Seat belt law to be strictly enforced

The Hereford Police Department wants to warn motorists that it intends to fully enforce the state seat belt law in the city starting June 23. The department also will be cracking down on persons parking in zones reserved for the handicapped.

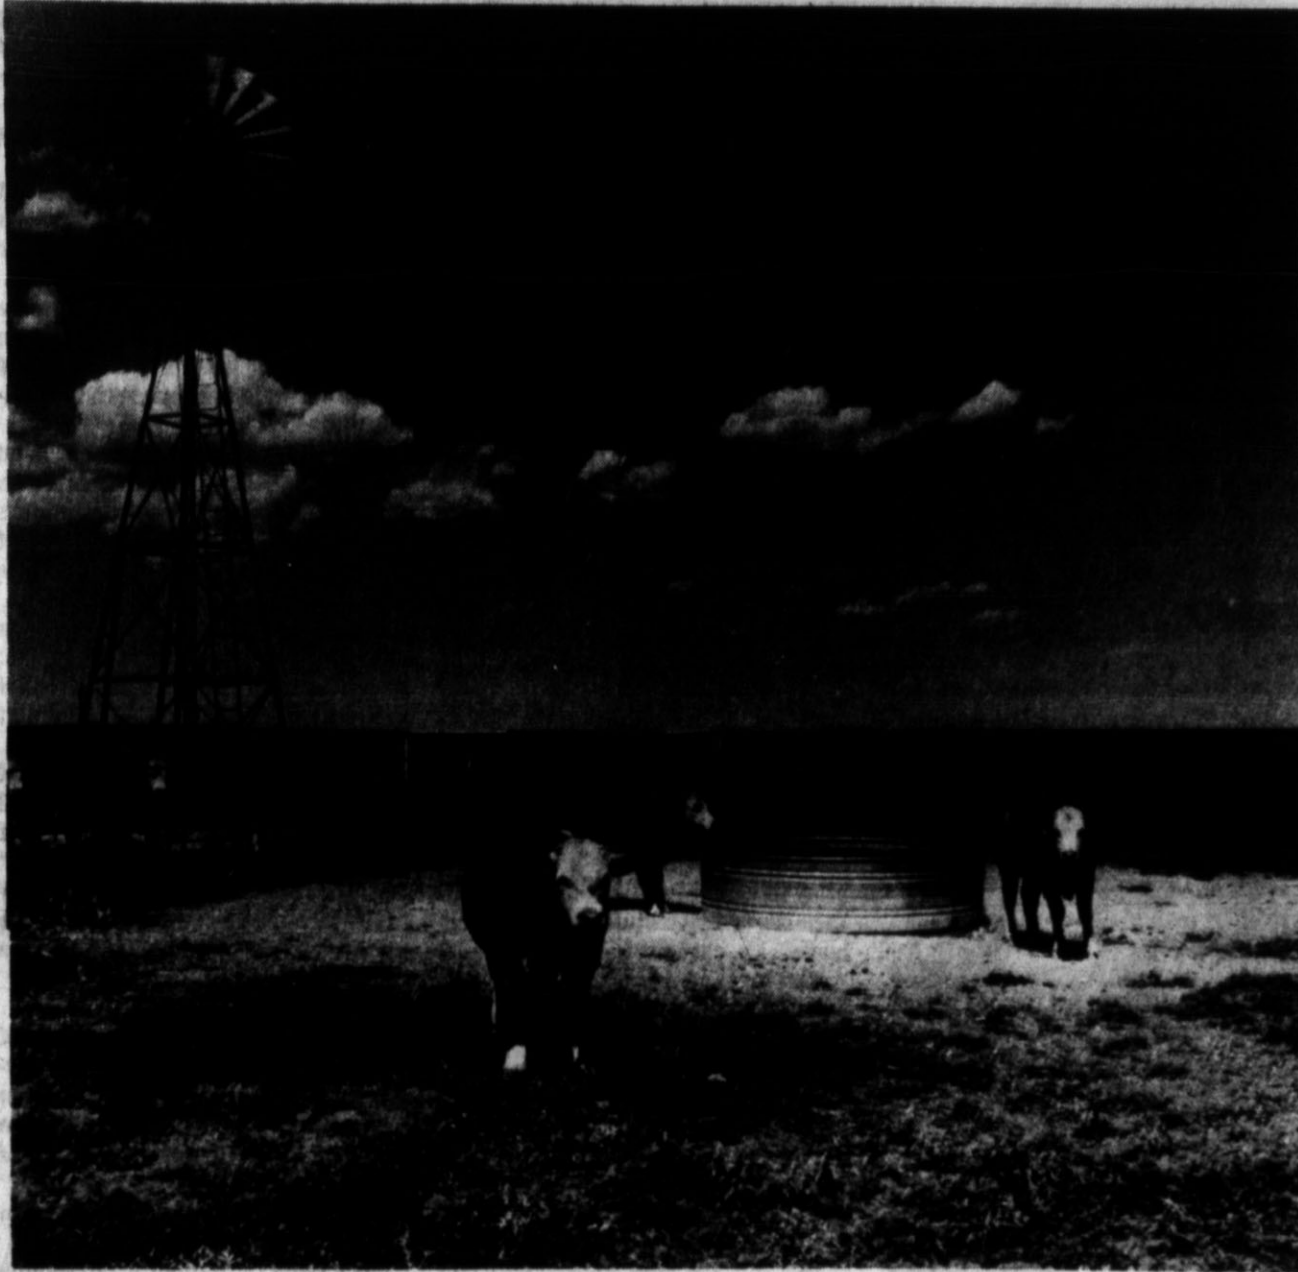

Sgt. Ronnie Henderson said patrolmen have issued some citations when drivers were stopped for other violations, but haven't pursued the seat belt issue particularly. On June 23, the police will begin stopping vehicles for seat belt violations.

The law came into effect last September, but fines were not imposed until a few months later.

Henderson noted that several juveniles have been involved in accidents and the police have seen how some injuries could have been prevented by use of seat belts, thus prompting a crackdown.

Handicapped parking violations have been enforced, but Henderson said it needs to be worked more.

"A lot of people do not know about the law," he noted. Some drivers believe the handicapped space law in only enforceable if in front of a public building, but Henderson said any parking space designated for handicapped must be reserved for the vehicles which sport a special handicapped sticker.

Proposed Nuclear Waste Site

Cattle graze and water on the land the Department of Energy has chosen for a possible location for a high level nuclear waste repository. This land, belonging to Donald Hicks, lies in the southernmost area of the proposed site.

Government says violence down since state of emergency imposed

PRETORIA, South Africa (AP) — The government Saturday said violence had declined since the new state of emergency was imposed, and vowed security forces would be in "complete control" during the anniversary of the 1976 Soweto riots Monday.

Dave Steward, chief of the Bureau for Information, told a news conference that the number of violent incidents — such as stone throwing and fire-bombings — declined by 38 percent compared with the days before the declaration, which took effect 12:01 a.m. Thursday.

He did not provide specific figures on the number of unrest incidents, and there was no way to independently check the information. His bureau now is the only official source of information on unrest.

Steward also said four blacks were slain in the past 24 hours, raising the death toll since the state of emergency declaration to 12. According to the bureau, one of the victims was killed by security forces and the others in violence between blacks.

Regarding the 10th anniversary of the Soweto uprising, when millions of blacks are expected to stay away from work and school, Steward said, "I would like to give you an assurance that the South African security forces will be in complete control of the situation."

He added, "The government regards Monday as a normal working day."

The Soweto uprising began when school children demonstrated against being taught in Afrikaans, the language of the Afrikaner whites they regard as their oppressors.

Police said 975 people were killed in the 1976-77 violence, but some unofficial estimates put the total at more than 1,000.

Asked about roadblocks and searches of people entering airports and some government offices, Steward replied, "This is a manifestation of the state of emergency. The security forces will be deploying units in strength during this period. What you've seen is just a tiny, tiny percentage of what we are able to deploy."

More than 1,700 people have died, mostly blacks, in a nearly 2-year-old uprising against white domination.

One of the most significant aspects of the state of emergency is an extensive series of restrictions on press coverage of violence and political activity.

Steward said Deputy Minister for Information Louis Nel met with newspaper editors this morning to discuss their concerns. Nel "once again expressed the seriousness of the situation and the government's determination to restore law and order," Steward said.

On Friday, demonstrating its intent to enforce the press restrictions, the government seized copies of two newspapers, arrested television crews and ordered one journalist to leave the country.

The press curbs, apart from banning the filming or coverage of anti-apartheid disturbances, prohibit the publication or transmission by local or foreign journalists of statements judged "subversive."

The government also has threatened foreign journalists with expulsion if they described President P.W. Botha's administration as a "white-led regime."

On Friday, the 15-member U.N. Security Council condemned the state of emergency.

Wheat farmers want new U.S. assistance

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Reagan administration is still turning aside pleas from farm interests for so-called marketing loans for wheat, a program that already has shown results for rice.

At the heart of the controversy is the urgency farmers and commodity groups believe is needed in seeking ways of boosting exports.

The overall value of U.S. farm exports, which traditionally are the strongest positive influence on the nation's trade balance, has been plummeting since 1981. In its latest figures, the Agriculture Department says the value of agricultural exports so far this fiscal year is $17.3 billion, off 19 percent from the same period last year.

To reverse the trend, the Reagan administration is pinning its hopes on a new farm policy that will gradually reduce the price-support levels for the major export crops.

Packwood predicts tax passage by next week

WASHINGTON (AP) — Tax-overhaul legislation pending in the Senate is "over the hump" and heading for passage next week, according to Sen. Bob Packwood, the bill's chief architect.

After the Senate on Friday wrapped up its first full week of debate on the bill, Packwood, R-Ore., chairman of the Senate Finance Committee, expressed confidence that the measure will be passed next week — possibly by Tuesday.

Packwood and Senate Majority Leader Bob Dole, R-Kan., have sought to fend off major amendments from being attached to the bill. But it was amended for the first time Friday to eliminate one of its dozens of provisions that would grant $5.5 billion worth of benefits to special interests.

Senators accepted an amendment by Sen. Howard Metzenbaum, D-Ohio, wiping out a special break for Union Oil Co. of California, known as Unocal. Packwood and Dole joined other backers of the legislation to pass the amendment by a 68-30 vote, indicating it posed no threat to the bill.

Packwood said later that he freed the coalition supporting the bill to vote as they wished on that amendment.

The amendment attracted so much backing in part because the money that would be denied Unocal would

Richardson says DOE neglects agribusiness

(Editor's Note: Landowners on and near the property proposed for characterization for nuclear waste repository are no less than mad at the Department of Energy. Brand staffers Cindy Smith and Shawn Cockrum interviewed three of the landowners for their opinions. Two of the stories begin here, others are on Page 8C and Page 3A. A map of who owns land near the site is on Page 2A.)

By CINDY SMITH

On March 20, 1984, a letter came in the mail notifying Wayne Richardson and others that their farms, their land had been selected for further study as a possible site for a high level nuclear waste repository.

They, the landowners, had 24 hours to meet with the Department of Energy in Hereford the following day.

All landowners involved were notified but at that time the site was located two miles further west including six other families from where the site is now.

"After reading the site document our first thought was to look at the provisions in the Nuclear Waste Policy Act. They said there were some things to consider; our prime farm land, water supplies, area socioeconomic impacts, and any unique industry we might have in the area," recalled Richardson with an odd expression on his face.

"We thought, considering these things, that just by showing them what all we have out here, we would automatically be eliminated from further consideration, based on what the law said should be considered," Richardson defended.

"The result of that of course, is that they totally ignore these things," he said. "Still not one employee from the DOE has ever set foot on the site — on this land to visit the landowners!"

Richardson and the other landowners agreed, they had never spoken to any of the DOE officials except one who was called saying her "books", the new revised edition of an environmental assessment, were in.

"They invite us to come to them for meetings but they don't come out here to see where they're wanting to put this thing," charged Richardson. "There was one meeting here at Richardson Seed and that was after the site location had been changed."

The section of the Richardson family's land that supplies water for it and three other sections from both the Ogalala and Santa Rosa aquifers is located on the northwest corner of the site.

This area alone averages 150 head of cattle per section during the winter season.

Richardson Seed, a business which depends greatly upon that watered section, produces seed crops such as hybrid sorghums, hybrid millets, foundation wheats, rye, barley, oats, and triticale.

"Regardless of any nuclear leakage accidents, there is going to be a psychological poisoning in the minds of consumers, buyers of our own food products," stated Richardson.

"Course that's all we produce in the long run," he laughed dryly. "That means bread, that means corn, that means beef, sugar, potatoes, onions, carrots, you name it — we grow a little bit of everything out here."

