$1.09 trillion budget sent to Congress

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan sent Congress a $1.09 trillion election-year budget today combining his most restrained military request ever with conciliatory proposals for more spending on education, science and the fight against AIDS.

"Reducing the deficit is one of the nation's central economic policy concerns," Reagan said in his eighth and, for practical purposes, final budget message to Congress.

The new budget calls for reducing the federal deficit — which stood at $78 billion when Reagan took office in 1981 — to $129.5 billion in the fiscal year that begins next Oct. 1.

That's down from $150.2 billion last year and the $146.7 billion estimated for 1988 — and even below the target of $136 billion called for in the Gramm-Rudman deficit-reduction law.

Even in advance of its formal submission today, Reagan's fiscal 1989 budget was expected to generate few fireworks on arrival at Capitol Hill.

That's largely because it adheres to a two-year budget pact struck with Congress last November that sets limits for both military increases and social program spending cuts — the two most divisive areas in Reagan's past seven budgets.

And, in the final year of the Reagan presidency, few in either Congress or the administration seem eager for the lengthy budget process that has occurred in recent years.

Budget leaders, in fact, played down prospects of a major new budget confrontation.

House Budget Committee Chairman William H. Gray III, D-Pa., on Wednesday cautioned against "unnecessary battles over additional spending cuts that, in this election year, might achieve nothing."

Said House Majority Leader Thomas Foley, D-Wash., "We hope to have early resolution of the budget. ... I think the budget summit agreement will facilitate speedy action."

Reagan told Congress his new budget "proposes a gradual deficit reduction in accord with the bipartisan budget agreement (with Congress). It reflects the priorities of Congress as well as the administration."

The new Reagan budget contends that the "economy has shown few signs of serious damage" from last October's stock market plunge, and that the recent boom in exports holds out the promise of continued economic expansion.

In fact, the new Reagan budget assumes a declining rate of inflation, falling interest rates and economic growth of 2.4 percent this year and 3.5 percent next year.

Reagan's new budget proposed military spending authority of $299.5 billion in fiscal 1989 and actual outlays for the year of $294 billion — up from $292 billion in 1988 in budget authority and $285.5 billion in outlays.

That increase, which doesn't even keep pace with inflation (4.4 percent last year), represents the smallest military spending increase ever sent to Congress by Reagan — and is likely to result in reductions in some of the military forces and weapons programs that have grown substantially since he became president.

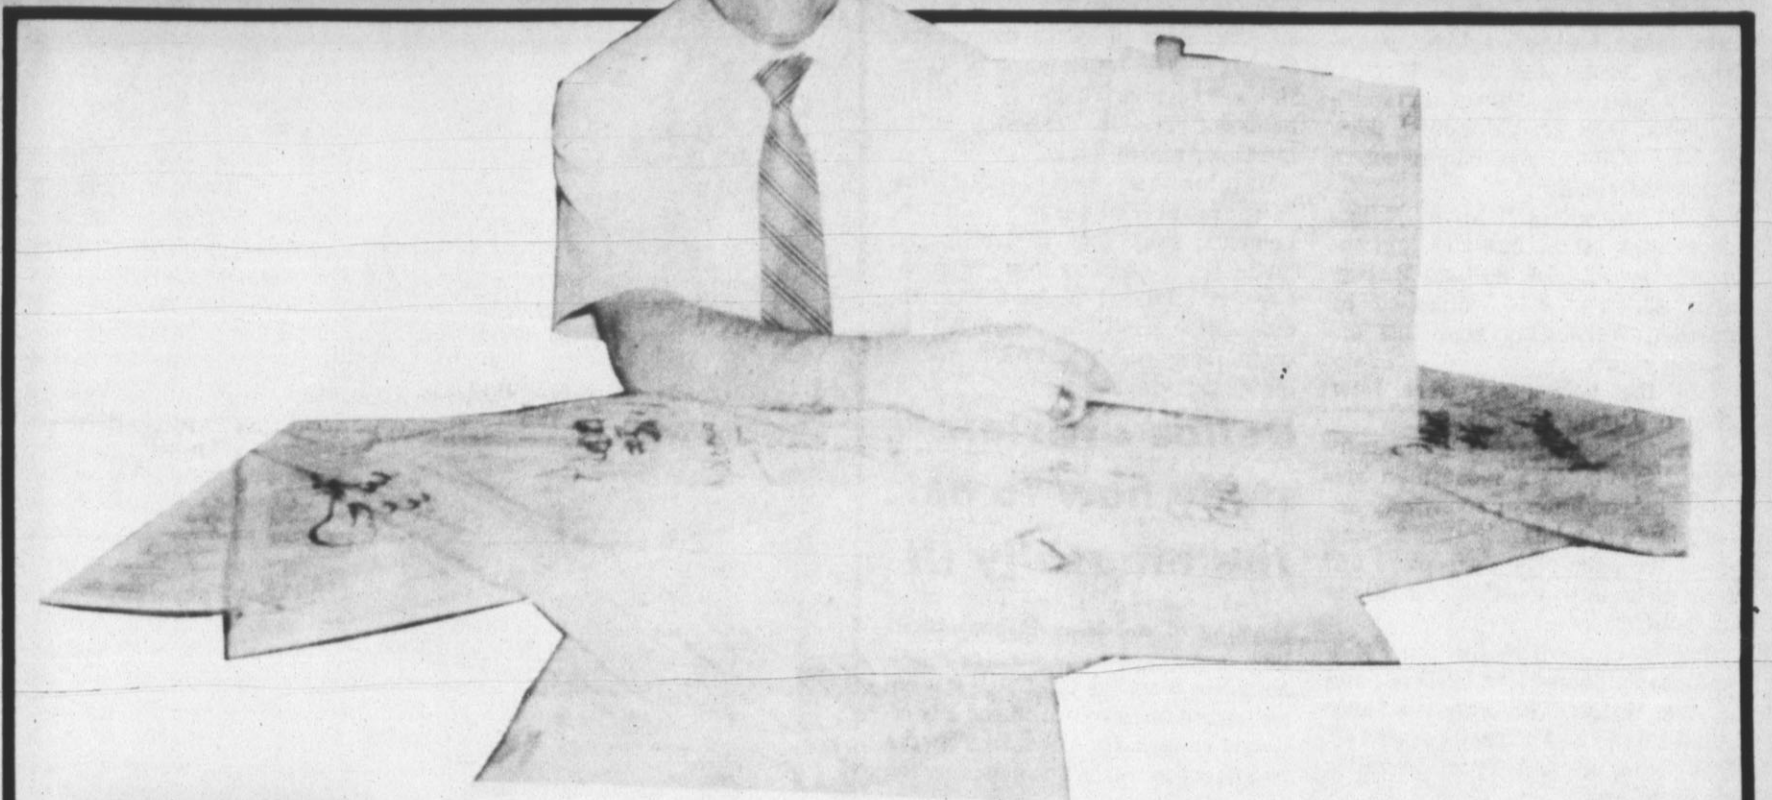

Reagan's budget recycles a number of favorite administration proposals for reducing government programs.

These include the abolition of the Interstate Commerce Commission, the Economic Development Administration, the Small Business Administration's direct loan program and urban development action grants.

In addition, Reagan was to propose once again the sale of Amtrack rail passenger service, naval petroleum reserves and regional power marketing authorities.

