The Winning Golt

By Lawson Little

Richard Arlen, that popular sports-loving screen star, has, in the last two years, taken up golf as a hobby between his work in the studio.

His many friends in the golfing circles have been trying to help him for the last two years. There was his right hip, his left arm, his grip, his stance, his left toe, etc., all on his mind at the same time.

It is very seldom that two people have the same ideas on just how a golf ball should be hit—as Walter Hagen puts it, "every one must find out for himself what he must guard against, and then station his own guards through the swing to prevent this fault occurring."

Trying To Do Too Much Several mornings ago we were playing a twosome and he asked me to help him. I told him that he was trying to do too much—that he had the wrong psychology and that he was using a poor method for attacking his troubles.

Importance Of Hands As the hands are the medium through which the club is swung, I started on work on his hands. Like most pupils, he was stubborn. I had to prove to him that the will probably be E. P. Echols and Vernon Patterson, guards; Roger Wolf, center; Ralph Marshall and Fred Woodson, forwards. Adams, forward, and Lawton Phinney, guard, will also make the trip.

STEEERS BEAT WOLVES, 28-19 Bigony, who alternated at center and forward, scored five field goals against the Colorado Wolves here last night and was a big factor in the Steers' 28 to 19 victory over the visitors.

Pitt's Basketball Boss Was Panther Grid Ace

PITTSBURGH, Jan. 29. (UP)—Dr. H. C. Carlson of the University of Pittsburgh is one of the nation's leading basketball coaches.

As an undergraduate he was more famous in football than basketball. He captained the all-victorious Pitt grid team of 1917.

Led by the great Charley Hyatt, his Panthers weathered a 21-game campaign undefeated in 1927-28.

Then there was the remarkable exhibition of skill, stamina and willingness on the part of Charlie Hoff, of Norway. He soared to a new world record of 13 feet, 1 inch in the pole vault, finished third in the "Millrose 600" and then topped off his evening's work by outperforming Tommy Campbell, of Yale, all the way on the first leg of the international relay.

Ray Conger's triumph over Pavao Nurmi in the Wanamaker mile of 1929, the first defeat suffered by the great Finn indoors, set off another remarkable crowd demonstration. The band struck up "The Stars and Stripes Forever," men and women stamped and cheered.

No witness will ever forget Loren Murchison's sporting gesture in 1926. Running the first leg of the international relay against Houben, of Germany, Murchison waited for the latter when he stumbled and gave him the rail, to boot. It was necessarily an instinctive act and stamped the great sprinter as a real sportsman.

Old Millrose Games Stir The Memory Trophies Of Athletic Association Were Keenly Sought

By TOM PAPROCKI (Associated Press Sports Writer)

Over a stretch of 29 years the indoor track and field carnival of the Millrose Athletic association has had the blue ribbon event of the winter racing season—a parade of track and field champions, replete with record-breaking exhibitions, thrills, and best of all, at all times an impressive display of sportsmanship.

No trophies in the country, with the possible exception of the national championship medals, are more keenly sought by the athlete than the Millrose awards. Its long list of performers includes about every track and field performer, American and foreign, who gained a measure of national and international athletic fame.

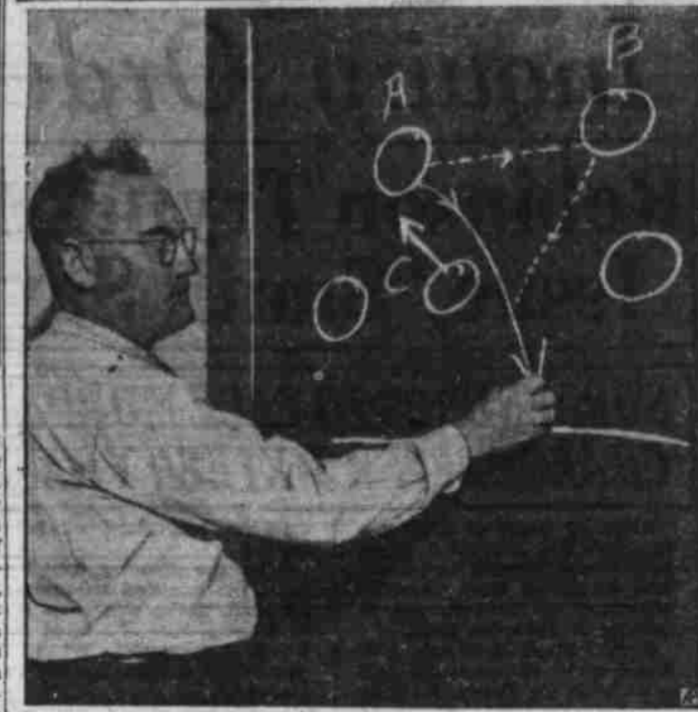

And what a raft of memories the Millrose games stir up: Away back in 1915 there was the much heralded match sprint race between Howard Drew, the first of the line of great negro sprinters, and Jo Loomis, blonde bean-pole from Chicago. Drew won the race by inches in world record time but Loomis did not know the result of the close race until long after the announcement was made. Jo didn't stop at the finish of the dash but continued through the Madison Square Garden exit, and into a waiting taxi which hurried him off to catch his train for Chicago.

Late Entrant Wins Johnny Overton, Yale immortal, filed his entry for the Rodman Wanamaker mile-and-a-half special a day before the 1916 games and then electrified the crowd by running away with the race.