Richardson made a strong comparison to the recent nuclear disaster in Chernobyl. "The Eastern European countries are dumping loads of food because Western European countries will not buy it because of fear of radiative contamination from the Chernobyl nuclear accident," he said.

"If they spend six to eight hundred billion bucks here to characterize or dig two shafts in the area, we feel they are not going to waste it. They will use this as a repository of some kind," Richardson stated.

Characterization should only last five years, but landowners and others in the area seem to think if the government goes this far, they will not waste their money.

"The landowners within and adjoining the site will be left in limbo for a period of five years or however long the characterization will last," said Richardson.

"This is because we cannot sell our land or even make future plans because we don't know what will be in the future."

Richardson's blood pressure, even though he's getting used to the press corps, seemed to rise somewhat when facing up to losing his

Paschel miffed about landowner notification

By CINDY SMITH
Staff Writer

Approximately five days after being announced through the media, Anthony Paschel, another landowner, also received a letter in the mail saying they had chosen his land for characterization.

"We happened to be at a Task Force meeting in Amarillo when it came over the wire that the President had signed the bill for characterizing these three sites, Deaf Smith County, Nevada, and the Hansford, Wash., site," said Paschel.

That same evening Paschel, his wife, and their two sons said they got to listen to it over the news.

"It was four or five days later before the DOE ever notified us," Paschel said.

"I'm just scared to death of it," admitted Paschel in the presence of his agreeing sons. "There's just too much of a chance of ruining all the water around here, it's just scary."

The two sons, who help their father farm, sat patiently on the living-room couch as their father began to explain the importance of what "could" happen.

"It would get the Santa Rosa first because it (the shafts) would go about 1,000 to 1,500 feet below the Santa Rosa water and if anything, the heat, contamination, an accident..."

"According to the book, the heat would raise the bottom of the Santa Rosa bed up 12 feet and they 'hope' the sand will cushion it from coming on up to the surface, that's the way the first DOE book read," said Paschel.

"There's been four more books from last Friday when they called us to come into Hereford's DOE office and get it. Before that we had six other books and this morning there were five thin ones in the mail."

The books Paschel is referring to are the Environmental Assessment books that average at least a thousand pages with sectional topics which describe the characterization process "and what they are 'trying' to do!" added Paschel.

"They're always saying 'we assume it will work this way' or they 'think' or they 'believe' — but 'assume' is their big word, they're not sure of anything," said one of his sons. Paschel readily agreed.

Paschel was amazed at the latest books because in one assessment of the site, six alternative railway access corridors were announced, but it is assumed only one will actually be used.

Paschel and his family are concerned about how many more acres would be taken to build the corridor and how much more money

Local Roundup

Hospital board meets Tuesday

June's regular meeting of the Deaf Smith General Hospital District board will be at noon Tuesday in the hospital board room.

Agenda items include routine reports and items concerning a change in by-laws, preferred provider organizations, emergency room construction and an executive session.

Management seminar set

"Managing for Profits" is the title of a seminar to be sponsored by the Deaf Smith County Chamber of Commerce on Monday, June 23. The seminar will be at 7 p.m. in the Hereford Community Center.

Fred A. Snyder and Associates, a business management consultant firm, will present the seminar.

Local businesses are invited to enroll in the seminar at a fee of $20.

Juvenile Board meets Wed.

The Deaf Smith County Juvenile Board will meet at 2 p.m. Wednesday in the courthouse for a regular meeting.

would be spent on construction for the railways, not including the total dollars involved in the site already. Paschel said the No. 10 railway right-of-way goes from the site to Summerfield, that it will be 24 miles long, and just the right-of-way part will take 15,000 acres of land, 23 road crossings, two streams, and will cost $28.9 million.

"And the right of way will be one mile wide," he added looking at his chart.

"Each access route requires one grade-separated crossing (overpass) but does not include costs for acquisition of land," said Paschel.

One of the other access routes, No. 8-11, would be 28.8 miles long, take in 16,500 acres, have 10 road crossings, one stream, for $21.1 million not including price of purchase of land.

"And both of these routes will bypass Hereford completely. The Amarillo route, No. 4, would equal 34.3 miles, take in $21,950 acres of land, have 18 road crossings, cross three streams and cost $43.5 million," Paschel explained. The reason the Amarillo route costs so much is because it crosses a major highway and the access is more expensive to build because of this.

According to Paschel, the railroad right-of-way route to Bushland that is proposed to haul DOE waste will include routes 1, 3, 4, and 6. It would be 26 miles long with 22.7 miles of railroad track right of way and would need 22,210 acres with 21 road crossings, one stream crossing, and would cost $26.6 million.

"The DOE claims that the money for the construction of the repository comes from the people who use electricity from the nuclear plants, all except for the percentage of the defense waste that comes from taxpayer's dollars," Paschel said.

"For example, if they put in 10 percent for the government's waste, then the other 10 percent will come from the taxpayers," explained Paschel.

"The DOE doesn't really know what's on the surface of this site. They haven't even been out here—all they do is write stuff down in their book," Paschel said.

Paschel and his sons brought up another point. They took out a map from page 3-108 in the Environmental Assessment book May 1980, Volume I, and pointed to a single well that is located inside the site.

"We told them that there were more than one well in the site at the other meetings. It was in their first book that came out in December of 1984 that the map showed only one well on it. I know for myself that I own six wells in that site," said Paschel.

He said approximately 26 wells are located in the site and of those 26 wells, Anthony Paschel owns six irrigation wells.

One well that is no longer operating since 1964, is also shown on the map and this well belongs to Fred Paschel, who is Anthony's father who left the area in 1966. "And this site is still listed under his father's name as a pumping well but has been abandoned since 1964," stated Paschel.

Paschel's son Ralph said, "At the comment meeting held at Hereford High School in 1985, we all brought up the locations to the DOE a lot of times and the DOE claimed this was dried up pasture land. It wasn't supposed to be irrigated land according to them."

Paschel says the well map has not been changed since the 1984 EA book was published and even after residents brought it to the DOE's attention, only one well remains on the map. "The only difference between the '84 and '86 map is the location of where the hole is suppose to be drilled," added Paschel.

"They don't even know what is on this land," said Ralph. "They took a picture and found some sprinklers and now they 'assume' that some of the land or maybe all of it might be irrigated."

Ralph turned the pages in the book and flipped to Section 3, Page 191, which reads "No determination of the total amount of irrigated land at the site and vicinity has been made. However, due to the large number of pivots found within the site and vicinity, it is believed that most, if not all, of the cropland is irrigated."

"They could have found out how many irrigated acres are on this site by a simple phone call or even a phone call to the ASCS office," charged Ralph.

"They haven't done a lot of research on the top, but how many irrigated acres, how many irrigation wells, how many acres of production are they going to take out of Deaf Smith County with these proposals?" asked his father furiously. "Can anybody tell us?"

"It's hard to find out if anything's right with as much as we see wrong, the way I see it!" he added.

"What's next is to look in these books and everything says 'we assume', 'we believe', and they say it's going to be safe when they can't even tell you anything for sure," said Louis, his youngest son.

"What scares me is they almost come out and admitted, they did admit that they dropped looking for the second disposal in the east, because there are so many of the nuclear waste plants shutting down, that they're not getting the waste they need, they might try to dump everybody's waste here," Paschel said sharply.

"The site here can be enlarged by doubling it. I've heard rumors that they might enlarge this one where they say they can't enlarge the ones in Nevada and Washington."

"They claim they can't enlarge those like this one due to their smaller rock formation and the Deaf Smith County site has the largest salt formation which could encourage a larger dump," Paschel explained solemnly.

"If there is an accident, sabotage, or even leakage in that water (the Santa Rosa or the Ogallala) all the underground water in that whole basin could be contaminated. It would go north against the water pressure real slow or south pretty fast," explained Paschel.

"According to the DOE's book, if water is contaminated they will just keep taking your water rights as the contaminated water spreads."

"There won't even be drinking water in Lake Meredith. The DOE says it doesn't move but a couple of feet every hundred years when the Texas Water board says it moves faster than that."

"So the way they plan on containing it won't work," Paschel stressed. "There will be too much of the water contaminated in a short period of time."

Thinking of a simple household activity, Paschel gave a demonstration. He said, "Take boiling potatoes. You fill your pot full of water and it when it heats up, the water churns and the water starts circulating. The same thing goes for the underground water with that hot rod under there."

"If it explodes it will put off so much heat, it will boil the aquifer just like the potatoes in a pot," explained Paschel simply.

"DOE admits that the containers, in a few years, will be so hot that it will melt the salt and make it elastic," said one of the sons.

"The other big issue is human error, such as the Challenger mistake. If there's a problem they won't tell you, or they won't tell you very quick," added the older son.

"Just like Chernobyl, they had said there's been 28 accidents in the United States and you only heard about one—the Three-mile Island accident."

"How much information can DOE give us on that repository that blew up in Russia in the 50's?" asked Paschel. "Not only that, can they tell us about what's going on at the WIPP site? It was suppose to have been a high-level military waste dump but there are so many faults with it, it's low-level and now they won't talk about it!"

be used to provide a special benefit for farmers. Under the amendment, farmers could continue to use income averaging, even though the bill would deny that tax-saving device to other Americans.

"At this stage we are past the major amendments," Packwood said.

He added that he has yet to see any significant amendment that he could accept or that he thinks could pass.

"We are clearly over the hump on the major" amendments, Packwood said.

In other action Friday, the Senate rejected, 51-44, an amendment that would have allowed a partial deduction for charitable contributions made by people who do not itemize their deductions.

The deduction for non-itemizers is due to expire at the end of the year and the bill would not retain it.

land to a nuclear waste dump.

"The DOE has totally ignored public input into the selection process," Richardson charged. "We (the opponents) have had 'THE' experts in many fields of hydrology, aquifers, socioeconomic effects, the experts in these fields... and they (the DOE) still won't listen."

Richardson added that this is the basic problem, the DOE has totally ignored what they've said.

"In effect, they're making a mockery of what they call 'public participation.' Public participation... that's really the basic nuts and bolts of the problem right now."

Richardson explained that not just for the landowners, but for everyone, the biggest basic fear is contamination of the aquifers.

"It is a remote possibility, we admit it, but the effect if it were contaminated," he said shaking his head, "is so terrible—why consider even taking a chance?"

"You'd eliminate life-human life on the central plains of the United States as we know it, due to the aquifer supplying water through eight different states all the way to South Dakota," said Richardson, noting that he's studied the topic intensely.

"The penalty is so great it is foolish to even risk it," he said bluntly, without getting riled.

"We're just here. We can't progress or regress in any position. Our property is unsalable and we don't know how long we'll be in this position."

Richardson Seed, their family business, produces 50 to 60 million pounds of seed per year and employs approximately 28 full-time workers.

"We maintain the breeders and foundation lines of wheat that in 1984 accounted for 8 1/4 million acres in the hard red winter wheat belt," informed Richardson. It is a 'unique' business! There is no other operation like it that can do what it does.

"No other seed companies have maintained such a large quantity of foundation and breeders seed increases," he stressed.

He added that this is one of many public opinions the DOE has ignored. The DOE states in its proposal to consider any unique industries. And Richardson is dead sure this is one of those industries.

Richardson closed this subject and turned to the idea that, by popular opinion, the waste dump site "might" increase population and boost the economy.

"So far there have been a few developers that have attempted to buy the land between the site and 385 and they have been very unsuccessful."

There is a general unity between residents in the site area and Richardson said they don't want it there.

"For one thing," said Richardson, "Vega's future water supply is in that site and they (the DOE) haven't answered what they are going to do for water for Vega."

As landowners, Richardson said they think the DOE should at least supply Vega with water. "Surely they're not going to let Vega dry up, literally," he added.

Concerning the population issue Richardson commented, "According to the DOE Vega will only increase approximately 2.5 percent (20 families) in population."

"The DOE cannot be doing an impartial, objective scientific study if they continue to ignore the public opinions and facts," he stated. "They are attempting to justify the a pre-determined site selection... In a nutshell, that is it."

"There are a lot of unanswered questions floating around. Probably there will be a good chance that the contractor will be a foreign firm such as the WIPP site had with the Japanese contractor or another bidder on that site was a German firm," Richardson said. "All the profits would go back to those countries not leaving much for Amarillo, Hereford, Vega, and the area."

The next problem Richardson's thoughts steered toward seemed to be the inexperience of the United States government.

"Two shafts of this size through major aquifers have never been done before," said Richardson solemnly. "So the whole process is experimental—it simply has never been done."

