Minister is guilty of sexual assault

A 73-year-old ordained minister was found guilty of aggravated sexual assault of his juvenile granddaughter in 222nd District Court on Wednesday in Hereford.

The three-woman, nine-man jury sentenced Rev. Floyd Polk Sr., of the Faith Mission Church of God and Christ, to serve 15 years in the Texas Department of Corrections and to pay a $5,000 fine.

A Deaf Smith County grand jury had indicted Polk earlier on charges of aggravated assault with a child, aggravated sexual assault of a child and two counts of indecency with a child. It is unknown if he will be brought to trial on the other charges.

Jurors heard the testimony of the granddaughter's stepmother, who said that she and her young daughter were watching a segment of The Oprah Winfrey Show which dealt with sexual abuse of children. At the completion of the show the mother asked her daughter is anyone had ever done those things to her, and was surprised by the child's story of her and her stepfather being abused by Polk.

When the stepfather came home from school, she was forced to admit that on three occasions Polk had ordered her to remove her clothing and had then performed sexual intercourse with the child.

The stepmother then testified that she called the older girl's mother and told her about the abuse. The child's mother said that when Polk and his wife arrived to confront the two mothers, the older girl became hysterical and cried, "You promised I wouldn't have to see him, that he wouldn't hurt me again."

The older girl was the only one of three granddaughters, who claim Polk abused them, to testify in this trial. She took the stand and tearfully described the intimate details of sexual acts Polk performed with her.

When Defense Attorney Ed Line questioned her about not telling an adult following the first incident, she replied, "He told me he would hurt my mom if I told anyone."

During the course of her testimony the child did not waiver on the details of her story and at one point she admitted that she is still afraid of Polk and that she still fears that he will hurt her mother.

"He told me to take my clothes off. I asked him why but he wouldn't answer. I was scared of him because of what he told me to do. He took his clothes off and told me to lay on the bed. I asked why and he just started shaking. After he was finished, he told me he would hurt my mom if I told anyone. I'm still afraid for my mother."

Taking the stand in her husband's defense, Lee Polk told jurors that her husband had never been left alone with his grandchildren. She said that since his retirement the couple has been inseparable and that they had never had any marital problems.

Her testimony was discredited by District Attorney Roland Saul's presentation of evidence that in 1982, while the couple lived in Friona, law enforcement officers were called to the Polk residence where she had fired a gun at her husband. She told officers that he was fooling around with another woman.

The testimony of a friend and neighbor of the Polk's contradicted other points of the wife's testimony. The testimony of a registered nurse who is certified to perform sexual assault exams strengthened the state's case.

Several character witnesses were called by the defense and then admitted, on cross-examination, that they had heard rumors of Polk abusing his granddaughters.

In his closing arguments, Saul said, "The cat is out of the bag now and the story has been told about what this man has done to his granddaughter."

After an hour of deliberation the jury returned a guilty verdict and, though they did not give Polk the maximum penalty for a first degree felony, Saul says he felt justice was served. Saul estimates that Polk will be eligible for parole within 27 months.

In the meantime, numerous professionals are offering assistance in counseling with the young victims.

Bailie battling DOE for information

EDITOR'S NOTE: Tom Bailie, a farmer from just outside the Hanford Nuclear Reservation in Washington State, will speak at a public forum at 7 p.m. today at the Hereford Community Center. A Department of energy spokesman has also been invited to address the meeting, sponsored by People Opposing Wasted Energy Repositories.

By JOHN BROOKS
Managing Editor

Tom Bailie was born in 1947 in Mesa, Washington. He was destined to become the third generation to farm the land.

Two miles down the road, the nation's nuclear industry was started two years earlier. A nuclear reactor was built at Hanford, Wash., as part of the Manhattan Project—the building of the atomic bomb.

Tom Bailie and most of the rest of the people in the Hanford area had the utmost in respect for the federal government and the Department of Energy. It was the United States Government, and it had just won freedom for the world, and they, by gosh, could do no wrong.

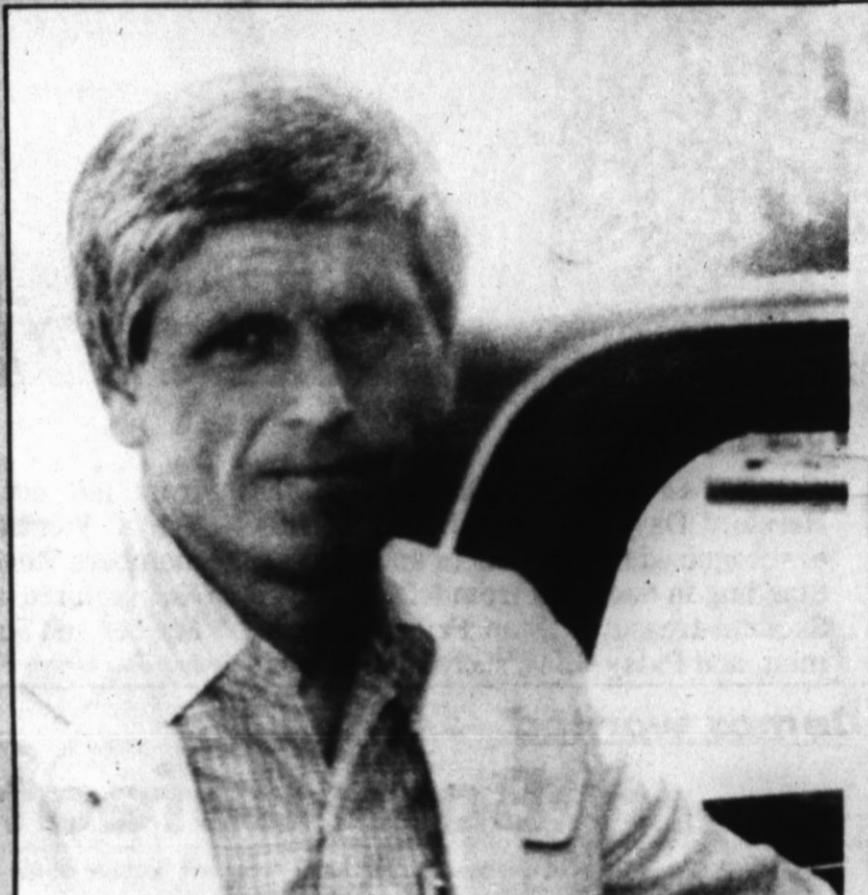

40 years later, things are amiss in Hanford and Mesa. People are dying of cancer, and have been at alarmingly high rates for two decades. Children are born with deformities that most people would find alarming, but for Tom Bailie and his neighbors in Mesa, it's not too different.

There are problems around Hanford, where a nuclear reactor (built much like the reactor in Chernobyl, USSR) has been churning out plutonium for 42 years.

Tom Bailie is afraid the reactor, and associated items, has been churning out carcinogens; radioactive clouds that have caused animals to be born with no eyes or sex organs; and could be bringing an end to three generations of life for the Baillees in Washington—they may be moving, even though Tom hates to think about it.

"These people suffering from cancer are not people that have been in Mesa for 40 years," Bailie said. "Some have been there only a few years."

They're from different ethnic backgrounds—Germans, Japanese, Koreans, Russians, and from throughout all of Washington farmer Tom Bailie doubts whether the nuclear and agriculture industries can co-exist.

America. They vary in religions even more.

They have only one common link. They all live near the Hanford Nuclear Reservation, and many are suffering from cancer.

The pieces in the puzzle, the answer to nagging 'Why's?' are slow in coming. Bailie, other area residents, news reporters and others are digging through 40 years worth of documents prepared by the Department of Energy, its forerunner, the Atomic Energy Commission, and Battelle Memorial Institute, many of them sealed but slowly coming to light through the Freedom of Information Act.

More and more, they are finding answers they do not like.

Bailie and other Hanford residents were not lied to, Bailie said. "DOE and Battelle and others never committed any criminal acts. It's just that questions were never asked."

Bailie now knows he should have been curious years ago, when he would go to steal fruit from an orchard on the Hanford Nuclear Reservation by sneaking through a barbed-wire fence instead of paying for fruit at the orchard on the other side of the fence.

"They would stop us and tell us to get out of there," Bailie said, "because the fruit was contaminated and we couldn't eat it. But they never said anything about Max's fruit on the other side of the fence. The trees were only 15 feet apart."

Bailie doesn't smile when he tells that story, or other accounts about the problems in Hanford that are spreading, he fears, to other parts of the state.

The problems—the cancer, the birth defects, the possibility of having to uproot his family, selling his land at well below cost—might have been stopped years ago, when sheep in the area were dying in pastures and others were stillborn or born with massive deformities. The biggest problem was in 1961, but nothing was done, no questions were asked.

Most of the city fathers, those important to the city and those less important but with definite ties to endless employment at Hanford, declined to ask ques-

U.S., Soviets to discuss Iran-Iraq war

UNITED NATIONS (AP) — The United States called a meeting with the Soviet foreign minister today after he expressed differences with an American-British call for a worldwide arms embargo against Iran.

Soviet Foreign Minister Eduard A. Shevardnadze told the U.N. General Assembly Wednesday that the body should seek a cease-fire in the Iran-Iraq war and establish a panel to judge who started the conflict. Another Soviet official questioned the effectiveness of an embargo.

A State Department official said the Americans requested this afternoon's meeting at the United States

U.N. mission to discuss the 7-year-old war after Shevardnadze clearly refrained from endorsing sanctions.

Earlier, Britain's foreign secretary, Sir Geoffrey Howe, called for an arms embargo against Iran. Howe's statement was particularly significant because Britain is one of the five permanent U.N. Security Council members whose vote would be essential to approving an arms embargo resolution.

The United States and Britain are the only permanent members to publicly endorse an embargo. The Soviet Union and China called Wednesday for more diplomacy, while the French foreign minister said an arms embargo was "one of the possibilities."

The five countries' foreign ministers will meet informally at a luncheon Friday in an effort to resolve differences.

Addressing the 159-nation body Wednesday, Howe said an Iranian attack on the British tanker "Gentle Breeze" in the Persian Gulf Monday was the "last straw."

He said the 15-nation U.N. Security Council should now enforce its resolution, passed unanimously July (See IRAN, Page 2)

4-H's show top animals

Hereford-area exhibitors showed two reserve breed champions in the lamb show and also participated in the barrow show at the Tri-State Fair in Amarillo.

