U.S. Blamed for Purported Attack on Iran

Practicing for Christmas Concert

The Hereford High bands and orchestra have been busy lately, getting ready for the annual Christmas Concert scheduled for 7 p.m. Tuesday in the high school auditorium. Tickets will cost $1 for adults and 50 cents for children, and money raised will help pay for the organizations' spring trip. Scheduled to play Tuesday are the orchestra, concert band, symphonic band and honors band. The orchestra is under the direction of Bill Huff and the bands are directed by Randy Vaughn. Panama New Home Of Shah

WASHINGTON (AP) - The outsted Shah of Iran left Texas Saturday to take up residence in Panama, the White House announced.

White House press secretary Jody Powell said the Panamanian government expressed hope that the deposed monarch's departure from the United States would help promote a "peaceful resolution of the present crisis" that finds 50 Americans being held hostage in the U.S. Embassy compound in Tehran.

Powell said President Carter had telephoned Panama's president, Aristides Royo, to express gratitude for that government's "humanitarian and statesmanlike" action.

Shah Mohammad Reza Pahlavi came to New York from Mexico on Oct. 22 for medical treatment for cancer and gallstones. He moved to Lackland Air Force Base in San Antonio, Texas, on Dec. 2.

Powell said the exiled Iranian leader was examined Friday by a team of physicians headed by Dr. Benjamin King who ruled that there was no medical barrier to his moving to Panama.

In San Antonio, a member of the Texas Air National Guard who asked not to be identified said he saw a DC-9 take off from Kelly Air Force Base under*heavy security at about 7:30 a.m. CST. He said a group of civilians boarded the plane under heavy guard after a heavy load of baggage was placed aboard.

The White House has said all along that the shah wanted to leave the United States, and Powell's statement today said: "As the shah stated when he entered the United States he intended to leave the United States when his medical condition permitted."

The Moslem militants who seized the American Embassy in Tehran last month have demanded the shah's return to Iran for the release of the American hostages, but the United States has made clear it will not extradite the shah to Iran.

Instead, the United States has been (See SHAH, Page 2)

Hereford Man Charged With Rape of Young Girl

By PAUL SIMS Managing Editor

A 33-year-old Hereford man was charged with rape of a child in connection with an alleged attack on the 8-year-old daughter of the woman he was living with and placed in Deaf Smith County Jail on $20,000 bond.

Ricardo Martinez, of 424 Ave. C was arraigned before County Judge Glen Nelson early Friday evening following his arrest at 5 p.m. at his residence.

Police said Saturday that other charges may be filed in connection with the

"We're alleging one attack now, but we suspect it of happening several times. And the women's 6-year-old girl may have been involved, too," said Police Capt. Ray Morgan, who, along with Detective Vernon Hope, had been investigating suspected child abuse at the residence for several weeks. "We presented it to the district attorney's office Friday afternoon, and we had a warrant within 30 minutes after we presented the facts," Morgan said. "I really do want to praise the district quickly.

"A lot of this is still under investigation, but we were told that, these kids had dug them a hiding place outside the house and they'd run and hide in it when he came home. They were scared little kids--they were so glad to see Vernon and I come up there."

The two young girls and their mother's 7-year-old son were turned over to child welfare authorities. Childwelfare worker Beth Igal had been involved in the investigation, according to Police Friday were called to 619 Star, where Patty Owens reported that her outside Christmas lights were stolen.

Henderson Exxon, U.S. 385 and U.S. 60, reported Friday that the driver of a late-model white van stole $22 worth of Police also investigated a fight between in-laws in the 400 block of Ave. K early Saturday morning. Although a chain and knife allegedly were used in the fight, persons involved did not file charges.

TEHRAN, Iran (AP) - Iran's government radio claimed the United States engineered an attack on an Iranian border post by Iran's arch foe Iraq. Iraqi diplomats denied Iran was attacked.

The Tehran radio account implied the United States was behind the Iraqi crossborder raid Friday because America had "failed in the face of Iranian resistance" to gain the release of the 50 hostages held in the occupied U.S. Embassy in Tehran since Nov. 4.

The radio quoted a Foreign Ministry spokesman as saying Iraqi forces pushed three miles into Iran on Friday before retreating after skirmishing with revolutionary guardsmen. Another Tehran radio report said the intruders left behind "a number of dead and woun-

Reports from the border area in southwestern Iran said Iraqi troops attacked a small border post under cover of heavy artillery fire. The reports said the 15minute attack was aimed at the Shalamcheh border post, 12 miles northwest of the city of Khoramshahr in Iran's oil-rich southwestern corner.

Iraqi diplomats Kuwait denied the Iranian reports. The official Iraqi news media in Baghdad made no mention of an attack, but an Iraqi Embassy spokesman in Kuwait said the Iranian reports were "fabricated and untrue."

"The (radio) report is designed to draw attention away from the dilemma in which the policy of the Iranian ruler finds itself," the spokesman said.

An Arab League spokesman at the United Nations in New York backed claim. Clovis Maksoud told reporters he would describe the incident "as unfortunate border skirmishes that have already been terminated."

Relations between Iraq and Iran have been strained for years with each accusing the other of border provocations. Soviet-supported Iraq has laid claim to Iran's oil-rich Khuzestan Province, while Iran claims Iraq is backing dissident Arab Iranians in Khuzestan Province who oppose Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini, Iran's revolutionary leader.

Khomeini lived in Iraq for 15 years after he was exiled by deposed Shah Mohammad Reza Pahlavi for opposing the monarch's 1963 reforms redistributing property owned by the Moslem clergy and giving women more freedom. After making a deal with the shah, Iraq forced Khomeini to leave and he moved to France on Oct. 6, 1978, three months before his revolution forced the shah from Iran.

The latest skirmish with Iraq added to Khomeini's mounting problems, which include restive Iranian minority groups and a showdown building over the American hostages. Iran says it will free the hostages only after the United States returns the deposed shah for trial.

The International Court of Justice in The Netherlands is to rule today on America's request that it order Iran to free the hostages. If Iran refuses, the United States is expected to seek U.N. economic sanctions against it.

OPEC Members Urge Saudis To Boost Oil to $30-per-Barrel

By MARK POTTS AP Business Writer

Saudi Arabia says its new $24-a-barrel oil price is its final offer to other members of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries, despite urgings from some members for a price of $30 or more

And reports early Saturday indicated the Saudis may be prepared to use their resources to keep the official price of oil from going any higher.

The new increase - from $18 to $24 a barrel, retroactive to Nov. 1 - has

Small Savers May Earn More Interest

WASHINGTON (AP) - New federal banking regulations will allow small savers to earn much higher interest rates after the first of the year, a move that could help shore up the sagging housing market by providing more mortgage

Specifically, the various government agencies that regulate banks and other savings institutions established a 21/4year, h high-interest savings certificate that requires no minimum deposit.

The actions announced Friday take effect Jan. 1 and could give commercial banks, savings and loan institutions and credit unions a boost in competing with the increasingly popular money market funds.

Officials of the other three firms, Exxon Corp., Mobil. Corp. and Texaco Inc., said they currently had no plans for a similar price increase.

OPEC is to begin meeting Monday in Caracas, Venezuela, to discuss prices. Analysts expect a hefty increase, especially after the base price increase announced Thursday by Saudi Arabia, Venezuela, Qatar and the United Arab OPEC hardliners like Iran and Iraq are galling for an increase to at least $30 a barrel from their current base prices of about $24. But Saudi Oil Minister Sheik Ahmed Zaki Yamani, speaking in Brussels, Belgium, said $24 a barrel was as high as he would go.

He also said Saudi Arabia - the biggest oil-exporting country in the world - will continue producing an extra million barrels of oil a day for the first three months of 1980.

The Washington Post and The New York Times said in Saturday's editions that Yamani promised his country would continue producing 9.5 million barrels of oil a day - 1 million above its official

Clements Says Iran Cutoff Would Hurt

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) - Gov. Bill Clements, an old hand at the oil game, says a "ripple effect" could hurt the United States and Texas economies if the chaos in Iran halts that nation's oil production.

Clements said at his weekly news conference Friday the Iranian crisis makes it hard to predict the future of the Texas economy, including tax revenue.

He disagreed, however, with Comptroller Bob Bullock's forecast that revenues will slip to the point that the Legislature might have to consider raising state taxes in 1981.

"We have a crisis on our hands that makes it very difficult to predict what is going to happen in Texas and the nation. The ripple effect from the Iranian hostage situation could be very, very bad and cause enormous dislocations in the economy," Clements said.

He said the odds that Iran's oil production would "go to zero are about 50-50." This, he said, would deprive the world market of four to five million barrels of oil a day.

"That would cause serious dislocations. We have a real serious situation on our hands," the governor said, speaking before the news arrived that Iraq had attacked Iran.

Clements also said all state universities are collecting addresses and telephone numbers of Iranian students and plan to establish centrally located "safe havens" in case the students are threatened with violence. He said it was a good "precautionary" measure.

The governor said he has not tried to talk with the denosed shah of Iran at his Lackland Air Force Base refuge and has no plans to. He also said he "has no indication from anybody" when the shah might leave.

On another subject. Clements said cities should move cautiously in issuing revenue bonds to finance low-interest mortgage loans to homebuyers. The Legislature gave cities that authority this

"This tool must be approached with the utmost caution. ... Some of the cities could have their financial structure threatened that issue these bonds," Clements said.

Several cities, including El Paso, Austin and Houston, are moving toward issuance of housing bonds. Interest rates would be about two percentage points below the 111/4 percent savings and loan associations are getting.

Clements said he is holding off his appointments to a state housing authority until he sees what Congress does on a bill that would curtail the use of tax-exempt bonds for housing.

The authority would issue state bonds to finance a low-interest mortgage loan

Clements said he had no explanation why he has approved no paroles since Aug. 31 for prison inmates in a work-release program, even though the Board of Pardons and Paroles has recommended

He said he generally followed the advice of legal advisers Dary Stone and David Dean, who review parole recommendations from the board.

ISTANBUL, Turkey (AP) - The government called in troops Saturday to beef-up the hunt for the killers of four Americans, as Turkish newspapers speculated the gunmen might be Iranian extremists.

No leads were reported in the search for the four or five persons who ambushed the Americans in an Istanbul suburb Friday evening. The Americans

- three civilians and a non-commissioned officer - were cut down by automatic weapons fire as they stepped off a bus taking them home from jobs at the Cakmakli NATO munitions base.

U.S. officials in Washington said the attackers had been shadowing a bus carrying the Americans and opened fire when they tried to flee on foot. The gunmen escaped.

Investigators said they found 65 spent cartridge casings from Russian-made weapons at the scene of the shooting. So far, none of Turkey's numerous underground organizations has claimed reponsibility for the shooting. A police intelligence source speculated the gunmen were "either Turkish leftwing terrorists or agents of a foreign state." But other police sources said the attack bore the signs of other ambushes by Turkish leftists.

Turkish newspapers suggested

"Iranian extremist elements" were involved in the assassination. Observers speculated it might be a warning to the United States against trying to use Turkey as a staging base for any military effort to free the 50 Americans held hostage by Iranian militants at the U.S. Embassy in Tehran.

Oil Amendment Vote

Due in Senate

WASHINGTON (AP) - With a hard-fought agreement on a "minimum tax" in hand, the Senate is turning to what likely will be the last major roadblock in the way of a "windfallprofits" tax on the oil industry.

A vote was planned Saturday on an amendment by Sen. John C. Danforth, R-Mo., that would apply the windfall tax to crude oil produced from state-owned lands.

That would cost oil-producing states mainly Alaska, Texas, Oklahoma and California - $10.5 billion in the 1980s.

No amendment to the bill so upsets oil-state senators as the Danforth proposal. Not only would it take money from the treasuries of those states, those senators say, but it would set a precedent for federal taxation of state income.

A stalemate that had clouded chances of passing the tax bill this year was broken Friday with acceptance of a compromise "minimum tax" amendment that would raise the total Senate windfall tax to about $178 billion over the 1980s. By comparison, the House passed a $277

International Court of Justice was to rule Saturday on an American request that the court order Iran to free the 50 American hostages held by Iranian militants at the U.S. Embassy in Tehran.

Sir Humphrey Waldock of Britain, president of the 15-member court, will read its decision in a public session, a spokesman said.

Iran boycotted the court hearing last Monday, but sent a telegram saying the United Nations court did not have jurisdiction in the case and "cannot and should not take cognizance" of the U.S.

U.S. Attorney General Benjamin R. Civiletti presented America's case to the court at the hearing. He said Iran's "barbaric" detention of the hostages should be terminated swiftly to save human lives and restore the rule of international law.

"This imprisonment is illegal and inhuman," Civiletti said. "I ask you to save their lives and set those human beings free."

Civiletti accused Iran of violating four international treaties and agreements signed by both countries when it failed to prevent armed Moslem militants from seizing the embassy Nov. 4 and holdings its occupants hostage.

Retail Beef Prices Up.

Inventories Down

WASHINGTON (AP) - Retail beef prices have gone up again and feedlot operators continue to hold down inventories of cattle destined for the consumer market, says the Agriculture

One reason for the holdown in feedlots is that lighter-weight feeder cattle and grain are costly items, at least in relation to what "finished" steers are bringing on the slaughter market.

And the whole situation can be traced back to the unprecedented reduction in cattle herds the past three or four years. Put simply, there are not nearly as many cattle around these days.

The department's preliminary figures released Friday showed that prices of the most common cuts of beef in retail rose 1.1 percent last month.

The new certificates will pay a floating

Officials said the average retail price of U.S. Choice-grade beef was nearly $2.27 a pound in November, compared to about $2.24 in October. A year ago, it was less than $1.88 a pound, measured on an all-out basis.

Retail beef prices rose to a record of more than $2.40 a pound last May and then declined during the summer, rose in September and then dropped again in

Appeals Court Gives Ok to Deportations

WASHINGTON (AP) - A federal appeals court says the Carter administration can continue deportation proceedings against some Iranian students while the judges are deciding whether the government is acting legally.

Despite the U.S. Court of Appeals ruling, the Justice Department says no Iranians will be forced to leave the United States until the legal question is resolved.

The ruling Friday was an interim step while the appeals court weighs the constitutionality of a Nov. 10 order by President Carter.

Responding to the seizure of the U.S. Embassy in Tehran, Carter told immigration officials to check the visas of Iranian students and to begin deportation proceedings against those with invalid

The program was halted Tuesday by U.S. District Judge Joyce Hens Green, who said the government violated the students' rights to equal protection under the Fifth Amendment to the Constitution.

The appeals court order sought by the government postpones the effectiveness of Mrs. Green's injunction. The court set oral arguments for Thursday.