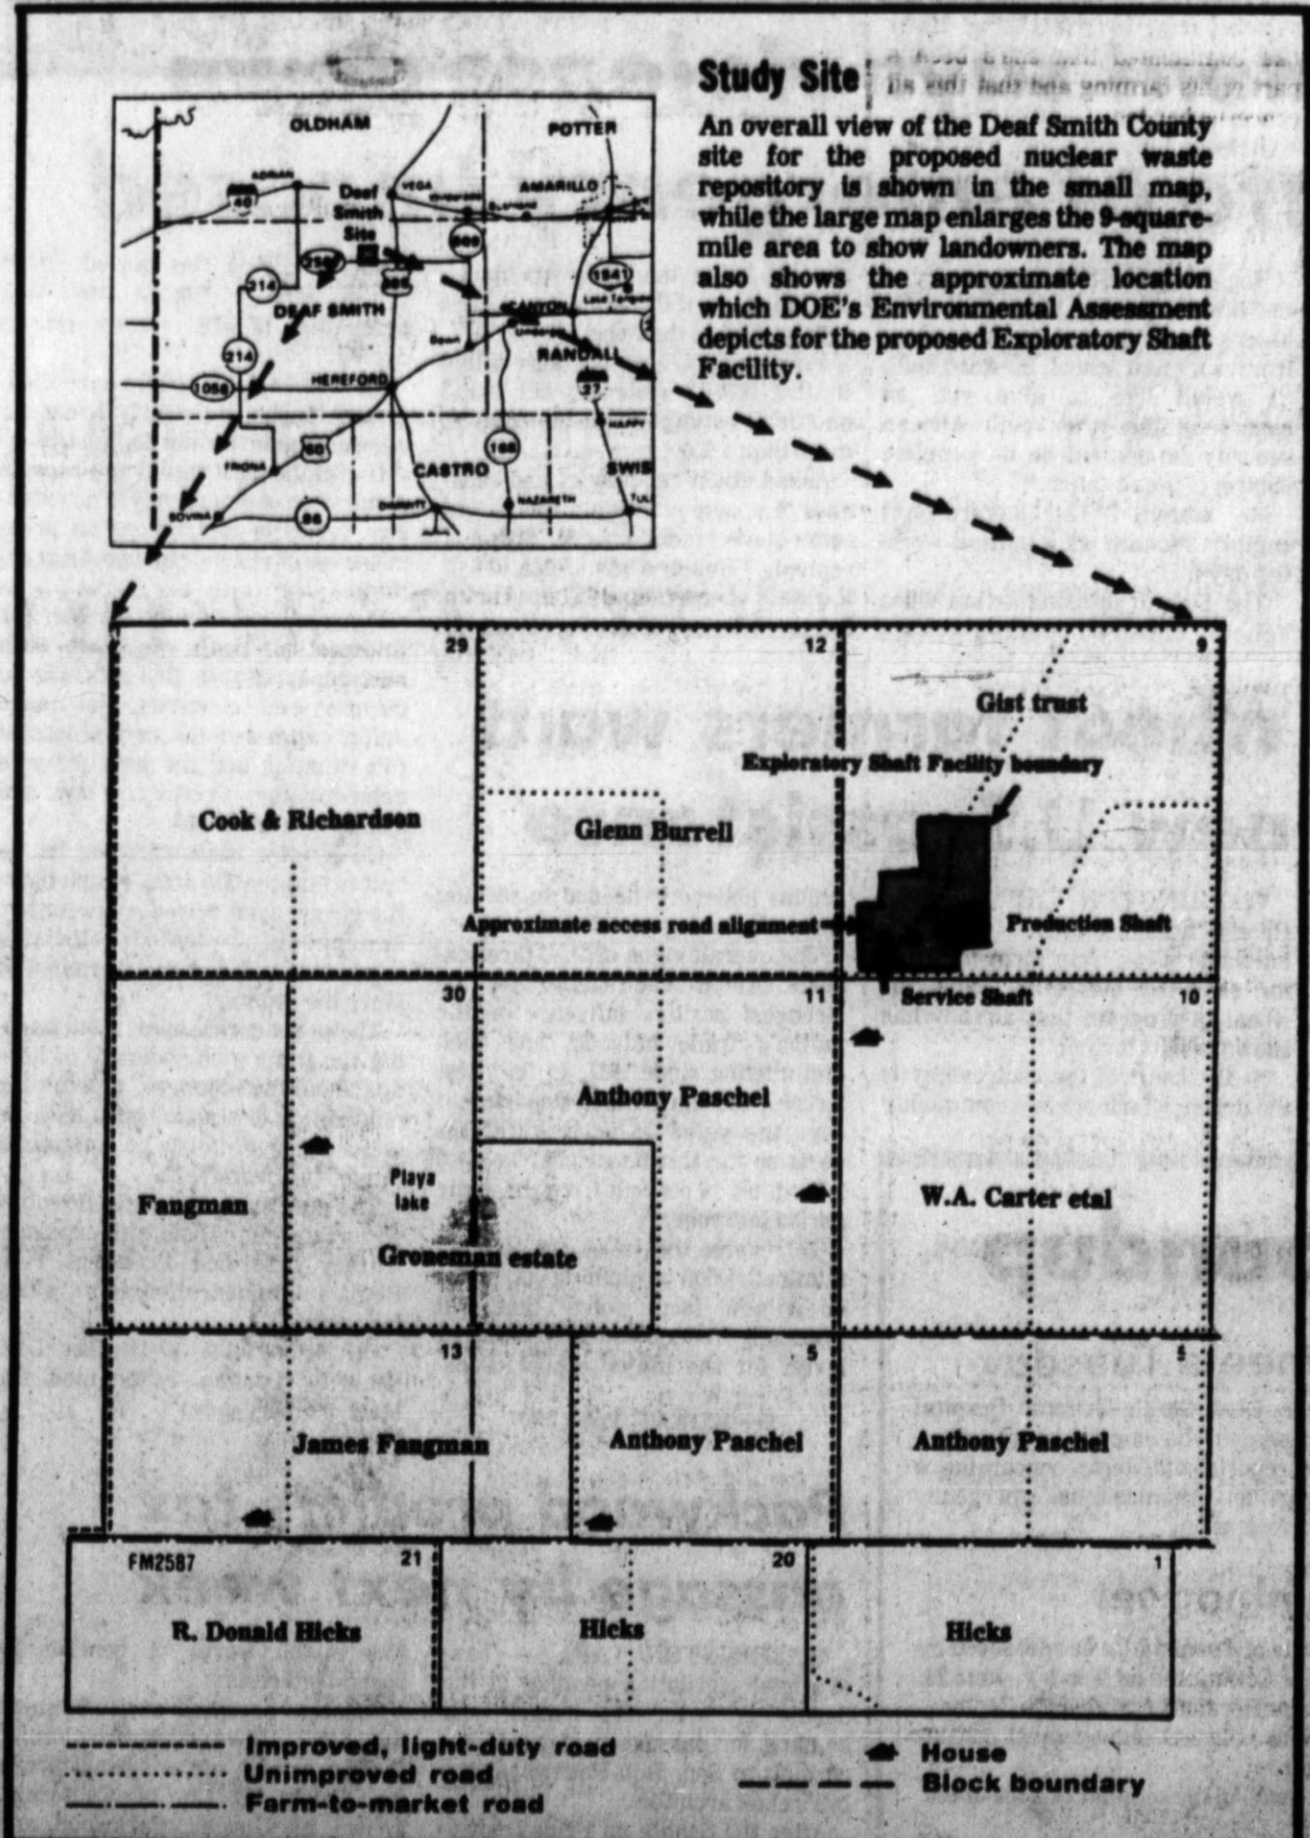

"This whole area is the guinea pig, not just us, everybody that likes to have water to drink, everybody that likes to take a shower, or have water to wash their clothes is a guinea pig."

Presently, Richardson and the other landowners are baffled that the government has launched such a massive project without being accurate on its information. Even talking by phone or in person seems to be hard for the DOE to accomplish.

He believes the DOE only communicates by mail through thousand-page books or maybe by phone if someone doesn't come in to pick up their latest, "revised" editions.

"They've done such sloppy work so far," said Richardson, he said he didn't mind it being written down. He's told the DOE people this to their faces. "The investigation has been so sloppy that we just have no confidence in their ability to even do a good job of the site characterization, let alone construct a repository and maintain it," Richardson said, distrustfully.

WHEAT

Lower prices should make U.S. commodities more competitive in the international marketplace, the policymakers believe.

The most extreme manifestation of that policy is the marketing loan, which drops effective prices to the world level almost instantly.

Under the program, farmers may borrow money using their crop as collateral. But instead of paying back the full amount, as has always been the case with price-support loans, producers need only repay an amount equal to the prevailing world price for the commodity. The rest of the loan is forgiven.

The policy has proven effective for rice, turning around export prospects almost overnight. But it also has been expensive, because the government replaces every dollar in lower prices with a dollar of farmer subsidies.

Landowner skeptical about nuclear $$$

By CINDY SMITH
Staff Writer

Donald Hicks, another site landowner, has come to grips with the nuclear repository site but is definitely bitter about it.

"The sad thing about this whole situation is that the people are looking at what it could bring them economically," said Hicks.

"What we're discouraged about here is that the Amarillo and the Hereford Chamber of Commerce and people in Hereford are looking at the dollar signs that's going to be spent in the characterization of this nuclear dump.

"In the first place, Linda McClain from DOE has promised the people in Hereford and Amarillo that there will be over 600 people that will be employed by the dump out here," Hicks said.

"According to the figures at the WIPP site in Carlsbad, N.M., they promised the same thing to their people. But actually they employed less than half of what they promised and according to their own reports, after the completion of the WIPP site. Their unemployment is running over 26 percent."

Hicks said the people at the WIPP site are in worse shape now than they've ever been due to a water leak causing a crack in the concrete walls to move constantly.

According to Don Hancock of Southwest Research in Albuquerque, N.M., who is a personal friend of Hicks, the salt in Deaf Smith County will move a lot more due to the different salt content. "Our salt here is a lot worse than that at the WIPP site," explained Hicks.

"The Ogalala aquifer is the largest, fresh underground aquifer in the world and it flows in parts of eight states," said Hicks. "One mistake, one accident in our aquifer could cause more trouble than the disaster in Russia because their leakage is not in water."

"Very few local people were not even employed at the WIPP site," he continued.

"The steel was imported from the Japanese and the contractor was a German who had never had any experience in constructing a site like this before, we've (the High Plains Underground Water Conservation District) had engineers check all this out before," he added.

"The site is strictly a political maneuver in every shape, form, and fashion," said Hicks, commenting that Hancock thinks the same thing.

"DOE has told the Chamber of Commerce that they will need a 150 homes immediately in Hereford. They also told Vega that there will be from 25 to 40 extra families.

"From all the information that we can receive," said Hicks, "the majority of the people will live in Amarillo.

"They're going to have to purchase all nine sections of land. And if they complete the characterization, they've already got control of the site," Hicks said bluntly.

"Deaf Smith County is the No. 1 county in the state of Texas in production. In the last 20 years, Deaf Smith County has been either No. 1 or 2 in production of grain, livestock, sugar beets, and other farm products. In the last 20 years, Deaf Smith County has made the second best production only twice in the past 20 years..." said Hicks proudly.

Hicks reflected back to his own personal pride and said "We've spent 45 years out here on our land and when we think about what this is going to do to agriculture in this area, and Holly Sugar, Frito Lay, and Arrowhead Mills—which have already said they're going to move—they'll be forced to relocate..."

"When you think about what will happen when all these businesses leave, the businesses that have built Hereford into the greatest agricultural area in the United States, the businesses that we've worked so hard for in the past 25 years, is that going to be such a big benefit to Hereford, when you're promised a few big dollars and a few jobs to come out here and work this characterization?" asked Hicks.

"They've told us that they're going to spend anywhere from $600-$900 million dollars on characterization. And all of this happening during a distressed period for agriculture is causing people to not stop and think of the seriousness of this nuclear waste repository," Hicks said.

"The WIPP site—they promised them the same thing they have promised us here," he said being calm. "Actually, of all the money they have spent on the WIPP site, according to Hancock, less than 1 1/4 percent was actually spent in Carlsbad, N.M."

"It was a very small percentage that was returned to the community of Carlsbad," added Mildred, his wife. "They were expecting their economy to prosper so much and I think they have definitely been disappointed."

Mildred and her husband sit together to go over this thing. Hicks had commented that she's been a part of his farming and that this all concerns her too.

Hicks and his wife both have their own copies of the DOE environmental assessment book, which they mark up like Bibles for reference, but don't respect near as much of.

"I just think it's unbelievable that the DOE would choose this site after all the information they've been given by all the people in the area, the research center in Albuquerque, from the Texas Governor's office, even from the Texas Agricultural Department. They've had all this information and all the time they keep saying it doesn't suit them," said Mrs. Hicks.