The following year Jole Ray came out of the west to defeat Overton and set up a new world record of six minutes 45 seconds for the mile-and-a-half. It was the beginning of the string of seven victories, interrupted only in 1921 by Hal Cutbill, which "Cheaty Jole" reeled off in retiring two trophies from competition.

The 1925 games were featured by a thrilling demonstration on the part of the huge crowd assembled. At 42, George Goulding, the daddy of all heel-and-toe performers, had trained and conditioned himself for nine months in hopes of matching strides with Willie Plant, America's premier walker of that day, and Ugo Frigerio, of Italy, in the 5,000-meter walk. Goulding's physician refused to permit him to enter the race. The crowd remained silent for a moment when the announcement was made, and then, as Goulding walked out of the infield, they stood up and cheered the veteran to an echo.

THIS GAME OF BASKETBALL

Dr. H. C. Carlson, basketball coach at the University of Pittsburgh, takes up the chalk to give a blackboard version of a winning play. He is shown outlining an offensive measure called, "two out and three in."

PITTSBURGH (AP)—I believe the center jump in basketball will be abolished. There are many reasons. Ability may be developed but a player can not acquire a foot or so in height by the most intelligent work. There are sufficient jumps without the center jump.

My first reaction to this proposed change was to oppose it. But we now have had the opportunity to observe the awarding of the ball to the opposition after a successful free throw, under the new rules, and this has sold me on the advisability of the center-jump elimination.

The main thing in favor of retention of the play is that the jump gives the spectators a little breathing spell after a field goal. They may have a little visit and talk over the type of goal.

Opinions gathered from different parts of the country seem to indicate a growing sentiment in favor of the elimination of the center jump although there are many who honestly believe it should be retained.

We always are willing to try out any good ideas to better the game, but some of them never stand the test. The restrictions on the pivot play in the free-throw zone, under the new rules introduced this season, caused no changes at Pitt, where we combine a fast and slow breaking offense.

Mrs. A. C. Schull has received word of the death of a niece in Denton.

BRUINS TO CHALK UP A VICTORY

WACO, Jan. 28.—With final examinations interfering with the Southwest conference cage race again this week, the Baylor Bears and the Texas Christian Horned Frogs will meet in the only scheduled encounter of the week Saturday night in the Baylor gymnasium.

Coach Ralph Wolf's Bruins broke the "jinx" that had been following them since they started the conference run by trouncing the Texas Aggies 27-13 Saturday night. It was the first victory of the season for the Bruins, and this victory was enough to lift them out of the conference cellar with a 250 percentage over the 230 percentage of the Farmers.

Dope points to another victory for the Grizzly team this week when the Tonds invade the local court. Baylor's air-tight defense gave them a easy victory over the Texas Aggies who had just a few days before handed the Frogs a good whipping. The Christians have won one game and lost two.

The cold afternoons of this week have found the Bears drilling tediously in their gymnasium as their mentor instructed them on new offensive formations. Theo Alford, who is now among the conference's leading scorers with 23 points in four games, is the spearhead of the Bruin scoring attack, and a considerable portion of the Baylor offense has been shaped around the 6 foot, 4-inch senior from Beaumont.

Each afternoon's practice shows steady improvement in the Bruin defense. This air-tight unit held the Farmers to four field goals in their most recent encounter, and promises to be the real threat to the T. C. U. cagers. Ken Clark and Hugh Wilfong, regular Bruin guards, performed in stellar fashion last week against the Aggies and Coach Wolf is planning to use these two lads to stand the brunt of the Frog scoring attack.

Many, many women have taken Cardui on the advice of their mothers, who had been helped by it. "I would have severe cramping spells," writes Mrs. F. C. Allen of Smithdale, Miss. ### Millions Visit Lincoln's Tomb

SPRINGFIELD, Ill. (UP)—More than 2,500,000 persons have signed the registry in Abraham Lincoln's tomb here in Oak Ridge cemetery. It was disclosed by Herbert Wells Fay, custodian for the past 15 years.

The year 1928 was the banner one for persons registering at the tomb. In that year 141,040 persons signed the registry. During 1935 the total number registering was 112,000.

44 per cent greater than for 1934. The groups showing an increase in the number of new charters granted in comparison with the preceding year were: Oil, 83 per cent; manufacturing, 21.3 per cent; banking-finance, 23 per cent; real-estate-building, 14 per cent; transportation, 55.6 per cent; merchandising, 28 per cent.

City Two To One For New Deal In Magazine Poll

Big Spring, if a light vote is any barometer, is about two to one in favor of new deal policies. Figures released Tuesday by the Literary Digest after the close of its poll on the new deal, showed that in the recent vote, 66 ballots were received from this city favoring the new deal policies, to 37 against. This is a percentage of about 64 for the Roosevelt administration, in comparison with the approximately 60 per cent for the state of Texas as a whole. The nationwide result was about 62 per cent against the new deal policies.

Centennial Extends To Old Washington

BRENSHAM, Jan. 29.—As a special Texas Centennial event, Brenham and Washington county will hold an all-day celebration at Old Washington on March 2. The observance is being sponsored by the Buddy Wright post of the American Legion and will commemorate, on the same spot, the signing of the Texas Declaration of Independence 100 years ago. Two other historical ties make the Brenham celebration of particular interest. It was also at Old Washington where Sam Houston was commissioned commander-in-chief of the Texas army, and where, in later years, the congress of the Republic of Texas voted to annex the independent sovereignty to the United States.

