Inmate from 1 of 3 States May Be Next To Die

By GREG MACARTHUR
Associated Press Writer

Next year an inmate in Georgia, Florida or Texas is likely to become the first person legally put to death in the United States since Gary Gilmore was executed by firing squad in Utah on Jan. 17, 1977.

But the next execution probably will involve someone who has been fighting to stay alive - unlike Gilmore, who pressed Utah authorities to carry out his sentence and became the first person executed in this country in almost a decade.

In 1967, the federal courts declared a moratorium on executions pending a review of death penalty laws by the U.S. Supreme Court, and in 1972 overturned all existing capital punishment statutes as unconstitutionally arbitrary.

On July 2, 1976, however, the Supreme Court upheld new death statutes in Georgia, Florida and Texas, ruling that they provided "guided discretion" about the exercise of the penalty and satisfied constitutional demands.

Death penalty cases again moved swiftly through the courts of those three states, and eventually, 18 other states adopted similar death statutes.

Opponents, searching for some momentum as the possibility of renewed executions nears, say they believe the court responded to public pressure in 1976.

"It's going to be a very close race between society waking up and the state again beginning to kill," said Millard Farmer, an attorney with the Atlanta-based Team Defense Project.

"We sometimes like to think these court decisions are made in a vacuum, but there's no doubt in my mind that public opinion - public fears about crime and that sort of thing - influenced the supreme court.

"It's a barroom mentality - a simple solution to a complicated problem. And unless we do our job better, we could very well have an execution by 1979," he said.

For some of the condemned men and women in Georgia, Florida and Texas, the appeals countdown that began two years ago likely could draw to a close in early 1979.

John Spenkelink, a 29-year-old Californian incarcerated at the state prison in Starke, Fla., may be closer to execution than any other death row inmate in the country.

Spenkelink has exhausted all his appeals in the Florida state court system and now is awaiting a ruling by the 5th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals. An adverse decision would leave him one last appeal to the U.S. Supreme Court before the setting of a final execution date.

Assistant Florida Attorney General Ray Marky says Spenkelink is farthest along from "a procedural posture," and it is "highly probable that we will have an execution in Florida sometime next year."

Depending on how fast the courts act, an execution could be carried out as early as this December, Marky said. "But not many governors would sign an execution around Christmas. You don't give an execution as a Christmas present," he added.

Spenkelink has been under death sentence since Dec. 20, 1973. He was convicted of the Feb. 4, 1973 murder of Joseph Szmankiewicz, a prison escapee. Spenkelink claims Szmankiewicz robbed and sodomized him during a cross-country auto trip, and that Szmankiewicz was killed during a struggle.

Prosecutors claim Spenkelink shot Szmankiewicz while the victim slept in a Tallahassee, Fla., motel room. Spenkelink is white, as was his victim.

Jerry Jurek, 27, has been under a death sentence in Texas since February, 1974. He was convicted of the kidnap-slaying of a 10-year-old girl in Cuero, Tex. Jurek is white as was his victim.

Like Spenkelink, he too has exhausted all available appeals in the state court system and is before the 5th U.S. Circuit. Jurek's attorneys, however, have yet to argue that appeal.

"Given a reasonable set of circumstances, he would be the first one executed in Texas," according to Assistant Texas Attorney General Anita Ashton. She cautioned that "you can't outguess a court," but predicted that Texas' first execution would "probably be held sometime in the spring or summer of 1979. The entire appeals process takes about three years from start to finish."

President Promises To Fight Spending

BEAUMONT, Tex. (AP) - President Carter said Saturday holding the line on federal spending is essential in fighting inflation "and I am willing to do so even if it means I have to take the political consequences."

In his text for delivery at the dedication of a 44-year-old federal building an post office being renamed for Rep. Jack Brooks, D-Texas, Carter declared:

"Short-sighted selfishness can lead to a spiral of inflation that nobody will be able to stop. Only self-discipline in the public interest can slow that spiral."

Saying he can "only do a small part of the job," the president told his East Texas audience: "I call on each of you today, and I call on each member of Congress to help create the climate of mutual sacrifice to curb inflation."

Carter spoke Friday in Fort Worth before flying to Houston, where he met with Mexican-American leaders prior to addressing leaders prior to addressing a Democratic Party fundraising dinner attended by about 1,500 people.

Democratic Party officials said the $500-a-plate dinner would net about $600,000, most of which would be applied to reducing the party's $2.3 million debt.

The meeting with about two dozen Mexican-American leaders was private, but four Hispanic state legislators who attended held a news conference later and discussed the session.

State Rep. Ben Reyes, D-Houston, said Carter had assured the group that "proper steps would be made" to protect the economic and civil rights of the nation's Mexican-American minority.

The other legislators who attended the session were Reps. Gonzalo Barrientos of Austin, Hugo Bulanga of Corpus Christi and Matt Garcia of San Antonio.

Carter received strong backing from the Mexican-American community in Texas during his 1976 presidential campaign, but some Hispanic leaders (See CARTER, Page 2)

Architect, City Plan Discussion on Hall

By PAUL SIMS
Managing Editor

An Andrews architect will meet with Hereford city commissioners at 5 p.m. Tuesday to discuss plans for a new - and controversial - City Hall.

The special meeting over the proposed $600,000 structure will be open to the public.

The new, one-level building, which will replace a 51-year-old two-story structure, was the subject of heated discussion during last week's regular semi-monthly meeting of the commission.

Commissioner Emory Brownlow in that meeting questioned Mayor Bartley Dowell concerning the city's purchase of land between 3rd and 4th streets and Miles Ave. and Lee St. for construction of the City Hall. Brownlow said he had been asked on several occasions how much was paid for the property, a question he said he could not answer even though he was on the commission in the early part of 1977 when a public hearing over the building was held.

Brownlow also asked Dowell who authorized the hiring of architect Tommy Huckabee of Andrews without approval of the commission. Dowell said that Huckabee had not been hired and had only prepared ink sketches of the proposed structure.

Controversy surrounding the new City Hall has not been limited to last week's commission meeting. Commissioner John Matthews and a group of citizens who say (See CITY HALL, Page 2)

Prudia Black Dies Saturday

Prudia Black of Dimmitt, who donated the E. B. Black House to the Deaf Smith County Historical Museum to be used as an adjunct in 1976, died Saturday morning in Dimmitt's Castro Memorial Hospital following a lengthy illness.

Services for Mrs. Black, a pioneer and former civic leader in Hereford, are pending.

She was born in Tennessee in 1900 and moved to Hereford from Canyon in 1920. She married James E. Black of Hereford, son of Mr. and Mrs. E.B. Black, in that same year.

Mrs. Black and her husband inherited the historical Black house, which she gave to Deaf Smith County in December, 1976. The house now is an adjunct to the museum, with tours being conducted each Sunday afternoon.

Mrs. Black moved to South Hills Manor Nursing Home in Dimmitt in February, 1975. Her husband preceded her in death in September, 1976.

Survivors include one brother, E.W.

Prichard of Amarillo, and one sister, Alice McFarland of Dumas.

County Commission To Adopt Budget

Deaf Smith County commissioners will conduct a public hearing on the 1978-79 budget following their regular semi-monthly meeting scheduled for 10 a.m. Monday in the commissioners courtroom.

The 1978-79 budget will be adopted after several weeks of its preparation. Last week, commissioners trimmed $31,000 from the proposed budget while approving a 6.05 percent pay increase for county employees. The raises will be made possible through the county's paying both halves of social security taxes.

The new budget will not necessitate an increase in taxes, according to County (See COUNTY, Page 2)

Briscoe Delays Session Decision As Officials 'Thinking Twice'

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) - Gov. Dolph Briscoe said Friday it will be next week, "at the earliest," before he makes a decision on whether to call a special legislative session to cut Texans' taxes.

His brief statement came after conferences earlier Friday with Speaker Bill Clayton and Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby.

"Members of my staff have been meeting with representatives of the lieutenant governor and the House speaker and will continue their discussion of the various approaches through which meaningful tax relief could be provided the citizens of Texas and limits placed on future taxes and spending by governmental entities," Briscoe said.

"It's still an 80-20 chance we will have an extra session, but they are thinking twice about it now," said a prominent lobbyist who did not want to be named.

Comptroller Bob Bullock said in Amarillo he thought Briscoe would call a special session. He said Briscoe told him three weeks ago he was planning one and "asked us for a study on the various combinations he might use, and my people are still working on it."

Clayton, who had predicted that Briscoe would call the special session on Friday, had to roll back his forecast after meeting with Hobby and then with Briscoe.

Clayton said he no longer believed

Briscoe would make an announcement this weekend.

Briscoe left late Friday for Houston where he was to attend a fund-raising dinner with President Jimmy Carter and other party officials.

There were recurring reports that Hobby and Clayton could not agree on details of measure that might be considered in a special session, and Briscoe was waiting for their agreement.

But there was no lack of advice - pro and con - from legislators and others on what Briscoe should do, including a number of newspaper editorials.

Dump-Ground Blaze

Hereford volunteer firemen had their hands full Saturday with a fire at the big dump-ground pit, battling the enormous blaze from 10:20 a.m. until 6 p.m. The fire department rotated 15 men fighting the fire and used approximately 125,000 gallons of water to douse it. Fire Marshal Jay

Spain said someone probably threw something burning into the pit to start the fire—a violation of the law. "It resulted in a lot of wear and tear on city equipment," Spain said. (Brand photo by Paul Sims)

Stockpiles as USDA Predicted

WASHINGTON (AP) - Stockpiles of grain and soybeans stored by farmers and in commercial warehouses are about in line with what had been expected for this time of year, says the Agriculture Department.

"Treasure Trove of Recipes," a special supplement containing approximately 200 dishes from Deaf Smith County women, is included in today's Brand.

The recipe collection should prove invaluable to Deaf Smith County's cooks. The Brand wishes to thank those who submitted recipes for their overwhelming response.

issued Friday showed that June 1 stocks of grain and soybeans were "well above year-ago levels" because of last year's big harvests. The buildup occurred despite large exports and improved domestic use.

In the case of wheat, the June 1 inventory was more than 1.17 billion bushels. Although that was slightly less than had been forecast two months ago in a similar report, it still was the largest wheat stockpile since 1963 and was up from 1.1 billion bushels a year ago and 665 million two years ago.

The June 1 wheat figure represents how much old-crop grain was left over at the beginning of the new 1978-79 wheat marketing year. The June 1 carryover plus the wheat harvested this summer will make up the U.S. wheat supply in the year ahead.

Using the June 1 inventory reports, the department also projected how large it expects the soybean reserve to be when the new marketing year begins Sept. 1 for that crop. The report said that the Sept. 1 soybean carryover now is expected to be about 130 million bushels, down from 170 million forecast earlier. Last Sept. 1 the

Calderas Confined To State Hospital

Ricardo Calderas, 24, will not have to stand trial for the murder of his 64-year-old mother, Concepcion Calderas, an eight-man, four-woman jury ruled Friday during his sanity hearing.

Calderas, who was ruled incompetent to stand trial, will be confined to a state hospital. He was charged with killing his mother on Feb. 8 by beating her with a plaster candleholder and stabbing her.

The jury heard testimony concerning Calderas' sanity for approximately an hour Friday before declaring him incompetent.

Raiding Rhodesians Kill 19 Persons

MAPUTO, Mozambique (AP) - Invading Rhodesian troops killed 19 persons in a two-pronged raid in southwestern Mozambique and one of the battles is still raging, the Mozambique army says.

The troops, ferried in by helicopters and backed by jet fighter-bombers, also kidnapped a group of women and children from a research station where the 19 were slain, the army said.

Mozambique is a main base for black nationalist guerrillas seeking to overthrow the biracial government in Salisbury, the Rhodesian capital.

The Rhodesian military command in Salisbury refused comment and banned local media from publishing Mozambican accounts of the raid. Previously, when Maputo reported similar raids, the Rhodesians maintained official silence until their troops returned from across the border.

The Mozambique communique, issued by the People's Liberation Forces, did not specify how many soldiers of Rhodesia's white-led but mainly black security forces were involved in the attack.

It said the Rhodesians struck Thursday night at the Sussundenga agriculture station 18 miles from Mozambique's western border and also in the Massengena district about 175 miles farther south.

"The enemy murdered 17 refugees who were in transit to a refugee camp and a Belgian, and his wife who were both technicians from the U.N. Food and Agricultural Organization," the communique said of the attack on Sussundenga.

Hill Wants MHRM To Trim 1980 Budget

AUSTIN (AP) - Attorney General John Hill, Democratic nominee for governor, wants the State Board of Mental Health and Mental Retardation to trim its 1980-81 budget to fit the expected income.

"I was very disappointed to learn that the State Board of Mental Health and Mental Retardation tentatively approved last Friday a 1980-81 budget calling for $372 million above current spending," said Hill in a letter Friday to Edwin R. Van Zandt, Beaumont, board chairman.

"That amounts to a 54 percent increase. If every agency followed suit, our state budget would exceed state revenue estimated to be available during the next fiscal period by more than $3 billion."

Hill asked Van Zandt to take a "Firm Stance" on the budget at the board's next meeting "in order to cut it to fit the income limitations we expect next year."

Hill repeated his campaign promise of "no new taxes," and said "we are going to have to live within our income when we write the state budget next year."

Government To Help Locals Hurt by Cut

SACRAMENTO, Calif. (AP) - Local governments across California will get a one-year, $5 billion bail-out needed to help offset the $7 billion in property tax cuts imposed by Proposition 13.

Final legislative approval came Friday on votes of 34-3 in the state Senate and 78-2 in the Assembly, and Gov. Edmund Brown hailed it as "a solution, at least in the short run."

The aid bill provides grants of $2.2 billion for schools, $1.48 billion for counties, $250 million for cities and $125 million for special districts, plus $900 million in short-term loans for local governments facing cash flow problems.

Brown, who opposed the Jarvis initiative before it was approved in a 2-to-1 landslide June 6, addressed a statewide television audience two hours after the legislative vote.

He promised to make the initiative work to cut government spending and services and said the rescue bill was "a positive beginning" that would "cushion the impact for the first year."

But Brown warned that when the state exhausts the budget surplus which is financing the rescue bill, there will be new "substantial problems" for state and local governments.

Persons Return Home After Chemical Fire

NASH, Texas (AP) - An estimated 1,200 persons forced from their homes by fears of leaking chlorine gas were allowed to return home Saturday after firemen extinguished a fire at a chemical plant.

No one was injured and there were no immediate damage estimates. A fireman said the cause of the blaze could not be immediately established.

The about 1,200 residents of this Northeast Texas town were ordered evacuated when a fire erupted at the Fremar chemical plant.

The fire was extinguished several hours later when firemen doused the plant with water, an action they had avoided taking earlier for fear that the chlorine gas might escape.

Before dousing the plant with water, firemen called for help from Civil Defense authorities in nearby Miller County, Ark. The Arkansas Civil Defense unit sent a helicopter to hover near the plant when the firemen began nosing down the plant.

Officers said the helicopter was to be used in case they needed to track a cloud of chlorine gas should the gas start leaking. The gas did not start leaking and residents were allowed to return home.

Nash is located on the outskirts of Texarkana.

Police Report

Florenzo Gonzalez, 222 Ave. H, reported Friday that youngsters stole apricots from his trees at 220 Ave. H. The children reportedly ran when he chased them.

Michael Hoffman, 420 Schley, told police that someone shot at him at 3 a.m. Saturday while he was driving by the intersection of 25 Mile Ave. and 13th. Investigation is pending on the incident.

Jesse Castillo, 708 Ave. F, told police Saturday that a neighbor noticed someone trying to break into his house around 2 a.m. Saturday. The neighbor chased the intruder for two blocks.

Oleta Whaley, 501 E. 4th, reported that someone took off a screen from a window at her house and loosened another while she was away from home between May 31 and June 23. She also said a lawn chair was stolen.

Executions

several death row inmates are nearing the end of their available state appeals and preparing to take their cases into federal court. Charles Tidwell, Gov. George Busbee's legal advisor, said the state's first electrocution since 1964 could be conducted "in six to 12 months - probably sometime next year."

As of late April, 462 men and 6 women were under death sentences in the United States, according to figures compiled by the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People Legal Defense Fund. Thirty-six states have some form of death penalty on the books, but only 24 have inmates on death row. Florida has 108, Georgia 72 and Texas 70.

No one will be executed, however, if the coalition of groups opposed to capital punishment succeeds in demonstrating that death sentences under the new laws are applied as unfairly and arbitrarily as those under the laws voided by the Supreme Court in 1972.

Spunklink's lawyers have asked the federal appeals court for time to complete statistical research they contend could show a "pattern of arbitrariness" in the imposition of the death sentence, according to Jack Boger, a lawyer with the Legal Defense Fund.

In addition, defense attorneys have presented results of research conducted by Dr. William Bowers of Northeastern University in Boston, Mass., which they say shows that the race of the victim determines the severity of punishment.

According to Bowers, four percent of the homicide arrests in Georgia, Florida and Texas between 1976 and 1978 involved a black offender and a white victim, while 36 percent of the death sentences imposed were for the killing of whites by blacks.

The battle for public opinion, according to Bowers, may not be won until his side loses the immediate battle.

"I hope there are no executions, but I do think the reality of renewed executions would move people who right now may not be moved by the abstract threat of state execution," he said.

Groups such as the NAACP, the American Civil Liberties Union and National Council of Churches are part of a loosely knit coalition of about 60 organizations working to prevent the resumption of executions.

The National Coalition Against the Death Penalty in New York City, N.Y., coordinates the efforts of these groups.

Less has been heard from supporters of the death penalty since the 1976 Supreme Court decision.

In Georgia, however, state Supreme Court Chief Justice H.E. Nichols not only publicly supports capital punishment, he has declared that the appeals process in Georgia is so complicated that legal delays are undercutting the deterrent effect of the death penalty.

Nichols, who has proposed a "unified appeal" to reduce the time between sentencing and execution to "no more than a year," says lengthy appeals are "making a mockery out of the law."

According to Nichols, "We ought to repeal the statute or we ought to execute the judgments in a reasonable time."

Carter

have criticized him recently for not appointing enough Mexican-Americans to high-level posts.

There was some controversy surrounding the meeting. Ruben Bonilla, state director of the league of United Latin American Citizens, said he was not invited to the session because of his criticism of the president. Some complained the meeting group was not representative of the Mexican-American community.

A group of Iranian students, protesting the Shah's government, demonstrated outside Carter's hotel in Houston. A group of Mexican-Americans also carried placards protesting the one-year sentences handed to former Houston police officers convicted of violating the civil rights of Joe Campos Torres. Torres drowned in Buffalo Bayou while in police custody in May 1977.

Carter, unpopular in many sections of the country because of his farm and energy policies, received warm responses in Fort Worth when he spoke on both topics in cattle and oil country earlier Friday.

The president spent about an hour in Fort Worth and spoke to about 5,000 persons, who paid $7 a ticket to attend a luncheon at the Tarrant County convention center.

His motorcade was met by several hundred protesting farmers and ranchers outside the center. Several were on horseback and carried placards protesting Carter's farm policies.

Two men, who had a loaded carbine rifle in their Jeep-style vehicle, were arrested by Fort Worth police just outside the convention center. They were questioned at the city jail and police said no charges were anticipated. A police spokesman said the man told officers they didn't even realize Carter was in the area.

SEATTLE (AP) - Dick, the Belgian draft horse at Woodland Park Zoo, has been in the dumps since his life-long pal, Dan, died recently of the colic.

A replacement would cost $3,000 and the zoo can't afford it. But in a desperate effort to get rid of Dick's blues, zoo officials brought in a 30-year-old mule, Warhoop.

Dick was unimpressed.

Jake O'Shaughnessey's - a Seattle bar whose drafts are a horse of a different color - has come to the rescue, starting a fund to find a successor to Dan. The owners kicked in the first $1,000.

The zoo wants a female and thinks under the circumstances, Jake's Lady would be an appropriate name. Everyone down at Jake's agrees.

Nobody told Dick about it so he hasn't ventured a neigh...or a yea.

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (AP) - Two encounters with a runaway meat truck in the past six months is enough to convince Ida Brown that it's time to move.

"I can't stay here any longer," Mrs. Brown said Thursday as she surveyed the latest damage to her bathroom wall. "This is the second time this has happened and I was hurt this time. I don't know where I'm going, but I have to get away from here."

Mrs. Brown said she was stepping into the bathtub Wednesday when the truck, owned by the Consolidated Meat-Poultry and Egg Co., came rolling down a hill and slammed into her bathroom wall.

"I had one foot in the tub when the truck rammed the tub against the wall and knocked me out of the tub," she said.

Mrs. Brown said it was the same vehicle that hit her bathroom six months ago knocking over her toilet.

Mrs. Brown is now keeping a wary eye.

Session

a special session is a mistake, and that there should be no call at this time," said Sen. Peyton McKnight, D-Tyler.

McKnight said, "At a time when taxpayers want government to cut back on unnecessary and wasteful expenditures, all these people want to spend more of the people's money, not less. This idea of a special session is just another 'dog and pony show' that won't give taxpayers any significant relief."

The Texas Association of Taxpayers Inc. said any governmental surplus, such as the estimated $750 million balance for the end of his financial period, "should be returned to the taxpayer in the form of tax cuts, set aside as savings, or applied to non-recurring projects rather than continuing programs."

The association urged adoption of a constitutional change requiring a two-thirds vote of both houses on any tax increases.

Rep. Joe Allen, D-Baytown, urged a special session to consider increasing the exemption on estate inheritances from $25,000 to $60,000.

soybean reserve was 10 1/2 million bushels.

Figures for corn and other feed grains expected to be left over next fall were unchanged from previous estimates. By Oct. 1, when the new corn year begins, about 1.2 billion bushels will be on hand as farmers harvest their 1978 crop.

"Wet conditions in the major field crop areas developed last fall and persisted through the 1978 planting season, delaying corn and soybean plantings," the report said.

"Current moisture patterns indicate ample moisture for good crop growth, even if rainfall were below normal for the next several weeks," it said. "As always, weather conditions during late July and August will be critical."

The department on June 30 will issue a report showing how many acres of wheat, corn, soybeans, cotton and other important crops farmers will have for harvest this year.

But the first USDA crop production estimates for corn and some other crops - including the first for all wheat - will not be ready until July 11. The first soybean and cotton estimates will not be issued until August.

they represent the cultural interests of the city have argued that the revenue-sharing money which the city plans to use for construction of the City Hall should instead finance recreational facilities or a civic auditorium.

Matthews also has charged that the city played down-to the point of being almost secretive--last year's public hearing.

Commissioners Dickie Geries, Ed

Coplen and Brownlow agree that the new building is necessary because the police department, presently housed on the second story of City Hall, is cramped and inconveniently located for the public and any improvements made on the building would first require, according to government standards, the addition of elevators, public restrooms and wheelchair ramps.

City Hall, when construction is completed next year, will have a Spanish-style exterior, approximately 15,000 square feet and plenty of parking space. The police station will be nearly four times larger than the present one.

The building will be located at the corner of 3rd and Lee, with its two entrances facing Lee and 2nd. The present City Hall will be leveled to create parking space.

Not Another Vietnam!

President Carter does want to involve us in Africa's ceaseless squabbles.

He wants you and your Congress to allow him to send American aid to African nations, the justification being that otherwise they will turn to Russia for aid.

That, of course, is precisely the pretext under which we backed into that miserable misadventure in Vietnam.

Africa's chronic internecine tribal strife is not going to be resolved by any superimposition of authority, and any outsider who tries--ANY outsider who tries--will bleed to death.

The Russians know better. I hope we do.

John Stockwell was a CIA agent conducting covert operations in Angola.

He says the recent vicious rebel attack on Kolwezi resulted from our earlier intervention.

And he thinks we should now "but out."

Yet President Carter is going over the heads of Congress and appealing to you for repeal of the Tunney-Clark amendment so that he can send more of your money thataway; he says he does not intend the money for Marxist Angola--so presumably he intends it for Zaire.

Gerald Bender, African expert at the University of California, believes the French are trying to sucker our President into Zaire to protect their interests there.

Also, face it: copper and cobalt from Zaire are important to the West.

Twice in a year, despite all kinds of outside aid, Zaire's army has been able to defend its borders and each intrusion has left the Mobutu government shakier and the economy crippled.

One after another, African nations have demonstrated that they will use anybody else's money but they salute nobody else's flag. They booted the Russians out as enthusiastically as they booted the French and British out.

Nor can Castro's Cuba--about which President Carter expresses so much concern--afford a protracted involvement in black Africa.

Castro is trying to appear a "world power" to his own pitifully neglected people. And any attention we give him further inflates that empty ego.

There is other pressure on our President, the subtle impact of which may not be apparent even to him.

The most difficult thing for any elected official to do is "nothing," and that is particularly true in the administration of foreign affairs.

As is, some of President Carter's advisors are advising that for us to turn our backs on African ferment--however incurable--will leave the Carter Administration appearing impotent in a congressional election year.

It is one heck of a selfish excuse for misleading us into another dead-end war--but it has been done before.

Paperwork Battle Stymied

WASHINGTON (AP) - President Carter's war on paperwork, which started like a cavalry charge, has bogged down in the trenches.

There were advances on the tax form front, but then the battle of the bacon report was lost, and the 'kirmish' over truckers' logs is going badly.

The fight to reduce paperwork is nearly stymied, and has been for six months, according to figures soon to be released.

The reason? Pick one. Tangled governmental organization. Industry resistance. Lack of legal weapons. Most important: constant introduction of new programs and regulations, which generate still more paperwork.