West Texas Still Dry

NORTHEAST — Harvesting is complete except for pecans and some fall vegetables. The excellent pecan crop is about 75 percent complete. Oats are providing good grazing, but pastures and ranges are short. Wheat needs rain. Farmers are preparing land for next spring.

FAR WEST - About 90 percent of the cotton crop is in, with harvesting continuing at a rapid pace. Pecan harvesting is heavy. Wheat is making slow growth. Cattle are in fair to good shape, with feeding acting in most counties.

WEST CENTRAL - Cotton harvest is 85 to 100 percent complete, with generally good yields. Pecan harvest has excellent yields. Small grain and pastures are still deteriorating due to dry weather. Supplemental feeding of livestock is increasing.

CENTRAL:Some scattered rains fell over the area with passing of a cold front. However, much more rain is needed for small grains and cool-season forage. Harvesting of a record pecan crop is past the halfway point. Ranchers are boasting good calf and lamb crops. Supplemental feeding is beginning. EAST: Wheat and oats are up and beginning to make some growth; some oats are being grazed. Harvesting of a good pecan crop continues, but scab disease and mites caused some damage. Pasture and ranges are average, with livestock in good shape. A good calf crop is on the ground. SOUTHEAST AND UPPER GULF COAST: Rains over the area should boost small grain pastures. Some pecans are still being harvested, and farmers are getting cropland in shape for next spring's crop. Cattle are in good shape although grazing is declining. Some supplemental feeding is under way.

SOUTH CENTRAL: Good rains should help wheat and oats and boost grazing. Livestock continue in good to excellent shape due to the mild fall weather; however, grazing is declining. Pecan harvesting is about complete; this year's crop was excellent. Farmers are getting cropland prepared for next spring's plantings.

SOUTHWEST: Heavy cattle marketing and supplemental feeding dominate the area due to continuing dry conditions. Small grains are suffering and livestock have little grazing, causing their condition to decline. Some ranchers are liquisoybeans and sunflowers is dating their herds due to the extreme drought conditions.

COASTAL BEND: Harvesting of peanuts and soybeans in complete. Some wheat is still being dry-planted. Flax, oats and barley are making little or no growth due to lack of moisture. Pecan harvesting continues. Livestock conditions are declining due to poor grazing, so supplemental feeding is increasing. Cattle marketing is active, and farmers are preparing land for spring planting.

SOUTH: The Valley has received good rains but the rest of the area remains dry. Rains have some delays in soybeans and sugar cane harvesting. The demand for gift fruit is strong as the holiday approaches. However, this year's crop will be short due to damaging freezes last winter. Fall vegetables to make good progress. Pasture and livestock conditions continue to decline due to dry weath-

Girlstown Shoe Fund Scheduled

Looking for a way to really feel the joy of Christmas giving? Nolan Grady of Hereford, district Girlstown chairman; has a suggestion.

Lions Clubs of the district are sponsoring a Girlstown Coat & Shoe Fund again this year and will seek to present 113 girls with funds to buy coats and

"The success of this project depends upon citizens of each community in the area, not just contributions from the Lions Clubs," Grady stated. He said support is solicited from church groups and all organizations. If a group, or an individual, wants to sponsor one particular girl, they can do it with a $100 contribution. The donor will receive a "thankyou" note from that girl.

Those wishing to participate in the Girlstown Coat & Shoe Fund can send contributions to Box 414, Hereford, Tx. 79045.

DPS Estimates Death Toll at 123

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) -An estimated 123 persons will die in Texas by motor vehicle mishaps during the Christmas and New Year's holidays, the Department of Public Safety predicts.

DPS Director Wilson E. Speir estimated 67 persons will be killed from 6 p.m. Dec. 21 through midnight Dec. 25 and another 56 persons from 6 p.m. Dec. 28 through midnight Jan.

Each period is 102 hours. Last year there were 57 deaths during the Christmas holidays and 39 during the New Year's holidays. Speir said the statewide traffic toll is presently about 6 percent ahead of the record pace of 1978. Last year there were 3,980 persons killed statewide in motor vehicles accidents.

Buying, Selling

by PAUL SIMS Managing Editor

Maybe what Hereford merchants need most is snow, freezing weather and slick streets the entire week before Christmas.

Nothing else seems to slow the flow of Christmas-shopping traffic to Amarillo in the evenings.

The merchants have tried almost everything-sales, advertisements, friendly service, etc.--then have sat back and watched the same old trend. Highway 60 has been a busy strip of road lately.

Don't get me wrong. It's still the busiest time of the year, by far, for most local stores. It's apparent that most folks still adhere to the belief that shopping locally has far more advantages than going elsewhere.

But, when even one shopper spends his money in Amarillo, it adds to the burden of the local economy. Snow may be the answer. I overheard a conversation between a shopper, who had just purchased enough Christmas gifts to pay the light bill at the department store, and a cashier the other night.

The lady customer said, "You know, I was going to shop in Amarillo tonight, and I got five miles out of town and turned around by the airport. The road was just too slick. I didn't think I could find anything in the stores here."

Well, she did, and, judging from the number of items she bought, she is probably through with her Christmas shopping

You've read, time after time, why it's important to shop in Hereford.

Businesses need your money to stay in business. Hereford needs the local taxes paid by businesses to make life better in Hereford. Local lending institutions need businesses' deposits in order to continue lending.

And, each month, the city receives a sales-tax rebate from the state comptroller. Tax paid in Amarillo is rebated only to Amarillo

Of course, to convince folks to shop in Hereford, merchants must provide both goods and friendly, efficient service. And, pardon my job-induced interest, they must advertise in their local newspaper that they have those goods.

It's a two-way street, though. Merchants aren't going to stock everything everybody needs if people won't buy their stuff.

Christmas shoppers, I simply ask that you at least try Hereford first. If you can't find what you must have, go to Amarillo.

Merchants, show folks by your service, selection and prices that it makes sense to buy here. And, pray for snow.

Don't Sell U.S.

The average American probably has heard plenty about the SALT II Treaty, but perhaps few really know what the treaty is all about. The announced intent is the limitation of strategic arms for both nations.

Congressional leaders have said the treaty. probably could not be passed in Congress at this time. However, the vote on whether to ratify, reject or amend won't come up until 1980.

According to some translations of the treaty which we've read, the agreement gives the Soviet Union superiority in almost every category of strategic nuclear weapons. Anti-treaty leaders claim the tremendous advantages it gives to the Soviets are concealed in diplomatic language.

They also claim that the treaty forbids the United States from catching up with the Soviet Union in nuclear weapons. The Russians do not have to cheat; they can do it all legally under SALT

That's why some folks are saying that SALT stands for "Surrender A Little at a Time." Let's make sure our congressmen know that we are concerned about this treaty, that we want to know exactly what it means, and that we don't want to surrender to Russia through a treaty!

Short Work Week Old News

Organized labor has dusted off another of its hand-me-down solutions for the nation's unemployment-the 35 hour workweek.

Unfortunately, neither the labor unions nor a handful of congressmen who support the idea apparently bothered to consult American workers, who pretty much establish their own working patterns.

If they had done so, they would have found Americans are already working shorter workweeks on the average, by choice. Many simply prefer part-time jobs.

The U.S. Chamber of Commerce, citing official government data, reports that while the number of full-time workers increased by 29.6 percent from 1963 to 1977, the number of part-time workers grew by 91 percent.

This is explained, in part, by working mothers. They prefer part-time work. On the average. according to the Department of Labor, they work 1.4 fewer hours each week-for every child under 15 at home.

Still other workers prefer longer workweeks. That is why so many moonlight, or take a second or third job, and why others like working overtime at premium pay, especially if they are trying to buy their first

Under the House bill (H.R. 1784) introduced by Rep. John Convers. Sr., (D-Mich.), the workweek would be cut to 35 hours and double pay would replace time and a half as premium pay for overtime.

"The workweek has been shortening naturally in the fastest expanding part of our economy as a reflection of the changing demography of our country," says Dr. Richard S. Landry, deputy chief economist for the Chamber

Spreading the work (jobs) by cutting workweeks is not as simple as its supporters believe. If the week is reduced, inflation must be taken into account. Workers will expect the same pay for roughly 12.5 percent less work, in the case of those now working 40 hours a week.

Moreover, unemployed workers would be exceedingly difficult to match up with the

"It is highly unlikely." says jobs that, in theory at least, Dr. Landry, "that they could would open up. Fully half the step into job openings that

GOD GOT THE WRONG RIB ...

And God decided to give His newly created man a present. He caused the man to go to sleep and while he was asleep. God created woman.

Man woke up with a rib ache and the first present

For three days he just looked at this strange creature. She looked sorta funny but interesting. He had a strange urge to eat apples.

Then man opened his mouth to speak to God about his new gift.

His first words were: "Where are the instructions? How does this creature work? Are the batteries included?'

I have lived in a world of women. One wife, four daughters, two female cats. Every dog we have had has been female. We had some fish that were suspect. The longer I live in my world of women, the more confused I become. What makes them tick? Are the batteries included?

Why do they cry so often? I can understand their crying when they are sad. I can understand their crying when they are mad. But how come they cry when they are happy?

How do they make decisions? Have you ever watched one of them shop? They do not shop, they flip through the dresses waiting for one to jump out and grab them. They will try on shoes all day waiting for a certain pair that does something to them. What is the something the shoes do? I have sat in a shoe store for hours waiting for a pair of shoes to ring my chimes. Nothing! Absolutely nothing happens. How come it happens to them? After all of these years I have decided God must have gotten the wrong rib when he made woman. Maybe He was tired that night or maybe the light wasn't good.

Don't get me wrong, I am not complaining. The fact that He made this creature different has added spice to my life. Trying to understand has forced communication. Trying to comfort has forged understanding. The difference completes man.

But I still wish He had included an instruction sheet. I ask God about this and He said, "What makes you think I understand them?"

Warm fuzzies. _ Doug Manning

Bootleg Philosopher

Like Kissing His Sister

Editor's Note: The Bootleg Philosopher on his Deaf Smith County grass farm gets his mind off the international situation this week. Dear Editor:

A person can dwell on international problems just so long, after which he needs to take up something minor, something closer to home. For example, take ties in professional football. Here it is getting close to midnight, way past your bedtime, and the two teams on TV are about to end in a tie, forcing the game into over-time. Or say you've settled down to two good games on Sunday, one starting at 12 noon. the other at 3. But the firstone ends in a tie and over-time runs past the start of the second game, the one you really were more interested in.

There is a way to avoid tie games 99 percent of the time, in fact where it's almost mathematically impossible to have You do it by changing the value of field gaols and extra Like it is, a field goal from 2 yards out counts as much as one from 50 yards. This is as unfair as paying me the same price for building 10 feet of fence as somebody else gets for building 100 feet, although the arrangement would suit me. It's as unfair as paying all Congessmen the same salary, even if some of them never carry the ball, can't remember the signals and couldn't kick a field goal from 12 inches out.

There's a way to correct this. in football, not in Congress. A field goal from 50 yards out should be worth 3 points. From 40 yards out, 21/2 points. From 30 yards, 2 points. From 20 yards, 11/2 points. And so on, until one from a vard out is worth say 1/4 of a point. For kicking a point after a touchdown, you get 1 point from 5 yards out, 11/2 from 10, and so forth on a sliding scale up to 50 yards out, 3 points.

You'd then see games ending Dallas 191/2, Washington 191/4; Pittsburgh 391/4. St. Louis 21/2.

Now let's get back to the international situation. As I understand it, the Ayatollah Khomeini wants to take Iran back to the 14th century, by riding in an air-conditioned helicopter to a TV studio to tell his followers how to do it.

Yours faithfully. J.A.

Schoolhouse Going Strong Despite Regulations

SHILOH, Mich. (AP) just think they learn more."

That's the opinion of a parent who has sent five children to a one-room wooden schoolhouse painted fire engine red.

This year, 26 families are sending 29 children to the 100year-old Shiloh School, where teacher Linda Hausserman handles kindergarten through sixth grade.

"It's just our way, and we'll be here until the state forces us to close," says June Leland, treasurer of the three-member school board for Shiloh, 30 miles east of Grand Rapids. Barbara Beamon, the mother whose five children have attended Shiloh, is school board president.

But closing is unlikely for Shiloh School. While other such schools have fallen prev to district annexations and consolidations, Shiloh keeps going strong. It is one of 35 one-room schoolhouses left in Michigan. seven of which are here in Ionia County.

The school provides an education the parents consider worth holding onto, and that is how the school survives. The

The job of teacher at a oneroom school today is much as it was 50 or 100 years ago, says Linda Emelander, who teaches at the one-room Piper School two miles north of Shiloh School. More than 110 years old. Piper has only 14 students.

"You have to be very loval and ready to put forth many more hours," said Ms. Emelander. "You have to have a willingness to do everything, from being a janitor to a nurse. We mend clothes, the whole bit."

Ms. Emelander acknowledges that one-room schoolhouses cannot offer modern science equipment and other perks readily available at larger schools. But she believes country schools excel at giving children the opportunity to be independent and to feel secure with basic math, reading and

"They know they aren't going to be led by the hand through things," she said. "It's coming back to the basics. Kids must have them. And you find the basics stressed very much at the country school."

The approach can pay dividends. In 1978-79, the six Shiloh children taking the state assessment tests scored above average. All six scored within the 75 percent to 100 percent range in math while five of six scored

When the president took his mother, Miss Lillian, to a movie in the White House theater last week, the film coincidentally concerned a religiously oriented ruler who met an abrupt end: Mary Queen of Scots.

The president's mother created a small stir at a state dinner last month that honored Jack Lynch, then prime minister of Ireland.

Seeking the Irish leader's attention, the Carter matriarch showed little tolerance for Lynch's title as she beckoned to him with the words, "Prime!

Roloff, Feds to Have Another Showdown over Girls

CORPUS CHRISTI, Texas (AP) - The girls are back, and fiery evangelist Lester Roloff says it was a mistake ever to 2 send them away. He says it will never happen again.

But the State of Texas is just as adamant that Roloff's Rebekah Home for Girls must be licensed, so the Baptist and the bureaucrats seem headed for another collision.

"I'll never sacrifice my girls on the altar of an unrighteous decree," vowed the 65-year-old Roloff in an interview at his program - was forced to close

But on June 22, Roloff had to surrender to a court order that he close the home. Some girls went to Roloff's summer camp in Culloden, Ga. Others returned home to parents or drifted away, he said.

Brother Roloff, as he is popularly known, spent the summer restructuring the home's management, tranferring ownership and control from Roloff Evangelistic Enterprises to his Peoples Baptist Church, which is adjacent to the girls' home.

