

Winter storm aims biggest punch today

By CHARLES RICHARDS
Associated Press Writer

A winter storm aimed its biggest punch at Texas today after sending a light mixture of sleet, snow and freezing drizzle overnight that glazed the state's highways with a dangerous layer of ice.

The National Weather Service said up to 7 inches of snow could fall in the Dallas-Fort Worth area, beginning this afternoon.

Wichita Falls, which got 8 inches of snow on Thursday, including 3 inches in the six hours before midnight, was expecting another 2 to 4 inches today. Drifts as high as 18 inches were causing problems on city streets.

Another 6 inches of snow was predicted for the Panhandle, where almost that much fell Wednesday night and Thursday.

Virtually all of Texas was under a winter storm warning or watch for today, including the lower Rio Grande Valley and the resort beach areas all the way up to Galveston and beyond where snow is rare.

Brownsville, the state's southernmost point, had an overnight low of 33, and was the only one of the weather service's reporting stations that was still above freezing.

At Austin, weather officials said a search of their records failed to show a precedent for three winter storms hitting Texas' capital in one month. Austin received 7.5 inches of snow in January's two previous wintry attacks.

Mixtures of freezing drizzle and isolated snow flurries were falling last night in Houston, and school officials didn't bother waiting until today to cancel school.

Sheriff's officers throughout Southeast Texas were reporting most roads passable early today, but most of the roads had a thin sheet of ice, and officials said as precipitation continued to fall it would make the highways treacherous.

Interstate 45 was closed southbound out of Huntsville, 70 miles north of Houston, because of ice on the road. About 200 motorists were evacuated from their cars and taken to Huntsville.

Across the state, grocery stores reported long lines as residents got what they needed to wait out the storm. Store officials reported a run on everything from meat to milk, batteries and beer.

"Everything is gone from the shelves," said Barbara Alfaro, a cashier at a Kroger's supermarket in Dallas' Oak Cliff section.

Although only sleet or light snow fell for much of Texas on Thursday, the combination of gusty northerly winds and temperatures in the teens and below had a numbing effect.

In Dallas, the city sent its employees home at 3 p.m. and told them not to report for work today until 10 a.m. Most people seemed eager to stay inside.

Fort Worth residents set records for winter electricity usage hourly until about noon Thursday, said George Hedrick, spokesman for Texas Electric Service Co. About 100 residents were without power for about an hour Thursday night after a high voltage fuse failed, Hedrick said.

Snowstorm Closes Schools

Wind-blown snow blocks the entry to Hereford High School and classes for the public school system were closed here Thursday and Friday. Hereford recorded 4 inches of snow for the two days, and the frigid front dropped temperatures to a zero reading Thursday. The high Friday was only 8 degrees.

County decides to apply for economic development funds

By KIM THOGMARTIN
Staff Reporter

A Hereford businessman told Deaf Smith County Commissioners Thursday he will probably apply for economic development funds available under the Texas Community Development Program.

County fathers along with Mike Carr of the Deaf Smith County Chamber of Commerce met to discuss the program with Wardaleen Belvin, assistant director for agricultural development with the Texas Department of Agriculture, and Vicki Jacobs, director of economic development for the Panhandle Regional Planning Commission.

The TDA is the state agency through which the federal monies are appropriated to "cities with a population of less than $50,000. Any kind of business or industry can apply for the funds, as long as their application will create or maintain jobs in the county they are awarded to.

Also at the meeting was Larry Malamen, owner of M.W. Carrot, Inc. Malamen told commissioners he plans to expand his vegetable growing and shipping operation, and build a 23,000 square foot facility south of the San Jose community.

Also included in his three-year expansion plan, Melamen said, is the opening of a freezer plant and the distribution of frozen vegetables under his own label. Currently Melamen ships only fresh vegetables.

Belvin told the court that even though the funds would be awarded to the county, it might be best for the City of Hereford to submit the application on the county's behalf. She explained that current Texas law might prohibit the county from legally making such an application; however she added that a bill is pending in the Texas legislature to clarify the power of county governments in regard to such matters.

County Judge Glen Nelson commented that such grants can create a "terrific workload" on the county treasurer because of the paperwork involved. Jacobs said the PRPC could take care of administering the grant, charging a maximum fee of 15 percent.

If the county's application is approved, at least $50,000 but not more than $500,000 would be awarded to the county in the form of a grant. The county would then loan the money to businesses listed on the application at an interest rate to be decided by the commissioners.

Belvin explained that as the participants pay the money back, it stays in a fund to be loaned out to future applicants interested in industrial development. She said the county could place the money in interest-bearing accounts, but the interest as well as the original money could only be used for the purpose for which it was originally awarded.

March 15 is the deadline for applying during the present quarter. Belvin told the court. Application can be made once each quarter, but funds are only awarded once each year. She also explained that two public hearings will need to be held before the paperwork is submitted; once before and once after the county completes the application.

Commissioner Bill Bradley moved the county participate in the program, a motion that was approved unanimously. Commissioner James Voyles was not present for the 10 a.m. meeting.

The program was explained later in the day to Hereford City Manager Dudley Bayne, and Carr said details will be explained to Hereford City Commissioners at their Feb. 18 meeting.

Passing The Gavel

The president's gavel of Deaf Smith County Chamber of Commerce was passed on to Rex Easterwood, left, during the installation dinner for officers and directors Thursday night at Hereford Country Club.

Bobby Owen, 1984 president, made the presentation. The chamber's annual banquet is scheduled next Thursday night at the Bull Barn.

