USDA delaying farm program sign-up

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Agriculture Department is briefly delaying next week's start of the 1986 crop programs sign-up and will temporarily suspend purchases of surplus dairy products due to uncertainty over farm legislation.

Under Secretary Daniel G. Amstutz said late Friday that the sign-up period for wheat, feed grains, cotton and rice programs will begin not Monday as scheduled, but Thursday.

And Amstutz said the government will suspend acceptance of offers for purchase of surplus dairy products on Monday and Tuesday while Congress sorts out issues affecting milk price-supports.

"We feel this action is in the best interest of farmers who want to participate in the programs, but need to know the details of them," Amstutz said. "We expect these matters to be resolved by the middle of next week." He warned that no further time extensions would be granted.

The start of sign-up for the new conservation reserve program, under which the government will pay farmers on a bid basis to retire their most highly erodible land from production, will remain Monday, as previously scheduled.

Congress adjourned for the weekend Friday without acting on two major pieces of farm legislation: a $5 billion infusion for the Commodity Credit Corporation, which is due to run out of money on Tuesday, and a package of half a dozen changes in the new farm act designed to fine-tune its commodity programs.

Both ran into trouble this week because of controversial provisions that had been included by various lawmakers.

The CCC money bill, designed to keep in operation the agency that runs farm price and income-support programs, bogged down because House Appropriations Committee Chairman Jamie Whitten, D-Miss., added a requirement that would make payments under the new conservation reserve subject to the congressional appropriations process.

Conservationists immediately objected, saying the language would kill the reserve, which has been hailed as the biggest step forward for soil conservation in 50 years. Senate Majority Leader Bob Dole, R-Kan., vowed to strip the language out of the bill but was unable to finish the job before Congress left for the weekend.

The farm programs package includes changes designed to minimize cuts in income subsidies to wheat, corn, cotton and rice farmers under the new farm law; to protect farmers of non-subsidized crops like dry beans from competition from subsidized producers; and a revision of the way cuts are made in the cost of the dairy program to meet new deficit-reduction guidelines.

Halley's Comet was surprise to some in 1910

By SHAWN COCKRUM
Staff Writer

God wrote his autograph
Upon the sky last night
With Halley's Comet
So shiny and bright.

That passage was inspired by a memory Mrs. Blanche Baldwin has of witnessing the comet 76 years ago.

Mrs. Baldwin says that naturally she would like to see the comet again, but really does not think she will have a chance like she did in 1910.

"We tried to find it around Christmas, but it was just not bright enough to spot," Mrs. Baldwin said. "And I think that it will not be as bright as it was last time I saw it."

The last time Mrs. Baldwin saw the splendor of Halley, she was 5-years-old living in Haskell County, Texas. Mrs. Baldwin said that it was on a Saturday night while she and her sister Myrna were reading the story of "Little Red Riding Hood."

"Mama told us to get ready to take our baths so we would be sure to be clean for church the next day," Mrs. Baldwin said. She and her sister rather would have completed their reading, but reluctantly headed to the big wash tub that their mother had waiting for them.

"About that time, Papa looked up from his favorite newspaper and said, 'Did you girls shut up the chicken house?' And we told him that we must have forgot," she recalled.

"When we got out to the hen house,

Myrna began to work on the latch while I held the lantern. When I looked over toward the railroad track, I saw a bright light and began to stutter the words, 'Look, see, a light, a light!'

"Myrna quickly turned around and said that it was just a reflection from the lantern. After she realized that it was something much bigger, something that she could not explain, we became frightened and ran to the house. We ran through the door, both talking at the same time. Papa asked us if we had seen a dog or something. We told him no, and began to explain what it was. He told us that it must be a train, but we told him that it could not have been. The whole family went outside to see what it was. Papa looked at us and said, 'It's a comet.' 'I am not sure if he knew it was Halley's comet or not, but he sure knew what it was,' Mrs. Baldwin said.

"It was sure bright enough to know that it was something extra," Mrs. Baldwin added. At the end of March, Halley's Comet will be making its 17th appearance since it was first discovered in 240 B.C.

It was named after Edmond Halley, the 17th century astronomer who first observed that some comets return to the inner solar system periodically. Halley used the newly developed gravitational theory of his colleague Isaac Newton in studying the orbital paths of hundreds of comets.

He found that several comet paths were similar, leading him to predict the return of one comet in 1758. Halley died before the comet fulfilled his prediction.

The comet last displayed itself in 1910, and was in the northern hemisphere late in 1985. Astronomers say that it will be seen more clearly in late March and in early April.

According to astronomers at Texas Tech, the best time of day to see the comet will be just before dawn when it will be barely over the horizon in the south.

Hereford's Ira Ott saw the comet in 1910 when he was 14-years-old.

"We had just moved to Texas and we were in the process of building our house," Ott said. "We had finished the barn, and we were sleeping in (See COMET, Page 2A)

Pharmacy saw several generations

Remember when you could go to a Saturday matinee at the Star Theatre for two bits and then go to McDowell's Drugstore for a double chocolate soda? Those days are gone.

Ansel McDowell, who started his Hereford business in 1953, began with an old-time drugstore that featured a real soda fountain and the original Coca-Cola that cost a nickel a glass.

McDowell's Pharmacy has seen several generations come and go.

"I sold the pharmacy to Jim, my son, about eight years ago, but there's been a McDowell drug in Hereford for 33 years," said McDowell. "Before I sold out, I was serving the children and grandchildren of the people that had traded with me for years."

McDowell recalled when he first came to Hereford. "My wife Elizabeth and I bought Harold Close Drug Store at 240 Main, Jan. 1, 1953." His drugstore was sitting right where Jim Sears' office in First National Bank is now.

McDowell Pharmacy relocated twice before recently being torn down.

With the expansion of First National Bank in 1965, McDowell's Drugstore had to relocate.

"At this time, the Nortons had this two story building where the Candy Kitchen was. I moved the pharmacy into the building at 310 N. Main. We didn't serve anything at the fountain until we moved to the last location. We were there a year before the bank got their building built," said McDowell.

"Each time I moved I was getting more and more space and this store made it a complete drugstore," said McDowell.

At that location, McDowell purchased all new fixtures throughout the store because the old fixtures were obsolete and he also completely remodeled. "I even added a new soda fountain," smiled McDowell.

McDowell grinned when he recalled what good the move did for his business. "There was a 38 percent increase in business due to the new location. It had more room, more up-to-date fixtures," McDowell explained.

In 1968 a change was made at the Star Theater. "I moved the pharmacy into the old Hereford Brand building owned by Jimmy Gillentine," said McDowell. It was the pharmacy's final location.

McDowell said he had seen a complete change in the drug business over the past few years.

"Everything has changed from the early days," said McDowell, "from compounding your own drug to dispensing ready-made drugs."

"I'll meet you at the drugstore," use to be the famous words and the drugstore use to be The Meeting Place for the whole town," he said. "All that phased out when all the

We ran across an article in our files this week that we'd like to share with our readers. The article, dated in 1963, was written by Dr. Alexis Carrel and is titled "A Physicist Talks of Prayer":

"Prayer is a force as real as terrestrial gravity. As a physician, I have seen men, after all other therapy has failed, lifted out of disease and melancholy by the serene effort of prayer. It is the only power in the world that seems to overcome the so-called 'laws of nature'.

The occasions on which prayer has dramatically done this have been termed 'miracles'. But a constant, quieter miracle takes place hourly in the hearts of men and women who have discovered that prayer supplies them with a steady flow of sustaining power in their daily lives.

"Too many people regard prayer as a formalized routine of words, a refuge for weaklings, or a childish petition for material things. We sadly undervalue prayer when we conceive it in these terms, just as we should underestimate rain by describing it as something that fills the birdbath in our garden. Properly understood, prayer is a mature activity indispensable to the fullest development of personality—the ultimate integration of man's highest faculties.

"Only in prayer do we achieve that complete and harmonious assembly of body, mind, and spirit which gives the frail human reed its unshakable strength."

Gramm-Rudman cuts triggered

WASHINGTON (AP) — The first automatic cuts under the Gramm-Rudman deficit reduction law were triggered Saturday, pinching $11.7 billion out of the federal budget in ways that only hint at the massive reductions that loom ahead.

Many Americans will start noticing the impact of the 4.3 percent cuts in most domestic and military programs in the coming weeks and months.

Medicare patients, doctors and hospitals were to get 1 percent less from the government for services rendered on or after Saturday. The health insurance plan for the elderly was only partially shielded from Gramm-Rudman.

Farm-state lawmakers scrambled Friday to find alternative ways to make up the shortfall in the Agriculture budget, but Congress recessed for the weekend without acting. Agriculture Department officials said Friday they are suspending all purchases of dairy products through Tuesday to give the lawmakers more time to seek a compromise.

A federal appeals court on Feb. 7 ruled the law's automatic trigger was unconstitutional, but it stayed the effect of its ruling pending an appeal to the Supreme Court, which will rule this summer on the law requiring a balanced budget by 1991.

If the law is thrown out, the agencies could get back all the funds they are now being forced to save.

Social Security, Medicaid, food stamps and some other social programs are exempt from the cuts.

President Reagan also decided to buffer military pay and the Strategic Defense Initiative against any cuts.

Local Roundup

City commission meeting set

The Hereford City Commission will convene for a regular meeting Monday at 7:30 p.m. in City Hall.

First on the agenda is a zoning request hearing with three items slated: Changing 109 Ave. A from two family housing to local retail, changing 311 East Park from restricted to central business, and changing a tract in the 900 block of South Schley from single family to central business.

Charlie Ruiz of the Amistad Housing Corporation will address the commissioners on possible site locations to build a housing project. A consideration of appointment to the county juvenile board will also be discussed, consideration of the animal control ordinance and opening of sealed bids for a new truck bed are scheduled.

Also, the 1986-87 budget is up for preliminary review and a closed session for discussion of pending litigation is set.

Vehicle burglaries investigated

The Hereford Police Department is investigating three cases of burglary of a vehicle which occurred Friday. One incident was reported in the 700 block of Baltimore, and the other two were in the 100 and 200 blocks of Elm.

Police also arrested an individual on a driving while intoxicated warrant, and another subject on charges of public intoxication.

The Old-time Drugstore . . . McDowell Pharmacy

McDOWELL

Dairy Bees and drive-ins of all types came in.

"Why, they solved all their problems of the day at the drugstore over a cup of coffee."

Mr. and Mrs. McDowell pioneered the pharmacy as a team. "My wife Elizabeth helped out a lot with her good cookin', especially with her chicken salad. She was known for putting too much chicken instead of filling in the salad," he smiled.

It was really a homemade delicacy. She prepared the salad in her own kitchen and delivered it to the drug store.

Changes were not limited to buildings.

McDowell said, "Computers came in and the wholesale offices laid off all our salesmen. The line of products we offered completely changed."

The pharmacist explained that in the drug business during those days every line had a personal salesman that would call on the pharmacist. Every wholesale house also had salesmen that would call every week.

"This was eliminated," said McDowell. "Lines of Dear Kiss, Evening in Paris perfume, and Dubarry went out. The only lines that are still around are your major manufacturers; Revlon, Faberge, Elizabeth Arden, and Coty. They're still operating."

"When we came here, we handled all the ranchers and farmers and farmers veterinarian supplies. You had regular poultry lines, cattle, and we sold vaccines by the tons. This was in the late '50s before all the feed yards came in," said McDowell.

Dealing in such large quantities after the feedyards came in, McDowell said the ranchers went directly to the companies.

McDowell mentioned what a dramatic change the drug business has taken over the years.

"Within a year, you see, 25 to 35 percent of the drugs are obsolete due to a 10-year turnover of complete pharmaceuticals. Patents, over-the-counter drugs, cold remedies, they all changed drastically," he said.

"The front end of the drugstore never changes as far as OTC's (over-the-counter drugs), the prescriptions and the medications," said McDowell. "Cosmetics, prescriptions, and the vet supplies were the backbone of the drugstore."

"Rexall's used to be a complete drug line. Now, the Rexall's line is down to nothing. They sell only vitamins now and are still a large chemical company. It's changed drastically and is still changing," he said. "Everything is..."

His son added, "If you're going to be in retail, you've got to be a small, professional pharmacy or a hospital pharmacy. They're growing by leaps and bounds."

"Or another direction is the nursing home pharmacy," said the elder. "Another good field to be in right now is relief work in other pharmacies to let the pharmacist off," added Jim.

McDowell recalled how he first got into the drug business. "My first job was pouring up bottles," he said. "Everything came in bulk in those days. That's the first thing I did was pour up wash for wet and dries, that's pharmacists' talk," he added.

"When you go to the doctor, they'd give you stomach powders and all kinds of powders. Now they give you Mallox," he laughed.

"All kinds of compounds, your liquids, ointments, powders, all had to be mixed in those days. Now they come premixed and you just have to remember the generic name."

McDowell passed his profession to his son.

"When Dad moved the family out here, I was 13 at the time," said Jim McDowell, his son. "I already knew I was going to be a pharmacist and I worked a lot after school."

The younger McDowell went into partnership with his dad, and in 1977 he purchased the pharmacy. In the same year, he purchased the building from Jimmy Gillentine.

Prior to his son's management McDowell had added a Hallmark department and Jim remodeled the back of the business with an antique look.

McDowell Pharmacy then featured a red antique carpet with matching antiques wallpaper, hanging swag lamps that were also an antique design, paneling and antique mirrors, and he had added a few more booths.

McDowell Pharmacy's name changed to McDowell Pharmacy and gifts.

His son also added The Gallery. "It's just an interest I've always had," he said. "I started collecting art in the early '70's. I got into sign limited editions in '81 and that's when I started the gallery, to sell those."

All of the art is Western-American which blends the heritage of settling in the West. "I sold books in the drugstore, non-fiction, all pertaining to the Western Heritage. Ninety percent of all of my gallery was signed limited editions and a few originals," he noted.

Artists Melvin Warren and G. Harvey are his personal favorites. He mentioned there are plans in the making for a gallery to re-open in the future.

Meanwhile, McDowell is working as a relief pharmacist. He said in his day a pharmacist worked from 7 a.m. to 11 p.m. "When I started in the business we worked 7 a.m. to 11 p.m., but they don't do that anymore." "McDowell's Pharmacy was one of the last fountains in the Panhandle," said McDowell. "For hundreds of years there's always been a drugstore in nearly every town."

McDowell was accepted by the Texas State Board of Pharmacy in 1931. McDowell has been practicing pharmacy for 55 years.

"Pharmacy has been good to us," said McDowell. "I can still remember all the good customers I had and I appreciate it.

"When Elizabeth and I came to town, we looked over all the churches (there were a lot back then, 14 or 15 denominations), and the good schools and we decided 'this was the place'—that's what ole' Brigham Young said," laughed McDowell, although he is not a Mormon.

Ott said that there were people who were afraid of the comet and because they thought the world was ending, sold everything they had.

"We knew it was going to happen," he said. "I guess Mama heard about it somewhere, maybe just through talk around town or the county newspaper. We did not have any radio or television, nobody did."

Astronomers think of Halley's comet as a perfect comet because of its regular visit ever 76 years, a once in a lifetime event. Astronomers also are saying that the 1986 visit will lack in comparison to past visits. A combination of the Earth's orbital position, the comet's path around the sun, and the increased amount of light pollution will make this passage visibly the worst in 2,000 years.

April 11 will be the best day to observe the comet because it will be at its closest point to Earth—only 40 million miles away!