The president laced his 1989 request with a number of items certain to be politically palatable — including nearly $2 billion for additional AIDS research and training.

In addition, Reagan — who last year caused congressional consternation by proposing sharp cuts in education spending — was proposing a $1.8 billion increase for education.

Plenty of ballots

County Clerk David Ruland seems to have a custom-printed ballot for everyone as he leafs through the 18 ballots required for the March 8 primary election. Each precinct and party must have a different ballot because of precinct chairman elections for each party. Absentee voting is now underway at the county clerk's office at the Deaf Smith County Courthouse.

Absentee voting underway

Absentee voting for the March 8 primary election is now open from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. at the county clerk's office on the second floor of the Deaf Smith County Courthouse, according to County Clerk David Ruland.

Ruland said the new regulations concerning absentee voting state that a person may vote by absentee ballot without cause, whereas previously a person could only vote by absentee ballot if one were older than 65 or if one were going to be absent for the regular election.

Absentee voting will run until 5 p.m. on March 4. Ruland said he is considering Feb. 27 (a Saturday) as an extra day to vote by absentee ballot for those not able to vote Monday through Friday.

Ruland added that voting this year may be a little confusing since each precinct must have a separate ballot.

"Everything is the same on all the ballots except when you come to the county commissioner races," said Ruland. "Only the 1st and 3rd precincts have county commissioners up for election."

Ruland said there must be separate ballots for each precinct chairman running—nine in all for both parties.

When a person votes on either the absentee ballot or on March 8, the voter cannot cross over and vote on both the Democratic and the Republican tickets, said Ruland.

Ruland also said a voter does not need to vote on each race, nor does the voter have to present a voter registration card at the time he votes.

"But they will have to sign an affidavit stating the reason they don't have the card with them such as 'I lost it,' or 'I left it at home,'" said Ruland.

Gore stumps by satellite

HOUSTON (AP) — Sen. Albert Gore Jr. says some Democratic candidates for the presidential nomination are out of touch with mainstream voters as they move to the Super Tuesday states.

Those candidates, he said, are Jesse Jackson, Missouri Rep. Richard Gephardt and Massachusetts Gov. Michael Dukakis.

"All three of them have taken positions on foreign policy and defense policy that are completely out of touch with the mainstream voters in this country," Gore said Wednesday morning at a conference for supporters telecast via satellite from KPRC-TV in Houston.

Gore had other scheduled stops in Beaumont, Shreveport, La., and Dallas on Wednesday as he continued his campaign in the South and other Super Tuesday states.

During a two-hour stop in Shreveport, Gore talked about revitalizing Louisiana's struggling oil industry.

"In the first 90 days of the Gore administration, we're going to turn that around with a national energy policy, with new incentives for domestic oil and gas production here in the United States of America to reduce our reliance on imported oil," he said.

The first major event of the Super Tuesday campaign is tonight when candidates from both parties converge on Dallas for a debate for the prized delegates from the March 8 primaries.

Texas, which leads the 20 Super Tuesday states with 197 Democratic and 111 Republican delegates, is a crucial link for candidates surviving the New Hampshire primary.

Gore said Gephardt, who finished second in New Hampshire and won the Iowa caucuses, has flip-flopped on issues in his campaign.

"It is now very widely known that Dick Gephardt's positions adopted for the Iowa caucuses are just completely at odds with what he's done in the last 12 years in the House and Senate," he said. "There's a very long list, it's not just one or two positions."

The Tennessee senator said he has no regrets about skipping the New Hampshire primary and Iowa caucuses and turning his money and attention to the Super Tuesday states.

Gore, who finished fifth in the New Hampshire primary Tuesday with about 7 percent of the vote, had campaigned little there.

Kennedy joins Supreme Court

WASHINGTON (AP) — Anthony McLeod Kennedy joined the Supreme Court today as history's 104th justice, bringing a crucial tie-breaking vote to a court hampered by a vacancy the past eight months.

Kennedy, a 51-year-old federal appellate judge from Sacramento, Calif., was sworn in amid the pomp and circumstance of a Supreme Court ceremony.

He also took a separate oath of office at a later White House ceremony.

President Reagan's third choice for the job, Kennedy was confirmed by a 97-0 vote of the Senate 15 days ago — a tranquil conclusion to the political storm sparked by Justice Lewis F. Powell's retirement last June 26. The Senate rejected the president's first choice, Robert H. Bork. A second nominee, Douglas H. Ginsburg, withdrew after admitting he had smoked marijuana while a law professor.

Kennedy, although a conservative for his 12 years on the federal bench, is considered more of a moderate than either Bork or Ginsburg.

Little is known about Kennedy's specific views on abortion regulation, affirmative action, church-state relations or the other politically sensitive issues on which the high court is closely divided.

He is the third Reagan appointee to join the court, following Justices Sandra Day O'Connor and Antonin Scalia. Reagan also elevated William H. Rehnquist to the chief justice's post when Warren E. Burger retired in 1986.

A busy schedule awaits Kennedy. The court, returning from a four-week recess, convenes in an all-day conference behind closed doors Friday and returns to the bench Monday to begin three days of oral argument sessions.

One of the arguments focuses on whether private clubs may exclude women and racial minorities as members.

Kennedy was criticized during his Senate confirmation hearings for his past membership in such exclusive clubs.

The absence of a ninth justice for more than half the court's 1987-88 term has resulted in some significant deadlocks.

For example, the court split 4-4 in December when deciding whether a state may require some teen-agers seeking abortions to wait 24 hours after telling their parents or a judge about their decision.

The justices also split 4-4 last month over the validity of an affirmative action program designed to promote more blacks and Hispanics in the New York City Police Department.

Such votes automatically uphold the lower court's ruling but set no national precedent.

Moon unhappy over animals

From staff and wire reports
An inmate known as the Deer Man says he escaped from prison last Dec. 31 because he was upset about having to get rid of some of his animals.

For nearly six years, convicted murderer Millard Moon has been an inmate at the Jester III prison unit where he has raised wild deer, cats, rabbits and plants. He was convicted and sentenced to life for the Jan. 1, 1980 murder of his girlfriend in Hereford.

The animals kept the 49-year-old inmate busy and he once said it was almost as if he weren't doing time.

But Moon escaped from the Fort Bend County prison last New Year's Eve by setting a boiler room on fire that shorted out the electricity and then escaping over a fence.

"They made me get rid of two of my cats. I'd hear some of the officials around there say, 'Man, we need to get rid of these deer, this, that and the other,'" Moon said.

"I just got to thinking, and I said, 'I ain't staying here no more.'"

After escaping, Moon was arrested Jan. 2. He is now at the Fort Bend County jail where he awaits trial on escape and arson charges.

He said fear for his animals as well as his failure to win trusty status and parole prompted him to set the boiler room on fire.

"I felt a grudge in my heart," he said. "I said, Well, I want to hurt back."

Texas Department of Corrections Jester III Warden Morris Jones said he and other prison employees paid the $200 fee for a state license, dated October 1987, to ensure the 14 deer could remain on the prison farm. He confirmed that he told Moon to get rid of two cats that were not vaccinated but denied ordering him to kill them.

"Here's a man who had everything going for him and threw it away. Probably in a couple years he could have been home," Jones said.

Moon was sentenced to life in prison for the murder of Lillie

Mae Walker, 50. Moon had been living with Walker.