Roloff reopened Rebekah on Sept. 13. Fifty of the original 180 girls arrived on a bus from Georgia after what one girl said was a "summer of sadness."

Now the home houses more than 100 girls - most of whom' Roloff says are 'terminal cases" with backgrounds of prostitution or drug and alcohol abuse. Some judges send girls to him rather than sentence

A year stay at the home is considered the minimum. Some girls remain longer.

During a tour of the home, 16vear-old resident Judy Burnett of Dallas said she ran away from Roloff and tried to kill herself before "getting saved." 'I was in lockup and Mrs.

Good, Bad Times Highlight Country's Past Decade

By SAUL PETT

AP Special Correspondent The decade is about over, and who is sorry? A new decade approaches, and who is optimistic?

Clearly, these are not the best of times nor the worst of times. Mostly, the color is gray, a stubborn, frustrating gray we can't seem to shake. The trouble with our times, someone said, is that the future isn't what it used to be.

It used to be un-American to think that. Probably more than any other nation in history, this one has been propelled by a sense of the future.

For 300 years, with the possible exceptions of the Civil War and the Depression, we moved through good times and bad with a sense that things would get better. The next valley would d be greener, the line on the graph would climb, problems would be solved, technology would save us, the right man would come along to lead us.

But in the '70s, something new, something alien, crept into our psyche. We woke up one morning and didn't recognize ourselves or the world around us. We began telling the pollsters, for the first time, that the next five years likely would be worse than the last five. We said that our lives have been better than our fathers' but we don't expect our children's lives will be as good as ours.

Among thinkers, the pessimists say this view is a malaise that goes with the downhill slope. Thinking optimists say no; it is, at long last, a sign of national maturity. John W. Gardner, a thinker and a doer, says we have lost and will never regain our "morning eagerness," and, he says, this is just as well. The facts of life, discovered by older nations long ago, are that the line on the graph cannot go forever up.

In the last century, Tocqueville, the acute French observer, found Americans to be totally convinced that "their whole destiny is in their hands." Forty years ago, Henry Luce was proclaiming the staft of "the American century." Nothing so knocked hell out of either idea as the decade now ending.

Relentlessly, Vietnam shredded our omnipotence, and Watergate befouled our trust in government. Inflation picked our pockets without mercy, and abroad the mighty dollar staggered like a collapsing drunk chased by a lynch mob.

The oil shortage gave us our first shocking taste of limits and made our foreign policy hostage to foreigners. Miasmas like Guyana defied our very understanding of human nature. In the United Nations, which we started, we found ourselves pilloried and outnumbered.

In Iran, for weeks, we found ourselves helpless to free Americans held captive in our embassy, this near the end of a decade which would not let go of violence to our pride and self-perception.

In the middle of the decade, a brief shining hour, as telling for its warmth as for its brevity. July 4, 1976, and didn't it feel good feeling good again? Wasn't it nice that everybody behaved? Nobody marched in protest, nobody raised hell, nobody took a shot at the president, nothing desecrated the moment. On our 200th birthday, we were allowed a sense of family, for a day.

The previous decade, the bloody, mind-rattling cacophony called the '60s, also had its shining hour when we and the world, with a breathless sense of community, watched men walk on the moon. We had parted the curtain of an eternal mystery, we had beaten the Russians. American technology had prevailed and there was a promise of mastering the universe. Except for our part down here.

Like the golden hour of the '70s, it was quickly forgotten in a parade of earthly miseries and recalled only by negative refrain: Why can't a country that could put a man on the moon solve the problems of the cities, pollution, energy?

Irony, it seemed, had been built into the cafendar. Late in 1959, Look Magazine t took the public pulse and found that most Americans were "relaxed, unadventurous, comfortably satisfied with their way of life and blandly optimistic about the future." Their kids' opinions, Look said, mostly mirrored their own and there was no sign of a generation gap.

Then came the '60s. On the third day of the '70s, Gallup published a poll in which Americans were asked whom they admired most in the whole world. Richard Nixon, they said, followed by Billy Graham and Spiro

Agnew. It was a hard time for prophets. If you were middle-aged in the '70s. you belonged to a generation that was asked to absorb more change than probably any in history. When we married, we married forever, we thought. Wives would be content to be wives and mothers, we thought. Our kids would do better emotionally than we did because we were better prepared to be parents than ours

It was as if you built a house at the end of the railroad line, built it of brick and mortar and heavy timber, and suddenly the railroad wasn't running there

Suddenly, you couldn't find your children anymore or the road signs you grew up with or, for that matter, the Boston Braves. Suddenly, there was alienation, the new math, a new wrath, pot, acid and rock, and who remembered Tommy Dorsey? Suddenly, somewhere in the '70s, the youth uproar subsided and, it seemed, the kids might be coming home. But they weren't marrying and they weren't having children and the thing called the American way of life now had to include the fact that nearly half of our marriages were ending in divorce.

Suddenly, the money you earned was not w what you took home and what you took home was not what you kept and what you put in the bank on Tuesday was worth less on Thursday.

Suddenly, while you're still looking for the Boston Braves - were they in Milwaukee or Atlanta? - it turns out that baseball gloves now come from Taiwan, the big hotel downtown belongs to the Arabs, the Russians are buying up our grain, the British now own Gimbels and the West Germans and British have bought the birthplaces of two American presidents in old Virginia. We are told to take heart, that this kind of thing reflects the confidence of foreign investors in our stability, but who will keep the Grand Canyon out of Saudi hands?

Suddenly, it seems, we are all aware of the disparate world, rich and poor, fat and hungry, which it always was, except that now instant communications make the hungry instantly aware of the wellfed. A world divided by nations ending the 20th century and by nations just entering it.

Change, change. Nothing holds still. Yesterday's solutions become today's problems. "Modern society," wrote columnist George Will, "is like a Calder mobile. Disturb it here and it jiggles over there."

The need for clean air collides with the need for coal. Black progress runs into white rights and the singular, frustrating combination of inflation and recession defies everything we learned in Economics 1.

Welfare, we begin to see, may always be with us; government spending now accounts for more than a third of the gross national product in the mecca of free enterprise; Uncle Sam tries to bail out Chrysler, and in Detroit, where they still remember the bloody sit-down strikes, the union now holds a seat on the company's board of directors.

"There is an almost overpowering temptation to believe," says John Gardner, "that somewhere along the line we made one big mistake, forgot one truth, overlooked the one key to salvation.

"We want a simple answer ... But the pat formula will never appear. Many things are wrong. Many things must be

Orphan Trains Written About

McPHERSON, Kan. (AP) -One day after her 11th birthday, Anna Fuchs sat on a platform in a drafty Kansas church praying for a mother to step forward out of the curious crowd and give her a new life.

It was Dec. 7, 1924, a milestone for a crippled orphan from New York City and a lonely spinster from McPherson, Kan. Forever after, their lives would entwine.

Anna Fuchs' story is one of thousands of footnotes in the story of America's orphan trains. The trains ran west from 1853 to 1929, but today few temember the transplant of nearly 100,000 abandoned and orphaned children from the ghetto streets of a metropolis to the isolated towns strung out along the tracks.

Miss Fuchs - 66 and retired - is now a civic leader in the small prairie town where the train deposited her. She is one of five children whose past is recounted in a new book. "Searching for Home," by Martha Nelson Vogt and her daughter, Christina Vogt, of Grand Rapids, Mich.

"I hesitated at first," said Miss Fuchs, a soft-spoken woman whose cheerful laugh dispels a prim image. "But I realized that most who had talked about it already were ones whose adoption didn't work out or were mistreated. I thought it wasn't fair to tell just one side.

'The happy, well-adjusted onesslike me have been swallowed up by society. I wanted our side to be heard, too. And I wanted to pay tribute to the people who opened their homes and made it possible for a child like me to get a second chance."

The story begins in 1853. when social worker Charles Loring Brace founded the New York Children's Aid Society. It was a time before widows' pensions, health insurance, welfare subsidies, compulsory education and child labor laws - an age when infanticide was not uncommon.

New York City overflowed with immigrants. Many died of disease, overwork and hunger. With relatives far away in the Old Country, tens of thousands of penniless orphans took to the

The society started orphanages and schools, but Brace felt the only decent life for the children lay to the west. He believed that in exchange for an extra pair of hands for chores, farm families would provide waifs with wholesome food, a Christian upbringing and an

Legal adoption was possible after a year if the placement was satisfactory for both child and foster family. That was the ideal. It didn't always work that "I know a lot of people today will feel this was a terrible thing, to bundle up a bunch of kids, ship them out on a train and give them away to somebody who liked the way they looked when they lined up on a theater stage or a church altar," said Miss Fuchs.

"But back then there were no psychologists or computer matches. It was either the orphan train or turn them out destitute on the streets to become beggars, thieves and prostitutes. There was no other way and we all knew it. And anything was better than an orphanage.

The orphan trains - actually normal passenger coaches on which chaperoned groups of children traveled - started in the late 1850s. In 1875, the peak year, more than 4,000 children Jchugged west.

In 1920, Anna's butcher from Hungary, died in a tuberculosis sanitarium. Anna, sickly child suspected of having TB, stayed at the Catskill Mountains hospital until 1924, when her mother died in New York City.

"I was sent back to be with my sisters, and neighbors got us into the orphanage," said Miss Fuchs. "That first night, I grew up. I knew I was completely alone then, and I was determined to somehow survive."

After Thanksgiving, the girls were told they were going west to new homes. She recalls humming "California Here I Come" on the long journey with her two sisters and six other or-

But when the train stopped, Anna was stunned to find herself in "a flat, desolate, snowbound landscape in the middle of nowhere."

This wasn't California. Where was it? "Kansas," replied the chaperone. Anna had never even heard the word.

Two days later, awkward in a too-big blue velvet dress and a red sailor hat that failed to hide her unruly bangs, Anna stood before a standing-room-only crowd at the Presbyterian church. People stared in frank curiosity at the scared little strangers.

In the back of the room sat Jennie Bengtson, a 49-year-old spinster who supported herself by taking in boarders. She

Her gaze kept coming back to Anna. On impulse, she told an adoption committee member: " would like to have the girl on the end."

Sest Wishes

The orphan spent that first night eating ginger snaps and crying. Jennie felt as helpless as Anna felt lost. But slowly, tentatively, the bond grew. "I was teased about my New York accent. I was a free spirit and Jennie had strict rules. But I had no choice. I had to stay there and make a go of it, and she stuck with megall the way," Miss Fuchs said. "One day I realized we loved each other."

Anna started the fifth grade and went to church every Sunday. Her sisters, Margaret, 9, and Helen, 7, adopted by other local families, visited occasionally. Life settled into a routine.

Anna graduated from Mc-Pherson College in 1937 with degrees in music and education. She and Jennie weathered the Depression years and in 1941, Anna was hired by an insurance

Christmases and birthdays flew by. Jennie went blind;

Anna, her own hair now gray. entertained her in the evenings by playing piano and cello, instruments she'd mastered despite a deformed right hand. She savored the dwindling days.

On Dec. 10, 1964, Jennie died at the age of 89.

"One of the worst days of my life was the following Mother's Day. I broke down in church and someone said, 'What are you crying about? Jennie wasn't your mother.' I never came so close to hitting anyone.

"Jennie WAS my mother." she said. "I am alone again, but I was so lucky to have had her. I miss her every day.'

IRA Promises to Bomb Britain Around Christmas

By ED BLANCHE

Associated Press Writer LONDON (AP) - Irish Republican Army militants have vowed to carry out a Christmas bomb blitz in England despite a British police roundup that netted 24 IRA suspects, including a man described by Scotland Yard as one of the group's top bomb experts.

One 1RA source in Belfast, Northern Ireland, said militants of the outlawed IRA's Provisional Wing plan "to kill as many people as possible" in a bid to turn public opinion against continued British rule in the strife-torn province.

closed the IRA roundup on Friday. They described the coordinated police raids Wednesday in the cities of London, Birmingham, Liverpool, Southhampton and Manchester as "a pre-emptive strike" to foil IRA plans for a repeat of the bombings that bloodied Britain's Christmas last year.

But Assistant Commissioner Gilbert Kelland told reporters that despite the roundup, codenamed Operation Otis, the IRA Scotland Yard officials dismay still be capable of bombing crowded English shopping centers during the holidays.

He said no explosives were found in the London raid and this indicated that some terrorist teams were still at large with their bombs.

In Belfast, IRA sources said the arrests would not stop their planned holiday bomb blitz.

Kelland identified the suspected IRA bomb expert as 24year-old Gerry Tuite and said he had been sought since the bombing wave in Britain last Christmas. Kelland said Tuite operated under several assumed names and had recently entered England from Northern

Woman Kills Self after Confessing to Old Murder

RAEFORD, N.C. (AP) - 1wo days after officials dug up human bones from an old privy site, a prominent Hoke County woman drove her car to a wooded area of her farm and apparently killed herself, leaving a note confessing to the slaying of her husband 35 years ago, officials said.

The body of 69-year-old Winnie McNeill Cameron, a .32caliber pistol clutched in her hand, was discovered Friday on her farm near this southeastern

On Wednesday, human bones - believed to be those of her husband - were unearthed from the place where an outhouse once stood, officials said.

Edward Leon Cameron, 34, vanished from his home on the night before Easter of 1944. Authorities recently re-opened the case of Cameron's disappearance after the couple's daughter, Annie Blue Perry of Orlando, Fla., said she had vi-

Sports Decade Over

By FRED ROTHENBERG Associated Press Writer

Two hundred years after the American Revolution, the American athlete has won his freedom. Sports and its financial structure will never be the same.

The 1970s was a decade of revolution in sports. Players, formerly restricted to one prospective employer, were finally able to utilize the capitalistic system and sell themselves to the

And no group of athletes benefitted more than baseball players, who turned the tables on their conservative owners via a landmark arbitration decision.

Marvin Miller, executive director of the Major League Baseball Players Association, and Dick Moss, the union's lawyer, engineered the attack against the reserve system, rules that gave ownership sole control over a player's destiny.

Arbitrator Peter Seitz, ruling in 1975 in the famous Messersmith-McNally case, said that players were free one year after their contracts expired. This was contrary to the owners' interpretation that said a player was bound to one team until he was cut or traded.

In the four years of free agency, many stars have utilized the new system and many have benefited from its spectre.

After becoming free agents, Nolan Ryan signed a three-year, $3 million contract with Texas, Reggie Jackson signed a fiveyear, $2.9 million contract with the New York Yankees and hustling Pete Rose signed a four-year, $3.2 million contract with

Then again, some teams opted to pay their stars top dollar in order to keep them from testing the free-agent market. Rod Carew (California), Dave Parker (Pittsburgh) and George Foster (Cincinnati) each signed long-term contracts for $800,000-ayear-to stay home.