A pilgrimage in the form of a colorful parade will move from Brenham to what was formerly known as Washington-on-the-Brazos, where activities will continue, culminating in an historical pageant.

Trio To Appeal Sentences In Ship Disaster

NEW YORK, Jan. 29. (UP)—Convicted of criminal negligence in the Morro Castle disaster, the New York & Cuba Mail Steamship company and three individual defendants, Acting Captain William F. Warme and Chief Engineer Eben S. Abbott of the vessel, and Henry E. Cabaud, executive vice-president of the line will start an appeal of the verdict in the United States district court.

Sentence was imposed Tuesday on the convicted men and corporation. The defense will move that the court set aside the verdict.

The trial resulted from the burning of the Morro Castle off the New Jersey coast Sept. 8, 1934, with a loss of 124 lives.

The prosecution charged that the corporation, the name of which has since been changed from the Ward Line under which operated the Morro Castle was running, and Cabaud were guilty of fraud, neglect and connivance in violation of the law. Warme and Abbott were charged with failing to fulfill their duty.

Memorial For Huey Is Planned

NEW ORLEANS, Jan. 29. (UP)—Tentative plans for a memorial to be erected on the state capitol grounds in honor of the late Sen. Huey P. Long have been prepared by Leon C. Weiss, New Orleans architect. The memorial would cost about $200,000, but plans for financing it have not been completed, Weiss said.

The memorial would take the form of a gigantic broken cylinder, 30 feet high, split down the center, with its halves rising on each side of the senator's grave. Above the sunken tomb in which Long is interred there would rise a flame which would burn night and day. Fuel for the light would be natural gas piped to the spot.

On one half of the cylinder would be engraved records of Long's achievements. On the other half would be a scroll of the plans he had for the welfare of the United States. Four statues would be placed at the two entrances of the cylinder, a workman, a farmer, a nurse and a mother taking her child to school.

Enrique Alferex, Mexican sculptor, is preparing the model in his studio here.

State Proves A Big Help In School Work

Contributions During Depression Period Match Local Funds

AUSTIN, Jan. 29. (AP)—Statistics compiled by the department of education showed today the state became the "big brother" in public school maintenance during the depression period. Statistics announced by C. M. Elwell, director of information for the department, likewise showed mounting expenditures for public education to a peak in 1929-30 with sharp recession subsequently. During the period, however, state contributions on the whole gained while local contributions diminished. State aid, with $296,172 federal assistance, in 1926-27 amounted to $22,690,012, the report showed, while current expenses paid from local maintenance taxes aggregated $22,815,899. The relationship was similar until 1930-31. In that year state aid and federal aid supplanted $30,750,392 while local maintenance dropped to $30,012,190. State aid reached a maximum of $35,132,967, including $410,968 federal funds for vocational education, while local maintenance shrank to $14,937,719 as compared to $21,828,332 in the preceding year. In the past school year, state and federal funds dropped to $34,983,988 with the federal government contributing $514,139. Local expenditures were incomplete for that year. Expenditures from sundry sources listed under "tax costs" reached a peak of $71,192,031 in 1929-30, compared with $53,293,177 in 1926-27 and $58,570,244 in 1933-34. The drop in 1930-31 was less than $1,000,000 while the total for 1931-32 was $66,161,740 and for 1932-33, $69,301,633. The figures included debt service but not capital outlay. Scholastic enumeration reached a peak of 1,571,378 in 1933-34, compared with 1,348,635 in 1926-27 and 1,533,852 this year. Average daily attendance attained a top, however, in 1928-29 with 1,153,100. Attendance averaged 869,219 in 1926-27 and 1,073,882 in 1933-34. The length of terms rose from 153 days in 1927-28 to 163 days in 1933-34. Average per capita costs dropped from $33.50 in 1926-27 to $46.62 in 1933-34 while the numbers of teachers rose but salaries declined as a depression result.

Employment of teachers gained steadily from 39,639 in 1926-27 to 45,873 in 1931-32 and 45,856 in 1933-34. Salaries kept pace with a gain from $975.44 in 1926-27 to $1,078.07 in 1930-31. Depression reduced revenue trimmed the average salary to $1,025.16 in 1931-32, $897.96 in 1932-33 and $807.15 in 1933-34.

MAY BE A LONELY WALK

Considering the trend of the ballots in 1928, the new deal should lose little sleep over Al Smith's talk of "taking a walk" when the Roosevelt-Gagner ticket is renominated. Mr. Smith is talking out loud again only after several years of silence while he licked the wounds received six years ago. With the Raskobs, DuPonts, et al, providing the ointment, he has been able to heal the wounds sufficiently to seek the limelight again; but this should not let him overlook the fact that a vast cross-section of the democratic party was never in his following, and probably never will be.

All the criticism he had to offer was a renewal of the same attack that has been hurled before by the Liberty Leaguers. His personal supporters were with him before he talked, and there is no reason to believe that he gained new followers.

There is the possibility that if Al Smith takes a walk, he would walk comparatively alone.

BETTER LATE THAN NEVER

Just another reminder that "better late than never" may be applicable to the matter of paying your poll tax. Receipts issued in Howard county still are not up to the level they should be. Thursday and Friday, of course, will be boom days at the tax collector's office; and those who haven't had the foresight to avoid the rush should take a chance in the rush.