Walker was found lying in a pool of blood by her grandchildren. She had been beaten about the head with a hammer and strangled with an electrical cord.

Moon was captured two months later in Eugene, Ore., and was extradited to Hereford. He pleaded guilty to murder and was sentenced to life in prison by 22nd District Judge Wes Guley.

He had served time in prison before, sentenced to seven years in TDC after a Lampasas County burglary. He was paroled shortly before moving to Hereford in late 1979.

UN troops scouring Lebanon for Marine

TYRE, Lebanon (AP) — Heavy rain today hampered U.N. peace-keeping troops and Shiite Moslem militiamen searching in south Lebanon for a kidnapped U.S. Marine officer who commands a U.N. observer unit.

U.N. helicopters flown by Italian pilots took off at dawn to join the search for Lt. Col. William R. Higgins, 43, who was kidnapped by gunmen Wednesday near this ancient port city.

But the helicopters were later grounded by the downpour.

"This is making the search hazardous," said a police spokesman who spoke on condition of anonymity according to regulations. "It's slowing down the pace. The helicopters are grounded until weather conditions improve."

Troops of the U.N. Interim Force in Lebanon, known as UNIFIL, and Justice Minister Nabih Berri's Shiite Amal militia had virtually sealed off the region around Tyre, 50 miles south of Beirut.

"We hope the kidnapers will have no chance of slipping out with their captive. That's why all exits have been blocked," an Amal spokesman said on condition of anonymity.

No group has claimed responsibility for the abduction of Higgins, the second American military officer ever abducted in Lebanon. The first, Col. Robert Morgan, was kidnapped by Palestinian guerrillas in 1974 as he was driving on Beirut's airport highway and freed later that year.

U.N. Undersecretary-General Marrack Gouling arrived in Beirut from Damascus, Syria, after Higgins' kidnapping and held emergency meetings with President Amin Gemayel and acting Prime Minister Salim Hoss.

Gouling told reporters he conveyed U.N. Secretary-General Perez de Cuellar's concern for the kidnapped Marine and stressed: "I'm urging all sides to act quickly for his early release."

UNIFIL spokesman Timur Goksel said the search launched Wednesday continued through the night with U.N. troops operating in their operational zone and Amal active in non-U.N. sectors.

He said Amal, the dominant force in the region, "has vowed to carry on the search until Higgins is found."

The militia teamed up with UNIFIL to search for Higgins, a native of Danville, Ky., soon after he was kidnapped.

Daoud Daoud, Amal's military commander in south Lebanon, met today with UNIFIL commanders at the Lebanese Army's Tyre barracks to coordinate the search effort. He told The Associated Press as he went into the meeting: "We're capable of confronting the people who've carried out the abduction if need be. But I hope a quick, happy ending will be accomplished."

He said the kidnapping was "aimed at sabotaging security in south Lebanon, getting a ransom and destroying Amal's public image."

Officials on Wednesday said two gunmen in a brown Volvo car seized Higgins after blocking the coastal highway three miles south of Tyre. He was driving back to UNIFIL headquarters in Naqoura after meeting Amal officials.

Higgins has commanded the 76-member Observer Group, Lebanon, since Jan. 8. The group, made up of officers from 16 countries, is attached to the 5,800-man, nine-nation UNIFIL, deployed in south Lebanon since 1978 to police the border with Israel.

Dallas officials study how to aid the mentally ill

DALLAS (AP) — The fatal shooting of a Dallas Police officer last month by a mentally ill, homeless man has prompted law enforcement, mental health and city officials to look for ways to improve treatment and avert violence by the mentally ill.

Police Chief Billy Prince met Wednesday with mental health advocates, saying the Jan. 23 shooting of officer John Chase persuaded him to speak out on the need for better treatment.

Carl D. Williams, who died in an exchange of gunfire after he shot and killed Chase in downtown Dallas, had been diagnosed 10 years earlier as a paranoid schizophrenic.

"We need to help get these people off the street," Prince said. "If the mental health care had been better he wouldn't have been out there."

Mental health officials told the Dallas City Council Wednesday that mobile teams of psychiatric nurses and trained caseworkers should be placed at Parkland Memorial Hospital to help defuse potentially violent situations.

County health officials submitted a report during the meeting which concludes that "many emergency crises could be effectively interrupted if professionals were available seven days a week, 24 hours a day to be dispatched to the scene."

Council members said they favor such a plan, but said costs and coordination would have to be examined before a decision is made.

"This thing should have been pursued much earlier, before the Chase shooting," said Deputy Mayor Pro Tem Diane Ragsdale. "Without question, I can think of three shootings within my district of persons who were clearly mentally ill."

While Prince said that although he earlier laid blame for the shooting to an anti-police atmosphere created by department critics, he said Wednesday he was unaware of Williams' history of mental illness at the time.

Mental health experts estimate that only a small fraction of the mentally ill who suffer from certain kinds of brain diseases may become dangerous. But Prince said officers regularly deal with "more than a few time bombs" who need treatment.

Energy machine inventor appealing for patent

WASHINGTON (AP) — An inventor who claims he has devised a machine that produces more energy than it uses says he will appeal a judge's refusal to force the government to give him a patent for his invention.

"I am pleased the judge has finally ruled because I am counting on getting up to the higher court," Joseph W. Newman said Wednesday after U.S. District Judge Thomas Penfield Jackson rejected his lawsuit against the U.S. Patent and Trademark Office.

"I was very certain he was going to be consistent and rule against me," said Newman, 51, of Lucedale, Miss.

Jackson upheld the Patent Office's refusal to grant a patent for the device, saying there was insufficient scientific evidence to support Newman's claim the machine converted matter into energy.

Patent examiners rejected Newman's application after ruling that such a machine would violate the second law of thermodynamics. That law of physics holds that energy is inevitably consumed by any mechanical process so that a machine cannot produce more energy than is used to power it.

The same law rules out the existence of similar, so-called "perpetual motion" machines that some inventors have claimed at various times to have produced.

Newman and his attorney, John Flannery, contended that Jackson had improperly rejected the findings of court-appointed expert William Schuyler, himself a former patent commissioner, that the machine worked as Newman claimed it did.

"We have an expert ... who agrees with our view and we have a district court judge's opinion that differs with that," Flannery said. "So I think we will have to go the Court of Appeals for a tie-breaker."

Ruling on the five-year-old lawsuit, Jackson said Newman had only produced evidence to support his theory that was "anecdotal and largely qualitative rather than quantified measured data."

Nor had Newman, the judge found, rebutted the findings of the National Bureau of Standards, which tested the machine and concluded: "The device did not deliver more energy than it used."

Newman, who has demonstrated his motor to a congressional subcommittee, claims that it converts matter he calls "gyroscopic particles" into energy.

But the judge found that "aside from Newman's own somewhat metaphysical writings which appear at multiple points throughout his patent application there is no evidence whatsoever ... from which to find the existence of such 'gyroscopic particles,' their observable (or measurable) 'release' or 'reaction' within the device."

Newman's machine resembles an ordinary electric motor except for a large coil of wire used to create an electromagnetic field when powered by batteries.

Babbitt/du Pont may quit

By LAURA KING
Associated Press Writer

The battle for the White House stood to claim a pair of casualties today — Democrat Bruce Babbitt and Republican Pete du Pont — while most of the surviving contenders marched south for a campaign blitz leading up to Super Tuesday and its huge haul of delegates.