Colby Christie drove his finewool lamb to the reserve breed champion spot, while Kelly Christie picked up the reserve breed championship with a finewool cross.

Colby also had the third place heavy lightweight medium wool and the fourth place heavy mediumweight medium wool. Kelly had the second place heavyweight medium wool and the sixth place light mediumweight medium wool.

Others placing lambs in the show were Shayne Fellhauer, Angela Brumley, Monica Grotegut, Chris Grotegut, Jennifer Hicks, Amanda Rickman, Jennifer Scott, Cheryl Schlabs and Kinann Campbell.

Other county participants were Trisha Teel, Sheila Teel, Kristi Milton, Heather Kleuskens, Pam Price, Larissa Kleuskens, John Rickman, Jim Brett Campbell, Susan Rickman and Donna Grotegut.

In the barrow show, local entries were paced by Chris Blair, second place lightweight; John Wilson, third place mediumweight; Jeremy Blair, ninth place heavyweight and ninth place mediumweight; and Brian Wilson, ninth place heavyweight.

Jay Wilson and Shannon Wells also had barrows in the show. The swine feeders will travel to Lubbock Friday to participate in the South Plains Fair barrow show on Sunday.

37 county 4-H'ers participated in the Amarillo fair with 68 livestock projects—the most participants and entries of any county at the fair.

Warships find mines

MANAMA, Bahrain (AP) — U.S. Navy forces recovered at least three mines in the Persian Gulf, pinpointing their location with information from crewmen of a captured Iranian vessel, U.S. officials and shipping sources said.

The explosives were found by American warships and helicopters during a mine-sweeping operation Wednesday in the central Persian Gulf, where the Iranian ship was attacked by U.S. helicopters this week.

Pentagon sources in Washington said the United States hoped to transport the 26 Iranians detained in the attack to Oman today, to be released to the International Red Crescent Society, the Islamic equivalent of the Red Cross.

Shipping sources said Navy warships were escorting a reflagged Kuwaiti tanker through the gulf today, but Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger denied the convoy had left Kuwait.

Gulf-based shipping executives, speaking on condition of anonymity, said the Navy had found eight moored, contact-type mines in the central gulf.

Weinberger, speaking from Washington in a television interview, said three mines had been located Wednesday and the Navy expected to find others.

He said some of the crewmen from the 1,662-ton Iran Ajr had provided information that helped American forces locate the mines. U.S. naval vessels often anchor in the area where the devices were found, about 50 miles northeast of Bahrain.

Another Pentagon official, speaking on condition of anonymity, said charts showing safe, unmined routes through the Persian Gulf had been discovered on the Iranian vessel.

Senior U.S. naval officers have maintained for weeks the Iranians were sowing mines in international waters in the gulf, but they said the U.S. capture of the Iran Ajr provided the first proof. Iran denied the ship was planting mines.

Five Iranians were killed and four wounded when the U.S. helicopters assaulted the ship with machine-gun fire and rockets Monday. It was the first American hit on an Iranian vessel in the two months since the United States began protecting Kuwaiti tankers in the oil shipping lanes.

Pentagon sources said it was not yet clear whether the detained Iranians, who were being held on Navy ships, would be transported to Oman by helicopter or flown from airplane from Bahrain.

U.S. officials have not announced what they plan to do with the Iran Ajr. "We might use it for target practice," said one source in Washington. "It's definitely not going back to Iran."

Pentagon officials said threats of Iranian reprisal for the ship attack would not deter Weinberger from leaving as scheduled for a five-day trip to the area. He was to visit Bahrain, Saudi Arabia, Egypt and U.S. warships in the region.

The war foes reported new attacks on each other's territory Wednesday. The state-run Iraqi News Agency, monitored in Cyprus, said Iraqi jet fighters flew 87 combat missions during the day, one of the highest totals in recent weeks.

Iran's official news agency said Iraqi warplanes struck industrial and residential areas at Bakhtara, western Iran, and that Iranian artillery bombarded Iraqi military and industrial targets in southern Iraq.

Britain Foreign Secretary Geoffrey Howe announced at the United Nations Wednesday that his country was closing Iran's military procurement office in London, and would support a resolution for an international arms embargo against Iran, following an attack on a British ship in the gulf Monday.

Demos warned

Bork defeat could backfire

WASHINGTON (AP) — A prominent lawyer is warning fellow Democrats that if they defeat the nomination of Robert H. Bork to the Supreme Court the decision may come back to haunt them.

Lloyd Cutler, former counsel to President Carter, told the Senate Judiciary Committee on Wednesday that someday a liberal Democratic appointee to the high court could be blocked by a Republican-controlled Senate using the Bork nomination fight as a precedent.

"The time is going to come, and it can't come too soon for me, when there is going to be a Democratic president," Cutler said.

"It's necessary for Democrats who would vote against a moderate conservative nominee to the court to remember they are giving a hostage to the time when a Democratic president will be appointing a moderate liberal or perhaps a very liberal member to the court who will be judged by the same standard in reverse that you would be applying in my view if you rejected Judge Bork today," Cutler said.

The committee recessed until Friday, taking today off because of the Jewish new year.

Cutler testified that Bork, attacked by many as an extremist, is a jurist whose views are close to those of retired Justice Lewis F. Powell. President Reagan named Bork, a federal appeals court judge since 1982, to succeed the centrist Powell.

"Based on my reading of this written record, and on 20 years of personal knowledge of Judge Bork, I have praised him as a highly qualified conservative jurist who is closer to the moderate center than to the extreme right," Cutler said.

But the Democrats who control the Judiciary Committee said Cutler is missing the big picture.

"Isn't that the heart of our difference," said Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass. "You're urging us to look closely at the trees and urging us not to look too closely at the forest."

Bork also received support from retired Chief Justice Warren E. Burger, who made an extraordinary appearance for a former member of the high court. Burger said, "If Judge Bork is not in the mainstream then neither am I. It would astonish me to think he's an extremist any more than I'm an extremist."

The hearings were partly overshadowed by the announcement of committee chairman Joseph Biden, D-Del., during the noon break that he was withdrawing from the presidential race.

Biden said he is quitting the campaign in the wake of damaging disclosures that he committed plagiarism and exaggerated his academic accomplishments.

But Biden, who opposes Bork's confirmation, vowed to continue the fight in the Judiciary Committee over the nomination.

"I intend to be deeply involved in that battle. I intend to attempt to bring it to victory," he said.

Also testifying in support of Bork was Gov. James Thompson of Illinois, who said that from his personal knowledge of Bork "I believe he would do equal justice. He has a fair, inquiring mind."

Among Bork critics who testified Wednesday, Professor William E. Leuchtenberg of the University of North Carolina said the Senate should block the appointment because of Bork's stands against Supreme Court rulings of the past 30 years that expanded individual and civil rights.

"If he now says, grudgingly, that he accepts these rulings, it is important to note that at the time, when it counted, he was one of the most boisterous of the faultfinders," Leuchtenberg said. "There is no way that Professor Bork can now be dressed up as a champion of civil rights."

Bork taught law at Yale University before returning to private law practice and then becoming a federal judge.

Sen. Alan Simpson, R-Wyo., a supporter of Bork, engaged in sharp exchanges with Leuchtenberg, Duke University Law School Professor Walter Dellinger and John Hope Franklin, a Duke history professor.

Simpson told Franklin, who is black, that "Robert Bork did not place those roadblocks in your way" to advancement that Franklin referred to in his remarks.

Hance joins RRC

AUSTIN (AP) — Kent Hance, the newest member of the Texas Railroad Commission, says it's too soon to be thinking about any other political office.

Hance, who unsuccessfully sought the GOP gubernatorial nomination last year, said Wednesday only that he will run in 1988 for the remaining two years of his Railroad Commission term.

"I wouldn't have taken it (the appointment) and not made a commitment to go ahead and run in 1988," Hance said after taking the oath of office.

As for a possible gubernatorial bid in 1990, Hance said, "I don't even want to talk about that. That's something that's a long way off. I think it would be foolish to do anything like that ... I want to be the best railroad commissioner I can be."

But Hance didn't close the door completely.

"If other things open up, fine. If they don't, fine. I may like this job so well that I'll want to do this in '90 and '96 or whenever the voters will vote for me."

Hance replaced Democratic Commissioner Mack Wallace, who resigned to join a law firm.

Taking the official oath before a crowd of hundreds that filled the Texas Senate chamber and its spectator gallery, Hance said oil and gas industry troubles are so serious that politics must be secondary.

"The problems facing us are not partisan issues. We have to work together today in building a united front to meet the challenges," he said.

A three-term congressman from Lubbock, Hance lost the 1984 Democratic U.S. Senate nomination to Lloyd Doggett. After changing parties, he lost the 1986 GOP gubernatorial race to Gov. Bill Clements, who appointed Hance to the Railroad Commission.

Speaking at the swearing-in, Clements noted the visibility of Hance's new job.

"You know, the size of this crowd surprises me," Clements said. "Are you announcing for governor today, too?"

Hance shook his head no. Hance also had little to say about one of the most controversial issues facing the commission — selection of a new chairman.

Asked if he planned to vote for Commissioners John Sharp or Jim Nugent, both Democrats, or possibly himself, Hance replied:

"I have not made a final decision. I'll have this weekend to concentrate on it. I want to work together with both commissioners, that's the most important thing ... If I can come up with a solution where we can all work together, I think that's the best solution."

Cooperation also is the key to changing short-sighted national energy policy, Hance said.

BAILIE

tions about the problems.

They thought nothing about numerous planes flying overhead with monitoring equipment, or weather balloons landing in their fields carrying testing devices. They turned the other way when red clouds came pouring from the reactor's smokestacks.

The red clouds, they later learned, were radioactive iodine which would later settle on the other side of the Columbia River, downwind from the reservation, and contaminate the ground with as much plutonium radiation as was detected one mile away from the main blast of the bomb dropped on Hiroshima.

"And that was outside the fence," Bailie emphasized. "Inside the fence they had 1,700 micrograms of plutonium per acre. The worst contamination at Hiroshima was 2,500 micrograms per acre."

The soil inside the fence was free to blow in the wind, and it did—across southern and eastern Washington, to contaminate areas up to 100 miles away from the reservation.