This is a year of big things in politics, and the man or woman who fails to participate is passing up an opportunity to have a part in important elections, an opportunity to help shape government trends for the next two and four years. The person who neglects to pay the poll tax has little cause to complain about the affairs of government, local, state or national; but the person who does pay and who exercises his franchise is doing his rightful share as a citizen. The ballot is his part in the scheme of the democracy; it is a part that should be played as faithfully as the part played by those in office.

Don't forget your poll tax.

Man About Manhattan

By George Tucker

NEW YORK—Just as Paris harbors its colony of expatriates, so New York has its vast army of exiles. They are the people who can't go home.

I have particularly in mind an ex-lieutenant of the Cuban army who waits table in an exclusive supper club. Several years ago he seemed headed into a brilliant diplomatic career, but then came the dramatic Cuban "purge," and he had to get out of the country. His crime was being on the losing side.

Foreign writers of Jewish extraction more and more are seeking the friendly clime of Manhattan. Emil Ludwig is a frequent visitor, as is Franz Werfel, author of "The 40 Days of Musa Dagh." To them the cordiality of the gentiles as well as the Jews lessens to some extent the sting of being uprooted from native soil. Einstein is most famous of all the exiles. Another of dimension is Max Reinhardt, now directing Werfel's play on Broadway.

But, not all exiles and refugees are here to escape the wrath of foreign governments. There is the ex-convict who came out of prison at the age of 35. He has a family in California. For two years he has been working on an invention, and now it seems that he will win. He can't go home because he doesn't want to stimulate publicity, of which too much has already been visited upon his wife and children. The money will be placed in trust funds for his children. In time his wife is going to join him in New York. And they are to be remarried under the new name he has legally adopted.

One of the first attributes of a good press agent is diplomacy and Benjamin Sonnenberg, walrus mustached but a "smoothie" without, is credited with a feat that would do credit to an ambassador at least.

It seems that while Sonnenberg was handling a fashionable casino on Long Island an unusual crowd attended the opening and the undermanned staff of waiters was sorely harassed taking care of everybody. Sonnenberg noticed one of the waiters staggering weakly with a tray. Upon investigation he discovered that in the rush of things the management had forgotten to feed the waiter.

"You know Napoleon said that an army traveled on its stomach," reminded the waiter. "How can we work if he won't feed us?"

Sonnenberg brought the waiter to a buffet upon which roast squabs were displayed. "Take one of these, sneak out the back, and eat it," instructed he.

Then Sonnenberg called the manager. "You shouldn't have forgotten to feed your men," he reproved. "They'll only do you dirty and feed themselves in their own way. Come out in the back and I'll show you what I mean. That is, I'll show you if you promise never to say anything about it."

With that he brought the manager outside and showed him the waiter surreptitiously feeding on young squab. "See," he cried, "he was so hungry he stole squab. If you had offered him spaghetti and potatoes there would be no necessity for this."

Epilog: those waiters now are the most elegantly fed in the metropolitan area.

The DAILY WASHINGTON MERRY-GO-ROUND

By DREW PEARSON and ROBERT K. ALLEN

WANTED—By United States treasury, one reputable, conservative banker, with bond experience, sympathetic with Roosevelt administration fiscal policies. Salary $10,000.

WASHINGTON—You won't find this ad in the Help Wanted columns, but it is the language President Roosevelt and Secretary Morgenthau are using mentally in looking for someone to fill the shoes of Under Secretary Thomas Jefferson Coolidge.

The Bostonian's resignation is a serious blow to the new deal. An able, experienced banker and bond expert with a high standing in financial circles, Coolidge's departure leaves a bad hole in the treasury.

Morgenthau's dilemma is to find a banker who has the confidence of the financial world and at the same time is pro-new deal. It is like looking for a needle in a haystack. Treasury was suggest that young Henry put the secret service on the trail.

What makes matters worse is that Coolidge is the third man who has quit the post because of disagreement with new deal fiscal policies. As far back as last spring word leaked out that Coolidge was at odds with his chiefs and wanted to quit. Morgenthau urged him to stay and Coolidge yielded. But his views became increasingly critical.

Climax came when the president vetoed Coolidge's suggestion that the budget message contain a recommendation to stabilize the dollar. Instead, Roosevelt issued an executive order renewing for another year his power to raise or lower the value of the dollar. A few days later Coolidge sent in his resignation.

Morgenthau is looking for his new assistant in non-Wall Street quarters. He wants a banker untroubled by the big money maras of the East, hopes to find his man in the West or South.

Eleanor And Edward
Mrs. Roosevelt is accustomed to helping people brag about sitting next to her, but the other day she was the one to do the bragging. At her regular-press conference she was asked:

"Did you know King George V?"
"No. But the Prince of Wales was here."

"Didn't someone give a dinner for the Prince of Wales...?" Mrs. Roosevelt (interrupting): "At which I sat next to him."

"When did the president meet the king?"
"He met the king during the war when he went over to the front in 1918."

"What did you talk about with the Prince of Wales?"
"Good heavens! My gracious, that was a year—ago."

NOTE: Roosevelt was assistant secretary of the navy in 1915.

Exit Drama
Official reason why Jake Baker, WPA censor, killed the WPA theatrical production on Ethiopia and Italy was the state department and fear of offending Italy.

This, of course, had something to do with it. Inside reason, however, was the fact that the next WPA theatrical project was to portray the plight of the Southern sharecroppers.