Ribbon-Cutting for 'Wishes'

Family Pharmacists

One of the last old-time family drugstores remaining in the Panhandle was recently torn down to provide additional parking space for First National Bank. McDowell's Pharmacy, which was established in 1953 by Ansel McDowell and his wife Elizabeth was one of Hereford's landmarks. Ansel, who is holding a bottle of Grove's Chill Tonic, is a collector of old items long gone from the shelves of pharmacies. His son, Jim, who later bought the family business, is looking over his shoulder.

Train ride a visual feast

ON THE CHIHUAHUA PACIFIC RAILWAY, Mexico (AP) — Tarahumara Indian women, their round and ruddy faces peaking out from bright headscarves, greet passengers at Divisadero train station with handwoven baskets they timidly offer for sale.

They find few buyers. Many of the travelers — Americans and Mexicans — are taking advantage of the 15-minute layover to rush the 90 yards from the track to the metal guardrail at the brink of the magnificent Urique Canyon high in the Sierra Madre Occidental mountains.

The wandering gorge and five others in the system — known best by the collective name Copper Canyon — seem to spread out infinitely revealing the lush tropics and cave dwellings of some Tarahumaras thousands of feet below.

This is Mexico's version of Colorado's Grand Canyon. Tour guides like to note that four Grand Canyons could easily fit inside the 900-mile-long system.

Divisadero — lookout point — is about midway on the Chihuahua Pacific Railway's grueling 14-hour, 405-mile journey from the coastal plains city of Los Mochis in western Sinaloa state through the Sierra to the city of Chihuahua, the arid capital of neighboring Chihuahua state.

This is the heart of the "Sierra Tarahumara," named for the 55,000 reclusive Indians, most who live a poverty-line existence off the land.

For many Mexicans and Tarahumaras who live in the isolated mountain villages, the railroad's completion in 1961 — after 11½ years of often-interrupted construction — brought a convenient mode of transportation and their only overland route through the Sierra.

The faces in the comfortable coaches change constantly. Passengers come and go. Vendors offering hot chocolate, cinnamon-and-sugar-sweetened coffee called "cafe de olla", meat and cheese-filled turnovers or "empanadas" and American-made Milky Way and Snickers candy bars invade the coaches during the five-minute layovers at a few of the 53 stations along the line.

But for the Americans and Mexicans who come from all over the country to enjoy Mexico's most famous train ride, the Chihuahua Pacific offers do-it-yourself adventures for the stout hearted.

Some stay overnight at the rustic Cabanas Divisadero-Barrancas Hotel that sits at the rim of the canyon or at other hotels nearby. At Creel, the best known town in the region, guides offer tours by mule to the canyon floor where many Tarahumaras live.

For the price of a ticket, about $9, passengers can make as many stopovers as they wish.

The trek for most of the 40 or so tourists on board the six-car train began this day at 5:45 a.m. at the Los Mochis station. The railway also offers service from Chihuahua to Los Mochis.

The black sky, and nondescript flatlands of the coastal plains seem to invite silence.

The announcement at 7 a.m. that the dining car has opened sends the groggy passengers forward in search of coffee and a breakfast of eggs, hot sauce and refried beans.

Ten stations and 107 miles later, the train begins its laborious zigzag through the steep mountain passes that peak at 8,071 feet above sea level. From the Jesus Cruz station to Divisadero, a distance of 77 miles, the train climbs 6,765 feet.

As the train heaves and sways up the steep grade, passing over the 39 bridges and through the 86 tunnels that mark the line, tourists gather at the open windows dividing the cars.

Leaning out into the crisp mountain air, they view rivers valleys, lush pine forests and the important logging camps that bring in an important source of revenue.

Those passengers who choose to stay overnight at Divisadero board the train the following day.

Apparently because fewer tourists are on board, however, the service has declined. The comfortable, reclining seat in the coaches are the same, but the heating system is not working. The friendly hostesses that pointed out interesting sights for tourists the previous day are missing.

The odors of warm tortillas, cigarette smoke and human sweat mingle inside the coach with the cacophony of four portable stereos blaring four different tunes.

Couples with babies huddle under blankets as the cold mountain air seeps through the windows of the walkways dividing the train. The dozens of teenagers on board fend off the chill with chatter and clumsy attempts to maneuver through the swaying isles.

The soup in the dining car is tepid. The waiters are almost as warm.

At 10:30 p.m. the train deposits its chilly and weary passengers in Chihuahua.

Despite the discomforts of the second leg, the tourists on board are wondering out loud when they could make the trip again.

Of the 400 people who are citizens of Vatican City, the world's smallest country, two-thirds are either Swiss Guards or are members of the Holy See's diplomatic corps serving abroad.

Museum staff announces completion of videotape

The Carson County Square House Museum in Panhandle announces the completion and availability to the public of "Charlie Bell-Cowboy," a videotape production developed by the museum as a Sesquicentennial project. Produced by Berneta Communications, Inc., of Amarillo, the 28 minute program was funded by the museum, J. Douglas Allen of Menlo Park, California, and by a grant from the Don and Sybil Harrington Foundation.

Intended for the general public as well as the classroom, the program provides insight into the life of a real working cowboy in the Texas Panhandle. Using vintage film footage from the 1920 and 1950s, historical photographs, and recent video-taped interviews of Charlie Bell, the program dispels some of the myths of cowboy life. Instead of the glamorous and carefree lifestyle portrayed in many movies and novels, cowboys endured long, hard hours in all kinds of weather. On a roundup, the workday generally started at 2:00 a.m. Most cowboys didn't wear guns, either, because many employers discouraged the wearing of them. Charlie states that Colonel Goodnight of the JA Ranch "...kinda objects to 'em carrying a gun round there, just like he objected to 'em drinking whiskey and playing poker."

Interviewed by long-time friend Jo Stuart Randel, Bell told of a simpler time, a less hectic life. Randel knew him as "a man who could be happy just working. He spoke of the value of life, the courtesies. His message is very clear when he said, 'if money is all you're making, you ain't getting enough.'"

Forget 'simple'

Forget the "simplification" in the new tax reform bill.

The original plan on the bill recently passed by the U.S. House of Representatives was to simplify the nation's tax code, but what emerged was more reform and more paperwork for America's taxpayers.

The Reagan administration came in with a pledge to cut paper work and waste. Taxpayers embraced the tax simplification idea with open arms. The House version did away with the word "simplification" after writing 1,363 pages of reforms and reporting requirements, and taxpayers lost out to special interests trade-offs in the House.

A little-known provision in the House bill came to light this week when it was reported that state and local governmental units would be required to file 1099 forms on all taxpayers. Locally, the Deaf Smith Tax Appraisal District would pick up additional expenses of about $20,000, according to the chief appraiser.

We don't have the time, but maybe some bureaucrat could figure out the cost of such a rule on state and local governments across the nation. It's mind-boggling!

Hopefully the Senate will omit rules such as this. It's too much to hope that our legislators would really come up with a simplification of the tax code. We would still like to see a personal income tax form which reads something like this!

How much did you make this year? Multiply by 6 percent and send to the IRS. Period.

Good/bad news

One of the problems with getting fair legislation out of Washington is that not all Americans view things the same way. Thus Congressmen find themselves at odds with one another as they try to represent the district that elected them.

For example, what is good for the East may not be good for the Southwest.

This week the Associated Press had a story out of Washington which started off "The U.S. economy, bolstered by falling oil prices, should enjoy significantly better growth this year than in 1985, many economists believe."

The story went on to point out that the beneficial impact of falling oil prices will be felt in two ways. U.S. output will rise because consumers and businesses will have more to spend on other items, since their oil bills will be less and inflation in this country will be lower.

This is no doubt quite true. But the drop in oil prices is not hailed with delight in Texas and certainly not in Ochiltree County where the price of oil determines to a great extent how we are going to fare economically in the near future.

Dropping oil prices in Texas has sent shock waves through the state officials who are being told that state tax revenue will drop to a crisis situation. Every drop of $1 a barrel for oil translates to $100 million less state revenue, according to State Comptroller Bob Bullock.

A few weeks ago national economists also hailed the news that the consumer price index had nearly stabilized, and the chief reason for this was the drop in the price of farm products which led to lower food prices.

Now, it is hard to do anything but cheer the news of lower food prices because all of us have to buy food.

But the cheers are not heard on the farm where everything the farmer produces seems to command less money while everything he buys has gone up.

Lower food prices, caused by lower farm product prices, do not generate cheers in this part of the country.

Out here where we depend upon wheat and cattle and milo and oil and gas for our income, lower prices in any and all of these things do not translate to good news, but to very bad news.

We can be nonchalant about a drop in the price of iron ore or finished steel, but when it comes to something that affects us personally it is a different story.

Not all news is good news on the economic front. Sometimes it can be very bad.

Letters to the Editor

Dear editor,

"And Jesus called a little child unto him and set him in the midst of them, and said 'But whoso shall offend one of these little ones which believe in me, it were better for him that a millstone were hanged about his neck, and that he were drowned in the depth of the sea.'" (Matthew 18:1-8)

In verse 2 Jesus called a small child from the crowd and set him in the midst. He set up a living example of humility and love. We would do well today to look at that illustration and let it become our living and being. Humility and love ought to be the main theme of our lives as Christians.

When it isn't we aren't very Christians. The big problem is that far too many people have pride or hatred for their outward show of life. This is seen and revealed in the form of child abuse.

Child abuse is found mostly in the area of physical and sexual abuse, but in other areas too. It is in the physical that Jesus gives the most stern warning. Notice that Jesus says "little ones which believe in me."

Most of our children who are physically abused do believe in Christ in their simple childlike faith. But, I also feel that God has no pleasure whatsoever in child abuse in any form whether a believer or not.

God has given us the privilege in having children in our homes. It is to those who abuse this privilege that the greatest and gravest condemnation should go.

Not all physical abuse takes place in the home, but most of it does.

The child abuser today, who flaunts the Bible and its warnings, deserves the punishment God hands him and I am convinced that punishment will be Hell.

A lot of people seem to think that what Christ says in these verses is common knowledge. Not so! If everyone knew this, I don't think we would have near the problem we are having today. I am persuaded that persons who have been born again in Christ will not abuse their own children, but they will instead protect them from child abuse.

As Christians let us forget denominations, races and other lines, and strike out at people who are child abuser; whoever they are and wherever they may be found. When we get them arrested, make sure they do not escape the punishment they deserve.

Sincerely in Christ,
James D. Hutson

I sat up past midnight last night trying to write this article. My recent articles have all been serious and I intended to get back to my normal nutty self. I could not think of anything funny. That is scary. I have always been able to see humor in everything. I have been in trouble most of my life because of my seeing humor when humor was inappropriate.

Have I been swallowed up in this too serious world of ours? Is it age? They tell me we get serious when, and if, we mature. Have I OD'd on too many newscasts? Have I heard too much of Clint Formby? I panicked.

Then I wondered what happened to all of the clowns? There was a day when comedians left nothing unscathed. They could make jokes about polio. I watched a comedian on HBO the other night. He spent an hour saying bad words and people laughed because the language made them nervous and because they were starving for a laugh. In a day of precision and accuracy clowns are a gift. We need some clowns. They may make us mad, they may make us think, they may get themselves in trouble but somebody better make us laugh, and soon.

Whatever happened to Mort Sahl? He was the last of the great political satirists. Did they shoot him? Did he loose his bite? Or is it that no one will go hear him because we

'Chunnel' is great adventure

There's going to be a tunnel under the English Channel linking Britain and France.

After almost 200 years of talking about it, we're going to do it!

A 31-mile twin-tube rail tunnel will come first. It will be complete within seven years.

I don't know why I'm excited about a "chunnel." I will never use, but this project, dreamed about since Napoleon, reminds me how much fun we could have if all nations could spend their time, money and resources on constructive things.

Britain will no longer be an island but will be attached to Europe by a railroad—and later by a driveway. A London-to-Paris trip that now takes five hours by train and hovercraft will take only three and a half hours.

Shuttle trains will whisk cars and trucks and buses under the channel at 100 miles an hour!

Corporations and banks on both sides of the channel are contributing to the $7.5 billion which this will cost. It will cost taxpayers nothing. It should be a money-maker, should harvest $600 million a year in passenger fares.

A tunnel across the channel. Britain has not taken on a construction project this exciting since Disraeli dared to ditch Suez!

What an inspiration this present project should be.

I am not unaware that Mitterrand and Thatcher expect to harvest political benefits from the "chunnel." That's all right; they've earned them.

They braved a lot of timid critics in both countries as leaders always do.

And so begins another grand adventure.

Americans, we are limited only by our imaginations on contemplating what great things we could do with billions now wasted.

If Latin American nations would stop fighting themselves they could build another Panama Canal—handling bigger ships, expediting commerce, prospering everybody.

As surely as we built a pipeline across Alaska we could build a dam between Alaska and Siberia with myriad rewarding applications.

We could shelter whole cities under geodesic domes, colonize the moon, turn deserts green with desalinated sea water.

And as surely as the 20th Century was invented by Tom Edison, the next century belongs to the geneticists.

Man's conquest of outer space is thrilling but its rewards are in no way to be compared to his conquest of inner space, if he dares!

Bootleg Philosopher

Other nations fail

Editor's note: The Bootleg Philosopher on his Johnsongrass farm on Tierra Blanca Creek says perfection doesn't exist in other countries either.

Dear editor:

Because American failures are publicized right and left and other countries' aren't, we sometimes get the notion other countries are failure-free.

For instance, Japan has the reputation of doing a whizz-bang job of everything it attempts, like making cars and television sets and school kids who enjoy doing homework. Moreover, its modern trains can travel 200 miles an hour.

Last year, however, the Japan National Railroad lost $7.5 billion. You can believe if you want to that the Japanese people were delighted to pay more taxes to cover the loss, while they settled down at home to listen to their music which sounds like the noise a beeswaxed string makes when pulled through a hole in a tin can. I have no idea what American rock-and-roll sounds to them.

Or take Russia. According to a news article from Moscow the other day the Kremlin announced plans to increase production of consumer goods over the next 15 years. Included in the goods Russians are clamoring for, when government goons aren't around, are more socks and television sets.

You can see how difficult it is for a Russian to sit around in his socks watching television when he has neither. The Russian people are said to be very patient, but waiting 15 years for a pair of socks, it seems to me, would certainly try that patience.

Also, Russia's military might is considered overwhelming. It swarmed into Czechoslovakia with its tanks and soldiers and took it in no time. It swarmed into Afghanistan and five years later is wondering what's wrong with that country. It seems to be un-swarmable.

Yours faithfully,
J.A.

Texans crowd class to learn 'talk' with deaf

ABILENE, Texas (AP) — Most students are prepared the first day of class to stand up and tell their names.

But Diane Fisher's students must stand up and spell their names their first day of class without opening their mouths.

That's not so tough if you're Ann or Dan. But Juanice and Esperanza have a tough task on their hands, literally.

Mrs. Fisher, director of deaf education for Abilene schools, teaches sign language to a packed house every Monday night at Madison Middle School.

"The classroom response has been phenomenal," Mrs. Fisher said. "We usually have 30 to 50 students in a class. This time we have 145."

So many students signed up for the eight-week course that five classes have been filled, three beginning classes and two intermediate.

The students have one thing in common: they want to be able to communicate with the deaf.

"Some of the students have family members who are deaf," she said.

Some older students who are losing their hearing have signed up, so they'll be able to communicate as their hearing deteriorates.

One such student is Beatrice Vick.

"I'm losing my hearing," she said.

"I have to be prepared to know how to communicate if I lose it all. The doctor who fitted me for my hearing aid suggested I take the course."

Several of Mrs. Fisher's students are people who work with the hearing impaired, such as occupational or speech therapists.