Bailie said he has been contacted by the U.S. Air Force about the purchase of a four-acre piece of land far from Hanford which has a high concentration of radiation in the soil.

The problems in Mesa are no longer just contained in the soil. The water could be so contaminated it is unfit to drink, but that hasn't been proven to Bailie's satisfaction. Yet.

He does know, however, that over 2,500 wells have been drilled in and around the reservation. Many of them were drilled by DOE after research by Battelle wastewater.

That wastewater, though, percolated back up through the rock formation and into several aquifers that underlie the region. The percolation was helped by wells drilled in the region by farmers "back in the early '70's, when farming was good," Bailie said. Their wells eventually drew from water under the reservation.

Tests in the area, many performed by DOE and Battelle, have shown many of the wells are contaminated, including the domestic well on Bailie's farm.

"I turn on the tap and get myself a glass of water and wonder, 'Should I buy bottled water for my children?' I'm afraid that would frighten the children more, but should I act like nothing is wrong?" "It really torments me. It tears you up inside."

And, Bailie faces these fears every day, every time he drinks a glass of water.

Bailie feels there are lessons Hereford and Deaf Smith County, and maybe the entire country, can learn from Hanford.

"Maybe the officials in Washington, D.C., and elected officials there and here need to take a hard look at their priorities going into the next decade," Bailie said. "Do you want to put things off onto the next generation, as happened to us in Hanford?"

"I also think there is a lack of importance being placed on farmers in this country. We are losing farmers, and there is a lot of vegetable and processed food that could become contaminated. We could, quite honestly, have a shortage of food.

"You may have to make a choice between agriculture and the nuclear industry.

"In Washington, we're finding out the two are not cohabitable."

Cisneros says

Cities must cope, plan for future

DAVENPORT, Iowa (AP) — Only American cities that can cope with today's problems while planning for the future will flourish in the year 2000, San Antonio Mayor Henry Cisneros told Iowa city officials.

"The cities and towns that are going to be successful are those that develop new visions of themselves and really decide to become masters of their own destinies," he said.

Cisneros gave a keynote speech on the challenges facing American cities to a highly receptive crowd of about 400 at the Iowa League of Municipalities convention Wednesday.

Cisneros said that cities already hard hit by the loss of thousands of high-paying manufacturing jobs will face in the future problems related to an increase in the number of the elderly and poverty-stricken children, without the cushion of billions of dollars in federal aid available in the past.

To face those problems, he said that city officials have to pull people together to decide where they want their city to be by the year 2000, and how they want to get there.

"Some cities and towns in Iowa are going to be victims of the changes I described and some are going to prosper," he said. "The difference between those that will be victims and those that will prosper is the ones that prosper will have planned."

Cisneros cited a program he began in 1983 called TARGET 90, in which he asked San Antonians to volunteer 25,000 hours in community service to develop and implement plans for the future in such areas as education, economic development and the arts.

He also said the city officials have to have the courage to act and not be paralyzed by "government by committee."

"We have got to find ways to find contact where the rubber hits the road, and not just be some abstract leaders," he said. "We have to be out there symbolically and substantively, leading the way, breaking new ground."

Cisneros, currently serving his second term as mayor of the nation's 10th largest city, was considered in 1984 by Democrat presidential nominee Walter Mondale as a potential running mate.

LOOKING YOUNGER

WHITE PLAINS, N.Y. (AP) — A large number of middle-aged men say they think it is acceptable for men over age 40 to adjust their physical appearance to make themselves look younger.

The study of 1,000 men conducted by Just for Men shampoo and haircoloring found nearly 70 percent endorsed the idea of cosmetic surgery for men.

Nearly half the group agreed with the statement that, "It's OK for men to color their hair rather than leaving it gray." The firm says other research indicates that 10 percent of America's gray-haired men already color their hair.

Ann Landers

DEAR ANN LANDERS: My husband is a career Navy man. He has over 15 years of service. We've been married, quite happily, for 11 years and have three children, 10, 7 and 5. They are uncontrollable monsters for me, but nothing short of angelic for their dad. This drives me crazy and makes me feel that I am a total failure as a mother.

I am not fond of, nor do I fit in with, the Navy. When his last enlistment expired, I begged and pleaded with my husband to get out so we could live a normal life. Since the Navy is all he has ever known, he was afraid to risk it. I felt that I had lost again.

Recently, his ship left for a sudden deployment to the Persian Gulf. As I'm sure you are aware, the potential there for hostilities is great.

I simply can't manage the kids. No matter how hard I try, they make my life hell. Night after night I think of ways to kill myself. I guess that to most civilians, six months doesn't seem like a long time, but to a person like me, whose husband is lover, best friend and confidant, six months is an eternity.

After the children are asleep, I sit with a gun in my lap, wonder if I will ever find the nerve to blow my brains out and end the loneliness and pain. If anything happens to my husband in the Gulf, I hope the whole world gets nuked.

I was taking an antidepressant/anti-anxiety drug for four months earlier this year, but it did not help much. I've always had the fear that something was going to happen to ruin the only good thing in my life.

I don't know whether I will be alive when you get this, but please, Ann, even if for a brief second, think about me and other women who might be in the same boat.—Daisy in Va.

DEAR DAISY: If ever I read a letter that sounded like a cry for help, it is yours. I urge you to lose no time in getting to another doctor. Apparently the medication prescribed by Doctor No. 1 didn't do much good, but it is foolish to assume that you are not treatable. You must also understand what a terrible blow it would be to your young children if they were suddenly left motherless.

In addition to medication, you need to talk to a therapist about your poor relationship with your children and your crippling dependency on your husband.

Write to me when you read this in the paper and tell me you're following through.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: Your column is one thing I look forward to reading every day, no matter how busy I am. There have been several articles about "God bless you" after a sneeze and I would like to ask a question, if I may.

I am 84 years young. Whenever I have sex (which is once a week), I sneeze at least seven times. This has been going on for three or four years.

I enjoy good health and have never been able to ask my doctor about it. Have you ever heard of anything like this before? What could the explanation be?—A Reader in San Francisco

DEAR READER: I have no way of knowing if you are a male or a female, and it really doesn't make a great deal of difference. There's a good chance that you have a slight sensitivity to his after-shave lotion or her cologne.

I hope the sneezing lasts another 15 years. If you continue to enjoy good health, there's no reason it shouldn't. Age is only a number.

What's the story on pot, cocaine, LSD, PCP, downers, speed? Can you handle them if you're careful? Send for Ann Landers' booklet, "The Lowdown on Dope." For each booklet ordered, send $2, plus a No. 10, self-addressed, stamped envelope (39 cents postage) to Ann Landers, P.O. Box 11562, Chicago, Ill. 60611-0562.

Keywanettes plan several events

The Keywanettes of Hereford High School met Monday night at the Hereford Community Center. Julie Allison, president, presided over the meeting.

Topics discussed were the Homecoming Carnival, upcoming sales, Weekend of A Lifetime, and the Fall Training Conference to be held Oct. 3, at 1 p.m. at the Community Center. Votes were made pertaining to the club's fundraisers. Also, the club presented the amount to be donated to their charity of the month.

DR. GOTT Doctors' titles are confusing

By Peter H. Gott, M.D.

DEAR DR. GOTT — When I try to find a doctor in the telephone directory, there are so many different ways the names are listed, I am totally confused. Some simply list their names, followed by "M.D." Some state they are certified, some are diplomates, some are fellows and some are "members of..." These designations must be important or the doctors wouldn't pay to have them there — but what do they mean? And why are some doctors incorporated?

DEAR READER — When doctors complete their training, they usually choose to be tested and certified in certain specialties. This is called "board certification" and is usually a good sign that the doctor is competent in his or her field. Not all good doctors are certified, but those who are have met a certain level of competence.

A doctor may also choose to become more active in the certification process. By meeting certain criteria, which vary from one specialty to another, he or she can become a "fellow" or a "diplomate" in the specialty. For instance, FACS means that the surgeon has not only passed his board exam but is a "Fellow of the American College of Surgeons."

To a large degree, these titles are honorary and simply mean that the doctor has advanced in his specialty. Such titles do not necessarily mean that your doctor is "better"; they indicate that the practitioner has mastered certain skills for which he or she has achieved recognition.

Doctors incorporate for financial reasons. The initials P.C. (professional corporation) after a doctor's name are no reflection of his or her ability or competence.

To give you more information, I am sending you a copy of my Health Report, CHOOSING A PHYSICIAN: MAKE A DECISION FOR GOOD HEALTH. Others who want a copy should send $1 and their name and address to P.O. Box 91369, Cleveland, OH 44101-3369. Be sure to mention the title.

DEAR DR. GOTT — I had a very painful hip joint and went to a medical clinic that accepts Medicare assignment. I was given an injection in the joint, but a copy of the Medicare payment to the doctor showed the injection had been billed as "office surgery" for $27.50. Should I report the clinic to Medicare?

DEAR READER — In folk mythology, Procrustes was a cruel highwayman who forced his victims to lie on a bed. If they were too short for the bed, Procrustes stretched them; if they were too long, he cut off their legs. The term "Procrustean bed" has survived into modern times as a metaphor for those people who try to force others to fit a preconceived mold or notion, rather than altering the circumstances to allow for individual variation.

Doctors often — and with good reason — play a Procrustean game with Medicare, Medicaid and private insurers. We have to adapt the patient's diagnosis and treatment to the rules promulgated by bureaucracies. In order to receive payment, the doctor coded his procedure to agree with Medicare guidelines. Although you didn't truly have "office surgery," you did, in fact, have it because the doctor stuck something in you and the procedure was billed in a language that is understood by government workers who spend their lives dealing with this kind of thing. If you had been charged $275 you would have an obligation to complain, but $27.50 seems reasonable to me for a shot. Welcome to the strange land of Procrustes.

DEAR DR. GOTT — My husband had a severe attack of hepatitis 12 years ago. His doctor told him he was cured. Last week, at a family gathering, my cousin told my husband not to serve himself as he would contaminate the food. I was aghast. Was he correct?

DEAR READER — Your cousin could use some brushing up on his manners, as well as on his medical information.

There are many causes of hepatitis (liver inflammation). The two most common are hepatitis A and hepatitis B viruses.

