The 15 active cases of tuberculosis found in Howard County during 1953 puts the Tuberculosis Christmas Seal Sale which starts tomorrow right in the lap of the community.

Of each dollar received in the campaign, 82 cents will be used here in Howard County, 16 cents will stay within the state and the remaining two cents will go to the National Tuberculosis Association to be paid back in local benefits.

This year the local TB Association has paid for approximately 100 chest X-rays for people who could not pay for their own.

Other services of the association include paying the local expenses of the state Health Department mobile X-ray unit, rehabilitation aid to the patient and his family, medical research, health education and the school patch test.

Unlike many fund raising drives, the Christmas Seal Sale is conducted entirely by mail and requires no large campaign organization. It is distinguished by its definite educational program.

Opponents to the plan of selling Christmas seals which she herself had designed called it a "foolish proposition."

Since then the seal sale has become a national tradition. In Texas alone last year an all-time high of more than $750,000 was raised.

Howard County brought in $1,375.08 and this year with files more than doubled it is hoped the amount will be much larger.

The Tuberculosis Association itself is made up of local citizens. This year Culin Grigsby is the local Seal Sale chairman. He is assisted by Mrs. J. P. Knight, mail-sale director; Bryce Winton, large gifts chairman; Dean Bennett, school bangle sales chairman; and Bill Cox publicity chairman.

Assisting Cox in distributing posters and showing motion pictures at the service clubs have been Vance Kimble, Luther Kelley and J. N. Young Jr. The Kiwanis Queens and Girl Scout Troop 18 stuffed envelopes for the mail campaign.

Christmas Seal Purchases Mean Aid To Local TB Cases

The idea began 46 years ago when Emily P. Bissell set out to obtain $300 to save a little hospital where eight charity patients were suffering from tuberculosis.

GETTING IT JUST RIGHT—Culin Grigsby, general chairman of the TB Seal Sale, adjusts a poster in his store window as Bill Cox gives directions. Cox is publicity chairman for the crusade is in charge of the distribution of posters to be put in store windows.

PRESENT FOR TEACHER—It's one of the bangles being sold in the annual campaign for TB funds. David Bennett, son of Mr. and Mrs. L. Dean Bennett, pins a bangle on Mrs. W. D. Duggan, first grade teacher at Central Ward School. Bennett is in charge of bangle sales which will be conducted in the schools next week.

DRESS PARADE

Because Mrs. Sunny Edwards favors the fitted suit, she had a boxy one converted attractively into a fitted one. It's greige worsted with a subtle matching plaid making the lapels. The graceful fringed stole is plaid on one side and solid greige on the other, making it reversible.

Her modified Italian hair cut is complimented by the large pearl loop earrings. She likes dark brown lizard sling pumps with her costume and the longer gloves.

Mrs. Edwards, her husband and children live in a charming ranch style home on the Sterling City Route.

At the Thursday Review Club Mrs. Arnold Marshall was seen in an interesting ice blue wool dress embroidered with cut steel. She chose a black nylon stole with the look of wool for contrast. Her small black felt hat used rhinestones and pearls for trim. At the jeweled neckline of the dress she wore a jet choker. She wore matching earrings and bracelet.

Mrs. Ann LeFever's costume was a two-piece dress of slate blue faille with rhinestone ornaments on the lapels. Her felt, off-the-face hat was in the same color. She chose black accessories.

Mrs. Sherman Cowan was at the Newcomers Bridge Club in a pink gabardine dress with a unique button arrangement. The self-covered buttons had gold trim and were placed in three's on each side of the cut-out neckline. Two kick pleats were set in the skirt, one on each side. Buttons were placed vertically at the top of each pleat.

Mrs. Lucian Jones looked smart at the Spodaxio Fors Federation coffee in a black faille princess style coat-dress, fastened with a black velvet belt. It was set off by her coral felt profile hat with rhinestone trim. Her jewelry was rhinestones.

Women Smokers Careless, T&P Safety Council Told

Women smokers are more careless with cigarettes than men, Mrs. O. T. Arnold told members of the T&P Ladies Safety Council meeting Thursday at the Settles Hotel.

She spoke on "Fire Prevention." She reminded the group that this is the time of year for furnaces and stove connections to be checked.

Americans are conservative, she pointed out. Therefore, they are the "world's leading rubbish collectors," another fire hazard.

Mrs. Albert Smith conducted a safety quiz. Each member was asked to bring toys or other articles for the Salvation Army to the next meeting.

Mrs. H. L. McDermott's team won the attendance contest for the second time. Mrs. Arnold won a prize.

New members were Mrs. F. W. Bette, Mrs. A. J. Faulkner, Mrs. E. F. Kehrer, Mrs. G. H. Briden, Mrs. Elmer Boon and Mrs. A. J. Rome. Mrs. Roy Lassiter, Mrs. Tip Anderson Jr., Mrs. H. E. Carson, Mrs. D. W. Jones and Mrs.

W. B. McKee were visitors. Mrs. Bob Fallon served refreshments. Fifty-six attended.

Suspenders Add Gaiety To Wardrobe

By DOROTHY ROE
The younger set is mad about suspenders these days—and the fancier they are, the better.

High school and college girls are making their own these days, to brighten up the classic sweater and skirt outfits. They may be made of felt, elastic or any desired material. A custom touch may be added by covering buttons of the same material and sewing these on the skirt band where the suspenders are attached.

One simple way to make a pair of festive suspenders is to buy black silk elastic about an inch wide, hem the ends into points and wrap strips of gold cord or sequin strips diagonally around the elastic, tacking in place with needle and thread.

Or you can use strips of felt, with decorations to taste, simply cutting the buttonholes and attaching to buttons on the skirt.

Suspenders can be made of anything in the scrap bag, from denim to velvet, decorated in whatever manner your fancy dictates, and substituted on to a skirt, to enliven a school wardrobe.

Interesting Window

Gothic architecture is very evident in the windows of the old Catholic academy that Mr. and Mrs. J. E. Kelly converted into a home in Stanton. The wall behind Mrs. Kelly is three feet thick adobe.

A View From Here

The Kellys enjoy sitting on one of the large verandas that encircle their big home. They have an excellent view of miles around because the building is on an elevation overlooking Stanton.

Stanton Editor Makes Home Of Old Academy

STANTON (SC) — A frame and adobe building that is almost 60 years old, with walls from two and one-half to three feet thick, is the home of Mr. and Mrs. J. E. Kelly of Stanton.

The structure is one of two buildings that were connected in a U shape and formed the home of the Catholic convent and the Academy of Our Lady of Mercy, established in 1894.

The Kellys bought the remaining two-story building for their home in 1938 after the convent and academy were severely damaged by a tornado and attendance began to decrease.

The home is constructed of adobe and the lumber used in the structure is of highly seasoned material that is so hard carpenters repairing the building had to sharpen the teeth of their saws in order to cut it.

The huge room used by the Kellys for a living room is formerly a classroom containing many windows in the Gothic style. These are found all through the building.