Persons must apply to testify at local Senate panel hearing

Due to time allotted, only persons scheduled in advance will be allowed to testify during U.S. Senate hearings planned for Feb. 11 in Hereford.

An aide for the Senate Committee on Environment and Public Works said those who wish to testify orally must write or call Washington, D.C. and asked to be included on the schedule, because the committee wants the two-hour hearings to be planned in advance.

All testimony offered will be recorded by the committee, however, because those who are unable or do not wish to appear at the hearings can submit written comments.

The field hearings were set at the request of Texas Senator Lloyd Bentsen, ranking minority member of the committee, who opposes the location of the nation's first high-level nuclear waste dump in the Panhandle.

A site in Deaf Smith County is one of three recently selected for detailed site characterization by the Department of Energy, which has the job of finding a repository by the year 1990.

"From what he knows about the situation, he has indicated he does not want it there," said the aide who asked not to be identified. "He is very much concerned with the stories we're hearing of economic effects being felt. We have already heard that some businesses say they'll pack up and leave if the dump is put there."

The spokesman said the hearings,

Tax service company clears some payments

By SPEEDY NIEMAN

About 200 Deaf Smith County homeowners will not be able to claim deductions for 1984 property taxes when they file their income tax returns this year.

In addition, about 100 of these same residents may face a penalty and interest charge on their 1984 taxes, all because a Los Angeles-based tax service failed to pay the taxes before the Feb. 1 deadline. However, some lending companies indicate they will pay any late charges.

Fred Fox, chief appraiser for Deaf Smith County Tax Appraisal District, reported here Thursday that Ticor Realty Tax Service, a company that services taxes for lending institutions, had not made payments to escrow accounts. He contacted the company before the end of the year and an official reported they had a computer pro-

Several accidents reported

Frigid weather and snow-packed streets slowed activity in Hereford considerably Thursday and Friday, closing schools and causing cancellation of many meetings.

Motorists were moving around the city cautiously today after 4 inches of snow and zero-degree weather made streets hazardous. After a low of zero Thursday, the temperature reached a high of only 8 degrees. This morning the reading was 3 degrees with a high of about 12 expected. A low of 2 degrees was forecast tonight, with a high near 20 Saturday.

Record low for this date was a minus 14 in 1951. About 4 hours of sunshine was predicted today, but about 10 hours was predicted Saturday. A 40-percent chance of more snow was forecast today but little chance of snow was seen for Saturday.

YMCA grand opening planned

A number of events will highlight the grand opening of the Hereford and Vicinity YMCA, located on 15th St., from 2-5 p.m. Sunday.

The Hereford Hustlers will be present for the official ribbon cutting ceremonies and tours of the facility will begin at 2 p.m. conducted by members of the Hereford High School Key Club.

According to grand opening co-chairmen, Cindy Baker and Keith Ann Gearn, an adult membership and two youth basic memberships will be given as door prizes at 5 p.m.

Activity decreases in Hereford

Hereford police made no arrests Thursday, spending most of their time working minor fender benders.

Officers investigated seven minor traffic accidents on Thursday and one early this morning, with no reports of injuries in any of those wrecks.

Tickets were issued in most cases, usually for failure to control speed or striking a parked vehicle.

Police also responded to two complaints of harassment Thursday.

Hereford Volunteer Firemen had just one call to extinguish a chimney fire south of town on Highway 385. There was no damage to the home of Larry Granado, whose fireplace chimney had caught fire around 10:30 p.m.

THURSDAY'S HIGH: 8 (normal: 50 record: 88 in 1963)

OVERNIGHT LOW: 3 (normal: 23 record: -14 in 1951)

WEST TEXAS: Extremely cold. Scattered snow with 2 to 4 inches accumulation on the South Plains, up to 5 inches in the Permian Basin and Concho Valley. Sunny Saturday and not as cold. Police think killer is 'Smart loner'

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) — The head of a police task force investigating the slayings and disappearances of young women says that officers are having trouble finding a common element.

"Psychologists tell us that the killer wants to be caught," Lt. Ray Armand, head of the task force, said Thursday. "But if he does, he hasn't left any good clues laying around to help us find him — at least none that we've found yet."

Authorities believe the suspect could be a smarter-than-average loner whose friends and neighbors think he is a nice person.

"He will be well-liked by neighbors and friends," said Armand. "When caught, we're going to have to have our facts together because we won't be able to buffalo him."

He said the task force is working with psychological studies of cases detectives believe are similar to the ones now under investigation. He said the FBI is also preparing new profiles for the task force.

"Since the task force started, there have been no violent acts," said Armand. "That tells us he's cautious."

Armand said police don't expect the killer or killers to strike while the investigation is being publicized.

Defendants sentenced to life

DALLAS (AP) — A state district court jury has sentenced to life in prison for child abuse a mother, aunt and uncle who held the hands of three young girls over a gas flame as punishment for taking food.

The six-man, six-woman jury took only 40 minutes to assess the maximum punishment Thursday for Samella Brumfield Gill, 35, the mother; Vera Mae Brown, 31, the aunt; and Mrs. Brown's husband, Henderson George Brown, 33.

On Wednesday, the trio was convicted of abusing all six of Mrs. Gill's children and of taking part in the gas-stove burnings of her 11-year-old twin girls and 12-year-old daughter Aug. 27.

"I tried to pull away ... but my mother pushed me back," one of the twins testified, describing the burnings. "I was pushing, pushing back using my feet. Then I fell down."

Doctors said her hands were so badly burned that bones were exposed and doctors had to amputate a finger.

Four bodies found in Houston

HOUSTON (AP) — The bodies of four people, including one that had been set afire, were found today in a southwest Houston residence, police said.

