979 graduate of Hereford High School, is currently employed by Amerada Hess Oil Co. in Tulsa.

The bridegroom, who is employed by Standard Oil Co., also in Tulsa, received his BBA degree from West Texas State University in 1981.

Out-of-town guests were from Amarillo, Lubbock, Plainview, Olton, Littlefield, Floydada, Pottsboro, Canyon, Booker, Denver, Colo., Hobbs, N.M. and Portales, N.M.

Local Women Attend Convention In Dallas

Karen McPherson and Phyllis Neill of A-1 Beauty Salon attended the recent National Hairdressers and Cosmetologists Association's latest hair fashion collection at the Fairmont Hotel in Dallas.

"American Images" was this year's theme. The collection emphasized the latest in hair fashion trends which are free moving, multi-layered and full.

Hair stylists stressed that the skirt length to the hair length is less rather than more. It was noted that the style will be more toward shorter hair especially in the briefer "American Image" hair fashions which create versatile illusions of overall length through longer, fitted nape areas.

THAT SIZE 18 IS HISTORY!

and it will stay there, thanks to Pat Walker's!

"When my friends see me I feel really proud! With 37 pounds lost and 50 inches off I am nearing my goal. Even my sock size has gone from an 18 to a 12. In 1980 I went on a diet and I managed to lose 20 pounds. Then, slowly, over the following months all that weight crept right back on again and even a few new pounds were added.

I decided that December that come January I was going back to the "old diet" again. Then I heard about Pat Walker's where you can lose weight without strenuous exercise and starvation dieting. I saw the Pat Walker's ad and I call for the free courtesy treatment and private figure analysis. The rest is history.

This time with Pat Walker's Symmetricon exercise unit firming and toning as the pounds and inches slip away, the weight is going to stay off. The reason I'll stay slim is that, for the first time, I faced up to it, that you look like what you eat... and I just ate too much. At Pat Walker's you learn to eat the right combinations of food. I could say I ate my way back to being slim again. If wearing a leotard embarrasses you... if you don't like revealing your figure problems to a roomful of strangers, then Pat Walker's is your kind of place. Every aspect of Pat Walker's weight loss program - from counseling sessions on sensible eating habits to Symmetricon treatment - is in total privacy, something you deserve.

Griego, Salazar Take Vows

Standing beneath an archway of burgundy and dusty rose flowers, Mary P. Griego and Moises Salazar III were married Feb. 20 at St. Joseph's Church with the Rev. Jim O'Conner officiating.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Joe I. Griego and the bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Moises Salazar Jr.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a gown of bridal peau with white crystal pleating trim of Alecon lace and bodice appliqued with matching lace and pearls. The dress was made by Rose Valdez.

The chapel length train, which was carried by Brenda Sermino and Christopher Limas, was tiered with ruffles.

BY ERMA BOMBECK

There are two kinds of grocery shoppers in this world. There are those who shop in the daytime and those who shop at night. The differences between them are vast.

Daytime shoppers try two or three carts until they get one with the wheels that go in the same direction.

Nighttime shoppers grab the first one by the door even if it has a brown piece of lettuce caught in the seat.

Daytime shoppers enter the store and ask, "Where's the sale detergent?"

Nighttime shoppers enter the store and ask, "What time do you close?"

Daytime shoppers have lists and when they buy an item, they mark it off with a sharpened pencil.

Nighttime shoppers come in for a quart of milk and will leave 15 minutes and $73 later.

Daytime shoppers put on their glasses and pick up cans and boxes to examine them carefully for content.

Nighttime shoppers close their eyes and pick out anything that feels like you "just add water."

Daytime shoppers usually shop alone and regard it as a pleasurable social experience.

Nighttime shoppers usually have a child or two in the cart and regard shopping as a punishment from God.

Daytime shoppers buy tofu and plain yogurt.

Nighttime shoppers buy potatochips and a six-pack.

Daytime shoppers read the sensational tabloids at the checkout but don't buy them.

Nighttime shoppers buy the tabloids at the checkout but don't read them.

Daytime shoppers will ask the manager if the produce is fresh.

Nighttime shoppers will ask the manager if the beer is cold.

Daytime shoppers have a handful of coupons and don't seem to be in any particular hurry.

Nighttime shoppers are double-parked and will give you a blank check to let them out.

Wish you had a power tool for those do-it-yourself projects but wonder if they're worth the money?

They are—and so is your time, so treat yourself to a power tool.

Power tools, in fact, save money because they encourage you to do jobs that otherwise might be discouraging, so you save labor money.

Actually, if you have any use for a certain power tool, you can hardly afford not to have it. Using such tools for jobs that would take many hours by hand let portable power tools prove their worth quickly. Some pay for themselves the first or second time you use them. A good tool lasts for years, saving more and more money.

These carpenter's or mechanic's helpers speed up everything you do, accomplishing jobs in seconds without strain. And they put your ability—you drill cleaner holes and make smoother, straighter cuts than you can do by hand.

A bonus feature of power tools is the time they save, leaving free time for other jobs or leisure.

In some cases, power tools take so much drudgery out of tasks that they become a form of leisure. They offer the do-it-yourselfer a welcome change of pace—a time of constructive relaxation with a lift from self-satisfaction.