In the living room Mrs. Kelly displays her extensive collection of old glass and antique china. She has an old fashioned china jug warmer used in the "horse and buggy days." A dainty cranberry glass powder dish is included and an interesting hand painted china butter dish.

Upstairs are some cheerful guest bedrooms that were at one time sewing rooms at the old academy. Along the corridor upstairs you can see statues of Mary and the angels and prayer benches that were part of the academy.

According to Mr. Kelly, who is editor of the Stanton Reporter, the groundwork for the ultimate construction of the Kelly home dates back to 1881 when Stanton was called Marionfield (Field of Mary). The town was first settled by Germans and among these first settlers was Father Anastasius Peters of the Carmelite order. By 1885 St. Joseph's Church was completed.

"The effects of a great drought in 1886 were felt for many years and with repeated crop failure settlers became discouraged and moved away. Thereupon a strong anti-Catholic element contrived to change the name of the town from Marionfield to Stanton." It was reported in a historical story written by the Most Rev. Laurence J. FitzSimon, Bishop of Amarillo.

The Catholic school had closed in the early part of the nineties to be re-opened in 1894 with 15 pupils by the Sisters of Mercy, headed by Sister M. Bachmans. She started an enlarged building program from which sprung the two-story structure the Kellys now call home.

Connected to the building at the time the Kellys bought it was St. Joseph's church, built out of adobe brick made in the vicinity. It has been long since replaced by a new brick church.

The parents of one of the original Sisters of Mercy, M. Magdalen Rijowski of Canton, Ohio, were overnight guests of the Kellys once. They came to visit the grave of their daughter in the Catholic cemetery. It was quite likely they spent the night in a house their daughter had called her home.

Their next meeting will be in Mrs. Low's home when they plan to have a taffy pull.

HOLLYWOOD BEAUTY

Rouge, Eyebrows Are Important To Looks

By LYDIA LANE
HOLLYWOOD — Gordon Bau, head make-up man at Warner Bros., is responsible for making even more glamorous such stars as Virginia Mayo, Vivien Leigh, Doris Day and Ruth Roman.
 "What make-up secrets which you practice on the stars can be used to advantage by non-professionals?" I asked Bau as we lunched recently in Warner's Green Room.
 "The Hollywood make-up men have a far reaching influence," he replied, "which can be interestingly traced. The trend in make-up today is toward naturalness and I think this started with technicolor.

popular, but it is also the most artificial.
 "Cream rouge may be more difficult to apply but it is worth practicing with because it gives a much more natural effect. I suggest buying a soft white rubber sponge—a foamy texture—about this size," he made a circle about an inch and a half in diameter. "You can find them in most dime stores."
 "Look in a mirror and make a broad smile and where the part of your cheek comes out in a point is the natural place to place your spot of rouge. Where you blend it depends on the shape of your face.
 "Very few women appreciate the importance of blending their rouge. This can be effectively done by patting with a clean dry sponge until no line of demarcation is in evidence.
 "The most successful color is one which is compatible with your skin tone—and it is worth experimenting with different shades comparing one cheek with the other until you find the shade which is right for you," he continued.
 "And if you powder over rouge," he continued, "use a powder brush to remove the excess if you don't want a matt finish."
 At this point Bau went into a tirade about powder puffs which were not clean. "You'll see a girl who is immaculate in every detail bring out a puff that is so dirty you can't believe your eyes. Every powder puff has a tendency to collect oil from the skin and this gives a spotty effect not to mention the insanitary aspect.
 "Either use cotton puffs which can be thrown away or a sponge which is easily washed and kept clean."
 I reminded Gordon he had disliked what the average woman did with her eyebrows.
 "I don't understand what is in a woman's mind when she draws a straight hard line above her eyes," Mr. Bau looked at me questioning.
 "You'd think common sense would tell her that it is artificial. If I have to make any one look hard for a part the first thing I do is to put a straight line for an eyebrow.
 "You can't ever go wrong letting nature be your guide. Choose an eyebrow pencil which is sufficiently soft to make short strokes which resemble hairs. And choose a color which blends with your eyes and hair.
 "Today heavier eyebrows are in vogue and some are liable to overdo this. When eyebrows are too exaggerated the whole face is thrown out of balance," he added.
 Bau talked about facial types, mentioning Virginia Mayo as the oval, Doris Day on the round side, Vivien Leigh a diamond, and Ruth Roman as square. "I think it is just a matter of education," he told me, "before every woman will learn her face type and use make-up to compensate for what nature has neglected."

FACIAL TYPES

Gordon Bau has prepared a chart of facial types—including detailed instructions on how to find out which type you are—which shows where rouge and make-up should be applied and what compensations a woman can make to become more attractive. The leaflet is now available for all readers, and is illustrated with easy-to-follow drawings and detailed make-up information. Get your copy of this vital leaflet called "Make Yourself More Attractive Through Correct Use of Make-up" by sending 5 cents AND a self-addressed, stamped envelope to Lydia Lane, Hollywood Beauty in care of The Big Spring Herald. Ask for leaflet M-44.

With color films it is necessary to use a base which is very light in comparison to the heavy corrective make-up we used for black and white.

"Frequently, in an effort to make a player more glamorous, the make-up man destroyed the individuality of that particular face. And all of us were surprised how much better many of the stars photographed when a more subtle make-up was used.
 "As the Hollywood stars used less make-up so the trend spread over the country away from a heavy cake foundation to a sheer film which showed skin tones.
 "I don't feel," Bau continued, "that a girl needs a make-up base unless she has a definite reason for covering her complexion. The nearer your skin tone, the more natural the effect. So be careful not to wear your foundation too light or too dark."

I asked Gordon what he considered the most glaring errors in make-up which the average woman made.
 "Rouge and eyebrows. It is mostly the older group which uses too much rouge in the wrong place. I think they must be trying to recapture the bloom of youth by putting roses in their cheeks. But as a woman matures she loses her color in her skin and hair so it is out of harmony to have bright red on a faded cheek."
 I had obviously touched on a subject which he had thought a great deal about.
 "There is a technique to using eye effectively you must have the right kind in the right spot. I know powdered rouge is the most girl and the more you enumerate her faults and reasons why she is not the girl in his block. Often interested in her he will become. Believe it or disbelieve it as you will, but it's true.

 It may be hard to do, but this situation calls for all the wisdom and tact you can muster. When he announces he has been to see your seeming rival, accept it casually. Reply, "Really?" or "That so?" If he wants to tell you about it, let him get it out of his system. Reign your tongue tightly. Say nothing catty about this girl. If you can possibly bring yourself to it, pay her a rather nice compliment without gushing.
 Forbidden fruit is always sweetest. When your steady knows he is free to visit her, the desire to go will be lessened. When you say something nice about her he will no longer feel the need to defend her or search out her good points in order to argue with you.
 Through all his "wandering phase" remain sweet, thoughtful, and fun to be with. He'll come back to you!