"They had been shot, and one of them was set on fire," Sgt. James Waltmon, a Houston homicide investigator said.

"We got the report about 3:15 a.m. A son of the people that got killed called us. There was a dad, a mommy, and two brothers. The son came home and found them," Waltmon said.

Identities of the victims were not immediately released.

Houston Fire Department spokesman Russell Dunnem said firefighters arrived at the scene shortly after 2:30 a.m. and found the burned body of a man in the hallway.

The body apparently had been doused with a flammable liquid, ignited, and a neighbor extinguished the flames, Dunnem said.

Authorities said the woman's body was found shot in bed. The body of the couple's 13-year-old son was found shot in another bed and another son was found shot in the kitchen, investigators said.

FTC rules land buyers misled

WASHINGTON (AP) — People paid up to $1,200 an acre for "near desert" land in far West Texas because they were misled by the real estate developers who said the land was a good investment, the Federal Trade Commission has ruled.

The commission said it might later decide to order redress for the purchasers of 2,600 tracts of land in Culberson County.

The ruling overturned the 1982 decision of an FTC administrative law judge. The commission agreed in a 3-0 vote that the companies, owned by a California man, "misrepresented that the parcels sold ... were good investments," "misrepresented that the properties were suitable for use as homesites, farms and ranches," and "sold parcels that were of little or no value and unfairly retained the proceeds from the sales."

The land, located about 120 miles east of El Paso, was sold primarily to out-of-state buyers and is "near desert in condition," the FTC said.

The companies and individuals named in the complaint have 20 days to ask the FTC to reconsider or 60 days to file an appeal in court, an FTC spokesman said. The commission ordered the companies to tell buyers the true worth of the land. The companies' officers testified at the hearing before the administrative law judge that they were no longer selling land in the area but were still collecting receipts from previous sales contracts.

EPA puts off proposal on ban

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Environmental Protection Agency is putting its attempt to ban asbestos on hold under an unprecedented procedure that leaves the issue to be reviewed by two other government agencies.

Questions about asbestos are being formally referred to the Occupational Safety and Health Administration and the Consumer Product Safety Commission under a procedure never before used, EPA spokesman David Ryan said Thursday.

An AFL-CIO official charged that by referring the issue to other agencies, EPA is bowing to pressure from White House budget officials to delay its proposed ban on the cancer causing substance.

An EPA official, who spoke Thursday on condition that he not be identified, said this meant that EPA's still unpublished proposal to ban asbestos was "moot," at least until the other agencies made up their minds on the issue.

Those agencies would have 90 days to respond to EPA and another 90 days to begin action of some kind if they believe EPA's concerns are valid.

Unemployment rate holding steady

WASHINGTON (AP) — The U.S. economy is growing steadily at an annual rate of about 4 percent and is creating thousands of new jobs, but some analysts question whether growth will be rapid enough to offset the number of people looking for work.

Before today's scheduled release of jobless figures for January, analysts were forecasting little or no change in the unemployment rate, which edged up a tenth of a percentage point to 7.2 percent of the civilian work force in December. The December rate was down by a full percentage point from a year earlier.

New claims for unemployment compensation benefits, one indicator of the overall health of the U.S. labor market, fell 45,000 to 392,000 for the week ending Jan. 19 compared to the previous week, the Labor Department reported Thursday.

The department's Employment and Training Administration also said the total number of Americans receiving unemployment benefits under state-run programs for the week ending Jan. 12 was down 144,000 to 2,545,000, compared to the previous week's 2,689,000.

On activity limit

UIL panel seeks relief

AUSTIN (AP) — Travel time logged going to competitions should not count against extracurricular activity limits set by the State Board of Education, says a University Interscholastic League panel.

The UIL's legislative study committee, divided on some issues, voted Thursday to ask the state board to relax the controls produced by last year's school reform bill.

Board members have approved — on an emergency basis — rules limiting school-day practice, competition and travel to eight hours per activity during the school week. The rule also sets a 20-hour limit on students in more than one activity.

A final vote is planned at the state board's Feb. 9 meeting. The UIL will push its modified rule at a state board committee meeting on Feb. 8.

Some school officials — particularly in isolated areas — say the board rule is overly harsh on their students because of lengthy travel time between schools. Under the rule, no more than two hours is charged against a school for the first game in a school week.

The UIL committee's proposal does not count travel time toward the eight-hour limit. It also cuts out the 20-hour limit on students in more than one activity.

The first vote on the proposal produced a 6-5 vote. The committee was divided over a proposal to allow only one contest during the school week — defined as Monday morning through the end of school on Friday.

"It's going to tear up the Houston Independent School District," said Wayne Schaper, principal of Memorial High School in the Spring Branch ISD in Houston.

He said limited facilities in major urban districts force teams to play two week-night games.

The state board rule does not limit the number of games or performances in a school week.

In an effort to show greater support for some change in the Board of Education rule, UIL committee Chairman Glenn Pearson of Bridge City allowed a "re-vote" that wound up 9-1, with Eddie Joseph of the Texas High School Coaches Association dissenting.

"We're going to cause more problems than we are going to solve," Joseph said.

Pearsall ISD Superintendent Kenneth Loveless said, "We can do this and it won't hurt us. But I also spent 16 years in the Houston district. It cannot be done there ever."

The committee wrestled with several proposed changes to the board rule, a product of school reform bill of last year.

"Haven't we trimmed and hacked and cut enough to the point we can make a good case (to the state board) that we can control the abuse?" said committee member Bill Cormack of Austin, executive secretary of the Texas Music

Educators Association.