"DOE has lost all credibility with me," she said angrily. "You see this house right here, well, the other day I was looking in this book and see out that door—there sits two trailer houses and they're not on this map!"

Mildred and her husband also brought up another chart they believe is inaccurate, on Section 4, Page 69 of the EA 1986 book. This map lists grazed and ungrazed pasture which Mildred said was charted wrong for their part of the land.

The Hicks are also concerned about 34 bore holes that are listed and how much land that will take up.

"We saw in the Amarillo paper that part of our land was going to be in the nine square miles," said Mildred.

"We had no idea—we had never seen anything like this, and in the same article the landowners were asked to come to a meeting in Hereford," recalled Mildred remembering her biggest fears coming true.

"If they came on out on our place we would not talk to them or say anything, not say one thing to them, we would just say, 'If you want to talk to our lawyers, fine!' and then we'd give them the number," said Mildred expressing her opinion of the DOE.

"The DOE has never contacted any of us. We've all been together dozens of times and nobody has ever talked to anybody out here," she said.

Mrs. Hicks, like her husband, believes there are ulterior motives.

"The Nuclear Regulatory Commission commissioned the DOE to choose three more sites for a second repository and just recently the DOE said there will be no second repository and they dropped the second site," said Mrs. Hicks.

"We read where they will just develop the first site and enlarge it and dump all the United States and even foreign countries' nuclear waste in this repository," said Mrs. Hicks.

"They will just keep taking, and taking..."

Hicks said that Hancock had also said that when this site is constructed there could well be over a 100,000 acres taken by the government. This would be Deaf Smith and Oldham Counties both.

It has also been rumored that there will be an atomsmasher located here in the Panhandle too. And the atomsmasher is believed to be 15 miles in radius.

"You talk about the Gestapo in Russia, well it's getting like that right here," said Hicks, agitated. "You been out here working all your life and they're going to come and say "Boop—you're gone!"

Hick's wife added that "they ought to go back and start over, look for the safest place in the United States and don't let politics get involved."

Intensifying the whole situation, Mrs. Hicks stated her case. "If I thought this was the right thing to do, I would be willing to sacrifice for it. But I'm a grandmother, I've got grandchildren, I've got two little twin grandkids... But it's not right and I want my grandkids to have this land!"

"I'd like to leave it for our son and his children," chimed Hicks. "I'd rather give it to my grandchildren and family if they want it, rather give it to them than that damn repository!"

"You think about it," said Hicks getting mad, "when we've owned this land for 45 years and then they come in here and tell us about this dump."

"We've got 3,200 acres and if they come in here and do what they want, we won't have anything left. In fact, no one will..." concluded Hicks.

Honor America

"Honor America", a continuing program to remind Americans about the values of citizenship and their national heritage, will be observed from Flag Day, June 14, to Independence Day, July 4.

The 21-day salute, sponsored by the American Historic and Culture Society, encourages all citizens to display the American flag every day for this period. Congress has also designated 1986 as "The Year of the Flag", urging citizens to study the flag and its history and to display the flag more often.

Citizens can participate in this Honor American program by displaying the flag, taking an active role in meeting your community's problems-bearing in mind the common good of the greatest number, and by encouraging the young to understand the opportunities and the responsibilities inherent in our constitutional system.

Any positive action in this program will help each of us celebrate the Fourth of July with a feeling of accomplishment.

Some excerpts from the Congressional resolution to commemorate the "Year of the Flag" include:

The Flag is symbolic of the territorial development of the Nation, the effort, sacrifice and love of country that made such development possible.

The stars of the Flag represent the number of States in the Union today, and the stripes the number of States in the initial Union.

The colors of the Flag signify qualities of the human spirit for which all Americans strive: red for hardiness and courage; white for purity and innocence, blue for vigilance and justice.

A commemorative year would serve to heighten such interest in and awareness of the Flag, and celebrations honoring the Flag, especially with the rededication of the Statue of Liberty, and next year as we celebrate the Bicentennial of the Constitution.

Hard times

With all of the bad news on the economic front, a great many people in Texas and elsewhere are beginning to compare the current hard times with the Great Depression of the 1930s.

It is not a valid comparison. Things would have to get a whole lot worse and stay that way for a lot of years before they would even approach the misery of the Great Depression.

What makes it tough in our area is that a depression has hit our basic sources of income. Agriculture has been suffering for several years and more lately the oil and gas industry has hit the skids.

The brief oil boom that pumped a lot of money into local trade channels faded away. Independent producers who a few years ago were spending money quite freely have gone belly up. The big oil companies have cut budgets and laid off thousands. The resulting fallout has spread to all other lines of business.

Surplus grain is piled up from years of overproduction and much of our export market has been lost to foreign competition.

Farmers are hard put to figure out a crop to raise that will bring in a profit.

But when you look back 50 years ago you find that a combination of Drought and Depression provided the knockout punch.

It was not only a U.S. Depression, it was a world wide depression. Nobody had any money.

Banks failed, families were forced off the farm, people stood in soup lines, there was no money anywhere.

Social Security was not born in 1936 and there were no benefits for retired workers. There was no Aid to Families with Dependent Children, no Medicare for the elderly or Medicaid for the poor.

Laid off workers had no unemployment benefits and unemployment was at least a fourth of the nation's workers.

Franklin D. Roosevelt went into office in 1932 with a promise of restoring better times to America. He pushed through Congress a long list of bills designed to prime the pump, to provide jobs of some sort even though the government was the employer.

The New Deal legislation did get things moving again and FDR is credited with bringing America out of the Depression. It has to be remembered, however, that in 1940 and 1941 Americans were not much better off than in 1932. It took World War II to pump billions into the work force and turn things around.

The fact that this progress was made with borrowed money hasn't seemed to bother most Americans, any more than the fact that the dollar has eroded to a fraction of what it was worth in the Depression.

Times are tough now, to be sure. But to compare today with the Great Depression is to admit that you never experienced the latter.

The Penultimate Word

CHURCHES AND PREACHERS

Will Rogers used to say, "I am not a member of any organized political party, I am a Democrat." If my bunch doesn't shape up pretty soon I am going to start saying, "I am not a member of any Christian denomination, I am a Baptist."

A couple of years ago I decided to visit all of the churches possible. I have given it a pretty good shot. I thought I would have the basis for an article on comparative religion. I did not get very much material.

The one thing that has impressed me as I have visited around is how much we are alike. We go through different motions. We use different levels of intensity, but there really isn't that much difference. I heard a story about two churches of the same brand that were located across the street from each other.

Someone asked one of the members what the differences were. The member replied, "Oh, there is a lot of difference. Those folks over there believe that Pharaoh's daughter found baby Moses in the bullrushes. We believe that was just her story."

One of the similarities I have noticed is how much of our religion, our worship, and our attendance is dependant on the popularity of the preacher. It is almost as if we go to church to check the guy out. We sort of hire the guy to be religious and our role is to go by once a week to judge the performance to see if we are getting our money's worth.

If he is not witty and charming, and does not let us out by 12:00, then there is no way we can worship. That seems sort of cockeyed when you think about it. Why should his performance dictate our performance? Wouldn't it be great to be able to worship whether we liked the minister or not?

Our main interest seems to be in how long the deal lasts. Preaching is a great racket. A preacher works one day per week and everyone he works for wants him to work shorter hours then.

This is a funny world, and it doesn't get any less funny on Sunday, does it?

Warm Fuzzies,

U.S. Chamber Voice of Business

Privatization: get used to that word

WASHINGTON - Privatization. It sounds ugly—but you'd better get used to it.

Stemming from the verb "privatize," which the dictionary defines as "to alter the status of (as a business or industry) from public to private control or ownership," this simple word and simple idea have produced a raging debate in budget-conscious Washington.

The Reagan administration has included several privatization initiatives in its 1987 budget, inspired by privatization's remarkable success in 50 nations—most notably in Great Britain, where the government has sold 15 nationalized industries and realized nearly $27 billion over the past several years.

Such asset sales are attractive for many reasons. Not the least of these is the prospect of immediate cash. The Heritage Foundation, a Washington think-tank, estimates the proposed sale of the five regional power marketing administrations would bring in $62 billion. That is $18 billion more than the savings required under the Gramm-Rudman-Hollings law next year.

Budget savings will also be found in the elimination of subsidies. And a transferred asset will not only stop draining federal coffers—in private hands it will produce revenues for the government. U.S. Chamber economists Ronald Utt and William Orzechowski point out that the Postal Service's private competitors pay $400 million a year in taxes. With its revenue base, a privatized Postal Service would pay over $1 billion annually.

Finally, the beneficiaries of government programs would be served more efficiently. The best example is Britain's transfer of more than 500,000 units of government-subsidized housing to tenants at bargain-basement prices. Not only is government freed of an obligation, but the owners show pride and concern about caring for their property that was not evident when they were mere renters.

So why would anyone oppose privatization? Critics argue that government is losing more than it would gain. Some claim sales of loan portfolios, for example, would bring in less than if the government collected the loans.

That argument ignores the fact that government is so inefficient that it costs up to four times as much to collect a loan as in the private sector and it writes off loans under $600. No wonder the government is owed $64.6 billion in delinquent loans.

Others, like former British Conservative Party leader Harold MacMillan, insist government is giving up "the crown jewels." But is there any good reason why the federal government must own 90 percent of Nevada? It doesn't own 90 percent of, say, Pennsylvania.

No, the real issue in privatization can be found in the definition I cited earlier. Circle the word "control."

Privatization addresses the basic question of what government should and shouldn't do. Is the government the most efficient allocator of resources? Can the market be trusted to serve our needs or must we depend on government's guiding hand?

An "aye" for privatization is a vote for the power of the people. As with budget and tax cuts and deregulation, it requires advocates of big government to relinquish one more symbol of their power to control.

That's why it's so hard for Washington to let go of government assets—and why we must pull all the harder to free them.

Fathers: they smooth the way

A father is a thing that is forced to endure childbirth without an anesthetic.

A father is a thing that grows when it feels good...and laughs very loud when it's scared half to death.

A father is sometimes accused of giving too much time to his business when the little ones are growing up. That's partly fear, too.

Fathers are much more easily frightened than mothers.

A father never feels entirely worthy of the worship in a child's eyes.

He's never quite the hero his daughter thinks...never quite the man his son believes him to be...and this worries him, sometimes.

So he works too hard to try and smooth the rough places in the road for those of his own who will follow him.

A father is a thing that gets very angry when the first school grades aren't as good as he thinks they should be.

He scolds his son...though he knows it's the teacher's fault.

A father is a thing that goes away to war, sometimes...

And learns to swear and shoot and spit through his teeth and would run the other way except that this war is part of his only important job in life...which is making the world better for his child than it has been for him.

Fathers grow old faster than people.

Because they, in other wars, have to stand at the train station and wave goodbye to the uniform that climbs aboard...

And while mothers can cry where it shows...

Fathers have to stand there and beam outside...and die inside.

Fathers have very stout hearts, so they have to be broken sometimes or no one would know what's inside.

Fathers are what give daughters away to other men who aren't nearly good enough...so they can have grandchildren that are smarter than anybody's.

Fathers fight dragons...almost daily.

Fathers hurry away from the breakfast table...

Off to the arena which is sometimes called an office or a workshop...

There, with callused, practiced hands they tackle the dragon with three heads...

Weariness, Work and Monotony.

And they never quite win the fight but they never give up.

Knights in shining armor...

Fathers in shiny trousers...there's little difference...

As they march away to each workday.

Fathers make bets with insurance companies about who'll live the longest.

Though they know the odds they keep right on betting...

Even as the odds get higher and higher...they keep right on betting...more and more.

And one day they lose.

But fathers enjoy an earthly immortality...and the bet's paid off to the part of him he leaves behind.

I don't know...where fathers go...when they die.

But I've an idea that after a good rest...wherever it is...he won't be happy unless there's work to do.

He won't just sit on a cloud and wait for the girl he's loved and the children she bore...

He'll be busy there, too...repairing the stairs...oiling the gates...improving the streets...smoothing the way.

Bootleg Philosopher

Editor's note: The Bootleg Philosopher on his Johnson grass farm on Tierra Blanca Creek has cleaned out a desk drawer, with these results.

Dear editor:

An assortment of notes found in my desk drawer:

When a big dope bust is made, police report it has a street value of say a million dollars. I don't believe the street people have that kind of money. Some of that dope must be going to upper stories in high-rise apartments and office buildings.

I don't have the exact figures, but I think there were 4,392 car chases on TV the past 12 months.

I've heard of phones ringing off the hook but I've never seen it happen. I let mine ring 25 times once but it stayed put. Anybody who'd ring me that many times wants to reach me worse than I want to be reached.