Facial Types Of Beauty

According to Gordon Bau, make-up expert for Warner Bros., faces fall into a pattern. Top, left, Ruth Roman has a square face, while right, Virginia Mayo is an oval. Bottom, Vivien Leigh, left, is the diamond type and on the right, Doris Day is the round. Bau feels that every woman can become more attractive if she learns her facial type and the technique of make-up.

Carolyn Gibson Weds Carlton Ray Virden

The bride is the daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Norman T. Gibson of Robstown and the bridegroom the son of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Ray Virden of Robstown. The couple will live in Big Spring following a short wedding trip.

The Rev. Jordan Grooms, pastor of the First Methodist Church, read the double ring ceremony at 5:30 p.m. Candelabra entwined with greenery and arrangements of autumn flowers decorated the church.

Mrs. Champ Rainwater, organist, played "Liebestraum," Nevin's "Love Song" and the Zeta Tau Alpha Sweetheart Song. She accompanied Joyce Howard, who sang "I Love You Truly," "Because" and "The Lord's Prayer."

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a waist-length Victorian gown of antique ivory satin with rose point lace. The high neckline was encrusted with seed pearls and mother of pearl sequins. The bodice was styled with long sleeves and fastened with tiny, self-covered buttons.

Oh, Where Is Her Wandering Boy?

Dear Beverly Brandow:
 My steady has two boy friends who like a girl in his block. Often these two boys come by for my steady and the three of them go to visit this girl.

If a boy comes to see me, my steady gets mad and says I'm doing wrong. Don't you think he should stay away from this girl's house as long as he is going steady with me?

That depends on just what the situation is. He most certainly should not date this other girl, nor should he visit her alone, but if she is just a neighbor girl whom he has grown up with and looks upon as a playmate and friend, and if the boys he visits her with are the ones who are interested in her, I can see no harm in his tagging along.

Beware your jealousy! The greedy monster has severed more steadies than "other women" ever did. Think of the psychology of your problem. The more you berate your steady for visiting this girl and the more you enumerate her faults and reasons why she is not the girl in his block. Often interested in her he will become. Believe it or disbelieve it as you will, but it's true.

 It may be hard to do, but this situation calls for all the wisdom and tact you can muster. When he announces he has been to see your seeming rival, accept it casually. Reply, "Really?" or "That so?" Foster Son Is 'Capable Fellow'

"... I was one of the best in the 75 meter dash and broad jump and in ball throwing I got the first prize. You see, dear Foster Parent, that you have a very capable fellow before you," writes young Rudolf Grinninger, 13, in his recent letter to his foster parents, the Webb Officers' Wives Club. Rudolf and his little sister, Anna, 9, are German children who were adopted several months ago by the club and they write regularly in careful German script about their activities at school and home.

"In order not to be lazy," little Anna writes, "I go gleaming. My mother helps a farmer with his work when she has some time to spare." Rudolf, too, "goes every day to work for a farmer, which I can do easily." For his help he gets some threshed wheat which he carries to the mill right away; "then we have good cake." The youngster has a great interest in sports and asks whether "you in Texas go in for plenty of sports too, for I intend to go to America, too, since we poor people have no homes here in Germany yet." Rudolf and his family live in what he calls "a bad barracks."

"Of the increase of his government and peace there shall be no end." — Isaiah 9:7. Barbarous tribes are constantly at war. The western hemisphere had fewer people than a modern city of the third class when Columbus landed. Vast areas were without population, and far ruled everywhere. There is still room for improvement, and there will be.

City's Financial Problem Is But Forerunner Of Major Decisions

On Monday evening the City Commission is to confer with representatives of a bonding concern in search of counsel about financing capital outlay. The immediate problem is that of raising as much possible toward the cost of opening Fourth Street through the city as a co-route for U. S. 80. Considering the urgency of the matter, the doctor has not been called any too soon. Once a prescription is agreed upon, not a moment should be lost in seeing if the city will take the financial medicine. It is not altogether inadvisable that methods of temporary financing be explored to the fullest as a stop-gap until the slow bond machinery can grind out its yield. Getting money from bonds within 60 days of an election call is not impossible, but it is improbable. The State Highway Department has fixed January as the time for doing something on the Fourth Street project, and the city has no surplus upon which to play. As important and pressing as this is, let us turn to a different aspect of it. In this situation we can see the forerunner of a new wave of financial decisions which will face the community in the months ahead. Having "caught up" after the war, city and schools have paused to catch their breath and to consolidate gains. That interval, a together natural and necessary, has been accompanied by sustained growth even in the face of adverse conditions. Now, instead of leveling off or receding, the spiral shows signs of turning up again to the accompaniment of demands for more educational and municipal construction and services. Both the school and city administrations have exercised sound management of finances available to them. In the interim to ascertain which way trends were pointing, they have carried on substantial capital improvements out of current revenues despite rising costs of regular services. The schools must move before long toward planning and asking for more classrooms—enough to come approximately abreast of the needs. To do away with half day sessions now, and conservatively those to be added next season, will require a dozen and a half classrooms. Two schools of temporary construction are in urgent need of replacement and almost must be included in any projected building program. Pressures upon the city may be expected to mount, for after all there is a limit to the number of financial rabbits that can be pulled out of a hat without resort to long-term issues. This is something for you to be thinking about, for you have not only to decide the course of your community and its affairs but also to pay the price of providing or of doing without.