Hepatitis A, formerly known as infectious hepatitis, is usually caught by eating food that is contaminated by the hepatitis A virus. Uncooked shellfish are notorious in this regard. Hepatitis A virus causes a flulike illness that may or may not be marked by jaundice, the yellowing of the skin and eyes from backup of bile pigments. Patients almost always recover from this infection and, although they are immune to repeated hepatitis A attacks, they are not contagious. Therefore, if your husband had this type of liver inflammation, he poses no threat to those around him.

Hepatitis B is more serious. It used to be known as a serum hepatitis because it usually was transmitted from one person to another by inoculations, such as blood transfusions or contaminated needles. Hepatitis B virus can remain dormant in a "recovered" patient for months, even years. This is the reason medical and dental personnel are extremely cautious in handling blood specimens and blood products from infected patients. People who have had hepatitis B are usually prevented from donating blood because the virus can reactivate if transfused into another person.

Doctors routinely test the blood of people who have had hepatitis B to see if they are still infectious. Since your husband had hepatitis 12 years ago and was pronounced "cured" by his doctor, I assume he is no longer carrying the virus. Again, he poses no threat to those around him — unless, of course, his blood were to be used in a transfusion.

Once past the acute stage of the illness, hepatitis B patients will not transmit the virus in a social setting, such as a family gathering.

Quirky ceramics artist's stock in trade

OCOTLAN, Mexico (AP) — Josefina Aguilar makes a point of saying the only tools she uses for her ceramic figures seen in museums and boutiques far from this southern Mexican town are a shard of metal, a thorn from a cactus plant and her hands.

But then, she says, you also need just a little bit more.

"It's like I tell the children," the soft-spoken artisan recently said, "you've got to put in some soul."

That soul is apparent as soon as one reaches her home and studio, on the main road from the city of Oaxaca about 15 miles to the north.

There is a cheerful welcome sign. The fence posts are topped by the brightly painted figures that have made her famous, and larger ones are scattered about the cluttered yard that fits between her home and studio.

Aguilar seems most at home as she kneels gracefully with her legs folded on a mat on the corner of the studio's cement porch, working with deft fingers as she talks.

One figure just about ready for sale, that of a woman nursing a baby and carrying a basket, rests nearby. The woman's headdress and necklace are clearly defined in the simple clay.

Aguilar's work has been exhibited in such places as the Museum of Cultural History at the University of California Los Angeles, and the Museum of International Folk Art in Santa Fe, N.M. It can also be purchased at boutiques on such trendy thoroughfares as Los Angeles' Melrose Avenue or New York's Columbus Avenue.

The artist and her husband, Jose Garcia Cruz, keep a cardboard portfolio of the business cards from crafts shops that sell her work, including such places as West Berlin and Montreal. The American Southwest figures prominently on the list: Santa Fe, N.M.; San Diego and Long Beach, Calif.; San Antonio and Austin, Texas.

"I started when I was very little — his age," said Aguilar, pointing to her 4-year-old son, the youngest of nine children. There are eight boys, the oldest 20, and one girl.

All help out at least by painting some of the figures, she said. Her husband also works full time in the business.

Aguilar's parents were utilitarian potters in Ocotlan whose decorative figures became popular. The tradition was passed on to their children.

"I used to like making brides and grooms out of clay," the 44-year-old Aguilar said of her beginnings as a ceramist. "Then I just liked working with clay."

Aguilar's three sisters also make figures but she is the only one in the family who works without molds.

Enrique Auddifred, director of the Oaxaca state artisanry agency, said the family's work reflects Oaxaca's rich Indian culture.

Josefina's figures are baked in the wood-fueled kiln for seven hours. Most used to be kept in their natural earth colors, but more durable paint in bright colors now is used unless the client requests an unpainted figure.

THE WONDERFUL WOGGING WORKOUT

NEW YORK (AP) — Wogging is a new wonder sport, says the Reebok Aerobic Information Bureau. It says many doctors are recommending it and many aerobic instructors are making it a part of their overall aerobic programs.

Wogging is brisk walking alternated with jogging and combines the best of both activities. Risk of injury is reduced because one is less likely to overdo, and the variety adds interest to the exercise program.

POLLY'S POINTERS Split peas make a delicious soup

By Polly Fisher

DEAR POLLY — Should dried peas be soaked in water before cooking them for soup? — D.M.

DEAR D.M. — Not necessary. Just add the water called for in your recipe to the peas, and other ingredients, then simmer until the peas are tender.

Split peas cook more quickly than many dried beans, so one to one-and-one-half hours is usually sufficient.

Here's my own favorite recipe for split pea soup: Sauté a large chopped onion in a tablespoon of vegetable oil until tender. Add 3 quarts water, 1 meaty ham bone, 1 pound split peas (rinsed and picked over) and 1½ teaspoons salt (or to taste). Simmer 1½ hours, or until the peas are very soft. Remove the ham bone, trim off lean ham and return ham to soup. If a smoother soup is desired, the soup may be pureed in a food processor, blender or food mill before returning the ham to the soup. Stir in freshly ground pepper to taste just before serving. This thick soup is hearty and warming on a brisk fall or winter day. Yummy!

I'm sending you a copy of my newsletter "Hot and Hearty Soups," which includes the recipe for this as well as other delicious soups, including such delights as pumpkin-peanut soup, lamb creole (my mother-in-law's specialty), chicken soup with my own mother's special butter-and-egg dumplings, potato chowder, French onion and many more. Others who would like a copy of this issue should send $1 for each copy to POLLY'S POINTERS, in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 93863, Cleveland, OH 44101-5863. Be sure to include the title. — POLLY

DEAR POLLY — When I bought a new electric mixer, I saved the old beaters. They are handy "stir spoons" for small batches of white sauce, pudding, gravy, etc. I keep them in the drawer with other small kitchen gadgets and use them when I need to mix powdered milk with water or whisk a couple of eggs to scramble for my breakfast. (Of course, I use only one of them at a time!) — BRIANA

DEAR POLLY — How can I avoid getting wool fabrics shiny and smooth when pressing them? — JAN

DEAR JAN — Always press woolens on the wrong side of the fabric whenever possible, and use a pressing cloth. A pressing cloth is simply a piece of material used to protect the wool fabric from direct contact with the iron. You can use a cotton dish towel if you don't have a professional pressing cloth. If you must press a garment on the right side of the fabric, use a wool pressing cloth such as a piece of wool flannel. The wool pressing cloth will help lift the wool's fibers, rather than flattening them excessively.

Other tips: Press with the grain or nap of the fabric. Use a steam iron or dampen the pressing cloth to produce steam. Don't ever press dry wool with a dry iron and dry press cloth. Don't dampen the wool garment itself, which could lead to water spotting.

I'm sending you a copy of my newsletter "The Care and Cleaning of Wool," which includes these and other pressing tips, as well as directions for cleaning wool fabrics and knits, tips for sewing with wool and ways to maintain your wool garments' good looks through the years. Others who would like this issue should send $1 for each copy to POLLY'S POINTERS, in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 93863, Cleveland, OH 44101-5863. Be sure to include the title. — POLLY

CAMBRIDGE, Mass. (AP) — Country singer Willie Nelson, preparing for his third Farm Aid concert, says he hopes he'll see the day when the benefit performances are no longer needed.

"I don't want to be Jerry Lewis. I don't want to be on television every year," Nelson said in a statement issued by Farm Aid Inc.

The Cambridge-based organization has donated more than $7 million since its establishment in 1985, officials said in a financial statement Wednesday.

Nelson concerts in 1985 and 1986 raised $11 million. This year's concert will be held Saturday in Lincoln, Neb.

LONDON (AP) — Overcome by the moving death scene in a new play by Jeffrey Archer, Prince Andrew's wife, the former Sarah Ferguson, sobbed for 15 minutes at a charity gala.

The play, "Beyond Reasonable Doubt," took 10 curtain calls Wednesday night.

"It was a great performance. I loved it," Sarah, the Duchess of York, told Archer, actress Wendy Craig, her leading man Frank Finlay and the rest of the cast.

Ms. Craig portrayed the wife of a lawyer acted by Finlay who defends himself when he is accused of her murder.

Archer, 47, won record libel damages of $800,000 this summer over a newspaper story linking him with a prostitute. The previous October, he resigned his post as deputy chairman of Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher's Conservative Party amid reports of the incident.

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A decision on whether to prosecute "L.A. Law" star Jimmy Smits for a scuffle with police has been delayed because the actor at first refused to make a statement, a city attorney's spokesman said.

Smits, who portrays Victor Sifuentes on the hit series, was arrested Aug. 10 with his live-in girlfriend, Juanita Cruz, after police went to their apartment to investigate a report of domestic violence.

An appointment in Municipal Court for arraignment was canceled Monday, said city attorney's spokesman Mike Qualls.

Smits, 33, and Ms. Cruz, 28, were arrested for investigation of battery on a police officer. They were freed on $1,000 bail each.

ROME (AP) — Greek actress Irene Pappas, starring in an 18th century Neapolitan work to be staged at

New York's St. John the Divine Cathedral, will open a fall festival of Italian productions and art.

Broadway, Lincoln Center, the World Trade Center and other landmarks will be host to "Italy on Stage 1987," which will encompass Italian theater, cinema, dance, and music, the festival's organizers said Wednesday.

The festival, which will simultaneously take place in Toronto featuring a different program, begins on Oct. 6 and ends in November.

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Jazz singer Ella Fitzgerald is undergoing treatment for diabetes at Cedars-Sinai Medical Center, a hospital spokesman says.

"She is in fair condition," spokesman Ron Wise said Wednesday. "Her spirits are good. She is talking to people. She has been out of bed."

Miss Fitzgerald, 67, entered the hospital in August. The singer had heart bypass surgery last year.

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Comic Phyllis Diller has been named honorary head of the entertainment industry's official fund-raising organization.

Miss Diller was installed during a luncheon Wednesday kicking off the 43rd annual campaign of Permanent Charities.

GENEVA (AP) — Jewelry collected by film legend Marlene Dietrich will be put on sale this fall with a historic art nouveau bracelet as the main attraction, Christie's auctioneers announced.

The snake bracelet, designed in 1899, is expected to fetch more than $500,000 at the Nov. 12 auction, Christie's spokeswoman Cornelia Froehlich said Wednesday.

