A loose-leaf notebook, crammed to the last comma with facts, figures and charts, sits on the desk of Deal Smith County Chamber of Commerce Manager Bill Thompson demanding and getting all the reverence of a top secret document.

Two inches thick and encompassed by a pliable black cover, the pondersome volume has earned its compiler the unofficial epithet of The Clairvoyant. The man with the crystal-clear pyglass into the future is a Dallas resident with a professional pedigree as impressive as a fifth generation Rockefeller.

He is Burt C. Blanton, a consulting industrial engineer, business economist, expert accountant and unexelled "futureteller". As-near as can be determined, he takes a computersized supply of figures, oils up an educated slide rule and - for a neat sum of $3,500 - produces projections of just about every conceivable fiat and fashion.

Blanton made just such a seemingly risky roundup for Hereford in 1954 and, in many instances, has achieved what Chamber President Wayne Thomas admiringly depicts as 'near fantastic'' results.

To wit: . THE DALLAS ENGINEER guess-timated that the population "of Hereford and its environs" in 1965 would be 11,747. That, says Thompson, "is as accurate as any figure we can get. We are saying 11,000 within the city limits. Southwestern Public Service says 12,500 in their service area which takes in a little more than the city limits."

IN THE METROPOLITAN area, which Blanton defines as Precincts 1 and 2, he said there should be 16,666 as of the present. "Again this is as accurate as any figure we could come up with based on school enrollment and other things." Thompson said.

. SCHOOL ENROLLMENT,

Odds are, says Chamber Manager Thompmillion, not exactly a paltry figure but not exactly an apson, "something changed there." prentice's guess, either, when you consider that - in 1954 -By and large, however, the industrial survey of the city of Hereford has served its purpose exceedingly well: To chart the town's growth potential throug the year 1980 when Blanto said the population here would be 18,497

So pleased are the chamber directors that they are ordering a new Blanton survey to up-date the projections. If the next "poop" chart is as prescient as the first, the chamber may have Mr. Blanton ohart his way through a couple of centuries on the third go-round.

'Affects Court Usefulness' "Obviously:" asserted the judge, "the damage done by these boys was over $50 which made the offense a felony, which certainly was serious enough to be brought before the juvenile court.

"It does not do any good to FEW DAYS have a juvenile court if the boys and girls who do these misdeeds are not brought to the attention of the court."

Bayne is forecasting revenues for the new fiscal year, which begins May 1, of more than $810,000. This would exceed collections for the present year by about $50,000. The current year, the city manager points out, has been an exceptional revenueproducing year when the only average economic gains in the area are considered.

Expenditures would total $797,609, leaving an estimated operating reserve of $138,373. City finances are expected to show a surplus for 1964-65 of more than $60,000. Tax. collections are up. Water resources are up. In fact, explains Bayne, "all our revenues, except the swimming pool, brought in more than we had expected."

Will Consider Bids

Also on the agenda tomorrow night will be consideration of bids on two separate projects:

(1) The trash incinerator, a three-pronged project requiring bids on a conveyor, building and the actual incinerator, which should - according to Bayne's estimates - cost the city in the neighborhood of $50,000. This is about $20,000 less than was estimated a few weeks ago. (2) A new billing machine for the water and sewer department, an item in the $5,000 class. Bids will be opened at 2 p.m. tomorrow at city hall by Bayne and the city engineer who will

a few feet from his home southwest of Hereford, knows only that most of a tall cottonwood tree and a 25-foot water storage tank were virtually swallowed by this gaping hole sometime late Wednesday or early Thursday. He surmises it is the result of a well cave-in. The tree collapsed on top of a concrete storage house, virtually destroying it. The Hodges, who live on the old prisoner-of-war camp, also were without water for several hours. Hodges said he knew something was amiss early Thursday when the water pipes to the house malfunctioned. In the dark, he came close to stumbling into the hole before realizing what had occurred. "My wife said I came back into the house white as a sheet," he said ways. "They were out a considerable amount of money because they had no storm drainage," he said. The whole of downtown Grand Junction which lies on the western slope of Colorado in a dry, level region - was assessed to meet cost of the project, which was about $40 a front foot. One alteration which surprisan

ed Bayne, he said, was that they eliminated about half their parking spaces when they installed "S"-shaped traffic pattern through the four-block (their blocks are 450 feet long) area. The city officials freely admitted, however, that they were trying to keep motorists off Main St., Bayne added.

Some of the downtown merchants are beginning to have a second thought about that phase, the city manager added. The manager of one department store told Bayne that the enlarged planter and sidewalk area made possible by decreasing the parking spaces is attractive, but he now thinks he would prefer the parking.