Washington Calling — Marquis Childs

Eisenhower Casts Some Doubt On Whole Brownell Operation

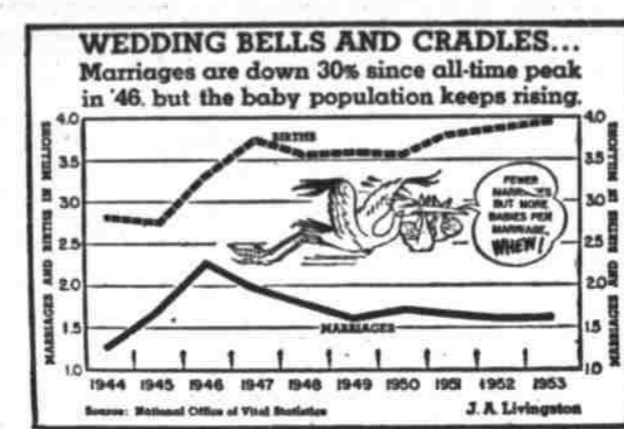

WASHINGTON — The Presidential press conference has been compared to the question hour in the House of Commons when members of the opposition can ask members of the government about any aspect of government policy. Usually the press conference falls far short because newspapermen do not have the authority under the circumstances to push their inquiries beyond a certain limit. But President Eisenhower's press conference which was taken up almost entirely with the issue of Attorney General Herbert Brownell Jr., versus Harry S. Truman was an exception. With a determination that the parliamentary opposition might have envied the reporters persisted in trying to get answers to all the unanswered questions in this strange case. They were so persistent that finally the President with a grim expression announced he would refuse to reply to any more inquiries on the subject. He did succeed, however, in casting further doubt on the whole Brownell operation. In a speech before a luncheon club in Chicago the Attorney General said that former President Truman appointed Harry Dexter White to an important position after he had been informed that White was a Russian spy. He said he had the approval of President Eisenhower before he made his speech. Yet Eisenhower told reporters at his conference it was inconceivable that Truman could have known of White's appointment. He said he had informed his Attorney General, after hearing there was information in the files on subversion in government, that he would have to let his own conscience guide him about the use to be made of that information. It was obvious, however, that the President had not understood the far-reaching implications of the disclosure Brownell proposed to make. The questions were pressed particularly on the point of whether the President believed it was correct procedure to release FBI information on charges considered by a grand jury insufficient to bring an indictment. Here, of course, he was on ground that he quite frankly admitted was unfamiliar. So many questions remain unanswered and judging by the approach in Congress there is little likelihood of an objective look at all the facts in the case. President Eisenhower went a long way toward repudiating Brownell but he went further in rejecting the action of chairman Harold Velde in subpoenaing Truman to appear before the House Un-American Activities Committee. This was a hasty and reckless act taken apparently without prior consultation with the Democratic members of the committee or even with the Republicans. Whether the Brownell bombshell influenced the outcome of the election in California's 24th Congressional District is open to debate. The substantial Republican victory of Ghenard P. Lipscomb allows the Republican National Committee to breathe more easily. After the defeats in New Jersey and in the mayoralty races in New York City and Buffalo the GOP strategists were alarmed. The report here is that they threw everything into the California race in the last six or seven days including large resources of money. Lipscomb, who had the overwhelming support of almost every medium of communication in the area, indicted the White-Truman charges at the last minute. And some observers close to the campaign believe this greatly helped the Republican cause. So Brownell can take a bow in the political spotlight. He has said moreover that he will go into the FBI files for more material in employing the same tactics in coming months. But one of the questions on which President Eisenhower was pressed had to do with the reaction to the Brownell-White-Truman explosion abroad and on American foreign policy. The divisiveness of the Brownell tactic should be a matter for serious consideration. In order to lead the free world, which America must do if the West is to be saved from Communist totalitarianism, this country must move from strength and confidence. Political maturity and sobriety are prime requisites in the race of the widespread doubt and uncertainty already existing and deliberately fomented by anti-American forces. The kind of campaign Brownell has launched has exactly the opposite effect. We tend to look down on supposedly less advanced countries that indulge in the politics of violence. Yet consider how it appears to the rest of the world when a former President is hauled before a hostile Congressional committee by a subpoena! In Canada, President Eisenhower could learn how subversion and espionage were handled without sensation and without politics. The Royal Commission that investigated Canada's spy case set an example of sober conduct. It sometimes seems Washington is determined to set the opposite example.

Business Outlook — J. A. Livingston

Two girls, who hadn't seen one another for several years, met unexpectedly. "Why, Mary Stevens! How are you? It's wonderful bumping into you like this." "Well, Agnes! And you? You're looking fine. But my name's not Stevens any more. I'm married." "Married! How long?" "Two years." "I suppose you'll be wanting a house of your own." "Have a house." "Then a car." "Have a car." "Well, you have everything. I suppose you'll be wanting a baby next." "Oh! I have a baby." "But we're just starting. Before we get through, we'll need a bigger house." That's the business outlook. Babies—more and more of them—are all that's left of the postwar boom (see chart). The boom in defense has pretty much petered out. Schedules call for a decline next year. Home-building has been falling off. Business plans for expenditures on new plant and equipment are not rising as rapidly as in 1950 and 1951 and are expected to decline. And consumers are not increasing their debt. People don't rush heading into installment purchases. The tough going that automobile dealers have affirms that. Ditto the TV price reductions by Westinghouse and others and the mark-downs in carpeting. Finally, the farmer said good-bye to his postwar boom as long ago as 1948. Agricultural prices have slipped so badly and crop carryovers are so large that once again the nation has a "farm problem." A big crop of babies goes a long way economically. Births this year will approximate 4 million, as against 3,900,000 in 1948. The birth rate has advanced from 17 per 1,000 population during the depression to 25 per thousand today. There's a new social trend—toward larger families. More women are having second, third, and fourth babies than in the 'twenties and 'thirties. This baby boom has created a demand for strained foods, layettes, toys, extra space in homes. In some newly-built communities, contractors are doing a big "add-a-room business." As the infants grow older, the nation needs more schools and teachers. So babies are a powerful force for economic expansion: "Nothing's too good for the kids." But the kids can't do it all. At the moment, the nation is caught in the backwash of the 1930-33 depression. The baby crop then was small. As a result, the marriage crop today—the persons of marriageable age—is likewise small. This year, we'll have about 1,600,000 "I do's." That's 10 for every thousand persons. But in 1946, when the boys came home from Germany and Japan, we had 2,290,000 marriages, or 18 per thousand. The marriage plateau, around 1,500,000 per year, is likely to persist through the 'fifties. (Not till 1940 did the birth rate really shoot up.) In the interim, the country could use a dynamic new economic force to re-stimulate demand for consumer durable goods. That's why 1954 is labeled the "Year of the Big Sell." The economy—steel capacity, auto output, textile plants, and so on—is now fairly well adjusted to current rates of consumer requirements. The buyer's at bat, the seller has got to pitch—woo. Meanwhile, the Eisenhower administration must find a solution to the farm problem, which is singularly like the farm problem of the 'twenties and 'thirties. The war boomed production. The government supported prices. Farmers, pleased by high prices, produced plenty. Prices sagged. And the government held the bag. Right now, the government owns half a year's wheat crop; and eighth of a year's cotton crop; a quarter of a year's tobacco crop; a fifth of a year's corn crop; and a fifth of a year's butter production. Some new way will have to be found to stop the flood. Quotas on acreage don't seem to cut production. Farmers use their best land, give it the fertilizer treatment, output per acre rises, and the government usually winds up with more wheat, corn and other crops in storage than ever before. As long as the farmer's cost of production is below the crop support price, he'll produce as much as he can. And the consumer, under the present support system, gets stuck. He pays the taxes which support the prices he has to pay for food! That economic arithmetic can't be beat—not even by the year-by-year increase in the baby crop. Mary Stevens and other modern mothers buy more food and clothes for their larger families. But domestic consumption of agricultural products doesn't increase rapidly. And export markets are dwindling! First, because U. S. economic aid is declining; second, because agricultural output of foreign countries has increased since the war. The American farm problem is still to get supply to demand.

Modern Fireplace Is For Beauty; 'Twasn't So In The Old Days

The opinions contained in this and other articles in this column are solely those of the writers who sign them. They are not to be interpreted as necessarily reflecting the opinions of The Herald—Editor's Note.