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Television game show host Bob Barker got a standing ovation on the set of "The Price Is Right" for giving up his dyed brown pompadour and reverting to his natural gray-white shade.

"The women were screaming and whistling and howling. 'You look gorgeous!'" Barker's publicist, Roger Neal, said Tuesday.

"He's going to let the people decide how to wear his hair," Neal said. The television audience will be asked to write in with their choice, he said.

Barker's "new look" debuts Oct. 15 on the popular game show, which was videotaped on Labor Day.

LONDON (AP) — Peter Sellars, the American director whose offbeat staging of plays and operas has excited and enraged critics, makes his British staging debut next month at tony Glyndebourne opera house in the Sussex countryside.

Sellars, 29, will direct the Oct. 5 world premiere of "The Electrification of the Soviet Union," an opera adapted from Boris Pasternak's 1929 novella "A Tale," known in England as "The Last Summer."

Nigel Osborne is the composer. Poet Craig Raine, twice Osborne's previous collaborator, is the librettist.

Sellars is known for controversial stagings of operas like Mozart's "Così fan tutte" and "Don Giovanni" and such plays as "King Lear" and Sophocles' "Ajax."

HAMBURG, West Germany (AP) — The son of legendary heavyweight boxing champion Joe Louis has interviewed Max Schmeling, the German fighter who had two memorable fights with his father in the 1930s.

Joe Louis Barrow Jr. interviewed Schmeling, 81, for a biography he is writing about his father.

"He (Schmeling) had tears in his eyes when I asked him where he was and what he thought when my father died," Barrow said. Louis died of a heart attack in 1961.

Schmeling was the only German to hold the world heavyweight title. He defeated Louis in a non-title match in 1936 on a 12th round knockout.

In 1938, the 24-year-old Louis, by then world heavyweight champion, knocked out Schmeling in a title match at 2:04 minutes in the first round.

Barrow — Joe Louis' real surname was also Barrow — is a marketing consultant in Denver.

WARSAW, Poland (AP) — It was no act when Poland's leading film star overpowered a man who attacked a stewardess and tried to force his way into a jetliner's cockpit during a flight.

Daniel Olbrychski, 42, went into action Saturday on a LOT Polish Airlines flight from Warsaw to Athens when a 25-year-old Greek who was being deported from Poland jumped up and ran toward the cockpit.

"I grabbed him by the legs and felled him, then the other passengers helped me," Olbrychski told the newspaper Kurier Polski. He was flying to Athens to finish a film in which he plays a suspected terrorist.

The plane returned to Warsaw's Okęcie Airport, where the Greek was arrested, the newspaper said.

BEDMINSTER, N.J. (AP) — Millionaire publisher Malcolm Forbes gave Elizabeth Taylor a custom-painted purple motorcycle, and the violet-eyed actress gave him a silver and ruby ring consisting of a helmeted skull.

But don't get the wrong idea. "We're good friends, why complicate things with marriage?" Forbes asked Sunday as Miss Taylor nodded in agreement.

"The only engagement we have is to take this for a spin," she said of the gift, a 1988 Harley Davidson 883 "Hugger."

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Paul Kantner, a founder of the '60s rock group The Jefferson Airplane, says a visit to Nicaragua in July gave him a new perspective on an old song.

Kantner had visited the Central American nation for the eighth anniversary of the revolution that brought the leftist Sandinistas to power. At a coffee plantation, he and Kris Kristofferson performed for peasants.

It was there that he sang the Airplane's protest song "Volunteers of America," which includes the lines "Look what's happening out in the streets. Gotta revolution, got to revolution."

"I'll tell you, after 15 years of playing that song from Woodstock to Daytona, I was a bit jaded to it," Kantner wrote in This World magazine, published in Sunday's Examiner & Chronicle.

"But there in the Nicaraguan jungle, singing to a bunch of revolutionary campesinos, it never seemed more relevant."

Quilts labor of love for woman

BONHAM, Texas (AP) — Flower garden, snake-in-the-grass, log cabin, chain links, and double wedding rings. The possibilities are limitless.

Quilting's timeless elegance rivals art.

"To me, a pretty quilt is just as beautiful as any oil painting," says Donnis Peebles of Dodd City. Some of her efforts recently were on display along with others at the Fannin County Museum.

The Fannin County native began learning to quilt at the age of 10 by helping her mother work on quilts for the family.

"I was just barely tall enough to reach the quilting frame, but I loved those times; they were special to me," she said.

Her first solo effort, in 1928, used a creation her mother pieced together. Ms. Peebles said quilting patterns appeared in the Dallas Semi-Weekly News every week. If they missed an issue, they exchanged patterns with someone else.

"They had pictures in the paper and you were supposed to look at them and then create your design from the idea." She added that patterns weren't pre-stamped and ready-to-quilt in those days.

"Women even had to hand-dye the materials for quilting in the very early days if they wanted any color other than work-clothes brown," she said. "As technology progressed, dry goods stores began to carry what they call quilting bundles," she added.

Laughing as she explained the concept, she used a patchwork quilt of a thousand prints to tell the story.

"All it entails is a big roll of scrap material mixed together — solids, prints, checks and of course, work-clothes brown," she said.

"My most vivid memory of quilting is trying to piece the different design of materials together so they did not clash.

"Although in that day — the design was not of utmost importance," she said with a nod. "The importance was in the function of the quilt — keeping us warm."

Ms. Peebles noted that many quilts tell family histories. One example she recalls was constructed solely of several dozen men's neckties saved by a woman as her husband followed the fashion trends.

Another quilt in the Fannin County display featured a log cabin in each block. Ms. Peebles said a small piece of rose-colored material in the direct center of each cabin symbolized a welcome to husbands returning from hunting or the fields.

The quilts themselves also sometimes make history.

Ms. Peebles and a friend, Floe Runkle of Windom, worked together to construct an original Texas Sesquicentennial quilt that was displayed throughout the state.

Ms. Peebles said her love for this art came from an aunt. "Don't get me wrong, my mother loved doing this," she said. "But my aunt — it was her life. She made some of the most beautiful quilts I could ever hope to see." Displaying various items from baby quilts, to wall hangings and stuffed animals with intricate stitching she said she most enjoys hand-piecing and hand-quilting.

"Sometimes certain designs, for example, circular patterns, don't work well together if they are machine stitched," she said with a frown.

Displaying the motion of a fast-flying needle, she said, "So, I sit down and do every last stitch with a needle, thread and my trusty thimble.

"The thimble is real important," she said, "if you are going to quilt you have to use the thimble."

The major consideration in quilting, Ms. Peebles said, is to "make up your mind that you really want to quilt or you will never finish the project."

She said, "If you set your mind to it, you can patch a nine-piece in one day. There is simply no end to the items you can make and it is so rewarding."

Ms. Peebles quilts when she is resting from household chores. She is not fond of television or radio. "I would rather work with my hands than just about anything else. I think I will just stick with my handicrafts. That makes me happy."

Finding contentment in old age tough

Finding contentment in old age is no easier than finding satisfaction at any other stage of life, says gerontologist Dr. Judith Warren.

"Research on life satisfaction, morale, successful aging and happiness has produced no magic formulas," she says. "But sufficient income, reasonably good health and someone to talk to and confide in, are factors identified with contentment in old age."

Some adult children think an aging parent would be happier living with them, although research studies indicate that most older people prefer to live close to but not with their children, Warren notes.

Elders in good health may prefer to live independently and to have their own friends, who are more often found among the old than among the young, she observes.

According to Warren, who is a specialist with the Texas A&M University Agricultural Extension Service home economics program, contradictory attitudes about aging often interfere with feelings of contentment.

"Some elders feel that they ought to act a certain way or dress a certain way because of their age. These age norms can inhibit them from being themselves and being as outgoing as they might be."

The gerontologist observes that older people are also advised to "stay active" as the way to be happy in old age.

"While this formula may work for some, many older people do not feel like being active, busy and responsible to others," she maintains. "They may want to pull away and will be more content not doing what they did in the past. Or unforeseen circumstances may require the older person to redefine what having an

STORING WINE

The most important thing to consider in storing wines is to place them in a stable atmosphere. It should be free of vibration, fluctuations in temperature, and away from light. The cellars of old houses were ideal in many respects. Today, however, they are often the site of the boiler, washer and dryer. Cool temperatures are best for wines. The ideal cellar temperature of yesterday was around 55 to 57 degrees F. Normal household temperatures of 68 to 72 degrees F. will not harm wines, as long as these temperatures are fairly constant year-round. In warmer atmospheres, however, it is important to keep in mind that wines will tend to age faster.

If you are planning a special party this fall be sure to come by THE STORE where we carry a marvelous selection of red and white wines, both imported and domestic. A bottle or two of wine will add just the right touch of conviviality to your gathering. Perhaps you have been invited to a friends or relatives. If so, a bottle of wine makes the perfect hostess gift. You'll find us at 400 N. 25 Mile, 364-7802 where we are open Mon. - Sat. 10 - 9, use our drive up door until midnight for beer and wine, on Sun. only beer and wine is available.

active life means." According to the specialist, older persons are more likely to find contentment if they feel they can accept both the limitations and successes of their past and present.

"Many elders reminisce to come to terms with their lives, and to accept or resolve past problems. When they don't work through these issues, discontentment may be one result," she remarks.

Fears about old age may also interfere with feelings of contentment, Warren says. Although fewer than 20 percent of older people will experience severe physical and mental impairments, fear of living with great physical deterioration and losing independence is common.

"The formula for contentment is old age will remain individual to each person, but it certainly is possible to achieve," says the gerontologist.

Barrier Methods of Contraception

By Harry S. Jonas, M.D. President, The American College of Obstetricians and Gynecologists

Barrier methods of contraception—diaphragms, condoms, foams, jellies, and sponges—are some of the oldest ways of preventing pregnancy. Recently barrier methods have become popular because they not only prevent pregnancy but may help protect against certain sexually transmitted diseases (STD).

One of the best known barrier methods for the woman is the diaphragm, a round rubber dome that covers the cervix (the opening to the uterus). You cover the inside and the rim of the diaphragm with a jelly or cream spermicide (a chemical that kills sperm) and insert it before intercourse. It works by both acting as a physical (the diaphragm) and chemical (the spermicide) barrier to the man's sperm. Diaphragms come in different sizes, so they must be prescribed and fitted by your doctor; the spermicide can be purchased at the drugstore.