One such student is Phelps Morrison, a psychologist at Abilene State School.

"I took the class because we have some clients who are deaf," Morrison said. "They don't teach you sign language as part of a degree in psychology. I had to learn to communicate with those clients who can't speak."

The youngest student in class is 6-year-old Rebekah Crumbliss.

"I have a friend who can't talk," the girl said. "I wanted to be able to talk with her."

Rebekah's mother, Mary Crumbliss, sits beside her daughter in class, learning sign language too.

Mrs. Fisher has taught sign language to people in their 70s, but she also works with infants.

"We work with babies and their families in their homes," she said.

"We start as soon as the parent learns the baby is deaf, teaching first the parents, who in turn teach their children."

She is working with three families in Snyder and one in Colorado City.

"The parents talk in sign to their babies, and the baby gradually picks it up, as any baby learns words. By the time the child is 12 to 18 months old he, we hope, has a 100-word vocabulary," the teacher said.

Children learn sign language much easier than adults, Mrs. Fisher said.

"Children aren't afraid to tackle anything, but adults are inhibited," she said. "Adults get embarrassed. They think, 'I can't do that,' or they think they're too old. They're never too old. We just have to go slower with older people."

Mrs. Fisher said she first became intrigued with deaf children when she was in college.

"Deaf children are neat," she said. "It's such a challenge to work with them."

Most deaf children are of normal intelligence, Mrs. Fisher said.

"There is unlimited potential in deaf children, but it's hard to get to that potential because of the language deficit."

"The language deficit is the greatest deficit there is, because there are so many words we can't explain," she added. "One time, a deaf girl asked me what 'as a matter of fact' meant. It took me forever to explain that."

"It's so rewarding to work with the deaf, and to see the light on their faces when we finally break through the barrier, and they really understand."

HISTORIANS LIST TOP 10 EVENTS

WASHINGTON (AP) — In an informal survey, nine of the nation's leading historians were asked to name the most significant developments in the world since the start of the second millennium in A.D. 1001.

These, says National Geographic, were their choices of the 10 most important events, in chronological order:

— The rise of Western Europe to world dominance, militarily and economically, starting early in the millennium.

— The Mongol invasions of the 13th and 14th centuries, which unified Eurasia.

— The plague of the 14th century, which killed at least one-fourth of the population of Europe and China.

— Columbus' discovery of America in 1492, which linked the hemispheres and opened up the seas.

— The Enlightenment of the late 18th century, a philosophical movement that had a profound impact on intellectual progress.

— The American Revolution of 1776, and the French Revolution of 1789.

— The building of railroads throughout the world in the 19th century.

— The Industrial Revolution of the late 1800s, and the continuing developments in science and technology.

— The detonation of the atomic bomb in 1945.

— Current serious problems such as world hunger, environmental pollution, and the specter of nuclear war.

Christie wanted for rape, assault

SULPHUR SPRINGS, Texas — This is the same tune, second verse, for John DeWayne Christie.

Christie was selected for the Texas Most Wanted list back in November, 1985, but was captured shortly before his story could be featured by media throughout the state.

Now he has been placed back on the fugitive list.

Christie and two other inmates at the Hopkins County Jail escaped from custody on January 30. One of the inmates was quickly captured.

However, Christie — who is wanted for the rape of a 14-year-old girl and the assault of the girl's mother — remains at large.

Hopkins County law enforcement officials say Christie, Milton Wilemon, and James Corley escaped sometime around 10:00 p.m. and 11:00 p.m. on January 30. They theorize that Wilemon, who was a jail trustee obtained a key and then unlocked an outside door to allow the inmates to escape.

Corley, 27 who was being held on charges of possession of a prohibited weapon, possession of a controller substance and felony theft of property, was arrested a short time later.

Wilemon, 21, who had been jailed on burglary charges and violation of parole, has eluded capture along with Christie.

Officials do not believe that Christie and Wilemon are still together.

Christie, 33, was arrested at a Rockwall, Texas, truck stop on November 21, 1985, on warrants stemming from the sexual assault of a 14-year-old Sulphur Springs girl on September 1, 1985.

He had been scheduled to stand trial early this month.

Police reports indicate the 14-year-old victim of the sexual assault was attacked by an intruder armed with a butcher knife.

However, the intruder ran into more than he bargained when he tried to attack the girl's mother. She bit the intruder on the neck and forced him to flee the house.

The September incident was not the first time that Christie had run afoul of the law. He had two prior convictions for sexually-related offenses and had served time in the Texas Department of Corrections for indecency with a child.

Christie is a white male, 6-0, 170 pounds, with a light complexion, brown hair and brown eyes. He has a number of tattoos over his body, including a three-leaf clover on his left arm and a butterfly on his chest.

In addition to the aggravated sexual assault, assault and burglary charges he faced from the September incident, Christie now also faces escape charges.

A reward of up to $1,000 is being offered by the Governor's Office for information leading to Christie's recapture.

Anyone with knowledge of Christie's possible whereabouts is asked to call the Texas Crime Stoppers Advisory Council toll-free at

Several teams have first full workouts

Spring training is under way

Returning Hard-Hit Serve

Brad Allred, a member of the Hereford High School boys' tennis team, grimaces as he attempts to return a hard-hit serve from an opponent in a singles match Friday in the Hereford Team Tournament. The tournament was scheduled to conclude on Saturday. By The Associated Press
Doug DeCinces was working out at a new position, Mike Schmidt at an old one, and Omar Moreno was with a new team as several clubs began their first full spring training workouts.

DeCinces, a third baseman, working out at first base.

But Manager Gene Mauch, who must find a replacement for Rod Carew, said rookie Wally Joyner still was the leading candidate. Mauch said he hadn't really discussed a move with DeCinces.

"I've only asked him whether he could play there if he had to," Mauch said. "He said, 'I could play it in my sleep.'"

In Clearwater, Fla., Schmidt was back at third base for the Philadelphia Phillies after ending last season at first, and he immediately announced he intended to win back his gold glove.

"No problem, first or third," Schmidt said. "I've got my glove right here ready to break in. I'll work hard taking a lot of ground balls to regain the form I once had as a third baseman."

Moreno, meanwhile, spent his first day with the Atlanta Braves Friday at their West Palm Beach, Fla., camp after signing as a free agent. Moreno, released by the New York Yankees after the 1985 season, was assigned to the Braves' AAA Richmond roster.

Another signee was outfielder Dan Gladden, who put his name on a one-year contract with the San Francisco Giants. He was the only remaining unsigned player on the Giants' roster as they worked out in Scottsdale, Ariz.

In St. Petersburg, Fla., the St. Louis Cardinals trainer, Gene Giesemann, said he was "very encouraged" with the progress of shortstop Ozzie Smith, who injured the rotator cuff in his right shoulder last season. Smith underwent therapy over the winter.

Dave Winfield worked out for the first time at the Yankees camp in Fort Lauderdale, Fla. The Yankees held their first full workout two days ago, and owner George Steinbrenner had criticized Winfield for not showing up. Under the Basic Agreement, Winfield actually had until March 5 to report, however.

"The club was familiar with what I was doing," said Winfield, who was involved in work with his own foundation for underprivileged children.

Guy V. Lewis: Rancher who became coach

By MICHAEL A. LUTZ AP Sports Writer

HOUSTON (AP) — A career decision 33 years ago turned an East Texas farmer-rancher into one of the most successful college basketball coaches of all time.

Guy V. Lewis, who will retire at the end of this season, was at first reluctant to leave the peaceful rolling hills and the family's 700-acre farm for a high-pressure career in college basketball.

After he graduated from Houston in 1947, Lewis and his wife Den were anxious to settle down near Arp, a dot along State Road 135 south of Tyler.

Lewis turned down an offer to become an assistant coach for the Cougars. "I just wanted to settle down," Lewis said. "I planned to just farm and raise some cattle."

But three years later, when the Cougars again offered him a job, Lewis was ready to leave the country life to produce hoops instead of holsteins.

He served a three-year apprenticeship as an assistant to Alden Pasche before starting a 30-year success story as the Cougar coach that produced a record of 591-278 going into the final game of regular season play.

After posting losing seasons in Lewis' first three years, the Cougars ran off a string of 26 consecutive non-losing seasons, going into the current campaign. They enjoyed 20-victory seasons 14 times.

Lewis' teams advanced to the NCAA playoffs 14 times, including five trips to the Final Four tournament.

He was named Associated Press Coach of the year in 1968 during the Elvin Hayes era and again in 1983, when Akeem Olatunji was leader of the Cougar's Phi Slama Jama dunking fraternity.

Lewis will close out his coaching career as the 11th winningest coach of all time.

Led by Hayes and Olatunji, Lewis has tutored 29 players into the pros and 26 have been 1,000-point career college scorers.

He never has regretted turning in his overalls for pin stripes.

He's staunchly defended by many of his former players, such as Hayes and Olatunji. But he also had critics who said he couldn't win the big games.

"They would have been saying the same thing about Dean Smith (North Carolina Coach) if he'd never won a national title," said Hayes, now an administrative assistant at Houston and a candidate to replace Lewis.

"I remember they said Wilt (Chamberlain) was a loser until he led two teams to the championship."

Lewis treats praise and criticism with the same shrug.

"Nobody gets into coaching expecting to win a popularity contest," Lewis said. "I don't like the criticism but it doesn't bother me."

"There were a lot of pressure games and a lot of big games we had to win to get to the Final Four. I suppose somebody must have been doing something right."

Lewis was unprepared in a recent interview to recount his favorite memories.

"Memories?" he repeated almost incredulously. "I'm not going around thinking about the highlights of my career. When I get out, I'll have memories. Right now, I'm still trying to win some ball games."

When Lewis gets around to sorting out 30-plus years on the hardwoods, he'll likely remember:

— Becoming the forerunner of integration in Texas by signing Elvin

Hayes and Don Chaney in 1964.

— Coaching the Cougars to a 71-69 victory over Kareem Abdul-Jabbar and the UCLA Bruins on Jan. 20, 1968, in what became known as "The game of the century."

— Houston's 1968 Final Four appearance when the Cougars took a 31-0 record into the tournament and lost both games.

— The 1983 Final Four when the Cougars were heavy favorites in the title game against North Carolina State, but lost 54-52 on a last second shot by Lorenzo Charles.

Closing seconds losses, in fact, played a role in Lewis' decision to step down this year.

After a bitter one-point overtime loss to Texas Tech Jan. 4 Lewis told his family this might be his last year. A 71-68 loss to Rice on Jan. 11 was the final straw.

"I made up my mind about 3 a.m. following the Rice game," Lewis said.

Although he remains in good health, Lewis admitted the tension had started to take its toll.

"Game after game, I can't take it like used to," Lewis said. "One-point ball games are for young coaches. I like to win them by 20 or 30 points."

Lewis, 63, admits he'd started thinking about retirement before the season started.

Houston had lost Tito Horford, declared ineligible by the NCAA because of a recruiting violation. Horford was the sixth player since the end of last season Lewis lost to defection or grades.

Lewis has not decided what he'll do in retirement. He likes to travel and would consider an opportunity to coach in Europe for one year.

"I haven't ruled that out," Lewis said. "I might do that for a year if the right place opened up. I haven't had any offers, just a few feelers."

Lewis says he'll go a little gardening and yard work for relaxation.

He agreed with a suggestion that he might draw a crowd of neighbors to oversee his gardening decisions just as he had been critiqued for his coaching decisions.

It would go something like: "Look where Guy planted the petunias. How could he put them there? Obviously, the man's no gardner."

Lewis, smiling at the possible scene, glanced at the five Final Four banners flying above the Hofheinz Pavilion court and replied, "I wouldn't be surprised if they did."

Basketball coach Jim Killingsworth

TCU's 'Killer' is circus-in-a-suit

An AP Sports Analysis
By DENNE H. FREEMAN
AP Sports Writer

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) - Jim Killingsworth, besides being one of the best bench coaches in collegiate basketball, is a circus-in-a-suit.

Give yourself a treat just once. Go to a game and watch the man they call "Killer" at Texas Christian University in his two-act drama: first half and second half.

He's bluff and bombast, gruff and growl, tenacious and tough.

He coos and cajoles, patronizes and pardons, instructs and intimidates.

Officials and players catch all of the above and then some.

The stocky 62-year-old Killingsworth, who has been coaching the game 36 years, is built along the lines of a fox terrier crossed with a pit bulldog.

He doesn't shout, he barks. His face turns a progressively darker shade of red with each emotional outburst.

By the first five minutes of the game he's shed his coat and loosened his tie. The first call against TCU is met with a hail of words and finger pointing.

Killingsworth often stalks officials from the restraining stripe which a coach can't cross without an automatic technical foul.

He waits, hands on hips, for an official to come running by then delivers his sermon like it came right out of a Sten gun.

"Are you betting on the game?" is one of Killingsworth's favorite shots.

Amazingly, Killingsworth has drawn only one technical foul during TCU's dramatic climb to the top of the SWC basketball heap as of last week.

"Killer's voice doesn't carry real well," says Glenn Stone, TCU sports information director. "It's probably a good thing."

Stone also hastily adds that the two times Killingsworth kicked over chairs the officials were looking the other way. Great timing.

In TCU's amazing 55-54 victory over Texas last Saturday — won on a 30-foot shot at the buzzer by Jamie Dixon — Killingsworth had a strep throat.

Lip readers had a field day but Killingsworth's steaming critiques of the officiating came off like the squeak of a mouse.

There's no telling what would have happened if TCU hadn't won because it appeared Dixon was fouled on the shot.

"I'd be out there somewhere chasing those guys down," said Killingsworth. "They hacked poor Jamie to death and wouldn't call it."

Killingsworth is a battler and the attitude has rubbed off on his players.

The Horned Frogs lead the nation in defense against field goals and are in the top five in defense against scoring.

"TCU will scrap the skin right off your back," said an admiring SWC coach. "They do the very best with what they've got."

Killingsworth used to be a chain smoker but now he's a five pack-a-day man in the chewing gum league. He's also gained 20 pounds.

"We're glad coach quit smoking," said redshirt Tim Mortimer. "He used to spend the first 45 seconds of a timeout coughing. Now he has more time to set up plays."

Killingsworth's dry cleaning bills are a big secret.

"You should see his coats after a game," says Stone. "They are crumpled and dirty. He gives his coats a big workout."

Killingsworth's players love him because they know he is scrapping for them as though he were playing in the game.

"The Killer makes us want to do anything we can to win for him," says forward Larry Richard.

And that's what TCU has been doing in its first 20 game victory season since 1959.

"Killer" calls it the best "team-team" he's ever had.

"We don't have any selfish players," said Killingsworth. "These guys obviously aren't that big or strong. But they don't appear bothered by work. We probably do the dirty work — the non-glory part of the game better than any team I've coached."

Or any team he's ever lost his voice over.

Rangers' Parrish wants to be traded

POMPANO BEACH, Fla. (AP) — Baseball spring training is just under way, but one of the Texas Rangers is looking for another home.

Outfielder Larry Parrish asked to be traded because he is concerned about his contract and his role with the American League West team.

But Texas Rangers General Manager Tom Grieve says no deals are imminent.

Parrish, his agent Dick Moss and Grieve all confirmed that Parrish, a 32-year-old veteran, wanted to be traded.

"I don't want to make a big thing out of this," said Parrish, starting his fifth season in Texas. "I'm not trying to stir up trouble. I'm not going to burn my uniform on the field or anything like that."

"I like Texas and I've enjoyed playing there. But I'm at the stage of my life where I've got to think about my family and what's best for me for the rest of my career," Parrish told the Fort Worth Star-Telegram.