The two dominant teams of the '7.1s - the Oakland A's and the New York Yankees - took different positions on free agency. The A's owned by penny-pinching Charles O. Finley, won three straight world championships (1972-74) but were shorn of many of their star players by the new system. The Yankees, owned by the ambitious George Steinbrenner, won successive World Series titles in 1977-78 because of the presence of several bigname free agents on their roster.

Baseball's average salary is now over $100,000, which puts it on the same level as basketball. Hockey and basketball players, with more restrictive escape routes, were able to use new, competing leagues as leverage in salary negotiations.

The real or threatened exodus to the American Basketball Association or World Hockey Association skyrocketed salaries in the National Basketball Association and the National Hockey playoff berths but there are three more postseason slots to be settled as well as the matchups. And for a couple of clubs. the suspense will stretch into Monday night.

Cleveland, playing at Cincinnati Sunday, still has a shot at an AFC wild card berth but the Bucs win their game and the division title, then Chicago's only playoff chance would be a wild card long shot, available only if they beat St. Louis big and Washington loses by a large score to Dallas.

Confused? By Tuesday we'll know the answers.

Illinois had a record of 6-24-3 in three years under Coach Gary

Because of the greater cost of running franchises, the expansion boom of the 1960s stopped, giving way to the contraction of the 1970s. Except for the growth of the North American Soccer League, the direction was definitely toward consolidation. Basketball's two leagues joined in 1976 and hockey merged in

But the owners gained a lucrative new ally to help defray some of their higher costs - television. More than anything else, TV created the sports boom of the '70s. Its world-wide exposure' made instant heroes and heroines out of Olympic stars. Mark Spitz won seven swimming gold medals in 1972; Bruce Jenner took the decathlon gold four years later. Olga Korbut, the gymnastic darling of the '72 Games in Munich, was succeeded by Nadia Comaneci in Montreal.

And ABC, which became the leader in international sports broadcasts, turned its cameras away from the Games to cover the killing of 13 Israeli athletes by Arab terrorists in Munich.

ABC also made the first breakthrough into prime television for team sports with its highly rated "Monday Night Football." Post-season and then regular season baseball followed suit, but pro football benefitted the most from TV. Watching football on Sundays and Monday nights became a national ritual. So did the annual Super Bowl, which was dominated by the Pittsburgh Steelers, Dallas Cowboys, Miami Dolphins and Minnesota Vikings during the decade.

Commisioner Pete Rozelle worked out an incredible four-year contract with all three networks that will net each team $5.2 million a year for the life of the agreement.

The man who profited the most from TV was Muhammad Ali, the most visible sports figure of the decade, who won the heavyweight title twice - for a record total of three times - and fought three classic battles with Joe Frazier in the '70s. Ali, with the help of TV and bankrolling countries like Zaire, The Philippines and Malaysia, made the multi-million dollar heavyweight title fight commonplace.

After being stripped of the heavyweight crown for refusing induction into the army, Ali stopped George Foreman in Zaire in 1974. Then the self-proclaimed "Greatest" avenged his defeat to Leon Spinks with a 15-round decision in 1978, Ali's last bout Boxing was not the only individual sport to prosper in the '70s. Tennis and golf boomed, with multi-million dollar tours backed by commercial sponsors and TV.

Billie Jean King raised the equal rights banner to gain top purses for the women just about the time Chris Evert began winning all the top tournaments. Evert's former fiance, Jimmy Connors, was equally dominating in the mid-70s before Bjorn. Borg became the No.1 male player, winning an unprecedented four straight Wimbledon crowns.

In golf, Jack Nicklaus continued to build on his record haul of victories in the Big Four major tournaments, although Tom Watson became the dominant players in the last half of the

And, oh yes, there was one more individual sport that had a big impact - possibly the greatest - on the 1970s since it affected athlete and non-athlete alike. A running boom swept the country, helping firm America's midsection and, possibly, pointing up a trend for the '80s of more participation in sports and less watching.

Relaxed Hunting Pace, Use of Wind Are Keys to Late- Season Ringnecks

BY JIM STEIERT

Hunters taking the field for the second weekend of the 1979-80 pheasant season in the local area will more than likely find that all of the unwary or other areas of dense vegetation foolish cockbirds have longsince disappeared, and that ringnecks will be considerably harder to come by now.

But even if pheasant hunting isn't as simple as during the opening day when about all that was necessary was to sweep a stalk field and follow through on the birds breaking at the row ends, some outstanding pheasant hunting still awaits those with the patience and persis-

A productive techique is for a hunter to work these fields alone, or with a small party of . two or three.

If winds are gusty, there's a good chance birds will be located in the rows on the leeward side of the field, and these can be worked first.

There's no reason to be in a hurry when working a sorghum field in the wind. A slow pace, punctuated by frequent pauses. shotgun at the ready, is good medicine for setting tight-holding birds to wing.

In high winds, they'll probably remain close by where they touch down, and though the birds may have to be forced part-way across the field, often they'll eventually come up within range

Frequent pauses unnerve birds and result in flushes that might never occur otherwise, and it's a well-advised move to pause at the end of the field. when completing a pass through it. of these slip-bys and put more distance from heavily hunted birds in the air.

When hunting the dense cover common in lake bottoms or week-choked drainage areas in the local region, sportsmen should remember that any downed bird may be difficult to find without a dog.

If a bird is downed, the gunner should keep his attention riveted on the point where it fell, and if a companion is near-by, he should be asked to home the shooter in on the point where the bird fell.

Look for tell-tale feathers and down on the vegetation in the area where the bird fell, as it will help to home you in.

In dense cover such as cattails, a bird can fall through the uppermost layer of vegetation and be suspended, nearly invisible, above the ground.

For that reason, a gunner should move immediately to retrieve any bird downed in playas or other dense coever.

Many hunters overlook opportunities for success that may be afforded by small, nearly forgotten areas of cover. Any area with sufficient vegetation to hold birds should be worked, particularly if you feel the area hasn't been hunted

Although the cover may be sparse by the standards of grainfields or playas, the area may be an escape route for birds, of may draw them as a temporary hiding place when the heat is on in another area of

Pressured from their preferred grainfield habitat, the pheasants had holed up in a cover overlooked by dozens of hunters for over a week.

Because late-season pheasants are prone to flush wild from cover and may often present a shot only at the limit of shotgun range, hunters working the heavy cover should tailor their loads to the task and give themselves every edge on those long shots. With 12 gauge seemingly the favored shotgun for late-season pheasant hunting, gunners should find high brass loads of 1-1/4 oz. of No. 6 shot pushed along by a 3-3/4 dram equivalent powder load a potent potion for most situations.

There are those times when a 1-1/2 ounce load of shot will give an edge in performance and stretch the range a bit more, and some gunners prefer No. 5 or even No. 4 shot for the late season excursions.

So, while many may be convinced that only hens remain after the initial weekend of hunting here, there are still plenty of colorful cockbirds waiting out there for those who are dedicated enough to go after

You may come home with cattail fuzz in your nostrils and kochia week stickers in your socks and hunting pants, but the fellow who returns with these accourrements dotting his garb after a carefully-paced hunt will also probably plop down a game vest stuffed with a brace of those wily ringnecks.

Accidents Bring Home Importance of Safety

By JIM STEIERT

Outdoors Editor

The importance of proper gun handling at all times was brought home to several visiting sportsmen on the opening day of pheasant season here last

At least three hunters were struck by gunfire during outings as vast numbers of hunters in the field greatly increased the potential for accidents during the initial phase of the season.

The most serious incident occurred last Saturday when Kirk Grizzell of Lubbock was shot by a hunting partner while retrieving a downed pheasant in a field three miles west of Hereford.

According to witnesses. Grizzell was struck in the leg by a blast from a 12 gauge shotgun when one of the Lubock man's hunting companions fired at the downed bird, but apparently failed to take his field of fire into

The Lubbock man underwent emergency surgery here, and was later reported in good condition, although there was some early concern that he might lose his leg to the

A Friona hunter suffered a pellet injury to the back of his neck in a second accident while a Dallas dentist reportedly was hit in the back by shotgun pellets in a third accident.

Local authorities expressed of the season that hunters might of the region. suffer injuries from shotgun pellets if they failed to exercise due caution during large-scale driving and blocking operations.

Sportsmen are reminded of the cardinal rules of gun safety which indicate that hunters should always be sure of their target before firing, and that the field of fire should always be taken into account before

Five North Carolina men spent the past week hunting pheasant in Deaf Smith County as guests of the Daryl Zebely

The visiting hunters were reportedly impressed with this area's abundance of pheasants, stating that they saw more birds here than in the Dakotas.

Enjoying the hunting expedition were Lindsey Smith, mayor inwood, N. C., his brother Bill Smith, another brother Charlie Smith, Tommy Koontz and Beauford Blankenship.

Often, part of the decoy spread will need pre-assembly, and the evening before is spent in wiring corn shucks and attaching frames to the blinds, snapping decoy heads in place on the shell bodies and stretching their rubber band holders into place on the stakes, and generally getting the decoys into shape to be set out as quickly and effortlessly as possible in the darkness of pre-dawn.

You're not just anticipating incoming flights at a time ilke this, but the pre-dawn cold and the aching of chilled fingers and toes too. Simple little things like having the decoys ready will mean a lot when the icy fingers of early-morning winter have you wondering why you're out here for all of this "fun" on the morrow.

For some reason, there's always somebody in d the crowd who doesn't seem to have a duck stamp, a hunting license, a crane permit or one of dozens of other essentials, and of course this guy is the cause of all sorts of wild scrambling the last day or so immediately preceding the "big event".

It got to the point that I began to carry extra duck stamps around, just for these last minute "forgot-to-get" guys, and there are always a few spare shells stashed somewhere, just in case.

You know the anticipation is really there when you can close your eyes and see flights of geese locking in on the decoys and setting wings not only " the night following a big hunt, but on the evening before it as well.

And the tentative honks you blow through the call before stuffing it into the pocket of your coveralls for quick access ring out with your hope. that they will prove irresistable to Canadas and snows on the next sunrise.

Finally, it all starts running together. The realization that you've been fooling around with getting all of this stuff ready and should have been in bed an hour ago, considering that in only a brief span you'll be arising.

Sleep never seems to come that easily right before a big outing though.

Oh, you doze off, but along about two hours before it's really time to make a move, you're already wide awake. And by the time the alarm finally announces the official start of it all, you're already supercharged for the outing. Layers of clothes that will seal out the bitter cold are piled on, then you move out and turn on the porch light for the fellows who should be here soon by the reckonings of your 10-minute early watch. The coffee pot makes its familiar rumblings as the percolation starts up, and amid the smell and the steam and the constant glances at the clock on the wall, the feeling is growing even more. You hear the fellows drive up out front and meet them at the door.

They shuffle in, shivering, already aware of just how cold they'll get if they intend to fill out today, but there is hot coffee and those few moments of conversation that come as the anticipation reaches

Then the long gun cases go behind the seat in the pickup, the last of the gear is stowed in the pickup bed, and the whole crew piles into the cab, warm now because you fired up and left it running a few minutes.

You're early, you know, but there is still that promise of an ahead-of schedule sunrise glowing faintly pink in the east, threatening to chase away the stars that are still twinkling above the horizon.

There is that urgent feeling that you want to get to the field, get the decoys in place and have the pickup off somewhere out of sight before the sup. vaults into the sky.

You've done it all before, it's a familiar routine, and the time table is down pretty pat by now. The decoys will be out in plenty of time, but that doesn't keep you from thinking about it.

There will be the blocks and blinds, the cold, and the crimson of another dawn.

There will be the gabbling of ducks and the honking of wild geese and the wind whistling through their wings, and men shivering as they lie in waiting for the breaking of another day of wildfowling tradition.

And as you make the drive to the field, in those last moments of preparation before the whole thing is set in motion, it comes home to you that all of this really wouldn't be as much fun if you didn't have this time to get high on it all.

Oregon has a careful bobcat protection policy, which Durbin believes is well-founded since prices for bobcat fur top those paid for other animals.

Seattle fur dealers have been offering about $115 on an average for bobcat pelts," said Durbin. "And some individual pelts might bring as high as $400 to $500."

Durbin explained the high prices paid were because the bobcat was the only member of the spotted-cat species available in the nation. Under an international treaty, the importation of most spotted cats -

SUNRISE AND SUNSET AT AMARILLO, TEXAS New Rabies Regulations CENTRAL STANDARD TIME

By JIM STEIERT Outdoors Editor

A new regulation which goes into effect after the first of the year will have an important bearing on rural owners of dogs. cats and other domestic pets, according to County Judge Glenn Nelson.

The state legislature, through H.B. 1323, is establishing regultions designed to strengthen the authority of county, city and town officials in controlling rabies, a disease which has become a deadly menace in Texas in the past year.

Nelson pointed out that cases of rabies have virtually doubled in Texas in the past year, with skunks a major culprit in the spread of the disease.

According to Nelson, between 40 and 50 percent of all skunks become rabid and abandon their usual habit of discouraging aggression through spraying their well-known scent in favor of engaging in combat--a highly unusual form of behavior for the usually docile creatures.

"Rural pets will have to be vaccinated, and I'm not sure this has been made clear to folks." stated Nelson, indicating that particular concern rests with creating a "buffer zone" between creatures which carry the dreaded disease in the wild. ruralpets, and pets in urban

Nelson cited statistics from the Texas Animal Morbidity Report for the month of August which reflected an increase of slightly more than double the cases of rabies over the same time period in the previous year. According to the report, of the total number of cases through August of this year, 83.7 percent have been in wildlife. which is the "ever-present reservoir of this disease."

The report stated, "To protect the human population from this dread disease, it is necessary that all domestic pets (primarily dogs and cats) be vaccinated by a licensed veterinarian and be kept from running loose to form a "buffer cone" between the human and wild animal populations."

Pertinent parts of the new law governing rabies vaccinations which is set to go into effect are:

1. A person having knowledge of an animal bite or scratch or other attack on an individual that the person could reasonably foresee as capable of transmitting tabies, or of an animal that the person suspects is rabid. shall report the incident or animal to a local health authority of the county or the city or town in which the person lives. in which the animal is located, or in which the attack occurs. The report shall include the name and address of any victim and of the owner of the animal, if known.

2. The owner of an animal that is reported to be rabid or to have attacked an individual, or suspects to be rabid or to have attacked an individual, shall submit the anima for quarantine to the local health authority of the county or the city or town in which the owner resides.