Vaginal sponges, the newest barrier method for women, are made of soft plastic and contain the same type of spermicide used with a diaphragm. Sponges can be used up to 24 hours. They are available without a prescription and are disposable.

Condoms, also known as rubbers, safes, or sheaths, are the only contraceptives available for men. They are made of rubber or processed animal tissue and fit over the erect penis. Besides being as effective as other barrier methods, the rubber condoms can protect against many sexually transmitted diseases, including AIDS.

Foams, creams, tablets, and jellies can be used by themselves or with condoms. They are available at drugstores, and contain a spermicide. Like the other barrier methods, to be effective these spermicides should be used each time you have intercourse, and you should follow package directions exactly.

Barrier methods have relatively few side effects. Some women may find that they are allergic to the spermicide or rubber. Barrier methods are not as good as the pill or sterilization in preventing pregnancy. However, many failures with barrier methods are because the method was not used properly or consistently—barrier methods should be used with every act of intercourse.

Using barrier methods effectively means learning how to use them correctly and getting full cooperation from your partner. If you have any questions about them, don't hesitate to ask your doctor.

Senator Bill Sarpalius Reports

TEST SCORES IMPROVE, HIGHWAYS GET CLEANED

AUSTIN — In 1984, a three-year effort to improve Texas schools climaxed with House Bill 72, the comprehensive education-reform package.

In 1985, the State Department of Highways and Public Transportation began an intensified advertising campaign to clean up Texas' roads and highways. The campaign slogan — "Don't Mess With Texas."

It would seem on the surface that improved education and cleaner highways have little in common. In fact, they both are highly controversial state programs that last week yielded some promising results.

Education reform actually began in 1981 when the Legislature overhauled curriculum requirements for state schools, creating a new emphasis on fundamentals. The reform effort of course reached fruition with H.B. 72 and continues to this day with occasional fine-tuning of the reforms.

One critical aspect of H.B. 72 was the requirement that students between grades one and 11 be tested every other year to determine their proficiency in reading, writing and mathematics. The idea was to determine how well the new curriculum was translating into improved student skills.

The test, known as TEAMS (Texas Educational Assessment of Minimum Skills), first was given in 1986. The State Board of Education's stated goal was to improve TEAMS scores by 8 percent from that first test to the 1990 tests. Yet, the 1987 TEAMS results announced last week indicate that goal may have been too modest.

Grades for first and third-graders taking the test already have improved more than 8 percent in all three testing areas. Math scores for every grade except the ninth grade have improved more than 8 percent. Reading skills for grades five, seven, nine and 11, however, improved less than 8 percent while writing scores for grades nine and 11 still lag below the 8-percent mark.

The scores are not proof-positive that Texas' education reforms are doing the job for all the state's students. In fact, they well may be more of a reflection of our teachers than the reforms. But the overall scores and the fact that our early grades are the leaders in responding to the improved curriculum indicate we are headed in the right direction.

We will never believe H.B. 72 and the other education reform bills are perfect. Certainly we will continue to push for changes where necessary. Nonetheless, our teachers, our students and those who backed the reforms should be congratulated for these recent accomplishments.

The "Don't Mess With Texas" campaign is not as critical to the state's well being as sound education, but its importance shouldn't be understated either. A beautiful state encourages tourism and tourism helps the Texas economy, so...

When the highway department unveiled the $2 million a year campaign featuring primarily musicians and athletes, some protested that it ran against the grain of Texas' friendly image. Critics complained the new slogan would scare off tourists.

Those fears apparently were unfounded. Tourism has not been affected by the ads because, frankly, most tourists don't understand what the ads are all about.

Texans, though, seem to be getting the message. Since 1985, visible litter in Texas has dropped 54 percent according to a study commissioned by the highway department. Soft drink and beer container littering has declined 66 percent.

And, most important of all, the campaign has slowed the growth in the cost of cleaning our highways. The cost had been growing at a rate of about 10 percent per year prior to the introduction of the campaign. Now, the growth rate is just over 6 percent.

With a little luck — and a few more ads — maybe we'll soon be talking about declines in the cost of cleaning highways.

If you have any questions about education reforms, highway cleaning or other issues, please write us at P.O. Box 12068, Austin, Texas, 78711

Teen pregnancy rate has increased 8.20 percent

A recent study released by the Centers for Disease Control, Atlanta, shows that the teen pregnancy rate (age 15 to 19) has increased 8.2 percent and that the adverse medical and social consequences of this trend make it an issue of public concern. These findings and others in the CDC report are echoed in an article on "Teenage Childbearing Trends in Texas" featured in the September issue of Texas Medicine. A news release on the article is enclosed.

Teenage pregnancy in Texas continues to be a significant problem and is negatively affecting the social, economic, and medical status of the mother and child, according to the article. By studying white teens with non-Spanish surnames, whites with Spanish surnames, and black teens, the impact on social services becomes even more clear and meaningful. This article is a follow-up to one that appeared in the March issue of the Texas Medical Association journal which focused on legislation needed to reduce the incidence of teen pregnancy.

Below are some additional results from the CDC report. If you have any questions on the Texas Medicine article, please call Lisa Stark Walsh at 512/477-6704, ext. 123.

Results from the CDC Report The report, covering pregnancy from 1974 to 1980 and fertility from 1970 to 1980, reveals that despite the increase in pregnancy rates for 15 to 19 year olds, the number of births decreased 7.3 percent. In addition, there has been a jump in the "estimated unintended fertility rate," which is defined as the number of live births per 1,000 females.

Estimated unintended births for black teenagers 15 to 19 was 72.2 per 1,000—more than double for white teens.

Diabetes Foundation sets Walk-a-thon

On Sunday, October 4, at 1:30 p.m. Medi-park, The Texas Panhandle Chapter of the Juvenile Diabetes Foundation, and sponsors will join together with the City of Amarillo for the Third Annual "Walk-A-Thon."

An opportunity exists to appear in the "JDF, thanks for giving" television special that will air in November.

The theme for this year's walk will be a "Festive outing for everyone." Listed below are some of the activities that are in the plans:

Blood glucose testing, hay ride, hot air balloonists, skydivers, pickle eating contests, pie throwing contests, face painting, Khiva temple oriental band, Khiva clowns, two local bands, and warm-up exercises by a leading health club.

Mayor Parkey, two wives, representatives from several medical and pharmaceutical companies and Dr. Beale from the Texas Tech School of Medicine are invited to attend the family-oriented activities.

Participating walkers, with the required minimum pledges, will receive free food and drink, a free T-shirt and will also be eligible for an array of prizes supplied through the JDF prize incentive program.

Everyone is welcome to participate in the JDF walk. To obtain an entry form or for more information, please call Diane Eslick at 355-4387.

The Juvenile Diabetes Foundation (JDF) International was founded in 1970 by parents of diabetic children who were convinced that, with research, diabetes could be cured. They were, and continue to be, determined to make that cure happen in their children's lifetime.

Today the nucleus of dedicated families has grown. JDF is now a voluntary health agency with chapters from coast to coast, in Canada and abroad with membership in the tens of thousands. This year, JDF has awarded 18.5 million to diabetes research, bringing its cumulative dollar commitment to over $45 million.

Except for the U.S. government, JDF has given more money directly to diabetes research than any other organization in the world.

Facts of diabetes are as follows: -Diabetes Mellitus is a chronic metabolic disorder which adversely affects the body's ability to manufacture and utilize insulin, a hormone necessary for the conversion of food into energy.

-There are two types of diabetes: juvenile (insulin-dependent or Type I) diabetes and maturity-onset (Type II) diabetes. Juvenile diabetes, the more severe form of the disease, can appear at any age, though most commonly from infancy to the late thirties. Juvenile diabetics must take daily insulin injections to stay alive.

-Maturity-onset diabetes usually begins in the middle or later years. Treatment is usually through diet and weight control, although oral medication or insulin may be required in some cases.

-Approximately 11 million Americans suffer from diabetes. The number of diabetics is increasing at a rate of six percent each year.

-Diabetes with its complications is the third leading cause of death by disease after heart disease and cancer.

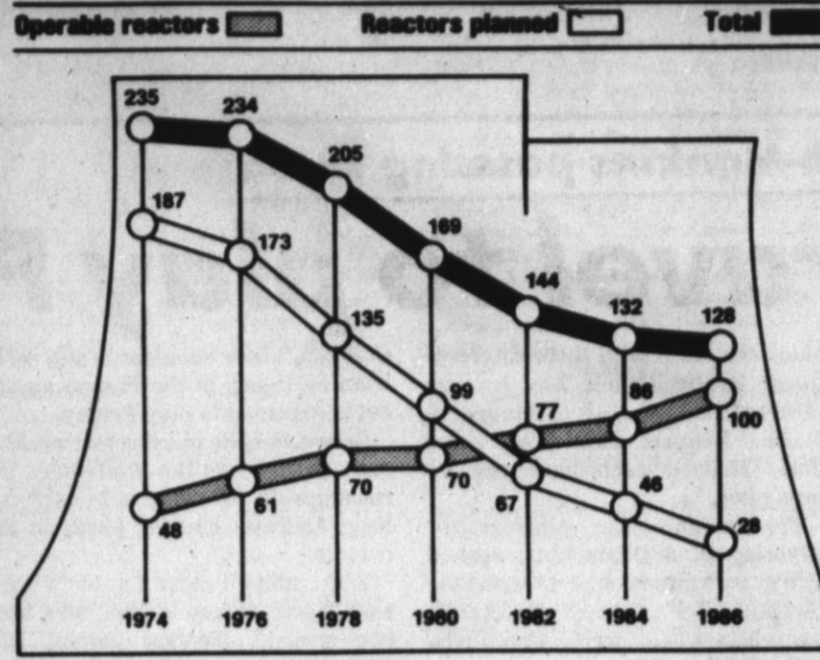

-Diabetes often leads to heart disease, stroke, kidney disease, gangrene and nerve damage. Diabetes is also the leading cause of adult blindness.

-Kidney disease is a major complication of diabetes. Between 20 and 25 percent of new dialysis patients have diabetes-caused kidney failure.

-The direct annual cost for diabetes-related amputations amount to $350 million annually.