Grand Junction retained its parking meters but has adopted a "validation" procedure by token for each $2 purchase made. The meters allow 30 minutes parking for five cents. Other parking areas are avail-

The lots were purchased by a corporation formed for that pur-pose and were then leased to the oity. Proceeds from parking meters on these lots plus the income from the Main St. meters are being used to defray property payments. When the lots are paid for, ownership will revert to the city.

However, this national news coverage has presented only one side of the story. The purpose and intent of this letter is to try and correct some these inaccuracies which have ben reported.

The reports which have come from the various news media have been full of inaccuracies and have been slanted towards giving the impression to the rest of the Nation that the City of Selma and Dallas County, Alabama, is a racially strife-torn City and County. This we emphatically deny. There has been no racial violence in the City of Selma and Dallas County, During the past two weeks there have been only two isolated incidents whereby there was a danger that some citizen could have been injured. The first of these was the assault upon Martin Luther King by a white man who was not a resident of the City of Selma and Dallas County, Alabama. He was an outsider agitator and as a matter of fact, this person had just recently moved to the State of Alabama. The second incident was the unprovoked assault by a Negro woman upon Sheriff James G. Clarke Jr., while he Funeral services were held was enforcing the law of the Guilland Port. Charles and the factor State of Alabama, which he is sworn under the oath of his office to enforce. With only these two isolated incidents we feel that the image which has been created by the National Press is unjustified and unwarranted. There have also been various reports that there was a conflict between the local law en-forcement in the City of Selma Texas in 1924 from Idabell, Okla. and Dallas County, Alabama. LETTER TO EDITOR Sees Editorial As 'Sniping'

Dear Editor:

I am distressed by the editorial, "Why So Many School Changes," which appeared in the Brand on Feb. 7. Along with another most critical editorial which was written several months ago, and the printing of a whole series of negative letters to the editor from one individual it sounds like con-tinual sniping, which I don't think you intend. You know well what difficulties our school system has had. Neither complaints about text book selection nor implications that the school board members are not taking adequate time for their responsibilities will help. I think that both the school board and the administration need more helpful support. Eugene Brink

took a fast trip down Lubbock Friday to attend to some business and noticed that some snow was still present in the ditches. The moisture, we're sure, has helped to keep that part of the country from blow-ing. But we need more - a lot more Many of the bar-pits down in that country were filled with sand, which lends support to the stories that it had been blowing pretty bad to the South.

We noticed too, that many of the farmers along the way were getting their land ready for the spring planting season, which isn't too far ahead. Lots and lots of the farmers were busy applying fertilizer, both anhydrous and dry, while others were deep breaking and a few even had their rows laid out. We presume that these early birds were getting ready to plant potatoes, the first crop to go into the ground.

Naturally, there were a few along the way who hadn't put a plow in the ground. That's probably the type farmer we would make. Much rather go, bing than plowing.

Not that any of the four would ever 'Stretch' the truth. It's just that so many inter-esting things happen when they're together. Fish grow. Numbers multiply, etc.

However, we've been told that that is the prerogative of the fisherman.

By LOIS DeDYNE Wemen's Editer St. Valentine originally had nothing to do with the now well known exchange of greetings of love and affection. In fact, St. Valentine was a bishop or Pape of Rome who, ac-cording to William S. Walsh, author of a book on Curiosities of Pepular Customs, stood steedfast to the faith during the Claudian persecutions, and for that faith was cast into jaith He performed a miracle by curing the keeper's daughter of blindness and as a result was beaten and eventually behead ad

Another Valentine could also claim a share in the day but also had very little to do with comedy or sentiment which is now in evidence on St. Valentine's Day. As to the exact association and origin of our present customs pertaining to association and origin of our present customs pertaining to St. Valentine's Day, we can only guess, however in the year 1721, a dictionary, one of the first in England, explains that February is the month that the birds choose their mates and probably through this we can conclude that the custom of young men and maidens choose Valentines or special friends on this day.

Even through writings of Shakespeare there is evidence of exchange of expressions of affection and ceremonies in the religious vein. The first Valentine in printed form appeared on sheets of gilt-edged letter-paper with the gilt Cupid and a theme of the original thought, roses are red, violets are blue — and the thought of the sender; sweet as sugar.

This still is the significance of Valentine's Day but in a This still is the significance of verse, gifts, flowers and other slightly more elaborate form of verse, gifts, flowers and other

Money Management Plans Step In Right Direction

The Hereford schools have recently established a pilot program on money management in cooperation with the 4-H and fourth grades of the community. Object of the program is to instruct youngsters in this important phase of life through actual experience and records. Secondary to the program remains the fact that it is under careful scrutiny of the state extension service, and may well establish a pattern for all of Texas and the Southwest.