The non-defunct Federal Paperwork Commission estimated last year that the annual cost of federal paperwork may exceed $100 billion, or about $500 for each U.S. citizen. More recently, the president's Office of Management and Budget estimated that Americans spend 785 million hours a year filling out federal forms.

Carter told a group of businessmen just after he took office that if his presidency accomplished only one thing, it would be to cut the number and complexity of "regulations, guidelines, directives and required reports."

Official estimates show that during the first nine months of the Carter administration, the government reduced by 9.6 percent the time taxpayers spent filling out federal forms, applications and other paperwork. But in the next six months, ending April 1, the burden decreased only three-tenths of 1 percent, according to the new figures from the OMB.

"We hit the easier ones at the outset," said Stanley E. Morris, head of OMB's paperwork shrinkage shop. "It's going to get tougher from here."

OMB Director James T. McIntyre concedes that "reducing red tape cannot be accomplished overnight," and he says Carter intends to keep plugging away.

Most federal agencies predict new reductions, and there already have been notable declines in federal job-safety forms and federal red tape linked to regulation of private pension funds.

The Internal Revenue Service, which generates more paperwork than any other agency, says it has cut tax-filing time by more than 10 percent since January 1977.

But paperwork has increased sharply elsewhere, generated by equal employment regulations and by new controls on toxic chemicals, sewage and other pollution.

Even some old regulations like the bacon report and truckers' logs are hardy varieties that resist attempts at weeding.

The government requires long-haul truckers to fill out daily logs, on pain of fines up to $500, showing how they spent each 15-minute segment of their day. The job takes an estimated three minutes a day plus more time for collecting, sorting, evaluating and storing the forms, which must be kept for a full year.

Federal truck-safety enforcers say the forms help keep fatigued drivers away from the wheel.

Fannin County Sheriff Sentenced to 29 Years

TYLER, Texas (AP) - Suspended Fannin County Sheriff Raymond Taylor was sentenced to a total of 29 years in prison and fined $25,000 on three counts of racketeering Friday by a federal judge who said he had "no mercy in his heart" for the ex-sheriff.

Taylor pleaded guilty June 13 to three counts of a 16-count indictment accusing him of accepting bribes to allow prostitution, gambling and drug trafficking in his Northeast Texas county.

"He has committed, in my opinion, a very serious crime," said U.S. District Judge William M. Steger. "He has brought to question the honesty and integrity of what I consider an honorable profession - law enforcement. I have no mercy in my heart for anyone who would do this sort of thing."

Taylor declined the judge's offer to make statement before sentencing was announced, but defense attorney F.R. "Buck" Files Jr. pleaded for mercy in Taylor's behalf.

"He has been removed from office. He has lost the standing he had in the community. He has brought shame to his family. This is not a defendant who refused to admit guilt. I ask the court to consider the deterrent effect which has already been achieved," Files said.

But Steger sentenced Taylor to 20 years and fined him $25,000 on the first count, and sentenced him to a total of nine years on the other two counts, ordering the sentences to run concurrently.

Taylor went to trial June 5 on the 16-count indictment, but negotiated a plea-bargaining deal with prosecutors when the trial was in its second week, admitting to three of the accusations.

Prosecutors said they had agreed to drop the other 13 charges against Taylor 10 days after sentencing.

The combined 29-year sentence was the maximum under federal law. But since Steger allowed the smaller terms to be served simultaneously with the 20-year term it amounted to an actual sentence of only 20 years behind bars.

Taylor changed his plea to guilty after the government put more than 40 witnesses on the stand including gamblers, prostitutes and drug dealers who testified against the suspended sheriff.

One self-described prostitute, Linda Straham, testified she and her husband "had heard we could buy the sheriff there in Fannin County so we moved there."

Taylor pleaded guilty to Counts 1, 5 and 11, charging him with violation of Racketeer Influence and Organized Corruption statutes of 1970. The indictment alleged Taylor accepted bribes to protect persons illegally engaged in gambling, prostitution, drug activity and possession and sale of alcoholic beverages.

Count 5 accused him of using the telephone to facilitate the commission of a felony, and Count 11 accused him of conspiring with others to distribute marijuana.

Silence Kills

By PAUL SIMS
Managing Editor

There is a story in Buddhist writing concerning a village whose population was being destroyed by the periodic attack of a cobra.

At length, a holy man came to the village and the plight of the people was made known to him. Immediately, he sought the snake, to urge him to discontinue his destruction. The snake agreed to leave the villagers alone.

Days passed; the villagers discovered that the snake was no longer dangerous. The word went from person to person: "The cobra does not bite any more. Something has happened to the cobra. The cobra does not bite any more."

Almost overnight the attitude of everyone changed. The fear of the cobra disappeared and, in its place, there developed a daring boldness. All sorts of tricks were played on the cobra; his tail was pulled, water was thrown on him, little children threw sticks and bits of stone at him. There was no attempt to take his life by any direct means, only a great number of petty annoyances and cruelties, which, when added up, rendered the snake's existence increasingly perilous.

He was nearly dead when the holy man came back through the village. With great bitterness, the cobra implored, "I did as you commanded me; I stopped striking the villagers and now see what they have done to me. What must I do?"

The holy man said, "You did not obey me fully. It is true I told you not to bite the people, but I did not tell you not to hiss at them."

You see, dear reader, the snake's silence resulted in his near destruction in much the same way that public silence, better known as apathy, is swiftly causing this country's democracy to lose its effectiveness.

Apathy has increased because bureaucracy has increased. The public seems to believe that the government is too large to do anything about it.

People are funny creatures. They can band together to stop the seal killers in Greenland, protest strip mining in Montana, voice concern over equal rights while burning bras or scream indignation over the right to life, but we've yet to see anything turn the entire nation on.

Elected officials can keep mistresses on their payroll, they can drive big fancy cars during the energy shortage, they can spend millions of dollars on propaganda literature, they can cut the national defense budget, slap the farmer in the face, bow to demands of big labor unions and other such things—and never a unified cry is heard from John Q. Public.

The average citizen has dropped into an apathetic attitude but cries out that elected officials can commit crimes against the people who elected them.

The grass roots have withered and died and big cities and big politicians have taken over.

We fully realize that one small community in the middle of this country has little effect on the outcome of the world situation, but it seems every community, whether small or large, has taken on the attitude of "why should we, when no one else is willing?"

Upset Taxvictims

Passage of Proposition 13 in California has caught the attention of taxpayers all across the country, and the action may go down as the top news story of 1978.

Many have termed it the start of a tax revolt. If not, it should at least get the message to politicians at all levels of government that citizens have had enough. Anybody favors a tax cut, but citizens may have reached the point where they are sincere in demanding the cuts—even if it means reduced government services.

For too many years, citizens have wanted lower taxes as long as it didn't affect their favorite government programs. But this "pass-it-on" policy has got to come to an end. The galloping rate of inflation is matched by dishonest politicians who try to deceive citizens into believing that federal programs can always be paid for out of somebody else's pocket.

All parents have come to realize that the small child will keep going a little farther to see how much he can get away with. Government spenders and bureaucrats have done the same thing and their success, like the child's, is possible because of our inaction, our tolerance, our silence.

Maybe the "silent majority" has discovered that when right and wrong can be determined, silence turns out to be a vote for wrong.

Streaking was showing a lot of promise, not to mention other things, for a while there until interest abruptly cooled—possibly because the weather did.

Before that we were into cramming—record numbers of bodies forcing themselves into phone booths, Volkswagens and similar compact containers. And there are some among us who can recall all the way back to flagpole sitting and goldfish—if you'll pardon the expression—swallowing.

But that's the way we are ever ready to seize upon an activity distinguished by total pointlessness and elevate it for a time to the status of a zany mania.

It's been a little slow recently. Pet rocking never really got moving and after the initial flush from a wristful of glowing numbers, where's the thrill in digital watches?

But a phenomenon is developing in New York (the city obviously can't be all bad) that just might get us back in the maniacal groove again.

It has to do with discothe-

Richard Leshner He Fought...and Won

WASHINGTON - Bill Barlow is not a titan of industry or the head of a large special-interest group. He's just a small businessman in Pocatello, Idaho. But he had guts enough to insist that the federal government obey the Constitution in its dealings with him. On May 23, the U.S. Supreme Court said he was right.

The case arose back in 1975, when Barlow refused to allow inspectors from the Occupational Safety and Health Administration (OSHA) to enter his plumbing and heating company without a search warrant.

OSHA had long maintained that it could ignore the strictures of the Fourth Amendment where a mere business was concerned. According to one report—which OSHA disputes—the agency once even went so far as to insist on inspecting a refrigerator in a private home, because the homeowner, who ran an adjoining business, permitted his employees to keep their lunches in it.

The Court, however, ruled that a warrant is required for OSHA's inspections in all cases where the employer demands it. The Chamber took part in the case, on Barlow's side.

For two reasons, this victory is more one in principle than in practice:

First, the Court made it easier for OSHA officials to get search warrants than would be the case for the police in a criminal investigation. A criminal warrant must go into detail about the reason for the search, showing specifically that the police have "probable cause" to believe that a crime has been committed. OSHA need only show a judge or magistrate that "reasonable legislative or administrative standards for conducting...an inspection are satisfied with respect" to a particular business. In other words, the Court may have authorized rubberstamp search warrants.

Second, that phrase "where the employer demands it" could be a source of trouble. It would be comparatively easy for OSHA to harass an employer who dared to insist upon his rights.

Even so, the Barlow decision—coming right on the heels of the Bellotti case, which affirmed a corporate right to free speech—is a significant blow for freedom.

Governments, whether democratic or totalitarian, have a tendency to talk themselves into believing that they are always doing what's "in the best interest" of the governed. God help the governed if ever they lose the right to define for themselves what's in their own best interest.

We have come perilously close to losing that right in this country. In the passion of the reckless 1960s, we created a host of new federal government agencies whose mission was to banish evil and assure the triumph of righteousness. Some old ones we revitalized, to the same end.

As a result, we got a pack of bright-eyed and bushy-tailed young bureaucrats dedicated to saving us from ourselves, and to hell with the Constitution:

First Amendment rights guaranteeing freedom of speech, assembly and petition were sacrificed on the altar of campaign law reform.

Fourth Amendment rights yielded to OSHA and its brethren.

Fifth Amendment rights—"nor shall private property be taken for public use, without just compensation"—were ignored in favor of the excesses of the Environmental Protection Agency, and various "land use" schemes.

In short, we saw one after another of the precious safeguards of the Bill of Rights overturned by a government crazed by its self-righteousness.

Now the Court has sternly reminded everyone that the Constitution applies to all, whether butcher, baker or candlestick-maker.

That reminder came at an appropriate time, just a few weeks before the citizens of California sternly reminded their own politicians that the people who earn the money have some right to it, too.

THE PASSING PARADE—In early Texas, young men with a desire to travel often signed on as escorts for cattle being shipped to market by rail.

They were known officially as "drovers" and the railroads for them passes or reduced-rate tickets. They called themselves "bull-punchers" because their principal job was to ride with the cattle aboard the cars and punch the critters to their feet if they fell down.

It was a necessary job. To reduce shipping costs, ranchers often crowded too many cattle into a box car. If one fell or was knocked down by the swaying train or a sudden stop, it could be killed except for the alertness of the bull puncher.

He was equipped with a hickory pole, 12 feet long and with a sharp nail in the end. From his quarters at the end of the car, or from alongside when the train stopped, his job was to punch the downed cow to its feet.

The job appealed to young Texans because it provided expense-paid travel to such faraway places as Kansas City

Bootleg Philosopher

Editor's note: The Bootleg Philosopher on his Deaf Smith County grass farm gives some more thought this week to the tax revolt, we think.

Dear Editor: As everybody knows -- even Washington columnists have caught on -- the California tax revolt has sent shock waves across the land and plans for similar revolts are being talked up in practically every state.

But what is being overlooked is where, if property taxes are cut by about 50 percent, the money is going to come from to operate the government in the fashion we've come to expect.

Thinkers are bound to be racking their brains now to figure out a new source of tax revenue. While it may be true that that government that governs the least is the best, it's even truer that that government that does the most for the most with the most of its own money stays in office the longest.

So I have figured out a new source of revenue, heretofore un-tapped. It's simple. Charge all office-holders office rent.

Take the U.S. Senate for example. It is now putting up a new office building for 50 of its members at a cost of 120 million dollars. That's 2.4 million dollars per office.

Now if a Senator thinks he needs a 2.4-million-dollar office, let him pay enough office rent out of his $57,000 a year salary to amortize the debt, the same as private citizens would have to do.

Use the same policy for every office-holder throughout the country. Not only have them pay rent, but put individual meters in their offices so they'd have to pay their own utility bills. It must be hard for an office-holder to get very outraged at the high cost of utilities when somebody else is paying for his.

Or take the state and national capitol buildings themselves. Although none of them has been sold lately, at least if they have it was done after dark and doesn't show up on the deed records, the appraised value of them all must have doubled, tripled and quadrupled in recent years, yet we don't get a dime of taxes from any of them.

This is something to think about, but don't think about it too long. There may be something wrong with this whole idea, and I'd clear it up, except that I've run out of space, thank goodness.

Yours faithfully, J.A.

GARDENING
I am slipping into domestication at a frightening rate. Would you believe that he, who one year ago, was saying dandelions make a fine yard now has a garden? It is scary.

But I am there. I borrowed a rotor-tiller and conned my son-in-law into digging the plot. Then got on the business end of an idiot-stick and planted all kinds of goodies. Then sat back to wait for harvest.

No one told me I needed to mark where each thing was planted. All of a sudden, all sorts of strange things were growing and I did not know which was weeds and which was cucumbers. I would have pulled the weeds long ago if I had known what to pull. The corn looked like the crab-grass in its early stages. The result is, I now have a waste-high mass in the back yard. If you dig down deep enough you will find beets under the careless weeds, watermelon (I think) entwined with the bindweed and radishes fighting the crabgrass for air.

I know which is which now but is too late. The greenbeans need poles to grow on and have long ago chosen to use a nearby weed for support. If I cut the weed the poor beans will fall. Now I find out the tomatoes need shade, the johnson grass is the only shade available.

I figured out which was weed and which was vegetable by a rather ingenious method. I thought it was ingenious. It may be the oldest method in the world and no one told me.

All I did was watch which plants the insects eat. Why don't they eat weeds? Did you ever see a careless weed with holes in the leaves from some grasshopper? Maybe this is the reason man and insects are at war-both of us eat the same things. If the insects would eat weeds they would be our friends. Even mosquitoes could be tolerated if they ate dandelions. But the dumb insects each what we eat and then try to eat us. No wonder we invented D.D.T.

I have been spraying the garden three times a week. I do this work at night when no one is looking. I keep fearing I am killing off an endangered species and the federals will come and take me away. I should have no fear. The bugs in my garden were affected at first, then they grew immune to the spray. Now, some of them can't live without it. It is discouraging to spray and see those little buggers rolling in the stuff like an addict getting a fix after a long lay-off.

I have decided to give it up and apply for an emergency relief check from the government. If my place is not a disaster area, then no place is.

Warm fuzzies,
Doug

SIB Sets Hearing

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) - The State Insurance Board Friday called its annual car insurance rate hearing for July 19, with companies hoping for their first increase in two years.

"Every indication is that there should be some kind of increase," said Clint Dare of the Insurance Information Institute, an industry organization.

Dare noted speculation Gov. Dolph Briscoe will call the Legislature into special session around July 10. Two of the three board members - Chairman Hugh Yantis and Durwood Manford - would be up for Senate confirmation if the session lasted more than a few days.

"I shudder to think how this would be received with the Legislature meeting a block away and two board members up for confirmation," said Dare. "It's not the best environment to address facts."

Yantis recently has taken a pro-consumerist stance on numerous issues, including an announcement he will oppose any across-the-board increase in homeowners insurance rates.

There has been no change in auto insurance rates since October 1976.

The board increased rates 15.5 percent on Jan. 1, 1976, and then granted another 7.1 percent increase 10 months later.

At the annual hearing on auto rates in August 1977, the industry requested a 17.4 percent increase. Board statisticians said a 10.1 percent increase was in order but a consulting actuary for the board recommended only a 1.8 percent rate hike.

The board chairman at the time, Joe Christie, called off the rate hearing, saying the 1976 rates increases took care of any immediate needs of the industry. He said another hearing would not be called until there was a clearer picture of the situation. He noted that some companies were declaring dividends while others said they needed more money.

Yantis, who succeeded Christie, agreed no new hearing was needed before the normal July 1978 hearing and left rates as they were.

Abilene Recount Postponed

ABILENE, Tex. (AP) - Taylor County Commissioners voted 3-2 Friday to postpone for 30 days any recount of last weekend's election in which voters narrowly approved the local sale of alcoholic beverages.

The commissioners voted to seek a formal opinion from Attorney General John Hill as to whether a recount is legal in such an election.

Opponents of liquor sales pressed for a recount, but the legality of such action was questioned by the commissioners' legal adviser Gary Hacker. Hacker said here is no provision for a recount of local option liquor elections in the state election law because paper ballots were used and because only a candidate may request a recount.

The commissioners were first locked in a 2-2 tie over whether to delay the recount until County Judge Roy Skaggs cast his tie-breaking vote.

Voters approved the liquor option last Saturday by a vote of 11,591 to 11,460.

Disciplined Dutch, Rhythmic Argentines In Cup Finals

BUENOS AIRES, Argentina (AP) - Holland's disciplined goal-making machine pits itself against the Latin rhythm of Argentina on Sunday in a historic Argentina on Sunday in a historic final to the 1978 World Cup soccer tournament.

Neither team has ever won the championship, an event which draws hundreds of millions to their television sets around the world.

In U.S. sports terms, the World Cup combines all the excitement of the World Series and the Super Bowl rolled into one.

Although soccer still is just catching on in the United States, it is estimated that up to one billion people around the globe may be watching Sunday's final match.

It will be a traditional contest between the two strains which dominate world soccer - the virtuoso and effervescent South American style, and the well-oiled, slick passing and tackling of the European school.

No European team ever has won the World Cup in South America, and 77,000 wildly cheering spectators at River Plate Stadium never will let their opponents forget that.

Thousands are ready to pour into the streets as soon as the game ends, waving blue and white flags and chanting victory songs to paralyze Buenos Aires with celebrations, as they have done twice earlier this month.

Holland is in the final for the second straight time. The Dutch lost 2-1 to West Germany in the 1974 final at Munich.

Most of that great Dutch team still are playing - except for the legendary Johann Cruyff, who has retired.

Argentina, less polished but riding the crest of nationalistic frenzy, also fell short of a world title in 1930. It crossed the La Plata River and was beaten by neighbor Uruguay 4-2.

The orange-shirted Dutch, who have scored more goals than any other team in the World Cup, enjoy the nickname "clockwork orange."

They make a specialty of a midfield whirlpool - spinning passes among each other that have dizzied opponents, then they dart into defensive gaps to convert.

Virtually no Dutchman plays in a fixed position. Fullbacks like Ernie Brandts guard their goal with tackles so fierce that they sometimes score against themselves. But they come back with great long-range shots from as far as 40 yards to win games.

Attackers like Robbie Rensenbrink usually line up as midfielders, but combine remarkable dribbling and formidable shooting. Rensenbrink is the scoring star of the team, having tallied a total of five goals during the month-long tournament, more than any other player in the Cup.

On their way to the finals, the Dutch beat lackluster Iran 3-0, tied 0-0 with Peru and were defeated once by Scotland 3-2. But they put their goalscoring magic into gear in the second round of the Cup, giving Austria a 5-1 trouncing, tying 2-2 with defending champion West Germany, and defeating Italy, the surprise team of the Cup, 2-1.

Italy was the only team which was able to stop Argentina, winning 1-0.

The Argentines edged traditional soccer power Hungary and France by similar 2-1 scores. In the second round, they blanked Poland 2-0, drew 0-0 with three-time world champion and archrival Brazil, and crushed Peru 6-0 to storm into the finals.

The Latins have shed their image as the bad boys of international soccer under the direction of their chain-smoking coach, Luis Cesar Menotti.

A decade ago, Argentine national teams were feared as rough tacklers and often expelled from games. In the 1966 World Cup, English Manager Alf Ramsey called them "animals" after they lost a game with poor sportsmanship at Wembley Stadium.

Now, in a charge of roles, Argentina's Menotti is voicing fears that the finals might turn "into a punchup" if the Dutch players use as much body contact as they did against Italy earlier this week.

The two key marksmen to watch on the Argentine side are Mario Kempes, a 23-year-old striker who plays in Spain, and Leopoldo Luque, a lanky, longhaired hometown idol, from the River Plate club.

Both have scored four goals so far in the tournament and are the spearheads of the Argentine attack.

A key figure in the match will be the referee, Sergio Gonella, of Italy.

By awarding free shots or penalties for rough play in tense matches, referees can turn the tide of the game for teams that lose their cool. In World Cup finals, those shots frequently have made the difference.

If the game ends in a draw, both teams will play two 15-minute extra periods beyond the 90-minute game. If the score still is tied, the teams will play again on Tuesday. But World Cups usually are sudden death affairs. No World Cup final ever has ended with the two teams deadlocked.

Lopez Eight Strokes Back

By CHRIS ROBERTS
Associated Press Writer
HERSHEY, Pa. (AP) - Pat Bradley fired a 3-under-par 69 Saturday to scramble into a tie with veteran Jane Bialock after 36 holes of play in the $50,000 Lady Keystone Open at the Hershey Country Club.

Eight strokes back was rookie sensation Nancy Lopez, who was faltering in her bid to become the first professional woman golfer ever to win six straight Ladies Professional Golf Association Golf Association tournaments.

Lopez, still dogged by writers and photographers, turned in a 38-36-74 to put her 3 strokes over par after two days of play. She fired a 1-over-par 73 Friday on the 6,389-yard course.

"I'm not giving up. I have tomorrow," she said after turning in her scorecard. "I may be out of it now, but I could come close tomorrow."

"I'm not playing as well as I was a couple of weeks ago, but I'm not going to let it bother me because I know the reason - I'm tired."

Bradley, looking for her first win in 1978, and the third of her career, picked up birdies on 9, 14 and 15.

Bialock, who fired a sizzling 5-under-par 67 Friday, shot a par 34-38-72 Saturday for a two-day total of 139.

George Cumby, a star line-backer for Oklahoma, is a converted fullback.

More Room

Construction on a new addition to office space at the fieldhouse at Whiteface Field has been underway for several weeks now. The added area will be used as an office for HHS athletic director Don Cumpton and a secretary. Major remodeling is also underway inside the fieldhouse with the weight room being enlarged, and the old office area converted into a coaches' conference room. The work is being done by the HHS building trades department. [Brand photo]

Cauthen Candidly Talks With Super-Achievers

OWENSBORO, Ky. (AP) - Jockey Steve Cauthen, often a youth of few words, opened up for young questioners here in a way that would turn some sports writers green with envy.

After a day of racing at Belmont in New York, Cauthen hopped a plane for a brief appearance Friday night at a gathering of super-achievers his own age.

The 18-year-old jockey, known for his short answers to the probing questions of sports journalists, talked with the student leaders about horses, riding, his future and even girls.

Gathered for a warm summer evening picnic in a tent near the Ohio river were about 350 of the nation's most honored student orators, journalists, farmers and others.

The American Academy of Achievement's weekend "Salute of Excellence" gave them an opportunity to meet government officials, scientists, show business big-names and other notables.

At first, Cauthen was ill at ease. He mounted a special stand put behind the podium for him, and began haltingly: "All you people my age, you must be very special because you've got an awful lot of nice people setting this up for you."

He said he admired the scholarship of the group and added, "I was no great student. 'Luckily, I found something I could do, which was ride horses - and could make a living at it.'"

Cauthen's remarks trailed off. Then he kicked the special platform away, resuming his normal short stature, and began answering questions.

The students had plenty.

"What does he say to the horses? Cauthen didn't go into detail, but said, 'The only one I've been talking to lately is Affirmed.'"

"What made him persevere to become the youngest Triple Crown-winning jockey in history? 'It's hard to say what drives you. I happened to find this thing I never got bored with.'"

"What are his plans for the future?" "Hopefully, I will last for a while as a jockey. I'd consider maybe becoming a trainer...I could go to college and maybe become a vet."

"Does constant attention bother him and make him want to get away by himself?" "Yes."

"What is his next goal, having won the Triple Crown? 'I don't set any specific goals, I only set one goal, to do the best I can.'"

"How does he psych himself up for a race? 'I don't psych myself up. I psych myself down. I think clearer when I'm not psyched up.'"

"What does he think of female jockeys? 'They're nice to talk to,' he said. "And some can ride real good," he added hastily while girls in the audience utter good-natured boos...

"With his busy schedule, do he ever get to go out with girls? 'A few times,' he said.

Then one girl shouted a fin question before Cauthen made his way through the crowd to the car that would take him to his plane and back to New York at Belmont.

"What are you doing tomorrow?" she asked.

"Riding a few more horses, Cauthen replied.

Cepeda Begins Term

By ELOY O. AGUILAR
Associated Press Writer
SAN JUAN, Puerto Rico (AP) - On Monday, Orlando Cepeda will board a plane to Miami and, unescorted, will report to the Elgin Federal Prison in Florida to start serving a five-year sentence for possession of marijuana.

Four days before his departure, the handsome former Most Valuable Player in the National League, sat in the balcony of his two-story home in a San Juan suburb reading an encouraging letter from a Mrs. Maria Lewis of Murray, Utah, one of his fans.

"Just continue to be an example to all. Show everyone that you can rise above it," the letter said.

"I don't believe in defeat," the husky Cepeda said softly. At 40 Cepeda keeps in "playing shape," looking like a much younger man, and describes himself as a "health food nut."

