Preaching services 11 a. m., and 7:15 p. m.

At the hour of 6:15 the pastor wishes to meet all Endeavorers of the Junior age, whose families are associated with this church for the purpose of organizing a Junior Endeavor.

At a meeting of Endeavorers held at this church on Monday evening, it was decided that it is impracticable just now to organize separate Senior Endeavors in the two cooperative churches.

The Union Senior Endeavor will therefore continue until some time in the future when it shall seem practical because of development to enlarge the work by reorganization.

Meanwhile, let the work proceed with renewed determination to make a success of it. During this month the meetings of the Senior Endeavor will be held at The First Christian Church at the usual hour.

On next Sunday evening the district president, Miss Woods, will be present and address the Endeavorers in behalf of the work of the organization.

Women's Missionary Society, Wednesday, 2:30 p. m.

Lesson Subject: Paul's Voyage and Shipwreck.

Read Luke 11:1-17, Acts 27:1-44

I. Synopsis of Paul's Life Up To This Lesson

Born in the province of Cilicia, in 400 miles almost directly north from Jerusalem. The time of his birth about 1 A. D. Of Benjaminite ancestry, though his father had attained to Roman citizenship. Training in the traditions of the Pharisees, childhood education consisted of studies in Arithmetic, reading, writing and Jewish law, and in addition, training by his father to the trade of tentmaking, advanced education at Jerusalem under the great teacher Gamaliel. Begun his career as a member of the Sanhedrin at perhaps about the age of 33 or 34. At 36 converted and after short stay in Jerusalem, returns to Tarsus from whence as headquarters he preaches in the provinces of Syria and Cilicia for a period of four to five years. Preaches at various points in the coast country until at the age of 48 he begins his first missionary journey in which he goes to Antioch in Pisidia in the parallels of Athens, Cyprus on the west, and Derbe on the east. In the year 50 A. D. he attends the Council of Jerusalem at which time the status of the Gentiles in the church is determined favorably. The next year undertakes his second missionary journey from Antioch in Syria around the Mediterranean Coast until he reaches Corinth and from thence returns across the sea via Ephesus to Jerusalem toward the close of Summer in 54 A. D. In the Autumn of this same year he begins his third missionary journey which reaches as far west as Corinth from whence he returns in the Summer of 58 A. D. to Jerusalem, where on false charges he is arrested and after a very short imprisonment is sent to Caesarea for safe keeping. There, two years of imprisonment brings him to a hearing before Festus, the Governor, in which the Governor requests that he return to Jerusalem, Paul appeals to Caesar. In our lesson we shall find him on the way to Rome there to present his case before the last court of resort.

II. Between the Lessons

The last lesson closes with the hearing before Agrippa and the agreement, as a matter of course, however, between Agrippa and Festus that Paul should go to Rome. Following this decision the time of sailing was determined and Paul was placed in the charge of Julius, the centurion. Paul had now reached the middle stage of his five years of imprisonment. Think of a man's being indicted, thrown into prison, made a political football for two years and a half, twice adjudged innocent of the charges brought against him, nevertheless, kept in bonds, until finally he appeals to Caesar and has two years and a half more to endure captivity before he can move freely again! This was the case of Paul.

The time of sailing having been determined by the Governor, Festus, Paul and his centurion Guard, had to wait the chance arrival of a coastwise vessel in which they should be carried to a port at the intersection of the coastwise route and that from Asia to Italy. They were now at Caesarea. A ship bound for Adramyttium but which stopped at the principal ports up to the Asian coast touched at Caesarea. Julius with his prisoners embarked and sailing by Cyprus and Sidon at which places short stays were made came to Myra and there disembarked. Very shortly a ship of Alexandria, carrying its precious cargo of grain towards Puteoli in Italy touched at Myra. Here Paul and his company reembarked for Italy. Westwardly they sailed under the protecting shores of the mainland of Asia, through the passage between the islands of Rhodes and Cudlian peninsula until they were rounding the point in a northwesterly direction at Cnidus.