To us the program has a strong, down-

Perils of the Poor

We have hardly begun the War on Poverty and already we have problems on the public housing front.

The government has been building big public housing projects right and left. The plan was to give the poor a nice place to live, with part of the rent bill to be picked up by the good old taxpayer. It seemed like a fine idea to set up folks whose income was below a maximum in a government apartment.

Of course, there was a little trouble from people whose homes or businesses had to be torn down to make way for the government apartments. Some of these re-actionaries actually preferred their neighborhoods the way they were before Washington got interested in their welfare. Others were worried about where they would live between the time their houses were torn down and the concrete utopias were completed. Naturally, this extremist attitude didn't get them anywhere and the projects went up on schedule. The lucky thousands who had been chosen to become guests of the government moved in.

Unfortunately, misfortune struck, Some of the tenants were so unlucky as to get promotions and raises that put them over the maximum allowed income for public housing dwellers. It brought them face to face with a difficult choice: They had to either tell the boss to find somebody else to accept the "raise," or start paying their own rent, like nonpublic-housing dwellers. In the nick of time, a Boston group has come up with a plan to enable those who have been inflicted with excess income to continue to enjoy the benefits of poverty, such as subsidized housing. They will be allowed to remain in the public housing, provided they put a percentage of their money over the maximum in a trust fund for their children's education or put up to 10 per cent of their annual income in a project credit union. Thus, they can accumulate capital without losing their good standing or government help on the rent bill.

to-earth appeal, which has long been lacking in public schools. Starting at the fourth grade level, while debatable, may also be the answer to a complex situation.

If the program proves successful, it will become apparent that several other similiar courses might also be considered, such as "How and where to Borrow Money." "How to Buy a Used Car," "How and Where to Build a Home," and scores of other everyday questions which arise in the mind of the average citizen.

These questions plague most of us throughout life, and the only basis from which we can draw our answers is from general knowledge, past experience and counsel of friends. Consequently, millions of mistakes are made along these lines — and invariably most of them occur with younger married couples.

During the past decade, our way of life has changed so tremendously that a lot of these answers have also undergone radical changes. Too many young people, for instance, are afraid to go into banks. This is chiefly because they do not fully realize the function and primary reason for existence of our banks.

Most of the facilities which exist in America are established as a result of actual need for the services which they perform. Without this basic requirement, they seldom flourish or even continue to exist. Learning to use these facilities in the proper time are probably the most important decisions most of us will ever make. Yet, we have no systematic basic instruction in their adaptability and general use.

The new money management plan seems to be the first step toward a practical answer that we have seen. We doubt if it could ever develop in the home at the particular era, which indicates that the school is an excellent place for it to start. Hereford, we feel, is fortunate to have the test pilot spot, and we predict that the plan will ultimately spread across the nation.

Incidentally, do you happen to know the difference between "cold check" as against a "hot check". Well, I can't say for sure, but a wise and sagely gentlemen explained it to eager me once this way . . . A cold check, muse is one that comes back with the curt insufficient funds notation. A hot check though, is a horse of a different hue, and involves the more serious offense of writing out a check on a bank in which he doesn't even have an account.

Some tenants of private housing, who cannot save because they must pay for their own housing plus that of the pseudo-destitute, may be tempted to suggest that rising income should qualify the raise-plaqued to get out of the projects and start sharing the load.

However, this wouldn't do, say the planners. The tenants who are making more money but enjoying it less must be kept in the projects. Otherwise the projects will get a reputation of being places where only poor people live. Some of us, who thought that was the group for whom the projects were intended, may not understand this logic. Which explains why we're not generals in the war against poverty.

Driving Habits

As Seen By Pros

Regardless of the numerous other developments, including both hot and cold wars, America's greatest killer has for a long time been the automobile. Worse still, remains the fact that no one has been able to do anything constructive about the situation, including "Uncle Sam" with his massive array of statistics.

We were interested recently when The Reader's Digest carried an article with a complete new approach. Instead of theory and estimates, the article was based on observations and opinions of truck drivers and their reactions to average passenger car operators. Interesting, too, is the fact that the professionals do not agree at all with the statisticians when it comes to pinning down the direct cause of most accidents.

All government indications we have been exposed to invariably pointed to speed as the nation's No. 1 killer. The truck drivers pointed their No. 1 driving fault at the motorist who fails to signal properly, and said that failure to turn off the indicators can be just as bad as failing to use them at all. Failure to dim lights ranked second with the professionals, and was cited as being just as important when driving behind a car as when meeting one. "Tailgating," which is a trucker's way of saying you drive too close, was listed as the third most prolific and dangerous driving fault of the American motorist.