If you're buying power tools for the first time, consider some basis to start with—an electric drill, jigsaw, portable saw and belt sander.

An electric drill and jigsaw take hard labor out of working metal.

Such tools will cut, shape, drill and smooth wood, metal, composition boards, plastic tile, formica sinks and cabinet tops and plaster board.

With proper masonry bits, you can make holes in cement, brick or cinder blocks.

tile.

Consider a belt sander, too. With this tool, you can bring even box lumber to a good surface, making this free material into useful and attractive items. Also, you can buy a less expensive grade of plywood paneling with small surface defects, fill them with spackle and power sand to a paint- or enamel-ready surface.

Educational programs conducted by the Texas Agricultural Extension Service serves people of all ages regardless of socio-economic levels, race, color, sex, religion or national origin.

Ann Landers Author's Words Give Spiritual Rest

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I read something that came to me in the mail several days ago and was moved by it. I hope you will share it with your readers. It made a difference in my life at a time when I needed the spiritual support and strength to believe. Sorry, I don't know where it came from. It was signed, "Author and Origin Unknown." Thank you so much for your consideration.--Davenport, Iowa

DEAR DAV: Although the author is unknown, it came from my column and was subsequently reprinted in "Reader's Digest." I have had a large number of requests to run it again and do so now, with pleasure.

FOOTPRINTS IN THE SAND

One night a man had a dream. He dreamed he was walking along the beach with the Lord. Across the sky flashed scenes from his life. In each scene he noticed two sets of footprints in the sand— one belonging to him and the other to the Lord.

When the last scene flashed before him, he looked back at the footprints and noticed that many times along the path there was only one set of footprints in the sand. He also noticed that this happened during the lowest and saddest times in his life.

This really bothered him, so he questioned the Lord: "Lord, you said that once I decided to follow you, you would walk with me all the way, but I noticed that during the most troublesome times of my life there was only one set of footprints. I don't understand why, when I needed you the most, you deserted me."

The Lord replied, "My precious child, I would never desert you. During your times of trial and suffering, when you saw only one set of footprints, it was then that I carried you."

Time after time I have been made to feel like a nuisance, something to be avoided or ignored like a piece of equipment left in the hallway.

I wonder why members of the nursing profession who are supposed to be dedicated to serving the sick have so little compassion for those who are suffering anxiety and heartache because someone dear to us is ill. We don't ask much—just a little smile and a few words.—Resentful In Stockton

DEAR RESENTFUL: All nurses are not alike—any more than all patients or all visitors are. I find it odd, however, that you have had a 41-year run of sourpusses.

Anthony 'Diary' Wins Medal For Conkwright

EDITOR'S NOTE: The following is the last of the first place essays from the American History Essay Contest, sponsored by Los Ciboleros Chapter, Daughters of the American Revolution in conjunction with American History Month. Leslie Conkwright, a sixth grader at Bluebonnet, tied with Sandra Strafuss, whose essay appeared last week, for the sixth grade first place position. Both girls received a bronze medal. Leslie's essay is unique in that it is set up as a diary. It focuses on Susan B. Anthony, a famous American born in February before the year 1900, as specified in the contest rules. "Miss Anthony was of particular interest to me because she worked her entire life to improve society for others. She was a rebel, a crusader, and a humanitarian," said Leslie. The other students pictured here were second place winners in the essay contest. They received Certificates of Award from Los Ciboleros Chapter.

childhood visit with my father to his cotton mill. I observed that although some of the women were better weavers than the men, they were never overseers and received far less in wages. This had been my first experience with violation of women's rights. This presidency offer is such an honor and yet such an immense responsibility. I must give much thought to the offer.

Book Tells Of Couple's Journey Across America

By DIANNE PIERSON Librarian

"The Walk West: A Walk Across America No. 2" heads the list of new books available this week at the Deaf Smith County Library. In 1973 a young man began a journey that would last for more than five years and span the continental United States.

and Barbara Jenkins completes the journey, singing with love of a great land and great people.

"Daisy, Daisy: a grandmother's journey across America on a Bicycle," by Christian Miller, also heads the list of new books available this week. Who would have imagined that an English grandmother would even have thought of bicycling across the United States or as this delightfully off-beat travel book proves, that she would actually do it? But Christian Miller had no hesitation in setting out to pedal from the Atlantic to the Pacific.

"Daisy, Daisy" is the marvelously entertaining story of her meeting with the USA and its people, viewed over the handlebars of a small folding bicycle. Looking at America with a completely fresh eye, she is able to paint a picture that we rarely are able to see for ourselves. "Daisy, Daisy" is informative, witty, perceptive, and irresistible.

Other new books available this week at Deaf Smith County Library are "The Second Stage" by Betty Friedan, "Gavels, Grit & Glory: The Billy Clayton Story" by Jimmy Banks, "Absence of Malice" by Kerry Stewart, and "The Amityville Horror II," by John Jones.

Other Library Events: Public Story Hour: 10 a.m. - March 4.

For further information, call Carolyn Andrews at 364-2141 or 276-5204, or Donna Tidmore at 364-2141 or 364-8364.