"I was once at the top," he said. "Now I must go to a prison. This is an experience that is going to help me in the future. I have prepared myself mentally for this. The worst is over. I feel as if a heavy burden had been lifted from my shoulders."

As he spoke, his mother, Carmen Cepeda, sat nearby playing with her grandchild, Ali Manuel, 18 months, Cepeda's youngest child.

"My family feels much better now," Cepeda added. His wife, Nydia, sat next to him agreeing: "We thought it was going to be much worse," she said.

Cepeda, who for 17 years was a baseball star playing for the San Francisco Giants, St. Louis Cardinals, Atlanta Braves, Oakland A's and Boston Red Sox, got in trouble with the law on Dec. 12, 1975, when he was arrested at the San Juan International Airport and charged with possession of 100 pounds of marijuana.

The former slugger was convicted in November 1976 and earlier this month a federal judge refused to grant probation and ordered him to serve his time. He will be eligible for parole after 30 months.

The sentence was criticized as being too harsh and Cepeda's friends pointed out the former major leaguer had led a law-abiding life since his arrest, working with troubled youths and managing an amateur baseball team.

But Cepeda himself is not bitter about what happened to him.

"I believed in God," he said. "I don't want to talk about the case. A man makes mistakes; I always wanted to help everybody. But I am not bitter. The worst part was at the beginning. The press was on top of me. But my friends were always with me."

With some humor, Cepeda said he looked at his time in as if it were "spring training in the minor leagues."

"I am not a rebel," he stated.

The orange-shirted Dutch, who have scored more goals than any other team in the World Cup, enjoy the nickname "clockwork orange."

They make a specialty of a midfield whirlpool - spinning passes among each other that have dizzied opponents, then they dart into defensive gaps to convert. Virtually no Dutchman plays in a fixed position. Fullbacks like Ernie Brandts guard their goal with tackles so fierce that they sometimes score against themselves. But they come back with great long-range shots from as far as 40 yards to win games.

Attackers like Robbie Rensenbrink usually line up as midfielders, but combine remarkable dribbling and formidable shooting. Rensenbrink is the scoring star of the team, having tallied a total of five goals during the month-long tournament, more than any other player in the Cup.

On their way to the finals, the Dutch beat lackluster Iran 3-0, tied 0-0 with Peru and were defeated once by Scotland 3-2. But they put their goalscoring magic into gear in the second round of the Cup, giving Austria a 5-1 trouncing, tying 2-2 with defending champion West Germany, and defeating Italy, the surprise team of the Cup, 2-1.

Italy was the only team which was able to stop Argentina, winning 1-0.

The Argentines edged traditional soccer power Hungary and France by similar 2-1 scores. In the second round, they blanked Poland 2-0, drew 0-0 with three-time world champion and archrival Brazil, and crushed Peru 6-0 to storm into the finals.

The Latins have shed their image as the bad boys of international soccer under the direction of their chain-smoking coach, Luis Cesar Menotti. A decade ago, Argentine national teams were feared as rough tacklers and often expelled from games. In the 1966 World Cup, English Manager Alf Ramsey called them "animals" after they lost a game with poor sportsmanship at Wembley Stadium.

Now, in a charge of roles, Argentina's Menotti is voicing fears that the finals might turn "into a punchup" if the Dutch players use as much body contact as they did against Italy earlier this week.

The two key marksmen to watch on the Argentine side are Mario Kempes, a 23-year-old striker who plays in Spain, and Leopoldo Luque, a lanky, longhaired hometown idol, from the River Plate club.

Both have scored four goals so far in the tournament and are the spearheads of the Argentine attack.

A key figure in the match will be the referee, Sergio Gonella, of Italy.

By awarding free shots or penalties for rough play in tense matches, referees can turn the tide of the game for teams that lose their cool. In World Cup finals, those shots frequently have made the difference.

If the game ends in a draw, both teams will play two 15-minute extra periods beyond the 90-minute game. If the score still is tied, the teams will play again on Tuesday. But World Cups usually are sudden death affairs. No World Cup final ever has ended with the two teams deadlocked.

Lopez Eight Strokes Back

By CHRIS ROBERTS
Associated Press Writer
HERSHEY, Pa. (AP) - Pat Bradley fired a 3-under-par 69 Saturday to scramble into a tie with veteran Jane Blalock after 36 holes of play in the $50,000 Lady Keystone Open at the Hershey Country Club.

Eight strokes back was rookie sensation Nancy Lopez, who was faltering in her bid to become the first professional woman golfer ever to win six straight Ladies Professional Golf Association Golf Association tournaments.

Lopez, still dogged by writers and photographers, turned in a 38-36-74 to put her 3 strokes over par after two days of play. She fired a 1-over-par 73 Friday on the 6,389-yard course.

"I'm not giving up. I have tomorrow," she said after turning in her scorecard. "I may be out of it now, but I could come close tomorrow."

"I'm not playing as well as I was a couple of weeks ago, but I'm not going to let it bother me because I know the reason - I'm tired."

Bradley, looking for her first win in 1978, and the third of her career, picked up birdies on 9, 14 and 15.

Blalock, who fired a sizzling 5-under-par 67 Friday, shot a par 34-38-72 Saturday for a two-day total of 139.

Cauthen Candidly Talks With Super-Achievers

OWENSBORO, Ky. (AP) - Jockey Steve Cauthen, often a youth of few words, opened up for young questioners here in a way that would turn some sports writers green with envy.

After a day of racing at Belmont in New York, Cauthen hopped a plane for a brief appearance Friday night at a gathering of super-achievers his own age.

The 18-year-old jockey, known for his short answers to the probing questions of sports journalists, talked with the student leaders about horses, riding, his future and even girls.

Gathered for a warm summer evening picnic in a tent near the Ohio river were about 350 of the nation's most honored student orators, journalists, farmers and others.

The American Academy of Achievement's weekend "Salute of Excellence" gave them an opportunity to meet government officials, scientists, show business big-names and other notables.

At first, Cauthen was ill at ease. He mounted a special stand put behind the podium for him, and began haltingly: "All you people my age, you must be very special because you've got an awful lot of nice people setting this up for you."

He said he admired the scholarship of the group and added, "I was no great student."

"Luckily, I found something I could do, which was ride horses - and could make a living at it," he said.

Cauthen's remarks trailed off. Then he kicked the special platform away, resuming his normal short stature, and began answering questions.

The students had plenty. "What does he say to the horses? Cauthen didn't go into detail, but said, 'The only one I've been talking to lately is Affirmed.'"

"What made him persevere to become the youngest Triple Crown-winning jockey in history? 'It's hard to say what drives you. I happened to find this thing I never got bored with.'"

"What are his plans for the future?" "Hopefully, I will last for a while as a jockey. I'd consider maybe becoming a trainer...I could go to college and maybe become a vet."

"Does constant attention bother him and make him want to get away by himself? 'Yes.'"

"What is his next goal, having won the Triple Crown? 'I don't set any specific goals, I only set one goal, to do the best I can.'"

"How does he psych himself up for a race? 'I psych myself down. I think clearer when I'm not psyched up.'"

"What does he think of female jockeys? 'They're nice to talk to," he said.

"And some can ride real good," he added hastily when girls in the audience uttered good-natured boos.

"With his busy schedule, do he ever get to go out with girls? 'A few times,' he said.

Then one girl shouted a fin question before Cauthen made his way through the crowd to the car that would take him to his plane and back to New York at Belmont.

"What are you doing tomorrow?" she asked. "Riding a few more horses, Cauthen replied.

Cepeda Begins Term

By ELOY O. AGUILAR
Associated Press Writer
SAN JUAN, Puerto Rico (AP) - On Monday, Orlando Cepeda will board a plane to Miami and, unescorted, will report to the Elgin Federal Prison in Florida to start serving a five-year sentence for possession of marijuana.

Four days before his departure, the handsome former Most Valuable Player in the National League, sat in the balcony of his two-story home in a San Juan suburb reading an encouraging letter from a Mrs. Maria Lewis of Murray, Utah, one of his fans.

"Just continue to be an example to all. Show everyone that you can rise above it," the letter said.

"I don't believe in defeat," the husky Cepeda said softly. At 40 Cepeda keeps in "playing shape," looking like a much younger man, and describes himself as a "health food nut."

"I was once at the top," he said. "Now I must go to a prison. This is an experience that is going to help me in the future. I have prepared myself mentally for this. The worst is over. I feel as if a heavy burden had been lifted from my shoulders."

As he spoke, his mother, Carmen Cepeda, sat nearby playing with her grandchild, Ali Manuel, 18 months, Cepeda's youngest child.

"My family feels much better now," Cepeda added.

His wife, Nydia, sat next to him agreeing: "We thought it was going to be much worse," she said.

Cepeda, who for 17 years was a baseball star playing for the San Francisco Giants, St. Louis Cardinals, Atlanta Braves, Oakland A's and Boston Red Sox, got in trouble with the law on Dec. 12, 1975, when he was arrested at the San Juan International Airport and charged with possession of 100 pounds of marijuana.

The former slugger was convicted in November 1976 and earlier this month a federal judge refused to grant probation and ordered him to serve his time. He will be eligible for parole after 30 months.

The sentence was criticized as being too harsh and Cepeda's friends pointed out the former major leaguer had led a law-abiding life since his arrest, working with troubled youths and managing an amateur baseball team.

But Cepeda himself is not bitter about what happened to him.

"I believed in God," he said. "I don't want to talk about the case. A man makes mistakes; I always wanted to help everybody. But I am not bitter. The worst part was at the beginning. The press was on top of me. But my friends were always with me."

With some humor, Cepeda said he looked at his time in as if it were "spring training in the minor leagues."

"I am not a rebel," he stated.

Amazing Hiller Gets His 'Day'

DETROIT (AP) — John Hiller figured he'd last about five years in major league baseball and drop out after his salary peaked at perhaps $30,000 a year.

Sunday at Tiger Stadium the 35-year-old ace relief pitcher, whose salary is in the $100,000 range, will have a recognition day in honor of his 10 years in the majors — all with Detroit.

Hiller, who likely will be remembered by baseball historians for his courageous and successful comeback after a heart attack, never thought things would work out so well.

"I think my wife and I used to talk about five years," he said.

when asked how long he thought he'd be pitching in the big leagues. "The minimum salary then was $7,000. We talked about maybe getting up to $30,000. It shows how things have changed."

Little did the Tigers, or Hiller, realize during his rookie year in 1967 that the slender Canadian left-hander would command such a large salary and a status as one of the game's top relief specialists.

He sat out all of 1971 and half of 1972 because of the heart attack. He had a coronary bypass operation and started his comeback in 1972.

In 1973 he set major league records with 38 saves and 48 Firemen Trophy points. He had 10 victories, and a club record with 60 games finished. His ERA was an incredible 1.44.

That established him as a bullpen ace and he has been outstanding most of the time since.

On the free agent market Hiller could have made a mint. However, "I'm satisfied," he said following one of this weekend's games against New York.

"If I wasn't I probably would have made some noise along the way. Considering the years I've had, maybe I'm not making as much as some...but I'm making much more money than I ever thought I'd make in this game."

Tiger manager Ralph Houk calls Hiller "one of the best short relief men I have ever managed. I've had Sparky Lyle and Luis Arroyo and I'd rate John right up there. On top of it, he's a great guy."

Hiller's 6-3 record and seven saves are best on the staff and he has a 2.45 ERA.

Mantle Stable

DALLAS (AP) — Former New York Yankee slugger Mickey Mantle was in stable condition at Brookhaven Medical Center Saturday where he was being treated for a bleeding ulcer.

A hospital spokeswoman said Mantle was "doing fine."

Mantle was hospitalized Wednesday after he became ill at a Dallas golf club. A doctor friend ordered him hospitalized and he spent some time in an intensive care unit.

Mantle said he hoped to be released from the hospital Monday.

"I've had a bellyache before but nothing like this," Mantle said. "I don't guess I've ever had anything this serious. I've been doing a lot of traveling. It seems like wherever I go, there's always a cocktail party. Maybe I was drinking a little too much."

Mantle is a vice president of a Dallas-based insurance company.

"The concern people are showing is just tremendous," Mantle said. "My wife and I were just sitting here talking about that. I've seen my name on television, and the story has been on the front page. It's really nice to have people remember you. I haven't played in 10 years. This is all very flattering."

Mantle is recuperating in a private room.

Legion Limelight

The sound of a baseball cracking off a bat or a ball slapping the leather of a fielder's glove probably has a musical ring to 18-year-old Aaron Cabrera, son of Mrs. Isabel Cabrera of 607 E. Third.

You see, Cabrera, a member of the Hereford American Legion Redbirds baseball team, plans to major in music when he travels to college after being graduated from Hereford High School next spring.

The right-hander has what legion coach Joe Don Cummings called "a lot of desire" when he hits the field for the local team. "And, what he lacks in experience he makes up for with a full cup of hustle," Cummings added.

Cabrera, who has played baseball at HHS, lists as his ambition "to be a baseball coach."

Dodgers Edge Cincy, 4-3

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The Los Angeles Dodgers broke a tie with two runs in the sixth inning, one on a bases-loaded walk, to Jerry Grote and the other on a grounder by Dave Lopes, and held on for a 4-3 victory over the Cincinnati Reds Saturday in a nationally televised game.

Don Sutton, 7-6, with relief help from Charlie Hough and Bob Welch, earned the victory, the 11th in the last 14 games for Los Angeles. The loss was only the third in the last 10 games for the Reds, but it dropped them three games behind front-running San Francisco in the National League West. The third-place Dodgers are 5½ games back.

Cesar Geronimo and George Foster homered for the Reds.

Geronimo hit his fifth homer of the season leading off the second, but Los Angeles tied the score in the bottom of the inning on doubles by Ron Cey and Bill North. The Dodgers got an unearned run in the fourth when Sutton singled home Steve Yeager. Cincinnati tied it 2-2 in the fifth when Pete Rose, who had four hits, singled, stole second and scored on a hit by Dave Concepcion.

The Dodgers loaded the bases with none out in the sixth on singles by Dusty Baker and Lee Lacy and a walk to North. Grote then walked, forcing home Baker, and Lacy scored when Lopes grounded out.

Foster hit his 16th homer with one out in the eighth.

Japanese Stars Down U.S., 7-3

By DON SAWATO
AP Sports Writer
TOKYO (AP) — Seisuke Toyoda and Hidetake Horiba each went 3-for-4 and drove in two runs apiece Saturday, leading Japan to a 7-3 victory over the United States in the opening game of the seventh annual U.S.-Japan collegiate baseball "World Series."

It was the second time the American collegian all-stars dropped the series opener to their Japanese counterparts since the first series was held in Japan in 1972.

Prince Hiro, the eldest son of Crown Prince Akihito, threw out the ceremonial first ball at Tokyo's Meiji Jingu ballpark before 12,000 spectators.

The U.S. took a 1-0 lead in the third inning on consecutive singles by Pat Proulx of La Verne University and Marty Barrett of Mesa Community College and a sacrifice fly by Larry Reynolds of Stanford.

The Japanese went ahead with three runs in the bottom of the fourth inning on four consecutive singles off Bill Bordley of Southern California and a squeeze bunt.

The Americans cut the lead to 3-2 in the fifth on a solo homer by Barrett, but Japan added three runs in the bottom of the inning off relief pitcher Billy Blum of Houston on three singles and a double.

The Americans got their final run in the seventh on a ranscoring pinch double by Bob Skube of Southern Cal.

Giants Nip Braves, 2-1

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Roger Metzger's two-run double with two out in the sixth inning lifted the San Francisco Giants and Jim Barr to a 2-1 victory over the Atlanta Braves Saturday.

The triumph was the 12th in the past 15 games for the Giants, leaders of the National League West.

Barr, 3-4 blanked the Braves for five innings before Atlanta broke a scoreless tie with a run in the sixth. Barr, winning his first game since May 3, scattered nine hits.

Rookie Bob Horner opened the Atlanta sixth with a double, reached third on Gary Matthews' single and scored on Roland Office's single.

The Giants bounced back with their two runs in the bottom of the inning off loser Phil Niekro.

Nicklaus had a 72 and was at 217. Masters champ Gary Player shot 73-218. Arnold Palmer had six birdies in an erratic round of 73 and was at 219. U.S. Open champ Andy Keoub and her teammates failed in an extra-inning bid to beat the Braves, who took a 10-18 win and claimed the league championship. The two teams were making up an earlier game, which had been stopped due to the time limit with the score tied at 13-13. (Brand photo).

Lietzke's Eagle Gives Him Lead

OAKVILLE, Ont. (AP) — Bruce Lietzke's pitch-in for an eagle 3 on the final hole finished off a 67 and gave him a 2-stroke lead Saturday in the third round of the $250,000 Canadian Open Golf Championship.

Lietzke, who started the warm, sunny day 3 shots off the pace, finished 54 holes with a 210 total, 3 under par on the difficult, 7,050-yard Glen Abbey Golf Club course.

"That's a very good way to end the round," Lietzke said of his 45-yard shot with a sand wedge that found the cup on the 18th hole. "It makes up for a couple of shots I threw away."

Lietzke, winner of two tournaments last year but in a slump most of this season, was trailed by John Schroeder, skinny Jeff Hewes and rookie Pat McGowan at 212, the only other men under par after three trips over this course Jack Nicklaus designed as a permanent home for the Canadian National Championship.

McGowan also bagged the final hole for a 72. Hewes, who shared the second round lead with McGowan, also shot 72. Schroeder, who held a 3-shot lead at the turn, played his back nine in 39 and finished with a par 71.

Australian Bob Shearer, with a 71, and Ben Crenshaw were 3 shots back at par 213. Crenshaw birdied three holes in a row at one stretch and also birdied the par 5 18th hole, where he made that horrendous "9" in Friday's round.

Defending champion Lee Trevino had a solid 69 and was tied with Mike Sullivan at 214. Sullivan shot a 68.

"I'm good position," Trevino said. "I wish I could have got it in at 67 or 68, but I'm in good position. Four shots back isn't too much on this kind of a golf course. You're not gonna see anybody moving much. I mean it's not the kind of course that a guy can shoot real low numbers, and he can shoot pretty high, so at one over par I've still got a good chance."

Nicklaus had a 72 and was at 217. Masters champ Gary Player shot 73-218. Arnold Palmer had six birdies in an erratic round of 73 and was at 219. U.S. Open champ Andy North shot 72-221.

Lietzke's cross-handed putting was the key to his round. He had nine one-putts, one no-putt and holed five times from the 10-15 foot range.

Bruce, whose best finish this year has been a runner-up position at Tallahassee, one-putted 6 times on the front side and made the turn 2 under par with a 15-foot birdie putt on the fourth and a six-footer on the next hole.

He had to scramble on the 10th and 11th, scored from 15 feet on the 12th, then reached the par 5 13th in 2 and promptly 3-putted for par.

With the other leaders backing up, Lietzke held the lead alone until he bogeyed the 16th hole.

He got his second shot over the green on a mound and "from where I was I was very happy to make 5. It could have been a double bogey very easily," he said.

He pitched across the green to the front fringe, chipped back and made a two-footer for bogey. That dropped him back into a tie for the lead.

The dramatic closing eagle put him back on top alone.

Suit Wants UIL Ouster

HOUSTON (AP) - A Madison High School basketball player is asking a federal court to grant an injunction against the University Interscholastic League which says he will lose his eligibility if he attends a summer training camp.

A suit filed Thursday by Robert Kite, father of 6-foot-11 Greg Kite, seeks to have the UIL disbanded because it unconstitutionally deprives the youth, considered top basketball material, of the legitimate opportunity to better himself professionally. The suit also claims, the UIL practice discriminates against basketball and football players.

A companion suit is expected to be filed Monday on behalf of National Basketball Association stars Rudy Tomjanovich of the Houston Rockets and Dave Cowens of the Boston Celtics. The players, who plan summer clinics in Texas, will allege restraint of trade because UIL rules prohibit varsity basketball and football players from attending training camps. The suit claims there is no restriction against such training for junior varsity or B-team players or participants in baseball, tennis, and golf.

It is the second time this year a high school athlete has sought court action against UIL restrictions. U.S. District Judge Woodrow Seals granted Wheatley High School senior Linda Williams the right to play on the school's previously all-male baseball team. UIL rules do not permit co-educational athletic teams. UIL Athletic Director Bill Farney said the philosophy of the league "is the total education program in interscholastic competition on some kind of equity basis."

"From that standpoint the rules are necessary," he said. "From an individual liberty standpoint, it doesn't make sense."

I don't think you could consider Paolo Marra a prophet, but the local McDonald's Restaurant manager and coach of the Hereford Twisters soccer team, saw one of his dreams come true last week.

Marra, a native of Naples, Italy, had predicted that a soccer league would be formed in the Panhandle "within one or two years" when this reporter interviewed him, for a column which ran in the April 23 edition of The Brand.

As it turned out, the personable, quiet Italian's prediction was just two days shy of two months in becoming a reality. Members of nine area soccer clubs or teams met in Hereford last Wednesday night to form the "Northwest Soccer League."

Hereford's Twisters are a charter member of the league, which also includes four Amarillo teams, two Clovis clubs, and one each from Dumas and Friona.

In that April 23 story Marra contended that the main stumbling block to the acceptance of soccer in the United States was the unfamiliarity of the sport with many Americans, who have focused on football, basketball, and baseball.

With the beginning of the Northwest Soccer League Panhandle area residents, and we in the league cities in particular, will get the chance to become more familiar with the sport as it is presented on a regular basis. "If you don't know the rules it's just someone kicking the ball around," Marra had said. "You don't know what they're doing!"

Marra also had hopes that soccer will get a beginning in the local school system or in the Kids, Incorporated organization soon. That dream may also soon be coming true if local officials take the hint from the Lubbock School System, which authorized the beginning of soccer play in that city's high schools Friday.

The Lubbock school trustees approved the implementation of soccer for the city's five high schools for both boys and girls. "There is no question about soccer and its interest," Lubbock Athletic Director Pete Ragus was quoted as saying to the trustees. "It is probably the fastest-growing team sport in America today."

The board agreed to provide funds for coaches, equipment, and any other expenses at any high school which has enough student interest to support a team. As it stands now, Ragus reported that only the 4A schools, Monterey, Lubbock High, and Coronado "have sufficient interest to begin a soccer program." He added that he hoped to instill interest in soccer at Dunbar and Estacado High Schools also.

The Lubbock soccer program would allow for intricate competition at the onset with season to last from November through January. Although soccer is not UIL-sanctioned as of yet, the Hub City schools would have a big head start on other schools should the sport become a designated UIL activity.

The only thing that bothers me about the Lubbock plan is the time of the year for the season. Weather in the Lubbock area may be temperate enough for soccer play in the winter months, but I can't see teams on the North Plains attempting to play a schedule during that time.

A spring or possibly early fall season would be more sensible for our area. The spring months would be ideal in our opinion. Soccer, which requires tremendous amounts of sustained activity including running and precision footwork, would be perfect for off-season training for football players.

Those who do not participate in baseball, golf, or track, could maintain their physical condition by playing soccer. And, when spring training rolled around, the players would be in much better shape than they would be if they had lloled around in an off-season program.

In addition to implementing a high school soccer program, some 4,000 Lubbock youths participate in organized soccer play to date. The Deaf Smith County Kids, Incorporated organization has unofficially expressed interest in soccer play. And, they certainly have the facility to begin a program with ample space at the new baseball and softball complex site to put in several soccer fields.

As Paolo Marra said two months ago... "We need to start the players young and let them improve with age like a good wine. After all, it doesn't take much to start a program. All you need is a ball and a lot of enthusiastic players."

Borg Begins Quest Of Third Wimbledon

By WINSOR DOBBIN
AP Sports Writer

LONDON (AP) - Not since the great Fred Perry did it in 1936 has any man managed to win three consecutive singles tennis titles at Wimbledon. On Monday, Bjorn Borg of Sweden starts the long road toward what he hopes will be his third straight.

Many of the greats have tried and failed, Rod Laver, John Newcombe, Roy Emerson and Lew Hoad all won it twice but faltered. There is nothing to suggest it will be any easier for the flying Swede.

Wimbledon, despite the introduction of a plethora of other titles, remains the big one, the world's leading lawn tennis tournament. It is an institution. And for that reason, every top player in the world wants to win a Wimbledon title.

But it is an ambition only few manage to fulfill. Borg's greatest challenger will almost certainly be the No. 2 seed, enigmatic American Jimmy Connors. He has hit his peak at just the right time. Last week Connors won the John Player tournament in emphatic style, dropping just six games in a five-set final against Mexico's Raul Ramirez, seeded No. 7 at Wimbledon.

"I'm playing better and better," Connors said afterward. "I'm not afraid of anyone the way things are going."

Last year he was beaten in the final at Wimbledon - by Borg. The value of Wimbledon seeding is that players like Borg and Connors are supposedly protected from their more dangerous rivals until the later stages. But while Connors has what looks like an easy first-round match against New Zealander Russell Simpson, Borg might well have hoped for an easy opponent initially than 6-foot-7 American Victor Amaya.

Big-serving players like Amaya are always a danger at Wimbledon - but Borg hasn't lost a match here since 1975 when he fell in the quarter-finals to eventual champion Arthur Ashe.

The major challengers to Borg and Connors, the 1974 champion, are mainly Americans.

Vitas Gerulaitis, only 23, is seeded third. Fifth seed Brian Gottfried, who defeated Borg once last year, and Roscoe Tanner, seeded sixth, cannot be overlooked. Tanner was a semifinalist in 1975 and 1976 before going out to Britain's John Lloyd last year in the first round. His powerful game is well-suited to Wimbledon.

It would be foolish, too, to write off such men as fourth-seeded Argentinian Guillermo Vilas, Ilic Nastase, Sandy Mayer, and even the out-of-form Ramirez.