Republican party regulars in Nevada were bracing for a possible assault by Pat Robertson's "invisible army" as they geared up for a non-binding straw poll tonight. And Democrats were set for back-to-back debates, starting tonight in Texas, the biggest Super Tuesday state.

The Democratic field looked likely to lose one of its number today. Babbitt, after disappointing finishes in last week's Iowa caucuses and Tuesday's New Hampshire primary, said he would probably call it quits today — a few weeks shy of a year in the race.

"There's a point at which you draw the curtain gracefully. ... That's the way I'm leaning right now," the former Arizona governor said Wednesday night.

Babbitt, who formally announced his candidacy on March 10, 1987, failed to set the electorate afire with his call for a national sales tax to combat the federal deficit, but received good press reviews for his candor and wry humor.

Gary Hart, who finished last among Democrats in New Hampshire, headed home to Denver, where he said his campaign would continue but not for reasons of "ego and ambition."

Financially strapped Paul Simon, who placed second in Iowa and third in New Hampshire, said he would hang on at least until next week. But the Illinois senator said that without a win in Minnesota's precinct caucuses or South Dakota's primary on Tuesday he would have to drop out.

Another candidate for withdrawal was the patrician Pierre S. du Pont IV, an heir to a chemical-company fortune who prefers to be known as just plain Pete. The former Delaware governor, who made poor showings in the early contests, called a news conference this afternoon in Wilmington, and a campaign source indicated it was the end of the road.

Du Pont entered the Republican race on Sept. 16, 1986, and sought to present himself as the conservative alternative.

Bush, who was campaigning in Missouri today, brushed aside complaints from Dole that he had misrepresented the Kansas senator's positions on taxes, an oil-import fee and arms control in a flood of commercials just before Tuesday's New Hampshire primary.

"I'm not going to dwell on it," the vice president said. "I don't want to be drawn into something like that. Keep it on a high plane."

Dole, who beat Bush in Iowa and had hoped to deliver the knockout punch in New Hampshire, promised to hit back if attacked again. Which he was — by Rep. Jack Kemp, campaigning in Minnesota, who hit Dole's record on taxes and Social Security.

The Democrats' New Hampshire victor, Michael Dukakis, footlooted it South and took quick aim at Tennessee Albert Gore, who has hinged his campaign on a strong showing on March 8, when all the Southern states but one hold primaries or caucuses.

"There's a mythology about the South as if it's some kind of foreign country. It's nonsense," said Dukakis, who picked up endorsements Wednesday from former Kentucky Gov. Martha Layne Collins and former New Orleans Mayor Dutch Morial.

Rep. Richard Gephardt, who finished second in New Hampshire, was campaigning in South Dakota, which holds a "beauty contest" primary on Tuesday.

Jesse Jackson, who made respectable showings in Iowa and New Hampshire, was back in the South on a swing through Florida, Texas and Alabama.

Elliot is professor of cello at the University of Houston.

77 to run against Mecham in election

PHOENIX, Ariz. (AP) — A Socialist and a saxophonist are among the dozens of Arizonans — 77 at last count — lining up for the chance to run against Gov. Evan Mecham in a May 17 recall election.

Only two, Democrat Carolyn Warner and former U.S. House minority leader John Rhodes, a Republican, are given any real chance by political observers of unseating the impeached GOP governor.

But some of the lesser-knowns still insist their candidacies are worthwhile.

Dave Colosimo of Phoenix, a former teacher and a saxophone player in local bands, said he is working full-time on the race.

"If I didn't think I could win I wouldn't run," Colosimo said. "If I can run a household with five children and a wife, then I think I'd be pretty able to balance the books when I got into the office."

However, Colosimo acknowledged his candidacy so far is a "one-man show." He has never sought public office before but said, "I was president of my senior class — that's a joke."

Meanwhile, the state Senate on Wednesday granted Mecham a one-week delay of his impeachment trial originally set to begin Monday, but defeated two motions for further delay offered by the embattled governor's attorney, Murray Miller.

The Senate rejected Miller's request that the trial be put off until criminal charges accusing Mecham of concealing a $350,000 campaign loan are tried. The lawyer had contended that an impeachment trial would prejudice the criminal trial jury.

Arizona Chief Justice Frank Gordon, who will preside at the impeachment trial, told the Senate a one-week delay would ultimately save time by allowing some issues to be settled beforehand.

If Mecham is convicted in his impeachment trial, lawmakers could vote to bar him from holding any future political office.

At this point, Mecham will automatically be placed on the recall ballot. All other would-be candidates in the winner-take-all vote must file at least 3,336 valid petition signatures of registered voters by March 18.

Ann Landers

DEAR ANN LANDERS: Recently a great deal of attention has been devoted to sexual harassment of women in the workplace. No doubt this is a very real problem, but what is being done about women who harass each other?

I have observed cattiness, raw hate, venomous jealousy, flat-out backstabbing, outright lying and behind-the-scenes power games.

A worst-case scenario is the deliberate character assassination and slander that women use against each other in self-serving career-advancement tactics. There seems to be at least one in every office. And heaven help the competent and attractive female who is new in the firm. In no time at all her reputation is in shreds.

I have worked with both sexes for a number of years and know that the world's evils cannot be blamed exclusively on one or the other. But when it comes to lousy, mean behavior on the job, woman-against-woman is the worst. So now that we have become such a suit-happy society, watch it, girls. The lady at the next desk or down the hall just might haul you into court one of these days. And I think that would be just dandy. are you with me, Ann?—
Fargo Witness

DAER FARGO: No, I'm not. Since anybody can sue for anything these days, I'm sure there are already plenty of suits pending. We don't need more.

May I suggest, as an alternative to overloading the already clogged dockets, that such complaints be handled inside the company and keep the lawyers out of it?

DEAR ANN LANDERS: Please print this as soon as you can. It's no big deal, but I do believe the aggravation is affecting me, mentally and physically.

My sister is 24, single, likable, talented—and pretty. She lives with my husband and me and our three children. "Sally" is employed part-time, but she has not saved a dime.

We gave her a room of her own, a TV, phone and small stereo. She walks to work and rides the bus to see her boyfriend to whom she gives money. She pays us nothing for room and board, which is OK. We don't need it. But we believe Sally should contribute something toward the water and utility bills. She spends hours in the bathtub and washes her hair and blow dries it every night. Also she uses a lot of detergent, but it would never occur to her to buy a box.

She wears my clothes, earrings and shoes, which would be OK if she'd return them. She takes my cosmetics and perfume. It makes me mad when I have to go looking for my stuff. This girl never wipes up her little spills nor does she hang up her wet towels.

It's hard to be tough on her when she hasn't got a quarter. Right now she owes me $100. I also wish she would buy herself some hair spray and shampoo and leave mine alone.

My husband and I are in our mid-30s, parents of small children. Are we being petty? What's the solution?—No Name/Place, Please

DEAR N.N.: You aren't being petty. You're being stupid by perpetuating this irresponsible girl's dependency by letting her sponge off you.

Insist that Sally pay a fair room and board, leave your things alone and clean up after herself. Spell all this out and ask her to sign an agreement.