This is an extremely sore point with the new deal. The cotton curtailment program has made the plight of the Southern tenant farmers worse. The last thing the administration wants is publicity—especially through its own WPA.

Italian complaints to the state department could have been ignored. The WPA actors depicting Mussolini and Emperor Haile Selassie were using exact quotes from these two gentlemen. Sixteen uncomplimentary newspapers were used in checking the quotes and the state department admitted they were O. K.

But the share-croppers offered a greater problem. It now looks as if the only thing the WPA theatrical project can put on the stage is murder and gang warfare. Other than they will step in some diplomatic, senatorial, or big business toe.

NOTE: Jake Baker, WPA czar who killed the Ethiopian-Italian drama, once lived in Greenwich Village, was considered a great Bohemian, follower of the stage.

Historic Struggle
In a lone, narrow, high-ceilinged room on the ground floor of the capitol, a momentous struggle is being waged in strictest secrecy.

The room is the meeting place of the senate foreign relations committee, comprising most of the big names of the senate. The issue is the all-important one of permanent legislation to replace the temporary neutrality act expiring Feb. 29.

On the surface, the battle is two-sided, with the contestants agreed on the desirability of a new law but differing on its scope. One group, supporting the administration, wants to give the president some discretion in enforcing neutrality. The second, deeply distrustful of executive war-time power, demands explicit restrictions as to what he shall and shall not do.

These two groups, however, are not far apart and could be reconciled were not for a third group. This is extremely guarded in its maneuvers, screening them behind discreet objections and lofty-sounding sentiments. But the truth is that it is opposed to any kind these reductions in our 1937 estimate, we were compelled to recommend reorganization of our activities." He then disclosed Ickes' intentions, saying: "The closing of these offices will help to meet the reduced appropriation."

Sub-committee Chairman Edward T. Taylor, D. Colo., introduced into the hearing record a letter dated Jan. 14, from G. W. Holland, PAB chairman, suggesting the $350,000 appropriation could be reduced to $300,000.

B. W. McLaughlin, assistant director of PAB investigations, told the committee that of 60 Texas criminal cases under the Connally "hot oil" act, eight persons were convicted with 90 days' suspended sentence, but each was fined $150.

He said that between Oct. 15 and Nov. 30, 1935, "there were 74 cases investigated, 35 of which were recommended for prosecution."

John F. Davis, a member of the federal tender board with offices at Tyler, Tex., also testified. Taylor charged the F. T. B. "is a Texas proposition, and Uncle Sam holds the bag, doesn't he?"

Davis said the board "is to protect not only the producers of Texas, but the oil producers of other states, from the production of excess oil in the state of Texas."

ICKES PETROLEUM BOARD TO CENTER WORK IN EAST TEXAS

WASHINGTON, Jan. 29. (UP)—Oil Administrator Harold L. Ickes was disclosed today as planning to concentrate almost the full force of his petroleum administrative board in East Texas by closing down five branch PAB offices in other sections of the country.

His intentions were divulged when the house appropriations committee reported to congress on neutrality legislation.

Committee members say privately that Senator Hiram Johnson, of California, is the leading exponent of this attitude. They lay at his doorstep chief responsibility for the slow dragging out of the committee's secret deliberations. Some of his committee colleagues even go so far as to credit him with a one-man filibuster.

Johnson has repeatedly demanded that the committee withhold decision until the league of nations has definitely declared itself on the long-pending question of an oil embargo against Italy. "As a result, senate floor leaders have told the president it may be necessary to extend the temporary neutrality act 30 or 60 days."

The department of interior appropriation bill. The bureau ordered dissolved were at Los Angeles; Jackson, Miss.; Boston; Oklahoma City, and New York. The Carraige office will be continued.

"Of the $350,000 estimate for petroleum administration for the fiscal year 1937," PAB administrative assistant Samuel Goodacre told the committee, "it is proposed to allocate $175,000 to maintain the federal tender board and the federal petroleum agency, and $175,000 to carry on the work of the division of investigations."

"These amounts are $125,000 and $25,000, respectively, less than the 1936 allocations, and are the minimum amounts required for these activities," Goodacre said that, "in view of

by David Garth

Chapter 25
MORNING FLIGHT
And Allaire could have sworn Terry Willett really loved her. He'd fought for her and she'd been so proud of it. Proud! She nearly laughed. He'd fought for Puff too, and gone to Night Court.

A mouthful of fog. Yes, her father had warned her. Steering an impossible course amid parties, and horse shows, and bachelor collusions, toward the glow of rivers to cross and battles to win. And now Ray was laughing.

She yanked off her silver satin slippers and hurried it savagely out the window.

"That's for you, Willett!" she said furiously.

The gesture seemed to snap something in her. She sank back as if exhausted. The gesture had been silly, insane, and she hated to make silly insane gestures.

She'd made one before, when she sent Terry away when she knew she loved him. Sent him away in his hour of need, the Carteret minister had said.

"Hour of need! It seemed a spar, that phrase, in the floating wreck of a spar that any woman would seize. A strong man had needed her, one of the greatest honors vouchsafed to woman. And she'd sent him away, relinquished all claim to him, sent him to Puff on the rebound. She'd driven him to Puff Harrington.

"It was my fault," she repeated stubbornly. "Mine."

But he had come back to fight a battle for her, to sweat and be hurt and run the gauntlet of an armed and desperate snake, Allaire clung to that fiercely. She had sent him away, but he had come back.

She went to the phone and called Shorty Hasbrouck at the Washington landing field.