Here, according to what we read in the scripture text, they met a stiff wind blowing directly from the Northwest. As ancient ships could sail within seven points of the wind, (reckoned on the basis of a 32 point compass) the ship was unable to pursue a direct course towards Italy which at this point would have required a course just a bit West by South. What actually happened was that the ship had to take a seven point course which carried her in a direction South by West and on the south instead of the North side of the island of Crete. Rounding the eastern point of Crete and sailing under the lee of that island the ship came to Fair Havens on the southern shore of Crete. The time of the year was now about the last of October and about that time there set in on the Mediterranean Sea those early winter storms that have been experienced in that sea from time immemorial. Fair Havens not being a commodious place to winter, and the sea not permitting long voyages at this time of year, it was decided, though over the protest of Paul, that the ship should sail farther west on the Cretan coast to Phenix where there was known to be a harbor which no sea disturbance could reach. This was a fateful decision; for Prentiss never saw the crew sail into her harbor. Rounding the point west of Fair Havens, the ship had headed Northwest toward Phenix, when from the heights of Mount Ida a terrific wind swept down upon the sea. This drove the ship out of its course. It was now drifting towards the Syrtilis of quicksand shores of Northern Africa. Fortunately, the ship sailed under the lee of Claudia, a small isle South of Crete, and while under the protecting shores of that isle, though still drifting, the crew pulled the little tow boat on deck, reset the sails of the ship for a westward drift, undergirded the ship, that is, passed ropes or cables around the body on the outside the ship in order to prevent it from springing a leak under the strain of the waves. By this time the ship had reached the open sea again. Very soon it became evident that the ship and her passengers were practically at the mercy of a raging sea. To add to their danger the sky became clouded so that for days they could neither see the sun by day nor the stars by night. This was a most serious disadvantage; for ancient sailors had none of the modern instruments for taking longitude and latitude that are known to modern sailors. They were entirely dependent for their observations on the sun and stars. When, therefore, after drifting so long, the sun and stars were not visible for many days and they could not by any means know in what part of the sea they were, the sailors gave up all hope of being saved. They lost their appetites, they ceased sleeping, so great was their anxiety. There was one in that company, however, who was not lost when sun and stars shone no more and when ships drifted about, for, Paul could well have said at this time what Whittier later wrote:

"No harm from him can come to me On ocean or on shore. "I know not where his islands lift Their fronted palms in air; I only know I cannot drift Beyond his love and care." And so in the midst of the sailors' hopelessness and utter despair, Paul prayed. No matter how much the storm winds may rage upon the sea (Continued on Page 11)

Our hearts were made sad last Tuesday morning when we learned of Grandpa Bowen's death. He has been in very poor health for almost a year and his death was not unexpected. The funeral was held on Wednesday at the Palo Duro cemetery.

On last Thursday a few friends ate Thanksgiving dinner in the home of E. H. Boling and Mr. and Mrs. John Boling. The turkey consisted of wild geese, and all that attended said it was a bountiful feast. There would have been more present but the field work is so urgent at present they could not leave it.

W. J. McClain and wife and daughter, Frieda, went to Hereford one day last week.

Mrs. (Rev.) A. M. Dowell from Vega visited in the community last week.

Marion Moore from Colorado is here helping his brother, L. C. Moore, operate his threshing machine.

The grain crop is turning out fairly well and the farmers are very busy trying to get it put up before the weather gets too bad.

Robert Stratten from Canyon is in the community for awhile helping his uncle, R. L. Campbell, with his threshing.

John Butler and brother from Wyoming are working with the L. C. Moore threshing outfit.

Otto Smith and family visited with the Hammer family last Sunday.

About twenty folks went home with the Bowen family for dinner after Sunday school last Sunday and a pleasant afternoon was enjoyed by all. The county grading outfit has finished the north end of the Wildorado Dawn road and is now working near Dawn. The roads are settling fine and when they are dragged a few times will be in first class shape.

Those present were: Mesdames Will Emerson and Harold Wyer, Sam Layman, Glenn Stiles, Roy and Art Haberer, and Vern Lust. The club next meets with Mrs. Roy Haberer, December 10.

Our Sunday School attendance has been small as yet but we are still hoping more will become interested and attend.

PROGRESSIVE

Thanksgiving was enjoyed immensely by Progressive folks. They gathered at the school house about 11:00 o'clock. Rev. Morgan, pastor of the Christian church of Hereford, gave us a very interesting talk, causing us to realize in full just what Thanksgiving should mean to us.

The noon hour was not an unimportant feature of the day. We are inclined to believe the men who came in for the dinner from the thresher will join us in saying "those eats" were delightful.

The school teachers and pupils entertained with a good program afternoon.

Then the school children indulged in a basket ball game, which resulted in satisfaction for both sides, the score being 18 to 18.

Among the visitors were Miss Opal Morgan, Rev. Morgan and his wife and Miss Mabel Barnhart.

Miss Margret Richetts spent Thanksgiving with home folks, and also attended the services at Progressive.