Essay Contest Winners

Ballet To Sponsor Two Dance Workshops

During the month of March the ballet studio in the Mary Moody Northern building at West Texas State University, the Lone Star Ballet Inc. will sponsor two workshops in dance. They will cover two different styles: the modern and the classical ballet.

The first, the modern, will be conducted by Richard Arve on Thursday, March 4 at 15 p.m.

The second will be presented by Clara Duncan in the same place on Monday, March 22, at 5 p.m. This will be combined with auditions for the Houston Ballet Academy, the training school for the Houston Ballet.

Arve is leader and director of the Arve Connection Dance company which is appearing at the Amarillo Civic Auditorium on March 6 (Saturday) at 8 p.m. under the auspices of the Lone Star Ballet Inc. He will precede this company by two days in order to hold the workshop.

According to some critics the "warm ups" he presents are exciting enough for a program, and his workshop will cover strength, energy placement and dynamics. Since his company is known for its fast motion and energy this should be an interesting discussion.

Arve has studied with the giants of modern dance including Martha Graham, Robert Jeffrey, and Ruth Page. At present he heads the Ruth Page Foundation School of Dance - an organization close to the Panhandle through the late Isaac Van Grove, musical arranger for the musical drama "TEXAS," who prepared Ruth Page's music for many years.

The Monday, March 22, workshop, presented by Miss Duncan of the Houston Ballet, will be in the classical tradition. Miss Duncan is an advanced member of the Royal Academy of Dancing and Cacchetti Society, and was formerly the principal dancer for the London Contemporary Dance Theatre. She was also soloist for the London Festival Ballet.

There will be no charge for the classes but enrollment will be limited to the first thirty-five who apply for places. Those who wish to reserve a place should write to: Lone Star Ballet Workshop; box 268; Canyon Texas 79015; and send their name, address telephone number and dance training with their applications.

FROM THE DIARY OF SUSAN B. ANTHONY

Dear Diary, Is it a crime for a citizen to vote?

Today was my trial in the pleasant town of Canandaigua, New York. Every available seat was filled, as curious crowds gathered. I wonder if that all male jury could possibly understand my humiliation of being arrested for exercising my rights as a citizen?

Judge Ward Hunt ruled against me at once, refusing to let me testify on my own behalf. My lawyer, Henry Selden presented my case very well. However, the district attorney, Richard Crowley said whatever my intentions may have been, good or bad, I was violating a law of the United States and was guilty of the crime. Mr. Selden asked for a poll of the jury, but Hunt abruptly discharged the jury. Judge Hunt, your verdict is the greatest outrage history ever witnessed!

A woman suffering, Susan

June 18, 1873

Dear Diary, Claiming that I had been denied my right of trial by jury, Mr. Selden moved for a new trial. Hunt denied the motion.

The judge kept declaring that I had been tried according to the established forms of law. As I see the laws, they are made by men, interpreted by men, administered by men, in favor of men and against women.

The next words I recall were those of the judge pronouncing a fine of $100 for cost of the prosecution. Well, I shall never pay a dollar of such an unjust penalty. As of this day, I promise to continue to urge the education of all women to rebel against manmade, unjust, and unconstitutional forms of law.

Determined, Susan

Sept. 1884

Dear Diary, Tonight, I had a most enjoyable meeting with Elizabeth Cady Stanton. She is encouraging me to take over presidency of the National American Woman's Suffrage Association upon her retirement. I recall my first meeting with Mrs. Stanton, it was after an anti-slavery meeting in the fall of 1851.

We spent the evening discussing abolition temperance and women's rights. It was that same evening I confided in her my early

World Day of Prayer

World Day of Prayer, sponsored by Church Women United, will be celebrated Friday, March 5, at the First Presbyterian Church. The annual service is celebrated all over the world, and Friday marks the 95th observance. Discussing plans for the Day of Prayer with

Hold the door open for someone and the store's manager will yell at you for letting the heat out.

World Day Of Prayer Celebration Set Friday

World Day of Prayer, an international celebration sponsored in the United States by Church Women United, will be held Friday at First Presbyterian Church with the Rev. George Belford, pastor, serving as host. The event is open to the public and a nursery will be provided.

Readers for the celebration are Betty Koelzer, Mildred Fuhrmann, Brenda Barrett, and Louise Roberson. Debbie Scroggins will be the featured vocalist and the congregational singing will be led by Leta Kaul. Susie Marquis is the Ecumenical Celebrations chairman with Helen Eades serving as president of CWU.

The World Day of Prayer will once again spark a global chain of prayer for peace. This marks its 95th observance in more than 52,000 U.S. communities and in 170 countries on six continents around the world.

These resources translated into many languages may well be the most widely used Christian literature in the world apart from the Scriptures.

The World Day of Prayer service this year was born in Ireland. Written jointly by a dedicated group of Irish women, Protestant and Roman Catholic, from the Republic of Ireland and Northern Ireland, it stands as a visible example of the reality of reconciliation.

The theme, "The People of God: Gathered for Worship, Scattered for Service" draws upon religious traditions of Roman Catholic and Protestant women and is a call to peace, justice and reconciliation—a recognized need in Ireland and in many nations of the world.