-For more information on diabetes or membership with JDF, contact your local chapter or the Executive Office at 432 Park Ave., So., New York, NY 10016-8013 (800) 223-1138 or (212) 889-7575. In Canada: 4632 Yonge Street, Willowdale, Ontario, Canada M2N 5M1, (416) 223-1068.

NUCLEAR REACTORS: Few new ones are planned

Source: Energy Information Administration NEA GRAPHIC

Since the 1970s, partly because of the 1979 accident at the Three Mile Island nuclear power plant in Pennsylvania, electric utilities have scaled back their plans for new reactors. In the 1970s, more than 200 reactors were operating or planned. But by last year, only 128 reactors were on line or planned.

Children need plenty of sleep nightly

By The Associated Press

Eye tests and medical checkups are required at most American schools, but a good night's sleep also is important if students are to do their best in class, according to a New York University pediatrician.

"Children, like adults, need a good night's sleep to be at their best," says Dr. Heidi Leistner, assistant professor of pediatric medicine at NYU Medical Center.

"Poor sleep habits can be every bit as disruptive to a child's education as poor eyesight and even certain learning disabilities."

Most bad sleep habits and poor school performance can be blamed on television, according to Leistner.

"It stands to reason that if a kid stays up late to watch TV, his or her schoolwork will suffer," she explains, adding:

"Too much homework can be bad, too. Worse still is too much of both—especially when youngsters do their homework first and then are rewarded with TV when they're finished."

And since children seem to enjoy watching "scary" programs, she says, they also may suffer nightmares.

Leistner believes not all poor sleep habits can be blamed on television, however.

Patho-physiological problems, she says, can cause children to sleep poorly. One such problem is called obstructive sleep apnea, in which they have difficulty breathing while asleep.

"They wake up gasping for air, and before they can fall back into a deep sleep they wake up again to catch their breath," explains Leistner, an expert on childhood pulmonary disorders.

She says children who have a hard time awakening in the morning, who

As for the best way to assure that your youngsters will be ready and rarin' to go on school mornings, Leistner's recommendations include:

- Establish and maintain a regular bedtime.
- Provide a quiet, dark room.
- Let in fresh air.
- Get a good mattress that combines comfort and support.

Medical grievances can be handled

Occasionally problems may arise between you and your doctor. You may feel your doctor does not give you enough information for you to make informed decisions about your care.

You may experience difficulty in getting information from your medical records. Or, perhaps you have been unable to reach your doctor at night or on weekends.

The Texas Medical Association says, if you and your doctor encounter a problem, discuss it. Many problems are caused by incomplete communication resulting in misunderstandings. However, if a satisfactory solution cannot be reached, several options are open to you.

If your doctor is a member of TMA, a professional association of more than 27,000 Texas physicians, his or her conduct can be reviewed by the local county medical society, which is a component of TMA. These local medical societies have established "grievance" or "mediation" committees to review complaints.

Send your grievance in writing to your local county medical society. If you need help in locating the medical society nearest you, contact TMA at 1801 N. Lamar Blvd., Austin, Texas 78701, (512) 477-6704. You can be assured that the county medical society will give your case a thorough and fair review.

Disciplinary actions that medical societies can take include censure, probation, or expulsion from membership.

If your doctor is not a member of TMA, his or her professional conduct is not subject to review by a county medical society. In that case, or if you believe your doctor's conduct may be a violation of the law, you may want to contact the Texas State Board of Medical Examiners.

The board will determine if the complaint is within its jurisdiction as stated by law. Possible disciplinary actions that may be taken by the board include restriction, suspension, or cancellation of a physician's license to practice medicine.

Principal to conduct meeting

Hereford High School Principal Terry Russell will be conducting an informative meeting at 7 p.m. Monday in the HHS auditorium for all parents of junior and senior students.

The meeting will concern graduation requirements, graduation plans outlined in state law, college admissions, college testing, college financial aid and senior year activities.

Eye Care available for the elderly

Do you know an older person who needs medical eye care, but cannot afford it?

Ask them to call 1-800-222-EYES, the toll-free Helpline operated by the National Eye Care Project. Eligible callers will receive a referral to a nearby eye physician and surgeon (ophthalmologist) who has volunteered to provide care.

Every patient will be given a comprehensive medical eye examination for eye diseases and any needed treatment to protect vision. Services of the volunteer ophthalmologist are provided at no out-of-pocket cost to the patient. For this project, volunteer ophthalmologists are accepting Medicare and/or other health insurance assignment as payment in full for their services. If the patient has no insurance coverage, medical eye care is provided without charge.

Although there is no financial qualification for the program, the emphasis of the project is to help those who may be without the means to pay—those who need the care the most.

Most rabbits are nocturnal creatures, preferring to eat and play from dusk until dawn. During the day they rest and sleep.

-To be eligible, a person must be age 65 or older, a U.S. citizen, and no longer have access to an ophthalmologist he or she has seen in the past.

-This is not an eyeglasses program. The National Eye Care Project is designed to provide comprehensive medical eye examinations and treatment to prevent or control eye disease. Eyeglasses are not covered by the program.

-If hospitalization is needed, volunteer ophthalmologists may be able to work with the patient to obtain needed care. Hospital charges are not covered under this program or by the doctor.

-The National Eye Care Project is for needy older persons who do not have an ophthalmologist. It is not a second opinion program.

Older people suffer more than half of the blinding eye diseases in the U.S.—and about half of this blindness could be prevented. If you know someone who needs eye care, but cannot afford it, ask them to call 1-800-222-EYES today!

The National Eye Project is sponsored by your state ophthalmology society and the Foundation of the American Academy of Ophthalmology.

Ophthalmologists are medical doctors. They are the only specialists qualified to provide total eye care: medical, surgical and optical.

Herd defense aims to stop McCullough-Mankins passing threat

Whitefaces travel to play Frenship Friday

By GARY CHRISTENSEN
Sports Editor

A much-improved Frenship Tiger football team will be the opponent of the Hereford Whitefaces this Friday at 7:30 p.m. in a District 1-4A game at Wolforth.

It will be only the second meeting in history between Hereford and Frenship. Last season, Hereford shut out Frenship 35-0 in a contest played in Hereford.

Frenship is in its second season in class 4A, after being moved up from 3A in the 1985 UIL reclassifications. Hereford moved from class 5A to 4A in the reclassifications.

The major offensive threat for Frenship so far this season has been junior quarterback Jared McCullough. McCullough is ranked 20th in the state in class 4A for passing yardage. McCullough has 310 yards passing, completing 17 of 47 passes.

than they did last year — a lot of play action passes," Hereford head Coach Don Cumpton said about Frenship.

In comparison, Hereford's quarterbacks, Jason Scott and Raymond Romo, have combined for 22 completions in 53 attempts for 357 yards.

The Hereford Whiteface defense has limited opponents to 170 yards per game — 20th in the state among class 4A schools. The Herd defensive unit, particular the secondary, will aim to continue thwarting the opponents' passing game.

"I thought we played real good in the secondary against Pampa. We knocked down a bunch of passes and we intercepted three passes," Cumpton said. "They're getting more aggressive, and that really showed in the Pampa game."

Hereford has intercepted nine of the 60 passes that the opponents have attempted this season. Keith Brown leads the Herd with three interceptions, Robby Collier has two interceptions, and Joe Medrano, Johnny Beltran, Clint Cotten, and Chris Bullard each have one interception.

The leading pass receiver for Frenship is Jeff Mankins, ranked 18th in the state in class 4A with nine receptions for 139 yards. Hereford's top receiver is Fidencio Cantu who has six catches for 143 yards.

Frenship began the season with a 48-18 rout of Brownfield, and then lost to Tulia 17-13. Tulia intercepted four of McCullough's passes, and then last week, McCullough completed only four of 22 passes in Frenship's 18-7 loss to Lubbock Estacado.

The Hereford Whiteface offensive unit is averaging 331 yards total offense per game, which is in the top 20 among class 4A school in that category.

Cumpton credits the offensive line for its major role in the team's success: "Our offensive line is starting to jell. They had a great game against Pampa. That's where you're going to win the ball games, in the trenches."

The Whitefaces played the Pampa game without a leading player from each unit, running back Marcus Brown and defensive end Derrell Page. Cumpton said Brown, who is recovering from an achilles tendon injury, is running better this week, but says, "I still don't think he's quite 100 percent."

Page is expected to be fully recovered from his injury, a contusion of the knee cap. Other players who have had problems with injuries are Stuart Mitts, who has worked out this week after having an ankle injury two weeks ago, and Rodney Mc-Cracken, whose shoulder is still sore from an injury in the Pampa game but is expected to play Friday.

Brown, despite missing last week's game, still leads the Whitefaces in rushing with 243 yards in 24 carries. Kyle Andrews has 142 yards in 29 carries.

The rushing leader for the Frenship Tigers is Roy Wilson, who has two straight 100-yard games. He rushed 20 times for 109 yards against Frenship and 21 times for 106 yards against Estacado.

Coach Cumpton expresses the importance of mental preparation, and taking the season one game at a time: "Every game at this point in the season is the most important. Each week, any team in our league is capable of winning."

"Your mental preparation and mental approach is important to the ball game."

Hereford, 2-1, has defeated Andrews 26-0 along with the 37-8 win over Pampa. The Whitefaces have outscored their opponents 57-0 in the first half. Opponents have scored 29 points in the second half — 21 of them by Clovis in the 21-14 loss two weeks ago.

The Whitefaces are developing a balanced offensive attack, with several running backs capable of 100-yard plus games and with several pass receivers capable of making big plays.

Hereford cut down on its penalties in last week's game, six for 35 yards, after having about 100 yards in penalties in each of the first two games. "We made some improvement as far as penalties are concerned. It's just concentration, and we feel we can eliminate those penalties."

Signature cards distribute funds

The signature cards you sign on joint bank and checking accounts will determine if those funds go directly to your spouse in the event of your death.

"In Texas, establishing an 'and/or' joint account does not automatically create the right of survivorship," says Nancy Granovsky, a family economics specialist.

"The right of survivorship is important because it means that the surviving spouse receives the property outright, without having to go through probate," she explains. "Without the right of survivorship the spouse's share of the accounts will go to his or her heirs, usually the children."

Granovsky, who is a specialist with Texas A&M University Agricultural Extension Service home economics program, says the right of survivorship can be created through a cotenancy, which is one form of joint ownership.