"Shorty," she said clearly, "this is Allaire West. My bus is still in the shop. Can you fly me down to Miami tomorrow morning?"

"Sure," said Shorty. "How early?"

"With the sun," said Allaire. She hung up and stood lost in thought. There'd be a big argument around here; might as well get it over. She picked up the house phone and called the butler's pantry.

"Blythe, see if you can find my father. I want to see him right away."

Contact! A group of three people stood on a landing field and watched a little red and black Stinson rising into the early morning sun—Rayburne West, Nell West, and George Fox.

"What got into her?" Ray sounded dazed. "After what she knows about him."

Fox turned and faced them. "It's very simple," he told them steadily. "You starved her for affection when she was young and she's grown up with all that affection stored and accumulating and waiting to get out. And she's made it over lock, stock, and barrel to Terry Willett."

He took a deep breath. "And if you ever prayed in your lives before, you'll pray that her courage and love and fight won't go to waste, but will see her through. Because," and his voice shook, "she's putting all her chips on one turn of the wheel and the odds are against her."

He turned away from them. "What did they know of battle?"

Propionaire! And the coffee chutes were humming again. Coffee! Thousands of bags of it. The Great God Coffee! Hail to Coffee!—it had broken the grip of the revolution. The last mines were being taken up out of the harbor so that the freighters of twenty nations could get in to resume their profitable trade.

Dark-skinned men in white ducks came into Propionaire and filled the hotels and bars. They had been marooned outside by the revolution. They met their friends, embracing with alternate hugs which reminded one of a French general conventionally saluting a decorated polu.

The coffee brokers in their little cubby-holes on the narrow streets were once more at work, and so were the steamship agencies, and freight solicitors. Life Begins at Propionaire.

But of course the revolution had never stopped those days of sodden rain and days of blinding heat. They'd always been there in a place where anything could happen.

Terry Willett and Bucky Corrigan had moved in on the river job. They'd shoved into town the day the armistice was signed. They had things going in two weeks and in two weeks they also knew what they were up against.

Corrigan came down the river to get some more men and ran into difficulties. It was going to be a long job and a lot of the women didn't want either to accompany their men or let them go up to that unhealthy spot in the river.

"The padre had influence, but Corrigan wasn't much good in talking to padres, so he went for Willett. Willett came down impatiently, while Corrigan ended up in Drake's office, looking as though he'd been through a war.

"By golly," he said, lounging in a chair with one puttee leg thrown over the arm. "It's a stinker if I ever saw one. You can't get a hold on the thing—it's like grabbing a handful of coze."

"It's a lough one," agreed Drake, the Coffee Company agent, "but Willett almost licked it before and if that river can be opened to commerce it will be a great thing."

"Yeah, sure, Willett doesn't give a damn about opening the river to commerce, but the job beat his old man and he's dead on beating it. You know what he's figuring on doing?—putting in a system of locks. Why, he hasn't got a chance. Rainy season will be on him before the work's half done, and everything will go blooey."

He shoved his sun helmet back on his head and rolled a cigaret with deft powerful fingers. "Willett's come back from the States funny. He doesn't say much. Doesn't laugh much either. All he wants to do is pull this job through and he's putting his whole life into it."

No, nobody with any sense would have tackled that job. Drake had always felt that. But it was everything to Terry Willett. It was a Debt of Honor.

Corrigan went back to his hotel room in the Santini. He poured out a long shot, fixed a dab of soda into it, and then glass in hand sat back with his feet resting on a chair and prepared to be comfortable.

Willett came in shortly afterward. He was a picture of bronze—his hair, the complexion of his lean square-jawed face, his brown breeches and puttees and his khaki shirt with the sleeves rolled up over tanned forearms.

"What luck with the padre, fellow?"

Willett nodded briefly. "He's going to use his influence. Great institution, padre."

"Yeah, they marry people too. That's another great institution."

Willett picked up the bottle and pulled out the cork. He mixed a quick one and then sank down in a chair with his long legs stuck out before him.

"Ever thought of it, Bucky?"

"Oh, sure," said Corrigan, "lots of times. When I was in the States last I nearly stepped off in a weak moment. Cute kid—Anne Harlow was her name. Came half-way to my shoulder and her eyelashes were so long they got in the way when you kissed her."

"What happened?"

Corrigan wasn't quite sure. It had been three years ago.

"I don't remember exactly. I went to Mexico with the McLean outfit and when that job was over swung south instead of north. She'd have had a sweet life in some hole like this, wouldn't she? And I'd rather be able to shove off somewhere at a moment's notice than be tied up with some babe. Am I right?"

"Yes, I guess you are, Bucky. They don't mix."

"Sure," said Bucky. "Let's get drunk tonight—one last binge."

Willett looked apathetic. "But I'm not going to take care of you," Corrigan said severely. "If you get into any fights you'll have to finish them yourself. Let's understand that."

"Count me out, Bucky. The idea doesn't register. And if you knock over any of these toy policemen I'll boot you in the seat of your intelligence. We can't get into any extra trouble."

Minors Involved In Sixth Of Arrests, Justice Dept. Reveals

WASHINGTON, Jan. 29. (UP)—Statistics compiled by the federal bureau of investigation, U. S. department of justice, show that 15 out of every 100 persons arrested during 1935 were 19 years of age or younger.

The facts were gained from the examination of 392,251 arrest records of persons whose fingerprints were forwarded to the bureau during 1935 by state and municipal law enforcement agencies.