Bonnie Northcutt, assistant to the UIL director, cautioned the committee. "I'm not sure they're looking for status quo. That's our problem."

Pearson said removing the travel time provision "would satisfy most people" involved in extracurricular activities.

"Travel is the most critical thing," he said. "We've got people now breaking the rules."

blem. Fox said he received payments yesterday for about half of the accounts which had First Savings of Texas as the lender. About 100 accounts with Gibraltar Savings & Loan as the lender were still not paid, unless the local office receives a check today.

The property taxes did not legally have to be paid until midnight Jan. 31, however Fox said companies traditionally paid the taxes in September in order to get the 3 percent discount. Fox said he had sent stood as green islands amid gray, smoldering forests. Some homes were half burned while others were little more than concrete blocks, melted lawn furniture and ashes.

Gov. Bob Graham surveyed fire damage in the Naples area Thursday and declared a state of emergency. More than 1,400 brush fires have been reported since the first of the year and the blazes have accelerated since the Jan. 22-23 freeze combined with bone-dry weather to turn vegetation into kindling.

At least five new fires broke out Thursday across the state, each claiming more than 100 acres, but they were brought under control by nightfall, said Larry Amison of the state Division of Forestry.

Three major infernos remained; one in the thinly populated Golden Gate subdivision east of Naples, one near Interstate 75 northeast of Naples and a third on the east side of the state, in the grasslands of the Florida Everglades.

"It's more severe than I had anticipated," Graham said. His emergency declaration will enable the National Guard to put two water-carrying helicopters into action and the Department of Transportation to lend two bulldozers.

"They've done all they can," said state Sen. Frank Mann, who toured the area with Graham. "At this point, it's up to the good Lord, because somebody's got to bring us rain."

The Everglades fire was the largest, consuming about 50,000 acres of uninhabited grasslands in northwest Broward County. Paul Wills, a forestry division spokesman, said the fire easily could double in size.

The fire near I-75 was under control. The only fire that threatened homes was the Golden Gate blaze, where some 100 people were evacuated Wednesday as the flames inched closer, Amison said.

Forecasters say chances for snow in Austin today were 60 percent. Propane gas companies say they were swamped with calls Thursday from customers afraid of running out of fuel before the siege of bad weather ends.

"We're sure getting a lot of calls. People must be burning a lot of gas," said Emily Lohman of Centex Butane Co. in Austin.

Houston Lighting & Power reported about 20,000 power outages throughout the city and surrounding counties, and officials said the problem was caused primarily by the wind.

About 500 customers of Texas Power & Light in northeast Dallas suburb of Garland were without power for one to two hours Thursday afternoon. District manager Bob Vincent said the outage was caused by heavy usage for electric heaters.

three statements to the tax service company, and also sent a letter to local taxpayers to notify them of the situation.

Homeowners whose taxes were paid by Thursday will be able to claim the deduction on their 1985 return and may get a double deduction if their 1985 taxes are paid before Jan. 31, 1986. Some people, however, may have been counting on that deduction for 1984.

Fox said he didn't know the magnitude of the tax problem across the country. He noted that Lubbock had 5,500 taxpayers affected by the late payments. The appraisal district in Lubbock County reported this morning that more than $4 million arrived Thursday before the penalty and interest deadline.

The tax districts add a 7 percent penalty to the tax statements on Feb. 1. Fox reported he had a number of calls about the tax payments from local homeowners yesterday after a brief report appeared in The Brand.

Ann Landers

Others may wonder

DEAR ANN LANDERS: This is in response to the man who put 3,000 miles between himself and his nagging wife after he retired.

I'll bet that letter was written by my husband. The slob sat around drinking beer and smoking cigarettes all day, watching TV and reading raunchy magazines. He snacked constantly, left dirty dishes and crumbs all over the house and was too lazy to put his soiled socks and underwear in the clothes hamper. When the kids were growing up he never did one thing to make my life easier. I was both mother and father.

The bum is overweight, has emphysema and a bad heart because he never took care of himself. He will probably need a good deal of nursing care before long. Let's see if his new, young wife will stick by him when his money runs out.

I'd like him to know I sold the house, made some good investments and found myself a roommate who needs no picking up after, likes to travel and is darned good company.

It is heaven not to wait on a slob and to know that my last years won't be spent playing nurse to a man who wrecked his health and gave me very little companionship or happiness. I'm signing this—Guess Who?

DEAR G.W.: I'm not using your full signature, which identified your city and state. I wonder how many men will wonder if your letter was written by their ex-wife.

prised you fell for that phony letter from the teenager who was heartbroken because her dad was going to marry another woman who had children.

She went on and on about how painful it was to her and her brothers and sisters. How could you have bought that hoked-up line, "It's bad enough to see your father around town with a woman who is not your mother, but the agony of seeing him with children who are replacing you and your sister and brother is impossible to describe." I'll bet dollars to doughnuts that letter was written by a woman who had been dumped and was trying to get back at her ex-husband.

When my parents decided to go their separate ways after 17 miserable years, my sister and I were thrilled that Dad had found a wonderful woman to share his life. Lord knows he deserved some happiness. Mother deserves some, too, but she will never find any because she wallows in self-pity and devotes every ounce of extra energy trying to turn us against Dad.