Church Women United, the official sponsor of World Day of Prayer in the U.S., acted as the catalyst for this experience. A historic collaboration, it was natural outgrowth of many years of sympathetic and supportive relationships with both Protestant and Roman Catholic women of Ireland in their long struggle for peace.

CWU is the national, ecumenical movement which brings together more than half a million Protestant, Roman Catholic and Orthodox women into a Christian "community of caring."

World Day of Prayer offerings make possible the mission of CWU including the Intercontinental Grants for Mission program which funds projects, national and international, in support of the empowerment of women, human rights, justice and peace.

Find Changes View of West Africa

HOUSTON (AP) — Susan Keach McIntosh found her work last summer so riveting she fell into an odd routine — most days at lunchtime, she would climb out of the pit where she worked and faint.

"I'd get so interested in what we were doing I'd forget to drink," said the Cambridge-educated Rice University professor of anthropology. That can be a hazard for someone doing manual labor in West Africa's 115-degree heat.

What fascinated Mrs. McIntosh, 31, and her 30-year-old husband, Roderick McIntosh, also a Rice professor with degrees from Cambridge, were the ruins of a city they discovered in 1977 — archaeological evidence they say has changed the way the world views the development of African civilization.

Their find was Jenne-jeno. "It is the oldest known city in sub-Saharan Africa," McIntosh said. The McIntoshes say the town was established by 250 B.C. "And it is the earliest walled town that we know of."

The wall, they say, was massive — it had a circumference of more than a mile and a half and was three feet thick.

McIntosh said further study of the data they gathered in their eight-month 1981 dig confirmed what they had theorized four years earlier.

Contrary to previous beliefs, the McIntoshes say, complex civilizations existed in Africa south of the Sahara long before the Arabs spreading the word of Mohammad took over trade networks in the area after 1000 A.D.

"We came up with this really magnificent gold earring, right under the city wall, that dated to 600 A.D.," McIntosh said. "Mohammad was just a babe in swaddling clothes then."

Their work has also turned up funerary urns and the skeletons buried in them, pottery, structural remains of houses and a terracotta statuette which the McIntoshes theorize was a protective household spirit.

"We found a lot of different pieces that we're fitting together to get the big picture," Mrs. McIntosh said.

The lack of progress in the area has helped them do that. Many of the artifacts are similar to items still in use.

"There's a terrific continuity between Jenne today and Jenne-jeno 1,000 years ago," Mrs. McIntosh said. The present-day city of Jenne, in what is now Mali, was built a few miles from Jenne-jeno when the ancient city was mysteriously abandoned about 1250 A.D.

"It's like you stood on a corner in downtown London for 15 centuries," said Mrs. McIntosh.

The McIntoshes' observation post last year was centered in a mud brick hut. They battled blistering heat and contended with a variety of parasites in the food and water that gave them dysentery.

Their work, done on an $80,000 budget which included transportation costs for the couple and four graduate students, served to establish that Jenne-jeno "was much larger and more complex than we originally thought," McIntosh said.

He said he now estimates the 60-acre town may have held 20,000 people in the 6th and 7th centuries A.D.

The town was supported by and grew because of the gold trade," he said, citing the gold earring and other pieces as evidence.

The nearest gold mines, he said, were at least 500 miles away, indicating a complex system of trade routes.

Mrs. McIntosh said the couple's next expedition, which will probably not take place for several years, will concentrate on Timbuktu, Jenne-jeno's sister city 300 miles away. She said they would seek evidence of trade between the two.

She is sure they'll find it. "For one thing, Timbuktu cannot feed itself," she said. "Jenne-jeno was in the granary of Africa. Traditionally, there shouldn't have been a Timbuktu without a Jenne-jeno."

In the meantime, the McIntoshes hope anthropological interest in Africa picks up. Of 250 applicants for an opening in Rice's anthropology department recently, only 10 had done work in Africa, he said.

"The money is there and, God knows, the work is there," McIntosh said. "The Niger River Valley civilization is not a freak." He said from more commonly explored areas.

Freeze Main Cause Of Rising Prices

WASHINGTON (AP) — The bitter cold that hit farmers from Florida to the Dakotas last month was a major culprit in food prices surging upward, says the Agriculture Department.

Not only did the freezing weather hurt tender vegetable and fruit crops in southern growing areas, it hampered the normal marketing of crops and livestock across wide areas of the country.

Partly as a result, food prices overall in the first three months of this year are expected to average about 2 percent higher than they did in the fourth quarter of 1981, a monthly analysis said Thursday.

"This increase is largely due to reduced supplies and higher prices for fresh vegetables and frozen concentrated orange juice, caused by the January freeze in Florida and smaller vegetable acreage nationwide," it said.

"However, the basic situation of large food supplies and weak consumer demand still persists for most of the agricultural sector, which will limit retail price movements for most foods through midyear."

William Leshner, assistant secretary for economics, said food prices this year, as in 1981, will rise mostly because of higher marketing costs for transporting, processing and merchandizing food after it leaves the farm.

The department is sticking by its earlier forecast that food prices, overall, will rise about 7 percent over the entire year, compared to a 7.9 percent gain in 1981. That would be the smallest increase in five years.