Wimbledon has a habit of bringing out the best in players. It would be no surprise to see a giant-killer emerge from the unknowns.

In the women's singles, however, that is less likely. The women's game is ruled for the most part by Chris Evert, Evonne Goolagong, Martina Navratilova and defending champion Virginia Wade.

There is always a chance that a youngster, perhaps South African Marise Kruger, might surprise everyone. But if the winner is not to come from the top four seeds it might well be the veteran American Billie Jean King, looking a record 20th Wimbledon title.

Schaefer Field Hard to Fill

MOUNT POCONO, Pa. (AP) - Even with nearly $400,000 in prize money at stake, organizers had to invite cars in to fill the field for Monday's eighth annual Schaefer 500.

The 11th row in the 33-car field is comprised of Bill Vukovich, Phil Treshie and Lee Kunsman, all invited starters because not enough able cars were on hand to fill the field through qualifying Thursday and Friday.

Twenty-six cars qualified during the opening day of time trials, and four successfully completed runs Friday. Officials extended qualifying for an extra 30 minutes to give any of the four cars still sputtering around in various states of disrepair a chance to get their acts together. But none answered the bell.

So Dr. Joseph Mattioli, president of Pocono International Raceway, opted for a drawing to fill the remaining spots. None of the invitees is expected to be a factor in the race.

Heading the list of competitors are pole position starter Danny Ongais, whose qualifying speed of 190.335 mph was the fastest speed recorded at the track in six years, defending champion Tom Sneva, and Indianapolis 500 winner Al Unser.

Other contenders are two-time winner A.J. Foyt, Johnny Rutherford, Gordon Johncock, Mario Andretti, Bobby Unser, Pancho Carter, Johnny Parsons, Wally Dallenbach and Steve Krisloff.

Nearly $100,000 goes to the winner of this, the second of the U.S. Auto Club Triple Crown events.

In 1921, the Detroit Tiger outfield of Ty Cobb, Harry Heilmann and Bobby Veach each batted over .300 and each drove in more than 100 runs.

Shown in this photo taken last summer, Otis Lee stands on the steps of the decrepit house shortly after it had been moved to its new location. Lee mentioned the appearance of the house and said "In a few months, you won't even recognize it!" He was right.

After all of the "sweat and tears" of remodeling, the Lees were pleased with the resulting appearance of their "dream house." It is shown above in its present state at Yucca Hills, located north of Hereford on Highway 385. Lee, a 'handyman' rewired the entire home and restored the plumbing system. He did have professional assistance in adding on the west wing [right] which includes the garage and utility room.

Dream House Becomes Reality

By DIANNE BANNER
Brand Staff Writer

Otis and Costaline Lee first saw the house seven years ago. It was at that time approximately 60 years old, abandoned and scarred with age, its rambling visage a landmark north of the city on Highway 385.

Although the vintage house was sadly deteriorated, Mr. and Mrs. Lee envisioned it as their dream house. That dream is now a reality for the couple who have completely remodeled the house and moved it to Yucca Hills, six miles north of Hereford.

In order to complete the 13-room house, an east wing was added to the original structure and a garage and utility room were annexed by professional builders. Lee lowered the ceilings himself, as well as completing all of the electrical and plumbing work that needed to be modernized and re-wired.

"I guess I am not what you'd call a professional, I'm just a handyman," he said.

Lee retired from work with the Texas Highway Department so that he could devote full time to the remodeling project. He and his wife began their architectural face-lift eleven months ago and moved into the home Feb. 4 during a raging snowstorm.

The home consists of four bedrooms, four baths, a living room, dining room, den, sunroom, kitchen and utility room. Decorating the spacious two-story home was a family project.

"I let my granddaughters help me in choosing wallpaper and curtains. Each of them did their own room," she said.

Close friends of the couple assisted in redecorating and wallpapering. "If it weren't for our friends, it would have taken me a long time to finish. Otis told me that re-doing the house was his job, mine was to fill it and decorate it," Mrs. Lee commented.

The saying, "A man's home is his castle," holds true for the Lee couple. They commented that their home "May not be special to anyone else, but after six months of sweat and tears, it is important and special to us. Everything fell in place so nicely," they said.

Upon entering the comfortable home, this Brand staff writer could feel a relaxed and contented atmosphere throughout the entire house.

In the brightly-papered entrance hall hang two handpainted plaques of beveled glass, taken from the original door of the old house. Since the Lees wanted to keep the plates of glass, a friend, Margaret Young, suggested that Mrs. Lee allow her to paint them as ornaments for the hallway.

The den is furnished in deep shades of brown and has a two-level ceiling to accommodate the special light fixture and fire place selected by Mrs. Lee.

"I told her I didn't want to be bumping my head on that fixture so, I just lowered part of the ceiling and left the original height in the center of the room," Lee explained.

Over the fireplace mantel is an oil painting given to the Lees as a gift from Jenna Simons. Also in the big room is a large pillow made by his sister, Mrs. Walter Kennedy of Waco. The pillow is stuffed with feathers from his grandmother's feather bed.

The dining room is appointed with a china hutch, bought especially for the house. In it is an oriental ginger jar which Barbara Allen made and gave to Mrs. Lee for the house. A picture of a bluebonnet field, painted for the couple by Mary Allred, hangs in the room also.

The master bedroom, situated in the east section of the home, has two separate baths adjoining.

The Oriental living room features the second color television set to have been purchased in Hereford. It is in working condition.

Also, downstairs is a comfortable guest room.

The upstairs of the home is made up of a sewing room, a bathroom with the original sink and bathtub, and a bedroom. At the end of the stairway hall is a small sitting room.

"A lot of times, it is a good place to sit and just look at the view of the country," Mrs. Lee said.

She sewed all of the drapery throughout the house, and her grandchildren were responsible for the decor of the second level in the home. Their grandchildren's parents are Mr. and Mrs. G.C. Merritt.

Standing in the entrance hall of her newly-renovated home, Mrs. Lee explained that "the staircase of the old house was left in its original structure." Hanging on the wall are the beveled glass plaques that the couple found in the door of the house. A friend handpainted a springtime butterfly theme on the two pieces.

Sitting on the rim of the bathtub which came with the house, Mrs. Lee poses in one of the four bathrooms in her home. She said that the sink was found in the attic of the house and she "couldn't bare to throw it away. So it was put to use."

Mrs. Lee hands her husband a cold glass of water while he relaxes in a reclining chair in the den. "We spend most of our spare time in here [the den] because it feels so comfortable to us. It may not be fancy, but we like it," he commented.

Mrs. Lee holds one of her favorite Oriental pieces while she stands beside the second color television set to have been purchased in Hereford. The living room is completely decorated in an Oriental scheme.

Mrs. Lee holds an Oriental ginger jar, handmade by a friend especially to fit the Far East decor of the couple's new home. The hutch stands in the dining room. Directly behind Mrs. Lee is an Oriental room divider, separating the dining and living rooms. The Lees found the black dividers in Tennessee.

Today, The Brand presents its first "Treasure Trove of Recipes" for the benefit of our readers. We were pleasantly surprised by the overwhelming response we received from local residents who contributed more than 200 recipes for the "Treasure Trove." We think that you will find the recipe tabloid to be filled with a large variety of scrumptious dishes.

Unfortunately, this writer has to read instructions before feeding the cat, but we know that the "Treasure Trove" will be a delightful addition to the kitchens of gourmet chefs, as well as the most amateur cook.

S&S
Generally, this column writer meanders around lighter subjects, but we are going to stay in "the straight and narrow" for a few paragraphs. We recently visited a new shopping center, still under construction, in a neighboring city and would have been impressed with the large complex had it not been for countless architectural barriers that will keep the handicapped and aged from enjoying it.

The numerous boutiques and shops are linked by a rough wooden walkway, interrupted at frequent intervals by stairs. Ramps are inconveniently located and one large sector of the stores is completely inaccessible to wheelchairs. There is no central area allowing entry to several stores, so elderly shoppers will be forced to walk long distances in order to reach a particular business. Also, the complex is riddled with tunnel-like walkways, which when blasted by West Texas winds, will make the going difficult even for healthy persons.

Although Hereford's public areas are for the most part accessible to all members of the community, some sites remain "off limits" to the aged and infirm due to structural barriers. Most of these barriers could be rectified with gently-sloping ramps, hand-rails and easy-to-open doors.

It's hard to imagine the disappointment that results when a handicapped person enters a public place and discovers that there are no elevators to the upper floors. Too many times, we've had to wait in lobbies while the stronger members of the group ventured onward and upward.

Another barrier, which seems doubly unnecessary, is the door which is so heavy or has such a strong spring-action that it cannot be opened by children, the elderly or the handicapped. It is an unpleasant feeling to be trapped in a public restroom when there is no one around to hold the door. It is also an unpleasant feeling when that 20 pound door falls against your hands while trying to propel your wheelchair out of its reach.

There are many things in this world that cannot be changed and the infirmities of man fall in that category. But blueprints of new buildings can be altered and concrete can be poured to revamp standing buildings. We've often wished that the designers of certain buildings take the time to travel throughout their construction sites seated in a wheelchair.

Now, we shall alight from our soapbox, which alas has no ramp either.

King's Manor Chaplain To Be Introduced Today

The Rev. Wallace Kirby, who has accepted the position of chaplain at King's Manor Methodist Home, and his wife will be introduced to the community during a welcoming reception from 3-4 p.m. today. All local residents are invited to attend the reception, to be held in the Manor's Lamar Memorial Garden Room.

Hosting the reception will be members of the King's Manor staff. Rev. Kirby is replacing the Rev. Dewitt Sego, who resigned recently to accept the pastorate of a church at Lockney.

Rev. and Mrs. Kirby will be attending today's reception with their daughter, Jan, who is a recent graduate of Perryton High School and will be enrolling this fall at McMurry College at Abilene.

Rev. and Mrs. Kirby lived at Perryton for the past three years while he served as minister of that city's First United Methodist Church. Before that, they lived at Snyder, where he was pastor of the Methodist congregation for five years. Rev. Kirby has also been the clergyman of churches at Littlefield and Friona.

He earned his bachelor's degree from McMurry College and his Divinity degree from Perkins School of Theology, which is a branch of Southern Methodist University at Dallas. He is a native of Colorado City.

Mrs. Kirby, the former Evelyn Vineyard, is the sister of Mrs. Clifford Trotter, also the wife of a Methodist minister.

Reunion Draws Crowd

Approximately 250 attended Walcott School's recent open house and picnic luncheon, held in observance of the school's 50th anniversary.

A brief program was presented by Adaire Brock, who gave a history of the community school. She proposed that the reunion become a tradition, at least every five years.

Gifts were awarded to the oldest alumnus present, Waldron Melton, and to the ex-student having the youngest child, won by James Tice, accompanied by his four-week-old daughter, Jennifer. Denise Melton Brannan of San Antonio was cited for having traveled the farthest distance in order to attend.

Donations were given to defray reunion expenses. Extra funds collected will be spent to restore the historian's scrapbooks.

Workshop Offered To Public

The public is invited to attend a Craft Workshop from 9 a.m. to 12 noon Wednesday, June 28 at the Community Center.

Home Garden Clinic Planned Wednesday

Local citizens who need assistance in their home gardens or landscapes are invited to attend the "Home Garden and Ornamental Diagnostic Clinic" from 3-5 p.m. Wednesday at the Community Center.

The clinic is being conducted by the Deaf Smith County Agricultural Extension Service. There is no fee involved for persons planning to attend.

Each year, the Extension office receives numerous calls relating to problems occurring in the home garden and landscape. The June 28th clinic is an attempt to better serve the needs of the community.

Dr. Robert Berry, plant pathologist, Texas Agricultural Extension Service (TAES), Lubbock, will be featured during the clinic, offering advice relating to plant diseases. Dr. Roland Roberts, vegetable specialist, TAES, will help with problems concerning vegetable production. Entomologist Dr. Carl Patrick, TAES, will be present to assist with insect identification and control.

The local Extension Service encourages residents to bring specimen of plants or insects to the clinic for diagnosis. If time permits, home visits will be made during the clinic with the group invited to attend.

Persons interested in inviting the clinic group to visit their gardens or home landscapes on Wednesday are asked to contact the Extension office, 364-3573 by 5 p.m. June 26th so the necessary arrangements can be made.

Extension programs are open to all people of Deaf Smith County, regardless of race, color, creed or national origin.

Local Blood Debt Escalates to 192

A total debt of 192 pints of blood is owed by local residents to Coffee Memorial Blood Bank. That amount can be defrayed Wednesday when Coffee's Mobile unit will be accepting blood donations at the Community Center from 3-6 p.m.

Local citizens are urged to report to the Community Center, in order to reduce Hereford's current debt and boost Coffee Memorial's blood supply in preparation for the July 4th holiday.

Persons giving blood Wednesday, may designate it for the following:

Infant girl Garcia, who owes 4 pints; Matthew Coker, 4 pints; Bennie Moore, 12 pints; Dorothy Renfro, 12 pints; the late Katie McGehee, 16 pints; Mary Dean, 8 pints; the late Mary Skypala, 8 pints; Annie Barlow, 40 pints; Larry Bain, 56 pints; and the late John Dawson, 12 pints.

Also, a former Hereford resident, Mona Keese of Amarillo, is the mother of two local men. She was injured recently in a traffic mishap and owes 20 pints of blood to Coffee Memorial. Blood may be given in her name Wednesday also.

Joan Bookout is chairman of the local blood drive, conducted here monthly.

Candlelight Ceremony Solemnized at Lubbock

A large candelabrum, flanked by twin candle trees, illuminated the altar of 62nd and Indiana Street Church of Christ at Lubbock Friday evening for the marriage of Miss Laura Jane Campbell and Jimmy Don Hammock.

The bride is the daughter of a Lubbock couple, Mr. and Mrs. Wesley Campbell. The bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. D.R. Hammock of 218 Cherokee Drive.

Dee Bowman, minister of Southside Church of Christ at Pasadena, performed the candlelight ceremony.

Miss Marcia Hightower of Lubbock was the maid of honor in her cousin's wedding. Chuck Durham, cousin of the bridegroom, served as best man.

The bride had two additional attendants, including her sister, Carol Duncan, and the bridegroom's sister, Miss Jan Hammock.

Assisting as groomsmen were Bob Behrends of Hereford and Ronny Hightower of Lubbock, cousin of the bride.

Nichole Hall, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Jerrell Hall of Odessa, was the flower girl in the processional. She was escorted by the ring bearer, Trey Duncan, son of Mr. and Mrs. Gary Duncan.

At the beginning of the nuptial service, Martha Jackson vocalized "Wedding Song" and "You Light Up My Life." She was accompanied by four singers, including Sharon Hightower, Mr. and Mrs. Brent Hughes and Delmer Hightower.

The bride, who was given in marriage by her father, was gowned in a formal wedding dress of silk chiffon over bridal taffeta. Floral lace, edging her portrait neckline, formed panels down the front and back of the silhouette skirt, which was trimmed at the hemline in matching lace.

Her sheer bishop sleeves gathered at the wrists in deep fitted cuffs, applied in lace. Cascading from an empire waistline, the skirt swept to back fullness, forming a Chapel train.

A bride's bandeau of lace and pearls held her fingertip veil of illusion, dotted with lace flowers and edged in lace trim.

She carried a bouquet of peach-colored rosebuds with white daisies and babybreath. Her jewelry included a pair of diamond earrings with matching necklace.

The bride's attendants wore identical dresses of peach-hued quiana, designed with gathered necklines and V-shaped yokes. Each clasped a nosegay of peach-tinted daisies and babybreath.

After the wedding, guests were invited to a reception in the Delmer Hightower home, where a double-tiered cake garnished with peach-colored confectionate flowers was served by Jill Miller and Melinda Mann. Punch, also dyed peach, was ladled by Rhonda Byers while Tanya Zulur poured coffee.

Securing the signatures of guests was Miss Karla Craig.

For a wedding trip to Colorado Springs, Colo., the newlywed Mrs. Hammock wore a blue dress. The couple will be at home at Lubbock after June 29.

After graduation from Roosevelt High School, the bride attended Texas Tech University for two years. She is currently employed by Nassco, Inc. at Lubbock.

The bridegroom graduated from Hereford High School and has been a student at Texas Tech for two years, majoring in finance.

Among the out-of-town guests attending the recent wedding were the bridegroom's grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. Grover Durham of Hereford and the Charles Durham family of Vega.

On the eve of the wedding, the bridegroom's parents hosted the wedding party at a rehearsal dinner at K-Bob's Steak House.

At Wits End

BY ERMA BOMBECK

(Author's Note: This is one of a series on "How America Vacations"....and how shots can help. Today's column deals with the stay-at-home vacationers.)

The decision to spend a vacation at home is not a snap judgment.

The idea first hits in January when the Christmas bills come, followed closely by a broken water heater, a defunct transmission, a clothes dryer that catches fire, and a note from the orthodontist telling you your child is a candidate for a horror movie. Plans are finalized one day when one of the kids come in shouting, "Daddy! Daddy! Our grass is wet and squishy and smells terrible," and you realize your septic tank just died.

It is the death of the septic tank that convinces you that vacation traffic will be deadly, the food won't be nearly as good as what you can get at home, and besides what kind of an insensitive human being would abandon a pregnant gerbil who could possibly deliver breach? The parents appease the children by promising them a series of mini-tours around the state.

The first mini-tour takes Daddy no farther than the garage. He has set aside the first day to "pull the house together." This includes fertilizing, rolling, seeding and mowing the lawn, adjusting the TV antenna on the roof, painting the exterior of the house, installing a humidifier in the craw space in the hall closet, wallpapering two bedrooms, fixing a leak behind the washer, and if there's time, stripping the kitchen cabinets and staining them a lighter color so the kitchen "won't seem so dark."

The second day is spent checking on all the houses of the neighbors who are vacationing and whom you promised to water plants, put clean newspapers down for the pets, bring in mail and cut the grass.

The third day, a car in the driveway heralds the arrival of Lester and Eunice and their four children (one who can bounce a ball steadily against the house for 156 hours without stopping). Eunice's and Lester's septic tank also died and they are making a series of mini-tours around the state. They stay four days before pressing on to visit a worm farm.

The real plus of a vacation-at-home is that two weeks seems like three months and in January when it's time to sign up for another vacation, you refuse, saying, "Couldn't I just take a long lunch hour in August?"

Nuptial Mass Unites Couple Saturday Night

Urns brimming with white gladiolas and yellow chrysanthemums flanked the altar of St. Agnes Catholic Church in Phoenix, Ariz. Saturday evening for the nuptial Mass uniting Miss Margie Ann Paetzold and Nicholas Schlafer in marriage.

Conducting the ceremony was the bridegroom's brother, the Rev. Joseph Schlafer, pastor of Saint Brigid Parish at Westbury, N.Y.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Walter Paetzold, Route 3, and the bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Schlafer of Merrick, N.Y.

Attending the couple at the twilight ceremony were Mrs. Terry Champ of Hereford as matron of honor and Maurice Schlafer as best man. Mrs. Champ is the sister of the bride and Schlafer is the bridegroom's brother.

Serving as acolytes during the service were Chris Schlafer, Stanley Paetzold and Walter Paetzold Jr.

Presented in marriage by her father, the bride wore a formal wedding gown of white silk chiffon over bridal taffeta with daisy lace and pearl trim. The cameo neckline and raised bodice were applied with lace motifs, as were her bishop sleeves, which gathered in ruffles over her hands.

The full skirt cascaded from an empire waistline to a ruffled flounce edged in lace. The dress swept to back fullness, forming a full Chapel train.

Clusters of lace daisies, embroidered with pearls, formed the coil holding her double tiered veil of bridal illusion, bordered in lace. The veil drifted to waist-length.

She carried a bridal bouquet of white daisies with yellow chrysanthemums and baby-breath.

The bride's honor attendant was attired in a floor-length blue knit A-line dress with a matching chiffon cape. She clasped a nosegay of rainbow-colored daisies.

After the wedding ceremony, the newlyweds were contraluted during a reception in the church hall, where Mrs. Gary Mac Dryden registered guests. Refreshments were served by Mrs. Gary Coleman and Donna Paetzold.

Yellow confectionate roses

cascaded down one side of the three-tiered wedding cake, which was crowned by a Christogram symbol.

For a honeymoon flight to Hawaii, Mrs. Schlafer chose a rust-colored pant suit. The couple will be at home after July 1 at Phoenix, where he is employed by Mountain Bell Telephone and she is employed by Arizona Beef Co.

The bridegroom graduated from Calhoun High School in New York. He served for two years in the U.S. Army, stationed in Germany.

The bride attended West Texas State University following graduation from Hereford High School.

Out-of-town guests at the recent marriage included the bridegroom's family from New York and the bride's relatives from Texas.

Big Brothers Celebrate 75th Anniversary

WASHINGTON, D.C. — A 75th Anniversary celebration of the Big Brothers and Big Sisters Movement will culminate this week at the Mayflower Hotel as delegates from Big Brothers and Big Sisters Agencies across the nation gather for their Diamond Jubilee Annual Meeting.

JoAn Dwyer, Executive Director of Big Brothers-Big Sisters of Hereford will be attending the National meeting. The event also marks the first anniversary of the merger of Big Brothers of America and Big Sisters International to form Big Brothers/Big Sisters of America.

Also on Tuesday will be a reception at Capitol Hill, where delegates and their invited Congressmen will toast the Diamond Jubilee in the 318 Caucus Room of the Russell Senate Office Building.

Wednesday's keynote speaker, Arabella Martinez, Assistant Secretary for Human Development Services at the Department of Health, Education, and Welfare, is the first Hispanic ever to be appointed as Assistant Secretary and a strong advocate of legislation and government structures designed to support and strengthen families and communities. A former social worker, she served as Executive Director of the Oakland, Calif., Spanish-speaking Unity Council, which became, through her leadership, one of the most successful community development corporations in the country.

The sessions on Thursday will be led by John M. Rector, Associate Administrator, Law Enforcement Assistance Administration and Administrator of the Office of Juvenile Justice and Delinquency, LEAA. Prior to his appointment to LEAA, Rector served on the U.S. Senate Judiciary Committee as the Chief Counsel and Staff Director of the Subcommittee to Investigate Juvenile Delinquency.

From June 27 through July 1, over 700 staff members and volunteer board representatives will attend a wide variety of activities and events, including 60 workshop sessions geared to an exchange of up-to-date information in such areas as child development, fund-raising agency management, volunteer recruitment and public relations.

Tuesday's Welcoming Luncheon will feature a keynote address by Rod MacLeish, world-famous news analyst and commentator. MacLeish, a long-time supporter of Big Brothers/Big Sisters, is currently with the CBS Washington News Bureau and reports the national scene on several CBS radio and TV news shows. He anchors the Monday edition of "First Line Report" and administration and Administrator of the Office of Juvenile Justice and Delinquency, LEAA. Prior to his appointment to LEAA, Rector served on the U.S. Senate Judiciary Committee as the Chief Counsel and Staff Director of the Subcommittee to Investigate Juvenile Delinquency.

Highlighting the week-long celebration is the special tribute paid to outstanding men and women serving in the Big Brothers/Big Sisters Movement. Thursday's awards luncheon will include the naming of the Big Brother and Big Sister of the Year, who will be in attendance with their Little Brother and Little Sister; the announcement of the five top winners of the Organization's first scholarship program, a national competition funded by Victoria Station Restaurants, Inc., a San Francisco-based restaurant chain; and a special presentation by a representative of Major League Baseball—celebrating the Diamond Jubilee of the World Series.

Also being honored at the awards luncheon is the first Big Brother, 98-year-old retired Cincinnati businessman, Irvin F. Westheimer. Westheimer's befriending of a fatherless boy on July 4, 1903, dated the beginning of the Movement which now brings the friendship of a Big Brother to over 140,000 children.

Wrapping up the week, on Friday, is featured speaker William Aramony, since 1970 national executive of United Way of America, the national association of local United Way organizations, the largest mobilized network of voluntary, federated, fund-raising, planning and allocating organizations in the world. Under Aramony's direction, United Way of America, a major source of funding for Big Brothers/Big Sisters of affiliates, has undergone major changes and seen tremendous growth.

Following Aramony's speech, delegates are invited to visit a general exhibit, the Carnival of Ideas, where Member Agencies and other organizations will display new ideas in fund-raising, public relations, volunteer recruitment and related areas in the field of social service.

Mr. and Mrs. Inman Larson accompanied the Rev. and Mrs. Jesse Hodge and four children on a trip as far as Legrand, Iowa, returning this week. They went in the motor home of the Hodge family and were away about ten days. They visited points of interest, including the Cowboy Hall of Fame and the Zoo in Oklahoma City and spent a night at Checotah with Mr. and Mrs. Slim Stinnett. Mrs. Stinnett is the former Frances Lemke of Adrian and a girlhood friend of Mrs. Larson.

They visited points of interest, including the Oral Roberts Campus at Tulsa and went to Neosha, Mo. spending a night with a relative of Mrs. Larson. In Iowa they visited friends and relatives of Larson, who is a native of that state. On the return trip they traveled through the Ozarks, which they found beautiful and still relatively cool weather.

The Rev. Hodge is pastor of Wesley Methodist Church in Hereford. The group cooked and picnicked all the way with the Hodge family sleeping in the motor home.

Cecil Mobley, a nephew of Mrs. H.M. Mobley, died last Sunday and funeral services were held Tuesday at Andrews. He had lived until recently in Denver City. Mrs. Mobley went to Midland and from there went with her daughter, Mrs. Earl Reno, and Mr. Reno to the funeral.