Parrish, signed through 1987 with an option for 1988 at $600,000 a year, has been unhappy with his contract almost from the time he agreed to an extension two years ago.

He claims that then-general manager Joe Klein convinced him that the club could not afford to give him more. Parrish later learned that teammate Buddy Bell's contract renegotiation included almost a $1 million bonus and he watched in frustration as the Rangers laddered out high-priced contracts to aging free agents Cliff Johnson and Burt Hooton last winter.

"The contract is a part of it," Moss said. "When he got the extension two years ago, it was a sub-standard agreement."

There have been allusions to verbal promises made by Klein to upgrade the contract but Parrish, who switched from agent Bill Averitt to Moss a year ago, is vague about those.

"Whether it's promises or hints that they (the Rangers) would do something soon, the bottom line is, it hasn't happened," Moss said. "In fairness to the Rangers, they did seem ready to do something last year when Larry injured his knee."

That injury, which resulted in arthroscopic surgery in July, is one of the hangups in dealing Parrish, Grieve said.

"Larry's not in a good position to be traded because we're not going to take 25 cents on the dollar," Grieve said. "His best chance for a trade is to prove this spring that he's 100 percent healthy."

Parrish also has expressed concern about manager Bobby Valentine's determination to use him at designated hitter this season. Parrish said he would prefer to play either outfield or third base, if his knee allowed it.

"I think I could handle either one," said Parrish, who hit .249 with 17 homers and 51 RBIs in 94 games last season.

Parrish, acquired from Montreal along with Dave Hostetler for Al Oliver in the spring of 1982, also was upset when Bell was traded to Cincinnati last season.

Grieve said he had had no conversations with Parrish concerning his trade request but has talked to Moss about it.

"If he wants a trade because of his contract, no one's told me that," Grieve said. "There may be some logical reasons why but I'm not going to speculate on them."

"I don't have any plans to trade Larry Parrish and I won't be discussing this for the rest of spring training. We certainly won't make a trade contingent on his passing a physical or on how his knee responds."

The Chicago Cubs and Chicago White Sox, the New York Yankees and the Kansas City Royals have had interest in Parrish during the last year.

The Rangers said they would not shop Parrish before the winter meetings in December, after almost trading him to Pittsburgh the previous December.

DAN STILL GOOD
NEW YORK (AP) — If anything has gone from Dan Quisenberry's submarine fast ball, it's hard to tell by looking at the records.

Despite rumors that Dan's pitches slowed down a little in 1985, the ace reliever of the champion Kansas City Royals won the American League Rolaids Relief Man Award for the fourth consecutive season and the fifth time overall.

Quisenberry had 37 saves during the regular season. The top reliever in the National League was Jeff Reardon of Montreal, who had 41 saves, a major-league high for the year.

Len Dawson, now a pro football commentator, completed 2,115 passes for 28,507 yards during his 14 seasons as Kansas City Chief quarterback.

New ag program to help reclaim land

By DON KENDALL AP Farm Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Agriculture Department has allocated five million acres of highly erodible land to the states under a new, long-range program that will be opened for signup by farmers next week.

Under the voluntary Conservation Reserve Program, authorized by Congress in last year's farm bill, up to 45 million acres of deteriorated land could be on the way to recovery by 1990.

Farmers can participate by signing 10-year contracts pledging to keep land from crop production and to plant grass and trees on it.

In exchange, farmers will get annual rental payments from the government, along with one-time sharing of costs to plant the protective cover.

The program is scheduled to cover five million acres this year, 10 million acres or more each year in 1987 through 1989, and five million acres or more in 1990.

Signup in the program for 1986 will be March 3-14 at local offices of the Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service. A second signup for 1987 will be held during the summer.

According to USDA budget officials, the program will cost about $190 million for the remainder of this fiscal year, which ends Sept. 30; $550 million in 1986-87; and $950 million in 1987-88.

The rent farmers will be paid by the government will depend on the size of bids submitted and which ones are accepted. The annual payments will not be affected by the Gramm-Rudman balanced-budget law, which mandates 4.3 percent cuts in many other USDA programs beginning March 1.

But Assistant Secretary Peter Myers, who oversees the department's natural resources and environmental operations, said Gramm-Rudman will be applied to the cost-sharing payments made to farmers for converting highly erodible cropland to grass and trees.

In writing last year's farm bill, Congress provided a number of other conservation measures, including "sodbuster" and "swampbuster" provisions that get tough on farmers who misuse fragile land by planting it into crops.

Myers said Thursday in a telephone interview with a group of editors that the Conservation Reserve Program could reward farmers who abused land in the 1970s by plowing it up and planting crops.

"Yes, it would penalize the guy that's been doing an excellent job of conservation with terraces and contour farming," Myers said in reply to a question. "In some cases, he won't qualify for the program if he's got all of his acres" under conservation practices.

But he said, "There's no way to run this program in any other manner and get this highly erodible cropland out of production."

Myers called the conservation provisions of the new law a "very historic" move to help slow down the erosion of valuable farmland. The program, he said, is "the carrot approach to getting highly erodible land out of production."

Other provisions in the law will require farmers to account for their use of highly erodible land if they want to be eligible for federal benefits, including Farmers Home Administration loans, crop insurance and crop deficiency payments.

Under the program, the department has set up a national pool of 69.5 million acres of highly erodible land that is eligible for conversion from crops to grass or trees. That represents about one-sixth of the 421 million acres of cropland in the United States as of 1982.

According to the law, no more than 25 percent of the cropland in a county can be idled under the program unless the secretary of agriculture decides the impact would be minimal.

Texas leads with nearly 11.5 million acres eligible for the program, followed by Iowa, 6.6 million acres; Montana, 5.7 million; Missouri, 4.1 million; Colorado, 3.7 million; Illinois, 3.05 million; and Kansas, 2.5 million.

State-by-state, the number of eligible acres, percentage of total cropland in each state and the state's 1986 share of the five million acres allocated, is:

- Alabama, 842,200 acres, 18.7 percent of the state's total cropland and 60,600 acres allocated for the 1986 program.
- Alaska, no figures available.
- Arizona, 54,400 acres, 4.5 percent and 3,900.
- Arkansas, 465,600 acres, 5.7 percent and 33,500.
- California, 634,000 acres, 6.0 percent and 45,000.
- Colorado, 3,677,600 acres, 34.7 percent and 264,600.
- Connecticut, 47,800 acres, 19.5 percent and 3,400.
- Delaware, 13,900 acres, 2.7 percent and 1,000.

Soil temperature plays key role in good stand of cotton

COLLEGE STATION -- Soil temperature plays a key role in getting an early, uniform stand of cotton, so farmers need to keep a close check on this situation.

On the High Plains, early research has shown that a 10-day average minimum soil temperature of 60 degrees F. at the 8-inch depth is a recommended time to start planting cotton. Although this may appear conservative, using soil temperature as a guide has resulted in earlier plantings and established stands more often than when optimum dates are used, points out Dr. Bob Metzger, cotton specialist with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service, The Texas A&M University System.

In other production areas, farmers have used an average soil temperature of 60-65 degrees F. at the 4-inch depth, Metzger points out.

To avoid wide daily fluctuations, take daily readings at 7 to 8 a.m. for period of one week to 10 days, suggests the specialist. Use this soil temperature planting guide only to establish the earliest possible planting date. Soil temperature becomes less of a determining factor for late-season planting when soil becomes warmer.

Unless highly vigorous seed are used, poor seedling survival can be expected if seed remain in soil with an average temperature below 60 degrees F. over a prolonged period, notes Metzger. Only high quality, vigorous seed have the ability to remain in cold soil over a prolonged period and germinate once a favorable soil temperature is reached.

Unfavorable soil conditions plus weak, low quality seed can result in decayed seed, slow emergence and poor, erratic stands. Matters become even worse if weak seed have broken seed coats or gin cuts that allow soil borne organisms to enter.

The lower the soil temperature, the greater the number of days necessary for seedlings to emerge, says Metzger. If soil temperature averages 55 degrees F. during the planting period, 15 to 20 days may be needed for seedling emergence. However, with soil temperature at 70 degrees F. seedlings will likely emerge in only six days.

Planting early in cold soil at temperatures below 60 degrees F. does not necessarily insure earlier fruiting, adds the specialist. First bloom may be delayed as long as 65 to 85 days after planting in soils that average lower than 60 degrees F. But when the soil temperature at planting goes above 60 degrees, the first bloom may appear as soon as 45 to 55 days. This indicates that more rapid plant development occurs in warmer soil.

So, as planting season looms ahead, cotton farmers should keep tabs on soil temperature as well as the five-day weather forecast. "Jumping the gun" on planting could mean a poor stand of cotton and the added expense of replanting, cautions Metzger.

Freeman urges quick appointment

WASHINGTON (AP) — A former secretary of agriculture, Orville L. Freeman, now president of the Agriculture Council of America, has urged President Reagan "to appoint expeditiously" a special White House aide for agricultural trade and food aid.

The post of special assistant to the president was authorized in the farm bill passed by Congress late last year.

Freeman, who served eight years as secretary of agriculture in the 1960s, told Reagan in a letter that the appointee should "be able to meet and negotiate with chiefs of state and reflect the broad support of American farmers and agribusiness. With such a person, we are confident that your agricultural initiatives will be enhanced and that overall farm exports will be increased."

The council is a private organization representing commodity groups and other agriculture and business organizations.

Freeman was supported in his letter to Reagan by the National Association of Wheat Growers, National Council of Farmer Cooperatives, CARE, National Grange, National Cooperative Business Association, U.S. Overseas Cooperative Development Committee, and the American Association of Railroads.

New programs set for show

FORT WORTH — A series of special programs will be featured at the 15th Annual Southwest Farm and Ranch Exposition. These programs will include the New World of Agriculture Forum, FFA Tractor Mechanics Contest, Natural Fibers Showcase, and Garden to Gourmet. The theme will be "Country Estate Living for Fun and Profit" for the different workshops planned for Saturday & Sunday, March 8 & 9.

Dates for show are March 7, 8 and 9

Better use of water from playa lakes studied

LUBBOCK — Sometimes things just aren't as easy as they would seem.

That's the conclusion Lloyd V. Urban of the Texas Tech University Water Resources Center reached after 18 months of study at a specially designed drainage field installed beneath an area playa lake.

The drainage system was constructed to filter out certain clays so that the filtered water could be injected into the aquifer without clogging up the recharge well. And, it worked.

"The concept is viable," Dr. Urban said, "but we encountered more operational problems than we had initially anticipated."

Roots, rodents and salamanders were among the unanticipated problems which complicated an already complex problem of how to make better use of the water collecting in the South Plains' 19,000 playa lakes after wet spells.

The soil of most playa lakes is Randall Clay which effectively cements the bottoms of playa lakes. Consequently, most of the rainfall which gathers there does not seep underground toward the aquifer, but is trapped until it evaporates. Further, water in the lake is so laden with clay particles that it cannot be pumped unfiltered into the aquifer without clogging the well.

"There's no simple solution to using playa water or somebody would've thought of it and succeeded before now," Urban said.

Researchers in the Texas Tech Civil Engineering Department approached the problem by burying 16 different configurations of filter material in a wagonwheel pattern beneath a dry playa lake. The filters, originally manufactured for use in drainage and foundation work around buildings, were laid on a base of sand, then covered with more sand and topsoil. Rainwater seeps down to the filters and then is carried to a recharge well, Urban said.

"The research conducted to date demonstrates that aquifer recharge using playa lake water can be done on a wider basis and more economically than had previously been thought," Urban said. "But we have more work to do in order to achieve our objective of making the concept better technically and economically on the scale we would like to see."

The initial stage of the research suggests several possible improvements. First, more maintenance—such as shallow plowing—is necessary than originally anticipated to keep the water flowing. Second, the vertical trenches the drainage lines were buried in should be replaced by "vee" shaped trenches to increase the seepage. Third, a precise installation of the filters is necessary to maximize the water flow. And fourth, damage by roots and animals such as rodents and salamanders must be taken into account to determine a system's longevity. Its longevity may ultimately decide the extent of its economic feasibility.

On the positive side, Urban said the experiment did return a significant volume of water with favorable water quality results.

The bottom line, Urban said, is that the concept appears technically and economically feasible now for municipalities and potentially feasible for farmers who need a source to augment their irrigation supplies.

"Our next step will utilize our findings to expand the field test and zero in on the most promising designs," Urban said. "We hope to optimize the installation and operation techniques to make the system more economical."

The research is receiving funding from the Texas Advanced Technology Research Program and from the Water Resources Center at Texas Tech.

"One of the spinoffs of this research," Urban said, "is that we are learning a lot more about the role of the playa lakes in the hydrology of the region. With some 19,000 playas on the South Plains, they are too important a potential resource for us not to understand them so we can best use them."

Beef, feedlot management session set this summer at WT

West Texas State University's School of Agriculture will offer its first Beef and Feedlot Management Institute this summer. The institute, designed for graduate students, will allow participants to earn up to 12 hours of graduate credit while preparing for careers in the cattle industry.

According to Dr. James Thompson, dean of the school of agriculture, there are 110 feedlots feeding more than 5 million head of cattle each year within 125 miles of West Texas State University. "We can offer first-hand experience here in the Panhandle that might not be available in other areas of the country," he said. "Our long-range goal," said Thompson, "is to have more and better employees for the area cattle industry."

The first summer session, June 2 through July 7, will offer courses in Range Management, taught by Dr. Ron Thomason, and Techniques in Animal Research, taught by Dr. Ted Montgomery.

The second summer session, July 10 through August 14, will offer Advanced Feedlot Management, taught by Dr. Joe Sagebiel, and Agricultural Marketing Analysis, taught by Dr. Arden Colette.

Participants in the Beef and Feedlot Management Institute who wish to transfer credits to other universities will be offered transient admission to WTSU's graduate school.

Estimated costs, including tuition, fees, books, room, and board, are $620 for Texas residents per session and $1270 for non-residents. However, the livestock industry has contributed a number of scholarships that would reduce the cost to only $220 per session.

For scholarship applications, applications for admission or other information, contact Dr. James Thompson, Dean, WTSU School of Agriculture, WT Box 998, Canyon Tx. 79106, or call (806)656-2646.

Journalists have wrong ideas about Japanese agriculture

WASHINGTON (AP) — A senior Japanese agricultural official says too many journalists have the wrong impression that Japan's farming is behind the times.

Yutaka Yoshioka, editor of a newsletter published by the Japan International Agricultural Council, said in a recent issue that big-city Japanese journalists often distort their own country's agriculture, although there have been improvements in recent years.

So, it is not surprising that the picture of Japanese agriculture painted by Western journalists should be "very distorted," he said.

"As I see it, the Western image of Japanese agriculture is still at the stage of 'Mt. Fuji, cherry blossoms and geisha,'" Yoshioka said.

"If Western reporters assigned to cover Japan are city journalists without any knowledge of agriculture, it is highly doubtful that they would be able to write about agriculture in their own country, much less Japanese agriculture," he said.

Yoshioka was Japan's agricultural counselor in Washington in the late 1960s. Later, after returning to Japan, he held high-ranking positions in the Ministry of Agriculture and Forestry.

According to a 1983 survey, Yoshioka said, 81.5 percent of the 3.72 million Japanese farms that grew rice planted the grain with machines. The editorial also said that tractors and other machines are popular.

Scholarships are offered

WTSU — The board of directors for the Panhandle Grain and Feed Association has voted to award four $500 scholarships to beginning freshman agriculture majors at West Texas State University.