There were others, of course, but the truck drivers felt that driving too slow, plus failure of other drivers to pass slow vehicles might well cause more accidents than excessive speed. They had a proposed solution, too, and that was: "Let the police be seen." The modifying effect of a patrol car, they point out, is sensational in genimprovement of driving habits. eral

All in all, it seems to us that we can gain, tremendously from this unofficial survey. The professional driver probably knows far more about highway conditions than any other man alive today, because he is exposed to them week after week and year after year. He must study and understand the average motorist if he is to go unharmed in pursuit of his job - for he must anticipate and overcome the faults of other drivers to stay alive. Consequently, it does seem that our highway patrolmen might well include his "average faults" along with other violations, and hand out tickets for those infractions which are actually rousing so much damage.

If we could, in fact, establish a nationwide band of enforcement through our pro-fessional truck drivers who would turn in license numbers on infractions, we might be well on the way to some relief from the ever-growing slaughter on highways all over the nation.

Early Moisture Should Be Valuable For Crops

50 YEARS AGO

Old timers say they never saw a spring here when the prospects was better for good crops than now. Another good snow and rain fell here this week and the ground is saturated to a depth of several feet and as the term goes here there is an excellent season in the ground.

Often in this section there is danger to the wheat crop from dry winds in March that often blow the wheat out. This year the ground is so moist and little wind so far that wheat is likely to escape damage. Wheat looks exceptionally good and the acreage is large and with the price that wheat now commands farmers are feeling jubilant.

All lovers of a good scrap that failed to be down on Main Street Wednesday missed their main opportunity of the season. One of the young men of the town had been accused of some misconduct. The sheriff invited him to go up to his hotel awhile and think it over, but said the young man had bought a yoke of oxen or had other pressing business and prayed to be excused. The Sheriff and his deputies however, were insistent in inviting their desired quest even to the extent of using force. Then the ball opened and the audience soon gathered. The free for all was on. However, after a few John Sullivan blows were passed the marshall and his aides soon landed their man and order was restored.

Farm Demonstrator W. L. Boys met a number of the boy at the public school auditorium yesterday afternoon and explained to them the plan of forming boys clubs. About fifty boys ranging in age from 10 to 18 years assembled to hear the talk. After explaining the plan and purpose of such an organization and the rules governing the same, Mr. Boys asked all those who were really interested in forming a club to remain and organize. About 20 boys remained and effected an organization by electing officers.

10 YEARS AGO

Poll tax payments for 1955 were more than lagging, according to a survey in the County Tax office Saturday. A total of only 489 poll taxes had been paid. The figure in comparison with 2,501 last year showed less than 20 percent payment, according to Lowell Sharp, assessor-collector.

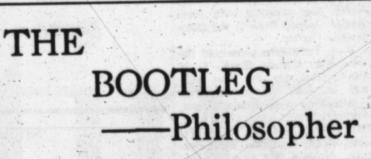

Mr. and Mrs. Sam Nelson and family left Saturday morning for Hale Center where Mr. Nelson has accepte the position of manager of the Hale Center Wheat Growers Association, a 675,000-bushel elevator.

Editor's note: The Bootleg Philosopher on his Bindweed farm continues to fight progress, his letter this week indicates.

A recent visitor to Washington Dear editor:

> According to an article I read last night, a major break-through in the mail delivery system is at hand. The Postmaster General says a new machine finally has been perfected to read the zip code number on an envelope. and in a year's time these machines will be in use in major post offices around the country.

> As I understand it, the machine reads the zip code number on an envelope, sorts the mail accordingly, and does it at the rate of 35,000 letters an hour.

> I have been thinking about this machine, and while don't expect to get to see one for some time, after the Hereford post office might be a little hard-pressed to find a use for a machine that reads . 35,000 letters an hour, unless Washington ordered Postmaster Nolan Grady to let the letters accumulate over a long period of time, and you know it wouldn't do that, still if a machine can read a long string of numbers written in pencil in long-hand there's no limit to what it can do.

> Couldn't it look through the envelope and see what was inside? If so, why haul the letter across the country in the first place? Why not let the machine read it, transmit it to another machine in the town it's addressed to, and drop it in the addresse's mail box.

Understand, I'm in favor of this machine, but man-kind it seems to me is always hunting for a way to whip the results instead of the cause of a problem, which explains why there are a lot more television commercials on how to cure a cold than prevent one. If we're going to flood the mails with more and more letters, certainly we need faster ways to handle the stuff, but a simplier way would be to work on the problem of cutting down on the number of letters, in the first place. Mark Twain said he made it a practice never to answer a letter till after six months, and it'd surprise you haw few then needed answering.

But we might as well get the postal machine going. It's for the people who believe the answer to the parking problem is more parking space, not fewer cars. Yours faithfully,

J. A.