We've all heard of financial monkey business among defense contractors, how they over-charge and falsify bills. We've heard of welfare cheats, of doctors who abuse Medicare payments, of student loan violations, of disappearing military funds. And now a high official of the Postal Service is being investigated.

All of this demonstrates a law of human nature: When a lot of government money is involved, a lot of skulduggery will be evolved. Therefore when Congress appropriates big money for a project is should hire two sets of watchdogs, one to watch the people who disperse the money, the other to watch the watchdogs.

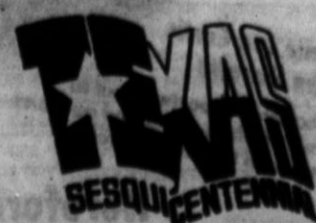

Some states are testing teachers for competency. New York State is considering testing doctors for competency. First thing you know somebody will propose testing editors and columnists. This has gone far enough.

Yours faithfully,
J.A.

West Texas investigators say

Truth not much like fiction

By DENISE E. SWIBOLD The Odessa American

ODESSA, Texas (AP) — Nancy Drew never trailed unfaithful wives and snapped photographs of them in secret embraces with lovers.

Joe and Frank Hardy never wound up with knives to their backs while questioning customers in a gay bar.

Real-life Odessa sleuths say the job requires close brushes with such aspects of life's underside. More often, it involves the tedium of knocking on door after door while chasing down a lead.

"I get a call a week from some dork who wants to become a PI because he's heard it's glamorous," said 27-year-old Cathy Griffin, one of Odessa's seven or so private investigators.

"When you sit up all night in a car and freeze with your binoculars — that's not glamorous," she said. "The one high-speed chase I ever had, I got pulled over."

"A lot of it is just beating the pavement," said Ms. Griffin, who started her one-woman operation in 1983 after seven years as a TV news reporter.

She works chiefly through Odessa attorneys who want her to investigate unfaithful wives or husbands or unsavory mothers or fathers for evidence to be used in divorce proceedings or custody battles.

Other jobs call for probing murder cases, locating missing people and, sometimes, helping businesses collect overdue bills, she said.

Ms. Griffin recalled that her father warned about her line of work. "When you go around snooping in people's business, you're liable to get killed," he told her.

"There's always that fear of getting yanked out of your car at night," she admitted.

Ms. Griffin's one close call ended safely after she talked her way free from a woman with a gun who didn't like being tailed, she said.

"When you're dealing in people's private lives, it puts you in a position for anything," she said.

Mike Perkins, chief investigator for the Odessa firm of Harper Inc., agrees that risk sometimes is present on the job, but it's usually overblown by television, magazines and movies.

"What we do is not necessarily dangerous," said Perkins, 41, who started the agency in 1982. "I don't even own a handgun."

He admits to two close calls, one in a gay bar in Albuquerque, N.M., when a man put a knife to his back as Perkins questioned the man's lover.

Perkins' partner flashed a gun, and the two detectives fled the bar unharmed, he said.

"High-speed chases — we've gotten into a few of those," he said.

In one, "we had three Hell's Angels trap us north of town," he said.

But Perkins' Corvette proved faster than motorcycles that night, he said.

Such incidents are few and far between, the detective said, and for the most part, "I pride myself on being able to talk myself out of anything."

With 60 to 70 percent of the agency's work done on criminal cases, Perkins and his five detectives work arm-in-arm with defense attorneys in preparing cases for trial.

Such investigations can involve visiting the crime scene, tracking down witnesses, evaluating autopsies in murder cases and helping select jurors and taking notes on courtroom testimony, he said.

Each staffer has an investigative specialty to offer, he said. Perkins is a self-taught expert on selecting sympathetic jurors, while other investigators know how to deal with product liability, child custody or business cases, he said.

But the key to each detective's knowledge is in locating the right people and getting them to talk about a case, he said.

Other skills include following cars, which Perkins calls "the hardest thing in the world" to do.

Watching houses and taking photographs also are part of the tasks, said Perkins. He said he has found himself climbing telephone poles and dumpsters to get the right shot through an open window.

"We don't take dirty pictures as a normal thing," he said. These days, Perkins said, "I turn down more of that stuff than I take."

Child custody case investigations are among the trickiest, Perkins said. It's often the private detective's job to find out if a mother or father is involved in something unsavory, like prostitution or drugs, he said.

"They don't want you investigating them."

"There are times that I have thought this a stummy business," said Ms. Griffin.

But for the most part, she said, "I'm paid to do a job. I'm not personally involved in the situation."

"There have been some cases that I'm glad to be a part of," Ms. Griffin said. A recent South Texas investigation by Ms. Griffin ended with a 2-year-old being removed from a family that had a three-generation history of child molestation, she said.

"My most rewarding cases are the ones that may pay the least, but where justice has been served," she said.

Private detectives are depicted in movies and on television as free-wheeling.

But real-life private investigators are bound by legal and ethical considerations, Ms. Griffin said.

Detectives who operate agencies must be licensed with the state, cannot carry guns while working and aren't permitted to pass themselves off as lawmen or government agency representatives, said Rudy Pedregon, who investigates private investigators.

As operator of the El Paso office of the Texas Board of Private Investigators and Private Security Agencies, Pedregon monitors complaints about detectives in the Odessa-Midland area.

Private eyes must abide by the same laws governing harassment, privacy, trespassing and other infringements that are imposed on average citizens, he said.

Porter, Sarchet set August 2 wedding

Mr. and Mrs. Elmer Lee Porter of Bluejacket, Okla., announce the engagement of their daughter, Patricia Marlene to James Sarchet, son of Mr. and Mrs. James Lee Sarchet, Hooker, Okla.

The bride-elect, a 1981 graduate of Bluejacket High School, attended Northeastern A&M in Miami, Okla. She received her bachelor of science degree in elementary education from Oklahoma State University in December of 1985. She is currently employed at First National Bank and Trust Co., Miami, Okla.

Bridal shower is held for Kristy Simons

A bridal shower was held Saturday afternoon for Kristy Simons, bride-elect of Garry Parman. The shower was held in the home of Mrs. Constaline Lee and the bride's colors were peach and teal.

The table was decorated with a centerpiece made of silk flowers in the brides colors and featured matching napkins, silver appointments, and a coordinating white lace table cloth overlaid on a peach liner.

Julie Simons, the bride's sister, registered guests while guests were greeted at the door by Mrs. Otis Lee.

The bride and groom's mothers, Jenna Simons and Darlene Cannon greeted guests in a receiving line while friends of the bride, Missy Wilcox and Tiffy West served refreshments.

The prospective bridegroom graduated from Hooker High School in 1978 and attended Panhandle State University in Goodwell, Okla. He received his doctorate of veterinary medicine from Oklahoma State University in May of 1985 and is now an associate veterinarian with Hereford Veterinary Clinic.

The couple plan an August second wedding at First Baptist Church of Bluejacket, Okla.

As exercise of state's 'police power'

Literacy exam is ruled legal

By KEN HERMAN Associated Press Writer

AUSTIN (AP) — The literacy exam administered to all Texas educators was a legal exercise of the state's "police power," a state appeals court ruled on Friday.

The 3rd Court of Appeals in Austin upheld State District Judge Harley Clark's order which had cleared the way for 202,000 teachers and administrators to take the test in March.

Ninety-seven percent of them passed the reading and writing exam that was mandated by the Legislature in 1984 as part of the education reform package.

The Texas State Teachers Association filed a lawsuit that said the test is illegal because the state's educators have teaching certificates that were issued for life.

Robert Chanin of Washington, general counsel for the National Education Association, argued the case Wednesday before three justices of the 3rd Court of Appeals.

He said the teaching certificates are contracts that are "permanent and valid for life," and it is unconstitutional for the state to make educators take a test to keep the certificates.

But the appeals court ruled quickly and unanimously. Friday's decision will allow the Texas Supreme Court to get the case. That court plans to consolidate it with several other legal challenges to the Texas Examination of Current Administrators and Teachers.

Chief Justice Bob Shannon's opinion for the 3rd Court of Appeals said the Legislature has "broad and comprehensive" power to pass laws based upon "the public need for safety, health, security and protection of the general welfare of the community."

"The Legislature, in the exercise of the police power, may regulate occupations and professions," Shannon said. "Many occupational and professional regulatory schemes have been upheld as valid exercises of the police power."

"Because regulation of the teaching profession and of the public education system is a valid exercise of the police power, this court has concluded that any impairment of appellants' rights which has occurred is justified as an incident to the valid exercise of the police power," he said.

The appeals court also overruled TSTA's claim that lawmakers had intended for educators to be tested in their subject areas, not only on basic reading and writing skills. The 1984 school reform act did include subject-area exams, but lawmakers did not appropriate money for those tests.

G.E.D. Testing

For adult residents of Texas, 17 years of age and up. Parent's permission for 17-year-olds required. I.D. required. Satisfactory scores qualify for Texas Education Agency Certificate of High School Equivalency. $15.00 Fee. Next tests June 16 and 17, 1986 at 8:30, sharp, at School Administration Building.

Including the 1985 season, Pete Rose, playing-manager of the Cincinnati Reds, made 100 or more hits in 23 consecutive seasons. The 1961 New York Yankees, led by Roger Maris with 61, hit 240 home runs to set a team record for the major leagues. Elvin Hayes is the all-time leader in personal fouls in NBA competition with 4,193.

To generate electricity why not use... Wind? Solar? Nuclear?

The technology is not yet available to economically harness the wind... or the sun to generate electricity. And, you're well aware of the problems with nuclear. So, we're glad we chose coal. It saved you, our customers, over $215 million last year. But our research into other energy sources has not stopped.

We're dedicated to keeping the cost of electricity as low as possible.

WHY

Do About 50 Million People Belong To Credit Unions?

The answer's simple. You'll get lower rates on loans and higher interest on savings plans. Credit unions are not banks, and because of that, they're able to offer you a little better deal on their services. But like banks, your money will be insured for up to $100,000.

So with the same security you'll get with banks, a better deal on savings accounts and a better deal on loans... shouldn't the question be, "why aren't you a member of a credit union?" We think so. Why not contact us and we'll be happy to answer all your questions.

Game-winning RBI is strange statistic

By GARY CHRISTENSEN
Sports Editor

The game-winning RBI is certainly one of the strangest statistics in major league baseball.

The way it is now, a player can bat in a run in the second inning, giving his team a 1-0 lead, and still be credited with a game-winning RBI if his team wins by such a score as 7-4.

That happens when, according to the rules regarding this statistic, the winning team did not lose the lead after gaining it early in the game. A player is credited with the game-winning RBI, even if the opponents eventually score more than one run.

The rule would make more sense if several specifics were made part of the game-winning RBI statistic. The generality of the rule gives a player a game-winning RBI when the game is decided by a large margin in the early innings.

Here are some hypothetical illustrations which show how confusing this statistic is:

1. Bob Horner hits a bases-empty home run in the first inning, giving the Atlanta Braves a 1-0 lead over the San Diego Padres. Braves pitcher Zane Smith pitches a shutout, and Atlanta eventually defeats San Diego 7-0.

The current rules would give Horner a game-winning RBI. But since several of his teammates also drove in runs, Horner was not really a "hero" in game - rather, Smith would be the real hero with his pitching. But should Horner still be credited with a game-winning RBI?

2. Take the same first inning as in illustration No. 1, except that Atlanta wins the game 1-0. Horner, it seems, should certainly be credited a game-winning RBI, because without his home run, the game would have gone into extra innings. But in illustration No. 1, Atlanta would still have won without Horner's first-inning homer; hence, was it really a game-winning hit, or not?

3. Pete Rose hits a two-run double in the second inning to give the Cincinnati Reds a 2-0 lead over the San Francisco Giants. The Giants score one run in the fifth inning, but the Reds score five runs in the sixth inning for a 7-1 lead.

The Giants rally in the bottom of the ninth inning, but the rally falls one run short, and the Reds win 7-6. Since the Reds did not lose the lead that Rose first gave them in the second inning, he is, under the current rules, credited with a game-winning RBI.

But if the seventh run for Cincinnati was batted in on a single by Dave Parker, it could be argued that Parker's RBI scored the seventh run of the game and that he should have the game-winning RBI given to him.

(Are you beginning to see the weirdness of this major league baseball statistic?)

4. Lee Lacy of the Baltimore Orioles recently hit three home runs in one game, driving in six runs in an 18-9 win for Baltimore over the New York Yankees.

Let's say Lacy did get hit his three home runs, but the final score was 6-0. Since Lacy was the only Oriole to bat in any runs in the game, should he be credited with the game-winning RBI or not? It's not like illustration No. 1 in which Horner was not the only player who batted in runs for Atlanta in a 7-0 victory.

