Liars Tell Tall Tales, But Snake And Bottle Yarns Win

By choice of the audience, Marlin Gililland and Abe Martin established themselves as the best liars in Deaf Smith County, Tuesday night in a contest sponsored by the Star Theatre. Second place went to Daniel Russell and Robert Petersen, who told a cooperative lie about the Sahara desert. A. O. Thompson took third place with a yarn of how he fed sawdust to his chickens; when the eggs hatched, 12 of the baby chicks had one wooden leg, and the thirteenth was a woodpecker.

Other entries in the contest were: Glenn Weir, A. R. Posey, Bill Smith, M. D. Womble and J. M. Posey. The first place lies are reproduced as follows:

Truth is stranger than fiction; this is a fact story about the way I made by first million dollars.

In the year 1888 I signed a contract to capture a cargo of wild animals for the New York zoo. I promptly set sail for the African Congo. After I had been in Africa about a month and had captured enough animals to fill my contract, I was walking through the jungle one day and saw a very peculiar snake under a coconut tree. I got my lariat rope and roped this snake. He became very angry and bit the coconut tree; he was so poisonous that the tree began to swell. It swelled until it was 25 feet through and the coconuts on the tree - Folks, you should have

They swelled up as big as giant grains of popcorn. Right there I saw a chance to make some money, so I began selling this giant coconut popcorn to the natives. When I had sold all of the popcorn on a tree, I would lead Oscar up to another tree. I called the snake Oscar, and I would tantalize him with a stick until he became angry; then he would bit the tree. The result was another tree of giant popcorn. After I sold a million dollars worth I thought I would have Oscar to bit one more tree, but I must have tantalized him more than usual. He bit the tree so hard he sank his fangs so deep that he couldn't release them, and the tree swelled so fast that it ripped poor Oscar wide open.

I delivered my animals to the New York zoo and came to Hereford and went into the barber business - that, ladler and gentlemen, is how I lost my million dollars.

BY MARLIN GILILLAND

One day when I was rummaging in my cellar, I found 12 bottles of champagne goin' to waste. I took a look at them and saw they were all in good condition, except they were full of me water. Putting the bottles to one side, I went to the back yard, where the grapevine is and took one of those long, curly tendrils. A friend of mine happened to be president of the United States Steel Company and I sent him one of the long, curly tendril from the grapevine and I said, would be make me a duplicate of it in steel.

He was glad to accommodate me, and 'twas not six weeks before I received back the twisted tendril.

On the top end of this, and cross ways, I fixed a clothespin. Then I pressed the sharp point of the lower end of the steel icto the bottle and twisted the tendril around. Then by pulling I drew out the cork, I laid the cork to one side and emptied the contents of the bottle down the drain, except a small tumbler full, which I drank. I then removed the cork from another bottle, and emptied the contents down the drain, except a small tumblerfull, which I also

I did this two more times. I then removed another drain from the contents - and - and emptied the small cork down the tumbler except a small bottle

I then bottled another remove from the tumbler - except a small corkful - which I drained - and contented the drank

I then bankled a tump from another bottle - I mean tankled a bump - I mean kumpled a drank-I-I-mean I conkled-well, anyway I did it to all 12 bottles. The bottles were all empty now, and I steadied the house with one hand and counted the bottles with the other. There were 27 left out of the dozen.

I got my scrubbing brush, but to my swrprise, found I could not get the brush down the neck of the bottles. Therefore, I turned the bottles wrong side out, and washed them well, and turned them right side out again.

By this time the house was revolving rapid. I sat on the floor and counted them as they passed by. There was 64 of them. I climbed onto the kitchen table and got a can opener, on the back of which was a glass cutter .I slipped back up on the bottles and sat in the center-of them-for they were going around and around. I surrounded them finally, and was able to eatch them one at a time. By laying down on the bottle, I was able to cut off the neck and the bottom-and the rest made excellent lamp chimneys,

-and when I counted them I found that I had 72.

What Makes A Bull Sale?

-- Why Bulls of Course -- Good Bulls!

On February 10th, at the Amarillo Fair Grounds. we are going to have a bull sale — nothing but bulls — 46 of them — richly bred, strong individuals — Anxiety 4th stuff. Bulls that put better heads, shorter legs, broader loins, heavier hind ends - "McDonald Hind Ends" — on their calves.

Fourteen sons of Prince Domino Axtell — former herd bull — with a lot of their daddy's thickness and easy feeding qualities — PRINCE DOM NO MISCHIEF BLOOD.

Twenty-seven Super Superiors with their heavy hind ends and short, wide masculine heads — SUPERIOR ANXIETY-DOMING BICOD.

Five sons of Superior Blanchard 3d, sire of the $2000.00 Prince Brummel - BEAU BLANCH-

And it's Gudgell and Simpson blood straight through the Donna Annas. Belle Blanchards, Pretty Ladys, Miss Brummels and Miss Gudgells, to Lamplighter, Beau Brummell, Don Carlos and Anxiety 4th.

Just what about McDonald bulls anyhow - they're siring Grand Champions, Reserve Champions. Champion steers at record prices, first prize calves, prize-winning gets in the fastest shows of of the nation. Check up on the Royal and International 1936-37 shows and see for yourself. We don't show them but others do, and that's better.

McDonald bulls are doing the job on the ranges of the great Southwest. They're acclimated and stand the gaff. McDonald bulls are holding their own in the foremost breeding establishments

If you need bulls, come to this sale — get them at your own price—they'll sell worth the money.