EVOLUTION THROUGH THE AGES

First age, when he is a Fish: "I don't know."
Second age, when he is a Soph: "I didn't read that."
Third age, when he is a Junior: "I can't think of any thing to say."
Fourth age, when he is a Senior: "I don't have anything further to say."

THINGS NOT WORTH KNOWING

Vanities were used in 3000 B. C. If all the students that flunked were placed in a heap in the Atlantic ocean—they would sink.
Cold boiled ham is boiled in cold water.
The poor teachers support themselves with their legs.
The girls that ride in red busses are called—passengers.
People in the United States would own 87 per cent of the world's autos, if they were paid for.
A teacher told us that Abraham Lincoln built the house he was born in—but we don't believe it.

LOST AND FOUND

LOST—A green tie—please return to Travis Dameron before Saint Patrick's Day.
LOST—My best bean—if found, please return at once.—LaMoine Shaw.
FOUND—A freckle on Ed Johnson's face.
WANTED—A girl with a good car, plenty of "dough" and references.—Jess Russell.

UP AND DOWN THE HALLS

Hereford has always been noted for its fine music. Why even one of our teachers sings in the Methodist Choir.
Two couples have "busted up". Try to find out who they are, students!
Seen at our Senior class meeting: Two people who were not talking—they had sore throats.
Miss Read: "Whisky kills more men than bullets."
Marlin: "But I would rather be full of whisky than bullets."
Agnes Vaughn gets mad but she always "makes up".
Ruth: "Artis must have been very fond of animals when he was a child."
Frances: "Why?"
Ruth: "The way he pets."
Young man: "May I speak to Miss Brown a minute?"
Student: "Not just now; she's engaged."
Young man: "Oh, that's all right. I'm the fellow she's engaged to."
Mr. Dillehay: "Pauline, how do you spell 'Phoebe'?"
Polly: "'Feebe,' I guess."

SENIOR JESTS

Dy: Why did you join the orchestra?
Wanda: So that I could make more people listen to me.
Virginia: What was the trouble down town this afternoon?
Ed: A fellow turned a corner.
Virginia: Well?
Ed: There wasn't any corner.
John B.: What are you writing?
Elmer: A joke.
John L.: Give her my regards.
Price: What are you doing?
Jess: Don't bother me, I'm adding up some figures and every time I look at you I put down zero.
Artis: I've gone with six girls this year, and none of them seem to like me.
Inez: You evidently picked out intelligent girls.
We have been seeing in the Amarillo papers everything about "Sandy". Now we have seen that famous person. Where?
Miss Glenn: "Fanny, do you know Poe's 'Raven'?"
Fanny: "No, what's he mad about?"
We have decided that the prize "dumb question" is: "Who is that girl with the bobbed hair?"
Ina Mae: "The strongest men are out west."
Imogene: "How's that?"
Ina Mae: "Don't they hold up trains out there?"
Miss Brown: "George, give me the setting of the story."
George: "How do I know? It didn't even say anything about hens."
Miss Glenn: "I've read worse themes."
Wanda: "Yes."
Miss Glenn: "But they were longer."
Lois Hill: "My ancestors came over in the Mayflower."
Orlena: "It's a good thing the immigration laws are stricter now."
Notice to the student body: Zella Mae is not English any more.
To find Urita Streu: First call 361; then, if he isn't there, call 57, and next call 48.

SOCIETY

Miss Velma E. Read spent Thanksgiving with her sister in Amarillo. That's all we know, but we can tell where to find out something else.

DIMMITT NEWS

A wedding of much interest to the people of Dimmitt was solemnized last Thursday afternoon, November 26, at Canyon, when Miss Tennie Hastings became the bride of Mr. Ernest Harmon.

The wedding party motored to Dimmitt where a lovely six o'clock dinner was served at the home of the bride's parents. The table was attractively decorated in the bride's chosen colors with pink and white carnations and an immense wedding cake with a miniature bride and groom adorning the top. Besides the immediate family the following guests were present: Mr. and Mrs. Henry Hastings and family of Hereford, Mr. and Mrs. L. P. White, Mr. and Mrs. Joe Hastings and family, Misses Nola Gollehon, Leota Shuford; Messrs. Max Gray, Hez Wright, Willard Montgomery.