5. The St. Louis Cardinals and the New York Mets are tied 3-3 after nine innings of play. In the top of the 10th inning, Jack Clark hits a grand slam home run to give the Cardinals a 7-3 lead.

In the bottom of the 10th, Gary Carter of the Mets hits a three-run homer, but the Mets score no more runs and lose to the Cardinals 7-6. Clark should certainly be credited with the game-winning RBI in this hypothetical case.

6. Take the same illustration as No. 5, except that Clark hits a two-run homer in the top of the 10th inning, and Ozzie Smith adds a two-run double for the Cardinals' 7-3 lead.

Carter hits his three-run homer in the bottom of the 10th, but the Cardinals hold on for the 7-6 victory over the Mets. Under current rules, Clark still gets the game-winning RBI. But the actual seventh and deciding run was batted in by Smith.

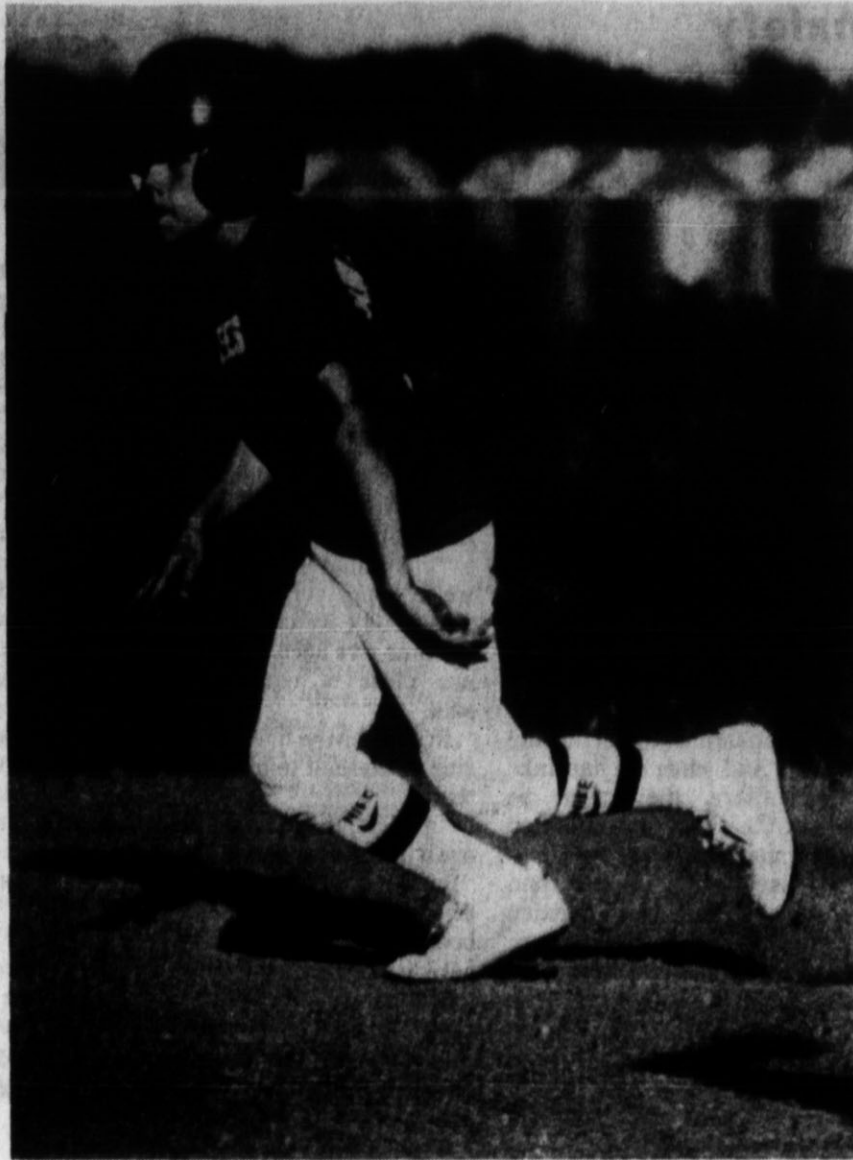

What, then should be done regarding this major league baseball statistic?

My answer would be that this statistic should not be used, until a large number of actual games are analyzed to determine just about all the possibilities and problems connected with this statistic.

Of course, there are no game-winning RBIs currently in games in which the so-called winning run is scored on an error, but there are many other games in which there should be no game-winning RBI.

Since the game-winning RBI statistic is nothing that really creates controversy in the game, some people may say, "Who cares about it?" It seems to be a waste of time to have the game-winning RBI as part of the major league statistics, when it is such a confusing and misleading statistic.

Any rule that affects the outcome of a game during the game is something that would perhaps need study and evaluation, but the game-winning RBI statistic seems quite meaningless, as one can see from those hypothetical cases.

Entry deadline nears for Young Riders Rodeo

Entry deadline for the first of the Hereford Riders Club Young Riders Rodeos, set for June 20-21, is Wednesday.

Fourteen events for seven age and gender categories are slated for the two 7 p.m. performances at the Rider's Club Arena behind the Bull Barn. Kicking-off the rodeo will be the coronation of the queen following the grand entry on June 20.

Points will be collected at the June rodeo and the August rodeo (Aug. 15-16) for trophy saddles to all-around girl and boy.

Each night's performance will include a free stick-horse race for children under 6-years-old which will net the winner a belt buckle. For those under 12-years-old, a $5 prize is up for the free calf scramble.

Entry forms are available at Walco International and Jimmy Payne's Saddle Shop. Information on registration and events is available after 5 p.m. at 364-1346.

Admission is $3 for adults, $1 for children 6-12 years and for senior citizens. Children 5 and under are admitted free.

Warden says athletics relieve tension, anxiety

Sports activities utilized at prison

By STEVE RAMIREZ
El Paso Times
EL PASO, Texas (AP) — The gymnasium was filled with many of the usual activities.
At one end, two men played ping pong. At the other, there was a half court, pickup basketball game. In rooms off to the side, weightlifters grunted and groaned under the exertion required by black iron weights. Men milled around and watched. It seemed like any other Monday at the gym.

The big difference: a captive audience. Literally.

All the activity was taking place at the Southern New Mexico Correctional Facility, 15 miles west of Las Cruces, N.M., and about 60 miles northwest of El Paso.

Sports in a prison environment relieves tension and anxiety, associate warden Dr. Andres Rodriguez said.

Inmates minimize the pressure of serving time, and prison administrators use recreational activities to keep the inmates busy. Prisoners and administrators understand the benefits, Rodriguez said.

"What we have here are various programs for the inmates. We've got a lot of teams taking part in the intramural program. Also, we've got teams here that compete in the community," Rodriguez said.

"We are obligated by court mandates in New Mexico to develop a recreational program. We have to provide as much community involvement as possible, not just in sports, but in cultural events as well."

The philosophy is similar at La Tuna Federal Correctional Institute near Anthony, Texas.

"We pattern our recreation program very much like the outside," said Gene Adams, recreation supervisor at La Tuna. "Everyone at this facility takes part in something or another."

The Southern New Mexico prison near Las Cruces began its own basketball league, with teams from the outside taking part. With the change in seasons, a softball league will replace it.

"We'll play all home games," Rodriguez said with a smile.

At medium-security prisons such as La Tuna and the Southern New Mexico prison, most teams can compete only within the walls of the prison. However, La Tuna also has a minimal security "camp," where teams are allowed to compete beyond the wall.

"You see it more often in minimal security facilities," Rodriguez said. "We have limits here as to how far we can take an inmate to participate in an event. And when we can take them somewhere, they must be chained all the time (except when they are competing)."

Daniel Lacey, an inmate and weightlifter in the New Mexico prison, said, "I'd like to see it happen where guys could go downtown and compete. We had two guys go to the state (weightlifting) meet in February of 1985."

He said, "I think we could behave ourselves. When we get into competition, it's winning we're most concerned with, not making a run for it."

Of the 460 to 480 inmates at the New Mexico prison, 175 to 200 take part in the intramural program, said Doug Briggs, recreation supervisor.

"The inmates seem to enjoy what we're doing very much. They take very good care of the equipment. In the time I've been here, I've only lost one piece of equipment," Briggs said.

Briggs led the move to bring in outside basketball teams to play prison teams.

"At first, they (the outside teams) are a little intimidated," Briggs said. "But once they've played a quarter or two, they relax. From what I've heard from them, they like coming here to play."

Games are kept under control, he said.

"We've got inmates who run the clock and stuff like that. One of my assistants will officiate, and he's done an excellent job. If somebody gets out of hand, he'll be thrown out of the game. We've had to do that — not just to an inmate, but to guys from the outside as well."

The talent some inmates display is impressive. Briggs and Rodriguez said they consider basketball player Ray Padilla, a former high school standout at Albuquerque, to have major college potential.

The soft-spoken Padilla said he hopes to get a chance to play college basketball.

"I've been working real hard to get my G.E.D. (graduate equivalency diploma)," Padilla said. He was transferred recently to a minimal security facility and is scheduled for release in September. "We'll see what happens after that," he said.

Asked where he would like to play if given the chance, the 6-3 Padilla smiled and said, "I wouldn't mind playing in Georgetown. I doubt it, but it sure would be nice."

Alan Spreckelmeyer, also scheduled for release soon, was the player-coach of the slow-pitch softball team at the New Mexico prison.

"I'd like to start out in a small summer league and eventually work my way into high school coaching."

Spreckelmeyer said. "With what's happened to my life and what I've learned here, I can help kids from ending up on the side I've been on."

Serving as a coach of the prison softball team has built confidence in himself and his players, Spreckelmeyer said.

"We care about our image. We want to set an example for the other inmates who come out to watch us, and we want the outside teams to know we appreciate them for coming out."

At La Tuna, Adams has teams entered in the El Paso Soccer League, Upper Valley Slow-Pitch Softball League, and Lower Valley Baseball League.

Inmate Felix Penabarra, soccer coach at La Tuna, is proud of his team.

"We've got a good team, and soccer is a big spectator team around here. The team is good because there are several South Americans on it. Also, we've had guys leave here and play semi-pro and pro soccer."

Inmate George Hamilton, the slow-pitch softball coach at La Tuna, said his team "just has fun." In the Upper Valley League, the team won eight of its first 12 games and, win or lose, Hamilton said, "both teams show the usual sportsmanship and shake hands after a game."

Fields at La Tuna are in excellent condition. A regulation soccer field, a baseball field with major league dimensions, and a softball field, complete with grass infield and dugouts, are in better condition than many facilities beyond the La Tuna walls.

"Ninety percent of the teams that come in here say that our facilities are better than anything else they've played on. We're working at making them better," Adams said.

Recreational facilities at La Tuna include an open air weightlifting area with weight machines built by the inmates, a miniature golf course, a full court and half court for basketball, areas for horseshoes, three handball courts, and two tennis courts.

Hearing on ### horse racing in

Texas is Monday

AUSTIN (AP) — Sen. Tati Santiesteban said Friday his Senate Natural Resources Committee will meet June 20 in Tyler to hear testimony of the effects of horse race betting in Texas.

"Legalized pari-mutuel wagering could inject $230 million a year into the Texas farm economy," the El Paso Democrat said in a statement. "With its multiple effects, it can add $713 million a year to our state's economy in the agriculture sector alone. And that doesn't count the non-agriculture impact of Texas horseracing."

He said previous Legislatures had looked at pari-mutuel wagering for possible economic effects but one area not studied as closely has been the specific effect on our farm economy.

"Obviously, this is not a panacea for all the farmer's problems, but it would be of definite benefit to a key sector of the Texas economy at a time when that sector definitely needs help," Santiesteban said.

The committee hearing will be held at the University of Texas at Tyler at 9 a.m., he said.

Championship delayed by three lawsuits

State 4A playoffs in muddy mess

By DOUG CRICHTON
Associated Press Writer
The state 4A high school baseball championship is muddier now than the playing fields that got it into this mess in the first place.

At least seven legal briefs have been filed in four different courts while officials haggle over whether Austin Westlake and Richfield high schools should get to finish their rained-out best-of-three quarterfinal series.

And mired in the middle of it all is the University Interscholastic League, which has had to postpone indefinitely the 4A finals because the UIL will violate somebody's court order no matter what it does.

The next step in the legal tangle comes Monday, when State District Judge Bill Logue of Waco will decide whether to make turn his temporary restraining order against the UIL into a more-powerful temporary injunction.

"The UIL staff wants to see the state tournament proceed," UIL Athletic Director Bill Farney said Friday. "But we can't violate the law, either. We have to show respect, although we don't have to agree with the court orders."