Scholarship selection will be based upon promise of academic success in college, residence in the Texas Panhandle, and the likelihood of future employment in the grain and feed industry after college. High school seniors interested in these scholarships should contact Dr. James Thompson, dean of WTSU's School of Agriculture, and apply before March 15. Thompson's address is WT Box 998, Canyon, Tx. 79016.

This is the second year these scholarships have been provided by the Panhandle Grain and Feed Association.

WHILE THE FIGURES ARE NOT TOTALLY IN FOR 1985, we recently saw the food costs figures for 1984 and they illustrate what those of us living in rural communities already know. These figures show that for every dollar spent for food at supermarkets and restaurants... only 27 cents went to the American farmer. In 1984, labor costs associated with shipping, preparation, and marketing accounted for 23% of the consumer price of the food while packaging cost 8%, advertising 2%, transportation 5%, and energy 4%, etc. And while the American farmer is getting the small end of the deal, American consumers pay relatively lower food prices as compared to much of the world. A consumer in Sweden paid 30 cents a pound for flour, with the French paying even more at 62 cents, while the U.S. shopper paid only 21 cents. If America is to continue to get the best food for the dollar, it's producers need to be rewarded on a better percentage basis.

Versatility; WTRT Co-op's Key To Past, Present & Future Success

West Texas Rural Telephone Cooperative. Most everyone in the Hereford area has heard of the telephone cooperative providing the rural areas with telephone service. But, not everyone understands or realizes the many other services and businesses that West Texas Rural Telephone Cooperative and its' subsidiary, W.T. Services Inc., has to offer.

From basic phone service to the latest in security systems, from mobile phones to reduced long distance rates, West Texas Rural Telephone Co-op and W. T. Services Inc. provide all of these services and more.

History

Incorporated in 1951 for the sole purpose of providing phone service to the rural areas of Deaf Smith, Castro, Bailey and Parmer counties, West Texas Rural Telephone Co-op now has approximately 1800 subscribers. W.T.R.T. was formed through a government entity, the Rural Electrification Administration, which made low-interest loans available for the Cooperative to begin installing phone lines and equipment to the rural areas outside of Hereford.

"At the time, there was no phone service outside of the city limits", Richard Thompson, Plant Superintendent explained, "Southwestern Bell Telephone could not justify the expense of running lines throughout the countryside just for a handful of customers."

After the phone lines and equipment were installed by the Cooperative, they interconnected with Southwestern Bell Telephone long distance network. In addition to the convenience of a telephone in their house, rural residents became members of the Cooperative when they begin to take phone service.

The Cooperative remains strictly member-owned today just as it was when formed in 1951. Anyone subscribing for phone service or having a mobile phone through the Cooperative, must be a member. The members, or stockholders as they are referred to, elect the officers every year during the annual meeting from the general membership of the stockholders. Each officer serves a three year term.

Present

Since its' beginning, West Texas Rural Telephone Cooperative has steadily grown and expanded their service into the modern age of technology.

With nine telephone exchanges and three mobile telephone exchanges, West Texas Rural Telephone covers all of Deaf Smith, Parmer, Bailey County and the northern part of Castro County. Three of the exchanges are located in Deaf Smith County while two are in Castro County and the remaining four in Parmer County. Five digital exchanges enables the Cooperative to offer such features as tele-touch, call-forwarding, call-waiting, speed dialing and three-way phone conversations. The other four exchanges remain mechanical.

WTRT Building

West Texas Rural Telephone Cooperative and its' subsidiary, W.T. Services, Inc., is located on S. Hwy 385. After being incorporated in 1951, WTRT was located at 216 N. 25 Mile Ave. until 1971 when they moved to their present location. WTRT and W.T. Services offer a variety of services to both the residential and commercial customer.

"We have plans to eventually convert all of our exchanges to digital, so we can offer these features to all of our subscribers," Thompson said. "The process is slow on account of the expense but we'll have all of the exchanges digital in the near future", he said.

W.T. Services

In 1983, following the divestiture of Bell and AT & T, West Texas Rural Telephone Cooperative decided to take further advantage of the communications market by forming a subsidiary for the sales and service of residential and commercial telephone systems. The subsidiary, W.T. Services Inc., has no outside investors. All stock in the company is owned completely by West Texas Rural Telephone Cooperative.

W.T. Services Inc. offers the latest on the market in phone systems for residential or commercial use. Whether it's a basic single line telephone for their home or an advanced PBX (Private Branch Exchange) system for their business or company, W.T. Services Inc. has the system best suited for the customers' home or business needs.

After the customer expresses his interest in purchasing a system and the right one for his home or business is agreed upon, the remaining paperwork is taken care of by W.T. Services Inc.

"We handle all of the necessary paperwork and red tape for the customer when they wish to purchase a system from us," Jerry Walker, W.T. Services Inc. salesman explained. "Southwestern Bell and AT & T has everyone fill out certain forms when purchasing their own system. We take care of all this, so our customers won't have to put with this extra headache," he said.

Not only does W.T. Services Inc. sell phone systems for residential and commercial use, they also service all customer-owned phones and systems.

"We work on any phone or system that is owned by the customer even if we didn't sell it to them ourselves", Walker said. "The only restrictions we have for working on telephones is that we won't work on leased equipment."

Mobilcomm

One of the first steps W.T. Services Inc. took in improving their service to the mobile communications customer was to purchase Mobilcomm in 1984. By acquiring Mobilcomm, W.T. Services Inc. was then able to provide service and maintenance for all commercial mobile communications systems, mainly mobile phones and two-way radios.

After receiving their authorization as a Motorola Service Station in 1985, W.T. Services Inc. now does all warranty work and service contracts for Motorola in the area. A second W.T. Services Inc. Motorola Service Station was opened in Muleshoe recently. The only other authorized Motorola Service Stations in the area are in Amarillo, Clovis, and Plainview.

Quality Answering Service

Another acquisition of W.T. Services Inc. was Quality Answering Service. Purchased in 1985, the business was moved to 902 N. Lee to offer full and part time answering service for business and residential customers. An extension of the customer's phone is answered 24 hours a day—seven days a week at Quality Answering Service and any messages are later forwarded to the customer himself.

"We will answer a customer's phone 24 hours a day, seven days a week if that's what they require. But, we're very flexible", Walker said. "For instance, if a customer knows they will be out-of-pocket for a certain length of time each day, we will answer his phone for that period of time only," Walker concluded.

Phone Store

Also in the same building, at 902 N. Lee, is W.T. Services Phone Store. The Phone Store offers everyone an opportunity to shop for a phone to suit their taste much like a person would shop for clothes. A wide selection of telephones in different models, styles and colors are available and a complete line of telephone accessories are also kept in stock.

ITI Security Systems

In 1985, now firmly established, W.T. Services Inc. took a bold step into a totally new market by becoming a fully licensed security company for the sales, service and monitoring of residential and commercial security systems. The system, made by ITI (Interactive Technology Incorporated), is a fully monitored wireless security system for burglary, fire and medical emergencies.

Every system is monitored 24 hours a day by a trained and licensed professional. In case of an intrusion, fire, or medical emergency, the proper authorities are contacted and dispatched to the home or business. A medical emergency is detected when a person presses a particular code into the control panel and an ambulance or medic is contacted immediately.

"The system is sensitive enough to detect where the actual break-in occurred or where the fire is located," Walker summarized, "This is important since it saves time for the police or the firemen in not having to look for the break-in or the fire. They know exactly what part of the home or business has been violated."

The system is mainly computerized and is the latest technology on the market in security systems. A customer can buy from the very basic system to the most elaborate for their their home or business. W.T. Services Inc. offers free demonstrations and estimates, and they are also factory-authorized for the service and maintenance of the systems.

Everyone connected with the security systems, whether it's sales, service, or monitoring, must be licensed by the State of Texas. W.T. Services Inc. official license is Texas Security License B-4288.

"You must be bonded and licensed by the State of Texas if you want to handle a security system such as the one we carry," Walker stated. "They (State of Texas) do a very thorough job in checking out the business and their personnel's background that will be working with the system in any manner," he said.

Motorola 800

During the first part of 1986, a new concept in mobile public communications was installed with the implementation of the Motorola 800

Trunking System by W.T. Services Inc. This new concept offers the unique combination of mobile phone and two-way radio within the same system.

The mobile phone is totally private and the two-way radio is also private within the customer's fleet. The unit has a five-channel capability as compared to the one-channel unit that most have at the present.

"The biggest advantage of the Motorola 800 Trunking System, besides the combination of mobile phone and two-way radio, is the five-channel capability," Walker said describing the unit. "If you call and one channel is busy, it will automatically transfer to the next free channel. If all the channels are tied up, which is unlikely, the unit will let you know when the first one becomes available", he said.

The system is located in Summerfield where a 400 foot tower is connected directly into one of W.T.R.T. Co-op's central phone exchanges. A customer will be able to use their Motorola 800 Trunking system across the state and country as more towers are installed across the U.S.

Motorola sells the actual units, but W.T. Services Inc. owns and operates all the equipment, including the tower, needed to make the units operative in this area. Free demonstrations and estimates are offered by W.T. Services Inc.

Hereford Long Distance Service

W.T. Services Inc., along with several private investors, formed Hereford Long Distance Services, Inc. in 1984 located conveniently at 902 N. Lee. Their objective was to provide substantially reduced long distance rates for the Hereford customers as an alternative to the rates they normally paid for other long distance service. W.T. Services Inc. is the major stockholder in the corporation.

Anyone with a touch-tone telephone in Hereford is eligible to sign-up for the service. The service is available for residential or commercial customers. W.T. Services Inc. handles the billing for all the long distance calls that a customer makes during the month.

"You can call anywhere in the continental U.S. with our long distance service", Walker pointed out. "We don't have any hook-up charges, and no monthly minimums. Quite frankly, you pay for what you use. No more. No less," he said.

Employees

West Texas Rural Telephone Cooperative and W.T. Services Inc. are proud of their 43 employees and the record of efficiency they have compiled.

As experienced professionals in their respective areas, they are ready to serve you and your needs.

Anyone having any questions pertaining to the many services that W.T.R.T. and W.T. Services Inc. has to offer, be sure and call 364-3331 or come by their office located on South Highway 385 for a free estimate or demonstration.

"The Eyes of Texas" are upon the 1986 Miss Hereford contestants

All eyes will be focused on some of Hereford's cream of the crop as these 15 young women participate in the 1986 Miss Hereford Scholarship Pageant.

Keeping in step with the Texas Sesquicentennial celebration, these women will be performing to the theme of "The Eyes of Texas." The pageant will begin at 7 p.m. Saturday, March 8, at the Hereford High School auditorium.

Vying for the title in Photo C will be Lacy Driver, Kim Emerick, Noel Avery, Yolanda Chavez, and Melanie Holmes.

Miss Hereford Scholarship Pageant set March 8

Fifteen local beauties will be competing for the 1986 Miss Hereford Scholarship Pageant title during the event planned at 7 p.m. Saturday, March 8, at the Hereford High School auditorium.

Tickets for the event, which is sponsored annually by the Women's Division, are priced at $2.50 per person and are available at the Deaf Smith County Chamber of Commerce office and both Hereford State and First National Banks. They may also be purchased from any pageant steering committee member or at the door.

"The Eyes of Texas" is this year's pageant theme according to co-chairman, Lanette Leasure and Rhonda Nieman.

Special entertainment will be provided by the reigning Miss Hereford, Amy Quillen, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ray Quillen of 800 Baltimore.

The Hereford High School drill team will also be performing and members of the HHS Key Club will serve as ushers for the evening.

Vying for the 1986 crown will be Heather Gee, daughter of Warren and Billie Jo Gee, sponsored by K-Bob's Steak House; Angie Rickman, granddaughter of Mr. and Mrs. Floyd Rickman, Cabachon; Delight Thames, daughter of John and Sheila Thames, The Lemon Tree; Noel Avery, daughter of John and Jeanine Avery, Hereford State Bank; Tonya Redwine, daughter of Jackie and Kay Redwin, Cal's One Hour Martinizing.

Also, Eva Medrano, daughter of Humberto and Rose Medrano, Hereford Tortilla Factory; Kim Emerick, daughter of David Emerick and Sylvia Emerick, Brown, Graham and Co., P.C.; Yolanda Chavez, daughter of Lupe and Janie Chavez, Wishes; Andrea Wall, daughter of Billy Joe and Suzy Wall, Wall and Sons Drilling.

Others, Lacy Driver, daughter of Floy and Betty Driver, Gloria's Bridal Shop; Katie Ramey, daughter of Peyton and Jeanette Ramey, The Great American; Dallas Ann Phillips, daughter of Juanita Phillips, Don C. Tardy Real Estate; Devany Paschel, daughter of Larry and Jo Paschel, Pat Walker Figure Salon; Stacy Sanders, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Sanders, KPN Broadcasters, and Melanie Holmes, daughter of Oscar and Katy Holmes, Red Arrow Motor Freight.

The girls will be competing in three categories: evening gown, talent and interview.

A total of over $2,500 will be given away in the form of scholarships and wardrobe to the top three contestants.

Miss Hereford 1986 will receive a choice of three scholarships from West Texas State University, South Plains College and Frank Phillips College.

With a scholarship from the school of her choice, Miss Hereford will also receive a $800 wardrobe from local merchants including Anthony's, Betty's Shoes, Little's, Etc., Pant's Cage, Louise's, Penney's and The Vogue.

The pageant winner will also receive a commemorative Texas 1986 sesquicentennial pin to wear to all festivities during her reign.

First runner-up in the pageant will be given a $400 wardrobe and second runner-up will receive a $200 wardrobe from local merchants.

Each contestant in the pageant will be presented with a Miss Hereford Survival Kit with items donated by Buy Wise Beauty Supply, M.E. Moses, The Vogue, Merle Norman Cosmetics, Caryn's Hallmark, The Lemon Tree, Pat Walker Figure Salon, Brown, Graham and Co., P.C., Ink Spot Printing, Deaf Smith County Chamber of Commerce, Hereford

State Bank, First National Bank, Hereford Travel Center, LithoGraphics Printing and Office Supply and ERA Marn Tyler Realtors.

Also, Deanne Harris, a Mary Kay Cosmetics representative, will be assisting the girls with make-up techniques during the pageant.

A Miss Congeniality will be selected among the girls as well as the winner of the talent competition which will be selected by the judges. The winner of both categories will also receive a prize.

Along with the numerous gifts, the Miss Hereford steering committee will present each contestant with a 14K gold heart pendant.

Assisting the committee co-chairmen are Patti Brown, Marilyn Cupepper, Betty Drake, Arvilla Lauderback, Cindy Simons, Donna Wet, Linda Daniel, Trish Workman, Angie Lauderback, Karen Keeling, Amanda Tackitt, Charla Edwards and Glenda Hansen. Pageant director is Keith Ann Gear.

Local youth groups to attend conference

Several local youth groups will be attending the Dawson McAllister Students Relationships Conference March 7-8 at Trinity Church in Lubbock.

McAllister, one of the leading Christian youth speakers in America, will be talking on issues that today's teenagers face.

The conference is scheduled to begin at 7 p.m. Friday and will conclude at 9 p.m. Saturday, March 8. The cost of registration is $18.

The event is open to all teens, college students, youth workers and parents. Approximately 1,200 teens and their sponsors from West Texas and New Mexico are expected to attend.

Youth groups interested in attending the interdenominational conference may call Randall Stotts at First Baptist Church, Dorman Duggan at Community Church, Ted Taylor at the Church of the Nazarene or any local youth worker.

All Senior High Fellowship of Christian Athlete members are welcome to attend at no cost by contacting Brett Clements or Ted Taylor.