W. G. SLAGLE HAS PURCHASED SOME FINE BREEDERS

Deaf Smith county poultry took a good boost recently when W. G. Slagle, White Leghorn breeder, ordered twelve choice S. C. White Leghorn male birds to head his breeding pens. Slagle sent $250 to the famous Hollywood Poultry Farm at Woodville, Washington, with instructions to ship at once twelve of the best birds that could be sent for that price.
Hollywood Farm started back in 1913 with a foundation flock direct from the Padman Strain in Australia. The breed has been improved from year to year, and today Hollywood farm is known all over the United States for the type of breeding chickens that are sent out. Mr. Slagle will mate these pedigreed cock birds with the best of his one and two year old hens, and plans to furnish eggs for the Golden Rule Hatchery recently established by H. H. Hawkins.
With these pedigreed birds to head his pens, and with several hundred hens that are proven producers, Mr. Slagle will furnish baby chicks that will not be surpassed in this section. No pullets will be used in his breeding pens, although five or six hundred will be kept for commercial egg production. This is one of the best moves that has been made for some time to get better poultry in this section.

HEADLIGHT LAW IS EXPLAINED BY STATE DEPARTMENT

The State Highway Department asks that the following information concerning the state headlight law be brought to the attention of the motoring public:
"The Texas Automobile Headlight Law requires that every motorist, at the time of registration, present to the Tax Collector a headlight certificate which has been issued by a test station within thirty days of the date of registration. If the car or truck to be registered is not equipped with headlamps, the registrant will be permitted make affidavit to that effect and this affidavit will take the place of a headlight certificate. Early testing and registration will help the test stations and the Tax Collector, and will save time for the motorist.
"Motorists cannot obtain a headlight certificate for registration purposes on a re-test. The re-test provision of the law permits a re-test at any time during the year, but the certificate presented for registration must be a "test" certificate and must be paid for. In other words, headlamps are "tested" at the beginning of each year for registration purposes, and at this time the regular yearly fee of twenty-five cents must be paid, and any time during the year following, a re-test may be had free of charge until the next registration period begins.
"After the coming pre-registration tests, there will not be another set test until the 1927 registration period begins. Throughout the year, however, a constant check will be made on the headlighting conditions in the various parts of the state. Enforcement work is in the hands of local officers, and motorists are urged to co-operate with them in reporting bad headlighting conditions. There is no doubt that compliance with the Headlight Law will mean a great saving of property and human lives."

DR. J. W. OVERTON COUNTY LEADER OF MEMORIAL DRIVE

Dr. John W. Overton has just received a wire from Lon A. Smith, State Chairman, of Austin, that he had been made city chairman of the Stone Mountain Confederate Memorial Campaign. Dr. Overton wired his acceptance. Efforts are being made to raise half a million dollars by selling special half dollars made by the U. S. Government at $1.00 each, for the purpose of having the image of Gen. Robert E. Lee carved on the side of a solid granite cliff as a tribute to the great leader. When completed the Memorial will be the greatest piece of sculpture that man has ever made. Dr. Overton will start work immediately in Hereford.

THE SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON
(By Jas. T. Ross)

...the stars go out, the real Christ can always find spiritual longitude and latitude in prayer. So Paul stood up in that despairing company and said, "And now I exhort you to be of good cheer; for there shall be no loss of life among you, but only of the ship. For there stood by me this night an angel of the God whose I am, whom also I serve, saying, 'Fear not, Paul; for thou shalt stand before Caesar; and lo, God hath granted thee all them that sail with thee.' Wherefore, sirs, be of good cheer; for I believe God, that it shall be even as it hath been spoken unto me. But we must be cast upon a certain island."

On the fourteenth night, after drifting over a fathomless sea for many hopeless days, the sailor's discerning ear caught sound of the breakers from the shore of some nearby land. They sounded and found the ocean depth 120 feet. In a few moments they sounded again and found that the depth was 90 feet. This could mean but one thing: they were rapidly approaching shore. It being night the sailors knew that they were approaching a critical point if they dared to attempt to reach the shore. Thus they cast anchors at the rear end of the ship and waited for the day, the better to plan and execute their approach to the shore.

III. The Lesson Story

Day dawned upon a tired crew and an anxious group of soldiers and prisoners. The sailors having attempted just before daybreak to make their escape in the towboat under the presence of laying out anchors at the front of the ship, were thwarted by the quick discerning mind of Paul, who warned the centurion of their purpose, and by military promptness with which the soldiers severed the boat from the ship and set it adrift. Thus the ship's company was not left at the mercy of the waves and the sailors were compelled to take the risk with the passengers which they should first of all have been willing to take.