Leshner's analysis followed a Labor Department report which showed food prices rose 0.7 percent in January.

"The increases in the past month were largely confined to higher vegetable prices combined with rising marketing costs," he said. "Large supplies generally continued to depress farm prices."

Severe cold weather in Florida hit winter production of tomatoes, green peppers, beans, squash and cucumbers, the report said.

Even so, it said, "Damage from the freeze appears to be smaller than occurred during the 1981 freeze, and larger vegetable imports from Mexico this year will offset some of the supply reductions."

"However, retail fresh vegetable prices will likely remain high until late winter and spring when acreage that was replanted following the freeze will be harvested."

Lettuce prices rose sharply again in January, up almost 50 percent, following a boost of more than 30 percent in December. The reasons, according to department experts, are reduced acreages of lettuce nationally and insect damage to the California crop.

Paul Westcott, an analyst in the department's Economic Research Service, said, however, that lettuce prices have started to come down and that he expects to see substantial easing reflected in next month's report.

Another factor in the January food price increase was a 0.6 percent increase in the index for sugar and sweets, which reflected rising raw sugar prices in recent months.

Coffee prices rose 2.6 percent in January as a result of declining stocks and "expectations of smaller world coffee production this year, and perhaps stronger demand due to the cold weather" last month.

Prices of fish and seafood rose 3.8 percent in January as cold weather reduced supplies, the report said.

Retail prices of red meat dropped 0.6 percent in January, all because of a decline in prices of beef and veal. Pork, with production reduced, increased.

The price index for poultry rose 1.5 percent last month, but egg prices dropped 2.2 percent from December, the report said.

Women Play Major Role In Farm Life

WASHINGTON (AP) — Women often help provide the emotional and financial bonds necessary to the operation of small, family-operated farms, says an Agriculture Department researcher.

Kathleen K. Scholl, a consumer economist, told a recent symposium sponsored by the Agricultural Research Service that "emotional support of the family members can be an asset to both farm and family to cope with the stress of farming."

In a report distributed Monday, Ms. Scholl said that if family members do not have "strong supportive relationships" with each other, both the family and the farm may suffer.

Women usually contribute also to the financial stability of the farm, Ms. Scholl said.

Gov't Makes First Barter In 15 Years

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Agriculture Department says it is trading $13 million worth of surplus dairy products for Jamaican bauxite, the first government barter agreement in 15 years.

Under the agreement — which was signed Thursday in Jamaica by Prime Minister Edward Seaga and the department's general sales manager, Alan T. Tracy — the United States will exchange 7,238 metric tons of non-fat dry milk and 1,905 tons of anhydrous milkfat for 400,000 tons of bauxite, an ore used to produce aluminum.

President Reagan last November directed the Federal Management Agency to obtain about 1.6 million tons of Jamaican bauxite for the national defense stockpile. The trade for dairy products is part of that acquisition program.

A metric ton is about 2,205 pounds.

Officials said the last barter contract for strategic materials was in 1967 with Australia for delivery of rutile — a mineral — in exchange for cotton and other government-owned commodities.

Cotton Producers Program Set Tuesday

The Deaf Smith County Crops Committee and Hereford Farmers gin are conducting a program for county cotton producers Tuesday night at 7:30 p.m. in the Hereford Community Center.

Dr. James Supak, a cotton specialist from Lubbock, will present new information on cotton varieties. He will include special types adapted to this area in his discussion. Insect control and fertilization will be presented also.

The Lubbock cotton classing office will send a representative to demonstrate grading and classing of cotton and John Fuston, Deaf Smith ASCS director, will discuss the 1982 farm program in relation to cotton production.

Clark Andrews and Miles Caudle will give the results of the 1981 variety demonstrations conducted on their farms.

Hog Producers Should Check Cost Performance

LUBBOCK — Many swine producers who mix herd rations on the farm look at maximum performance when they should be looking at least cost performance, says a swine specialist with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service.

Least cost performance is the production of pork at the lowest cost per pound of gain in a specific amount of time, explained Dr. Robert S. Cohen, the Extension specialist. Maximum performance looks at the rate and efficiency of gain without considering what that gain costs, he noted.

Most commercial swine producers mix rations on the farm, he said. Many elect to mix their farm grown or purchased grain with a commercially prepared complete supplement. A larger number prefer to mix the ration from scratch, combining grain, protein source, calcium and/or phosphorous source, salt, vitamin premix, trace mineral premix and an antibiotic to produce a complete ration.

"Most producers who mix their rations from scratch feel they don't have many choices for alternative feedstuffs to use in formulating their rations," Cohen said. If they look only at maximum performance, that may be correct, he said.

"In the past, many producers have perceived maximum performance and least cost performance to be identical," the Extension specialist said. "That is only true if sorghum or corn is the same price as, or is less expensive than, the alternate grains such as wheat, oats or barley, and if soybeans meal is the same price or is less expensive than the alternate protein feedstuffs such as meat and bone meal, cottonseed meal or peanut meal."

To fully evaluate the parameters of feedstuff selection, Cohen said, the swine producer needs to know two things:

1) What is his cost per pound of gain? This will aid in evaluating feed costs of production.