Mrs. Herman Vinson and daughters of Childress came Thursday to visit a few days with her mother, Floyd Cole, and others of the family. Mrs. Cole met Jane and children in Amarillo and Herman went on to a meeting there.

Several from here went to Clovis Monday to attend the funeral of Mickey Long, brother of a relative, Mrs. Willy Andrews of Melrose. Mr. Long, 36, died of a heart attack Friday. The funeral was held in Lubbock and a graveside service in the Clovis cemetery. Going were Mr. and Mrs. A.T. Jones, Mr. and Mrs. W.H. Andrews, Mrs. T.L. Sparkman and Miss Alma Andrews.

Several women from Frio Baptist Church went to Lubbock Tuesday taking supplies given by church members to Buckners Home. They were given a tour of the Home. Going were Mesdames J.E. Warrick, Earl Harkins, Eugene Baldwin, Tommy Sparkman, T.L. Sparkman, Jerry Richardson. Also, Mrs. Harlan Barber and her relative, Mrs. Weldon Sage of Lubbock. Mrs. Barber had visited Mrs. Sage Monday night.

Mrs. Allie Burris, of Texico was visiting her sister, Mrs. A.T. Jones, a few days this week and helping her make drapes for her home.

Word has received here Monday that Mrs. Hattie Haseloff of Vernon was injured in an accident. The accident occurred at the cemetery where a number of persons were at a graveside service. She was struck by a car. She is in a Wichita Falls hospital and is thought to be recovering satisfactorily, following her surgery on Tuesday. She is the mother of Herbert Haseloff and grandmother of Mrs. Joe Andrews and has visited here occasionally.

Buttermilk
 Popular Beverage

Many people drink buttermilk during the warm summer months not only because of its unique tangy taste, but also because it's refreshing. What's more, buttermilk is nutritious. Just like the milk from which it is made, buttermilk's key nutrients are calcium, protein and riboflavin (vitamin B-2). Despite its popularity, few individuals really understand buttermilk.

Years ago, buttermilk was simply the liquid left in the churn after making butter. Although the taste has remained pretty much the same, the process for making buttermilk has changed considerably.

Buttermilk today is made with a specially prepared culture, under careful laboratory conditions, to produce the desired flavor and texture characteristic of original buttermilk.

Its smooth, heavy body and tart flavor are created by adding a special culture and pasteurizing the milk at higher temperatures for a longer period of time than other fresh fluid milks. Salt is then added to bring out its natural flavor.

The words "churned" and "real churned," often seen on buttermilk cartons, are terms describing the churning process required to produce the yellow flecks in some buttermilk. The flecks are actually real butter granules added to give the drink eye appeal and additional flavor. These flecks of butter make up less than one percent of the total drink.

The kind of milk used to make buttermilk varies. The milk is always quality Grade A milk. In most instances, buttermilk is made from fresh fluid skim milk, making it a favorite of weight watchers. An eight-ounce glass of buttermilk made with skim milk contains about 100 calories.

Many cooks use buttermilk in preparing their favorite dishes. Many culinary experts substitute buttermilk for sour milk in a variety of dishes.

FLYING HIGH
 WASHINGTON (AP) - The 60th anniversary of U.S. airmail was marked May 15, 1978. Gabriel Phillips of the Air Transport Association said that "what started as an abortive attempt to fly a few sacks of mail from Washington to New York developed into the world's largest mail airlift in which the nation's airlines now carry nine out of 10 intercity first-class letters."

Phillips said that in 1978 the nation's scheduled airlines would transport about 35 billion pieces of mail.

The local postmasters attended the 42nd Annual Convention of New Mexico Postmasters, held in Clovis last week. Those attending were Lula Cross, Bellview Postmistress, Miss Inez Short, Broadview Postmistress and Irene Stanfield, Grady postmistress.

Approximately 150 postmasters and guests attended the three-day convention.

Mr. and Mrs. Travis Stovall enjoyed having their two granddaughters Linda and Brenda Benson of Albuquerque, N.M. as their guests this past week. The girls returned home by bus from the San Jon Bus Terminal on Saturday morning.

Other guests in the Stovall home this week included Mr. and Mrs. Johnny Mitchell and their mothers, Mrs. Lobley of Tazwell, Tenn. and Mrs. Ella Mitchell of Clovis, a former area resident.

This was Stovall's and Mitchell's first visit together in many years. Both were graduates of Bellview High School in 1934.

Rosalie Colwell and Bernie Northcutt of Hereford visited Wednesday evening and were dinner guests in the home of Mr. and Mrs. C.L. Hutchins and Mrs. Mollie Reese.

Carla Jo Billie and Chad Simpson, children of Mac and Jeana Simpson of Pampa are spending this week in the home of their aunt and uncle, Wynona and Arnold Cross Jr. and cousin Susan Wyatt.

Margaret Mote took her father Nelson Pearce to Lubbock Methodist Hospital last Saturday, where he underwent tests and surgery. He was released from the hospital Monday morning and is recuperating in the home of his daughter.

Ann Landers 'Sick' Motherly Love

DEAR ANN: I have a friend who in her younger years once told me how much she loved her little nephew and how adorable he was. She confided that when she was alone with the child she would spank him or give him a little pinch to make him cry. Then she'd comfort him and love him up. She mentioned that she also did this to other young children.

My friend (now 23) is a warm-hearted person who loves children. She asked if I thought something might be wrong with her because she is doing the same thing to her baby. She confessed that she gets a kick out of making him cry by inflicting pain and then derives great pleasure from comforting him. Her question was, "Do you think something is wrong with me?" I couldn't give her an answer. Can you, Ann? -- S.B.B.

DEAR S.B.B.: Yes. Something is wrong with her. She has a geranium in her cranium.

Some people have the same problem -- only they use words as weapons.

When a mother inflicts physical pain on her child just so he will cry and then "loves him up," she is really trying to prove she can get the child to love her no matter how she treats him. That's pretty sick.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I'll bet you're going to get plenty of letters complaining about your reply to the cop in Santa Barbara. He's the one who complained about being interrupted on his lunch hour by people who saw him in uniform and just expected him to serve them 24 hours a day. When the cop asked why the public assumes they have a right to expect this, your insensitive reply was, "Maybe it's because his salary is paid by tax dollars."

You are paid by newspaper dollars. Does that mean any person who reads your column in the paper is privileged to come up to you on the street and ask your advice about a miserable mother-in-law or a drunken husband?

My husband is a naval officer, also paid by tax dollars, but this doesn't mean he has to serve the public every waking moment. Why don't YOU wake up and smell the coffee? -- Privacy Is A Necessity. Not A Luxury

DEAR PRIVACY: I did get a load of letters about my comment to the cop in Santa Barbara and I'd like to set the record straight.

I do not believe that just because a person is paid by tax dollars he should be expected to serve the public 24 hours a day. SOME people do think so, however -- and THEY are the ones who interrupt officers in restaurants and give postmen boxes to take to the post office. My comment was by way of explanation -- not a statement of my personal views.

The raft of angry letters once again proves that no matter how you say it -- somebody is sure to misunderstand.

DEAR ANN: A friend and I just got our driving permits. We had an argument on the proper way to place one's hand on the steering wheel for maximum control of the vehicle. This may seem like a dumb thing to argue about, but we'd like a reply. -- A and D

DEAR A AND D: Pretend the steering wheel is a clock. Place your hands on the wheel so the clock says 10 minutes past 10. Got it? --

Pioneer Descendants

Mr. and Mrs. R.L. Elliston [shown in foreground] were pioneer residents of Deaf Smith County and the last picture made of all 12 of their children is this one, shot in 1942. Shown from left are Mae Grimes, Victor Elliston, Betty Chatfield, Vera Lee Cantrell, Ervin Elliston, Merle Elliston, Hubert Elliston [deceased], Judy Lee [deceased], Nollie Elliston, Raymond Elliston, Leora Sullins [deceased] and Custer Elliston.

R.L. Elliston Family Members Reunited for Father's Day

Descendants of a local pioneer couple, the late Mr. and Mrs. R.L. Elliston, were reunited Sunday, June 18, in the Bull Barn for a Father's Day gathering. Eighty-six family members were present.

Nine of the couple's 12 children survive them and all nine were in attendance for the recent reunion. They include Mae Grimes, Victor Elliston, Vera Lee Cantrell, Merle Elliston, Nollie Elliston and Raymond Elliston, all of Hereford; Betty Chatfield of Crowell; Ervin Elliston of Tucumcari, N.M.; and Custer Elliston of Cleburne. The three deceased children include Hubert Elliston, Judy Lee and Leora Sullins.

During the reunion, guests were greeted at the registry book by Debra Findley and Dena DeFur. Punch was poured by Ivogene Elliston.

Aven Continues Vet Schooling

Michael A. Aven of Hereford has been accepted to the professional curriculum in veterinary medicine at Texas A&M University at College Station. He recently graduated with honors during A&M's spring commencement, receiving a bachelor's degree in animal science. As a university student, Aven is a member of Phi Kappa Phi, Alpha Zeta and Gamma Sigma Delta Fraternities.

The son of Mr. and Mrs. Hilrey Aven, 230 Ranger Drive, Aven is a 1974 graduate of Hereford High School. He attended West Texas State University for two years before transferring to A&M.

A space telescope to be orbited above earth in 1983 will be aimed and held steady with a perfection roughly equivalent to a marksman in Boston zeroing in on a dime in Washington, D.C., and then keeping the target motionless in the sights for 30 to 40 hours, according to National Geographic.

He purchased the Holland Ranch, 32 sections southwest of Hereford in the Red Tower district. He later bought 14 sections in the Dunlap district northwest of Hereford.

Elliston sold his land holdings in this area before moving here in 1911. He and his three sons traveled here on an immigrant train with their belongings--household goods, two of the famous Steel Dust mares, two mules and three other horses, and a wagon box filled with hay, where the four slept at night.

Arriving in Hereford, Elliston bought 4 sections south of Hereford. Mrs. Elliston and the other children followed in a passenger train.

In 1917, Elliston sold his ranch to Jones and Elmer Dameron, and received several buildings on the 200 block of Main St. in the exchange. Two years later, Elliston erected three brick buildings near his other holdings on Main St. for a total construction cost of $25,000.

Elliston owned all the buildings from between the bank and the E.B. Black business. Three of the buildings owned by Elliston were the J.O. Newell Dry Goods Store, the Hereford Bakery and T.K. Wilson Insurance Agency. These sites were sold eventually to Ezra Norton, who retained them until his death.

In addition to his property holdings downtown, Elliston owned several tracts of land surrounding the small town, including numerous farms in the Wyche community southeast of here. In 1923, he bought 10 acres of land (where St. Anthony's Catholic Church is now situated) and this was the site of a large two-story, 5 bedroom girls dormitory, which housed the distaff students who attended Panhandle Christian

Davis Wins Round In Divorce Case

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) - Fort Worth millionaire Cullen Davis has won a major legal round in his divorce case with a ruling by a district court judge banning any trial testimony about the 1976 Davis mansion slayings.

Judge Joe H. Eidson Jr. ruled against Davis, however, in refusing to consolidate the divorce case with a personal injury suit filed by Davis' estranged wife, Priscilla.

Mrs. Davis is seeking monetary damages from Davis, contending he shot her at the mansion Aug. 3, 1976.

If Eidson had agreed to consolidate the cases, the same jury that is to hear the divorce case in his court beginning Aug. 14 also would have heard the personal injury suit at the same time.

Davis' attorneys successfully argued Thursday that there should be no divorce trial testimony about the 1976 shootings or other testimony designed to place "fault" upon either Davis or Mrs. Davis.

Eidson's order states there will be no testimony admitted concerning "Fault or misconduct" of either party in regard to incidents occurring after July 31, 1974, the day Mrs. Davis filed for divorce.

Davis still faces a charge of attempted murder in connection with the shooting of Mrs. Davis at the mansion. An Amarillo

Putting You in the Picture

By JO ELLEN JORDE
School Volunteer Coordinator

DISCOVER YOUR BASIC PERSONALITY TYPE

Who does volunteer? In the June 11th edition of Family Weekly under the people quiz, the following question was asked, "Do people who volunteer their services share common personality traits?" The answer: "True, according to university and other studies.

The volunteers were found to be less subject to anxiety, less worried about their health, more persistent, more trusting and more conscientious. Also the volunteers were found to be mature self-fulfilled individual persons.

"The volunteer is impelled by conscience, a feeling that a helping hand should be extended to others. If this is a picture of your personality, we have a pen waiting for you which will portray you to the world: It says 'Hereford School Volunteer.'"

Who can volunteer? Anyone with a sincere interest in our children's future who is willing to make a commitment. There is a job for everyone.

Are we too early? The old adage "The early bird gets the worm" apparently still applies. We've been talking to some of you, and we hear that you are thinking about where you will put your time, when summer days retreat and we return to fall scheduling. We need you: If you have an interest in the School Volunteer Program, start by filling out the application in today's paper. This is where you volunteer.

What are school volunteers? People who help in teacher-directed programs. Last year we had requests for help in tutoring, basic reading and basic math, in special education classes, in the homemaking and shop departments; also for help in everything from clerical work to arts and crafts, including to help in heavy traffic areas as crossing guards and to work in the library. We have more requests in more areas than we can fulfill without you!

When will the program start? Planning is now. We need to know that we can count on you. At the end of August, you will have an opportunity to come to an orientation meeting prior to the actual volunteer experience in the classroom.

Why volunteer or are we early enough? This is the big question! There was a swift movement in education starting 2 years ago in 2 states which has now spread to 31 states to give competency tests. The problem: Johnny is being passed from grade to grade and still can't read, write or add.

Teachers' tests and standard tests just aren't covering basic social needs like reading a recipe or writing a check. In

364-4602 364-3589 364-1735

Florida last November, a 117 question test was given high school juniors for the first time. It included filling out a simple tax form, a job application, writing a letter, balancing a checkbook and reading a road map. Of the 110,000 students who took the test, 40,700 failed.

These tests are meant to help children who are promoted without skills to function as adults. Who has demanded these tests? The American public through their boards of education and legislatures.

This identifies a portion of the problem, the other part will be time and people to aid in the remedial language and math classes. This is where you as a volunteer can be invaluable.

Dr. Gilbert Schiffman, Director of the Right to Read Program of the U.S. Office of Education identifies an even more important area of the problem, that of prevention.

He states, "We have so much evidence that indicates, the earlier you get the kids the more kids you can help, and the better the quality of remediation." He further states that the dedicated volunteer is superior in helping change the child's self concept from one of failure to achievement and in their ability to take time to develop language experience and vocabulary skills. It's not too early: volunteer to help our children catch up and be fitted with the tools for life.

Rats with genetic resistance to anticoagulant poison were discovered on a Scottish farm in 1960, and the "super rats" still are found in Great Britain.

Americans Show Church Confidence

NEW YORK (AP) - Americans have more confidence in the churches than in eight other key institutions of society, an extensive study has found. But church-goers trust organized religion much more than those not involved in it.

The study, the first to examine broadly the differing attitudes of the "churched" and the "unchurched," found that 80 percent of church participants have a "great deal" or "quite a lot" of confidence in organized religion - more than feel that way about any other major institution, from big business to the U.S. Congress.

In fact, Congress and television rated the lowest in public confidence both among the churched and the unchurched. Among the unchurched, 73 percent had at least "some" confidence in organized religion, but they ranked it fifth, below banks, public schools, the military and the U.S. Supreme Court.

Since the "unchurched" make up only 41 percent of the adult population, the overall average gave the highest credence to religion among major institutions. It was ahead even for "unchurched" people of big business, labor unions, Congress and TV.

This was only one aspect of a vast array of comparative data gathered by the Gallup poll organization for an ecumenical coalition of 29 Protestant and Roman Catholic denominations in a joint project arranged by the National Council of Churches.

With initial results released this week, Peggy L. Shriver of the NCC's Research Office, said analysis of the vast accumulation of data "has only begun" and that further implications derived from it "may prove even more instructive."

The unusual element of the study, she noted, is that it digs into attitudes of those whom the churches know little about - "the people who don't ever come to church" - and brings out their views in comparison with those of church-goers.

Intriguingly, most of the church-goers said that when they were children, their parents attended church frequently, while this was not the case with most of the presently "unchurched."

By BETTY HENSON
The Good Neighbor.

LOCAL: The second swimming session registration has been completed with all classes filled. The Water Safety Instructor class is continuing with Debbie Hoover also receiving training to become a Water Safety Instructor Trainer.

A First Aid Instructors class will be held Tuesday and Wednesday, 1 to 5 p.m. at the Community Center. We need First Aid Instructors to teach First Aid. The only requirement is a current MultiMedia First Aid Card. Please call the office Monday if you would be able to take this class.

A special thank you to the TOPS Club and especially Janelle Davison and Sue Rogers, leaders who found clothing that was very badly needed.

New snakebite advice is now available from the Red Cross. A new leaflet "First Aid for Snakebite" is being published and will soon be available to the public. The publication is based on a report prepared by the National Academy of Sciences/National Research Council. Snakebite prevention practices that can eliminate needless illness and worry may be learned in a Red Cross first aid course.

The Uniformed Volunteers are working on the physical therapy for Westgate Nursing Home on a regular schedule and feel that this is a worthwhile project and still need several volunteers to help. The next meeting for the volunteers will be August 10 at the Black House. The Board of Directors will meet July 11 for a luncheon meeting.

Sub-Par Harvest Proceeds

Wheat harvest is a dismal affair at best in Deaf Smith County this year. A combination of a prolonged drought, heavy rain in May followed by high temperatures and a choking growth of weeds in many fields has resulted in low test weights and poor quality wheat. "Fritz" Backus of the Hereford Grain Corporation's Sears location reports that although the wheat is "getting better now," fully 60-70 percent of the wheat harvested here this year has a sub-standard test weight, with some test weights as low as 40 pounds per bushel.

A 63 pound test weight, common in better years, is a rare thing this summer, and much of the wheat is full of weeds when it's brought to town. The low key wheat harvest, scaled down this year due to drought, is expected to last another week, with much of the grain measuring up only to a sample grade that will probably go for livestock feed. Here, a farmer at the Dawn community moves through a field of skimpy wheat, pausing at the end of a round to unload a bin of the light grain. [Brand photo by Jim Steiert]

Complex Economic Situation Ups Beef Prices; Short-Term Answers Won't Aid Consumer

COLLEGE STATION - Rising prices of beef in the supermarket result from a complex world economic situation which spans several years, and short-term answers really won't help the consumer in the long run, an analysis by three agricultural economists at Texas A&M University concludes.

America's beef producers are being caught in the middle as they begin to emerge from the beef industry's "worst depression since the 1930s," the economists said. These views are included in a position paper prepared by Dr. John A. Hopkin head of the TAMU department of agricultural economics; Dr. Donald E. Farris, professor of agricultural economics, and Dr. Ernest E. Davis, Extension livestock marketing specialist.

Prior to 1973, the countries that now make up the European Common Market (EC-9) were the largest beef importing area of the world, the economists noted. Developments in these countries resulted in a beef import embargo and dealt a crippling blow to South American and Australian beef producers.

This "clogged traditional channels of international trade, and the only place left for the surplus beef was the U.S. market. When the U.S. import quota limit was reached, the heavy surplus caused the international beef market to collapse.

As a result, 24-can cases of 12-ounce cans of beef sold at only $10 a case in international trading. This price covered transportation of cattle and processing costs, but left nothing to pay the producer for the cattle.

Despite the excellent bargains on the international market, Japan, Russia and the EC-9 allowed fewer imports during 1974-77, far below their 1973 rates when international prices were much higher.

"At the same time," the TAMU economists said, "they maintained very high prices within their own markets and thereby held their per capita beef consumption at low levels."

The resulting depression was felt by nearly all beef exporting countries and by importing countries where markets were not tightly protected.

"In the U.S., the Meat Import Act of 1964 provided an upper limit on imports, but we were still by far the largest beef importer," the economists noted. "Very little of the record U.S. production could be exported. As a result, U.S. consumers had record beef supplies and producers had low prices coupled with record high feed costs.

"In the Americas, Africa and Oceania, there has been little or no profit incentive to increase investment in cattle or in range improvement during the four-year period 1974-77."

At the same time that Japan, Russia and the EC-9 were preventing their consumers from responding to the lower world prices, "the U.S. market, despite burdensome supplies of its own, took no additional actions to restrict imports," the economists stressed.

Because of such foreign restraints on consumers in other countries, the authors recommended "that the U.S. Meat Import Act of 1964 be amended to include a counter-cyclical quota."

Such a quota, they explained "is one that automatically decreases when U.S. supplies are heavy and increases when supplies are short." Such a plan would likely allow all of the available imports to enter for the next three years, while American cattlemen rebuild their herds, they said.

"Political or administrative decisions to change the quota are less satisfactory than a system that changes under a known set of rules," the economists said.

Federal price controls such as were attempted in World War II and in 1972-73 have proven ineffective, but "most disruptive" to the industry, they said.

The economists characterized the beef industry as highly competitive with large numbers of competitors having relatively free entry at every level in the system.

"Anytime there have been good profit possibilities, it has always stimulated expansion and new investors," they noted. There has been little chance to protect markets, or new technology with patents, they pointed out.

"As a result, there is no evidence of any long-term profits within the industry. On the other hand, there is substantial evidence of very low profits in cattle production since 1952."

They said many producers have been able to stay in business only because of lagged appreciation which provided increased debt capacity, income from sale of crops, or off-farm employment.

They said the excess competition stems from two main factors. Improved technology has provided a steady increase in beef output, and (See BEEF, page 2-C)

SCS Great Plains Program Aids Land, Owner Too

By JIM STEIERT
Brand Farm Editor

Local landowners who were reminded of the need for erosion control work on their land by recent heavy rains, can get cost sharing help on carrying out many conservation practices to federal farm programs have encouraged farmers to divert agricultural resources out of crop production into beef production.

Beef

"The acreage control programs for crops invariably channel some additional resources into beef production," the economists explained. As a consequence, consumers have been offered more beef than they were willing to buy at prices that would cover total production costs.

Because many of their production costs are fixed costs, the economists said, cattlemen have been slow to shift to other agricultural activities.

Price recovery which the cattlemen must have to get back on a sound financial basis appears likely during 1978-81 unless there is government interference with the market system," they said.

At the same time, the three predicted, American consumers should have supplies at least as high as the 1973 levels of 110 pounds per person.

Under unrestricted market conditions, prices for beef similar to those of 1973 seem most likely, with temporary fluctuations above and below those levels, the economists said.

"Even so, these prices will be lower than those paid by consumers in most other areas of the world."

alleviate these problems, according to a spokesman for the local Soil Conservation Service office.

Ed Blackwell, Hereford-based soil conservationist explained that the Great Plains conservation program available through the SCS offers assistance to both the landowner and the land in carrying out often costly conservation projects.

Under Great Plains contracts with local landowners, the SCS cost shares anywhere from 50 to 80 percent of the expense for carrying out conservation projects ranging from installation of pipeline for livestock water to establishment of waterways and diversions.

"The Great Plains program was initiated in 1958, and its original goal was to return marginal lands which had been placed under cultivation back in grass. The idea, of course, was to reduce soil erosion. Later, the program branched out to meet other needs," Blackwell explained.

Blackwell emphasized that a Great Plains contract is a voluntary undertaking on the part of any landowner.

Blackwell cited the Mary Alice Fry farm near the Dawn community, operated by J.B. Caraway, as an example of the Great Plains program in action.

"Mrs. Fry entered a Great Plains contract in 1974 on her 480 acre livestock farm. Initial work there has included reseeded marginal slopes to grass, in addition to installing pipeline for livestock water and water holding facilities," Blackwell stated.

In the wake of severe soil erosion due to heavy runoff from neighboring farms upslope in the flooding of May 26, a new water erosion control project has also been launched at the Fry farm under the Great Plains program. "Currently, grassed waterways are under construction on the north, east, and south side of 118 acres of cropland that were severely eroded by heavy runoff from the recent rains," Blackwell stated.

When completed, the latest runoff control project will include 13 acres of grassed waterways and a diversion terrace near already established grassland.

Blackwell pointed out that the cost of such a conservation project is approximately $250 per acre for waterway construction and grass establishment—a hefty bill for a landowner to bear alone.

But, because of the Great Plains contract, the SCS will pay 80 percent of the cost for shaping the waterways and establishing grass in them.

"There is a standard procedure on Great Plains contracts, followed on the Fry farm and many others in the county," Blackwell explained.

"When the landowner indicates a desire to enter into a Great Plains contract, a complete conservation plan is formulated by the SCS for the entire unit of land. Soil maps, surveying and other techniques are used to design systems to deal with the conservation problems on the land. We work with the landowner on this survey, and when it is completed, we go over the details of it with him. Usually, the landowner will commit himself to a three year contract, and during the period of this contract, he will be required to complete the conservation projects outlined," he continued.

The local conservationist related that after a landowner has signed a Great Plains contract, it is forwarded to the board of the local soil and water conservation district for approval, then forwarded to the state SCS office.

"Money for the cost-sharing project is put into escrow for the farmer by the state SCS office, and as the farmer completes the conservation plan practices, he can draw this money out," said Blackwell.

Cost sharing rates for various projects include 50 percent on livestock water and irrigation pipelines, 50 percent for water storage facilities, and 60 percent for diversions.

The 80 percent rate applies to waterways and grass establishment costs.

Caraway is operating his own land under a Great Plains contract, as well as the Fry land, and explains that it is an asset to the local landowner.

"This program does a lot to help control water and wind erosion, and it lets landowners do work that might be too expensive if they had to take it on alone. This program helps the land itself, and the landowner too," Caraway commented.

Caraway added that he feels, "Farmers are much more conscious about conservation work now, because they know it can help both their cropland and pasture."