Divorce is always sad when there are kids, but it's a lot sadder to live in a home where there is no love, no respect and no joy.—Been There (Toronto)

DEAR T.: I get fooled now and then, but not very often. I believe that letter was on the level, but thanks for writing.

of mine just got a rotten deal. She is an attractive 29-year-old woman who was beaten up and nearly raped by the office tomcat at a farewell party for another employee. My friend filed charges for assault and battery but the guy got off because she admitted she was a little drunk. Should THAT make such a difference?—Still Boiling In Portland

DEAR PORT: Probably not, but the testimony of a woman who admits that she as "a little drunk" is considerably weakened by such a confession. Too bad.

Are your parents too strict? Hard to reach? Ann Landers' booklet, "Bugged By Parents? How to Get More Freedom," could help you bridge the generation gap. Send 50 cents with your request and a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope to Ann Landers, P.O. Box 11995, Chicago, Illinois 60611.

Coordinating board approves application

The Coordinating Board, Texas College and University System recently approved application by Texas Tech University Health Sciences Center (TTUHSC) School of Nursing to establish a baccalaureate program in nursing for the Permian Basin.

In announcing the approval, Dean of Nursing Teddy L. Langford, R.N., Ph.D., cited the decision as a major step in the process of readying the program for student admissions. "The next step is to provide to the Coordinating Board information about adequacy of financing to implement the program," Langford said. "When that information is accepted, we will then be able to begin the process for accepting applications for admission. We will publicize, at a later date, when and how that will occur."

Langford expressed appreciation for the indication of support by Permian basin citizens interested in seeing the baccalaureate program approved. "I'm sure that the support of Permian Basin hospitals, health care agencies, educational institutions and citizens has contributed substantially in our efforts to launch this mutually beneficial program."

The degree program will allow registered nurses from diploma and associate degree programs to receive credit for previous education. Upper division nursing courses will be offered initially in Midland and the clinical portion of courses will be taught in several hospitals in the Permian Basin. Required general education courses are available at local colleges.

Students in the Permian Basin will be able to pursue the bachelor of science in nursing on a full-time or a part-time basis, making it possible for working professionals to earn an advanced degree close to home considering constraints of their job and family responsibilities.

The baccalaureate degree program offered by TTUHSC School of Nursing is fully accredited by the National League for Nursing. It places special emphasis on clinical competence and faculty are practicing specialists with graduate degrees in nursing.

Several endangered and threatened U.S. animals have made comebacks. The wild turkey has been restored in 43 states and Atlantic salmon was reintroduced to New England waters after an absence of more than a century. The bald eagle is another species that has been increasing in numbers each year.

The WMU general luncheon meeting has been planned at 10:30 a.m. Wednesday, Feb. 6 in the church fellowship hall. The Marjorie Stephens group will serve as hostesses.

Serving on the youth minister search committee are Mary Sue Hull, chairperson; Roger Eades, Carolyn Johnson, Mary Beth White and Gary Wilhelm. Those on the music minister search committee include Ed Line, chairman; Mary Thomas, Susan Shaw, Steve Nieman and Joe D. Rogers.

James Hull has been selected as chairman of deacons. He is the president and general manager of Deaf Smith Co-Op and has been a resident of Hereford for 16 years, having moved here from Colorado, City, Tx.

He and his wife Mary Sue have two sons, Mike, who is an attorney in Austin, and Kevin, a seventh grader at La Plata.

ST. THOMAS EPISCOPAL CHURCH

Feast of the Presentation of Our Lord in the Temple is scheduled Feb. 2. Also, Ash Wednesday is Feb. 20 and the church will have a 7 a.m. Imposition of Ashes and celebration of the Holy Eucharist. During the regular 10 a.m. and 7 p.m. celebration ashes will also be imposed.

The Feast of St. Matthew the Apostle is planned Feb. 25 and will be celebrated with the Holy Eucharist at 7 p.m.

FIRST PRESBYTERIAN CHURCH

The monthly meeting for the Presbyterian Women's Association is planned at 11:30 a.m. Wednesday, Feb. 6 at the church. Those attending are requested to bring a covered dish.

First United Methodist Church

The first of two family films to be shown at First United Methodist Church this month is scheduled for 7 p.m. Sunday with the public invited. The showing will be in the church fellowship hall at no admission cost.

Sand Castles is the title of this film which tells the story of two American families, one apparently successful but actually becoming divided in the pursuit of materialistic goals and the other less interested in wealth than in good family relationships.

A second film, Father, Son and Three-Mile Run, will be presented Feb. 17.

Arrangements for bringing the films to Hereford have been made by Kathy and Troy Don Moore, family life coordinators in First UMC.

Brockman grasps goal of playing at UT

(Editor's Note: Tuesday's Brand reported that Hereford player Lee Brockman had verbally committed to play his college football at the University of Texas. The following article is a supplement to that story.)

By DENNIS BALL
Sports Editor

Lee Brockman, a 6-2, 210 linebacker and guard for the Hereford Whitefaces, has the chance to follow through with what he always wanted to do — play football at the University of Texas.

At the first of the week, Brockman verbally committed to play his college ball with the Longhorns.

"I always thought I'd like to go there," Brockman said. "Texas has always been important to me in education and in sports."

The leading tackler for the Whitefaces last season with 115 total stops primarily was considered by Rice. Brockman also was considering playing for Texas Tech.

"I guess Rice talked to me the most," he said. "Tech and Texas were about the same. Last Wednesday night (Jan. 23), coach (Fred) Akers came up here (to Hereford) and talked to my parents for about an hour."

Brockman was offered one of 95 full scholarships UT is allowed to present for football. Brockman said he plans to get a degree at Texas but in what, he's not sure. He's thought about coaching and teaching as a profession but said he has other ideas, too.

Competition for a spot in the lineup will be tough, Brockman said, but he's willing to accept the challenge. He thinks about it a lot, he added.