2) What is his capital investment to produce a marketable hog? This will aid in evaluating interest cost as a result of owning the pig one more day.

"At an 18 percent rate, the interest cost is approximately five cents per day per market hog. At 12 percent interest, the daily interest cost is approximately three-and-a-half cents per day per market hog," the swine specialist said.

With this kind of information available from his records the producer can sit down and evaluate whether it is to his economic advantage to feed a ration which would produce a lower cost per pound of gain, but would take the pig 14 days longer to reach market weight.

It is known that sorghum, barley, rice, and oats will not support the efficiency of gain that corn will support, and that meat and bone meal, cottonseed meal, and peanut meal substitution for a portion of the soybean meal will not support a rate of gain as efficient as an all soybean meal supplement, Cohen said.

Figure 1 illustrates the relative value of five cereal grains when fed to swine in complete mixed rations. All of these are related to corn, which is assigned the value of 100 percent.

Wheat is 100 percent the value of corn and a producer could replace 97 pounds of corn and 3 pounds of soybean meal with each 100 pounds of wheat substituted in a ration. Sorghum would be 96 percent the value of corn (if formulation is based on crude protein a value of 9 percent must be used for sorghum), barley is 91 percent the value of corn, and oats when fed as the sole grain is 73 percent the value of corn or when it replaces only half the corn in the ration it is 82 percent the value of corn.

"A producer could use these figures as a guideline to determine prior to purchase which grain is the most economical to use," Cohen suggested.

For example, if corn and sorghum are the same price then corn is the better buy. If sorghum is 96 percent the price of corn then as far as economy of gain is concerned they are equivalent and the producer could select either. However, if sorghum is less than 96 percent the price of corn then sorghum is the better way.

These relative values take into account the individual capabilities of certain cereal grains to support weight gain in swine. However, they do not take into consideration the extra time required to reach market weight, Cohen cautioned.

Therefore, the producer should evaluate the daily interest cost on the capital invested in order to fully consider those factors which would have influence on profitability, he said.

"Let us say, for example, that a swine producer can put on 180 pounds of gain using feedstuff A at a cost of 26.25 cents per pound and can reach market weight in an average of 100 days of feeding. Or, he can use feedstuff B and produce 180 pounds of gain at a cost of 26.40 cents per pound and can reach market weight in an average of 90 days of feeding.

"Which would be economically better? Total per pig feed cost plus interest on investment (18 percent) for extra days in finishing for 180 pounds of gain would be $47.75 for feedstuff A and $47.52 for feedstuff B."

In this example the higher priced feedstuff B provided the cheapest total cost of gain with interest; however, had the difference in days of feeding been only five days then feedstuff A would have had the advantage.

In order for a producer to evaluate which grain or combination of grains and which protein source or combination of protein sources would provide him with the least cost performance it would be best if that information was determined from the feeding of hogs in his operation, Cohen said.

"In some swine production operations it is not practical to test all possible feedstuff combinations at one time. However, the most accurate information for any management decision is that information which is obtained from a producer's own herd."

Farmers Catching Spring Fever

COLLEGE STATION, Texas (AP) — Texas farmers are catching spring planting fever, says Dr. Daniel C. Pfannstiel, director of the Texas Agricultural Extension Service, with corn and grain sorghum going in the ground throughout South Texas and the Coastal Bend and even into the Central Texas Blacklands.

In his weekly crop report Pfannstiel added that Central and West Texas remain too dry for much planting, as do parts of the Coastal Bend and East Texas, where grass and forest fires have been a severe problem this past week.

Soil temperatures are getting warmer, he said, but chances still are good for a killing frost or freeze over most areas of Texas.

Four-inch-deep soil temperature averages (in degrees Fahrenheit) recorded by the National Weather Service the past week included: 56 at Austin, 62 at Beaumont, 62 at Beeville, 56 at College Station, 70 at Corpus Christi, 60 at Eagle Lake, 66 at Dilley, 53 at Lavon Dam (near Dallas), 61 at Longview, 55 at Lufkin, 58 at San Angelo, 59 at Stephenville, 68 at Uvalde, 50 at Waco, and 70 at Weslaco. Minimum soil temperatures suggested by the Extension Service for planting to insure good seed germination are 50 degrees for corn, 55 for grain sorghum and 65 for cotton.

Farmers not yet planting are getting land prepared, Pfannstiel said. Full-scale field work has started in the Panhandle and South Plains and remained active in most other areas. Some ginning of modulated cotton still continues in the South Plains and Trans-Pecos areas.

Winter vegetables continue to be harvested in the Winter Garden and Rio Grande Valley. The sugarcane harvest is winding down in the Valley but citrus harvesting remained in full swing.

Reports from district Extension directors showed these conditions.

PANHANDLE: Warmer weather the past week allowed wheat to grow but rain is needed. Some wheat is providing grazing for livestock but supplemental feeding continues. Farmers are busy getting cropland in shape for spring planting.

SOUTH PLAINS: Full-scale land preparation is under way and farmers are applying fertilizer and herbicides. Some ginning of modulated cotton continues. Wheat is making little growth due to lack of surface moisture. Livestock look good, with feeding continuing.