Make it plain that if she doesn't live up to it, out she goes. Then keep your word. What you consider generosity is in reality crippling. After all, why should she walk if someone will carry her?

Planning a wedding? What's right? What's wrong? "The Ann Landers Guide for Brides" will relieve your anxiety. To receive a copy, send $2.00 plus a No. 10, self-addressed, stamped envelope (39 cents postage) to Ann Landers, P.O. Box 11562, Chicago, Ill. 60611-0562.

No hockey miracle this time

U.S. rally falls short, 7-5

By HAL BOCK
AP Sports Writer

CALGARY, Alberta (AP) — Twenty minutes of hockey were left, and the prospects weren't pretty for Team USA.

The methodical and meticulous Soviet skaters had built a 6-2 lead with a rat-a-tat offense that seemed almost computer-generated. The puck moved like a magnet from one Soviet stick to another.

Click, clack, click — goal!

Three scores in a stretch of 4 minutes, 22 seconds of the second period had broken the game open. Their first Olympic hockey meeting with the Soviets since the miracle of Lake Placid in 1980 was turning distinctly ugly for this American team.

But 20 minutes of hockey were left and in their dressing room, assistant coach Ben Smith said the U.S. skaters devised a strategy.

"We wanted to see if we could hold them where they were and maybe get a goal," he said. "And then maybe we could get another."

And so on, and so on, and so on.

The formula was simple. Four goals down. Twenty minutes to play. The Americans needed a goal every five minutes. And, oh, while they were doing that, they would need shutout goaltending from Chris Terreri at their end of the ice.

Nothing to it.

The period began with a goal by Lane MacDonald at 3:15 to make the score 6-3. When Scott Fusco connected at 5:47, the capacity crowd in the Saddledome started to get the feeling it was sitting in on something special.

Suddenly, chants of "USA, USA" echoed around the building. Suddenly, a sea of American flags surfaced.

Suddenly, the Soviets seemed to be looking at each other.

Now, with momentum working for them, the Americans turned up the pressure another notch and at 9:08 Todd Okerlund scored to make the score 6-5. With more than 10 minutes left, Team USA was just one goal short of performing its own little miracle.

In the American nets, Terreri said, the words "Lake Placid" never crossed his mind.

"You don't think of things like that," he said. "I was just trying to keep my head in the game. We were pressing so much, I didn't get many chances."

Now the young Americans buzzed around Soviet goalie Sergei Mylnikov, like bees around a honeycomb. He was down, up, thrusting his glove out this way, his stick that way. There were four, perhaps five chances for the tying goal. And then, with 7:05 to play, the signal came from the Soviet bench.

"Timeout!"

Later, assistant coach Igor Dmitriov would explain the Soviet strategy.

"Each team uses timeouts in the most critical moment," he said. "It is the job of the coach to choose the moment for a half-minute break. This was a suitable time for us."

During the 30-second break, the Soviets regrouped while the Americans fidgeted, anxious to get back to business. Hockey rules did not permit timeouts in 1988, so the Soviets had no way to halt the American comeback at Lake Placid. But the timeout worked wonders on this one.

When play resumed, the moment was lost. The Soviets had regained their composure and five minutes later, with 2:01 left to play, Viacheslav Fetisov scored his second goal of the game to end this little fairy tale.

Final score: USSR 7, USA 5.

It was a loss, but one with a small sense of satisfaction in the comeback and the moment when the Americans had the Soviets reeling, staggering so badly they were forced to halt the action.

The miracle victory of 1980 had given way to the moral victory of 1988.

Practicing For Bench Press Meet

Richard Schlabs of Hereford works out in the bench press, preparing for Saturday's first annual Novice Bench Press Contest at the Hereford and Vicinity YMCA. Standing behind him is meet director Jack Johnson, YMCA fitness director. The meet begins at 1:30 p.m.

Novice bench press contest set Saturday at YMCA

By GARY CHRISTENSEN
Sports Editor

The first annual Novice Bench Press Contest is scheduled Saturday at the Hereford and Vicinity YMCA.

Competition begins at 1:30 p.m. at the YMCA, with weigh in set for 11:30 a.m. to noon.

Meet director Jack Johnson notes that this is a specialized weight lifting meet. Many weight lifting meets have competition in the squat and the dead lift, along with the bench press.

Sixteen individuals will compete in the meet, with entries closed for the contest. Weight lifters who have not placed first in any bench press contest or power weight lifting meet were eligible for this contest.

"The reason for having a meet like this is that if you don't have a novice or training meet, a person will say, 'There are already four established weight lifters who can beat me, so why should I enter?'"

"These guys can have some fun in this meet, and not worry about someone coming in and wiping them out," said Johnson, the fitness director at the YMCA.

"Quite often in novice meets, a person can do tremendously well," he adds.

Admission for spectators at the meet will be 50 cents per person.

Entrants will compete in two divisions, with the heaviest eight individuals in one division, and the eight lightest individuals in the other division.

"Because this is a small meet, we will have just two divisions," Johnson said, noting that in larger meets the divisions would be weight classes.

"Each participant gets three lifts. The first one is based on what they have done in practice. In the second lift, they go up 10 to 15 pounds, and for the third lift, they decide on what their limit might be," Johnson explained.

There will be three judges in the meet — one head judge and two side judges. A scoring system known as the "Bob Hoffman Formula" will be used.

"The Hoffman Formula is internationally recognized as a comparison of weight lifters. We will apply the Hoffman Formula to everybody's totals," Johnson said.

Trophies will be awarded to the top three finishers in each division.

On the entry form, Johnson lists 12 possibilities for a lift to be disqualified. These are:

1. During the uplifting, any change of the elected lifting position.
2. Any raising of the lifter's head, shoulders, buttocks, or legs from the bench.
3. Any shifting of same.
4. Bridging in any form.
5. Any heaving or bouncing of the bar from the chest.
6. Allowing the bar to sink excessively into the lifter's chest.
7. Any uneven extension of the arms.
8. Stopping of the bar during the press proper.
9. Any touching of the bar by the spotters before the referee's signal.
10. Failure to wait for the referee's signal.
11. Bracing against the bench with the feet.
12. Bracing the shoulders against the uprights of the bench.

"To my knowledge, this is the first bench press contest here in Hereford," Johnson said.

Our Best Friends Are Cutting Us To Pieces.

Our best friends don't always give us the best treatment. Typically, they invite us into their homes, read us like a book, take what they need from us, and put us aside to use again at their convenience.

It's a tough existence, but we don't mind. In fact, we like it. The news, editorials, and advertising coupons clipped from our pages provide our readers with knowledge, enlightenment, even an occasional 30¢ off on breakfast cereal. We're kind of flattered that people enjoy hanging onto bits and pieces of us - sometimes for years. That's something no other local advertising medium can offer.

So, although our friends keep cutting us to pieces, we'll keep showing up at their homes. Our only request: sharp scissors and a steady hand.

Mavericks' fourth win in five games

Dallas beats Washington

By The Associated Press

The Dallas Mavericks are back on track after a brief detour and are hoping some home cooking will help them maintain their lead in the NBA's Midwest Division.

After losing six-of-seven just before the All-Star break, the Mavericks have now won four-of-five following Wednesday night's 123-108 victory over the Washington Bullets.

And the Mavericks play nine of their next 10 games in the friendly confines of Reunion Arena, where they are 18-5 this season.