A certain new house (you know whose) has a fireplace. This is one of the points of pride, as well as the items of expense. So is it worth it? There are pro-fireplace and anti-fireplace, you know. The point is that if something happens to all other forms of providing warmth, we have the trusty fireplace. Which brings me around to full circle, a circle which started when I was born. For, in days of fairly long ago, the fireplaces were the only things in our house—outside of the wood stove in the kitchen—that provided heat. Best I can remember is that they weren't such a point of pride then, but a necessity, and along with that, a darn nuisance. Somebody in the family, the evening before, had to go out and split some kindling, and get in some firewood, or coal, as the case might be. In our circumstance it was coal, and the reason I am slightly dwarfish today is because I was weighted down with coal scuttles as a lad in his formative days. And just because a boy got busy playing in the afternoons, it seemed a shame to send him out to the coal bin in the dark of night to get in the next morning's supply, just to teach him to remember. There were a lot of boogers in our coal bin, after dark. But after the fuel was safely indoors, there came the unweelcome chore of getting up at dismal hours in the morning, shoveling out the ashes of the night before, laying another fire and trying to get the thing to touch off with a big blaze that would cut the chill in a hurry. You think winters aren't warmer now? You're crazy. They couldn't be as cold as they used to be when you were huddled up on a cold hearth trying to get a fireplace blaze to going. Any morning, I betcha, the temperature was down to about eight. Well, after the fire did get going, the more fortunate members of the family came dashing in from the frigid bedrooms to dress in front of the fireplace. This caused some confusion in the morning hours, but it generally got straightened out by the time breakfast was ready. And when night came again, the fireplace of necessity had to be the center of the household. You talk about the family circle. There had to be one. Because if anybody got back out of the ten foot radius he would find himself subject to pneumonia. Came time, after awhile, for the kids to go to bed; and it was a four-mile climb up those steps into the Arctic atmosphere of the attic bedroom. About the only way a fellow could brave the journey was to back up the fireplace and stand there just as long as he could, letting the heat pour into the trap door of his union suit. When as much warmth as possible was thus trapped, the thing to do was run like mad up the stairs and plop into the featherbed. The fireplace served its purpose, all right, but you can bet that there was a lot of rejoicing around off household when we reached that advanced stage that permitted the purchase of a base-burner on one of those big fancy things with ising-glass doors. Ah, there was luxury! The base-burner later gave way to gas, and keeping the house warm seems to be no longer much of a problem. Things have gotten so push-buttonish for us that we have nearly forgotten the fireplace. Forgotten it as a necessary and useful adjunct to the home, that is. We've turned the circle and gotten another one, now. But it's for beauty—I hope. —BOB WHIPKEY

Bible Words to Live by

2 CORINTHIANS 5:19— "God was in Christ reconciling the world to himself..." (RSV) These powerful and penetrating words of St. Paul have proved spiritually satisfying to people in every situation. Our condition is one of lossness. We have been separated from our Creator and from each other. As we stand alone we tremble with fear because we can do nothing to help ourselves. There is an evil power over us which incites us to every kind of division. When we examine ourselves we find in us nothing but sin and death and meaninglessness. But into this turbulence comes a quiet word, a throbbing word, which causes us to catch our breath. Now in our stillness we hear God calling us back to himself. No more need we be frustrated by our sense of guilt—God has given us freely the justification we need to return to his fellowship. No more need we fear the finality of death—God has broken death's bands and eternal life is our destiny. No more need we wander like a rudderless ship on an endless sea—God has revealed in Christ that the meaning of life is love. The Rev. Robert Paul Roth, Ph. D. Lutheran Southern Seminary Columbia, S. Uncle Ray's Corner

Queen Is Opposed By John Knox

If Mary, Queen of Scots, had been at peace in her own life, she might have put a quick end to the power of John Knox, the Protestant leader. As it was, the pretty queen had many problems and sorrows. She was the young widow of a French king, and there was much debate about whom she should accept as her second husband. A match might have been made with a prince of Italy, Spain or some other Catholic country, but the Protestants in Scotland were against such a marriage. Queen Elizabeth I had come to the throne of England and she, also, was a stumbling block to the possible marriage plans of Mary. The Scottish queen was wooed by nobles of her own country, and one of them, Lord Darnley, became her husband. After his murder, the queen was married to Lord Bothwell, another Scottish nobleman. Meanwhile, John Knox went on with his preaching. He spoke angry words about the queen and her marriages, and stirred the people against her. His words, as well as the actions of the queen, led to armed strife. Mary at length fled to England. Knox turned out to be more than a Protestant religious leader. He also became a champion of the poor. In fiery sermons, he told his listeners, "Remember your poor brethren, the laborers and handworkers of the ground." An interesting sidelight on the life of Knox is the fact that he made an enemy of Queen Elizabeth I without meaning to do so. Like Knox, Elizabeth was a Protestant, but she was angered by certain things which he had written before she became queen. John Knox had said that it was "monstrous" for women to run the government of a country. He was thinking of Queen Mary Tudor of England and Mary, Queen of Scots, but Queen Elizabeth felt that his words were a reflection on her rule of the English people.

White Dickey Gives Young, Fresh, Teen-Ager Look

The "little woman" is the object of the affections of some of our best designers and among these is Varden Petite, a house devoted to creating up-to-the-minute clothes for our smaller framed, shorter-waisted sisters.

Today's design is a combination of many important fashion points. The dickey, especially if made of a white material, is typical of what Dior says fashion needs: a young, fresh, teen-ager look.

The artful pleating and darts at the front neckline does a trick of making waists look smaller. Varden originally used black crepe with a red and white checked dickey and red braid, but made in black velvet with a white satin or fallie dickey, it becomes a perfect winter dress-up dress. For day-in day-out wear, it is very smart in tweed with white linen.

Size 10, bust 25, waist 25 1/4, hips 35; size 12, bust 26, waist 26 1/2.

Elks Contribute Leather

Patients at the Veterans Administration Hospital Friday received a supply of leather for occupational therapy from the Big Spring Elks Lodge. The local Elks acquired the leather from the National Elks Service Commission which carries on a continuous service program at VA hospitals throughout the country. The leather was presented to Elizabeth Sims, chief of occupational therapy by Oliver Cofer, in charge of service work for the Big Spring Elks lodge. Several lodge members and hospital patients were on hand at the presentation.

Local Group To Attend Midland Demo Session

MIDLAND — Big Spring is expected to send a large delegation to Midland Dec. 4 for the Democratic party's fund-raising dinner featuring an address by Senator Thomas C. Hennings Jr. of Missouri.

Red Petty of Midland, County Democratic chairman, was notified Saturday by Stephen A. Mitchell, national party chairman. That Hennings will fly to Midland for the area event.

Petty said Frank Hardesty and others in Big Spring will push the sale of tickets, costing $10 each.

More than 300 Democrats from at least eight West Texas cities are expected to attend the dinner at 8 p.m. in Hotel Scharbauer. Petty expects representation from Big Spring, Odessa, Midland, Monahans, Crane, Pecos, Andrews, Stanton and San Angelo.