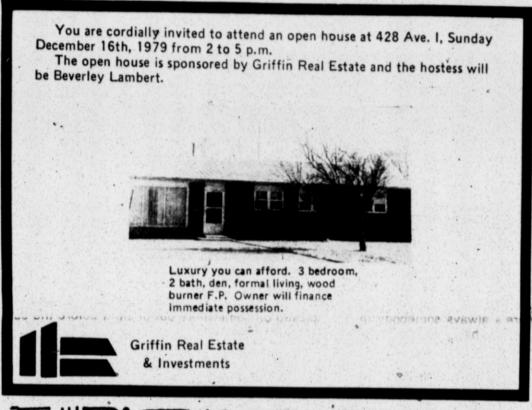

3. Except as otherwise provided by rule of the board, the owner of each dog or cat shall have the dog or cat vaccinated against rabies by the time the dog or cat is four months of age and at regular intervals thereafter as prescribed by rule of the board.

4. A veterinarian who vaccinates a dog or cat against rabies shall issue to the owner of the animal a vaccination certificate in a form approved by the board.

5. No county, city, or town may register or license an animal that has not been vaccinated in accordance with this section.

6. A person commits an offense if the person knowingly fails to vaccinate his dog or cat against rabies. This offense is a Class C misdemeanor with a fine not to exceed $200.

When storing gasoline, keep the container where only an adult can reach it, advises Claudia Kerbel, a consumer information specialist with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service, The Texas A&M University System.

The smell of gasoline often intrigues children, she cautions. Don't let their curiosity cause them or anyone else harm, Ms. Kerbel urges.

LOCAL: Now is the time to sign up for the Vital Signs class to be held January 8 and 10, 2 to 3 p.m. This class teaches how to take pulse, respiration and blood pressure.

The Board of Directors will meet for a regular luncheon here in the Red Cross office Wednesday, January 9.

NATIONAL: With the possibility of a shortage of home heating fuel and also of severe winter weather, the Red Cross is advising persons to make plans to prevent and protect yourself and your home from a serious emergency. Take time now to plan for the loss of electricity occurring because of a severe ice or snow storm. A few of the suggestions offered by the Red Cross are: keep on hand extra food that does not require refrigeration and several gallons of water, flashlights and extra batteries, extra medicine requied by family members, fire extinguisher and extra blankets or sleeping bags.

The Youth Services programs have been getting a lot of attention lately. One of the reasons is that children as well as adults need to experience the satisfaction that comes from giving and helping others.

When the Soviet Communists invaded the Baltic States in 1940, Singer and his family were held captive for one year. In 1941, the German Nazi armies drove the Soviet Communists from the Baltic States. The Singer lived under Nazi oppression for 31/2 years until liberation by the British army.

The Singers were in Camps for Displaced Persons in Germany and Rev. Singerorganized three Baptist Churches in Lativan camps, preaching the gospel to them during the ensuing 41/2 years.

In 1949, the Singer family came to the United States. He began to organize material help for refugees in Europe. Rev. Singer distributed the names and addresses of refugees to clothing and food packages for several years.

Rev. Singer organized the International Refugee Mission and the Italian Gospel Mission, which now endeavors to support and assist ministers working among 20 nationalities in 16 counties. This faith mission is supported mainly by friends of Southern Baptist churches.

Ann Landers Out in the Open

DEAR ANN LANDERS: This letter is a response to the homosexual who considers himself an emotional cripple. He said, "I speak for thousands," and I'm sure he does. He also said he doesn't want sympathy or pity--which is just fine, because he seems to be feeling plenty sorry for himself.

I'm a lesbian, and he was NOT speaking for me. I would like to tell him, and those thousands he may be speaking for, that the closet can be awfully stifling. They just might suffocate and die in there. I urge him and his closet brothers to come out into the fresh air and sunshine.

Nobody "cursed" the homosexual with an "affliction." Homosexuality is a preference. not an illness. I chose to be what I am, and I am not ashamed of it. I don't flaunt the fact that I am a woman whose sexual preferene is another woman. but neither do I try to hide it.

At first, "coming out" frightened me. I knew I would be rejected by ignorant people, and I was. But my mental health was at stake. My own sister turned her back on me, but she finally realized I was the same person she loved before she knew I was a lesbian, and now we are friends.

I don't want to be straight. I'm a normal, healthy woman who happens to prefer my own himself, he will no longer be an emotional cripple. Perhaps he's cramped little closet he's been hiding in all these years. Please tell him so .-- Out In The Open And Happy About It

DEAR OUT: I am printing your letter because you represent a point of view tht deserves to be heard. A great many people, however, do not believe homosexuality is "normal and healthy", and I am among them.

Obviously, you have found the courage to come out of the closet and are happier because surely you are aware that not all homosexuals or lesbians choose to be so open, nor are they as pleased with their sexual preference as you. I have received thousands of letters from male homosexuals (fewer from lesbians) who are desperately unhappy and would give anything to be straight.

At Wits End

BY ERMA BOMBECK

Someone asked me what my kids were getting for Christmas this year and I said, "I really don't know. Either a chest cold; stomach flu or walking diarrhea."

I don't worry about them. They always come up with something--even if it's at the last minute.

When they were small we always used to hear stories of Christmas..about how people went to parties or watched the big tree at the courthouse being lit up. Once when I was at the drugstore having prescriptions filled, I even saw a group of people singing. I didn't know what it was all about so I asked the druggist. He said, "They're called carolers and they go out and sing in front of homes and sometimes they're invited in for punch and cookies."

"But how do they get their medication?" I asked. "They're not sick and they don't need medication," he

"I heard that Betty, the childless secretary in the next block, and her husband come down on Christmas morning in their robes and slippers and open their gifts before 'Big deal," said Helen. "We do that."

"But wait!" I said. "AFTER THAT THEY GET DRESSED. "Maybe their drugstore doesn't deliver on Christmas day." said Charmaine

"No, I think they go to church and then go to someone's home for a big turkey dinner with stuffing, cranberries, sweet. potatoes and pecan pie.

No one said anything for a minute. Then Helen said. "I've got to go home and pull together some clear broth, Jello and Seven-Up.' 'And I've got nose drops at 2:00, antibiotics at 3:00 and Kaopectate at 3:30," said Charmaine.

There are a lot of theories as to why children get sick at Christmas. Some say it's the excitement--others contend it's the exhaustion that makes you vulnerable. My own theory is that we're probably allergic to all that ho-ho-hoing and will break out with something every time we hear happiness.

Besides, If childless Betty ever got a rectal thermometer as a stockin stuffer, she wouldn't know what to do with it.

X-Mas Pageant To be Presented

The eight annual Christmas pageant presented by the Nazareth Holy Family Parish will be presented Dec. 21 and 23 at 8 p.m. in the Holy Family Catholic Church. The public is invited free of charge.

The pageant will consist of 13 scenes depicting the story of the Christ child. A cast of 40 actors, 10 acolytes, seven readers and a 35-voice choir will take the audience through the play.

The majority of the parishoners of Holy Family take part in the pageant.

Mary is portrayed by Cyrilla Brockman, Joseph by Stanley Maurer, Elizabeth by Lillian Venhaus, and Gabriel by Albert Hartman. The Child Jesus is portrayed by Shawn Wilhelm.

The three kings are portrayed by Carroll Gerber, Raymond Huseman and Kelvin Kleman. Dozens of others appear as shepherds and village people.

The pageant choir, under direction of Noreen Carson, will provide musical interludes between the scenes. Among the musical numbers to be rendered are Weigard's "Ave Maria," "Jesu. Joy of Man's Desiring' by J.S. Bach, "Praise to the Father" by Gounod's, "Soldier Search" written by the late Donna Birkenfeld and "Chosen by God" written by Noreen Carson.

Organist for the production are Alma Conrad and Sharon Brockman. They will be accompanied by Winifred Wagner on the piano.

Jimmy Schulte, stage director will be assisted by Florene Brockman. Father Stanley is the advisor and Ethel Schmucker is in charge of costumes.

Other members of the stage crew are Jim Hoelting, lighting; Irene Wilhelm, makeup; Dorothy Kleman and Mary Ehly, stage managers. Danny Schilling is prop manager.

Persons wishing to attend from out-of-town can make reservations by calling 945-2229, 945-2574, 945-2261 or

Musical Notes

By Dorothy Warner

On the evening of Tuesday, December 11, the residents of King's Manor and their guests were the happy recipients of an early Christmas gift from the Chamber Singers; led by Bill Devers, their director, this group of fine musicians presented John W. Peterson's Christmas cantata "Love Transcending," with Rev. Mack McCarter, minister of First Christian church, as narrator. The cantata, published in 1957, is based on the Bible verse, "For God so loved the world that He gave His only begotten Son that whosoever believeth in Him shall not perish but have everlasting life" (John 3:16). It recounts in music and Biblical text the old but ever-new story of the first Christmas.

The work, structurally simple, is effective through the use of such devices as unison singing. ever-changing color due to 'power-shifting' of voice groups, repetition (the main theme, bearing the title-"Love Transcending'') opens the score and is repeated. Another device employed in the use of a "supportive" accompaniment, in the main, rather than one offering the singers the challenge of a more intricate and independent accompani-

The last-to-be mentioned and most outstanding device used is the interpolation of fine old 'chestnuts': well-established favorites such as Adolphe Adam's "O Holy Night" ("Cantigue de Noel)", "The Birthday of The King" (W. He Neidlinger) and the appealing "Have You Any More Room for Jesus" (C.C. Williams) and 'That Beautiful Name' (Jean Perry and Mable Johnston Camp. "Thou Didst Leave Thy Throne" (Emily E.S. Elliot and Timothy R. Matthews) and the beloved "Away in a Manger" (Luther), Gruber's "Silent Night" and "We Three Kings" (John H. Hopkins).$

John H. Hopkins). Both soloists - Gene Streun, tenor, and Ray Owens, baritone - made fine contributions by their respective solos "In the beginning was the word" and "Fear not: for, behold, I bring you good tidings of great joy.'

Despite the limitations of this work (its scarcity of harmonic depth and shallow tonal strength, both diffusing its spiritual fervor), the Singers' performance was marked by fidelity to tonal clarity, fine rhythmic accuracy and careful, chords. graceful phrasing. Dynamic control, range and restraint, certain plus intelligent, inspiring interpretation added up to a fine performance.

It is neither an easy nor an effortless task to perform creditably, indivdually or collectively, at the close of a busy, demanding day, but this was done - as always. Once again you have afforded your attentive listeners much pleasure. We, thank you - one and all - for your beautiful Christmas present.

'Tis the season to be jolly,' so, by way of adding a light-hearted note to my bit on this note-worthy and "note-torious" choral group, our respected and revered Chamber Singers, 1 lovingly quote, in their honor, the following verse from Laurence McKinney's book,

Christmas Services to Begin

First United Methodist services for the Christmas season will feature music by all the church choirs and a live nativity scene to be staged by the youth of the congregation. Climax of the yule observances will be a Christmas Eve communion

This morning, the sermon subject for worship services will be "The Magnificat" by the Rev. William McReynolds. pastor.

The Ladies' Handbell Choir and sanctuary choir will join in performing "Carol of the Bells" during the worship hour. The handbell choir will also present "The First Noel, " "Hark, the Herald Angels Sing" and, as the offertory, Bach's "Gavotte." The choir will sing "Did Mary Know?" "Carol of the Drums" and the anthem, "Jesus Came Seeking a Resting Place." All music is directed by Doug Henry, the church's minister of music.

The annual service of carols and candles will be held this evening, beginning at 6 p.m., with all the children's choir, the Welcome Back Singers from the youth department, the handbell choir and sanctuary choir participating.

It will be followed by the first presentation of the Live Nativity scenes on the church lawn at 7 and 7:15 p.m. Afterward there will be an informal social period in the church fellowship hall for the entire congregation. The Homebuilders Class will act as hostesses. The Nativity Scene will also be staged Monday

Special music will again be a part of the morning worship sevice Dec. 23. There will be no evening service that day, but on Christmas Eve. a special communion service will be held from 6:30 to 8 p.m.

The public is invited to join this congregation in worship of the Christmas season, Rev. McReynolds said.

Increases in Pork Output Mean Plentiful Supply

plentiful supply for holiday cooking, notes Agriculture Commissioner Reagan V.

Production, up an overall 20 percent over 1978 for the year, received a big monthly boost of some 61 percent in October alone:

According to Agriculture Commissioner Reagan V. Brown, October hog slaughter in Texas totaled 145,800 head, which brought the total hog slaughter for this year to 1,064,500 head. Thistranslates into over 37 million pounds of pork for October (live weight) and almost 278 million pounds for the year. "The increase in pork production follows a national trend, and is partially in response to declines in production of other types of red-meat, particularly beef," said Brown. "A shortage of cattle and calves has cut Texas beef production substantially.

Shortened Hem Lengths Fairly Simple to Alter

COLLEGE STATION - with shoes on. Hemlines inch--or centimeter-upward making many wearable skirts and dresses from the past few years now seem too long, says a clothing specialist.

This hemline dilemma however is less crucial than when fashionable hemlines dropped a few years ago without hem allowances to adequately lengthen, points out Becky Saunders.

Ms. Saunders is with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service, The Texas A&M University System.

Luckily this time, the fashior trend is to the advantage of the homesewer, because it is easier to shorten than to lengthen.

Currently, the majority of fashionable skirt lengths are approximately one to two inches (2.5-5 cm) below the knee--a generally becoming length.

New lengths trend upward closer to the knee with above-the-knee lengths for variety in some active sportswear and teen garments.

To shorten a hemline, begin by determining the new length

If the new length is considerably shorter, save time by cutting off the lower edge including existing hemming stitches and hem allowance before heming.

Also, some decorative or intricate hems or permanently pleated skirts are more easily shortened at the waistline.

As a guide to re-hemming in general, use the original hemming technique--or any appropriate method. Use a hem finish if the fabric ravels.

The hem should be uniform in width, flat and smooth--and inconspicuous unless decorative. Avoid overpressing which can result in a homemade-looking shine or line.

Also, avoid pulling hand stitches too tightly, she advises.

Consider using fast and easy hemming appropriate to the fabric and garment design. Fusible and machine-stitched hems are examples.

is a fellow of the Institute for Advanced Study of Rational Psychotherapy. She played the role of a psychiatrist in the film, "An Unmarried Woman."

She says many women are terrified of stepping into the working world because they have been programmed to be 'helpless.

Many women believe that the true rewards of life come in service to others, Dr. Russianoff said," and that if they become self-sufficient and competitive in the work world, they lose their option to be taken care of.