DR. GOTT Good nutrition and the elderly

By Peter H. Gott, M.D.

Although all of us who grow old will experience predictable alterations in the ways our bodies work, medical science has been strangely reticent in analyzing the specific biochemical changes that come with age.

Particularly with respect to nutrition, investigators have historically failed to determine the ways in which nutritional support may improve the quality of life for an aging population. Early studies seemed to indicate that the nutritional needs of a 20-year-old were pretty much the same as those of a 70-year-old. We now know this isn't true. Studies are underway to decipher the ways in which the young and the old differ in their nutritional requirements. As a start, researchers are beginning to learn what actually happens to our bodies as we age.

For example, aging causes a modification of the body's composition. Lean body mass declines, while body fat increases. By age 70, most people have lost 40 percent of their muscle mass. The aged are far less able to metabolize sugar; they are deficient in the ability to synthesize, degrade and excrete fats. Therefore, blood sugar and body fat increase with age. Losses in bone density also occur; by age 80, women have lost 25 percent (and men 12 percent) of their bone densities.

As we age, more of our cells die. Of potentially greater importance, the surviving cells show impaired performance. By age 70, the kidneys and lungs lose about 10 percent of their weight and efficiency, while the liver loses 19 percent. There are progressive decrements in cellular enzymes, nerve-conduction velocity, resting cardiac output, renal bloodflow and respiratory efficiency. Hormone receptors become less functional and cells become less able to take up nutrients. Older people eat less, so they take in fewer calories, vitamins and minerals. These deficiencies are accentuated by stress, disease, poor absorption, alcohol, smoking and many types of medicine.

At present, there is no conclusive evidence that science can prolong life, across the board, by altering nutritional support in the elderly. Nevertheless, experts are becoming increasingly concerned that many aging people are not receiving adequate nutrition. An English study concluded that between 6 and 12 percent of Britons over age 70 may suffer from malnutrition.

Until specific guidelines are developed, nutritionists urge that the medical community appreciate more fully the special needs of the elderly. Despite an admittedly inadequate fund of information, specialists recommend certain basic strategies for the aged.

The average 20-to-34-year-old requires about 2,700 calories a day; a person in the 75-to-90-year-old range needs only 2,100 calories. These calories are best supplied by a broad range of foodstuffs, including dairy products, meat, vegetables, bread and cereals. Vitamin, mineral and trace-metal supplements are probably useful, providing they are not administered in doses exceeding twice the Recommended Daily Allowances. Foods that may provoke allergic reactions are to be avoided — such as wheat, for gluten-sensitive individuals. Saturated fat, like cholesterol, should be reduced. Sugar may have to be limited. Calcium (1,200 mgs.) and vitamin D supplements (250 I.U.s) can reduce bone loss. Increased dietary fiber and fruits may help alleviate the tendency to sluggish bowel action that comes with age. Liquid protein, strictly in the form of a supplement to a regular diet, may provide both calories and added nutritional value for elderly people who are unable (or unwilling) to maintain consistently adequate nutritional levels using ordinary food.

The most important consideration appears to be the obvious: Those individuals who become inactive or handicapped because of disease or infirmity continue to have nutritional requirements that may have to be supplied by intervention on the part of other adults.

As we age, we may not be able to eat our way to better health. However, some studies have shown that a falloff in nutritional levels can substantially add to problems related to aging. Therefore, the elderly need individualized attention to ensure that their basic, but changing, nutritional needs are being met.

Annual Red Cross chili supper March 8

Red Cross Volunteer of the Year will be named during the Deaf Smith County Red Cross annual chili supper set from 5-8 p.m. Saturday, March 8, at the Hereford Community Center.

Tickets, which will be available at the door, are priced at $3 per person. During the event, Bluegrass and country and western music will be played and a silent auction will be held. Anyone wishing to donate white elephant items and craft and art articles may do so by contacting the Red Cross office at 364-3761.

The highlight of the annual event will be the announcement of the Volunteer of the Year. Nominees for the award must be someone who has given time and/or talent, expertise, or donations to further the work of the Red Cross.

Nominations may be submitted to Nell Culpepper or brought to the Red Cross office, 224 S. Main St.

Culpepper and Bert Brown were last year's award recipients.

Pageant entrants may sign-up March 10-31

All young ladies who wish to vie for the 1986 Little Miss Pageant title may sign-up at the Deaf Smith County Chamber of Commerce office from March 10-31.

The event, which is sponsored annually by the Women's Division, is scheduled at 7 p.m. Saturday, April 12, in the Hereford High School auditorium.

"Wish Upon A Star" is the theme for the pageant which is being chaired by Claudia Wilson. Poppy Head is serving as co-chairman.

The four categories include Cutest Miss, age four through kindergarten; Miss Petite, grades 1-3; Miss Princess, grades 4-6; and Miss Junior High, grades 7-9.

MRS. MARTIN SCOTT MORGAN
...nee Karie Lynn Taylor

Couple exchanges vows Thursday

Karie Lynn Taylor of Amarillo became the bride of Martin Scott Morgan of Hereford during an evening wedding ceremony Thursday at First Christian Church.

The Rev. Mack McCarter, pastor, officiated.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Dale B. Taylor of Amarillo and the bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Ray Morgan of 108 Northwest Drive.

Maid of honor was Julie Pierce of Amarillo and best man was Randy King.

Stacey Martin of Amarillo was bridesmaid and Mike Hansard was groomsmen. Escorting guests were Matt Morgan of Amarillo and Michael Morgan.

Serving as flower girl was Tara King, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Randy King, and ring bearer was Sally Cochran, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Monte Cochran.

Mason Morgan lit candles. Cindy Morgan, who was accompanied by Gary Taylor, vocalized "Ice Castles," "There Is Love," and "Nobody Loves Me Like You Do."

Given in marriage by her father, the bride was attired in a formal white satin and chiffon gown fashioned with a large wedding ring collar and fitted bodice which was embellished with lace appliques and seed pearls.

The bishop sleeves of chiffon were enhanced at the cuffs by lace and seed pearls and the full skirt of the gown was edged in lace flowers and formed a cathedral-length train.

Her chiffon bridal veil was edged in lace and decorated by lace appliques and attached to a wreath of white roses, lace and seed pearls.

She carried a cascading bouquet of pink and burgundy flowers entwined with white lace and satin ribbon streamers. Her jewelry consisted of a pearl necklace.

Bridal attendants wore pink and burgundy gowns.

Jan King invited guests to register at the reception held in the church parlor.

Cake was served by Melissa Brown and Lorri Brown poured punch and coffee. Kaye Hansard was among other members of the houseparty who assisted at the reception.

Leaving for a wedding trip to Dallas, the bride wore a pink sweater with a burgundy skirt. The couple will make their home at Bell Place Apartments in Amarillo.

The bride graduated from Amarillo High School and is now attending Amarillo College majoring in physiological psychology.

The bridegroom is a graduate of Hereford High School and is attending paramedic school.

Not only does smoking hurt the smoker, but it can be expensive for the employer, says a Seattle University researcher. Professor William Weis told the Health Insurance Association of America that his analysis of workers who smoke shows they consistently run up big health and insurance bills for their employers.

POLLY'S POINTERS Bread dough jams machine

By Polly Fisher

DEAR POLLY — When I mix bread dough in my food processor, the machine seems to become clogged and the motor stops. Why does this happen and how can I remedy the situation? — MRS. V.C.H.

DEAR MRS. V.C.H. — Particularly soft or sticky doughs can be troublesome in a food processor. The dough works its way under the blade and up the column of the shaft. The motor labors and eventually overheats, then shuts off.

Too much dough will also overload the machine, causing it to shut off. Generally, if the motor starts to labor, it is helpful to add a little additional flour — a tablespoon or two. Sometimes this is enough to allow the machine to finish kneading the dough. However, with some very sticky doughs to which you don't want to add more flour, it's best to simply scrape the dough out of the work bowl and finish it off by hand.

If the machine does stop and you want to continue using it, simply wait a few minutes for the motor to cool off. It will reset and you'll be able to turn it on again. Add a little extra flour before turning it on, as described above. — POLLY

DEAR POLLY — Here's a Pointer my son discovered: Never put powdered sugar on top of a birthday cake that is going to have candles on to be blown out.

My son made a Harvey Wallbanger cake for a friend's birthday. He thought making the glaze for the frosting was too much work, so he just sprinkled powdered sugar thickly on the cake. When the friend blew out the candles, the powdered sugar blew all over the table! At least my son got a good snapshot of the moment! — RUBY

DEAR RUBY — Thanks for a useful Pointer and a good chuckle! — POLLY

DEAR POLLY — I planted some of last year's tomato seeds a couple of weeks ago, but only a few of the seeds sprouted. Can seeds be saved from year to year? I always have so many left over from a packet. — CAROL

DEAR CAROL — Seeds can be saved from year to year, although different types of seeds have varying shelf lives.

The important thing is to store them properly. The seeds should be wrapped in airtight packages and stored in a cool, dry place — the refrigerator is a good storage place. Then, before you're ready to plant the following spring, you can do a germination test to see if the seeds are still viable (capable of sprouting). Fold a few seeds (six to 10) into a moistened paper towel and put the towel in a plastic bag to keep it moist. After a few days, start checking the seeds to see if they've sprouted. If, after two weeks, less than 50 percent have sprouted, you may be better off buying fresh seeds. Or, plant the saved seeds, but plant them twice as thickly as normal. By doing the germination test, you'll know in advance which seeds will sprout and which need to be replaced.

I'm sending you a copy of my newsletter "Vegetable Garden Pointers," which has more information on starting seeds and growing vegetable plants throughout the season. Others who would like this issue should send $1 for each copy to POLLY'S POINTERS, in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 1216, Cincinnati, OH 45201. Be sure to include the title. — POLLY

DEAR POLLY — With a coffee shortage in full swing, I decided to use my automatic drip coffee maker to make a pot of tea. It was great. I just put two tea bags in the basket without a coffee filter, filled the pot to the six-cup line and turned it on. I got a perfect pot of tea. Now I use the machine for coffee in the morning and tea for dinner. — SHEILA

A real transfer of income from countries in Latin America to industrialized countries, averaging some $35 billion a year, has been required between 1981 and 1984 just to pay interest on their foreign debt. According to the Inter-American Development Bank, the need to pay foreign debt obligations has required a large swing in the Latin countries' current account — from a deficit of $40 billion in 1981 to virtual equilibrium in 1984.

Jeff Smith presents program to cake decorating club

Jeff Smith of Angel Fire, N.M. was the program speaker when members of Sugar Works Cake Decorating Club met Thursday in the home of Carol Odum.

Smith, whose parents are Mr. and Mrs. John A. Smith of Route 4, does special dessert decorations for the Maxwell Restaurant at the Plaza Hotel in Angel Fire.

For his program, Smith prepared a torte made with cream cheese, chocolate and strawberries. He was assisted by his mother, Maudette Smith.

During the business session, members discussed the cobblers that were made for the Sesquicentennial Chuck Wagon Chili Supper held Saturday evening.

They also voted to make birthday cakes for residents of the Golden Plains Care Center and it was announced that Juanita Diaz made a birthday cake for the month of February for the Hereford Satellite Work Training Center.

Janet Wymore was recognized as a new member.

Special guests included Brenda, Brandi and Audrey Rusher. Members present were Paula Gamez, Sherry Davis and Odum.

The next meeting will be March 13 for members to work on an Easter project for the Satellite Center.

Latin America has made large strides in erasing its deficit, but at the cost of great sacrifices in living standards and job stability in most countries, according to the Inter-American Development Bank. On the one hand, the $40 billion deficit in the region's current account in 1981 was reduced to virtual equilibrium by 1984. But the result was a reduction in real wages due to a rapid increase in inflation and a substantial real depreciation of the currencies of most countries.

Friends conducting membership drive

The Friends of the Deaf Smith County Library is an organization created to promote interest in the local library. The Friends provide financial assistance to the library and help to make it one of the finest libraries in the Panhandle.

The Friends of the Library sponsor the family film which is shown the third Thursday of each month at the library free of charge to the public. It is an excellent way to share a time with your family.

Other projects that have been sponsored by the Friends of the Library are supplying decals for T-shirts during the Summer Reading Club, purchasing an AVM-viewer for the children to view a filmstrip and tape in the library, and purchasing back files of the Hereford Brand.

New projects the Friends of the Library are sponsoring in 1986 are the 'TEXAS VOICES: 1836-1986' during the month of March at the library and purchasing books-on-tapes for patrons to check-out and listen to as they travel or at home. The Friends of the Library support the events of the library wholeheartedly and ask that you give your support to help them in their endeavors.

The Friends of the Library have two projects to make money each year for their support of library projects, their annual book sale each October and their annual membership drive. To help the library with additional projects for the community, the Friends of the Library needs your support. For only $2 a year you may become a member.

In order to join the Friends of the Library, you come into the library, 211 E. 4th. The memberships are divided into the following classifications:

Individual, $2 per year; organization, $10 per year; family, $5 per year; business, $10 per year; contributions, $15 and up, entitling donor to membership; and lifetime membership—$100 or more.

If you need additional information concerning the Friends of the Library, call Dianne Pierson, 364-1206 or Helen Nelson, 364-3112.

Membership Drive

The Friends of the Deaf Smith County Library are conducting its annual membership drive this month. Proceeds from the event have been used to purchase library equipment and to assist with various library projects. Discussing the drive are (from left) Dianne Pierson, county librarian, and Helen Nelson, a member of the Friends of the Library.

Scherenschnittee topic of program

At a make-up meeting Tuesday evening at the Texas Gallery, the Hereford Fine Arts Association presented Kimberley Anne Moore in an informative discussion of the art form, scherenschnittee.

Moore, who is originally from Houston, has lived in Hereford four years and is the wife of Bobby Moore of Moore's Jack and Jill Supermarket.

Moore explained that she became interested in scherenschnittee, German word for scissor cutting, about a year ago and after months of research, she began to do cuttings dealing with cuttings of historical and symbolic background.

She continues her research with sources from Pennsylvania, Washington, D.C. and the European and Asian continents.

Moore said that the first scissor cutting was done in China, dating back over 2,000 years to the third century B.C. Of the first cuttings, the Liebersbrief of Germany was very prominent. This was the first Valentine used in the United States.

She further explained that scherenschnittee designs were inspired by everyday life. The Chinese dealt with the symbols of birds, butterflies and dragons; the Germans with double-headed eagles, children and birds; the Polish with birds, flowers and children; and the Swiss with woodcutters, hunters and horses.

The speaker showed many cuttings and gave the history of each. Moore mentioned that because of popular demand, she does some contemporary pieces, but hopes that the old designs will continue to be cherished.

Bob Wear conducted an installation ceremony for the new slate of officers for the association. Serving as president is Linda Minchew; vice-president, Cindy Walker, program chairperson, Jean Lyles, secretary-treasurer, Norma Hendon; show director, Lolene Bledsoe; refreshment chairperson, Melba Dillard, and reporter Vinita Wear.

Dessert, coffee and punch were served by hostesses, Norma Hendon and June Owen.

Members present included Mildred Fuhrmann, Gary Hammett, Mr. and Mrs. Euman Lyles, Mary Lou Garza, Norma Hendon, Shirley Wyssman, Alvooy and Leuva Kersy, Melba Dillard, Jolene Bledsoe, Cindy Walker and June Owen.

Special guests recognized were Mary Riley, Jo Charest and Anna Wiggains.

Melba Dillard's name was drawn for the dinner out certificate which is given at each regular meeting of the association.