Paul, realizing that however favorable their landing might be under such circumstances, also knew that the company would need all the strength it could muster. For this reason he exhorted the company to take food and in order to make this mentally possible at the same time assured them that they should all reach the shore safely. They followed his advice. Having eaten, the company threw the cargo of wheat overboard in order to facilitate their approach to shore. With the coming of day they perceived a sandy beach lying to the west of the ship. Cutting away the anchors, loosing the rudder bands and hoisting the foresail, they drove straight towards this beach. They found, however, when they reached the beach that it was an island, and that between it and the mainland there was a swift channel. The ship's prow drove into the sand and clay and stuck fast. The agitated waters beat upon the stern of the ship with the result that it began to break in pieces. The soldiers at once counseled the killing of the prisoners, but were prevented from carrying out this brutal purpose by the centurion whose respect for Paul saved not only his own life but those of the other prisoners also. The result was that all got to land safely, some by floating on planks from the wrecked ship, others by swimming the swift channel across to shore.

IV. Comments on Lesson Text
V. 30. "Shipmen", that is, the sailors, were about to flee, leaving ship and cargo behind them, when Paul, standing on the sea, "Boat" each large ship carried a smaller boat so that there might be a chance for escape if the large, freight-laden ship should founder, and also for the purpose of landing in harbors where the water was too shallow for the heavier ship to approach the shore. "Under colour," that is, under pretense of casting anchors at the ship's front in order to steady it. The sailors' real purpose of course was to drift ashore in the boat.

V. 31. "Except these abide in the maining steady as they thought with the push of the waves from behind, it was broken to pieces by the whirling waves from the sea and channel. Thus they were almost wholly unprepared for what happened."
V. 42. "Soldiers counsel . . . kill the prisoners." Under the Roman law, an officer entrusted with a prisoner was responsible with his life for the safe custody of the prisoner. Hence two perils confronted the soldiers. Either they might not reach shore, or if they should, might have to forfeit their lives on account of losing their prisoners. Their counsel to kill the prisoners was therefore a reduction by half of their peril.
V. 43. "Centurion desiring to save Paul." The noble conduct of Paul on this voyage had, doubtless, won for him the respect of the officer having him in custody, hence, led him to save Paul's life and, since he could not make a special case of Paul, to provide for the lives of the other prisoners. So he left each to escape to land if he could.
V. 44. "All escaped to the land." A remarkable deliverance. Out of 276 passengers with a ship gone to pieces and they floating on planks or swimming across a swift channel none were lost. This was fulfilled God's promise to Paul and Paul's assurance to the passengers: "and lo, God hath granted thee all them that sail with thee."

Thus the ship's company was not left at the mercy of the waves and the sailors were compelled to take the risk with the passengers which they should first of all have been willing to take.

Paul, realizing that however favorable their landing might be under such circumstances, also knew that the company would need all the strength it could muster. For this reason he exhorted the company to take food and in order to make this mentally possible at the same time assured them that they should all reach the shore safely. They followed his advice. Having eaten, the company threw the cargo of wheat overboard in order to facilitate their approach to shore. With the coming of day they perceived a sandy beach lying to the west of the ship. Cutting away the anchors, loosing the rudder bands and hoisting the foresail, they drove straight towards this beach. They found, however, when they reached the beach that it was an island, and that between it and the mainland there was a swift channel. The ship's prow drove into the sand and clay and stuck fast. The agitated waters beat upon the stern of the ship with the result that it began to break in pieces. The soldiers at once counseled the killing of the prisoners, but were prevented from carrying out this brutal purpose by the centurion whose respect for Paul saved not only his own life but those of the other prisoners also. The result was that all got to land safely, some by floating on planks from the wrecked ship, others by swimming the swift channel across to shore.

V. 30. "Shipmen", that is, the sailors, were about to flee, leaving ship and cargo behind them, when Paul, standing on the sea, "Boat" each large ship carried a smaller boat so that there might be a chance for escape if the large, freight-laden ship should founder, and also for the purpose of landing in harbors where the water was too shallow for the heavier ship to approach the shore. "Under colour," that is, under pretense of casting anchors at the ship's front in order to steady it. The sailors' real purpose of course was to drift ashore in the boat.

CENTRAL TEXAS FARM DRAWS ON HEREFORD FEED CROPS

The condition of Central Texas in regard to feed crops was well illustrated the past week by an unusual incident observed here. A new farm in this community who desire to write Central Texas county was observed loading a car of feed consigned to his old home. When asked concerning it he replied that there was no feed in Central Texas and he was compelled to ship his Plains feeds to his old farm place for use of his stock. Such a condition, however, will probably not occur again in years, as Central Texas rarely has such unusual drouth conditions as obtained this year.