According to Blackwell, 240 Great Plains contracts have been signed by county farmers since the program began in 1958, with about 30 percent of the land in the county involved in the program.

"We have 21 active contracts currently, scattered over all parts of the county, with the majority of them on dryland farms and rangeland," said Blackwell.

"We invite any local landowner with a conservation problem, particularly in light of erosion from recent heavy rains, who feels he might be interested in a Great Plains contract to come by the office here and discuss it with us," he concluded.

Plotting Conservative Strategy

J.B. Caraway and Ed Blackwell pause next to the maintainer owned by the Tierra Blanca Soil and Water Conservation District to consult plans for construction of conservation structures on land owned by Mrs. Mary Alice Fry of Dawn, and farmed by Caraway. Blackwell, of the Hereford soil conservation service, helped to plan conservation projects being carried out on the Fry land under Great Plains conservation contract, under which the SCS shares the cost of various conservation work. With severe erosion cropping up on local farmland after heavy rains in May, the SCS office here is inviting farmers interested in a Great Plains contract to help them alleviate these problems to come by and hear an explanation of the cost sharing project. ## Pork Growth Minimal WASHINGTON (AP) - The Agriculture Department says that hog producers plan to increase production only 4 percent this summer and fall, well below what some experts had been expecting.

If their plans are carried out, it will mean that the consumer pork supply will not expand as much next winter and in the early months of 1979 as had been thought earlier. In turn, the smaller pork output will help keep prices of live hogs and cattle up through the next six months or so.

As of June 1, the nation's inventory of hogs and pigs was 54.9 million head, up 1 percent from a year ago, the department's Crop Reporting Board said.

"The inventory increase was limited by death losses which were about one-fifth more than a year ago due to effects of prolonged cold weather and disease problems," the report said.

Looking at the pig crop in the six months of June through November, the report said that farmers intend to have about 6.25 million sows farrow, an increase of 4 percent from the same period of last year.

Department officials until now had held out the possibility that the June-November pig crop may be up 7 percent to 8 percent, or more.

Good Farm Records Can Boost Profit Potential

COLLEGE STATION — Farmers and ranchers cannot survive today's high level of agricultural production without good records. They need a financial management plan. Such a plan can also increase their profit-making potential, believes an economist with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service.

"Management of capital is vital to production efficiency and maximum profits," says Cecil Parker. Included in this management of finances are three key items—the financial statement, profit-loss statement and cash flow summaries.

The financial statement shows the farm's financial picture at a given time. This includes the present solvency of the operation and also a projection of future solvency. List all assets and liabilities. Use current, intermediate, and fixed or long-term groupings in defining assets and providing a realistic look at repayment requirements.

The profit-loss statement sums up income and expenses and the resulting net profit or loss during a given period, such as a crop year, points out Parker. Handle non-farming items separately. To obtain the operation's gain or loss, subtract net cash expenses from net cash income and adjust for changes in inventory and capital items. Comparing profit-loss statements for a period of years will show any progress or decline of the farming or ranching operation.

Cash flow summaries list all cash income and expenses. They include family living expenses, money borrowed and debts paid. A monthly summary of these figures determines the flow of cash during the planning period. Cash flow summaries can help determine the time and amounts of credit needs and availability of repayment funds.

"Although some time is required to develop a sound financial management plan, the end result can be increased returns on capital," contends the economist.

"Agriculture 1978-style requires forward planning, keeping a close check on operations, and making adjustments as new situations and conditions arise. Increasing competition makes it more important than ever to produce on an efficient basis.

"Anyone in the farming and ranching business has got to have good records and accounts to make sound management decisions," emphasizes Parker. "Complete and accurate accounting of income and expenses can mean dollar savings in income tax management, business management and social security benefits."

The economist identifies several proper accounting procedures:

1. Record cash received from all sources related to farming or ranching. By proper identification, some of these receipts may be excluded from taxable income.

2. Record all annual operating expenses. A poor operating expense record may result in increased tax liability.

3. Record capital expenditures. Many of these assets may be subject to depreciation. This subject to depreciation. This will also serve as a record of cost at time of sale.

"Not only do records and accounts increase management efficiency but they provide the only basis for making a cost analysis of the business and may be used to determine credit needs. Future business adjustments should be made only after carefully analyzing the financial and physical data from your records and accounts," contends Parker.

Farmers and ranchers can obtain more information on adequate farm and ranch records and accounts from any county Extension office.

Cotton Suppliers Aid Industry Via Foundation

Cotton supply firms supporting The Cotton Foundation are making a major contribution to the industry's progress.

Frank M. Mitchener, Jr., Summer, Miss., producer who heads the Foundation, said support for the research and education organization is now the highest in its 22-year history. Membership support this fiscal year is expected at about $150,000 or about 10 times as much as it was five years ago.

The increased base of financial support has allowed the Foundation to step up its program activity, Mitchener said.

On The Turnrow

By Jim Steiert

Brand Farm Editor

You hear a lot about the amount of money our government wastes on giveaways, boondoggles, and downright underhanded activities by some of our so-called "leaders."

The way the national budget is run today, you'd get the impression that it makes sense to simply pour more water into the top of a bucket with holes in it that it does to quit pouring, patch up the holes and then take on a full load.

Somehow, we have gotten to the point that inefficiency is rewarded with taxpayer money. Officials must think it's better to squander money down ratholes than it is to plug the holes and sink the money into solid enterprises.

There is open wonderment why our government operates at an ever-growing deficit each year, yet the sums that are simply squandered in meaningless ways is appalling.

We get too little of the things we need for our tax dollar these days, and too much of the meddling Americans are certain they don't need.

It is not right for an average middle class American to have to work five months and two weeks every year just to pay his various taxes, many of which are levied against his "privilege" of owning various things.

The truth of the matter is that many of these "privileges" are actually rights of ownership that the individual earned by his work, and for which he is being punished by exorbitant taxes.

It has been a long-time goal of the government to operate within a budget, and if the nation's taxpayers ever decide they've had enough, the elimination of the abuse of the taxpayer and the squandering of the revenue he supplies could just do a lot to get the nation back in the black.

Too bad about those guys who will lose all their free tickets to any point in the world, and the plush living they have grown accustomed to because they have walked on the working man.

Listen folks and you will harvest,
A tax break compliments of Howard Jarvis.

A man who professes he knows full well,
The tax paying public's getting mad as hell.

'Cause we're fed up with corruption, waste and greed,
And all that government spending we really don't need.

Estate tax, property tax,--that culprit, Internal Revenue,
All clamoring mightily, "I want more tax money from you!"

They come calling each year--whether you're broke or not,
And by golly, they're trying to get everything I've got!

Of my income last year, "Uncle" took fully a third,
I protest sir, this is outrageous,--absurd!

I thought, dear Uncle, this was the land of the free,
Surely, it doesn't all have to be paid for by me!

I never really minded paying my fair share,
But these days it's all going to folks who don't care.

They've no thought for the mess we're in,
So long as their tax-funded salaries get hiked again.

Doesn't seem to matter that the ledger's in the red,
It's a government pastime to spend over our heads!

Washington blows our money faster than we can make it,
And the taxpayer's getting sore, he'll no longer take it.

Uncle's got our shirts, he'll not get our pants too,
Cause we can't give our livelihood to that Infernal Revenue.

We've a right to our property, a right to our homes,
A right to fair taxes on the few things we own.

Imagine paying up without having to say,
"Those doggoned taxes put me in the poor house to stay!"

So, dear Uncle, there's a tax revolt, and now you know why,
It's a simple matter really, the taxpayer's been bled dry!

Really not much different than back in '76,
An oppressed people are again in a fix.

We're long on taxation, short on representation,
And a new revolution may well sweep our nation.

So this time when "Uncle" says, "This tax you owe,"
A lot of us "peons" may simply say, "NO!"

Friona Industries Shows Beef Support

Ken Walser, division manager of Porsch Brothers, division of Friona Industries, has informed The Brand that A.L. Black, chairman of the board of Friona Industries has announced that the firm will present each of its employees with $20 worth of retail beef.

"This action is a demonstration of the belief of Friona Industries that beef remains a good dollar value," Walser explained.

"Employees will be allowed to go to the grocery store and purchase $20 worth of beef of their choice. The employees will return a receipt for the meat purchase to the company and will be reimbursed for the purchase," Walser added.

According to Walser, some 300 Friona Industries employees will be involved in the beef purchase plan.

Walser indicated that other area industries may take similar beef industry support measures in the near future.

District Offering Water Surveys

LUBBOCK — A.W. Gober, President of the High Plains Underground Water Conservation District No. 1, called the plan to survey and report on water quantities for the municipalities in the Water District area "one of the finest services we can perform for our constituents."

Gober made the remark following board discussion of the project at the regular monthly meeting of the District's board of directors in Lubbock.

In outlining the program A.Wayne Wyatt, manager of the water district, used charts, graphs and maps from an actual water supply survey of a town in the district. The survey depicted problems in the future for the unnamed community. Wyatt said that he was withholding the name of the town until he has talked with the community's leaders about their dwindling water supply, which he said could possibly be exhausted as early as 1986 with no more growth in population, or as soon as 1984 with continued expansion.

Wyatt further explained the program by saying that the District would offer this service to any municipality within the fifteen county area it covered. He said that the program would be "Strictly voluntary; they can call on us to help them in their water planning anytime they feel we might be able to lend them assistance or give them some technical advice in this area of expertise."

In other business at the meeting, the directors approve reimbursement of over $2,000 to the Randall County Tax Collector. The reimbursement was made for expenses incurred by the collector's office in collecting and refunding taxes outside the district's boundary. The erroneous collections were made as a result of a misinterpretation of the boundary of the district in the City of Amarillo.

Also approved by the directors was a "special" extension of seven well drilling permits of the City of Lubbock. The seven wells, located in Bailey County, will be completed within a month according to a letter received by the district from Gordon Willis, Superintendent of Water Treatment for the City of Lubbock. The Directors issued the special extension for the six month period allowing ample time for all contingencies and associated works to be completed.

Other items of business before the directors included reviewing and accepting the annual audit of the district; hearing reports on the Lubbock County well inventory and open holes in Lubbock and Hockley County, receiving a progress report on the USGS - Texas Water Development Board contract and on the progress of the district's water quality program.

Don Smith, Assistant Manager of the District, reported to the board on the recent Interagency Task Force Meeting in Amarillo on Irrigation Efficiencies, the Soil and Water Conservation District Meetings resulting from the Resources Conservation Act of 1977 and on a recent meeting with the U.S. Bureau of Reclamation concerning the "Llano Estacado Total Water Management" study.

The next meeting of the directors, which is open to the public, is scheduled for Tuesday, July 11 at 10:00 a.m. in the district offices at 2930 Avenue Q, in Lubbock.

TOWER OF LONDON
WASHINGTON (AP) — Britain's famed Tower of London is 900 years old this year.

The National Geographic Society says the tower is England's most popular tourist attraction — 3 million persons visited it in 1977.

Among the things a visitor can see at the tower are: the crown jewels; a chopping block and axes; dungeons and instruments of torture, and suits of armor.

Work on the tower was begun by William the Conqueror in 1078, 12 years after his invasion of England.

Symposium Planned On Agri-Problems

The Texas Agriculture Experiment Station has announced plans to host a symposium on the economic problems of agriculture, as an outgrowth of well-publicized concerns over the economics of producing agricultural products.

According to Neville P. Clarke, director, the TAES plans to sponsor the symposium jointly with the Agriculture Council of America, the organization which frequently operates a "Farm Hotline" which allows rural Americans to comment on their concerns to political leaders in Washington.

"The major goal of this activity will be the evaluation of a series of policy alternatives which might be considered for future use by federal and state government," Clarke explained.

"Participants in the symposium will primarily be experts in the area of agricultural economics and finance," he added.

Prior to the symposium, five task forces will address some of the major problems currently facing agriculture, including farm commodity prices and income, international agricultural trade, resource allocation and production cost, nutrition and food safety and agriculture's role in government decisions.

Wherever agreement can be reached, consensus statements concerning problems and remedies will be issued.

Results of the task force deliberations will be presented in a national symposium at College Station December 4-6.

"We hope the product of this symposium, which will be published in the form of a symposium proceedings, will offer a benchmark in current national thinking on agricultural policy," Clarke stated.

WHAT BIRD?
SYLVANIA, Ohio (AP) — A child approached Jim Marshall at the public library here and requested a book on "animal birds."

Perplexed, the librarian asked if he wanted a book about birds and animals. The answer was no.

Did he want a book about animals? He did not.

Well, was this book about some special kind of bird? No, the youngster said impatiently, it was a book about Animal Bird, the man who went to the North Pole.

Marshall found him a biography of Admiral Byrd.

Controlling SW Corn Borers Pays Dividends, Says Daniels

AMARILLO — Controlling southwestern corn borers will pay big dividends according to N.E. Daniels, Texas Agricultural Experiment Station entomologist. After four years of research at the USDA Research Center at Bushland, the scientist figures the best control involves both cultural and chemical control. Research shows that plowing corn stubble a month before planting kills most of the larvae and pupae in the field. Rotating corn with other crops or growing corn on fallow land cuts down on borer damage. Adequate irrigation also greatly reduces borer injury. Daniels claims the best insecticide treatment that Texas farmers can use in 1978 is two foliar applications of either granular or liquid Furadan. Treatments should be made about two to three weeks apart starting in late July.

Southwestern corn borers take a big bite out of corn yields. Over a three year period Daniels found that girdled and lodged corn yielded 24 bushels per acre less than unfested corn. Corn that was infested and not lodged yielded 18 bushels per acre less than corn that was not infested with borers. These were 27 and 21 percent decreases in yield. "My research shows that a good corn borer control program will pay big dividends," Daniels said.

The researcher has been determining the effect of tillage and crop rotation on borer development for several years. In 1977 he counted borer larvae, pupae, and adults in a corn field from March through July 15. Part of the field was swept plowed on May 12 and the rest left unplowed. On both fields larvae started changing to pupae after May 12 and a few adults emerged on May 27. By May 31, 70 percent of the pupae developed into adults on the unplowed area. On tilled land only 30 percent of the pupae lived and changed to adults.

Daniels also observed borer infestations on two fields that were side by side. One field was fallow in 1976 and the other had produced corn. In both fields 80 percent of the corn plants were infested with southwestern corn borers. Forty-three percent of the stalks were girdled on fallow land, while 49 percent were girdled where corn had been grown the year before. Difference in lodging between fields was greater. On fallow land only five percent of the plants lodged compared to 17 percent where corn had been grown the year before.

The researcher planted corn for insecticidal research on April 25 at 25,000 plants per acre. The corn was pre-irrigated and watered four times in the growing season. Granular formulations of Furadan and Lorsban at one pound per acre active ingredient applied to corn on July 26 and August 16 were compared to untreated areas. Some areas were treated on both dates with a total of two pounds per acre of the insecticides. At harvest, untreated corn was 67 percent infested, 13 percent lodged, and yielded 93 bushels per acre, with two applications of granular Furadan corn was 17 percent infested with borers, did not lodge and yielded 112 bushels per acre. When two applications of Lorsban were applied, corn yielded 105 bushels per acre. Most of the control came from the July 26 application. After one application of Furadan on that date, corn yielded 107 bushels per acre. Single applications on August 16 did not have much effect on borers or corn yield.

Spray applications of Furadan, Lorsban and Azodrin made at the same two dates gave control equal to granular applications. Two applications of Azodrin gave the best control and reduced borer infestation from 83 to 13 percent. Daniels points out that farmers will have three good insecticides for southwestern corn borer control as soon as the Environmental Protection Agency issues labels for Azodrin and Lorsban. For 1978, two applications of either liquid or granular formulations of Furadan are the most effective insecticidal treatments labeled in Texas. Outside of Texas only the granular formulation of Furadan is labeled. The first application should be made at silking in late July and another two to three weeks later.

In another study, Daniels found that the number of egg masses on corn plants is a poor method of timing insecticide application. On untreated areas in his insecticidal spray studies, the percent of plants infested with eggs varied from 6 to 22 during the period from July 22 to August 25. At the same time percentage of corn stalks with holes from borers increased from 14 to 52. Two sprays of Azodrin controlled borers enough so that only 12 percent of the plants had borer holes by August 25. Daniels speculates that first insecticide treatment should be made when second generation borers start hatching and have invaded no more than one to two percent of the corn plants.

Based on his research, Daniels says, "Corn borer control will pay off with big yield increases." According to the entomologist the first step is a good southwestern corn borer control program is rotating corn with other crops, or growing it on fallow land. If corn is planted on fields that produced corn the previous year, plowing or chiseling to disturb corn crowns should be done before April 1 to kill borers in the larvae and pupae stages. When eggs from second generation borers start hatching and have not invaded more than one or two percent of the corn plants, an application of Furadan should be made. A second application should follow in two to three weeks.

Regional Conferences Set for Small Farmers

WASHINGTON, D.C. — The U.S. Department of Agriculture (USDA) in cooperation with the Community Services Administration (CSA) will co-sponsor five regional conferences on small farms this summer and fall. The joint announcement was made today by Secretary of Agriculture Bob Bergland and Graciela Olivarez, Director of CSA.

The conferences will be designed to:

—Provide small farm operators an opportunity to identify problems that are important to their operations and families.

—Develop priority needs and suggest USDA programs that will benefit small farm operators and their families.

—Identify what small farm operators need, as contrasted with what other farmers need.

The cost of bringing approximately eight small farm delegates from each state to the conference will be shared by USDA and CSA. Representatives of the State Rural Development Committees and CSA will jointly coordinate the selection of delegates in each state.

Sites and dates for the conference are:

Southeast — Montgomery, Alabama, July 25-26.

Midwest — Des Moines, Iowa, August 15-16.

Northwest — La Grande, Oregon, August 23-24.

Northeast — Portland, Maine, August 30-31.

Albuquerque, New Mexico, September 6-7.

In commenting on the upcoming conferences Director Olivarez emphasized, "The Community Services Administration, as the national advocate for the low-income and economically disadvantaged, recognizes the critical need to assist low-income farmers and their families in improving their economic condition and quality of life through resource mobilization, delivery of services and improved access to Federal, state and local services and programs."

Texas Agriculture Ranks Third

AUSTIN — Agriculture Commissioner Reagan V. Brown reports that the latest national statistics show Texas' cash receipts of $6.6 billion for farm goods enabled the state to hold its position as third in the U.S.

"Texas farmers and ranchers were highly productive last year. The volume and inflationary rises pushed the 1977 total above the $6.3 billion for 1976," Brown said. "I want to point out, however, that larger inventories and high costs of fuel and most other inputs meant low returns for many in Texas."

"Our challenge now is to match our marketing know-how to production knowledge," Brown added.

Brown said a number of "firsts" were recorded by the Texas Crop and Livestock Reporting Service, a cooperative unit of the Texas Department of Agriculture and the U.S. Department of Agriculture.

Texas has the most acreage — 139.8 million — devoted to farming and ranching. The number of farms and ranches is highest also with 197,000.

Texas had the largest number of cattle and calves, 14.5 million head by year's end; the most beef cows (6.2 million) and most cattle on feed (1.8 million). More cattle were slaughtered in Texas than in any other state, contributing 5.9 billion pounds to the market. The state was second in the number of calves slaughtered (655,100 head) and third in the number of sheep and lambs slaughtered (980,300 head).

In crops the state was No. 1 in cotton production with 5.5 million bales, in watermelons with 58,000 acres harvested, and fresh spinach from 3,300 harvested acres.

The 21 million pounds of wool and 8 million pounds of mohair from Texas ranked the highest in the nation. The number of sheep (2.46 million) and goats (1.4 million) called for a first ranking also.

LOTS OF PLASTIC

TOLEDO, Ohio (AP) — More than half a billion pounds of fiber glass-reinforced plastics (FRP) will be used in American-made vehicles this year.

Owen's-Corning Fiberglass Corp., a producer of fiber glass reinforcements for plastics, estimates that 541 million pounds of FRP will go into U.S. vehicles in 1978, a gain of 10.5 percent over the expected total for this year and 29.5 percent over the total used in 1976.

Norris Daniels, Texas Agricultural Experiment Station Entomologist from Bushland, makes plans for 1978 corn borer research.

Panhandle Cotton, Sorghum Delayed

COLLEGE STATION, Texas (AP) — Except for a drought east-west strip through Central Texas, the state's agricultural picture remains fairly stable.

The dry corridor starts in the far west and extends to East and Northeast Texas, said Dr. Daniel C. Pfannstiel, director of the Texas Agricultural Extension Service. Grazing conditions are deteriorating fast, hay cuttings are skimpier than usual and field crop growth is slowing. However, livestock are holding up well, and marketing is steady.

Elsewhere in the state, crop prospects continue to brighten due to rains in recent weeks. But they, too, will soon need more moisture. In most places, cotton, corn and sorghum look promising. Melon and grain sorghum harvesting is well under way in the Rio Grande Valley.

Most all peach crop reports describe bountiful production and favorable prices. Reports also are good for pecans, although some areas are suffering insect damage. Small grain yields in northern areas are down because of earlier dry weather.

District Extension agents report the following specific conditions:

PANHANDLE: Soil moisture is adequate. What is reaching maturity and under harvest, corn is progressing, but cotton and sorghum are behind schedule due to late rains and replanting. Sugar beets are doing well, and a second hay cutting is underway. Ranges and pastures are improving rapidly and cattle are in good shape. Markets softened on all classes last week.

SOUTH PLAINS: Ranges and cattle are in good condition, thanks to recent rains. Some old cotton has been damaged by hail and rain, but later cotton is up to a good stand. Sorghum, corn, sugar beets and vegetables are progressing.

ROLLING PLAINS: Soil

moisture is adequate. Earlier dry weather is now causing puny, small grain yields. Much has been grazed out or plowed under. Second hay cuttings continue. Cotton is being planted or replanted for the first to third times. Early sorghum is growing well, and more planting is under way. Pecan and fruit trees show promise, although case bearers are causing problems in pecans. Pastures and cattle are in average to above average condition.

NORTH CENTRAL: Wheat harvest is under way and most yields are good. Cotton is squaring, corn is up to a good stand and grain sorghum is still looking better than usual. Hay making is active. Livestock and pastures and stock tanks are holding up, but more rain will be needed soon.

NORTHEAST: Soil moisture is dry and the weather hot but a fast-finishing first hay cutting is producing good yields and sorghum and corn stands are at least average. Early soybean varieties are blooming, vegetable harvesting is under way and a good peach crop is producing good yields and high prices. The peach crop is still promising. Livestock remain in good condition on good pastures.

FAR WEST: Livestock conditions are favorable, although green grazing is fading fast as hot, dry weather takes its toll. Alfalfa is growing well and there are heavy cuttings. The onion harvest is completed and the cantaloupe harvest is just starting. All fruit and pecans look good. Peaches are the size of silver dollars.

WEST CENTRAL: Soil moisture remains short, which has produced low yields of small grains. Livestock are in fair to excellent shape, but ranges and pastures are going down. Most cotton, corn and sorghums are planted. Peanuts look fair to good, and Gillespie County reports a good peach crop.

CENTRAL: Dry, hot weather is parching crops and pastures throughout the district. Small grain yields are light. However, there is good cotton growth and early grain sorghum is turning red. Peaches and plums are ripening with good yields expected. Heavy infestations of nut casebearer may reduce the pecan crop.

EAST: Short soil moisture is reducing hay yields, and all field crops need rain. Livestock are holding up, but pastures are average to below. Good peanut stands ranged from 2 to 12 inches. Peaches are maturing fast. Vegetable gardens are producing fairly well, but there is heavy insect damage.

Recent rains also have helped pastures, but more is needed. Livestock are in good shape.

SOUTHEAST AND UPPER GULF COST: Scattered rains have helped soil moisture. Colorado County is producing considerable hay. Cotton is forming bolls and is blooming in all areas. Rice is heading, and soybean planting is well under way. Peaches are being harvested throughout the region, while Waller County is well into its melon harvest. Insects are bothering pecan orchards. Pastures are average and livestock are in good condition.

SOUTHWEST: Moisture ranges from short to adequate. The hay harvest continues, the grain harvest is complete, and vegetable and peach harvesting is under way. Range and pasture conditions are improving but will need more rain soon. Livestock are fair, and marketing is active.

COASTAL BEND: Soil moisture is generally adequate. Pastures are average and improving with recent rains. Livestock are fair to good, and the market is normal. Recent showers have helped corn, cotton is fruiting well, rice looks favorable, peanuts are 80 percent planted, hay is growing well and vegetable gardens are producing melons, cucumbers, squash, and tomatoes. Most of the peaches are harvested. Pecans are below average, and there is webworm, casebearer and walnut caterpillar activity.

SOUTH: The Lower Rio Grande Valley has adequate moisture for pastures and dryland crops, but conditions are still dry in the northern and western counties. Melons, pepper and grain sorghum harvesting continues.

Ducks Unlimited Approves $11.1 Million Commitment

CHICAGO — Some 600 delegates from across North America attended Ducks Unlimited's 41st International Convention in Winnipeg, Canada, May 21-25. The convention marked the first time the waterfowl conservation organization has held its annual meeting in Canada, a meeting which this year paid tribute to 40 years of conservation cooperation between Ducks Unlimited and its Canadian construction counterpart, DU (Canada). According to Ducks Unlimited Executive Vice President Dale E. Whitesell, DU's Board of Trustees approved a record $11.1 million (Canadian currency) commitment to be transferred to DU (Canada) during 1978. Whitesell said the funds would be used to tackle a total of 202 projects throughout Canada involving some 300,000 acres of critical wetland breeding habitat (one-third of which will be newly developed). He also announced the commitment of nearly a quarter of a million dollars to be sent to Ducks Unlimited de Mexico (DUMAC) during 1978 for the development of prime wintering waterfowl habitat there.