"The competition will be tougher there," he said, "but it's mostly up to me about how bad I want to play. I plan on getting my share of playing time."

"And, you know, I don't want to sound cocky. I just want to play."

Many freshmen playing college football are redshirted, retaining eligibility for an extra year. Under the redshirt program, the players are not allowed to play in any division (junior varsity or varsity).

Brockman said Akers told him that a final decision about redshirting is up to the individual player. However, Brockman added that if Texas coaches recommended that he be redshirted, he probably would agree.

Brockman was chosen as District 3-SA's Defensive Player of the Year in 1984 from his linebacker spot. In addition, Brockman made the team at offensive guard.

Among his other honors, The Lubbock Avalanche-Journal selected Brockman as a member of the All-South Plains Team. He also was chosen to be on the Amarillo Globe-News' Super Team.

He was a preseason all-state choice by Top-O-Texas football magazine.

Putting gimmick stakes Miller lead

By BOB GREEN AP Golf Writer

PEBBLE BEACH, Calif. (AP) — Johnny Miller has this new putter, an elongated club of his own making. It's 46 inches in length, the longest in his bag. He putts with the handle tucked under his left elbow.

He said it keeps his wrist from breaking down, may extend his PGA Tour career, and "might make me a factor again."

It's a gimmick. Sure. He used that word himself.

"I just hope it's not a WOO-Week," Miller said. "That's what I call a gimmick that works only one week."

WOO-Week or not, it worked Thursday in some of the most difficult weather ever produced in the Bing Crosby Pro-Am, a tournament infamous for weather that blunts and frustrates the efforts of golf's more celebrated performers.

This was among the worst. Bright and sunny, yes. But cold. Very cold — in the low 40s. And extremely windy. Gale force. So windy that 38 pros shot in the 80s, only 8 broke par.

"Throw grass in the air to check the wind, and if somebody gets hit with it, they get lacerations," Miller said after he'd hit 16 greens on the way to a 4-under-par 68 in the howling blasts at Spyglass Hill.

Most of the damage, however, was in the form of bruises to pride and patience and poise at Cypress Point, the most exposed — and thus most vulnerable to the wind — of the three courses used for the first three rounds of the Crosby.

It was at Cypress Point that Lanny Wadkins' subpar string came to an end. Wadkins, a record-setting winner of two of the three tournaments held this year, was 4-under-par after six holes. But he played the 12th and 13th holes 7-6, triple bogey-double bogey, and came home in 73, his first round of the season over par.

Actually, that wasn't so bad. At least by comparison. Par 72 was the best recorded on that course. And it was much, much better than these other developments at Cypress:

Tom Watson and PGA chatrap Lee Trevino each had a 75. Jack Nicklaus was one shot higher.

Others were not so fortunate. Defending titleholder Hale Irwin had a 77. Masters champ Ben Crenshaw shot 79. Cal Peete, who led the Tour in scoring average last season, withdrew after an 81.

And Hal Sutton, runner-up to Wadkins last week in the Los Angeles Open, had the highest number of his pro career: 87.

George Archer, who won this title in 1969, had a 69 at Pebble Beach and led the group within one shot of Miller's pace — T.C. Chen, who played at Spyglass, and Willie Wood, at Pebble Beach.

Tied at 70 were Lee Elder and Mark O'Meara at Spyglass and Mike Reid at Pebble Beach.

Three-year contract begins

USFL head starts work today

By BRUCE LOWITT AP Sports Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Harry Usher has a three-year contract as commissioner of the United States Football League. Guaranteed. Not that he can guarantee he will be around for all three years — or that the league will be. "This is an important year," he says. "Next year is critical. I can't even begin to think about 1987."

Today, he formally took over a league which started out two years ago as a 12-team operation committed to being a spring-and-summer alternative to the National Football League, and committed to keeping salaries within reason.

Within a year, the USFL mushroomed to 18 teams and salaries went through the roof.

This year the USFL has shrunk to 14 franchises, three have moved and two are being carried whole or in part by the rest of the league.

And next year, the USFL plans to switch to an autumn-winter schedule and go head-to-head with the NFL.

"I wouldn't be here if I didn't think I could do the job," Usher said Thursday. "I'm here because I like the challenge, because I think I can have an impact."

"I view my job as bringing a sense of fiscal responsibility to each of the clubs and a sense of centralized control to a league that hasn't always enjoyed that. This league was crying out for strong centralized leadership. There are established leagues who perhaps don't need that. But this is a start-up situation. It doesn't have a track record. What I've got to do is grab hold of everything, say, 'Whoa, bring it here. Let me get my arms around it.' That's what I'm trying to do."

And he denies emphatically that he is merely a caretaker overseeing an operation whose primary goal is hanging on until a billion-dollar lawsuit against the NFL pays off or a merger with the older league takes place.

He assumed his new duties five years to the day he became chief operating officer of the Los Angeles Olympic Organizing Committee.

The 45-year-old Usher, a Beverly Hills, Calif., lawyer, succeeds Chet Simmons, who had a three-year contract and a one-year option and, after losing much of that "centralized control" to some high-spending owners, resigned after two years.

High school athletes

Texan top prospect

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — This year's top high school football prospects, say the experts, include a gifted passer from North Carolina, a trio of cat-quick running backs and a hulking youth from the Texas Panhandle who also stars in the classroom.

Each year the NCAA Enforcement Department interviews high school and college coaches around the country and compiles a list of the top 100 or so prospects to monitor their recruitment in what is called "Operation Intercept." The NCAA does not make its list public. But Dale Smith of the NCAA agreed to identify the so-called "super blue-chip" athletes.