New Mexico

The motto of the state of New Mexico, which entered the union on Jan. 6, 1912, is Crescit Eundo (It grows as it goes). Its state song is "O Fair New Mexico," its flower is the yucca, its tree is the pinon, and the state bird is the roadrunner. New Mexico was the 47th state to join the Union.

School carnival planned

"Texas Sesquicentennial" is the theme for this year's carnival slated for April 6 at St. Anthony's School.

Carnival chairman, Neil Lueb, met with co-chairman, Rick Auckerman, and booth and game chairmen recently to finalize plans for the event.

The public is invited to the annual carnival to be held from noon until 5 p.m. at the school.

There are 94 Federal District courts; at least one in each state, Washington, D.C., and most territories.

Eureka, the state motto of California, means "I have found it."

Chili supper scheduled March 12

The Carol Choir of First United Methodist Church and their parents are sponsoring a chili supper Wednesday, March 12, in the church fellowship hall.

Grant and Troyce Hanna will prepare chili for the event which begins at 5 p.m. and will conclude at 7:30 p.m. Homemade desserts will also be served.

Adult tickets are priced at $3; children under 12 years of age, $1.50; and children under five years of age will be admitted free.

Tickets may be purchased from any choir member, fourth through sixth grade, or at the door.

The annual chili supper benefits the choir funds for an annual fun trip.

A Flair for Design

For the next few weeks, we are going to look to the walls. Walls wrap a room in a cocoon of color, texture, pattern and style. They are an accompaniment to the rest of your decorating scheme, but, like a perfectly orchestrated symphony, all the elements must work together. Plan walls to harmonize with floors, ceilings, window treatments, furnishings, and even adjoining rooms. Walls are valuable as far more than just the shell.

Some wall treatments which we will be discussing in the next weeks are special paint finishes and textures, wallpapers of varying types, fabric and mirror, paneling and metal.

The staff at FINISHING TOUCHES will be happy to help with any decorating needs you may have. Call 364-8870.

Ann Landers

Realistic picture

DEAR ANN LANDERS: A while back someone from Omaha wrote and asked why men in the banking business seem sexier than physicians, lawyers, professors, engineers, architects, artists or blue-collar workers. You said most bankers dress better and have a more polished manner.

I've been married to a banker for 37 years. He may look sexy but more important, he is deeply concerned about his responsibilities to his bank and his customers. My husband worries about the millions of dollars he has loaned to people he trusts. If they don't repay those loans the bank could go under.

Most people think all bankers are wealthy. They don't realize there is a big difference in salary between the chairman of the board and the loan officers who are vice presidents. Because of the farm economy, many banks have been forced to close their doors. A banker can lose his job because of mismanagement. I am not talking about the bankers' mismanagement. I'm talking about the mismanagement of the people who borrow.

I hope you will print this letter and give the public a more realistic picture of American bankers. It's time somebody did.--A WIFE IN NEBRASKA

DEAR WIFE IN NEB: Here's your letter and my thanks on behalf of all the bankers and their spouses who will bless you for writing.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I am a 25-year-old female, attractive, college graduate and a successful businesswoman (computer programmer).

Three months ago I met "Mr. Wonderful." We enjoy each other's company, like to dance and ski, and often we go to church together. But no sex. He doesn't believe in sex outside of marriage. He wants to marry me. And that's what I'm writing about.

When I was 14, I succumbed to peer pressure (like many young girls) and started having sexual relations. In the intervening 11 years, I have had numerous one-night stands but no live-in arrangements. During that time, I accumulated some unwanted "dividends"--gonorrhea twice, pregnancy once (abortion), and a year ago genital herpes. I am living proof of that old adage, "Your sins will find you out."

Mr. Wonderful is pressing me to set a date. I don't know what to do. Should I tell him about my past, keep my mouth shut and hope he is never disillusioned, or simply stop seeing him without explanation? Please Ann, help me. I am --GOING BONKERS IN COLO.

DEAR BONK: Since you no longer have gonorrhea I see no reason for bringing up that old unpleasantness. However, you should tell "Mr. Wonderful" about the genital herpes because after marriage you must take periodic precautions to make certain he doesn't become affected.

As for the abortion, I strongly advise you to tell him. If he should learn about it from someone else, he would be deeply disappointed and wonder what else in your past you have failed to mention.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: Please settle an argument: Who is the greatest record seller of all time? I say it is Michael Jackson. My friend says I'm wrong.--J.J. IN L.A.

DEAR L.A.: Your are wrong. Michael Jackson's album "Thriller" sold 35 million copies but "White Christmas" by Irving Berlin has sold 125 million records.

Don't flunk your chemistry test. Love is more than one set of glands calling to another. If you have trouble making a distinction you need Ann's booklet, "Love or Sex and How to Tell the Difference." Send a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope with your request and 50 cents to Ann Landers, P.O. Box 11995, Chicago, Illinois 60611.

Red Cross Update

The annual chili supper will be held Saturday, March 8, at the Community Center.

The volunteers will be serving beans, chili, desserts, tea and coffee from 5-8 p.m. The Bluegrass and Odd Tyme Music Group will be playing and any bluegrass and country western pickers are invited to come eat chili and play music for a while.

Volunteers of the Year will be honored. The past volunteers of the year have been Lottie Wertenberger, Ruth Romero, Elaine Taylor, Doris Rush, Craig and Susie Bainum, Fred Ruland, Nell Culpepper and Bert Brown. There are a number of nominations for this year and the committee will have a difficult time selecting just two names.

We still need items to be used for a silent auction. Please call the office if you have art work or other items we could use. Our telephone number is 364-3761.

Tickets for the chili supper will be $3 for adults and $1 for children 6 and under. Proceeds from the chili supper will be used for chapter expenses.

The Deaf Smith County Chapter of the American Red Cross is a United Way Agency.

Deductible interest

Interest paid by the taxpayer is deductible when paying income tax. To deduct interest on a debt, you must be legally liable for that debt. No deduction will be allowed for payments you make for another person, if you are not legally liable for them.

Between the Covers

By DIANNE PIERSON
Library Director

On Monday at 7 p.m. the Deaf Smith County Library will begin the 'TEXAS VOICES' series which is a project funded by the National Endowment for the Humanities. There will be five book-discussion programs featuring five Texas books.

"LOVE IS A WILD ASSAULT" by Elithe Hamilton Kirkland will be featured Monday night. Patricia Dean, assistant professor of English, South Plains College, Levelland, will be presenting the Kirkland book.

Without serious rival, the most popular romantic historical novel about Texas is "LOVE IS A WILD ASSAULT." An intriguing dimension of the novel is that it is based on the memoirs of Harriet Potter Ames written when she was eight-three and living with her children in Louisiana.

Elithe Hamilton Kirkland took the 35 pages of typescript passed on by Potter to the Texas historical association, and fashioned a 500 page romance true to the spirit of the memoirs but extending the spare narrative and creating full-dimension characters. The book tells in epic strokes the plight of the beautiful and brave Harriet, who lived with Robert Potter, first secretary of the Navy, at Potter's Point on Caddo Lake during the days of the Republic of Texas. Their lives are interwoven with the lure of Texas for adventurous spirits, the Runaway Scrape as Santa Anna advanced toward San Jacinto, and the personal drama set against the birth of a Republic.

Both Harriet and Potter remain enigmas in the novel as they were in history. After Potter's death in a Texas political feud, Harriet learned that he had willed almost everything he owned to a certain lady in Austin whose conversation he enjoyed while he was a state senator. For the next thirty years, Harriet tried to break the will, but in the end the judge ruled against her, concluding that Potter did not recognize her as his legal wife.

Harriet and Robert Potter can be seen as the kinds of irresistible personalities who helped build the Texas mystique. In the novel the reader will identify the beginnings of Texas legends, ponder the motivations of the central characters, and gain insight into the lives of men and women during the days of the Texas Revolution and the creation of a Republic.

After Patricia Dean's discussion of the book, "LOVE IS A WILD ASSAULT," there will be three discussion leaders available to discuss the book in greater detail and get feedback from participants. You may attend the scholar's presentation on the novel and the discussion programs even if you have not been able to read the book to date.

Gentry gives program

Wearing their favorite hats, members of La Madre Mia Study Club met Thursday in the home of Pat Walsh for a salad supper. Tricia Sims served as co-hostess.

Roll call was answered by telling a behavior pet peeve.

During the business meeting, standing committee reports were given and it was announced that a husbands' party is planned at 7:30 p.m. March 13 at the Hereford State Bank.

Also, a letter was read from the American Cancer Society telling of its plans and upcoming events. A letter was also read from Deaf Smith County Library telling about a series of book reviews concerning Texas planned this month.

Lavon Nieman reminded members of the Sesquicentennial Chuck Wagon Chili Supper which was held Saturday evening.

"Stress" was the program topic discussed by Teri Gentry. She gave a definition of the word and said that the body will either fight or flight with stress.

She gave club members three tests. They included "Life Events Stress Scale," "How To Tell If You Are A Stress Prone Personality" and "How Do You Cope?"

The speaker then listed 10 ways to live with stress and also presented a guide for progressive relaxation. She quoted Zig Ziglar, "Ninety percent of stress is how you think you feel. Positive thinking will not change the circumstances but how we take it is how it is stressful."

Ten suggestions given on how to live with stress included: work off stress (exercise, be physical by walking, swimming or whatever you enjoy), talk out your worries, learn to accept what you cannot change, avoid self medication, (take a walk instead), get enough sleep and rest, balance work and recreation, do something for others, take one thing at a time, give in once in a while, and make yourself available.

Gentry concluded, "Recognize your stress and turn it into positive stress and make your life more interesting."

Members present included Joyce Allred, Jeri Bezner, Mary Herring, Betty Martin, Gladys Merritt, Lavon Nieman, Bettye Owen, Jenna Simons, Tricia Sims, Mysedia Smith, Georgia Sparks, Betty Taylor, Pat Walsh, Marlene Watson, Mary Beth White and Judy Williams.

Pilot Of The Month

Lillie Shipman, at left, was honored as Pilot of the Month for January during the Pilot Club's recent meeting. Margaret Bell, president, presented her with a plaque of appreciation.

Shipman recognized as Pilot of the Month

Pilot Club members honored Lillie Shipman as Pilot of the Month for January during their meeting held Tuesday morning at the Caison House Restaurant.

Also, Jane White and Karen Vardeman were accepted as new members.

It was announced that this is Pilot Foundation Month and Donna West's program explained projects and structure of the organization.

A Merrill-Lynch Seminar, entitled "Getting A Grasp On All Your Financial Resources," will be held Saturday, March 8, in the Amarillo Little Theater. The admission charge will benefit the Don and Sybil Harrington Foundation.

Murphey, Steagall to perform March 9

Michael Murphey and Red Steagall will perform during the Panhandle-Plains Historical Museum's sesquicentennial party scheduled Sunday, March 9, at the museum.

The museum continues its salute to the 1986 Texas Sesquicentennial with a 150th birthday celebration for Charles Goodnight, pioneer rancher and one of the first settlers in the Panhandle.

"Charles Goodnight's Sesquicentennial Birthday Party" begins at 2 p.m. and continues until 6 p.m.

Family-oriented activities throughout the afternoon include live entertainment for both children and adults.

Beginning at 3 p.m. in the basement auditorium, country artist, Red Steagall, will present a solo performance. At 4 p.m. there will be old fashioned theatrical entertainment. The Harvest Days Players, a troupe from Dimmitt, will present 30 minutes of melodrama of the type popular in the day of Goodnight's youth.

Michael Martin Murphey takes the stage at 5 p.m. This well-known recording artist, who makes his home in Taos, N.M., was named Best New Male Country Vocalist of 1982.

One of the afternoon's highlights will be the cutting of the Goodnight Birthday cake at 2 p.m. in the second floor East Gallery. This will precede the public opening of "Charles Goodnight, Cowman and Plainsman: A 150-Year Retrospective," an exhibit devoted to the life and accomplishments of the Panhandle's foremost rancher and settler.

On Feb. 21, 1916, the world's bloodiest battle began as concealed German guns opened fire on French lines around Verdun during World War I. Postwar estimates indicated 420,000 men had been killed and 800,000 wounded in 1916-17. After the war, 150,000 unidentified bodies were found on the battlefield.

Jones, Curtis exchange vows during candlelight ceremony

The Rev. Mack McCarter, pastor of First Christian Church, officiated at the marriage of Karen Elane Jones of Hereford and Warren William Curtis, Jr. of Irving Saturday afternoon at the church.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Barry Lynn Jones of 332 Douglas and the bridegroom is the son of Donna Curtis of Irving and Msgr. Warren William Curtis, Sr. of Fort Walton Beach, Fla.

Decorating the church altar were five brass candelabra which flanked a 15-light fan with seven light slants on either side. In front of these were two-nine light round candelabrum adorned with a bouquet of white carnations and gladioli accented with baby's breath.

The kneeling bench was enhanced with a small bouquet of white flowers on each side. The aisle was ornamented with woodrose and burgundy bows highlighted with baby's breath.

Michele McClendon of Plano served as maid of honor and Keith Caston of Irving was best man.

Bridesmaids were Lori Cochran of Pueblo, Colo. and Tonya Savage of Hereford. The bride's brother, Gary W. Jones of Fort Worth, was groomsmen as was the groom's brother, Danny Curtis of Sherman.

Annie Kate and Johnathon Keenan, children of Mr. and Mrs. George Keenan, were flower girl and ring bearer, respectively.

The bride's brother, Robert Lynn Jones, and David McCarter lit candles during the ceremony.

Bill Devers and Annette Morgan vocalized "Ave Maria," "Because," and "The Wedding Prayer" with accompaniment provided by Mrs. Joe Hacker, organist, and Mrs. Bill Devers, pianist.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore her mother's wedding gown. The formal short sleeve gown of ivory silk peau de soie was fashioned with a portrait neckline and molded bodice overlaid with delicate alencon and highlighted with seed pearls. The back neckline of the dress was V-shaped. The back of the dress was enhanced with a cascade of peau de soie roses and the full skirt extended into a chapel-length train. The front of the skirt was ornamented with alencon lace motifs which matched the bodice lace. The bride wore gauntlets made of the same fabric as her dress.

Her bouffant scalloped veil of ivory illusion was attached to a tiare of seed pearls. She carried a silk and lace covered Bible decorated with a white cymbidium orchid surrounded by lilly-of-the-valley. Long ivory streamers with lilly-of-the-valley trailed from the bouquet.

In keeping with tradition, the bride wore as something old, a coin in her shoe depicting her birth date; for something borrowed, her mother's wedding gown; for something new, pearl earrings given to her by the groom; and for something blue, a garter made for her by her Grandmother Wester.

Bridesmaids' dresses were of woodrose taffeta designed with fitted bodices, sweetheart necklines, full skirts gathered to a V-shaped waistline at the bodice, and short elasticized sleeves worn on the shoulders.

Each carried a bouquet of woodrose and burgundy carnations and daisies.

The flower girl wore a dress to match the bridesmaids' dresses and carried a white basket accented with flowers.

Nancy McCarter invited guests to register at the reception held in the church parlor.

Serving cake was the bride's aunt, Mrs. Stuart Carol Jones of Beaumont, and the bride's cousin, Virginia Jones of Lubbock.

Coffee and punch were poured by Mrs. Charles Cochran of Pueblo, Colo. and Annette Morgan of Amarillo. Others assisting included Mmes. Dale Henson, Mack McCarter, Douglas Powell (the bride's aunt), Pete Morrison of Amarillo, Mrs. Roy Blevins, Mrs. Bill Drake and Mrs. Jimmy Rowton.