"The $11.1 million commitment approved by Ducks Unlimited's Board of Trustees," explained Whitesell, "pushes Ducks Unlimited that much further down the road toward the fulfillment of its five-year program announced in 1976. That program, ending in 1981, calls for fund-raising efforts which will produce a total of $68 million to be utilized by DU (Canada) for the restoration and preservation of wetland habitat. This is the largest commitment of its kind in the world today by a private conservation organization."

In addition to the announcement of funds earmarked for wetland habitat restoration in Canada and Mexico during 1978, DU's Board of Trustees elected S. Preston Williams, 59, a trial attorney from Kansas City, Missouri, as Ducks Unlimited's 25th national president. A former chairman of DU's legal committee and longtime national trustee, Williams has served as a member of DU's Executive Committee and on both DU (Canada)'s and Ducks Unlimited de Mexico's Board of Directors. Other top Ducks Unlimited officers elected at the Winnipeg convention include Chairman of the Board Henry J. Nave (1977 DU president), 64, of Pinehurst, North Carolina; Vice Chairman of the Board Chester F. Dolley, 77, of Los Angeles, California; and Executive Committee Chairman Gaylord Donnelley, 68, of Chicago, Illinois.

Newly elected Ducks Unlimited President S. Preston Williams was pleased with what he termed the "conservation spirit" exhibited by DU delegates in Winnipeg. "It's clear to all of us," said Williams, "that $11.1 million is needed by DU (Canada) to develop and improve critical wetland breeding habitat throughout Canada this year. There's no doubt in my mind that our organization has the kind of spirit needed to raise that money during 1978 through our volunteer efforts across the United States. Our constructive convention workshops highlighted how we can work most effectively, including everything from the active role women can play in our conservation efforts to how we can best go about recruiting volunteers who will truly work for DU. It is this kind of volunteer who has enabled Ducks Unlimited to raise over $71 million for waterfowl habitat during the past 40 years."

Meredith Habitat Being Improved

AUSTIN -- A cooperative agreement between the National Park Service and the Texas Parks and Wildlife Department is helping to improve the habitat around Lake Meredith.

Eight projects are being completed by members of the park service and the Young Adult Conservation Corps (YACC) at sites on park land around the lake.

"We have 110 members of the YACC presently repairing recreational facilities, landscaping, fencing native areas and planting trees and shrubs with technical assistance from the P&WD extension biologist Richard DeArment," said Ted Bedwell, camp director.

More than 11,000 plants including Russian olive, honey-suckle bush, buffalo berry and june berry are being placed in areas either devoid of natural wildlife food and cover or areas which show promise as ideal habitat for deer, turkey, quail or other non-game species.

Wildlife Aid Suit Dismissed

AUSTIN -- A lawsuit aimed at preventing the U.S. Fish & Wildlife Service from dispensing any funds under the Federal Aid in Wildlife Restoration Program has been dismissed in federal court, according to the Wildlife Management Institute.

Judge Charles R. Richey of the U.S. District Court for the District of Columbia dismissed the case after the Fish & Wildlife Service and the plaintiffs agreed to a settlement. However, the suit was dismissed without prejudice and may be reopened by either party.

The suit was brought by the Committee for Humane Legislation and Friends of Animals.

The federal aid program is funded by excise taxes on sporting arms and ammunition, handguns and archery equipment. The taxes collected by the federal government are apportioned through the Fish & Wildlife Service to state wildlife agencies for wildlife conservation programs. This year, $62.9 million have been apportioned to the states under the program, which was created by the Pittman-Robertson Act.

Turkey Yearlings Prove Good Nesters

AUSTIN - First-year Rio Grande turkey hens make a significant contribution to turkey production, especially in years of favorable weather conditions, according to a three-year study by the Texas Parks & Wildlife Department now nearing completion.

The yearling hens, in fact, tend to be more persistent than mature hens in their re-nesting attempts once a nest has been destroyed. Program leader Horace Gore said that in the spring of 1977, which was an excellent year weather-wise for turkey nesting, a total of four of nine yearling birds in the study nested, and three of them hatched poults.

The study utilized telemetry devices attached to the birds' backs, and was conducted in Blanco County.

Information to date indicates that as a group both yearlings and adult hens are less successful this year in hatching a brood of poults than last year, and re-nesting attempts are less frequent.

Gore expects most of the Edwards Plateau to be about like the Blanco County study area for turkey production this year -- meaning fair to poor production.

"We had a bumper crop of turkeys hatched last year because of plenty of rain during the winter and very early spring," Gore pointed out. "This year, the Hill Country finally got some rain but it was too late to help the nesting season."

Gore said the three-year investigation revealed some other interesting facts about Rio Grande turkeys in the Edwards Plateau:

--Predation is extremely high on turkey nests, with 50 percent loss not unusual. A hen sometimes will attempt to nest as many as three times if her nest is disturbed or destroyed during a spring nesting season.

--Hens may travel as far as 15 miles from their winter roost in search of a nesting site, covering four to five miles in as many hours without stopping. Hens travel varying distances to nest, but most will return to the same nesting area year after year.

--Hens will sometimes abandon a nest for no apparent reason and some will attempt to nest with little or no cover although most nests are well hidden.

--If the ground is too dry in early spring, a large percentage of the hens will decline to attempt nesting, instead flocking together with other non-nesting hens.

Gore predicted that this fall's turkey hunting season may be reasonably good in most areas because of some carry-over from last year's good production, but the overall population will be lower because of fewer yearling hens.

Gun Club News

An informal practice trap shoot will be conducted by the Hereford Gun Club today at 2 p.m.

The club's trap range is located east of the Hereford Municipal Airport, and visitors are welcome, according to Nancee McClendon, club president.

Afternoon shoots are held at the local club at 2 p.m. on the second and fourth Sundays of each month, and night shoots are held on the first and third Fridays of each month at 8 p.m.

Other local trap shooting is also available in Dimmitt, where activities are held on the first and third Sunday afternoons of each month. The Dimmitt range is located just north of that city at the airport.

Events at the local club may be confirmed in the event of inclement weather by calling 364-6497.

Take all of the unpleasant things you've ever known about banks. And forget them. Forget that you've ever felt uncomfortable asking for a loan. Forget that you've ever had to wait in a long line to make a transaction. Forget that banks are cold buildings that lock your money up in a safe. Forget all of that!

Now... think about what you'd like your bank to be. And think about how you'd like to feel when you visit it.

Think about how you'd like to be treated by the people who work for your bank. The way you'd like to be treated as a person and not just another customer.

Think about the trust you put into your bank. How much you depend on it when you need assistance. And why it's so important to have faith in the people who run it.

Refuge Manager Knows Water Is Critical

Buffalo Lake's a Playground Again; Wynn Looks to Make the Most of It

BY JIM STEIERT
Outdoors Editor

UMBARGER - Larry Wynn, acting manager of the Buffalo Lake National Wildlife Refuge here, is a man looking to make the most of what he has while he's got it.

What Wynn has is 8,000 acre feet, or 1,200 surface acres of water in this too-long dry water hole that was once a thriving recreation area for boaters, water skiers and fishermen.... And Wynn is just realistic enough to admit that the flood rejuvenated lake probably won't stay that way for very long this time around either... Buffalo has a tragic history of going dry.

In nearly a decade of working at Buffalo Lake, Wynn has never seen the likes of the water now present in the basin of this drought-starved impoundment. Buffalo is a lake again, with water backed up some five miles from the dam. It stands 17 feet deep at the dam, about 10 feet deep at midpoint, and four feet in depth on the shallow end near the Tierra Blanca Creek, that in past decades of more abundant moisture, helped keep life flowing into Buffalo.

Not since 1973, when the lake caught 1,500 acre feet, has the lake held such a volume of water, and not since a brief resurgence of fishing activity at that time has the lake sparked such interest among Panhandle residents.

Now, Wynn, who is fully aware of the fickle tendencies of Mother Nature, particularly where a lake that depends solely on rainfall for its water is concerned, faces the task of making maximum use of a resource while it is available, knowing that the lake may be around for only a couple of years if sufficient rainfall isn't received along its watershed.

Wynn began work at Buffalo Lake on a part-time basis in 1969, while attending West Texas State University.

He stepped into the acting manager's role in December of last year when Paul Ferguson, who had served as refuge manager since 1968, departed to take up similar duties at the Santee refuge in South Carolina.

Now, Wynn says that the biggest task facing him is making the lake available to controlled public use.

"I have a feeling we may tend to get overrun this summer," Wynn smiled as he eased back in his chair at the refuge office. "I really expect a big summer now. The public is really glad to see a lake out here again. Buffalo is kind of attractive. There are a lot more trees and good picnic areas than most lakes have, and it's much closer to home for many Panhandle folks than a lot of other lakes. Most of the time, you've got to drive at least 100 miles to even find a lake in this area," he added.

Water from late May rains had hardly flowed into Buffalo before Interior Department authorities, apparently aware of the pressing need for recreational facilities in this area, sent Wynn word to get the lake functioning in that capacity again.

And the soft-spoken Wynn has moved quickly to carry out the order.

He contacted the Department of Water Resources, and a subsequent check of the lake's water revealed "it's in good shape."

Hardly had an okay on the water been received before boats were allowed on the lake for the first time in many years.

"We're open to boating and skiing for now. We have three boat ramps available for launching at this time," Wynn reported. He estimated 20 boats were on the lake last weekend.

While boating was a popular pastime on Buffalo Lake in its finest years, the lake was perhaps best known for outstanding sport fishing.

Wynn is working now to rebuild the fishing resource, but he explains that it will be at least a year before angling can resume at Buffalo, and for now, the lake is closed to all fishing.

Restoration of fishing at Buffalo got a boost from the Texas Parks and Wildlife Dept. recently when 5,000 largemouth black bass fingerlings were delivered to the lake from the TP&WD's Dundee fish hatchery.

"We didn't even know the fish were coming. They just showed up with them in a pickup one day, but we were sure glad to get them," Wynn explained.

Further fish stocking efforts have been carried out by Wynn and a fellow employee at the refuge, who rigged up their own fish transport truck with the aid of an Umbarger catfish farm.

Wynn managed to live trap and transport some 200 crappie and perch from Lake Greenbelt, and hopes to make another haul if he gets the time.

"We really need some catfish right now, but we're kind of at a disadvantage. We got rain so late that the fish from most of the hatcheries were already committed to other areas, and now we're just having to scour the countryside for what we can get," he related.

Wynn has high hopes for the fishing resource at the lake, but while the public is waiting, he points out that visitors can enjoy the 100 or so picnic areas at lakeside.

"We've already had an increase in picnicking and overnight camping. I think the word is just now starting to get around that we are open again, and we're probably getting a few Palo Duro Canyon visitors, because they're still busy repairing that park from flood damage," Wynn opined.

Among the bird life pictured is a golden eagle at top, which is an endangered species in many portions of the country, but which inhabits the refuge in good numbers. Various species of waterfowl and shorebirds also frequent the refuge. Although water recreation activities are being resumed at the nearby lake this summer, the emphasis at Buffalo is still on wildlife. (Brand photo by Jim Steiert)

Buffalo Lake

According to Wynn, no fee system is in effect at Buffalo at this time, but use fees will probably be reinstated soon.

Even though the presence of a meaningful body of water lends an air of optimism to Buffalo Lake once again, Wynn explains that one of his biggest problems at this time is the fact that he is extremely short-handed at a time when there is much work to be done to get the refuge in shape to receive a large-scale influx of visitors.

"When I started work out here, there were 20 employees. With transfers, cutbacks and other factors, there's only two of us now, and we can't keep things up the way they should be. We lost a lot of fences and roads in the May 26 flood, and between doing repair work, opening public restrooms, getting trees trimmed and mowing done, there's just not enough manpower to go around right now. Then too, we're going to be in the law enforcement business again, with large numbers of people coming out here," he explained.

Seeking some relief from the manpower shortage, Wynn has filed a request for five workers from the Young Adult Conservation Corps, but explains that the lack of water in the lake in previous years has hurt the chances of obtaining this help.

Manpower shortages aren't the only problems confronting Wynn either.

Although more than $1 million in improvement funds from the Bicentennial Land Heritage Program have been allocated for Buffalo, Wynn reports that now, the refuge will not see the money until at least 1982, if at all.

The funds had been earmarked for improving the dam, as well as for establishing solar-powered wells on the southern end of the lake to provide a source of water for ducks and geese which winter there each year.

While attention at Buffalo has been transfixed, at least for the moment, to water recreation, Wynn hasn't forgotten the primary function of the area--serving as a refuge for a diverse variety of wildlife.

The 7,664 acre refuge is home to mule deer, pheasant, quail, coyotes and other wildlife species, in addition to serving as a wintering area for thousands of ducks and geese each year.

The focus on wildlife has been the major visitor drawing card in recent years when the lake was without water, as numerous visitors have taken advantage of opportunities to observe and photograph wildlife species in their native habitat.

According to Wynn, the emphasis will remain on wildlife at Buffalo, even with a favorable lake level, and measures may eventually be taken to limit boat motor horsepower.

The southern end of the lake is closed to boat and vehicle traffic during the winter months to avoid disturbing waterfowl.

With banding of migratory waterfowl a predominant activity at Buffalo in winter months, Wynn explained that waterfowl photography blinds might be reinstated for the public at the lake this winter.

Wynn, who trains quarterhorses and hunting dogs in his spare time, expects ducks and geese to winter on Buffalo in far greater numbers this winter than in years past, when the water level was nil.

For the moment, at least, Wynn feels that the virtually deserted days of Buffalo Lake are over, and he'll enjoy the renewed attention the public gives the area.

But that old, nagging problem of a lack of water is still hanging in the back of his mind.

"There was talk at one time of

It's Boatable

Two boating enthusiasts try out the "new" waters of Buffalo Lake, after the impoundment recently got the O.K. from officials of the Department of Water Resources. The lake is currently open to boating and water skiing, in addition to camping and other activities, but fishing will remain closed for at least a year as an effort is made to establish a catchable population of various panfish species. In its heyday, the nearby lake was a hotbed of boating, skiing and fishing activity for much of the Panhandle. [Brand photo by Jim Steiert] running a pipeline from Lake Meredith over here to supply water, but that's impractical when you look at all of the towns that get their water supply from Meredith. There had also been talk of conducting an underground water survey on the southern end of the lake for the purpose of drilling wells there. But wells would supply only enough water for a waterfowl lagoon at best," said Wynn. "If we don't get any more runoff, we should probably hold some water here for about three years, before it gets so bad we would have to abandon water contact sports and leave the water strictly for the ducks and geese. Of course, sufficient rainfall would change all that, but we have to have a three or four inch rain all along the watershed above the lake in the Clovis, Hereford and Friona vicinities to get any run-in here. Maybe the weather is changing, maybe we'll start getting more rain each year. But, it looks inevitable that the lake will eventually deteriorate again, unless we get good rainfall or find an alternate water source," Wynn stated.

"For now, we'll just enjoy what we have and try to help the public get the most benefit from it," he concluded.

Public Views Sought On Recreation Plan

AUSTIN -- Public agencies, organizations and individual citizens will be receiving questionnaires in the next few weeks asking for their opinions on the state's outdoor recreation problems, issues and needs.

The Comprehensive Planning Branch of the Texas Parks & Wildlife Department stresses that response to the questionnaires from the public is a vital part of formulating the 1980 Texas Outdoor Recreation Plan (TORP).

Charles Branton, branch head, said the TORP guides the expenditure of federal, state and local government funds as well as money from private enterprise in providing parks and recreation areas throughout Texas.

Since 1965, the plan has guided the expenditure of $144 million for acquiring and developing over 500 parks in

Warden's Job Bizarre

AUSTIN -- Game Warden Mike Hutchison of Georgetown feels like a marked man.

He doesn't know what kind of craziness each new day will bring. He also took it in stride a few days later when he helped investigate a creek poisoning incident in which a group of fish poachers overdid their rotenone application and killed $12,000 worth of fish in nearby Brushy Creek.

So, Hutchison probably felt things were about par when a routine check of a stalled car turned into a high-speed chase, a heated footrace and eventual arrest of a juvenile equipped with a pocketful of illegal drugs.

The most recent incident occurred just outside Georgetown when Hutchison noticed a car being freed from a guard rail by a young man and two helpers. The warden drove up to the scene just to find out the cause of the accident, but as he approached the youth jumped into the freed car and roared off in a cloud of smoke. Hutchison gave chase down Farm Road 1331 for several miles until the suspect's car spun off the road and crashed into a ditch. The suspect hit the ground running, but the warden overtook him and made the arrest. The young man faced charges which included possession of marijuana, no driver's license, evading arrest and perhaps a car theft.

View From The Plains

BY J. D. PEER

WATER FATALITIES INCREASE

LUBBOCK -- A total of 11 water fatalities have been filed by the Texas Parks and Wildlife Department in the Texas Panhandle and on the South Plains since the middle of April.

Swimming and fishing accounted for six of the victims with the high flood waters near Canyon accounting for three more of the victims. All of the persons except one were either under 25 years of age or over 60 years of age.

According to records, drowning is a major cause of accidental death in the United States. It occurs in swimming, diving, boating, and other water related activities. Drownings can also occur in the home -- in pools, bathtubs, and washtubs -- and in water that is only a few inches deep.

Drowning may occur under a number of circumstances. In some cases, people die in the water from a heart attack, a stroke, or overexertion. Fainting and epileptic attacks occur in water, just as they do on land and loss of consciousness itself may result in accidental death.

Cramps in the muscles of the hand, foot, calf, thigh, or abdominal wall may incapacitate a swimmer completely because of pain and fright. Many swimmers drown due to inability to judge the distance to shore and their swimming limitations.

The P&WD reminds everyone enjoying the Texas summer that accidents can happen anywhere at anytime and close attention should be paid to youngsters wading, swimming, or boating while on a picnic or vacation.

The use of a life preserver (personal flotation device) is required of all persons 12 years of age and younger while the boat is underway in Texas. The best safety tip is to require your young passenger to wear the preserver at all times.

FISHING REPORT

Lake Baylor -- The lake caught over five feet of water from recent rains and boats can now be launched at the boat ramps. Many bass have been caught in the one-to-six pound class. The largest this year has been an eight pounder. Channel catfish have been biting fair and crappie fishing is good. The water is clear.

Lake Theo -- The lake has caught water and plenty of fishermen have been giving it a try. Fishing is fair for largemouth bass and catfish.

Lake Pauline -- The lake is only one foot from the spillway level and in good condition. Fishing for channel catfish has been very good with many caught in the two-to-four pound class with several up to eight pounds. Bass fishing has been good for fish up to five pounds.

Lake Marvin -- The water is overflowing the spillway and the lake is clear. Fishing has been good for spawning sunfish and small bass. Catfish are biting slow.

Rita Blanca -- The lake is up 3 1/2 feet and is muddy. Fishing for bass is very good. Most bass weight near three pounds with a few at the five-pound mark. Channel catfish are biting fair, but bullheads are biting good.

McClellan -- The lake is near spillway level and muddy. Channel catfish are biting good with some weighing six-to-nine pounds. Fishing for largemouth bass is improving. Bass to 3 1/2 pounds were caught last week. Several striped bass hybrids were caught. Crappie fishing has slowed since the rains. Both boat ramps can now be used.

Greenbelt -- The lake is up 3 1/2 feet and near the 1976 level. Some of all species are being caught including a 15 pound northern pike. Bass fishing is good with one limit including a 6 1/2 pounder. Three bass in the eight pound class have been caught this year. Walleye fishing is good as some are caught while trolling for white bass. White bass fishing is excellent. Crappie fishing is slow, but some have been weighting up to two pounds.

Copper Breaks -- The lake is one foot from spillway. Fishing is good for small bass and channel catfish. Bass averaging about 1/2 pound along with similar sized catfish. Fishing for bullheads is good.

Mackenzie -- The lake depth is 99.2 feet and covers 400 acres. Water temp. is 72 degrees F. at 6 feet. The lake is muddy. Crappie are biting with good strings being taken. Nice channel catfish are being caught in the upper end of the lake. Fishing for largemouth, smallmouth bass and walleye has slowed due to muddy water.

Lake Meredith -- The lake is at the 86-foot level. A creel census conducted on June 4 showed that walleye, white bass, and white crappie are biting well. Largemouth and smallmouth bass fishing has slowed. Some excellent blue and channel catfish have been caught with one individual catching 10 fish averaging 26 pounds and caught on rod-and-reel.

CONSTITUTION NORTHAMPTON, Mass.

(AP) -- Donald Robinson, associate professor of government at Smith College, has been named director of a $1 million, 10-year study of the U.S. Constitution.

He will conduct the study, co-sponsored by the American Historical Association and the American Political Science Association, with initial funding of $240,000 from the Andrew W. Mellon Foundation of New York.

The study will address the question of whether the document is still appropriate for a nation that has changed so rapidly in the past 200 years, Robinson said.

It is expected to culminate in 1988, the bicentennial of the adoption of the Constitution.

Bass Clubs Striving To Improve Lakes

AUSTIN -- Bass clubs often unfairly get the blame when fishing hits the skids.

Many fishermen feel that bass tournaments put too much pressure on heavily-fished lakes. On the other hand, biologists generally believe that poor bass fishing often results from lack of habitat and other environmental factors.

One certainty is that more and more bass clubs are beginning to make changes in an effort to preserve the resource. A host of tournament rule changes are being established to return more bass to the water alive. Bass clubbers in Lufkin and Nacogdoches are operating "nursery coves" to raise Florida bass fry in Sam Rayburn Reservoir.

Yet another growing movement among bass clubs is the "adopt a lake" concept, where local clubs cooperate with the Texas Parks and Wildlife Department and local governmental authorities in installation of artificial "fish attractor" reefs to improve fishing.

The most recent project of this type involved the City of Arlington, the Arlington Bass Club and the department. Some 1,500 old automobile tires bound together have been placed at two locations in Lake Arlington which is located between Arlington and Fort Worth.

"One site is near the boat ramp on Arkansas Lane and the other is across the lake near the discharge," said Kirby Gholson, the department's coordinator of fish attractor projects. "The City of Arlington recently purchased buoys to mark the locations, and they will be installed soon."

Old automobile tires are ideal as artificial reefs because they start a natural food chain. Algae will grow on the tires and attract small, plant-eating fish. Crappie, bass and other game fish will be attracted to the area because of food and cover.

At Lake Bonham, some 1,000 old automobile tires were placed at four locations by P&WD and the City of Bonham. "Until buoys are installed, fishermen should ask the lake officer for directions to the sites," said Steve Smith, P&WD biologist.

An interested group is needed to sponsor a fish attractor project on Lake Fork, a soon-to-be-impounded reservoir west of Quitman.

"The Sabine River Authority had already secured many old tires for this project," Smith said.

New Fee Schedule Set for State Parks

AUSTIN -- Visitors to Texas' state parks will have to pay higher fees for use of most facilities after Aug. 31.

In a public meeting here May 31, the Texas Parks and Wildlife Commission authorized establishment of a new day use fee and raised user fees for cabins, lodges, campsites and the like. Annual park entrance permits also were increased in price.

The commission raised annual entrance permits from $12 to $15 and raised "restricted" permits from $5 to $8. Senior citizens and veterans with a 60 percent or more disability will continue to be exempt from entrance fees. This was the first increase in entrance fees since their initiation in 1968.

Day users of parks will be required to pay a $1 fee in addition to established daily, annual or restricted annual entrance fees or parkland passports. The fee will not apply to overnight users who pay the camping charge.

The new camping fees range from $3 to $6.50 per site, depending on the services provided. Each site is designed to accommodate not more than eight persons with a combination of cars and trailers not to exceed two. Vehicles in excess of those authorized at a campsite must be parked in areas designated for surplus vehicles, in which case a fee of $1 per vehicle per night will be charged in addition to the required camping fee.

Parks Division Director Paul Schlimper told the commission that many state park systems nationwide attempt to recover approximately 50 percent of the cost of operation and maintenance of the park system through fees. Currently, Texas is recovering approximately 31 percent from these sources, Schlimper said. The increased revenue should assist in relieving additional demands for funds from state taxes for the operation and maintenance of the park system.

Schlimper told the commission that the disparity would have to be remedied by fees other than entrance fees, since entrance fee monies are dedicated to the retirement of park acquisition and development bonds.

Fees for campsites now will be $3 rather than $2 per site. Campsites with electricity will be $4 instead of $3 per site.

Similar increases are authorized for group camps, screened shelters, open shelters, group day picnic sites, cabins, lodges, barracks and dining halls.

Gulf Visitors Reminded: Use Caution on Beaches

ABSTIN — As summer gets underway, increasing numbers of people head for Gulf beaches. While there's no better place for fun and relaxation, the Texas Parks and Wildlife Department reminds there's also some need for caution, not only in the matter of water safety but from certain inhospitable creatures.

The Portuguese man-o-war is the main adversary swimmers and surfers should be on guard against. This jellyfish is composed of a beautiful blue float or bladder and a colony of minute animals. Long, transparent tentacles, extending several feet underwater from the bladder contain thousands of stinging cells called nematocysts. Anyone contacting them will suffer intense localized pain and fiery welts.

Protect hands with a glove or towel to remove any clinging tentacles. Severe stings need quick medical attention; they can result in stomach cramps, nausea, dizziness, pain in groin and lymph nodes, difficult breathing and serious allergic reactions. Lesser cases can be treated by splashing rubbing alcohol over the inflamed area, then applying an ice pack or rubbing meat tenderizer onto the skin.