"They are among the ones who everybody believes will be the stars of the future," Smith said. "But of course nobody can predict for sure."

One of the nation's most unusual athletes is Ed Cunningham, a 6-foot-7, 265-pound offensive lineman from Sanford-Fritch High School, a tiny community in the Texas Panhandle.

"He's an absolutely super offensive lineman and he averages 31 points and 17 rebounds in basketball," Smith said.

"He's being recruited as a power forward in basketball by schools like Houston and DePaul. He's also an honor student whose father is a superintendent of schools. Each year there are two-sport stars in both football and basketball. But it's usually a kid who plays a skilled position in football, like wide receiver or quarterback. We've never known of an offensive lineman who had enough quickness to play major college basketball."

Two quarterbacks top most recruiters' lists this year, said Smith. The most talented passer may be Todd Ellis of Greensboro, N.C., who hit 203 of 322 passes for 3,110 yards and 19 touchdowns in leading Page High School to a 13-0-1 mark. Chris Osgood of Moss Point, Miss., who was president of his

Once flunking out of college

Athlete completing scholastic comeback

By WHIT CANNING Fort Worth Star-Telegram

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) — On a damp, freezing night slightly over three years ago, a scout from an exotic, distant bastion drove several hundred miles through the gloom to watch James Lee, a 6-foot-3, 246-pound defensive end for Fort Worth Dunbar.

Arriving shortly after the kickoff, he sat shivering through the entire first half of an unremarkable football game before turning, perplexed, to a press-box neighbor.

"Which one is Lee?" he inquired. "The one on the sideline with his jersey off," came the reply. "He was hurt on the first series."

"Hurt?" he screamed, with the look of a man who has just discovered his Rolex is missing. "What happened?"

"Dislocated shoulder, maybe." With this news, the visitor grew visibly despondent. But he stayed to watch the rest of the game.

Lee shrugged off his injury — which turned out not to be a dislocation — and returned to play the entire second half — which consisted mostly of enemy ball carriers trying desperately to avoid him. The scout gurgled appreciatively.

That was in 1981, when Lee was a high school all-American visited by nearly every talent scout north of Honduras. He was, in many ways, the most astounding specimen any of them had ever seen. In addition to his size, strength and ability, there was his speed. He anchored Dunbar's state championship 400-meter relay team.

He finally chose Oklahoma and stayed long enough to amaze Sooner coaches by outspurring a freshman running back named Marcus Dupree.

He also scheduled a class load of 12 semester hours and flunked them all. And there, for Lee, began what seemed a journey into limbo. He was sent to Northeastern Oklahoma A&M, in Miami, to establish an academic base for himself. But there were strong doubts that the experiment would be successful.

Among the professional evaluations of Lee at that time was the judgment that he was a "child of the television age" — one who could communicate well verbally and even develop an extensive vocabulary, but whose reading skills "simply never developed."

From the beginning, Lee disagreed with this assessment, citing the usual freshman confusion, the uncomfortably large classes, the recruiting pressure and publicity and the fact that he needed reading glasses.

At any rate, he has seemingly returned from limbo and taken large strides toward conquering his problems. He enrolled at Baylor at the beginning of the current semester and has, he says, managed a "complete turnaround" in his life. If he makes his grades, he will be eligible for the Bears' varsity this fall.

"It's wonderful to be here," he says. "What have I been doing the past two years? Correlating the direction in which I want to go. Getting myself together and getting inside my head, so to speak."

"I've emphasized the areas in which I needed help, and my reading is now 50 percent improved. I graduated from Northeastern with an associate degree in physical education, and I plan to make that my major here. I passed 62 hours with better than a 3.0 average, and now I feel pretty good about it."

He was also a first-team junior college All-American and feels he has at least a shot at a future now. His junior college coach, Glen Wolfe, agrees.

"The kid has changed a lot — his whole philosophy, his work habits — since he first came to us," he says.

"He ... got himself to the point where he could compete, academically."

"We had him in remedial reading courses from the beginning, and now, I think he can make it. I'd dang sure put my money on it."

It is not a universal view. Tulane and a couple of other schools backed off, and for that reason Lee feels lucky to have landed at Baylor.

"I really admire Coach (Grant) Teaff for giving me this chance," he says. "I just feel lucky to be here."

Lee says he has had help and support from other directions, from his fiancée, and most notably, from a Miami resident named Corky Munson.

"We have a weekend family program here," explains Wolfe. "The Munsons were the family he spent the weekends with."

"They really got to be like my real family," says Lee. "They helped me a lot."

"I'll tell you, the way I got here was, I was leaning toward Tulane, but my nerves were really on end, and things didn't seem to be working out. And I was sitting around with my girlfriend and wondering who would want to try and take a chance on me."

"So I went to see Cork, and we were talking it over, and I remembered Coach (Duke) Christian at Baylor from when he recruited me in high school. So we gave him a call, and here I am."

All of which brings up the query, what happened to OU?

"Well, at first I was thinking about going back to OU, but I talked to the coaches, and I wasn't sure about it. They've got a lot of talent there, and with only two years left, I wanted to go somewhere where I could at least play on the special teams this year."

"Besides, I knew deep down inside I didn't want to go back. I wanted to avoid the stereotype that would have followed me."

Slimmed down to 225 pounds, Lee is currently working in the off-season program at Baylor, but decided to forego track to concentrate on his coursework.

"There are still some courses I need to make up," he says. "I passed with Ds and they didn't transfer. And I'm still weak in English."

"But I'm determined to make it in those courses, and I'm taking some others I think will be useful to me, like first aid."