The compilation disclosed that during the year 13,290 individuals were arrested and charged with robbery, 32,649 with burglary, and 11,004 with auto theft. The predominance of youth in those types of crimes is shown by the fact that 7,108 (53.5 per cent) of those arrested and charged with robbery; 19,290 (59.1 per cent) of those charged with burglary, and 7,488 (68.0 per cent) of those charged with auto theft, were under 25.

Many Previously Arrested
During 1935, approximately one-fifth of the 392,251 persons arrested had a record of arrests previous to attaining their majority.

The fingerprints of 1,795 deceased persons were submitted to the bureau from May 1, 1935, to Jan. 1, 1936, in order that they might not be buried unidentified.

Through a search of its files containing a total of more than 5,500,000 fingerprint cards the bureau was able to advise coroners and law enforcement agencies throughout the country, forwarding these fingerprints as to the identities of 457 of the deceased. The contributors of 666 of the 1,795 fingerprint cards had no knowledge of the identities of the deceased persons.

A check of the bureau's files revealed the identities of 158 of these unknown dead persons. They unwittingly in life had provided a means of being identified by committing criminal offenses. The 508 unknown deceased persons who were buried unnamed apparently led respectable lives and had not availed themselves of the opportunity of sure identification by placing their fingerprints in the civil identification section of the bureau, which is maintained separately and apart from the criminal records.

Nearly 6,000 persons sent their fingerprints to the federal bureau of investigation during December, 1935, to be placed in its civil identification file. These personal identification records came from such far away points as Yokohama, Honolulu, England, Puerto Rico and Alaska, as well as from all sections of the United States. The value of having a permanent and reliable means of identification on file is rapidly becoming apparent, officials said.

All personal identification records are filed apart from the criminal records in Detroit. The stigma of criminality is being divorced from fingerprints is evidenced by the receipt in the bureau on Dec. 10, 1935, of 25 sets of fingerprints taken at a meeting of the Parent-Teachers Association, Yakima, Wash.

Civic Groups Aid
Among those actively engaged in furthering civil identification are the Junior Chamber of Commerce, San Francisco, and the sheriff's office in Detroit. These organizations have submitted a large number of personal identification fingerprint cards to be placed in the files.

The value of a sure means of identification is well illustrated in many cases throughout the country, officials point out.

All citizens, if they so desire, may have their fingerprints placed in the federal bureau of investigation's files for personal identification purposes in its civil identification files.

Retail Sales Show A Gain

Motor Vehicle Business Helps To Swell Total In December

Retail sales of 676 independent stores in Texas reporting to the bureau of foreign commerce, department of commerce, increased about 21 per cent in dollar volume for December, 1935, as compared with December, 1934. Excluding sales by motor vehicle dealers, an increase of approximately 8.5 per cent would be shown. The large increase in dollar sales by these dealers reflects the early introduction of new models. This report, in the main, does not cover stores doing a sales volume of less than $20,000 annually and excludes department stores. Twenty kinds of business are represented, nine of which, due to an insufficient number of reports, are contained in miscellaneous or in group totals.

Without adjustment for seasonal influences December sales showed an increase of 15.3 per cent from November. There were a like number of working days in both months.

All of the kinds of business represented, except grocery stores that do not handle meats, showed an increase from last year. The greatest were those of 62 per cent shown by motor vehicle dealers and 28 per cent by lumber and building material dealers. Without adjustment for seasonal variations, the greatest gains from November to December were in the apparel group. Whereas the group total showed an increase of 40 per cent, men's and boy's clothing increased approximately 50 per cent and women's specialty shops had gain of about 38 per cent.

Strange Company
"It was strange to see you in such company, Governor Smith. Over here marches the same army with which you fought for social justice for a quarter of a century—Senator Wagner, Franklin Roosevelt, Miss Perkins, Senator Norris, and those other comrades of your earlier and better days.

"The glamour of your presence and the brilliance of your personality so completely dominated the gathering that in the half-shadows were concealed the lurking figures of men who fought for 25 years against the principles of government you espoused."

The speech, distributed to newspaper offices early by the democratic national committee publicly bureau, was replete with quotation from Smith's positions in the past.

"Yes," said Robinson, "Governor Smith has not only changed sides in the great battle but his whole outlook seems to have undergone a transformation. He has forgotten apparently the issues upon which he ran for the presidency."

Some Workers Excluded
Systems for re-employing the worker are not yet crystallized. The federal re-employment office may be used. If the worker refuses a proffered job he will be denied compensation. However, he won't be denied if: 1. His refusal is due directly to a strike or lock-out; 2. If he refuses work under conditions substantially below prevailing ones; 3. If the employer tries to impose conditions on his affiliations with labor organizations.

These classes of workers will not be covered by unemployment compensation or old age benefits: agri-

C-C Directors To Meet Friday

Regular meeting of the chamber of commerce directors will be held from the chamber offices Friday at 7:30 p. m. when several important issues will come up for discussion. W. T. Strange, Jr., manager, said Wednesday.

Among things to be considered will be plans for the membership campaign, delayed because of inclement weather. Letters are being mailed to present members and to new prospects, said Strange. The drive for members will be short and intensive.

Directors will also take up the matter of promoting some centennial attractions for Big Spring and this section.

Convict

He bled profusely as he was rushed to the hospital.