"But," she said, "it is my observation that a woman who is sold on her own excitement about something she's interested in becomes a lot more interesting to men and women and can create for herself a world in which she is her own best friend.'

Dr. Russianoff says it's important for women to find out if that field.

Secondly, she notes, if a woman is involved in a job, it's important that she keep moving strategically into work that interests her and that is not of a service nature.

I think looking for exciting work and demanding exciting work is the essence in terms of not being worn down into depression by the stress of frustration," Dr. Russianoff said.

Dr. Russianoff was among a group of panelists at a workshop on "Stress and the Working Woman" at the Ford Foundation recently, co-sponsored by the Business and Professional Women's Foundation and the Clairol Corporation.

Dr. Russianoff told the audience, "I have a feeling there's a whole new world in front of us and women begin to sense that they belong to a very special kind of gender with some qualities that if they were to amplify and look at, I the beginning, there was the word. And with the word came the storyteller who loved its wisdom and fun and strange shapes. So the storyteller gathered the word and shared it with the people, who listened, enrapt.

There are still a few storytellers. Diane Wolkstein, for instance, in her 30s, slight and fair, drama major graduate from Smith College; teacher, traveler, mother of Rachel, 7

For 12 years, she has been telling stories in print (the paperback edition of "The Magic Orange Tree," her col-lection of Haitian tales, will be published in the spring by Schoken), in Central Park during the summer, and on the radio. Stories from all over. Sometimes, even, from inside.

"If you go inside - deep. deep — everything is very dark and still and quiet," she says, curled in a blanket in her cozy but chilly workroom in her Greenwich Village brownstone. "And after a while, something will come into life: tiny mice, flowers, oceans, an entire universe. Still, "what is created is a word, and the stronger it is, the more you feel it, the more you know you've come into a good story.

But a good story is not sim-ply spellbinding and entertaining. For her it must 'encompass the mystery and contradictions of life. And it's very comforting for stories to be resolved so that you're left with more, rather than less.

The Chinese tale, "White Wave", by Diane Wolkstein (Thomas Y. Crowell) does all of that. It tells of White Wave. the moon goddess, who befriends a lonely young farmer, then abandons him when he does what he mustn't. And still, she only abandons him physically.

When he tries to touch White Wave, which is forbidden, he's trying to freeze life. All of us want to do that, all the time: We put the ring on our husband's finger so he'll be faithful; we'd like to guarantee that our children will always love us and that everything will always be all right: to touch and to hold and I guess what we learn when we

For the child. "Hansel and Gretel" is fitting because "the children survive and the witch dies. We all know that all mothers want to eat up their children," she says, laughing. "It's a dark aspect of being a mother, like the wicked stepmother. The child senses that but in this story, the child defends himself and survives.

"The Red Lion" by Diane Wolkstein (T.Y. Crowell), a Persian tale of a young prince who keeps running from the lion he must fight only to keep running into it, "is for adults as much as any child. It says that unless you face things as they come up through life, you'll only have to face them again. That's the book I got most letters about, from adults mostly, who said they got great comfort from it. she says.

And comfort is another byproduct of a good story. "So often stories are about trying to understand relationships between people. I love telling stories to families because when they hear stories about people having troubles and then triumphing and coming to some kind of union, everyone is reinforced and strengthened. In addition to the enrichment the family gets from sharing the adventure of another world, the stories are a way to say things you don't have words for. "And," she adds, "what we all want is to be close to our children and, when a family hears a story for an hour. they're all together 'deep inside', and that's where you want to be with the people you care about.

There, inside, with the good teller who also "reaches inside like a great planist or singer to give something extra to the story so people will be moved." To adapt to their faces, "their breathing, the

And to be consoled that when the story is over, and everything seems to vanish, it doesn't. Then, as "White Wave" concludes, what remains is the story.

(Editor's note: How do the attitudes toward Santa Claus of modern children differ from those of their turn-of-the-century counterparts? Researchers detail their sometimes surprising findings on that subject in this excerpt from the Cecember issue of Psychology Today.)

During a child-study seminar in 1896, a University of Nebraska graduate student hit upon a highly imaginative dea for a research paper.

What better way to study children's developing minds, reasoned Frances E. Duncombe, than to examine the things that intrigued them most. So she set out to study beliefs about Santa Claus among schoolchildren in Lincoln, Neb.

Ms. Duncombe's survey of 1,500 pupils ranging in age from 7 to 13 was more than a charming notion. It provided a comprehensive collection of children's beliefs about Santa

In 1977, we attempted to replicate her research, using her questions, her scoring criteria and a comparable sample of about 900 public-school pupils in Lincoln.

In both studies, there was little variation in the details of the Santa Claus tale as revealed in the children's answers. Although the story takes different forms in other countries, there was a consensus on content among ethnic and economic groups even

The major difference between the two generations was in the qualities they attributed to Santa Claus, Children in 1896 were much more likely to ascribe superhuman powers to Santa than were their counterparts in 1977.

This difference held true for all grades and both sexes. although girls in both surveys were more likely than boys to give Santa miraculous mythic figure. Further, children now see Santa so often as a mere human - on street corners, in department stores, in parades and in schools - that they may have trouble imagining him with supernatural

The question of how and when they learned the truth about Santa Claus may have proved troublesome to some respondents in both surveys.

Ms. Duncombe reported that older children, especially those in the seventh and eighth grades, had difficulty in recalling just how they found out Santa Claus was not

"The discovery was not often a surprise but was a growth, the nature of the story dawning upon them as they developed," she wrote.

In both surveys, close to half the children said they came to the realization on their own through experience or observation.

But while the rest of the children of 1896 generally received the news equally from other children or from parents, today's children were twice as likely to hear it from their parents.

Any conclusion about why this difference exists must be speculative. It may simply be that modern parents have been so impressed by the need to be honest with their children that they decide to tell all at the first glimmering of

Independent Living Style Goal for Disabled Americans

By DEBORAH MESCE Associated Press Writer HARTFORD, Conn. (AP) -Louise Lundblad, backed by optimism and "sheer luck," has found her way out of the "Catch-22" situation that imprisons many handicapped people. Now she is trying to help others make the break.

For more than a year now, Ms. Lundblad, 30, who has been swimming accident left her paralyzed 15 years ago, has been living on her own. She maintains her own apartment and gets herself to and from "The one thing that I've learned about independent living is that it's really great," she said in a recent telephone interview. "It makes you feel very good about yourself."

Ms. Lundblad, who earned her bachelor's degree from Sacred Heart University where she majored in English, moved to Farmington in the summer of 1978 on a leave from Xerox Corp. in Stamford. She worked as production editor for the company's division on learning systems and lived with her parents in nearby Ridgefield.

For nearly a year she lobbied the General Assembly for a bill that is making it easier for about 10,000 severely disabled persons to live on their own by providing payment of up to 100 percent for personal care assistance. The bill was signed into law in July.

Previously, the state paid for attendant care only for those d people living in a nursing home and who weren't That meant that a disabled person who managed to get past the initial obstacles — finding a job, an accessible apartment and transportation - spent nearly all earnings paying for non-medical personal care and assistance for things like dressing, bathing and house cleaning.

"It's expensive but not as expensive as keeping someone in an institution," she said, adding it allows the handicapped an al-ternative to nursing homes and other facilities.

Ms. Lundblad said she had run into problems, although not unexpectedly, trying to set up an adequate living situation but finally "landed with my feet on the ground."

She found an accessible apartment and a University of Hartford student who provides her with attendant care in exchange for room and board. Several years earlier Ms. Lundblad, who has no use of her legs and limited use of her arms, had bought a van equipped with a hydraulic lift and hand controls.

Since passage of the bill, she has turned her attention to a project she hopes will enable other handicapped people "to do what I'm doing."

Ms. Lundblad, through the Connecticut Coordinating Committee for the Handicapped, is spearheading a project that would make available to handicapped people seven Hartford apartments - six of them for the 'handicapped themselves and the seventh for attendant care. That would allow the handicapped residents to pool their personal-care costs.

One of the main stumbling blocks so far has been finding a cluster of apartments that are accessible to the handicapped, a problem not just in Hartford.

doubt in the child

The children we surveyed were, on the average, about six months older than the 1896 group when they first learned the truth about Santa.

That is a substantial difference and seems to contradict the assumption that modern children are more sophisticated about these matters than were children of other genera-

One possible explanation is that in some ways children toward the end of the 19th century were actually more in touch with the adult world than are children today. They were part of what D. Keith Osborn and Janie D. Osborn called the last generation of "adult children ... subjected to long hours of work and all the adult expectations for a mature worker

There was a consistent sex difference in the results of both surveys, with boys learning the truth about 31/2 months earlier than girls, on the average.

We suspect the difference is a matter of socialization Boys may be more reluctant to admit that they did not learn about Santa until they were older and thus may underestimate their discovery age. Or perhaps girls are encouraged to engage in fantasy longer than boys are.

When they learned the truth about Santa, modern children recalled feeling "sorry" or "cheated" more often than their counterparts in the origi-

Yet the children of 1977 were more likely to think the next generation should be encouraged to believe in Santa - and for reasons that differed greatly from those given by the 1896 group.

For example, only 4 percent of the 1977 group thought that such a belief should be passed on to make children behave better compared with 17 percent of the 1896 group. Both groups found the most acceptable reason for passing

on the myth to be that it makes children happy Among those who thought children shouldn't be taught to believe in Santa Claus, 1977 respondents were less concerned that such teaching was a lie than they were worried that children would be disappointed when they learned the administrator Jim Bullard. Designer Smitten By Jazz

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Wouldn't you know a fashion designer would be in the audience the night Tommy Yetta wore his blue and yellow shoes. As it turned out, though, it was just as well.

Actually, the shoes were the second observation the designer made about Yetta. The first was the way her own shoes took to tapping when Yetta blew his

When Tommy Yetta blows his horn, feet move. They can't

"The more the people respond, the better I play; the better I play, the more the people respond," he said. "It's a magic circle."

Yetta's horn is a trumpet. He blows it, Dixieland style, on Bourbon Street.

One Dixieland trumpet on Bourbon Street, where that wonderfully raucous American folk art began, where, for block after guady block, from Canal to Esplanade, the jazz blaring from one joint assaults the jazz blaring from the next, one trumpet would ordinarily be as distinguishable as one shrimp in a hot dish of Cajun gumbo.

Not so to Signora Guilliana di

On a visit to New Orleans to promote her fashions (which go by the design name "Roberta"), the signora got her first taste of Dixieland jazz. She was smitten.

She decided to take back with her to Venice, Italy, an authentic Dixieland band to play at a fashion show. If a Dixieland band won't attract attention, neither will a five-alarm fire.

She had just one instruction for her New Orleans agent: "Hire the man with the blue and yellow shoes."

"What a kick," Tommy Yetta recalled. "We had a parade of candlelit boats out to her private island where the show was to be held. She and I and the band were in the lead boat.

"I've played in a lot of strange places, but I would never have believed that one day I would be floating with my band down a Venetian canal band down a Venetian canal belting out 'Muskrat Ramble.'' That was three years ago. The experience didn't hurt Yetta's celebrity on Bourbon Street, but it is not past glory that draws celebrity on Bourbon Street, but it is not past glory that draws the crowds.

What packs 'em in is a mar-

What packs 'em in is a marvelously inventive trumpet and an equally spontaneous rapport with the people who come to hear it.

"This music was written — or rather unwritten — for the people," he said. "It ought to be played for the people, with them participating. If they feel like hollering or dancing they ought to holler and dance. Some musicians ignore the people and play for themselves, stand up there like a bunch of machines. Not I."

At Crazy Shirley's, the club where Yetta plays, he has been known, on impulse, to lead his band and a snake line of whooping customers out one door, into the street, back in another door.

"It ain't music if it ain't fun,"
he said.

In all respects other than his music, Yetta is a conservative sort. He is 50, a family man. He disdains the flashy trappings of many Dixieland bands, the striped shirts and straw hats and such.

That is why it seemed odd he owed one of the big moments in his career to a pair of blue and yellow shoes.

"They really weren't blue and yellow," he said. "Not at first. They were black and tan, very low key. They got dirty and I tried to clean them with gasoline. It wasn't a good idea.

"They turned out looking, well, sort of blue and yellow. Only a fashion designer would notice."

AAM Officials Cite Accomplishments Following Group's Colorful, Controversial First 2 Years

That effort got off to a faltering start, highlighted by a number of demonstrations and confrontations on the local scene, but by the time spring rolled around it was planting as usual on most farms across the nation.

A couple of years and two trips to Washington have passed since that beginning and the AAM has gained notoriety and marked some accomplishments on a few fronts since the days of the "farm strike" that fizzled.

But no small degree of controversy marks the trails blazed by the AAM over the past two seasons .-- Confrontations with officials, business blockades, a clash with club-wielding police on at least one occasion, -- all have been a part of the scene as supporters of the movement have gained experience in outings that have ranged from a bridge at the Texas-Mexico border to the halls of Congress in Washington, D.C.

And those activities have earned the AAM its critics, as well as its supporters.

With the exception of a fracas on the mall at the nation's capitol last winter that most observers agree was greatly overplayed, however, the AAM has toned down its activities and local spokesmen point out on the second anniversary of the "farm strike" that there is a new focus

Gerald McCathern of Hereford, now a candidate for the state's 31st senatorial district seat currently held by Bob Price of Pampa and one of the major figures in the AAM over the past two years commented on the organization as he looked back over the past two years.

"The AAM has done some good in several areas. As far as an immediate accomplishment that has prospects as a financial success, I'd say we were quick to see the need for alternate energy production. We were already working to get the law changed so farmers could legally begin to manufacture alcohol during our first trip to Washington," stated McCath-

"I'd think the political awareness the organization helped to create would have to rank as very important. There's a great deal more awareness among those who have taken part in this thing than there is among those who haven't," he claimed.

"Probably the most important thing is that the AAM brought the problems of agriculture into the midst of the nation and got it into the minds of the populace. We did it the only way that it could be accomplished quickly, and that involved some demonstrations," McCathern continued.

"You can't put a finger on it and say AAM is definitely responsible for it, but we feel we're looking at higher commodity prices since we did what we did. Higher target and loan prices and a general improvement in the market should amount to several billion dollars for agriculture nationwide over the past two years," he stated.

Commenting on mistakes made by the movement. McCathern replied, "I'm sure there are some things we probably should have done differently, but I can't say we would have been any more successful in bringing the nation's attention to the problem. I've talked to people who say now they can see what we were trying to get across and I think there's more awareness now of what AAM tried to do. I had congressmen from New York and New Jersey tell me that we in the AAM would never know how much good we did as would be seeing good results for years to come because of our efforts." Although interest in the organization has seemingly faltered in recent months. McCathern maintains that the movement is "very much alive" and expects more accomplishments from it.