"Three types of cotenancy are recognized in Texas; tenancy in common, community property, and joint tenancy with the right of surivorship. The main difference between tenancy in common and community property is that community property exists only between husband and wife."

"But with either cotenancy or community property, property passes to the heirs and does not go automatically to the surviving cotenant," Granovsky observes.

She emphasizes that only a joint tenancy with right of survivorship allows the funds to go automatically to your spouse.

"To create a bank or checking account that allows for joint tenancy with right of survivorship, there must be a written agreement that has been signed by the person who dies and stating the intention that his or her share should pass to the surviving spouse."

A written partition agreement must also be signed by the couple separately, before opening the joint savings or bank account, she says.

"The signature cards you sign at the bank when setting up accounts can create the right of survivorship if they meet these requirements," the specialist says. "However, not all signature cards meet the requirements, and not all people pay attention to what they are signing in setting up accounts."

"Without joint survivorship you may have to function with half the money held in joint accounts in case of your spouse's death," notes Granovsky. "Even if you are designated as your spouse's heir, you will not have access to those funds while the estate is probated."

"When opening a joint account, consider whether it will meet the rules for joint survivorship," advises the specialist. "One side of the signature card should contain the partition agreement and the other, the language you need to set up a joint tenancy with right of survivorship."

Moon mapper

How did the mountains on the moon get their names? Johannes Hevelius, a German astronomer, mapped the moon's surface in the mid 1600s. His name for many of the geographic sites are still in use.

LOVE'S LAST APPEAL...REJECTED!

HERE are some of the story-illustrations Jesus gave to the people at that time:
"A man planted a vineyard and built a wall around it and dug a pit for pressing out the grape juice, and built a watchman's tower. Then he leased the farm to tenant farmers and went on a trip to a distant land.
At grape-picking time he sent one of his men to collect his share of the crop.
But the farmers beat up the man and sent him back empty-handed.
The owner then sent another of his men, who received the same treatment, only worse, for his head was seriously injured.
The next man he sent was killed; and later, others were either beaten or killed, until
There was only one left—his only son. He finally sent him, thinking they would surely give him their full respect.
But when the farmers saw him coming they said, 'He will own the farm when his father dies. Come on, let's kill him—and then the farm will be ours!'
So they caught him and murdered him and threw his body out of the vineyard.
What do you suppose the owner will do when he hears what happened? He will come and kill them all, and lease the vineyard to others.
Don't you remember reading this verse in the Scriptures? 'The Cornerstone—the most honored stone in the building—is a Rock the builders threw away!
This is the Lord's doing and it is an amazing thing to see.'"

Biden bids bye-bye; will be back

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sen. Joseph Biden, the second Democratic presidential candidate to drop out of the race amid questions of character and integrity, says he is angry at himself but vows, "There'll be other presidential campaigns, and I'll be there."

Biden was flying today to Des Moines, Iowa, and Manchester, N.H., to thank his supporters and workers for their efforts in those early caucus and primary states.

The three-term Delaware senator ended his campaign Wednesday just three months after it formally began, saying the "exaggerated shadow" cast by his own mistakes and misstatements had overwhelmed his candidacy and made it impossible to continue.

"There'll be other presidential campaigns, and I'll be there," Biden said at the announcement in a Senate committee room, where a crush of reporters and supporters spilled out the door.

"There will be other opportunities, there'll be other battles in other places, other times, and I'll be there," Biden said.

Biden, 44, withdrew from the campaign after a week in which his campaign was rocked by admissions of plagiarism and false claims about his academic accomplishments.

He said he would concentrate his energies on chairing the Senate Judiciary Committee hearings into the Supreme Court nomination of Robert H. Bork.

Biden's rivals for the Democratic nomination reacted with expressions of sadness and respect.

"I'm very saddened by it," Massachusetts Gov. Michael Dukakis said in Iowa. "It takes a lot of courage to do what he has done — to put the Judiciary Committee's responsibilities ahead of his future."

Rep. Richard Gephardt, D-Mo., a competitor for the presidential nomination who has denied allegations that his staff tipped reporters to the first allegations against his rival, issued a statement calling Biden "a thoroughly decent and honest man of very real talent."

A Republican colleague, Sen. Strom Thurmond of South Carolina, ranking minority member of the Judiciary Committee, said, "The Democrats have now lost their most articulate spokesman."

White House Chief of Staff Howard H. Baker Jr., a former Republican leader of the Senate, said, "You hate to see that sort of thing in either party."

"I have known Joe Biden since he first came to the Senate. I count him as a friend and I really regret that it came to this," Baker said.

An ABC News-Washington Post poll released Wednesday found that 52 percent of those surveyed were aware of the plagiarism issue, but of those, more than half — 55 percent — thought Biden should not pull out of the presidential race as a result. Still, the poll showed a sizable minority of 43 percent who thought he should withdraw, indicating the extent of damage to his campaign. The results were based on interviews Sept. 17-22 with 2,015 Americans and had a margin of error of 3.5 percentage points.

Biden's departure followed that of former Sen. Gary Hart of Colorado, the front-runner who ended his campaign in May following questions about his relationship with Miami model Donna Rice. While the circumstances were entirely different, issues of character and integrity were underlying in the destruction of both candidacies.

Biden is known for his inspirational speech-making, which was perhaps his most distinguishing asset as a candidate. But it was Biden's own words that drove him from the presidential contest.

The blows to his campaign came in a series of increasingly damaging reports, beginning with the acknowledged charge that he lifted passages from other politicians' speeches without attribution in some cases.

He said the failure to note references was inadvertent, or that the allusions were so widely known they demanded no citation. But he then was forced to acknowledge he plagiarized material for a paper while a first-semester law student more than 20 years ago.

The worst came Monday with reports that he had exaggerated his academic accomplishments in a heated exchange with a voter in New Hampshire last spring that was captured on videotape. Biden acknowledged errors, including the false claim that he had graduated in the top half of his Syracuse University law school class. In fact, he graduated near the bottom.

GETTING MORE PROTEIN
NEW YORK (AP) — To get more protein into your diet, eat more carbohydrates.

Harvard nutritionist Virginia Aronson says most of us eat too much protein. Although our bodies break protein down for fuel, it's a wasteful source of energy.

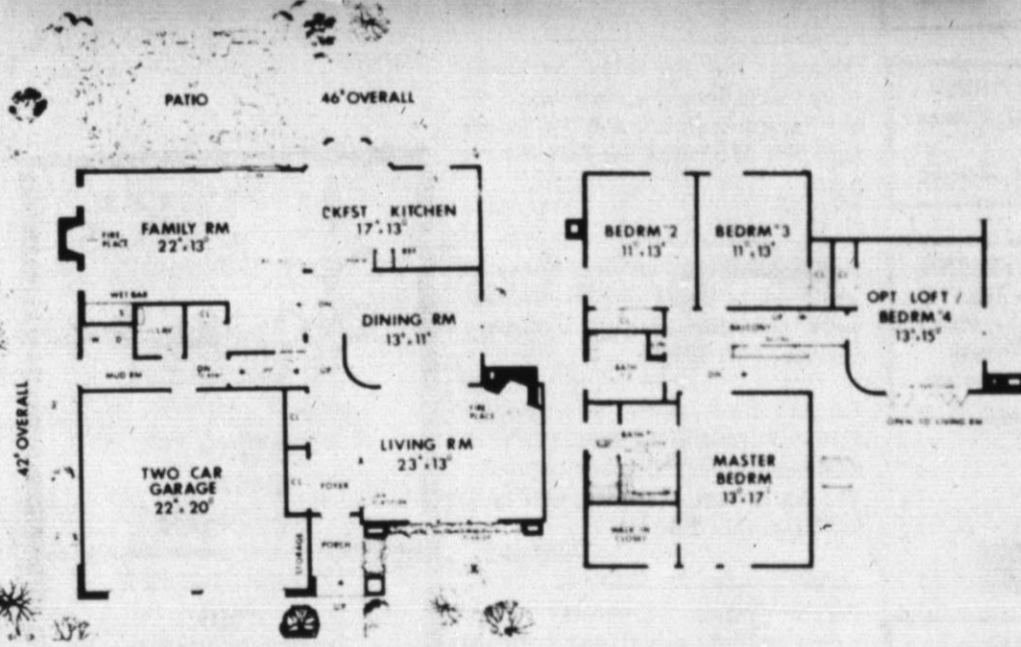

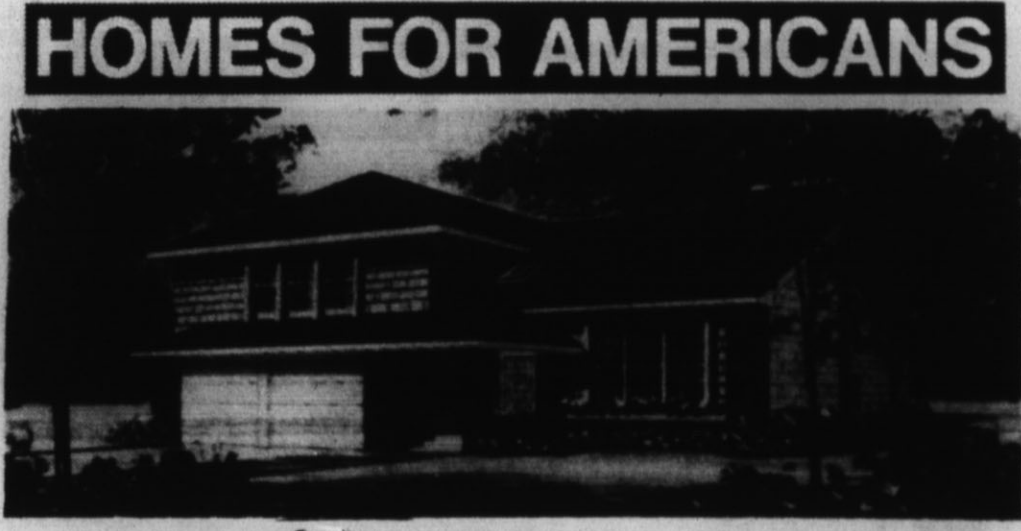

Eating extra carbohydrates — a natural fuel — will free your body to use the protein to repair muscles. That's protein's best role, says the Reebok Aerobic Information Bureau.