Lee, in Wolfe's words, "still has a ways to go," but seems to be getting there in at least one regard.

"I guess maybe the big difference is I've learned to accept what happened to me," he says. "At the age I was then, the grass always looks greener elsewhere, but I know now that anything you want in life is not going to be easy. I don't have any hard feelings toward anyone; it was nobody's fault but mine."

"And I know that this is my last chance — in football and in education."

New officers announced at Friends noon meeting

A slate of new officers was announced when members of the Friends of the Library met at noon Monday in Deaf Smith County Library Heritage Room. Mildred Fuhrmann, president, called the meeting to order.

Officers for the new year include Helen Nelson, president; Fuhrmann, secretary; and Virginia Bayne, treasurer.

Plans were made for the organization's annual meeting scheduled from 2-4 p.m. Feb. 24 in the Heritage Room with the public invited to attend. Highlight of the meeting will be the announcement of the library's Family of the Year for 1984.

Also, Mrs. D.R. Meredith of Dumas will be the guest speaker. She is a writer and author of the book, "The Sheriff and the Panhandle Murders." An autograph party will follow her talk.

Lecture discusses medieval art

LUBBOCK - The early medieval art of the Carolingian Period will be the topic for a lecture at 11 a.m. Tuesday in the Kline Room of The Museum of Texas Tech University.

Georgia Chamley-Brevik of the Texas Tech Art Department will discuss the art resulting from the reign of Charlemagne, Carolingian king of the Franks.

"Charlemagne was responsible for saving many ancient writings from Greek and Roman writers because he was interested in them," said

Chamley-Brevik.

Her lecture will focus on the effects of Carolingian art throughout Europe. The topic will center on the ancient manuscripts of the period.

The lecture is part of the spring series of Tuesday art seminars sponsored by the Women's Council of the West Texas Museum Association.

Admission is $3 per lecture. The 24th annual art seminar, "Art Through the Ages," is a study of art and its historical context.

Farleyville residents keep eye on growing McKinney

FARLEYVILLE, Texas (AP) — For all you fans of Luckenbach, Bugtussle and any number of Texas family towns, here's another community to add to your list of genuine Lone Star locations.

The place is called Farleyville, and needless to say, Farleys are the main attraction there. In fact, 93 percent of the town's 28 residents have some mixture of Farley blood in their veins.

The community is along 700 feet of Farm-to-Market 1491 in Collin County just west of McKinney, and many locals do not even know it exists. And if the fears of community founder Herman Farley come true, the wide spot in the road may soon be gobbled up by the bulging McKinney city limits.

"Well, I understand they're fixin' to put a four-lane highway right through here. I heard last night they're fixin' to build a circle around McKinney. It's done in the makings," the 67-year-old resident said.

"We've enjoyed living here. I'm afraid we're not going to get to live here long, you know, if they start to build around us and start crowdin' us out. Taxes will probably go so high that we couldn't afford to live here. You know how that is. One of these days before long they'll reach out to get this," Farley said.

For the present, though, Farleyville is safely nestled off the beaten track of Highway 380 between several wheat and maize fields. The town consists of a straight line of eight or nine houses on the west side of the road, with Farleys responsible for placing all but one of them there.

With an overwhelming sense of geniality, Farley explains that special hospitality that can only come from someone born and raised in the country. Despite a long stint of city life, Farley returned to his rural roots in 1962 to change a "patch of maize into a right nice place to live."

"I was raised over there in the Foote community and my wife over on this hill. We're at home right here," Farley said with a weathered smile.

"When I first got here, I got an old guy with a well digger in Frisco to come over here and I told him 'Do you believe in witchin'?' He said, 'No sir, if I did I'd pay someone a lot of money to witch for me.' I said, 'You don't care for me witchin', do you?' and he said, 'Now, I don't care if you witch, just drive you up a stob.'"

"I come right out and got me a peach limb and went to witchin' and the only place I could find was back there behind the barn. I found it at 24 foot. I measured where it went to goin' down there and I backed up and it came straight up. And at 24 foot is exactly where they struck the water. For awhile, we had five houses on that little well."

Leaving Foote in 1946, Farley and his brother began operating a service station, Farley's Texaco, on U.S. Highway 75 in McKinney. When Farley left the "city life" of McKinney, Farley's station was taken over by his son. Now, his grandson is starting to run the station "that is still hanging in there."

"I was proud to come out to the country because I was never real happy in town. I was raised in the country and I love the quietness of the country," Farley said.

Although not officially a town, Farleyville got its name in 1979 after Farley got a friend in the highway department to put up their sign.

"The story on that Farleyville business is that there was this real fine old lady named Mrs. Meyers and her husband John, who was called 'Mr. Republican' down here. This lady was always stoppin' here and kiddin' she wanted me to name the place. She wanted it to be named Farleyville."

"I wanted to put the sign up there to please her and I thought it'd be kinda cute. In the meantime, she passed away kinda sudden like and I was a pallbearer at her funeral in Dallas. We come back home from the funeral and there was the sign she always wanted to have here. That's just how it got started."

"My mother lives 'next door. She's over in a home now and she's 93 years old. My wife's mother lives in the next house, the third house. And I got a grandson lives in one of them and I got two sons who live down there. My daughter used to live in one but she moved into town. Then my brother lives up yonder. He owns a farm."

Retired with his wife Wilma, Herman Farley spends much of his time working his three gardens and "fishin' with my Bud" (a neighbor who sold Farley the land). Says Farley, "That's the bad thing about being out of business — you just don't see as many of your old friends as you did. I miss that so much."