"The best success has always been with the long-term type groups, and the AAM will always be around as more-orless a conscience for the other farm organizations. A group of AAM people are planning an alcohol-fueled caravan to Washington, D.C. for February as part of an effort to keep the agriculture issue before the legislature until a new farm bill is written," he related. Mike McCathern, who has headed up the AAM's state headquarters since it was established here also commented on the movement.

He indicated that the AAM's close attention to the agriculture fuels industry is no real philosophy of the past.

"Focusing on the gasohol issue doeesn't mean a change in philosophy. We're just seeking parity through fuel now. If the crops will bring more through fuel, we want to market them for fuel." stated the younger McCathern.

Scenes From AAM's Past

The American Agriculture Movement marked its second anniversary Friday, and events in the organization's first two years have varied widely. Tractorcades quickly became the trademark of the movement from its early days, but members also spent time in the halls of Congress for hearings and other activites. Maligned ag secretary Bob

Bergland has been the frequent target for criticism by the AAM, while Capitol Hill, despite its brilliance at night during AAM's first major drive on Washington in 1977, had a part in jarring the initial stars from the eyes of movement supporters. [Brand photos by Jim Stelert]

Meet the Scarab!

Nature's own Scarab is sometimes known as a tumblebug. Its chief function in life is to roll manure. Our mechanical Scarab does the same sort of job on a grand scale. It rolls, tumbles, pulverizes, mixes—all in one pass over a windrow of feedlot manure. Industry didn't build this Scarab, now taking a pass over brick-hard, chunk feedlot waste. This machine took form in a ranch workshop, and ran up production scores at a time when the world still believed it impossible to manipulate manure economically. Using The Compost Starter and the workhorse capacity of the Scarab, we make compost in short order.

Alternate Fuels Will Come Slowly, Painfully, Producers Told at Agriculture Energy Seminar

By JIM STEIERT Brand Farm Editor

America is faced by a liquid fuels problem of growing severity, and even given modern technology, any solutions will not come without pain. nor with great speed.

That was the message delivered to a gathering of area agriculture officials and others during the "Energy for Agriculture Seminar" held Tuesday at the Research and Extension Center here.

The seminar was sponsored by the Texas Agricultural Extension Service and the Texas A&M University System.

Dr. Otto Doering of Purdue University was one of the featured speakers during the morning session of the seminar. and the Purdue professor took a hard look at some of the alternate sources of energy the nation had thus far been pinning its hopes on.

There's no energy crisis as such .-- We have coal, and lots of it. We do have a severe liquid fuel problem, however, and the coal is not in a form which will help us alieviate this situation," commented Doering.

Utilizing charts, the professor picked apart charges from world neighbors that the U.S. is a massive energy waster in all respects. 'Homes and small businesses in the U.S. use only a bit more energy than any of the other developed nations of the world, and we're also not using much more than anyone else on a per-person basis in industrial consumption. Where we really break the bank is in transportation, where liquid fuels are the major concern," stated Doering.

He pointed out that liquid fuels are particularly crucial to agriculture in terms of time.

"No one, not even the top brass in Washington can predict exactly how much fuel will be used by the agriculture sector at any one point in the year.

because the elements have such a bearing on needs. Even if we had all the fuel we needed right now, though, it probably wouldn't be in the right place at the right time." he stated.

The professor cited recent history which has triggered a massive spiral in the price of has proven indicative of a decline in oil stocks.

"A year ago, before Iran fell. there was a little excess production of oil in the world. and the excess went through brokerage in Rotterdam at $8 a barrel. When Iranian production stopped, the spot price at Rotterdam went to $40 per barrel, meaning oil was getting scarce," stated Doering.

"This is the first time in history that we've seen a free market price above that of a monopoly, and we can expect OPEC to hike their oil prices as high as $30 a barrel at their upcoming meeting," he con-

The professor pointed out there are three major factors which still have a bearing on energy policies in this nation. and recent world events may change the order of importance of these considerations.

Among the-factors, according to Doering, are resource utilization, -- seeking the best possible use of the liquid fuels that are available and selling the resource to the buyer willing to, another faction claims there's a pay the most for the product because he obtains the most from it; the equity argument-a consideration for fair treatment of the elderly, retired, and those on fixed incomes in relation to the spiraling cost of energy; and the national defense consideration-an argument that the U.S. cannot afford to remain so vulnerable to foreign interests where energy is concerned.

Under the defense consideration, basic decisions are being made right now on who will get the energy, how much of it, and how much they'll pay for it," stated Doering

Doering then turned to alternate energy, such as coal, shale oil and alcohol.

"Obtaining fuel from coal and shale involves a technology we don't know much about. It will have to be darned expensive to obtain fuel from such processes, and if we plunked down $1.5 spot oil on the world market and billion right now for production of fuel from shale, we wouldn't have any shale oil for at least three years." claimed the

> Doering indicated that political considerations also enter into the alternate fuels picture, claiming that no president would be willing to commit massive funding to a project to secure shale oil when results may not be obtained until a successor comes into office to take credit for the accomplish-

"It takes a severe problem to get politicians to change their time frame. Coal and shale are long-term things, so we probably won't be realizing any additional fuel from them any time soon," stated Doering. The Purdue professor indicated that alcohol production offers the most immediate manner of getting into alternate fuel, but that enterprise has its disadvantages right along with the advantages.

'One group is really pushing alcohol right now, claiming it has miraculous powers, while bad energy balance and that it won't work. I'd say we shouldn't. get caught up by either the boosters or detractors, but should try to stay somewhere in the middle." commented Doer-

'Alcohol fits in with our present liquid fuels system and at least we do know its bring about improvement." problems, so we could probably stated Doering. adapt to its production much more quickly. But we can't just make alcohol from grain. If you converted 60 percent of the corn crop to alcohol, you might just make your 10 percent for the national gasoline blend. We must use cellulose, old paper, everything at hand to ever have any effect with alcohol. Don't get locked in on only alcohol, either. We need contributions from the alcohol industry, as well as coal and shale to ever help with our energy problem." he maintained.

Asked to speculate on the outlook for natural gas, a critical agricultural fuel for the High Plains area. Doering indicated he felt the major jump in natural gas prices has already been seen on the High Plains.

"The Natural Gas Association is saying $5.50 for a million BTU's of natural gas by 1985. but I think it will be a bit lower here." he stated.

price of oil.

'There's no way politically happen. Gas should remain about 60 percent of the BTU gas wells to diesel fuel. You're making a big mistake if you do," claimed Doering.

$1.30-$1.40 per gallon gas by mid-summer with a spiral to $1.50 per gallon shortly thereafter, but pointed out that only a virtual doubling of the present price with future prices allowed to stay ahead of inflation would bring about any immediate reduction in usage by American motorists.

"Technology can't really bail us out of the liquid fuel situation. It is costly. Technology doesn't come ahead of the pain. It takes the pain to prompt the investment in technology to

Predicting Energy Outlook

Dr. Otto Doering of Purdue University and Dr. William E. Black of Texas Agricultural Extension Service discuss the potential for producing liquid fuels from biomass during the Energy for Agriculture Seminar held at the Research and Extension Center in Amarillo. The duo reported there are some 400 million tons of crop residue in the U.S. each year, but only 70-80 million tons that consume 40 percent of the leader in marketing and agriculture fuel used in this state." Baen told his audience.

Dr. Baen indicated that "a bad atmosphere" exists in the country relating to energy, and that the problem must be corrected.

"Inflation two of the major problems facing our energy industry today, and the interpretation of the law is anti-business and anti-industry," he claimed.

Baen blasted environmental policies, indicating, "Up to 49 percent of the cost of coal is due to the Clean Air Act which applies to low-sulphur western coal just as it does to the high sulphur coals of the east. It just doesn't make sense to protect the eastern coals like that, yet it is the law, and it's blocking the use of our low-sulphur western coal." he claimed.

Dean Shelor, a representative from the 115th District in Minneola, Kansas offered commentary on gasohol, stating, "We're leading a Jot of nations down the road with a cheap food policy and we may one day do the same thing to the world with food that OPEC has done to us with oil."

Shelor, an active proponent of alcohol fuels derived from agriculture products was critical of the USDA and the Department of Energy in his

"I see a lot of foot dragging in the USDA and the DOE. The DOE spends billions and is vet to produce a single gallon of energy," claimed the Kansas legislator.

Dr. William E. Black, project

an economist with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service at Texas A&M led off the afternoon portion of the seminar addressing the topic of marketing biomass crops.

He explained that crop residues and other materials vary in their BTU production potential.

According to Dr. Black, the best method for farmers to move crop residues to facilities for converting them to fuel would be through a cooperative.

He cited benefits including ability to control flow of the product to the plant, ownership of the conversion plant, time and quality pools, use of alcohol produced at the plant by members, retained ownership, and control of marketing.

Dr. Black pointed out that a joint venture of producers and a national marketer might also be a feasible alternative.

Consulting with Dr. Doering on the topic, Black indicated that some 400 million tons of crop residue is on hand in the U.S. each year.

"Only 70-80 million tons of that amount can be taken from the fields nation-wide due to conservation considerations, cost and other factors. There would be wide variations in assembly and transportation costs to move fodder." he

Dr. Black added that a price of $27 per ton for crop residue would include no return to the farmer for the residue, so the expense of gathering and transporting crop residue and giving the farmer a return

Cooperative Integration Key to Saving Family Farms

COLLEGE STATION - A follows, says an economist with major challenge to cooperatives in the 1980s is to develop an integrated cooperative grain and livestock marketing system that assures family farm survival in the decade that

Texas A&M University.

Dr. Ronald D. Knutson, Texas Agricultural Extension Service economist, contends "the question is not so much where we are going--but with whom we are going.

"More specifically, are we going with proprietary grain companies and meat packers or are we going with cooperatives? Every farmer, every local elevator manager, and every cooperative involvement in the regional cooperative manager grain and livestock industry. has to make that decision." Knutson says.

Four major trends in agriculture, the economist says, will influence the future of

These include: (1) increased producer and U.S. dependence on grain exports, (2) fewer and larger grain traders, (3) a tighter world grain supplydemand balance, and (4) an integrated livestock industry. "Combine these trends, and you have all the ingredients for sharply increased grain contracting. Such contracting could easily come before grain producers make their production decisions and will almost certainly come before harvest," Knutson predicts.

He sees a direct relationship between developments in the livestock industry and grain marketing.

Beef feeding and hog production are moving rapidly in the same large scale, integrated direction as broilers, turkeys and eggs. Presently, Cargill is the largest U.S. cattle feeder while Continental is the ninth largest. These trends have profound significance for livestock and grain producers as well as cooperatives involved in either grain, feed or livestock industries."

Knutson says this significance is the result of grain companies being involved in beef, hog or poultry production, which have a captive market for

"Captive markets provide a steady flow of grain and livestock to use the capacity of feedlots and packing plants that are part of the system. They exclude Farmland and Far-Mar-Co from feed and grain outlets except through the grain companies that own them. If

family farmers and their cooperatives are going to compete, development of family farm cooperative integrated sytems that can compete are imperitive," Knutson says.

Otherwise, cooperatives and their family farm members are going to be out of the feed and livestock business, he warns.

In grain marketing, Knutson also contends that cooperatives have not designed a system that allows them to compete in the export market.

He points out that local cooperatives handle 40 percent of the grain but have only 9 percent of the export market.

"The bottom line is that we are not using the capability of the cooperative system. A major reason is that family farmers and their cooperatives insist on operating in a buy-sell system. That is, farmers and local elevator managers insist that they, and they alone, are in the best position to know when to sell their grain."

This lack of commitment and use of cooperative potential, Knutson states, exists in both livestock and grain.

Knutson recommends the following specific steps for improving cooperatives' competitive position in 1980 and beyond:

1. Expand grain producers' marketing alternatives by offering participation in a producer pricing pool, in which producers would commit grain to the cooperative, deliver the grain at harvest, receive an advance about equal to the loan rate, and price the grain at a later date. 2. Increase the level of cooperative expertise in market-

3. Take leadership in development of an international cooperative grain marketing system. Such a multinational cooperative would be owned by cooperatives located in market economies throughout the

4. Integrate the cooperative livestock and grain marketing system. "Without this action. the whole family farm system is in jeopardy," Knutson con-

Three new ones are added for the 1980 Show: one lamb per exhibitor; two turkeys per exhibitor (one hen and one tom; or, two hens); and one barrow per exhibitor, with only one exhibitor permitted per immediate family.

"Even with these new limitations, entries are still expected to top 23,000 for the two-week show," Jobes said. "The Houston show will still be the largest livestock show in the world.

As a result of the Houston Livestock Show being recognized around the world for the outstanding livestock exhibited here, several featured cattle shows are being staged for 1980. > GRAIN DUST EXPLO-SIONS have been a serious problem for hundreds of years, but steps taken by the Texas Department of Agriculture may soon help find a solution to these deadly occurrences.

The TDA, in cooperation with other state agencies and agricultural organizations. has formed a special task force to provide state government assistance in solving the grain elevator explosion problem. The objective is to coordinate activities of the state agencies to ensure that existing and proposed state laws and regulations concerning the grain industry are not contradictory. The task force will also assimilate information on grain elevator fires explosions.

Soviets to Import 5% More Grain Than Expected

By DON KENDALL AP Farm Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) - Decisions in the Soviet Union to preserve its livestock herds in the face of disappointing harvests this year will help boost the country's total grain imports, says the Agriculture Depart-

In all, the department said Tuesday, the Soviets probably will import nearly 5 percent more grain this year than had been thought previously.

The department's Foreign Agricultural Service said grain imports by the Soviet Union from all foreign sources now are expected to be 34 million metric tons in 1979-80. A month ago, the agency put Soviet grain imports from all foreign sources at 32.5 million metric tons.

The huge imports are needed to help maintain record inventories of cattle, hogs and other livestock instead of slaughtering surplus animals to conserve feed, officials said.

By far most of the grain is coming from the United States. For example, the Soviets have been given permission to buy up to 25 million metric tons of U.S. wheat and corn in the year that will end next Sept. 30. They bought about 15.7 million last

The new import estimate raises further the likelihood that the Soviet Union will buy the entire 25 million metric tons the United States has said it could.

As it stands now, the Soviets have bought more than 14.1 million metric tons, including more than 9.7 million of corn and 4.4 million of wheat, for delivery in 1979-80.