Senator Hennings has just completed a tour of Midwestern states where he studied drought conditions. He is expected to discuss agricultural and other problems on the national scene.

Hennings was elected to the Senate in 1950. He is secretary of the Democratic Senate Conference, policy-making group. Hennings served in the House before being elected to the Senate. He is a former circuit judge and a graduate of Cornell and Washington Universities. Proceeds of the Midland dinner will go to National Democratic headquarters, Petty said.

American Wool Mills Seek Higher Tariff

BOSTON, Nov. 14 (AP)—American wool textile mills want a tariff which will permit them to compete on equal terms with foreign mills in the domestic market, the National Assn. of Woolen and Worsted Overseers was told today. Gordon Graham of New York, publicity advisor of N. A. W. M., attacking free trade advocates, said the domestic mills urged a wool cloth tariff which would "more realistically equalize the wage gap" between American and foreign mills "so that everyone is operating under the same set of ground rules."

AA Will Host District Meet

Alcoholics Anonymous will host a district gathering here today at 2:30 p.m. and anyone interested in the drinking problem is invited to attend.

The session will be held in the AA cottage, which is located on a knoll about two blocks east of State Street at the Ridgeles intersection. The home is a block or more removed from nearest houses and therefore is easily located.

Program for the meeting will include a talk by Miss Anonymous, who will tell of how the AA program helped her to come to grips with a force that was ruining her life. There also will be an address by Al B., a well known AA from Dallas.

Visitors are expected here from Midland, Odessa, Colorado City, Snyder, Lamesa, San Angelo and intervening towns. Anyone who has a drinking problem, personally or with some member of the family or friends, is especially invited to come to the meeting, members said. Mayor G. W. Dabney will speak briefly, and there will be talks by other local people.

NEW DELHI, India, Nov. 14 (AP)—B. R. Sen, Indian ambassador to Yugoslavia, will run for director general of the United Nations Food and Agricultural Organization in an election during FAO's annual general conference opening in Rome Nov. 23.

Borden FFA Boys Win In Contest

GAIL (Sp) — Future Farmers from the Borden High School Chapter were among the winners at Seminole in a recent radio broadcasting contest. Of the eight teams which make up the Mesa District, of which Gail is a part, Lamesa took first place, Gail second, while Seminole was third and Loop was fourth.

The subject the Gail boys chose was one on publicity and they presented a skit on it for their program.

Members of the Gail team were Donald Reddell, Borden Reeder, Lonnie Doyle, E. L. Franklin and Kenneth Williams. Winners of these district contests will go to Big Spring on Dec. 5 for the Area contests and then the Area contest winners will go on to the state contests in Huntsville on Dec. 12.

Operation Of Public Schools Is Big Business In Howard County

Educating the youth of Howard County is big business and it takes a lot of money to pay the bills.

One of the biggest payrolls of the county is the payroll of the schools. As provided in school budgets for this year, it amounts to $1,041,781. Teachers are not the only persons employed by school districts; others include administrators, clerical help, a maintenance staff, cafeteria personnel and bus drivers.

Biggest payroll is, naturally enough, in the Big Spring Independent School District. It amounts to $743,145. But other schools have substantial payrolls, too. The common school districts have a payroll of $70,903. Forsan has a payroll of $69,262 and Coahoma has a payroll of $115,643. The Knott school district has a payroll of $42,328.

The bill for instructional services comes of $936,595, including teacher's salaries and other classroom instruction costs. Again that total is divided among the county's four independent school districts and county schools.

Total expenditures for running the county's school systems comes to $1,498,637. Another big item in addition to salaries in making up the school budget is debt service. School districts go into debt to build school buildings. Bonds are issued and each year the school district must provide funds both to pay interest on the bonds and to retire the principal. Budgeted for the current school year in Howard County school systems for this item is a total of $148,796.

Over half of this total comes from the budget of the county's largest school system. The Big Spring school budget sets aside $88,881 for debt service. Coahoma has set aside $16,170 for this purpose and Forsan has allotted $18,712.50. Knott has provided $6,312 and the common school districts have provided $18,711.

Where does the money come from? Mostly from the state and from local district's own taxes. The federal government provides a small additional amount.

The cost of education in Howard County is divided almost half

15 Million Canadians

OTTAWA, Nov. 14 (AP)—Canada's population may hit 15 million before the end of this year, according to official estimates. The bureau of statistics said the population increased from 14,781,000 to 14,893,000 during the three months ending Sept. 1.

and half between the state of Texas and the local school districts' taxes. The local revenues have the edge $733,131 to $704,265.

Big Spring schools received $387,500 from the local taxpayers and $556,000 from the state. The Forsan schools receive $92,868 from local taxpayers and $14,520 from the state. The Coahoma school district raises $67,200 locally and receives $61,744 from the state. The Knott schools receive about $30,000 in local taxes and receive $33,773 from the state. The county schools raise $135,555 in local taxes and receive $38,228 from the state.

State aid is divided into two types, per capita and foundation. Per capita aid is doled out to each school without regard to the relative poverty or wealth of the district. The foundation program, set by the Gilmer-Aiken bill, tries to do some equalizing between school districts. School districts receive foundation aid in proportion to their place on this index.

Some school districts receive no aid from the foundation program at all. In this county that includes the Forsan district and several of the common school districts. The state figures that districts with a lot of oil production and relatively light enrollments need very limited help from the state.

Plant Making Shells, But They Won't Kill

FORT WORTH, Nov. 14 (AP)—A closely guarded factory on the outskirts of Fort Worth makes artillery shells designed so they won't kill anybody. That's the way the Army and Marine Corps want them. The output of the Monarch Manufacturing Co., kept secret for three years, was disclosed today. The plant's paper artillery shells, hand grenades and booby traps are simulators, meaning they are mostly sound and hardly any fury. The Army and Marine Corps use simulators to get troops used to the noise and smoke of battle without its lethal qualities. The Monarch plant is the only one of its kind in the United States. It has 51 separate buildings scattered over a 61-acre site. Few passersby realize what the plant is. Monarch used to manufacture fireworks. In 1950, Army ordnance engineers figured out a way to make simulated ammunition, and Monarch was low bidder for the contract.

The company nearly went broke doing the job, and in 1951 it was reorganized with George Jagers as president. Since then, Jagers said, the company has paid off its debts and has produced more than two million dollars worth of simulators, about four million pieces of ammunition. Until simulators went into production, it was difficult to give raw troops combat indoctrination without using live ammunition, and there were always obvious hazards in this method. Jagers said the number of lives saved by use of simulators can't be estimated but is believed to be sizable. He said the saving to taxpayers may run as high as $20 million dollars. Each time a simulator is fired, Jagers said, the government saves $1 to $50 by not having used live ammo, and the real shell is still available for battle. Federal Squabble WASHINGTON (AP)—The State Department has architects studying the cost of fixing up Winfield House, a plush London mansion acquired from dime store heiress Barbara Hutton, as a home for the U.S. ambassador. The Air Force, which has been using the 40-room house as an officers club, is vigorously resisting the whole idea.