ROLLING PLAINS: Lack of moisture continues to limit wheat growth although recent warm weather has helped growing conditions. Some cattle are making good gains on wheat and other small grains. Farmers are reducing cattle herds to generate some cash flow. Land preparation continues for spring crops.

NORTH CENTRAL: Some farmers have started to plant corn and will begin planting grain sorghum soon. Land preparation continues for cotton. Cool-season vegetables are being planted. Small grains are starting to make good growth with warmer weather.

NORTHEAST: Wheat is improving with warmer weather; farmers are applying nitrogen to boost growth. Land preparation continues, with some cool-season vegetables being planted. Winter pastures are recovering from cold. Clovers appear to provide some grazing. Lice are increasing in some herds. Calving is active. Landowners are involved in fire ant control.

FAR WEST: Dry conditions continue, causing further decline in pastures and ranges. Livestock feeding is increasing due to the lack of grazing. Lambing has started. Farmers continue to prepare cropland for spring planting. Some ginning of modulated cotton continues.

WEST CENTRAL: Some areas received scattered rains the past week, but more moisture is needed for small grains, pastures and ranges. Greenbugs continue to infest some small grains. Livestock feeding remains heavy due to short forage conditions. Homeowners and growers are pruning and spraying pecan trees.

CENTRAL: Some corn and grain sorghum planting has started although planting moisture is short over most of the area. Small grains are suffering from lack of moisture and greenbug infestations. Livestock feeding continues due to short grazing conditions. Home gardening activities are increasing.

EAST: Most of the area has good moisture, but grass and forest fires have been a serious problem. Pastures remain in fair to poor shape so livestock feeding continues. Farmers are liming and fertilizing pastures where moisture is adequate. Calving is active. Land preparation continues along with planting of cool-season vegetables. Some peach trees are in the pink bud stage due to the recent warm weather.

UPPER COAST: Farmers continue to get cropland in shape for spring planting, and a few have started planting corn and grain sorghum. Soil moisture is getting short in some locations. Pastures and ranges are starting to green up with the warm weather, but some cattle feeding continues. Vegetable gardening is increasing.

SOUTH CENTRAL: Most

farmers have their land ready to plant but are waiting on planting moisture. A few have started planting corn and grain sorghum. Wheat generally looks good but needs rain. Cattle feeding continues. Gardeners are planting onions and potatoes.

SOUTHWEST: Rains of an inch or so—the first since early last October—fell over much of the area last week, but more moisture is needed for pastures and ranges and for spring planting. Corn planting is under way in southern counties. Harvesting of winter vegetables continues in full swing. Livestock feeding remains heavy.

COASTAL BEND: Soil moisture remains short over most of the area despite rains of 2 to 6 inches in some locations last week. Some farmers have begun planting corn and grain sorghum while others are still waiting for planting moisture. Some small grains, pastures and ranges continue to need rain. Livestock are in fair shape, with light supplemental feeding.

SOUTH: Most of the region now has adequate moisture following good rains the past week. Corn and grain sorghum planting is active where field conditions permit. Sugarcane harvesting is about complete and stands at more than 25,110 acres. Cabbage, carrots, celery, broccoli and lettuce continue to move to market, and squash and okra are being planted. Citrus harvesting continues, with 36 percent of the grapefruit, 12 percent of the early oranges and 93 percent of the late oranges still on trees.

The people of Taiwan go to the movies more often than those of any other country in the world, with an average of 66 attendances per person per year according to the latest data.

Newest Statler Feels At Home

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Jimmy Fortune, the newest member of the Statler Brothers country music quartet, says singing with the group sure beats writing service orders at a car sales lot. Fortune, 26, was working for a automobile dealer in Charlottesville, Va., early this year when he auditioned to join the group. He was selected from among more than two-dozen candidates as a temporary replacement for Lew DeWitt, 43, who is under doctor's orders to rest at home and recover from an intestinal disorder. "I love it," Fortune said in a telephone interview from Staunton, Va., where members of the quartet live. "It was hard to believe it was happening at first, but they've made me feel real good. I feel at home and comfortable about things." He has worked out so well that he will become an official member of the group's road show when DeWitt returns. He'll be used primarily as a musician, playing guitar, mandolin and banjo. "He's been put on the spot but he's handled it so well," says Don Reid, a member of the group. "The fans have totally accepted him. We're having a good time." In fact, he learned the group's songs and arrangements so well that he once had to correct Reid on the words to a tune. There has been an adjustment. After writing service orders during the day, he used to perform at Charlottesville nightclubs in the evening, before 50 or 100 people. Now he sings before as many as 10,000, as loyal Statler Brothers fans pack arenas for their family oriented concerts. "I don't mind the travel, but it is new to me," says Fortune, a tenor like DeWitt. And now he finds himself besieged for autographs — another contrast with his days back in Charlottesville. "I like the idea, but it feels unusual," he admits. Group members, who are about 20 years older than Fortune, say he won the audition based on his singing ability and personality. "He's our kind of people," says Harold Reid, Don Reid's FATHER MURPHY