Total U.S. grain exports to all countries, including the Soviet Union, are projected at 112.9 million metric tons in 1979-80.

Leonid Brezhnev, the Soviet Union's president, last month announced the 1979 harvest at 179 million metric tons, about 25 percent smaller than last year's record output of 237.2 million. It also fell far short of Moscow's goal for 1979 of 226.8 million metric tons.

The Agriculture Department earlier this fall estimated the Soviet harvest would drop sharply to around 175 million

In its latest analysis, USDA which traditionally accepts Moscow's official harvest figures - estimated this year's harvest included 86 million metric tons of wheat, 84 million of coarse grains such as corn and barley, and 9 million of other grains, including rice and

A metric ton is about 2,205 pounds and is equal, for example, to 36.7 bushels of wheat or 39.7 bushels of corn.

By comparison, the record U.S. corn harvest by itself this fall is currently estimated at 192.7 million metric tons, and total U.S. grain output - including corn and other feedgrains, wheat and rice - at

The report noted that Soviet officials have "reiterated their resolution to maintain livestock numbers this year and to discourage any abnormal liquidation of herds" in reaction to the smaller harvest.

Thus, as of Nov. 1. Soviet livestock inventories "continue to show little change from normal seasonal" patterns, the report said.

While it is possible that the Soviets may not be able to maintain the record level of livestock holdings through the winter, it appears that every effort is being made to acquire the necessary feedgrains, oilseeds and protein meals from the world market," the report

Looking to 1980, the report said "a general pattern of adequate precipitation has occurred" over most grain regions of the Soviet Union so far this fall, except in the North Caucasus regions, where soils continued dry through Novem-

Tobacco Crop Down

WASHINGTON (AP) - The 1979 burley tobacco crop is now estimated at about 479 million pounds, down 23 percent from the 626 million harvested last

The Agriculture Department said Tuesday that the new estimate, based on Dec. 1 surveys, also was down from 516 million pounds forecast a month ago.

Average yields were put at 1,-953 pounds an acre - a drop of 446 pounds from 1978 and the lowest since 1961.

"Growers are expressing surtheir crops are weighed in at the warehouses," the Crop Reporting Board said. "Damage from excess moisture and blue mold has exceeded all expectations."

The report said demand for burley has been strong "and record high prices are being received by growers" this fall.

New production estimates were not made for other types of tobacco this month

Cotton Exports Expected to Increase 13 Percent

WASHINGTON (AP) - Cotton exports now are projected at 7 million bales, up about 13 percent from last season's shipments of 6.2 million bales, says the Agriculture Department.

According to USDA records, that would make cotton exports the largest since 7.4 million bales were exported in the 1959-60 marketing year.

Rice exports, although down slightly from expectations a few months ago, are expected to set records in 1979-80, the department said Wednesday in a new analysis.

Cotton production this year is estimated at 14.5 million bales, the largest crop since 1965 and 34 percent more than the 1978 harvest of less than 10.9 million

A month ago, a similar analysis projected cotton exports at 6.8 million bales, but the new report said the 300,000bale increase in prospects since

Could Pay Farmers Texas farmers might be able to save some money as well as get a jump on the 1980 crop year by fertilizing cropland early. "The possibility of shorter fertilizer supplies and much higher costs next spring should provide some incentive for farmers to put out fertilizer early for next spring's crops." believes Dr. Charles Welch, soil chemist with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service, Texas A&M University System.

Increased crop acreages, export demands and reduced fertilizer production have caused a decline in fertilizer inventories, points out Welch. This, coupled with an increasing transportation problem, makes

COLLEGE STATION - it uncertain and difficult for many local fertilizer dealers to obtain fertilizer to maintain a desired inventory level.

And fertilizer prices are going up due to increased production costs, inflation and market pressures. By planting time next spring, some fertilizer materials such as anhydrous ammonia and ammonium phosphate may cost twice as much as last spring. "With expected higher fertilizer prices, it is especially important to obtain soil tests and all available agronomic information for using fertilizers efficiently for next year's crop," emphasizes Welch. "Now is a good time to start planning for an efficient fertilization pro-

season due, in part, to the strain which current strong export movement is placing on transportation and warehouse facilities."

Also, the report said, use of cotton by U.S. textile mills continues firm. In all, cotton use including exports and domestic mill requirements - could be around 13.3 million bales this marketing year, the most since 1973-74.

Thus, it said, the U.S. cotton stockpile left on hand when the next marketing year begins Aug. 1, 1980, may be around 5.3 million bales, substantially less than officials had predicted a few months ago.

However, officials said, at 5.3 million bales, next season's beginning cotton carryover would be up significantly from 4 million on hand this Aug. 1. Rice farmers produced a record crop this year of 139.6 million hundredweight, compared to 133.8 million in 1978. the previous high.

Major Possibilities Noted In Japanese Export Market

WASHINGTON (AP) — The possibility that Japan, already the leading customer of U.S. farmers, some day could be a completely open market raises "mind-boggling" possibilities, says an Agriculture Department

Japan recently made a number of concessions to the United States in multilateral trade negotiations that have helped open the door wider to a number of U.S. goods, including beef, citrus products, poultry and protein concentrates, the report

"It has been estimated that the quota increases alone could boost annual import value (of beef, oranges and citrus juices) by nearly $125 million in 1983 when the increases will have been fully implemented," it said. The report, in a new issue of "Foreign Agriculture" released on Monday, was written by Beverly Horsley of the department's Foreign Agricultural Service.

Japan, for many years, has been the leading foreign buyer of U.S. agricultural products. In the fiscal year that ended Sept. 30, those purchases total about $5.1 billion and are expected to rise to another record in 1979-80 of $5.3 billion.

In other words, of an estimated $38 billion in farm exports predicted for this fiscal year, Japan will buy about 14 percent of the total. Ms. Horsley said the tion to liberalized trade policies, there has been "continuing growth in demand" for food products such as beef in Japan. where per capita consumption is low compared with that of most developed countries.

"Still another is the economic advantage enjoyed buy U.S. producers in a market where cost factors for raw materials and now increasingly for labor - favor them over Japanese and other suppliers," the report

The big U.S. items in the Japanese market still are wheat and flour, feedgrains, soybeans, cotton, livestock products and fruits and fruit preparations.

In a recent interview with John S. Beshoar, U.S. agricultural attache in Tokyo, Ms. Horsley said Japan is an even greater potential market for American beef.

Japanese consumers eat an average of about 10.1 pounds. compared to about 123 pounds per person in the United States last year, the report said.

Beshoar said that "prices like the $31 per kilogram recently charged for boneless sirloin

American Food Is Good Deal

THE COST OF EATING in America may not be the lowest in the world, but when compared with many other countries it is clear we enjoy a pretty good deal, notes Agriculture Commissioner Reagan V. Brown.

"A recent U.S.D.A. survey of food costs in world capitals shows that grocery prices here are among the most reasonable of any developed nation," he said. "For instance, last month in Washington, D. C., a pound of sirloin steak cost about $3.02. But if you lived in Rome, that same steak would cost $4.39, and you'd pay $6.23 if you bought it in Stockholm, Sweden.

Brown pointed out that a pound of sirloin cost an astounding $15.87 in Tokyo.

1978 Ag Statistics Available from TDA

AUSTIN .- The annual Texas agricultural county statistics bulletin, issued by the Texas Department of Agriculture (TDA), has been released for the 1978 recording period.

In announcing the publication of the 1978 county statistics. Agriculture Commissioner Reagan V. Brown noted that their preparation is made possible. by the Texas Legislature which provides TDA with funds for the operation of an annual county data program. The program is conducted by the Texas Crop and Livestock Reporting Service. a cooperative effort of TDA and the Economics. Statistics. and Cooperatives Service of the U.S. Department of Agriculture," Brown explained.

"Many individuals and organizations support and make possible these county statistics, but I want to especially thank the farmers and ranchers who have furnished basic data for their operations," Brown said.

The booklet, available free of charge by writing the Texas

Department of Agriculture, P. O. Box 12847, Austin, Texas 78711, contains statistics for each county on a single page. Individual county sheets, showing all the data for a given county, are also available to those who want the data for one or more counties separately, Brown noted. Also, commodity bulletins, showing the latest annual statistics for Texas counties are available upon request for vegetables, fruits and pecans, small grains, field crops, cotton, livestock, poultry, dairy, and cash

Texas as a whole placed number one in the nation in the number of farms and ranches as well as acreage devoted to farm and ranch land, according to the summary statistics contained in the 1978 County Statistics bulletin. Texas is also ranked number one in numbers of all cattle and calves, cattle slaughter, all sheep and lambs, and all goats and kids, as well as the production of upland cotton, grain sorghum, cabbage, and spinach for the fresh market:

Goat raisers like Buster and Henny Adams, Evant, Texas, were willing to try anything to help them stay in the business. That "anything" proved to be an eight-monthold Komondor puppy, a breed that the Adamses had read a little about and which had been introduced to Texas

For those Koms that do respond to training, however, their use is proving to be at least a partial solution to the often devastating predator problem among goats. In the years since Maggie gained full status as a guard dog, for example, not one Angora goat under her care has been lost to predators.

Bacon Is Safer

Nitrosamine Testing Program Termed 'Overwhelming Success'

WASHINGTON (AP) — Despite initial problems, the government's year-old testing program to control the amount of nitrosamines in bacon is now an "overwhelming success," says a senior Agriculture Department official.

When bacon is found to have unacceptably high levels of the substance, the plant must change its processing methods and bring its bacon into line or the plant can be prevented from making any more bacon for the consumer market.

Nitrosamines - seven are checked in the program - can form from sodium nitrite used to cure bacon when it is fried. particularly at high heat.

Department reports have said such nitrosamines "are considered to be carcinogenic (cancercausing) since laboratory animals administered these compounds develop cancer."

Assistant Secretary Carol Tucker Foreman said Thursday the testing program's results mean "the American consumer can be assured that virtually all bacon pumped with a nitrite cure is free from confirmable One industry source, who asked not to be identified, said bacon processors have been able to adjust to the stricter federal nitrosamine standards but added that many plants had problems adjusting until new procedures were worked out.

Ms. Foreman acknowledged to a reporter that problems did occur in the early stages of the testing program but that USDA technicians and industry people were able to work out new processing techniques.

"Some companies were able to make bacon with less nitrite and showed others how to do it." she said.

Sodium nitrite has been used for many years in bacon and other processed meats as a guard against the formation of organisms that can cause deadly botulism, a food poisoning. It also helps impart color and flavor to the products.

"Not only has the program been successful in reducing nitrosamines, but is also stemmed industry fears that enforcement of USDA regulations would cause large numbers of bacon manufacturers to go out of business," Ms. Foreman said

"Those fears have not materialized, primarily because USDA provided technical assistance to help manufacturers meet the regulatory standard." More than 1,000 samples of bacon were tested in the first year of the program. All major plants were checked more than once, Ms. Foreman said.

Bacon with "confirmable levels" of nitrosamine came from only 12 of the 355 plants tested. Those produce only 0.9 percent of the bacon made by using a nitrite cure pumped into the

More than 90 percent of an estimated 1.4 billion pounds of bacon produced annually in the United States involves the pumped curing method.

After Freedom of Information proceedings were initiated by The Associated Press, the Agriculture Department last January began releasing the test results on a weekly basis. There had been fears in the industry that publicity about nitrosamine violations would jeopardize bacon manufacturers.

Before Noah Webster compiled his dictionary, he produced one of the most useful volumes ever printed in English, the Blue-Back Speller. Unscrupulous publishers pirated the Speller and reprinted it without payment or credit. This led Webster to devise and champion the federai copyright law which Congress enacted in 1790 to pro-tect the rights of authors.

Is On Rise In Texas AUSTIN-Devotion to the gel of the ancient aloe vera plant may eventually make what is now a specialty crop in Texas a full-scale agricultural enterprise. Some 300 acres of Rio Grande Valley land are now in commercial production of aloe vera, according to Agriculture Commissioner Reagan V. Brown. And while the aloe vera plant, which looks like a cactus but is actually a member of the lily genus, is currently in abundance, continuing research by pharmaceutical and cosmetic firms may soon spell tight supplies until more acreage is planted, Brown added. Users of aloe vera can be almost fanatical in their praises for the plant's gel. Modern salesmen are quick to point out that they can make no medicinal claims for the gel but for some 3 500 years aloe vera has been used to treat burns and minor skin problems.

Scientific evidence is slowly building to support many of the curative testimonies of advocates of aloe vera. U.S. Atomic Energy Commission studies, for example, showed a rapid healing rate for radiation burn ulcers when aloe vera was used while respected scientific journals have reported success in using the gel to treat peptic ulcers and to inhibit bacteria

For many years, persons kept an aloe vera potted on the windowsill and merely clipped off a portion of a leaf and applied the juice to the skin. Now, a stabilizing agent has been developed and the gel is sold either in combination with other ingredients or by itself.

the plant for future harvests. The number of manufacturers and products using aloe vera is increasing in Texas. mainly in Dallas. One of the older cosmetics firms, carries a line of 168 items using aloe vera, including those for facial and hair care, bath oil, foot creams, and a muscle balm.

According to company head James Swope, "The value of aloe vera lies in its penetrating qualities."

Swope advised those interested in using aloe vera products to check the ingredients on the label and choose those which list aloe vera at the top. He also advised buyers to get their products from a reputable company because the gel starts spoiling as soon as it comes out of the leaf and must be stabilized quickly to retain its effectiveness.

That "effectiveness" may be questioned by the scientific community but not by the growing number of aloe devotees. And with fans as ardent as the ones for this ancient plant, the future of aloe vera farming in Texas . looks bright.

Passport

Passport derives from two French words: "passer," to pass, and "port," meaning a harbor. Originally granting permission to enter a nation's ports, the documents were issued to ships as well as to people. The earliest passports were "letters of transit" written by rulers or other authorities to identify prominent individuals who carried them. The letters requested that their bearers be assured safe passage and courteous treatment. They were a convenience when traveling, not a requirement.

The children of today are looking to us for ways they can prepare for their own style of life . . . families . . . and job opportunities. To help, we'll need more electricity. It's true, electricity will play a big role toward helping expand the job market to include these adults of tomorrow. The modern use of electricity has contributed to a better educational system to prepare our young people for the new experiences yet to come.

Almost 10 years ago, the folks at sure there was enough electricity to keep today's wage earner working. They decided that the fuel used in their power plants should be coal because, coal would be more abundant and cheaper to use than the conventional fuel . . . natural gas. Now, Southwestern Public Service has a new coal plant in operation and more on the way. Yes, coal plants will help stabilize fuel costs while providing a long-term, reliable, energy source to provide electricity.