People should avoid waters where the jellyfish are floating and children should be warned not to touch the pretty blue "balloons." Even when the animals are beached and die, the tentacles can be dangerous for a long time.

The diamond-shaped stingaree or sting ray is another beach hazard. It covers itself in sand or mud and is hard to detect even in clear water. Its weapon is a sharp barb at the base of its long, slender tail, which inflicts excruciating pain and immediate swelling of the affected area and lymph nodes. Usually injuries come from stepping on the undetected ray, which when agitated thrashes its tail from side to side. Experienced wade fishermen slide their feet gently, then when pushed a sting ray usually will swim away.

Any puncture wound from this animal should be treated promptly by a doctor; barb material not removed can cause severe infection.

Another pest is the stinging jellyfish, smaller than the man-o-war and without a float, but with long tentacles equipped with stinging cells. Its base is dome-shaped and it swims feebly just below the surface. Its sting causes a painful burning which subsides in an hour or so. The affected area should be cleaned and antiseptic applied.

Catfish spines can cause painful wounds and treatment should include a tetanus shot and antibiotics to prevent infection. These fish can be dangerous if discarded by fishermen on a beach.

Beachcombers browsing among driftwood and other debris should keep an eye out for scorpions, as well as snakes and spiders that could be poisonous. Poking with a stick rather than using bare hands is a wise precaution.

Although there are some dangers to watch out for on the coast, this should not discourage anyone from enjoying its outstanding recreational opportunities. It's just a good idea to be able to recognize the hazards and to know what to do in case of such encounters.

Hundreds of mushroom species are edible but only a few are eaten regularly. Agaricus bisporus is the principal mushroom of commerce in Europe and America.

We visited Buffalo Lake over at Umbarger late last week and while looking at the water gauge near the dam with Refuge Manager Larry Wynn, were reminded of days that don't seem all that many years ago when the water level was well up on the dam and the rocks on the face of that structure were lined with folks dunking bait and hauling in catfish, bass and crappie.

In its best days, Buffalo always seemed to have the personality of a more-or-less informal lake. Someplace you could stop off and wet a line for a couple of hours on the way home from Amarillo or something like that.

And of course, the numerous trees lining the lake always made its picnic areas attractive.

There are plenty of lakes bigger than little Buffalo, and a whole lot longer on water than this place has been lately, but how many nice, shady picnic areas do you find around them?

Then, too, how many lakes are as close to home as Buffalo was back in the 50's and 60's when you could throw the fishing gear and a picnic basket in the old jalopy and be at the lake hauling in catfish in an hour?

Yep, all that new water the heavy rains back in May put in Buffalo kind of stir up the nostalgic side of a lot of folks hereabouts, and with good reason. The old lake was a playground for this whole end of the state.

Maybe we can get our hopes up a little with several feet of water standing in the lakebed, but modern irrigation and weather being what they are, there's no indication that Buffalo will soon be getting enough runoff even to maintain its present level.

The creek just doesn't flow any more...No spring water, and everybody knows how rain is in this part of the world.

Rainfall in sufficient quantity to replenish the lake each spring or fall would really be nice, and of course, the weather may change and bless us with this gift.

But past history being what it is, Buffalo is trapped in the natural cycle for many of our lakes in this area, and water in the abundance now present in Buffalo is a rare thing.

For now, we'll take what this lake can give us. Maybe in a year, we'll even be lucky enough to catch some fish out of that hole.

And even though the geese may abandon some of the playa lakes around here for the relative safety of his expanses this fall and winter, we'll call it a fair trade I guess, and we'll be as happy as the next guy if rains sufficient to sustain the lake should happen to fall.

After years of watching the lake blow away in dust storms, it has to do people's hearts good to see so much water standing again in a place that was the source of so much fun for so many.

... The Magic Triangle Ducks Unlimited chapter continues to make progress.

During the past week, area media, including KPAN radio of Hereford, KDHN radio in Dimmitt, the Castro County News in Dimmitt, and the Friona Star in Friona ran promotions for this organization, and we appreciate this assistance.

We also received responses from two more individuals indicating their desire to help get a chapter fund raising project going, and those of you who did respond will be contacted soon concerning chapter plans.

And while speaking of response, the local chapter, although not formally organized yet, has already raised $100 for waterfowl habitat preservation in just about two weeks.

Looks to me like there will be a DU banquet in Hereford before too long!

... More than 95 million Americans participated in some wildlife-related activity in 1975, and the number is still growing, according to the results of a nationwide survey recently released by the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service.

The 1975 survey has been labeled as "one of the most comprehensive ever undertaken."

Similar surveys have been conducted every five years since 1955, but for the first time in the history of such surveys, the 1975 survey included attempts at assessing wildlife activities of those who do not hunt or fish—so called "nonconsumptive users."

The two-phase study took place over two years and included a telephone questionnaire of the general populace with a second mail questionnaire of only hunters and fishermen.

The survey showed that fishing was the largest category of wildlife-related activity, with almost 54 million people engaged in the activity.

Hunting activity in 1975 for persons 9 years and older included 20.5 million persons.

Wildlife photography was a pastime for 14 million people, and other activities measured included clamming, crabbing, shell collecting, recreational shooting and archery.

Hunters and fishermen were among the largest investors in wildlife activities.

Hunters invested $5.8 billion for an average of $284 per hunter, and fishermen spent an estimated $15.2 billion, for an average of $282 per angler.

Much of the money spent on hunting and fishing was channeled back into wildlife conservation activities through special excise taxes on hunting and fishing equipment.

Copies of the National Hunting, Fishing, and Wildlife Recreation Associated Survey can be purchased from the Superintendent of Documents, U.S. Government Printing Office, Washington, D.C. 20420. The order number is 924-010-00441-0. Price of the survey is $3.

Between 1972 and 1977, more bicycles were shipped and imported into the American market place than passenger cars, according to statistics compiled by the Bicycle Manufacturers Association. It says the total bicycle shipments during that period reached 68.1 million, compared with 66.1 million autos.

A study released in Amsterdam shows there were 9.5 million bicycles in use among the 13.9 million population in the Netherlands. It also showed that 42 percent of Dutch people between 15 and 74 ride a bike almost daily.

Bass Outlook Better For Lake Braunig

AUSTIN -- Texas Parks and Wildlife Department fisheries biologists learned two things about Lake Victor Braunig after a cove rotenone survey there recently -- and both have to be good news for fishermen.

The first wasn't that great a surprise. The powerplant lake near San Antonio has a tremendous population of forage fish which will be excellent food for the Nile perch from Africa which may be stocked later this year.

The second was definitely a surprise. The presence of a strong population of four-inch-long largemouth black bass makes it virtually certain there was a natural spawn this spring, in the opinion of biologist Jimmy Dean of San Antonio.

If the bass indeed spawned, it marks the end of a long era of infertility for the Braunig population. For the past 10 years, spawning efforts in the lake have been repressed by something in the water, although bass stocked in the lake as fingerlings traditionally have shown good growth rates.

The cove sampling yielded a strong 31.5 pounds of bass per acre, but the dominant species was tilapia, which tipped the scales at 351.9 pounds per acre.

The majority of tilapia was under three inches in length, which means both bass and Nile perch will have plenty to eat.

Threadfin shad also were present in good numbers, constituting a second forage species for the exotics.

The other dominant species of fish in the sampling was channel catfish, at a whopping 127.9 pounds per acre.

Tilapia are an Asian import which in Texas survives best in the warm waters of powerplant discharge lakes. They spawn prolifically on muddy lake bottoms and tend to overpopulate, but they should be made to order for large predators such as the Nile perch, Dean said.

In addition to Braunig, Nile perch also are to be stocked in Alcoa Lake near Rockdale, Peacock bass, a South American species which has a need for warm water similar to that of Nile perch, will be placed in Alcoa and in Lake Bastrop near Bastrop.

Both species will be studied for up to five years to determine their contributions to the sport fishery and their impact on other fish in the heated reservoirs.

OLD TRUCK
REYNOLDSBURG, Ohio (AP) -- Floyd Powell was only 11 years old when his father sold the family's 1930 Model AA Ford in 1945, but he remembered the truck so well that he was able to pick it out at an antique auto flea market in Indianapolis last summer.

"When I walked around the rear of it and saw the way the tailgate was constructed, I thought, 'This is it,'" he said.

His father, who died several years ago, bought the truck in 1938. It had been used as a school bus, so a new cab had to be mounted on the chassis. Powell's father and grandfather then went to a sawmill, got some wood, and built a 12-foot bed on the back to haul farm produce to market.

The grain bed is still intact, including the custom tailgate they fashioned for emptying grain.

Powell, a production supervisor for an industrial machinery manufacturer, says he plans to restore the old truck.

STATE RECORD DRUM -- Larry D. King of Wichita Falls was surprised recently when he landed this 31-pound freshwater drum (gaspergou) at Lake Arrowhead while bass fishing. The fish, caught on an artificial lure and 14-pound test line, beats the old record held by Larry Joe Thomas of Bedford by more than five pounds. The record was certified by the State Fish Records Committee of the Texas Parks & Wildlife Department.

Missionary Clears Conscience

AUSTIN -- A conscience-stricken American now living in Thailand has sent the Texas Parks and Wildlife Department a $100 check to cover a dove hunting law violation he committed in 1970.

The man, a missionary, said that it was "with much embarrassment but also with much relief" that he sent the money for shooting more than his limit of doves.

Department Law Enforcement Director Dexter Harris returned the man's check along with a letter commending his honesty and explaining that the statute of limitations had run out. Therefore, the law would not permit the department to keep the money.

Harris' letter went on to say, "We (the department) feel you have certainly paid for your crime by the guilt you carried in your conscience for the last eight years. I would only suggest that if you still feel the need to pay the $100, it be spent in your missionary work as the good it will do there will not only enhance the conservation of wildlife resources, but of mankind."

In his letter, the missionary said he greatly appreciates the way game has been preserved in Texas. "Here in Thailand they have good laws but people don't obey them," he wrote. "In the years I have been here I have seen the tragic slaughter of all types of animals. There are few birds of any type left in the forests compared to what it was. Big game is very scarce. I cannot bear to hunt here because there are so few animals left. What I see here makes me want to support your

RAILS ARE SUBJECT OF MUSEUM EXHIBIT
NEW YORK (AP) -- The family of birds known as the Rallidae, popularly called rails, an elusive group of birds given to forming colonies on remote islands and in the darkest of jungles, are the subject of a new exhibit at the American Museum of Natural History here.

"Rails of the World: Paintings by J. Fenwick Landowne," is a collection of watercolors scheduled to be on view at the museum through July 15.

Excessive Regulations Hitting Cotton

An excess of government regulations hangs like an albatross around the collective necks of people who make up the cotton industry these days.

In fact, a National Cotton Council economist says cotton's outlook depends as much on its ability to cope with regulations as to compete with man-made fibers in price and performance. "In an effort to comply with federal regulations, the cotton industry is spending more and more of its research dollars to develop qualities the government wants rather than those the consumer wants," says Gaylon Booker, assistant director of the Council's economic and market research division. He cites flammability and cotton dust as the two areas where regulatory impact is most severe.

Jack G. Stone, a Stratford, Calif., producer, who is chairman of the Council's board of directors, also notes that regulations are denying farmers access to needed chemicals and discouraging the research necessary to develop new and better ones.

He says the Council's major approach in dealing with the various federal agencies who make the regulations is to present factual and well-documented information that points up the need for considering costs along with benefits of proposed rules.

But he points out that the federal agencies have mandates from Congress.

"The only way we can help to bring some reason into the regulatory process is going to have to be through the Congress and through the Administration in power."

"Clearly, the time has come for all cotton industry people to get more heavily involved in the political process," Stone said. "We had to play 'catch-up' in research and market development for many years, and we may have to do the same thing in politics, too, if we are to survive."

Smart Shopping Can Save Dollars at Meat Counter

AUSTIN—Despite rising prices, smart shopping can turn up excellent buys at the meat counter, Agriculture Commissioner Reagan V. Brown notes.

"Many of the best values can be found in the less tender cuts of beef, which comprise about 66 per cent of the carcass," Brown said. "A major Texas daily newspaper recently advertised bone-in chuck roasts and steaks at prices ranging from 99 cents to $1.19 per pound."

According to figures from the U. S. Department of Agriculture, Americans consumed 154.8 pounds of meat per capita in 1977, Brown pointed out. Of this, 93.2 pounds were beef.

"Obviously, the American people are beef eaters," he said. "They can continue to be, and at reasonable costs, if they'll take the time to cook cuts that take a little more preparation."

Cuts from the chuck and round come from motivating muscles in the shoulder and rump, those that do most of the work. That is why an arm pot roast is less tender than a rib-eye which is cut from a sustaining muscle, one that does not get much exercise. This is also why pot roast takes longer, moister cooking to yield a savory meal.

The best buys in terms of price usually come from the chuck or shoulder, which is around 26 per cent of the carcass. Except for hamburger, however, much of what comes from the chuck contains bone. Therefore, shoppers may get a better deal by figuring price per serving instead of cost per pound.

Recipe from Ole Virginia BRUNSWICK STEW

"First catch your chicken, clean and cut them,
 And in an iron pot you put:
 And water nearly to the top,
 And in it salt and pepper drop;
 Boil slowly. Your tomatoes peel;
 Put a shin or so of veal;
 And for a flavor bear in mind,
 A chunk of middling with the rind;
 Next some onions you throw in,
 The young and tender skin,
 And butter beans do not forget;
 And what is more important yet,
 The corn; Do not be too fast,
 This you cut and add at last;
 For better than the flour you'll find it will do,
 To give a thickness to the stew.
 Some lemon peel cut very thin
 May now be added and stirred in;
 And ere it is taken from the fire,
 Give a dash of Worcestershire sauce
 And soon you will hear its praises ring,
 This is a dish fit for a king."

SATURDAY NIGHT PIZZA

Dough for 2 pizza's.
 3 c. flour
 1 T. sugar
 2 tsp. salt
 1 pkg. dry yeast
 1 c. very hot tap water
 2 T. vegetable oil
 In large bowl mix the ingredients except the flour. Add the flour a cup at a time and mix well. Turn out of bowl and knead until smooth. Return to bowl and let rise for 45 minutes. Punch down dough and divide in 1/2. Press each 1/2 into a 10 x 15 1/2 greased cookie sheet that has sides on it.
 Filling:
 1 can pizza sauce mix (10 1/2 oz.)
 1 pound sausage
 1/2 c. sliced stuffed olives
 1 1/2 c. grated Mozzarella cheese
 Parmesan cheese

Spread 1/2 of can of sauce on each pizza. Sprinkle on 1/2 of cooked drained sausage, 1/4 c. olives and 1/4 c. grated cheese on each pizza. Sprinkle Parmesan cheese over both pizzas liberally.

Bake at 425 degrees for about 45 minutes. The pizzas must be watched closely and moved around in the oven so that the filling will get done before the crust burns. You may need to adjust your oven temperature up or down to achieve this. When ready to serve I usually cut the pizzas in 2" squares with a sissors. Any left overs are very good if heated up the next day.

JERKY [BEEF OR VENISON]

Easy to Make at Home

"One reason the West was so Tough"

Cut beef (or venison) into thin strips - about one-fourth inch, at most. This is easiest if the meat has been frozen and is partially frozen when sliced.

Place strips in glass pan. Using a basting brush, garnish them with liquid smoke. It is the most important ingredient. After one layer has been placed in dish, season with seasoning salt (with a little sugar, pepper, and regular salt). (You may experiment after you have made your first batch.) Place four layers of meat seasoned in pan crosswise and crisscrossed. Let stand at least 4 hours, or overnight in the refrigerator.

Place strips on oven rack (not in a pan and not touching each other) and leave in oven overnight or 8 to 12 hours at 150 degrees F. On a gas oven, the pilot light will usually furnish this much heat. On an electric oven, if the temperature range starts at 200 degrees set it at that and leave the door slightly open.

After the drying process is completed, store jerky in glass jars. Put aluminum foil in bottom of oven. In the summer you may want to refrigerate your jerky until eaten.

Use your own choice of seasoning: garlic salt, lemon pepper, soy sauce, onion salt or a small amount of chili powder.

LEMON MERINGUE PIE

Pie Shell

- 1 cup unsifted all-purpose flour
- ¼ teaspoon salt
- 1 teaspoon sugar
- ½ cup vegetable shortening (not butter, oleo, lard or oil)
- 3 level tablespoons of ice water

Put flour, salt and sugar in medium-size bowl and mix with dinner fork. Add shortening and with fork, stir and mash shortening into dry ingredients until mixture is crumbly, some of it still very coarse. Gradually sprinkle in ice water, stirring lightly with fork until dry ingredients hold together. With pastry still in bowl, work gently together with one hand to form ball. Remove from bowl, shape in thick patty on a square of wax paper, wrap and chill in refrigerator 20 minutes. Lightly flour both sides of pastry; put on lightly floured board or pastry cloth and roll to about 1/8" thickness and 12" diameter. Fold in halves or quarters and fit loosely into 9" pie pan. With scissors, trim edges if necessary, so that about ½" of pastry hangs over edge. Fold edges under, making sure pastry comes right to edge of rim. Firmly place right index finger on inside of pastry at that point. Repeat every ¼". Leave flutings rounded or pinch into points. With dinner fork, prick pastry well. Put in center of preheated very hot oven (450) degrees and bake 12 to 15 minutes, or until golden brown. Cool on cake rack.

Filling

- 3 large (not extra-large) eggs
- 1 teaspoon grated (not shredded) lemon rind
- ½ cup fresh lemon juice
- 7 tablespoons cornstarch (measure with measuring tablespoon)
- 1½ cups sugar
- ¼ teaspoon salt
- 1½ cups hot water
- 2 tablespoons butter or oleo

Separate eggs while cold, putting whites in large bowl of electric mixer. (Make sure bowl is grease-free and that there is no speck of yolk in whites.) Put yolks in medium bowl and beat slightly with fork. Set whites aside at room temperature to use for meringue.

Prepare lemon rind and juice. Measure cornstarch, sugar and salt into heavy 2 quart saucepan that measures about 5½" across bottom. Mix well, using wooden or metal spoon. Add hot water and stir until smooth. Put over high heat and bring to a boil, stirring constantly. When mixture begins to thicken, reduce heat to medium and let bubble 8 minutes, stirring constantly. Mixture will be very thick. Remove from heat and stir several spoonfuls of hot mixture into egg yolks, mixing thoroughly.

Stir into mixture in saucepan, scraping bowl with rubber scraper. Put over medium heat; cook, stirring, 5 minutes. Mixture will be extremely thick. Remove from heat and stir in butter and lemon rind. Add lemon juice in fourths and mix until smooth. Scrape out into same bowl used for egg yolks and cool.

MERINGUE

- 1 tablespoon cornstarch
- 2 tablespoons cold water
- ½ cup boiling water
- 1 teaspoon fresh lemon juice
- 3 egg whites (reserved from making filling)
- 6 tablespoons sugar

In small saucepan, mix cornstarch and cold water until blended. Stir in boiling water, put over medium heat and bring to boil, stirring constantly. Cook stirring, 2 minutes or until thickened. Remove from heat and set pan in small amount of cold water to hasten cooling to room temperature. Add lemon juice to egg whites and beat in electric mixer until whites stand in soft peaks. Gradually add sugar, beating well after each addition. Then beat until whites stand in firm glossy peaks. Add cornstarch mixture all at once and beat until well blended.

Put cooled filling in cooled shell, spreading to sides. Top with meringue, spreading to edges and making sure mixture touches crust at all points. Bake in preheated moderate oven 350 degrees, 12 minutes or until lightly browned. Remove from oven and put in draft-free spot to cool 2 to 3 hours before cutting.

NOTE: Pie is best not refrigerated before serving. To keep pie over 3 hours, or if any is left over, refrigeration will be necessary.

JEWELL'S VANILLA ICE CREAM

Put 1 qt. half and half and 2 1/2 cups whole milk into a large heavy pan, (I use my miro-magic pan) over low heat so as not to scorch - Do not let boil.

Beat 6 eggs until thick and lemon colored. Add 2 cups sugar and 1/2 cup white corn syrup, continue to beat until sugar dissolves. Pour into hot milk and continue beating slowly until just before the boiling stage.

Remove from heat and let cool. If in a hurry, cool in sink or pan of cold water. Whip 1 pint of whipping cream, add 1 tbs. vanilla and fold into cooled mixture. Pour into a gallon ice cream bucket and finish filling with whole milk.

This can be put into a large sealed container after freezing and put into freezing compartment - It doesn't get icy and keeps indefinitely.

For a delightful change in flavor try dark corn syrup or at least 1/2 dark and 1/2 white instead of the white.

WHY DOESN'T HE SHUT UP? IT'S BAD ENOUGH BEING A FOOT WITHOUT HAVING TO LISTEN TO HIM ALL THE TIME!

HOW'D YOU LIKE BEING AN EAR? WE HAVE TO LISTEN TO EVERYTHING

YES, SIR, BOYS IT'S A STOUT HEART THAT COUNTS

WHY DON'T WE JUST TELL HIM TO DROP DEAD?

QUIET! ARE YOU OUT OF YOUR MIND? I'M ONLY A LEG, BUT I STILL LIKE LIVING!

YOU KNOW WHO'S FAULT IT IS THAT WE'RE OUT HERE? IT'S THAT STUPID FAT STOMACH!

LEAVE ME OUT OF IT, BOYS... I'M ONLY ALONG FOR THE RIDE!

I WONDER IF I COULD TRANSFER OUT OF THIS OUTFIT... SHUT UP, AND KEEP RUNNING

Prince Valiant

IN THE DAYS OF KING ARTHUR
By Hal Foster

Our Story: IN A GARDEN FILLED WITH FLOWERS AND PRETTY YOUNG MAIDS, PRINCE ARN PLAYS THE ROMANTIC TROUBADOUR.

BUT GALAN IS OF AN AGE WHEN LOVE AND ROMANCE ARE WHAT HE CALLS 'MUSH' AND MAKES HIS OPINION HEARD.

ARN LEARNS MORE ABOUT THE FEMALE SEX. THE LITTLE IMP IS BEING CUDDLED AND PETTED WHILE THE MAIDENS FROWN AT HIM AS IF HE WERE SOME SORT OF OGRE.

SO HE GOES TO THE ARMORY, DONS THE PADS AND HAS A BOUT WITH SIR GANNAIN. FROM THE SIDELINES VAL WATCHES HIS SON'S SWORDSMANSHIP AND NODS HIS HEAD IN APPROVAL.

BUT THAT EVENING THE GLORY IS ALL ALETA'S AS SHE DESCENDS THE MARBLE STAIRWAY ON THE ARM OF HER STALWART SON. AND VAL, WITH A GOLDEN-HAIRED DAUGHTER ON EACH ARM, WATCHES THE LOOKS OF ADMIRATION ON THE FACES IN THE CROWD AND IS QUITE CONTENT.

PRIZE QUESTION:
CARY ALLMORE OF YPSILANTI, MI, ASKS: WHAT DOES THE WALRUS USE ITS TUSKS FOR?

1 METRIC CUP = 250 ML
240 ML

A WALRUS CAN EASILY BE RECOGNIZED BY ITS IVORY TUSKS, WHICH MAY GROW 3 FEET LONG. THE TUSKS ARE REALLY TWO OVERGROWN TEETH. THE WALRUS USES ITS LONG TUSKS TO DIG OUT ITS MEAL OF CLAMS AND OTHER FOOD FROM THE SEA BOTTOM. THE TUSKS ARE ALSO USED AS GRAPPLING HOOKS WHEN THE BIG ANIMAL PULLS ITSELF UPON THE ICE, AND AS WEAPONS AGAINST ENEMIES.

Polly's Pointers

DEAR POLLY - Many people cannot eat sliced raw carrots in a salad. I always grated them, until one day I tried using my potato peeler and made slivers of carrots that are easier to eat, and there is no grater to clean. - HELEN.

© 1978 by NEA, Inc.

DEAR POLLY - I use hydrogen peroxide to remove blood spots from white materials. After the soiled area is sponged with tepid or cool water, apply the peroxide and rub together. Like magic, the spots are gone, and then I sponge again with the cool water. - GLADYS.

Send your helpful hints to Polly's Pointers in care of this newspaper.

DEAR POLLY - When I discovered I was out of basin and tub cleaner, I used my laundry pre-wash spray. Basin and tub come clean by just wiping with a sponge. My hair brush was on the vanity, so I gave it a spray, too, and it washed out all the oily build-up right down to the base of the bristles. SUZANNE.

DEAR POLLY - I cut a gallon-size plastic container in half and the bottom makes a small dishpan that stays in my sink all day. It holds water and a bit of detergent so when there is a cup, a spoon, glass or other small item to wash, it is already there to save time, energy, detergent and water. - LUCILLE.

DEAR POLLY - When leftover pound cake, wedding cake, etc., has worn out its welcome, don't toss it out. Put it in the freezer and save for bread pudding. - KAY.

DEAR POLLY - I have a couple of nifty Pointers for those who have trouble getting bread or rolled dough to raise in a cool house. If you have a gas range with an oven pilot light, simply cover your bread and put it in the oven, as the pilot light makes it just warm enough. Those with an electric range with a smooth ceramic cook top can put the bread on a small element and turn the heat to LOW. Breads will raise quickly by using either method. - LEOLA.

DEAR POLLY - Several of my wire coat hangers were getting rusty in spots, so I hung them outdoors on the clothesline and spray-painted them. Any color can be used and this a good way to use up odds and ends of spray paint. - MRS. D.L.

DEAR POLLY - My grandmother always had a bed of mint along the foundation of her house, just outside the kitchen, so as to keep the ants away. - JAN.