One of those orders is to let Westlake and Richfield finish their series to decide who joins the four-team tournament with Mercedes, Brenham and Snyder. Another order says Westlake has already won and that it should now go to the semifinals. Yet another sets specific time limits for play and says it can't be done on artificial turf.

Westlake won the first game 4-3 in the 2-of-3 series on June 5, but rain swamped out games 2 and 3 two days later. The time-pressed UIL then invoked a rule Farney says is 27 years old: If the last two tournament series games can't be played, the winner of the first game advances.

Supporters of the Waco Independent School District's Richfield school were furious.

"We had agreed to play a 2-out-of-3 series," WISD Superintendent Frank Kudlaty. "It isn't sour grapes — we felt we should have been allowed to play Sunday. The UIL obviously feels differently."

Farney said, "There is a great deal of astonishment that a school would file suit against the league on a rule that has been enforced for years. That reaction is understandable. But I certainly can't agree with it. If everybody did that, we wouldn't be able to play anything."

Thus began the legal maze: — Logue acceded in WISD's suit Wednesday demanding that the playoff series resume. Waco maintains the UIL executive committee had the authority to allow an extension of the quarterfinal series. UIL officials say they don't and that Waco incorrectly interpreted the UIL constitution.

— Later Wednesday in Austin, on Westlake's behalf, 345th District Court Judge Juan Gallardo issued a temporary restraining order halting the tournament, ruling that it couldn't go on unless Westlake was one of the teams.

— Wednesday night, state District Judge Homer Salinas in Edinburg issued a restraining order on behalf of Mercedes, which would have faced Westlake had the series continued. That order said the tournament couldn't be played before 1 p.m. Friday or after 8 p.m. June 20th.

Salinas also said the games had to be moved from Ditch-Falk field, which has artificial turf, to a natural-grass field to accommodate Mercedes, a team not used to playing on fake grass.

— On Thursday, Waco filed a motion with Logue to block Gallardo's ruling. He agreed Friday, saying the Travis County-based judge did not have jurisdiction in the case and ordering the Eanes Independent School District not to proceed with its case in Travis County court. (Westlake is within the Eanes district.)

Logue also barred the UIL from taking any action in the Austin-area court. He also scheduled a hearing in his Waco court for 2 p.m. Monday to consider beefing the temporary restraining order up into a temporary injunction.

— Also Thursday, Waco asked Logue to rule UIL Director Bailey Marshall in contempt of court because he didn't comply with Logue's ruling and reschedule the Westlake-Richfield game. (Farney says Marshall did work up another schedule, but that Gallardo's order kept him from implementing it.)

— Later Thursday, the UIL appealed Logue's Wednesday order to the 10th Court of Appeals in Waco. That pre-empted Waco's contempt motion, so, — the WISD then filed the same contempt motion before the 10th court.

In the meantime, both the UIL and Eanes remain under Logue's temporary restraining order that suspends the 4A playoffs until a best-of-three quarterfinal series between Richfield and Westlake is completed.

"The UIL is here as a defendant in three different lawsuits," UIL counsel Margaret Cooper said. "We're simply awaiting what the courts decide."

In addition to Logue's hearing Monday, another hearing, this one Gallardo scheduled on his temporary restraining order, is scheduled for Tuesday in Austin. A third hearing is slated for Friday in Salinas' Edinburg court.

"We can't comply with one order without violating another," Farney says. "Most everybody is disappointed for the youngsters who qualified — they can't enjoy the atmosphere at the state tournament."

77-year-old woman is active, enthusiastic golfer

By PATRICK CHEATHAM
Denton Record-Chronicle

DENTON, Texas (AP) — Reaching 65 for some people might mean starting to look for a place to sit and let time go by. For Kathleen Thompson, reaching 65 was the start of something new.

At 65, she took her first golf lesson. Soon after, she bought her first set of clubs.

That was 12 years ago. At 77, she has developed a real love for the game.

Her apartment is just 30 yards from the course at Texas Woman's University. She watches as golfers, several of them moving down the wide fairway, pass the large water hole on the right and the noise of the traffic on the left, down to a small patch of grass, the 15th green.

Sometimes she sits for hours, laughing one minute and staring in amusement the next as golfers pass before her window, hacking up the golf course and sending balls into the water hazard.

"This is better than watching television," she said.

She stands 5-foot-5 and weighs 100 pounds. Her short gray hair is neatly placed behind her horn-rimmed glasses. Her shirt is white with the words, "putt, chip, driver, birdie, pitch" in red. Her pants are double knit with several checks, the semi-lead type that golfers wear only on the golf course.

Topping the outfit is a hat with a rounded brim pushed down to keep the sun out of her eyes.

She moved to Denton to be near her niece, who lives in Dallas, she said. "I took up residence across the street from Texas Woman's University to be near the sport I love," she said.

On one wall in her residence is a large framed picture of Arnold Palmer swinging a golf club.

"I met him," she said. "He was playing in a golf tournament in Houston, and my niece drove me there to see him play. I followed him around the course."

She went to the closet, rummaged around, and emerged with a light blue hat, the same color of her golf bag. She pointed proudly to the name embroidered on the bill of the cap: Arnold Palmer.

Final session of WTSU basketball camp this week

The annual Gary Moss Boys' Basketball Fundamentals Camps will have its final session this week, Monday through Friday.

WTSU head basketball coach Gary Moss will conduct the daily sessions of the camp. Cost for the camp is $200 for each overnight camper, and $175 for each day camper.

Top high school basketball coaches from Texas and surrounding states will also instruct in the camp.

In addition to the daily practices and instruction, each camper will receive a notebook, shooting report card, certificate, a 60-minute self-improvement plan, and a T-shirt.

For more information on the camp, or for late registration, call 656-3707.

"I went up to him after the tournament and asked him to sign it. We talked for a minute and he was very nice, just the way you would expect him to be. I didn't have any paper for him to write on, so I asked him to sign the bill on the hat, and he did," she said.

"Later, the ink faded, so I embroidered the name exactly how it was signed."

She interrupted her interview to go over to the practice green.

"I need to get my touch back," she said.

Bending over the ball, she zeroed in on the cup 25 feet away. A slight tap and the ball was on its way, first a left break on the green, then a right turn, and the ball fell into the hole.

At first, she looked surprised, but her next look was one of confidence.

Again she lined up the ball and putted the same shot, over the left break, then a right turn, and the ball again fell into the hole.

"I haven't played since November. I hurt my back, and I needed to rest it," she said.

She hurt her back cleaning her apartment, not playing golf, she said.

Men's class C softball tournament set in Dumas

A men's class C double-elimination softball tournament is scheduled in Dumas on June 20-22.

The second annual Benton Ray Memorial Softball Tournament will be played under U.S.S.S.A. rules and is a sanctioned event.

The tournament is a benefit event, with all proceeds going into a scholarship fund. Tournament games will be played at Phillips Park, located at 14th Street and Twichell Avenue in Dumas.

Special awards will be given to the most valuable player in the tournament, the all-tournament team members, the player with the highest batting average, the best fielder, and the winner of the home run hitting contest.

The awards include a color TV, a recliner, a 10-speed bicycle, an electric razor, and a videocassette recorder.

Entry fee for the tournament is $100 per team, with a deadline of Tuesday at 6 p.m. The tournament will have a 32-team limit.

Teams may register for the tournament by calling Glen Ray at 935-3000, Clark Ray at 935-4811, Danny Bilbey at 935-7312, or Mike Artho at 935-7507.

Fullback Roger Craig of the San Francisco 49ers became the first man in NFL history in 1965 to reach the 1,000-yard mark in both rushing and receiving.

This may sound a little odd but one of the ancestors of the great race horse Man o' War was named Cinderella.

HEREFORD VETERINARY CLINIC PRESENTS SMALL ANIMAL TOPICS VACATION PLANS FOR YOUR PET.

With vacation season approaching, many pet owners wish to take their pet along as they travel. Planning and preparation in advance can help make the trip more enjoyable and safer for both pet and owner.

First of all, consider whether your pet is comfortable and happy when traveling. Some animals, like some people, function better in familiar surroundings. A car sick, unhappy animal can make a trip miserable for everyone.

If your pet doesn't like to travel, don't force the issue. Leave him or her at home.

Be considerate. Not all friends or relatives welcome pets. The same goes for hotels, motels, parks and campgrounds. An advance inquiry can help avoid a frustrating misunderstanding.

Following are some additional suggestions that may help travel with your pet more fun and help to avoid unfortunate situations.

1. Be sure your pet is in good health and up-to-date on all vaccinations and free of parasites before beginning any trip. A visit to your veterinarian a couple of weeks in advance will be worthwhile.
2. Have a health certificate available as well as rabies vaccination certificates, especially if traveling to Canada or Mexico.
3. Be sure your pet wears complete identification with home address and phone number. The license tag should be worn at all times. Keep your pet on a leash to prevent loss or injury.
4. Take your pet's favorite food, toys and dishes. Dry food will be more convenient if your pet is used to it. Plan to feed the main meal at the end of the day, or after you reach your destination.
5. Plan to stop and allow some exercise. Stopping every two hours or so is recommended.
6. Your pet needs fresh water during the journey also, especially if it is hot. As a rule of thumb, if you're thirsty, chances are your pet is too. (But don't allow too much fluid intake or your stops will have to become more frequent.)
7. Cats will travel better and safer in a suitable carrying case.
8. NEVER leave your pet unattended in a parked car. Heatstroke can occur very quickly in a parked car.
9. A bath and grooming in advance may make the trip more pleasant for all.

Don't automatically eliminate your pet from your travel plans. Just plan in advance.

If you would like a pre-vacation exam for your pet call Hereford Veterinary Clinic for an appointment and we will be glad to help.

Ceremony unites Zamora, Soliz

Martha Idalia Zamora, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Florencio Zamora Sr., became the wife of Victor Soliz, son of Mr. and Mrs. Joe S. Soliz, in a traditional wedding held Saturday afternoon.

St. Anthony's Catholic Church was decorated with two spiral candelabras flanked with greenery and silk flowers. Two floral arrangements decorated the altar, pews were marked by blue satin bows, and a heart candelabrum was centered in front of the bride and groom at the altar.

Father Patrick Walsh, who was the same clergy who baptized the bride, officiated the ceremony.

The bride was given in marriage by her father.

Michelle Lopez of Ruidosa Downs, N.M., and George Arroyos of San Angelo acted as maid of honor and best man.

Bridesmaids were Marizelda Soliz, Edna Soliz, sister of the groom; Letitia Marez, and Elizabeth L'Esperanze, both of Amarillo.

Groomsmen serving were Florencio Zamora Jr., brother of the bride; Roy Taylor of Guyton, Okla.; and Raymond Gamboa of Wichita Falls.

Ushers were Raymond Cantu, the bride's cousin, and Eliseo Ramirez of Lubbock.

Train bearers for the bride were Brian Zamora, the bride's brother, and Jacly Renee Palacios, the bride's cousin.

Carrying the wedding book was Yvette Nava and Noemi Cantu, both cousins of the bride. Ring bearers were Jaime Zamora, brother of the bride, and Arturo Nava Jr., the bride's cousin.

Lighting candles were Veronica Nava and Jennifer Dawn Palacios, both cousins of the bride.

Singing the principal selections, "Mi Amor" and "Somebody Loves You", were Sandy Zapeda, Edward Maldonado, Jesse, Jacinto, and Jimmy Guerrero. The Guerrero are the bride's cousins.

The bride entered the church in a full bodied raschel lace and tafetta gown that featured a close-fitting bodice with a sculptured scoop neckline.

The gown was fashioned with a basque waistline in front and back with raschell lace, motifs, sequins, and individual hand-sewn simulated pearl trim.

The full-skirt featured a flounced hem-line with a chapel length train which were trimmed in more raschell lace. The puffed tafetta sleeves also had raschell lace and was accented in pearl trim.

The chapel length veil and blusher were fastened to a crown of waxed pearls and crystal flowers. Seed pearls were sewn on the veil in scattered form by the mother of the bride.

The bride carried a bouquet of made of waxed pearls, crystal flowers, green velvet and silk leaves and white silk flowers which were fastened by white streamers.

Gold and pearl earrings, a gift from the groom, adorned the bride's ears for something new. She wore an heirloom ruby ring given to her by her mother for something old. For something borrowed the bride chose a pearl necklace belonging to her aunt, Linda Palacios.

Attendants wore tea-length dresses, designed by the bride, made of royal blue satin overlaid with crystalline frantanza. The dresses featured close-fitting bodices with lavishly ruffled sweetheart necklines worn off the shoulder. A ruffle accented the hemline and a white crystalline frantanza cummerbund cinched the waist.