Father Joe Parker (Richard Bergman, right) loses his faith and quits the priesthood in the "In God's Arms" episode of "Father Murphy" airing on NBC, TUESDAY, MARCH 2. He takes a job in a saloon, where his sympathy for people in trouble such as dancer Nita (Suzanne Adkinson, left) quickly reappears. 'Orange Blossom Special' Is High Voltage Country

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — It is a hand-clapping, foot-stomping, get-up-and-dance, chug-your-beer, goosebump-raising, fast-moving, full-blast, cowboy hat-waving country music classic. Johnny Cash sings it. The Charlie Daniels Band plays it. Dozens of performers have recorded it. Just about everyone enjoys "The Orange Blossom Special," a rousing tune about a train that ran between Miami and New York City. Best known as a fiddle piece, it was played extensively in the John Travolta movie "Urban Cowboy." The song is to a fiddler what "The Entertainer" is to a pianist and "Malaguena" is to a guitarist. If you rosin up the bow, you've got to do a vigorous version of "The Orange Blossom Special." Says Daniels, who's been playing the tune on his fiddle for more than 25 years: "It's an out-and-out classic. It's as much an American classic as anything (someone like) Aaron Copland ever wrote." He says the song was the first he and his band worked up when they put together their road show 10 years ago. "It's a standby for us. I think we are identified with the song as much as any other band that does it. If we leave the stage without doing it, people wonder what happened." "It's designed to be the last song of the night," Daniels says. "You want to leave everyone screamin' for more."

It can also be played on guitar, and Chet Atkins put it on his current album, "Country After All These Years." The song also makes for lively playing on a harmonica, and noted harmonica player Charlie McCoy does the tune on three albums. "It has a great beat," says Atkins, known as "Mr. Guitar." "It's fast, and people, especially live audiences, like fast tunes. It's like 'Rocky Top' and 'Company's Comin'."

"Everyone has a romance with trains — there's nostalgia and all that. The train has been of great interest to people," Atkins says. He says he put it on his album because "I haven't written anything better, so I used a great one instead." The song was written in the mid-1930s by Ervin Rouse, a North Carolina fiddler and banjo player who died in Miami last year at age 64. Rouse and his brothers recorded the song in 1939. The tune took its name from the train because the song was played at the christening of the Seaboard Railroad Station in Miami.

'Victor, Victoria' Movie A Challenge For Andrews

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Eighteen months ago, Julie Andrews kept hearing chuckles from the attic of her Swiss chalet. "What's so funny?" she called to her husband. "I'll tell you later," replied Blake Edwards from his room. Film audiences can now share what was amusing Edwards. It's the new MGM release, "Victor, Victoria," starring Julie Andrews, James Garner and Robert Preston, and the director-writer says he believes the film is his best.

The script presented the actress with an unusual challenge: she had to play a woman masquerading as a man performing as a woman. "The choreographer, Patty Stone, set up the numbers as if I were a guy," she says. "I don't do very much in the way of movement. The chorus guys around me do the moving. In the scenes where I play Victor, I was trying to think as a man thinks, behave as a man behaves."

"One thing amazed me: how any man can survive in a tuxedo? To me it was like being in a vise," the actress says. "Partly that was because my bosom was strapped down. Blake and I considered a line for the ads: 'Try to find what you saw in S.O.B.'"

The reference, of course, to her bosom-baring scene that created a publicity stir last year. An uproar was anticipated from the fans of Mary Poppins and Marjorie Trapp.

...MOUNTED "BLACK WIDOWS" SWARM AROUND THE ESCAPING STATION WAGON... BUT DO NOT FIRE FOR FEAR OF HITTING LEIGHTON OLSON, A PRISONER!

THE DRIVER LUNGES HIS CAR AT THE BLACK WIDOWS HORSES, BUT THE RIDERS AND ANIMALS ARE TOO WAGGLE...

...THE WOMEN SPIRIT THEIR MOUNTS AT THE VEHICLE, THEN JUMP STRAIGHT OVER THE ROOF!

THIS WOULD HAVE BEEN FUN IN A DUKE EDDY!

SILENCE! YANKIE DOG!!

ONE OF THE RIDERS NOW GALLOPS ALONGSIDE AND PULLS HERSELF TO THE ROOF OF THE STATION WAGON...

...SHE LASHES HERSELF TO THE TOP AND SWINGS AT THE WIND-SHIELD WITH THE BUTT OF HER RIFLE!

...THE DRIVER CANNOT SEE THROUGH THE SHATTERED GLASS, SO HE MAKES A DESPERATE DASH INTO A BREAK IN THE CIRCLE OF BLACK WIDOW HORSES.

...BUT HE DOES NOT KNOW THAT THE GAP IN THE MOUNTAIN WALL...

LEADS TO...

WELL ROUNDED MATH TEST!

How quickly can you insert seven missing numbers in the outer circles of the wheel above so that the total in each straight line of five circles is the same — 340?

Clue: After you've inserted the number at the bottom, think in terms of a progressive series of multiples of five proceeding from ten at top clockwise around the wheel.

See if you can work out the answer in your head. Remember, the total sought in each row of five numbers is 340.

CAST PARTY! What can you draw to complete the amusing scene above? To find out, send lines to: 1. 2. 3. etc.