FEAR BUILDS UP

Associates Decline To Discuss White

By CHARLES MERCER
NEW YORK, Nov. 14 (AP)—Who was Harry Dexter White? The moving spotlight catches a President and a former President of the United States. It lights on Cabinet members past and present, on congressmen and businessmen. But the central figure of today's great political drama is a ghost off in the wings—the ghost of the man named White, dead five years. This is his story. A mystery story. When FBI reports that White was linked to communism became a political issue the other day, few friends had a good word to say for him publicly. Fear is the dominant reason. They dread guilt by association. So, in more than one respect, the story of White is a drama of our time. When alive, White glossed over many details of his early life. In a "Who's Who" published before the former Soviet agents Whitaker Chambers and Elizabeth Bentley leveled their charges against him, White approved his autobiography thus: "Economist; Ph. D., Harvard, 1930; became director of monetary research U. S. Department of the Treasury, 1940; special assistant to the secretary of the Treasury, 1942; assistant to the secretary, 1943-45; now assistant secretary; member Board of Trustees Export-Import Bank of Washington since 1941; director U.S. Commercial Co.; member Executive Committee on Economic Foreign Policy; member Liberated Areas Committee." Then his home and office address.

That is all. There is no mention of his parents or the date of his birth, of the fact he was married and had two daughters, of his World War I record, of the fact he taught at Harvard and Lawrence College, Appleton, Wis. Unimportant? You also find he put little of this earlier data into the official thumbnail autobiographies he wrote as he rose in government. Why? White always said he was born Oct. 29, 1892, in Boston. Boston City Hall records show that the only Harry White born there from 1892 to 1900 was on Oct. 9, 1892. His parents were named as Isaac and Sarah of 57 Lowell St., a tenement area. Their birthplace was listed as Russia. School records show that Harry White attended elementary and high school in Everett, an industrial suburb of Boston. His middle name, Dexter, appears for the first time after he entered high school. In September 1911, he entered the University of Massachusetts at Amherst, then called Massachusetts Agricultural College. On a card there he listed under parents the name of N. J. White, 228 Hanover St., Boston. He spent one year at the university. His record was good but not brilliant—an 80.8 average.

Then no record can be found of him for five years. In Washington years later, he reported having wide business experience. Perhaps he was in business during those years. Anyone who knows about that period of his life will not talk to a reporter. The next public record of Harry Dexter White is April 12, 1917, when he enlisted in the U.S. Army six days after the United States declared war on Germany. He was discharged in February 1919 as a first lieutenant of infantry. Where did he serve? The record does not show. No one will say.

City Is Invited To Have A 'Day' At Stock Show

Big Spring has been extended an invitation by President-Manager W. R. Watt to have a special day at the Southwestern Exposition and Fat Stock Show. Dates of the Fort Worth show are Jan. 29 through Feb. 7. The letter received by the Chamber of Commerce states: "For 27 years now, the Southwestern Exposition and Fat Stock Show has been serving the livestock industry of this great section. The show has grown steadily through the years due to the support it has received from many individuals and cities. We are already putting into motion the plans for the 1954 show, and it is a pleasure to extend an invitation to your city to have a special day, with your Cowgirl Sweetheart being introduced to the thousands at the rodeo, your band and other entertainers giving a program on the stage and your citizens with hatbands or ribbons publicizing your city and some civic enterprise, such as your own rodeo. Your community's participation and help in the Southwestern Exposition and Fat Stock Show will be publicized before and during your visit, and you will all have a good time while attending the show. We will be looking for your acceptance soon."

Former Resident Is Pictured In Life

Vegetable Yield Is Expected To Jump

AUSTIN, Nov. 14 (AP)—Production of fall fresh vegetables in Texas this year is expected to exceed the 1949-51 average by 67 per cent, the U.S. Department of Agriculture said today. The total will still be 5 per cent under last year's. Production of winter beets and spinach is indicated as above both last year and the average. Winter crop lettuce production is estimated at 27 per cent above last year.

The Old Gives Way To The New

Extensive rebuilding work is going on space at the Ritz Theatre, so that this No. 1 showhouse in Big Spring will be equipped for presentation of the new wide-screen and Cinemascope pictures, with stereophonic sound. This picture shows some of the demolition work that has to precede the new installation, and during this work the Ritz, after today, will be closed until further notice. The new wide screen, most modern available, will extend clear across the old proscenium, and take in part of the space that has been occupied by the old organ lofts at left and right. The Ritz set the pace in West Texas as a pioneer for sound movies when it was first opened in 1928, and now is undergoing drastic changes to present the latest developments in projection and sound. The building will have refrigerated air-conditioning installed during this remodeling program.

She's Got A New Boy Friend

Love Of The Pampas

Gene Tierney is abducted from a broad estancia in the Pampas by outlaw Rory Calhoun. She doesn't like it at first but changes her mind. The film shows tonight and Monday at the Terrace Drive-In.

'Torch Song' Is Joan Crawford's First Color Film

"Torch Song" will show today only at the Ritz Theatre, the last film to be shown before the theatre is temporarily closed to finish work on installing the new wide screen and stereophonic sound system.

Me" and a flashy production number, "Two Faced Woman."

Gig Young plays an amiable but mercenary playboy who is on Miss Crawford's string. Marjorie Rambeau has a comedy role as a typical stage mother and Dorothy Patrick has the role of a girl who steps out of the way when she realizes her love is hopeless.

Henry Morgan plays a harassed director who finds Miss Crawford just a bit more than he can put up with.

Charles Walters both has a part in the film and is the director. He appears as Miss Crawford's dancing partner in early sequences of the picture and also did the choreography.

The film is a Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer production.

'Sabre Jet' Story Of Wives Who Wait

"Sabre Jet," which shows Friday and Saturday at the State Theatre, is a story of the wives of jet pilots stationed in Japan, who kiss their husbands goodbye every morning during the Korean War and then gathered at the air base gates to see if their loved ones come back home safely in the evening.

Coleen Gray plays the feature writer wife of Col. Gil Manion, played by Robert Stack, and she's out to write a human interest story about the wives of the jet fliers. Her visit to the Japanese base is not welcomed by her husband, particularly since they have been separated. Other officers at the base are played by Richard Arlen and Leon Ames.

'The Moonlighter' Is 3-D Film With Revenge Theme

Another three-dimension film is to show Sunday, Monday, and Tuesday at the State Theatre. This time it's a Western, "The Moonlighter," which stars Fred MacMurray and Barbara Stanwyck.

The moonlighter of the title (one who rustles cattle by the light of the moon) is played by MacMurray. Miss Stanwyck plays a former sweetheart of his, now in love with his younger brother.

As the film opens, MacMurray is in jail for his larcenies and an angry mob is outside waiting to string him up. But, when they finally break into the jail, they get the wrong man.