"We've had some tough times but we haven't pushed the panic button," said forward Mark Aguirre, who scored a game-high 35 points, 15 in the first quarter.

The return of guard Rolando Blackman to full strength after missing 11 games with a knee injury has coincided with the Mavericks' revival.

"Ro is back to 100 percent now and he gives us another big threat," Aguirre said.

Wednesday night the Mavericks raced to a 20-point first-quarter lead, 39-19, then held off a late Bullets challenge.

"No way we were going to let them catch up," said Aguirre. "We have too much savvy. At no point did I feel uncomfortable."

The Mavericks made their first eight shots of the game, didn't miss over the first five minutes and shot 69 percent from the field in the opening period.

Washington used a pressing defense to make a fourth-quarter run, reducing the lead from 96-71 33 seconds into the final quarter to 111-100 with 2:30 to play. But Dallas' 8-2 spurt over the next 1:18 closed out the Bullets.

"We just tried to build on what we had," said Blackman, who had 18 points. "We let them get kind of close, but then we'd pour it on. That's one thing this team is doing better."

Point guard Derek Harper said the Mavericks will continue to see pressing defenses in tight situations until they prove they can handle the pressure.

"People see we still have a little trouble with it so they'll keep it up," Harper said. "Tonight we handled it pretty well."

Bullets Coach Wes Unseld said that while the Mavericks had only a 51-50 rebounding edge, he felt Dallas beat his team decisively on the boards. Roy Tarpley had 19 rebounds and Sam Perkins added 11 rebounds, eight offensive, for Dallas.

"They killed us on the boards the whole game," Unseld said. "Perkins had a great game. He got a lot of shots on the offensive boards."

The Bullets have lost seven of their last eight games.

John Williams led Washington with 22 points.

In other NBA games, it was Denver 138, Boston 125; Cleveland 115, Philadelphia 107; Milwaukee 115, Seattle 93; Utah 108, Phoenix 103; Portland 110, Los Angeles Clippers 96.

Blair Rasmussen broke Larry Bird's nose and the Boston Celtics' backs.

The 7-foot center-forward scored 34 points, nine more than his previous career high, as Denver defeated the Celtics 138-125 Wednesday night. Rasmussen hit 14 of 19 shots from the field as the Nuggets completed a two-game season series sweep of Boston for the first time in their 11-year history.

The Nuggets outscored Boston 37-24 in the second period to take the lead for good. In the same quarter, Rasmussen scored 10 points during an 18-4 spurt and collided with Bird, breaking the Celtics star's nose.

Bird, averaging 39.2 points since the All-Star break, played sparingly the rest of the way and scored 13 points.

"He was driving and I just got in front of him," Rasmussen said of the collision with Bird. "I felt I got my arms up straight and I felt his face hit my elbow. I thought it was the right call, but when it's a situation like that you've got a 50-50 chance."

"Larry got a broken nose and he was called for an offensive foul," Celtics Coach K.C. Jones said. "When you run into an elbow and get the foul on you, you gotta wonder. The refs' calls and the way we mishandled the ball, we should have lost by 40 points."

U.S. has just one medal so far in Winter Olympics

By STEVE WILSTEIN

AP Sports Writer

CALGARY, Alberta (AP) — Dan Jansen skates one more time tonight for his sister, himself and a beleaguered American team in the Winter Olympics.

The young speed skater won't be favored in this 1,000-meter race, but a nation that suffered with him when he sprawled on the ice in the 500, just hours after his sister's death, will be pulling for him.

"Dan seems to be in good shape mentally, really sound," says Coach Mike Crowe. "I think he's confident. He's a lot more up, a lot more focused, a lot more keyed on what he's doing. I think he will be 100 percent."

The United States has only a single bronze going into the sixth day of the Games, and poor prospects for many more medals. The Soviets lead the medal list with three golds, four silvers and two bronzes.

The U.S. hockey team needed an upset Wednesday night against the powerful, more experienced Soviets in order to have a good shot at reaching the medal round, but a wild rally ended too soon and the Soviets won 7-5.

It was a day of disappointment more than magic all around.

Pirmin Zurbriggen, the stylish Swiss downhill gold medalist, uncharacteristically and quite unexpectedly tripped 150 yards from the finish line in the slalom portion of the combined event and blew a certain gold.

"I knew that to win the gold I only needed to ski safely to the finish line. I was relaxed," he said. "I was totally surprised when I found the gate between my skis and I fell. I still can't understand how it all happened."

Neither could Austrian Hubert Strolz, but he didn't mind. He slipped into first place to take the gold while countryman Bernhard Gstrein moved up for the silver and Swiss Paul Accola got the bronze.

The U.S. barely missed a medal in 5,000-meter speed skating when Eric Flaim of Pembroke, Mass., finished fourth behind gold medalist Tomas Gustafson of Sweden, silver medalist Leo Visser of the Netherlands and bronze medalist Gerard Kemkers, also of the Netherlands.

Swirling, 50 mph winds scuttled Matti Nykanen's quest for a second gold medal in ski jumping. The "Flying Finn," who won the 70-meter jump, was set to try again today in the 90-meter team event.

The final two runs of the women's luge also were postponed until today with the possibility of an East German sweep if the winds kick up too hard again and force cancellation of the runs. American hopeful Bonny Warner of Mount Baldy, Calif., was eighth after two heats.

American Brian Boitano is still dreaming of gold and could move a step closer today in the men's figure skating short program.

He finished second Wednesday to Soviet Alexander Fadeev in the school figures, but is rated stronger in today's program and the free skating finale Saturday. World champion Brian Orser of Canada was third going into the short program.

Social Security

By JIM TALBOT
Social Security Manager

Representative payees are appointed to handle the funds of Social Security beneficiaries who are unable to handle their own funds. To carry out this responsibility, the representative payee must keep informed of the person's current and future needs. The representative payee's first responsibility is to make certain that the person's day-to-day needs for food, clothing, shelter, and personal expenses are met. Beneficiaries who can handle small amounts of spending money should have this made available to them. Social Security benefits may then be used for any special needs, such as school expenses, rehabilitation or medical expenses, insurance premiums, or payments on a house in which the person has an interest. Any money that remains after basic and special needs are met must be saved or invested; money should not be kept at home where it can be lost or stolen, and should not be mixed with the representative payee's own funds. Preferred investments are United States Savings bonds. These should be registered in the name of the beneficiary and with his or her Social Security number. The representative payee is listed in his or her capacity.

Surplus funds should be kept in an interest-bearing account that shows the beneficiary as owner.

Additional information about benefits and the role of the representative payee may be obtained from any Social Security office.

— QUICK ENERGY
NEW YORK (AP) — Ten minutes of exercise will boost your energy better than a chocolate bar, according to the Reebok Aerobic Information Bureau.

It cites a California State University study that found candy produced an immediate increase in energy, followed one hour later by increased tiredness and tension. The researchers then looked at 10 minutes of exercise and found it produced much greater energy and much less tension over the next hour.

High school artists

Nine Hereford High School artists, including, pictured above, Nancy Garza, Raquel Ramirez, Tracy Stone, Annabelle Arellano and Poppy Richardson, participated in the 1988 Scholastic Art Exhibit recently at Western Plaza in Amarillo.

The students' work will be on display the first week of March at Sugarland Mall in Hereford. Other HHS students participating included Jesse Rincon, Steven Rickman, Margarito Reyes and Lance Layton.