The call was issued for blood donors, and several convicts volunteered. A quart of blood from the hospital was injected into the dying man's veins, but it brought no rally.

The brilliant, but perverted minds of Loeb and Leopold, which led them to attempt the "perfect crime," probably contributed to Loeb's violent death.

He had won, along with Leopold, the privilege of instructorship in the prison correspondence school. It was in connection with this work that he was thrown into propinquities with Day, generating the animosity which led to the fatal fight.

Loeb, nearly six feet tall and husky, ordinarily would have been more than a match for the slight inmate from Chicago. But desperation, prison officials said, apparently gave Day strength to overpower his annoy.

Cold Wave

or improve stock for winter season, feeding was begun by a majority of ranchers here a few days ago.

Most stockmen said they believed livestock would weather the storm well if sleet or snow was the worst the weather produced. Sheep ranchers were fearful that the sleet might turn to cold rain and wreak serious damage to their flocks.

They found some encouragement in the fact that lambing season, most treacherous period of the year for sheep, would not start until about April 1.

Ranchers in Howard county experienced similar concern for 22,000 cattle and 13,000 sheep. They said, however, that the cattle and sheep were in better condition for a cold wet spell than in many years.

From Beaumont, in far Southeast Texas, came reports that freezing weather had left hundreds of cattle dead along the Gulf coast, and ranchmen feared a heavier toll tonight. Weakened by the cold, more animals were dying every hour.

Cowboys in that area have kept the stock moving for the last two nights, but the continuous chill was beginning to eat into the herds.

Poll Tax Payments Increased By 400

Poll tax payments jumped by approximately 400 Tuesday as time for paying for the right to vote in at least four important elections his year grew short.

After Friday evening poll taxes cannot be obtained for voting in 1936 elections.

Wednesday morning 3,276 persons had either paid their poll taxes or had received exemption certificates. With a railroad payday at hand, political observers predicted that despite adverse weather conditions there would be a run on the tax collector's office from now until Friday evening.

Plan To Further Campaign Against Livestock Thefts

Sheriff Jess Slaughter and Marion Edwards, secretary of a newly organized cattlemen's protective association, will go to Colorado Saturday for a meeting with Mitchell county stockmen and farmers at 2 p. m. from the county court house.

They will seek to interest ranchers and farmers in that area in the association which was organized last Saturday for Howard, Martin, Glascock and Borden counties.

More than $200 had been raised Tuesday to go into the association as a reward fund for information leading to the capture and conviction of thieves preying on stockmen and farmers.

Officials of the association stressed the fact that the association will extend its scope to cover chickens and farm animals. They urged farmers interested in the move to contact either Slaughter or Edwards.

Rewards will be posted by the association for information leading to conviction of rustlers and chicken thieves. The association will cooperate in other ways with peace officers in combating the increasing number of cattle thefts.

One family and two army enlisted men are the only inhabitants at Fort Sumner, S. C.

Centennial Feature At 1936 Rodeo Is Proposed

Directors of the Big Spring Cowboy Reunion, Inc., will hear a proposal by W. T. Strange, Jr., chamber of commerce manager, to develop a centennial attraction as an added drawing card for the third annual rodeo here.

The reunion has one of the best equipped plants in the state for staging a rodeo and it has attracted larger crowds in succeeding performances.

Edward Takes Up Foreign Problems

LONDON, Jan. 29 (AP)—Britain's new monarch, King Edward, turned his attention to European relations today as the British cabinet met to debate expansion of home defenses.

Edward conferred with Prince von Starbemburg, pro-Italian vice-chancellor of Austria, and Baron von Neurath, foreign minister of Germany.

High School P-T. A. Has Short Business Meeting

The High School P-T. A. met Tuesday afternoon at the high school building with a fair representation. In the absence of the president and vice-president, Mrs. W. J. McAdams, secretary, presided.

The meeting was devoted entirely to matters of business. Due to so much illness the program was dispensed with.

Claire Trevor Has Lead Role In Queen Film

A dramatic story of a girl who faces the guns of the underworld to shield a society that shunned her is revealed in the picture, "My Marriage," which features Claire Trevor and appears at the Queen Wednesday and Thursday. Kent Taylor, Pauline Frederick and Paul Kelly head the supporting cast.

Involved innocently with a gangster who masquerades as a society life, Miss Trevor is seen as the aristocratic girl who is spurned by the social set. Only Kent Taylor sticks by her. He marries her and takes her into his fashionable family. There his mother (Pauline Frederick) tries to break up the romance while pretending to be the girl's friend.

The underworld character reappears to trouble her, and how she defends him and solves the differences with her husband make up the climax of the story.

Forty-nine persons died in 1935 in Miami, Fla., from injuries suffered in traffic accidents.

about your winter gasoline

A man pulled up to the pump and told the dealer, "I would almost use Conoco Bronze just for the way you advertise it, if nothing else. You don't get people mixed up on all kinds of things they can't tell about anyway. You just say it starts easy, and it does, no matter what weather I run into around here. I am a salesman, outside all day with this car. It is not nursed all the time, like a fire engine or something, sitting in its nice warm house. But when I've parked a long while—maybe around zero—I just come out and she goes... no foolin' around. What else would I want this weather? I don't say all the mileage isn't fine with me, and I'm up in front when the light changes, too. But the big thing is this—I can't miss calls; cold or no cold, I've got to know I can start. Fill 'er up with Bronze, please—it'll take about 12." Continental Oil Company, Established 1875