The main refreshment table was covered with an ivory Quaker lace tablecloth given to the bride by her Grandmother and Grandfather Wagoner. In the center of the table was a three-tiered cake with white lilly-of-the-valley and burgundy and woodrose roses. The cake was topped with a ceramic bride and groom made especially for the couple.

On either side of the cake was a

twenty-eight inch ivory candle placed in a silver candleholder with the bridesmaids' bouquets laid in front.

Also, a silver coffee service with coffee and almond tea was located on one end of the table and the other end held a silver punch bowl with fruit punch. Nuts and mints were also served.

Leaving for a wedding trip to points of interest in Texas, the bride wore a navy blue suit with a dusty rose blouse and navy pumps. She also wore an orchid from her bouquet.

The couple will make their home after March 5 at 1807 Estrada Parkway, Apt. 223, in Irving.

The bride graduated from Hereford High School in 1982 and attended Texas Tech University for three years.

The bridegroom, a 1980 graduate of Sherman High School, attended Texas Tech for four years and is presently employed by The Las Colinas Association of Irving.

Out-of-town guests represented Amarillo, Groom, Vega, Claude, Beaumont, Plani, Garland, Dimmitt, Lubbock, Sherman, Denison and Pueblo, Colo.

Observance planned

The United Methodist Women of First United Methodist Church in Hereford will hold their annual Call to Prayer and Self-Denial observance at 10:30 a.m. Wednesday in Ward Parlor of the church.

A luncheon will follow the observance in the church fellowship hall. A nursery will be available during the program and luncheon.

The focal point of the day's activities will be a quiet day service. During that event a special offering will be taken for "Towards Wholeness: Women and Health." The title of the service is "Towards Wholeness" and was written by Mary May. It cites stories from scripture which serve to link physical healing with the total well-being of the individual. Today this approach is called "holistic" or "wholistic."

The Women's Division of the General Board of Global Ministries sponsors the Call to Prayer and Self-Denial. About 1.4 million women in more than 25,000 local units will participate in the observance between January and March of this year. Last year, the Call to Prayer offering was $951,298.

White football coach mad

BEAUMONT, Texas (AP) — Beaumont Central High school's new head football coach said Friday he is upset that blacks are making a racial issue of the school district's decision to assign white head football coaches at Central and West Brook high schools next year.

Steve Shaver, who guided Beaumont French High School to a co-state football championship in 1984, said he is "deeply hurt" by black leaders' efforts to persuade school officials to reassign a black head football coach at Central or West Brook.

"I've worked hard here," Shaver said. "I've been coach of the year six times, Central Texas Coach of the Year and State High School Coach of the Year. And now I'm not a good coach because I'm white."

Blacks met with Beaumont school board President Marilyn Busceme Friday to pressure school administrators to assign a black head football coach at one of the district's newly-merged high schools.

School trustee Zenobia Bush, a member of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, said the association might ask all black student athletes in the Beaumont school district to boycott sports next year.

Presidential Calendar Given

Erma Murphey, youth activities chairman of the Ladies VFW Auxiliary, Thursday presented a presidential calendar to Hereford High history teachers Danny Haney and N.D. Kelso. The calendar, given to the Auxiliary at a convention, will be placed in the school library.

Texas students using too much tobacco

HOUSTON (AP) — Eleven percent of college freshmen and sophomores in Texas are using chewing tobacco or snuff despite the threat of oral cancer and high blood pressure, a Baylor College of Medicine study shows.

"The idea that some day they may develop cancer of the mouth does not seem to affect behavior patterns in 18-year-olds," John Foreyt, a clinical psychologist at the school's DeBakey Heart Center, said.

Foreyt is studying 2,000 students to see how they got into the habit of using smokeless tobacco products.

So far, his survey indicates the average user is a young man who began chewing it at the age of 14 and continues to do so daily. The two top reasons for chewing are the desire to try something new and the fact that friends are using the snuff.

Foreyt said that unlike young cigarette smokers, users of smokeless tobacco are not doing so to spite their parents, many of whom find the smokeless version more socially acceptable.

"We're seeing that it's freely available and easy to get," he said. "Even at the junior high level there has been a widespread increase in its use."

The National Institutes of Health have warned that use of snuff and chewing tobacco increases the threat of cancer of the mouth and throat. Baylor College of Medicine said nicotine from smokeless tobacco also goes immediately into the bloodstream and dramatically increases blood pressure. The blood pressure comes down eventually, the medical school said, but over a period of time it can harm the cardiovascular system.

Italy won the last World Cup in soccer on July 11, 1982, when it defeated a team from West Germany, 3-1. It was Italy's third World Cup victory.

Fingerprints easier to find

LUBBOCK — Getting away with crimes is getting tougher as scientists find new ways to lift fingerprints from the crime scene.

The victim's clothing and other cloth items at a crime have always been useless to law enforcers unless the cloth had visible evidence on it. However, in pioneering research at Texas Tech University's Center for Forensic Studies, fingerprints have been taken from cloth using laser fluorescence.

Physics Professor E. Roland Menzel, who directs the center and has been experimenting with fingerprint detection by laser for 10 years, has already made life for criminals more hazardous through detecting fingerprints off wood, skin, cardboard and other difficult surfaces.

Laser fluorescence involves applying a fluorescent chemical to a surface where fingerprints are expected to be found. The chemical causes the obscure print to fluoresce when illuminated by a laser. The print can then be photographed or electronically reproduced with a computer.

"Right now law enforcers don't even bother to examine cloth items when they suspect fingerprints may be found there," said Dr. Menzel. "We have results that prove fingerprints can be taken off cloth."

Menzel said the work deals with latent or invisible fingerprints — not visible ones preserved in blood or other substances.

"Cloth items are one of the most common pieces of evidence at crime scenes. At the same time cloth has been one of the most frustrating items to work with because even though we knew fingerprints were there, we had no way to see them," he said.

The research with fingerprints in cloutuses on prints made with trace amounts of blood, said Menzel.

Cloth is difficult to work with, he said, because often the fingerprint begins to smudge and quickly disappears when a fluorescent chemical is applied.

"We started with bloody prints because prints left without traces of blood or some other substance smudge out more quickly," Menzel said. "After the technique is fully developed, we believe it can be applied to normally-deposited fingerprints."

The conventional fingerprint method involves dusting an article and photographing revealed prints. But, if prints are not dusted within a few days they dry out and powder will not stick to them.

Cloth presents even more problems for the traditional technique because powder sticks all over the cloth and fingerprints are not highlighted.

Menzel began working with laser fingerprint detection in 1976 as a physicist with the Xerox Corp. in Ontario, Canada. Since then his techniques have been used by the FBI and the Army Criminal Investigations Division. Many law enforcement agencies now have laser systems which they routinely use in criminal investigation.

Some 30 to 40 bands of wild horses live on Sable Island off the coast of Nova Scotia, reports National Geographic World. Researchers believe horses were taken to the island in colonial times and left there to ensure that shipwrecked sailors would have meat to eat.

MARIA TAMEZ, ABEL RODRIGUEZ, JR.

Couple to wed

Maria Elida Tamez and Abel Guillermo Rodriguez, Jr. plan to exchange nuptials May 24 in St. Joseph's Church in Hereford. The bride-elect is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Saturnino C. Tamez of 108 Fuller and the prospective bridegroom is the son of Abel Rodriguez of 121 Norton and the late Mrs. Tomasa Rodriguez.

Miss Tamez is a 1981 Hereford High School graduate and is currently employed at the Deaf Smith County Clerk's office.

Rodriguez, a 1982 HHS graduate, is serving in the United States Army stationed at Fort Carson, Colo.

Bavarian band to perform

The Texas Tech University Center at Junction, Tx. will co-sponsor an appearance by the Musikkapelle Markt Erkeheim, a Bavarian Band from Erkeheim, West Germany, Friday.

The band, which is also sponsored by the Sesquicentennial Committee and the Kimble County Chamber of Commerce, will appear at 8 p.m. in the Coke Stevenson Center in Junction. Included in the program will be variety acts, waltzes, polkas, German marches and authentic dance music.

The band's trip is sponsored by the Texas-German Sesquicentennial Committee. Texas Tech Germanic and Slavic languages Professor, Meredith McClain is state chairperson of the committee. The committee is sponsored by American Airlines.

The United States is its largest single market and accounts for more than 50 percent of car sales, according to Jaguar. The firm says it expects to increase its 1985 production to 38,000 cars and estimates 20,000 will be sold in the U.S.

The Continental Congress enacted legislation Oct. 13, 1775, which established the forerunner of the U.S. Navy. The year 1985 marks the 210th anniversary of the American naval service.

The Newspaper BIBLE

Inside, the chief priests and the whole Jewish Supreme Court were trying to find something against Jesus that would be sufficient to condemn Him to death. But their efforts were in vain.

Many false witnesses volunteered, but they contradicted each other.

Finally some men stood up to lie about Him and said,

"We heard him say, 'I will destroy this Temple made with human hands and in three days I will build another, made without human hands!'"

But even then they didn't get their stories straight!

Then the High Priest stood up before the Court and asked Jesus, "Do you refuse to answer this charge? What do you have to say for yourself?"

To this Jesus made no reply. Then the High Priest asked Him, "Are you the Messiah, the Son of God?"

Jesus said, "I am, and you will see Me sitting at the right hand of God, and returning to earth in the clouds of heaven."

Drive Underway

Members of the Women's Division are conducting their annual membership drive this month. All women who are presently members of the organization are being challenged to enroll at least one new member during the drive. Hereford bucks will be awarded to the women who sign-up the most members during the Division's quarterly meeting April 7. Peggie Fox, membership drive chairman, (at left) and Women's Division member, Batty Taylor, welcomes Rhea Jo Scott as a new member. Further information concerning the drive may be obtained by calling the Chamber office at 364-3333, Peggie Fox or Billie Hopson.

League trying to fix debate date

AUSTIN (AP) — The Texas League of Women Voters hopes a televised debate among Democratic gubernatorial candidates can be held on April 10, but still needs confirmation from Gov. Mark White, a league official said Friday.

Modelle Brudner of Houston, who is making arrangements for that debate and a similar Republican session, said White's campaign staff has told the league White is willing to debate.

However, she said, she's still awaiting word from campaign manager John Fainter about whether the governor would accept the April 10 date.

"I'm waiting for a call from John Fainter to verify whether the date we've suggested is a date the governor can live with," she said.

White campaign spokesman Mark McKinnon referred debate questions to Fainter. Fainter's secretary said he was out of town Friday and not available for comment.

Ms. Brudner earlier said that finding a date agreeable to White has been the major stumbling block in arranging a debate for the Democratic candidates.

"It takes a lot of persistence. We're still working on it," she said.

Two of White's opponents, Andrew Briscoe and A. Don Crowder, have accused White of trying to duck them.

The governor said in a brief interview Friday, "I'll be glad to debate these people at any time," but refused to say whether April 10 was an acceptable date.

Ms. Brudner said April 10 is the league's preferred date because public television station KERA-TV in Dallas has agreed to host the session and send a live signal to 10 other public TV stations in Texas.

The Republican debate is scheduled to be held in Houston. A live television signal of that meeting also will be offered statewide.

In other political news: — State Democratic Party Chairman Bob Slagle denied that he has played favorites in the party's gubernatorial primary. "The state party office has, as always, offered all party services to all Democratic candidates impartially, and will continue to do so," Slagle said.

On Thursday, Democratic gubernatorial hopeful A. Don Crowder accused Slagle of favoring Gov. Mark White in the primary, calling on other Democrats to "sit up and look at the moon" and "howl" over the favoritism.

But Slagle said there hasn't been any. "I have enjoyed a pleasant relationship with both (gubernatorial candidate) Andy Briscoe and Mark White and thought I had with Don Crowder, but obviously that is not the case."

Dawson to serve as missionary

Terese Dawson, daughter of Mr. & Mrs. Reese Dawson of Hereford, will serve this summer as a Baptist Student Union summer missionary in North Carolina.

Dawson, who attends Hardin-Simmons University, is one of 116 from Texas universities and colleges who will serve as summer missionaries in 21 states and three foreign countries through the special program.

The students will be supported on the mission field through funds raised by other students from 120 BSUs at Texas universities and colleges, said Jack Greever, director of Division of Student Work of the 2.3-million-member Baptist General Convention of Texas.

The statewide BSU program is supported through the Cooperative Program gifts of nearly 5,000 Southern Baptist churches in Texas.

WASHINGTON-ON-THE-BRAZOS, Texas (AP) — The collection of a dozen ramshackle cabins and shanties was an unlikely site for a national political convention.

The convention hall itself — owned by a gunsmith who was promised $170 rent but never was paid — was not even finished when the delegates assembled.

One eyewitness wrote that the town had "not one decent house in it and only one well-defined street, which consists of an opening cut out of the woods."

"The stumps are still standing," complained William Fairfax Gray, a Virginia attorney who 150 years ago Sunday was keeping a diary that preserves the account of the meeting that resulted in the Texas Declaration of Independence.

Actually, everyone was ready to make the break from Mexico on March 1, but the 59 delegates decided to wait until the following day because March 2 also happened to be Sam Houston's birthday.

On Sunday, Gov. Mark White is keynoting the Independence Day festivities at Washington-on-the-Brazos, now a state historical park. The park, about 65 miles northwest of Houston, includes a replica of the wooden building where the convention was held.

The celebration is among dozens around the state marking the 150th anniversary of the declaration.

In addition, the U.S. Postal Service on Sunday is issuing a 22-cent Republic of Texas stamp, commemorating the birth of the republic.

The eight-page Texas Declaration of Independence — handwritten with a quill by George Childress — was modeled roughly after the then 60-year-old U.S. Declaration of Independence authored by Thomas Jefferson. Where Jefferson complained about the tyranny of England, Childress complains against Mexico.

What makes the document unique is that no other American state can look back in its history and point to such a declaration.

"One of the keys to the history of the state is the 10-year experience as an independent nation," says Lewis Gould, former chairman of the history department at the University of Texas. "And the declaration is a key element in that distinction."

After nearly 10 years as a republic, Texas joined the United States formally on Dec. 29, 1845.

"The 10 years may not seem like much over the course of 150 years, but the declaration makes the republic in constitutional and legal terms — and, of course, once they win the battles.

"But in terms of forming a Texas character, a Texas ethos, a Texanness, the Republic Period was crucial."

Robert Calvert, an associate professor of history at Texas A&M University, says the significance of the document is its formality.

"For Texans, it is the formal break with Mexico," he says. "There had been some previous meetings, consultations, where they dealt with the idea. But it's there, in effect, that they make the decision to secede."

Historians believe five copies of the declaration were made and signed that cold day in Washington-on-the-Brazos.

One copy remains. It now is undergoing restoration treatment at the University of Texas Humanities Research Center. A facsimile is on display at the state library in Austin.

"It probably was on off-white paper," says Chris LaPlante, the state archivist. "Over the years, between fading from exposure to the light and staining because of the acidity in the paper and ink, it is now more of a very light brown."

The paper, however, is brittle. The edges have broken off in places. The paper was written on both sides and ink is bleeding through from the backside to the front.

But all in all, it's in pretty good shape, LaPlante says.

"It's amazing it has survived, considering its storage environment," he says. "It's extremely neat. It is still very legible considering the fading."

The lone copy was discovered years later in Washington, D.C. by a researcher going through a State Department file. The declaration had been sent to Washington when the state's annexation was being discussed. It then was transferred to the Texas Secretary of State's office and wound up on display in the rotunda of the state capital building.

Robert Service, the poet of the Yukon, was born in Preston, England, in 1874.