MacMurray vows vengeance on the mob and becomes a hunted man. During the course of the film Miss Stanwyck set out to hunt him down.

The screenplay is by the author of "Duel in the Sun," Niven Busch. Ward Bond is a co-star in the film, and Bill Ching plays a younger brother. The film is a Warner Bros. release.

Joan Crawford stars in this Technicolor love story as a vibrant musical comedy actress who browbeats and offends everyone with whom she works until she meets blind pianist Tye Graham, played by Michael Wilding.

It is Miss Crawford's first Technicolor film and it is also her first song-and-dance role in several years. Songs include "You Won't Forget Me," "Tenderly," "Follow

Poultry Markets Steady in State

AUSTIN, Nov. 14 (AP)—Texas poultry markets steadied this week after signs of weakness in early trading, the State Department of Agriculture said today.
The South Texas market opened weaker and remained steady through the close with prices one cent lower. Supplies were short of a slow to fair demand. Trading was light.
In East Texas the market also opened weaker and was mostly steady through the close, the closing price down one cent from a week ago. Trading was light to normal and supplies adequate for a fair demand.
Waco-Corsicana markets were about steady to weaker the first two days of trading and then steadied. Supplies were adequate for the light demand.

American Farm Surplus Problem Heads GOP's List Of Troubles

By OVID MARTIN
WASHINGTON, Nov. 14 (AP)—America's king-size farm surplus problem takes top place on the Eisenhower administration's list of domestic troubles.
Powerful farm groups think they have the solution and are ready to spell it out for the lawmakers when Congress reconvenes.
Faced with the twin headaches of declining farm prices and increasing surpluses Congress will hear vigorous demands from these farm groups for the United States to embark on a broad food relief program abroad.
Forerunners of such demands were heard by the House Agriculture Committee on a recent tour of the country to get farmer views on how to re-establish and maintain agricultural prosperity.

Leaders of the aggressive National Farmers Union and the CIO, the big labor organization which has joined the Farmers Union in endorsing greater government aid for agriculture, were chief proponents of this idea at committee hearings.
Advocates of the plan blame a sharp drop in exports of U.S. farm products for most current farm headaches. Foreign shipments are running more than 30 per cent below year ago. Supplies once went abroad are piling up in surplus stocks, most of them held by the government.
Farm history is repeating itself. During World War I, American farm production was expanded sharply to help meet Allied needs. Then came peace and readjustment. Food demands on the United States declined and surpluses developed. Economic disaster hit farmers in the '20s and engulfed the entire economy by the early '30s.
Many countries ravaged by World War II now have largely restored their own farm production capacities. They require less from this country. These lost markets are reflected in sharp downturns in farm prices and income and precursors of another general depression.
Producers of cotton and wheat have been especially hard hit by the loss of foreign markets.
The traveling House committee found many farmers who said they could not reconcile food surpluses in this country and millions of hungry abroad. There should be some way, they said, to bridge the gap between American plenty and the world's hungry.
They urged a give-away program of U.S. surplus food until hard-hit peoples are able to buy.
The Eisenhower administration replies it is fully aware of the part shrinking exports play in the farm problem. Secretary of Agriculture Ezra Taft Benson says the only sound and lasting solution to farm problems is the development of larger markets at home and abroad.
But it's doubtful the administration will want to go into a broad give-away food program to re-establish outlets for surplus farm production. Actually, it is pursuing a policy of reducing expenditures of this kind in its efforts to balance the budget.

Much has been said, and probably more will be, about encouraging exports by lowering tariffs and lifting other restrictions on foreign imports. The American Farm Bureau Federation and the National Grange, two strong farm organizations, believe reduced trade barriers would help foreign countries to sell more goods here and use the dollars they earn to buy farm surpluses.
The Eisenhower administration is studying the foreign trade problem for possible ways to encourage exchange of goods. What will come out of this only time can tell.
Latest developments, however, indicate that little or nothing will be done in the immediate future to solve the problem created by the fact that present government farm price policies tend to price many crops out of overseas markets.
The House Agriculture Committee, after touring farming sections of the Northeast, South and Midwest, concludes that farmers want the support programs continued.
Should Congress vote to extend present supports—an action which now appears probable—U.S. farm products still would face stiff competition from lower-priced competitors.
The only course left for agriculture in the immediate future, says Assistant Secretary of Agriculture John Davis, is to adjust farm production from its "over-expanded" postwar levels.
This means rigid acreage allotments to reduce plantings of surplus crops and marketing quotas designed to curtail farm sales. These measures already have been set up for wheat, cotton, tobacco and peanuts next year.
Davis says such controls on production may have to be used "over the next three to six years." In time, he predicts, the country's rapidly increasing population coupled with the hoped-for expansion in foreign markets will take all that farmers can produce.
But a big question is whether restricted production, even though coupled with high-level farm price supports, can give farmers sufficient incomes to keep them as prosperous as in recent years and as well-off as they want to be.
Farm prosperity involves more than a supported price. A good price is of little value without a market that will take a large volume of produce.
It is realization of the fact that farmers must have both price and volume that now leads the National Farmers Union to demand both high price supports and a big give-away program to provide an outlet for agriculture's war-expanded production capacity.

Senate Plans Probe Of Juvenile Crimes

By ROBERT E. GEIGER
WASHINGTON, Nov. 14 (AP)—The deeds of gun-toting teen-agers; of boys turned killers at 15 or 16; and of a wide assortment of young thugs, arsonists and auto thieves will be written into pages of a Senate hearing on juvenile delinquency opening next week.
The subcommittee, headed by Sen. Hendrickson (R-N.J.), was assigned to investigate juvenile problems involving gangsterism, dope addiction, and such other offenses as murder, burglary, assault and auto theft.
"Many people believe juvenile delinquency means only a mischievous prank played with boyish enthusiasm," a member of the committee staff says.
"This is as old-fashioned as the neighbor boys who placed Uncle Jim's surrey, with the fringe on top, a-straddle the roof of his cottage on Halloween, 1902."
Even in shady, quiet streets within a few blocks of the nation's Capitol building, one-third of all persons arrested for serious crimes, including burglary, assault and auto theft are under 18 years of age. Some are under 10.
J. Edgar Hoover, head of the Federal Bureau of Investigation, made a special study of juvenile crime last year that gives an inkling of how serious the situation has become on a national scale.

"It is obvious that many of the crimes of youth today are the crimes of hardened criminals," he said in written reply to a reporter's questions on the size of the juvenile problem.
"An assault on an innocent victim is no less brutal when perpetrated by a juvenile rather than by an adult criminal."
Hoover says approximately one-half of arrests for burglary and auto thefts are of children under 17 years of age. About one-third of the arrests for larceny, and one-fifth of those for robbery, are of children under 17.
A total of 33,612 children under 15 were arrested in 1952 on charges involving serious crime, such as murder, robbery, rape, burglary and auto theft. There were 52 children under 18 arrested on charges of murder or manslaughter.