Chand presents program on Pakistan

La Affiliatus Estudio Club met recently in the home of Lydia Hopson with Jennie Terrell, president, conducting the business meeting.

Eva Gilliland was granted a leave of absence from membership. The finance committee was allowed to order more cards for sale.

For the program, Pet Ott introduced Nisar Chand, science teacher at Hereford High School. He spoke on his native country, Pakistan, noting that its name comes from the first letter of each state and means 'the land of pure people.' Chand came to the U.S. in 1973, attended school in Dubuque, Iowa, and later attended Panhandle State College in Oklahoma. He married in Guymon, Okla., has three children, and became a U.S. Citizen in 1986.

Chand noted that some of the crops in Pakistan include wheat, rice, and sugar cane. The people are 98% Moslem, are very family-oriented, and have very few divorces. They have a thriving business manufacturing baseballs while steel is also a good business. Pakistan's climate is warm and the country has both desert and mountains.

The next meeting will be held March 1 with Aileen Montgomery and Della Stagner serving as hostesses. Opal Elliston will be program chairman.

Those present in addition to those already mentioned included Tresa Hale, Alberta Higgins, Bea Hutson, Lola Jewell, Etoile Manning, Emily Suggs, Mary Williamson, and one visitor, Verna Sowell.

Whiteface Good Sam Club meets in regular session

Mrs. Howard Hershey presided when members of Whiteface Good Sam Club met recently. Roll call was answered by 25 members and two visitors.

During the business session, Mrs. Clyde Russell read the minutes of the previous meeting and Mrs. Rosalee Northcutt gave the treasurer's report. Also, Morris Crider was elected second vice president; J.C. Mays, song leader; and Mrs. W.H. Patton, pianist.

Members were reminded that those not wearing their vests during regular meetings would be fined.

Also, the newsletter was discussed and Northcutt reported on her trip to the Rose Bowl.

The next meeting was planned March 10 when members will have a salad supper.

Those attending included guests, Mr. and Mrs. Floyd Coker, and members: Rosalie Northcutt and Messrs. Jake Moseley, W.H. Patton, Grant Hanna, Hoss Lafever, Elmer Carlson, Delbert Bainum, Morris Crider, Glen Nelson, L.J. Matthews, J.C. Mays, Howard Hershey and Clyde Russell.

"A pessimist is generally a man who judges other people by what he knows about himself."

—Panhandle Herald, Panhandle, Texas, Aug. 24, 1926.

A French proverb has it that, "A father is a banker provided by nature."

Abundant Life

By BOB WEAR

"I Believe" may be one of the most frequently misused expressions in our daily conversation. True belief must be supported by evidence; factual, objective evidence. Oftentimes, when we are saying, "I Believe," we do not believe in the accurate sense of believing. We have no evidence, or false evidence, making the resulting state of mind 'superstition.'

Superstition is "a belief or practice resulting from ignorance, fear of the unknown; or trust in magic or chance; an irrational abject attitude of mind toward the supernatural, nature, or God resulting from superstitious beliefs or fears."

Some forms of superstition are quite harmless; however, others are very harmful and some are even tragic in their influence. "Many superstitions utilize charms and spells, call on good and evil spirits, foretell the future (or claim to do so), or give magic powers to certain forces or objects." All are discords in the realm of truth and reality.

We do not believe, when there is no true or factual evidence for support. Yes, we usually say, "I believe", and this seems acceptable so far as our language usage is concerned. This, however, does not take such conclusions out of the realm of superstition; because we are actually talking about unfounded and unjustified feelings. These feelings are often nothing more than "vain imaginations", including 'foolish reasoning' and 'erroneous speculation'. They rest on nothing but our 'subjective' thoughts.

Our problem is in the fact that 'unjustified' feelings can be just as real to us as 'justified' feelings. Therefore we must be alert and on guard, because it is generally understood that feeling that we are right does not make us right. All of us can remember times when something we 'felt' was right turned out to be wrong.

Superstition is widespread, but it is an unsatisfactory substitute for beliefs and convictions fashioned and supported by fact and truth.

What Does a typical Brand Reader Look Like?

The Hereford Brand
"We Reach Thousands Every Day!"

That's difficult to say because you are as different as your substantial number would imply! You are one of the 4,100 households we're invited to every evening. That's quite a few. According to the most recent census, our township has slightly less than 5000 households.

Your vocation is part of a broad spectrum as well — white collar, blue collar, owners, managers, cowboys, teachers, housewives, students and professional.

Yet, with all your individual complexities, your interest in local issues and news gives you and other readers a common bond which is separated only by your level of curiosity.

You are an informed, intelligent and often vocal audience, and we're happy to be a part of your household every evening!

Kitchen gadgets help prevent food poisoning

While you can spend hundreds of dollars on gourmet cookware, knives, food processors, pasta makers and other devices, the best investment you could make in kitchen equipment should cost under $25.

That's the price tag food safety expert Marilyn Haggard puts on several simple kitchen tools that can help prevent food-borne illness.

"Most food-borne illness occurs when bacteria grow in inadequately cooled or heated food, or due to cross contamination from raw animal products," says the Texas A&M University Agricultural Extension Service specialist.

She recommends the following kitchen tools to help prevent these problems:

- Acrylic cutting board, about $5-7, depending on size. Knives can leave gashes in a wooden cutting board and juices from raw meat or poultry can get into those gashes. If you don't deep-clean the board, bacteria remaining in the gashes can spread to other foods.
- Meat thermometer, about $4. With a meat thermometer, you can make sure that meat and poultry cook all the way through. Beef and pork are generally considered done when the internal temperature reaches 170 degrees F. Poultry is done at 180 degrees.
- Refrigerator thermometer, about $2.50. Use the appliance thermometer to make sure the temperature of your refrigerator is 40 degrees F. or below and that the freezer is zero or below.
- Timer, about $9. If you don't have a timer on your range, consider buying one. Set the timer for two hours, beginning when perishable food is taken from the stove or refrigerator and ending when the leftovers are stored in the refrigerator or freezer. If perishable food is left on the table or counter after a meal, bacteria will multiply rapidly.

Read food labels to avoid some sulfites

If you're allergic to sulfites, becoming a good label-reader may keep you from experiencing wheezing attacks and other reactions.

"The Food and Drug Administration now has in place several regulations designed to protect people with sulfite sensitivities," says Dr. Alice Hunt, a nutrition specialist.

Labeling regulations that took effect last year require that foods containing 10 parts per million or more of sulfites include that information on the label, she explains.

The specialist notes that wines, canned and frozen shellfish, canned and frozen fruit juices, dried fruits and pickled foods and condiments are just a few of the products still

Senator Bill Sarpalius Reports

PAROLE + DRUGS = TROUBLE

AUSTIN - A report last week indicating high drug use among parolees in "close supervision" programs has underscored the ongoing problems Texas faces as it tries to upgrade its prison and criminal justice systems during a period of rising crime.

The report, based on a study of 300 parolees in Dallas and Houston, found that one-half of the parolees were using marijuana and another quarter were using cocaine. More than a few were using the two drugs together.

All told, 47 percent of those tested by urinalysis were using at least one illegal drug, 16 percent were using two drugs and 4 percent were using three drugs simultaneously.

The results are disturbing for a number of reasons, not the least of which is that use of narcotics by parolees generally is forbidden. The results also indicate the supervision is not as "close" as officials would prefer.

Perhaps most significant, though, is the growing body of evidence that the majority of this country's crimes can be linked directly to drug abuse. If parolees are using illegal drugs regularly, then they clearly are drifting back into the lifestyle that got them in trouble in the first place.

Officials of the Texas Board of Pardons and Paroles, which conducted the study, acknowledge there is a cause for alarm. Texas' prison system already is overcrowded and under court order to expand. The inability of the parolees to avoid a criminal lifestyle only spells further trouble for the strained system.

To a degree, the overcrowding itself also is to blame for the problem. Texas prisons are limited by federal court order to 95 percent capacity, and prisoners that probably should be serving additional jail time are being paroled early to make room for new inmates. The overall number of parolees are increasing, and local probation officials are finding close supervision more and more difficult to maintain.

Several state and local officials say part of the problem can be addressed through better chemical dependency treatment within the prison system. That, of course, takes money, and TDC funds are committed heavily right now to system expansion. The expansion is needed because of the rising crime rate. The rising crime rate is caused to a large degree by substance abuse. You can see this is a very vicious cycle.

The solution to the problem won't come quickly or easily, but it does appear to be coming. A major hurdle has been cleared in that most everyone is aware there is a problem.

From here the task will be one of properly allocating precious financial resources. The first step, obviously, is to expand the prison system to a point where it no longer is unconstitutionally overcrowded. The second, is to find a way to better staff local "close supervision" programs and to improve chemical dependency treatment in TDC.

And, finally, we must continue to educate our young about the dangers of substance abuse. We seem to be making some strides in this direction. Recent studies indicate a decline in drug use among high school students. We would be kidding ourselves, though, if we believed the battle against drug abuse is anywhere close to being won.

If you have questions about crime and substance abuse, or other issues, please write us at P.O. Box 12068, Austin, Texas, 78711.

ASK DR. LAMB

Esophageal Problem BY LAWRENCE E. LAMB, M.D.

DEAR DR. LAMB: For the past year I've been treated by two different physicians for abdominal pain below the ribs on the left side primarily. I've had nausea, pain in my left shoulder and have not been able to lean forward without suffering tremendous abdominal pain. After having various cardiac testing, in addition to a high fiber and lactose free diet, my physician ordered various studies of my stomach.

According to the X-rays, I have an esophageal reflux. Could you please tell me what causes this condition? What kind of diet is recommended? What is the usual course of treatment? If I were to get pregnant, would this condition recur?

DEAR READER: Esophageal reflux means that the contents of your stomach leak backward into your lower esophagus, the tube between your throat and stomach. That happens because the sphincter and lower esophageal contraction near the junction of the esophagus with the stomach is relaxed. Normally, it is closed to prevent reflux. It may or may not be associated with a hiatal hernia of a portion of the stomach through the diaphragm.

The acid digestive juices irritate the lower esophagus. That can cause inflammation and even ulceration. The process may also cause an irritable esophagus which can result in esophageal spasm - which is usually very strong contractions of the esophagus. This can cause pain similar to that of a heart attack.

Usually the problems associated with esophageal reflux can be corrected. It involves using antacids or medicines to prevent acid digestive juices. Some medicines increase the contraction of the esophageal sphincter, too.

The diet is important in esophageal reflux. That irritated lower esophagus hurts when acid fruit juices bathe the area. Coffee - regular and decaffeinated - is a no-no. I'm sending you my new Special Report 83, Heartburn, Esophageal Spasm, Hiatal Hernia, for details. Others who want this report can send $1 with a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope to THE HEALTH LETTERS, P.O. Box 18622, Irvine, CA 92713.

Esophageal reflux is often worse in the last half of the menstrual cycle and during pregnancy. The amount of the female hormone progesterone increases at that time and causes the esophageal sphincter to relax.

DEAR DR. LAMB: I was going to have tubal sterilization after the birth of our third child. Due to complications I had to have an emergency cesarean done. My husband told them not to do the tubal. Now I dread going through more pain to have a tubal done, but I've heard a vasectomy for men causes prostate problems in later life. Could you tell me if there are any studies confirming this? I would rather go through a little pain than have him suffer in future years.

DEAR READER: There is no evidence that a vasectomy will have any effect on the prostate gland at all. There were some studies that raised questions about vasectomies increasing the risk of certain diseases, including heart attacks and the immune diseases. But subsequent studies have largely dispelled these concerns. There is no solid evidence that a vasectomy causes any diseases.

There are permanent changes in the testicles after a vasectomy. These changes are of the tubules that form the sperm cells and have no effect on a man's maleness, his sexual capacity, or the testicles' ability to form testosterone.

DEAR DR. LAMB: I am a 10-year-old girl. In our family a difference of opinion has arisen. Do children ages 2 to 16 transmit more germs to newborn babies than adults? Please answer my question.

DEAR READER: Usually, But it is not just a matter of age. It is a matter of being exposed to other people who have germs, such as colds. School age children are exposed to a large population of other school children. But teachers have the same problem, though adults may not have as many colds because they have more immunity. Any person who must deal with a large number of people will also have more contagious diseases. If a child was not exposed to other people, the child would be unlikely to transmit more infectious diseases than adults.

Dr. Lamb welcomes letters from readers with health questions. You can write to him at P.O. Box 18622, Irvine, CA 92713.

Teammate Randy Will is frustrated

Gault's Olympic dream on hold again

By CHUCK MELVIN
AP Sports Writer
CALGARY, Alberta (AP) — Willie Gault's 8-year-old Olympic dream is on hold again.
The Chicago Bears' wide receiver learned Wednesday he won't be pushing one of the two U.S. sleds in this weekend's two-man bobsled race.

"From what I hear, they're going to let USA 1 and USA 2 ride," Gault said after a practice session aboard USA 3. "But it's not over yet. I think I still have a legitimate chance for the four-man."

Gault first set his sights on the Olympics as a track star in 1980. His effort was thwarted by the U.S. boycott. He wanted to try again in 1984, but his NFL training prevented that.

Now he's ready again, but is facing resistance from resentful teammates, sore because he was a last-minute addition to the team after missing the long training season leading up to Calgary.

Coach Jeff Jost said Wednesday that sleds driven by Brent Rushlaw and Matt Roy would be in the two-man event. Gault pushes the No. 3 sled driven by Randy Will.

"I've been told I'm out," said the 23-year-old Will of Endwell, N.Y. "They told me this morning. As far as I'm concerned, the coaching staff made the wrong decision. It's terribly frustrating."

USA 1, driven by Rushlaw, had the best time among the three American teams in Wednesday's two training runs, ranking 12th among the 48 sleds that ran.

Will's USA 3 sled, though, was second-best among the Americans and 17th overall. Roy's USA 2 was 23rd overall.

Gault's push times, measured over the first 50 meters of the course, were the best among the U.S. sleds.

"I totaled Matt today," Will said. "I ripped him up by six-tenths of a second."

But Roy said the coaches had made it clear to him that the training runs this week are only practices, not race-offs. The starting sleds, he said, were chosen in a series of races between October and January, so he never considered the possibility of Will beating him out this week.

"It would have been a real shock to me, and it would have been at least as bad a scene as the Willie Gault thing," Roy said.