A floral wreath hairpiece consisting of silk flowers and baby's breath accented with silk ribbons and imported net at the back of each wreath. Each hairpiece was made by the bride and the attendants carried silk floral bouquets featuring blue and white roses, carnations and baby's breath, also made by the bride.

Maid of honor and train bearer dresses were similar to those of the bridesmaids in white dress and royal blue cummerbund.

The mother of the bride was attired in a teal blue tea-length crepe dress featuring delicate lace inserts at the front yoke. The cap-sleeved dress was accented by a matching short-sleeved jacket.

The groom's mother wore a light blue crepe-knit dress with crystal pleated front and back over-bodice in a shimmering cracked-ice pattern with delicate chiffon sleeves.

The groom wore a crystal and waxed boutonniere identical to the bride's bouquet.

Each boutonniere of the bride's brothers also had waxed pearls identical to those of the bride's bouquet and were made by the bride.

During a reception held at the Hereford Bull Barn, Maggie Gamez served cake with Mrs. Rosario Nava and Mrs. Gabriela Avina, the bride's aunts, serving punch and coffee.

Isabel Cantu, an aunt of the bride, registered guests while Sylvia Reyes, the groom's sister, assisted.

The bride's cake was seven-tiered with royal blue roses and a royal blue champagne fountain. Each tier was joined by bride figurines and atop the cake sat the traditional bride and groom figurines. Figurines of each groomsman and attendant also adorned the cake.

The groom's cake was a two-tiered, heart-shaped German chocolate cake.

For a wedding trip to the Caribbean Islands and an extended stay at the Caribbean coast of Jamaica, the bride traveled in a three-piece Halston suit of a beige silk pleated skirt, a floral-print blouse and a red jacket.

The jacket featured elbow length dolman sleeves with turned back cuffs and button closures. The bride wore blue slingback pumps with heart designs and blue accessories, all a wedding gift from the groom.

The couple will be at home in Hereford following the trip.

The bride is a 1984 graduate of Hereford High School where she was a member of Future Teachers of America, Office Education Association, and a member of the band. She is a junior at West Texas State University and is employed in the office of the district attorney.

The groom is a 1983 graduate of Hereford High School where he was active in Hereford Key Club, honors band, varsity football, and was a three-year member of the National Honor Society. He attended WTSU and is employed at Excel of Friona.

Out of town guests were from Lubbock, Amarillo, Wichita Falls, Midland, Odessa, Carrizo Springs, El Paso, San Angelo, Perryton, Friona, Canyon, Edcouch, Dallas, Uvalde, Granger, Los Cruces, Ruidosa Downs, and Clovis, N.M., and Imokalee, Fla.

Streun, Turner recite vows

Before arched and spiral candelabra at the altar, Miss Cynthia Shirlene Streun and Mark Allen Turner were married at 7 p.m. Saturday, June 14, in Temple Baptist Church.

The bride, daughter of Mrs. Murlene Streun, was given in marriage to the groom, son of Mr. and Mrs. Richard Turner, by her brother Jeffrey Streun.

H.W. Bartlett of Temple Baptist performed the ceremony.

Kyle Streun and John Mark Streun, brothers of the bride, were candlelighters for the arch candelabra and two spiral candelabra at the center of the altar. They also tended two seven-branch candelabra placed at the corners of the altar and a unity candle which sat on a white marble pedestal near the front of the church. Candelabra were accented with rose bows, English ivy, and rose and burgundy flowers. Two large arrangements of gladiolus and burgundy tiger lilies enhanced the setting.

Cheryl Fariss of Amarillo was the matron of honor and was escorted by best man Terry Summers of Denver City. Bridesmaids were Mrs. Mike Chesser of Wichita, Kan., cousin of the bride; Miss Lynna Turner of Rockport, Texas, and Mrs. Rynn Peeler of Denver City, both sisters of the groom. The bridesmaids wore gowns of rose colored moire taffeta which had sweetheart necklines, three-quarter length sleeves and a shoulder ruffle. The fitted bodice connected to a full skirt in a tea length. Rose shoes were worn.

Bouquets for the attendants were of burgundy tiger lilies, rose peruvian lilies, English ivy, and baby's breath. Halos of matching flowers were worn.

Groomsmen were Jeffrey Streun, brother of the bride, Mike Fields and Randall Scoggins of Midland. Ushers were Kyle and John Mark Streun, brothers of the bride; David Strange, of Dallas; and Alan Tharp of Lansing, Mich.

Jessica Peeler, niece of the groom, wore a floor length dress similar to those of the bridesmaids. She carried a silk lined basket trimmed with rose bows and burgundy and rose gypsophylla which was made by the bride. The flower girl also wore a matching halo.

A designer gown in candlelight satin and antique ivory lace was chosen by the bride. Her neckline was Victorian with a banded collar of pearls dotted over the scalloped queen edging. The sleeves were brought to a french pouf and trimmed on the edge with European laces. The sleeves tightened to the wrist with embroidery and pearls down the sides on bridal illusion.

The bodice featured a point that scalloped Sposabella style to the bust and was edged with pearls.

A full skirt flowed from the cinched waistline. Rose petals were etched into the satin with European cut-out effect.

Tails of rosettes intertwined in the full, cathedral length train. Her skirt

PIPING HOT AND COLD

RICHARDSON, Texas (AP) — To cut home heating and cooling costs, a company here recommends an alternative to conventional heating methods — the earth coupled water source heat pump.

To install the system, lengths of special pipe developed by Phillips are buried several feet below the surface. The pipe circulates water and picks up heat from the ground to provide part of the heat for the home in winter.

It transfers heat to the ground in summer. The firm says the pump saves the homeowner enough to pay for itself in about three years.

was scalloped on the edge with European alencon laces with shimmer satin motifs.

Alencon laces and pearls and sequins on ivory satin trimmed the bride's 18th century style hat with an upturned brim. Her fingertip length veil had a blusher of bridal illusion.

She carried a bouquet of candlelight rose buds, baby's breath, burgundy gypsophylla, and English ivy.

A garter that the bride's mother made and wore in her own wedding served as something borrowed and something blue. The wedding ring of the bride's late paternal grandmother was the old item, and the gown was something new.

The bride's mother chose a blue-gray street length dress with long sleeves, a bodice drape and a fitted waist.

The groom's mother wore an off-white street length dress with fitted waist and inlaid lace and embroidery bodice.

Both mothers wore corsages of ivory and burgundy rosebuds.

Mrs. Gene Streun, aunt of the bride, was the organist for the ceremony. Her husband, Gene, uncle of the bride, was the vocalist. Principal selections were "Whither Thou Goest," which was sung at the bride's parent's wedding; "God, a Woman and a Man," "I Could Never Promise You," and "The Lord's Prayer."

A reception followed at Temple Baptist with Kim Sims of College Station and Carol Zinser of Austin serving at the bride's table, which was decorated with the bridal bouquet, a five-branch silver candelabra with rose tapers, and English ivy. A lace overlay with a ruffle over ivory satin draped the table.

The four-tiered ivory cake had four smaller cakes forming a scalloped effect. The cake was topped with a Precious Moments bride and groom.

An ivory cloth edged in wide lace draped the groom's table from which a round chocolate cake was served. The table was decorated with two silver candlesticks with ivory tapers and silver appointments belonging to the mother and paternal grandmother of the groom, respectively.

Assisting with the reception were Mrs. Don Waters, Mrs. Floyd Eubanks, Mrs. Grady Hughes, Mrs. Joe Thames, Mrs. Bill Shore and Mrs. Frankie O'Rand.

Sheree Seright and Cindy Streun, cousins of the bride, passed out rice roses and served at the registry.

For her departure, the bride wore ivory accessories with a pale pink suit with double-notched collar and straight skirt.

Following a trip to Colorado, the couple will be at home in Odessa.

The bride is a 1982 graduate of Hereford High and graduated from West Texas State University in May with a degree in secondary art and math education. At WTSU she was a member of Kappa Delta Pi, Mortarboard, and a resident assistant at Brown Hall.

The groom is a 1976 graduate of Denver City High School and a 1981 graduate of WTSU where he was a member of Kappa Alpha Order. He is employed by Odessa Schools.

Special guests at the wedding were the groom's grandmother from Albany, Texas, and the bride's grandmother from Elk City, Okla.

Out of town guests were from Wichita, Kan., Denver City, Odessa, Canyon and Lubbock.

A rehearsal hosted by the groom's parents on June 13 honored the couple. The bride was the guest of honor at a luncheon in the home of Mrs. Don Waters on the day of the wedding.

AC hosts orientation

Amarillo College Division of Student Development and Instructional Support will host a Parents-of-Freshmen-College-Students Orientation Program June 29 from 2:30 to 5:15 p.m. in the AC Concert Hall Theater, Fine Arts Complex on the Washington Street Campus.

This expanded version of the traditional Amarillo College parents' initiation program will involve participation by representatives from Texas Tech University, West Texas State University, Texas State Technical Institute, and Wayland Baptist University as well as those from AC.

The purpose of the day's events will be to provide concerned parents with an introduction to the freshman year experience in a generic workshop setting, supplying relevant information no matter where the student plans to attend college or university. Two and four-year school settings and situations will be discussed in concurrent meetings so that husband and wife teams can split and attend as many as six different sessions should they so desire.

Admissions representatives of each of the participating schools will be available at 1:45 p.m. in the lobby of the Concert Hall Theater to provide information and literature. Prospective students are welcome to come with their parents and will be provided with social activities and a brief campus tour if so desired while the parent workshops are in session.

The smallest breed of dog is the Chihuahua. At maturity, this Mexican dog may weigh between two and four pounds, but some weigh no more than one pound.

Reservations are required as seating space is limited. These will be taken on a first-come-first-served basis and can be obtained by calling the college at 371-5300. Any questions regarding the Parents' Orientation Program can also be addressed at that number. This program is presented to Panhandle-area residents as a community service by Amarillo College.

Clothing leaves less impact on budget

COLLEGE STATION — While clothing costs are going up, they may have less of an impact on family budgets than in the past, says a Texas A&M University Agricultural Extension Service home economist.

According to clothing specialist Becky Saunders, 1985 apparel and upkeep prices, as measured by the Consumer Price Index, rose 4.4 percent over 1984.

This is the first time since 1969 that clothing prices increased at a higher rate than prices for the "all items" category, she says.

Women's suits and women's separates and sportswear led the increase in clothing prices, notes the specialist. Only prices of boys' and girls' footwear and mens' coats and jackets declined during the year.

"In spite of the increasing prices, families are actually spending a lower percentage of their budgets on clothing," Saunders reports. "In current dollars, consumers spend an average of 5.5 percent of their total expenditures on clothing and related purchases, compared to 7.7 percent in 1972-73."

If you find that clothing costs are still taking too big a bite out of your income, the specialist suggests some advanced planning to avoid wasting money and winding up with a closet full of mis-matched, impractical clothes.

She advises taking inventory of your present wardrobe to determine what can be restyled or repaired before buying anything new.

Then if you still think you need new clothing, establish a plan for the items you need. Indicate how much you are willing to spend and set up a time schedule for buying the clothes.

"If you have the time and the inclination, shopping at outlet stores, at garage sales and re-sale stores can also save you considerable amounts of money on clothing purchases," Saunders says.

Since the average per person expenditure for clothing and shoes is now estimated at $617, she points out that planning ahead and shopping carefully can add up to big savings in the family budget.

West, Bryant married Saturday in Avenue Baptist

Polly Jo West, daughter of Bill and Dixie West, was united in marriage Saturday afternoon with Darrell Ray Bryant, son of Alton and Judy Bryant of Clayton, N.M.

The couple held their wedding at Avenue Baptist Church in which the bride's parents were married in 1964.

A heart shaped candelabrum flanked by a pair of spiral candelabra entwined with fresh English ivy adorned the front of the church with blue satin bows marking the pews.

The bride was given in marriage by her father as the Rev. Clifford Hargrove of Palo Duro Baptist Church in Wildorado officiated the ceremony.

Donna Osborn of Canyon and Timothy Bryant, brother of the groom, served as maid of honor and best man. Mrs. Stacy Kemp Perry acted as a bridal attendant.

Groomsman was Joel Bryant, another brother of the groom, and ushers were Richard Russell of Canyon and Jeffery Neal, cousin of the bride, of Haskell.

Cousin of the bride Craig Neal and Susanne Bryant, cousin of the groom, served as candlelighters for the ceremony.

Kimberly Wellborn and Rosie Wall accompanied Mrs. Kevin James of Ira and Jeff Adams of Crane, both cousins of the groom, who vocalized "Up Where We Belong" and "Wedding Prayer."

Organ selections of "Oh, Promise Me" and "Theme from Ice Castles" were played.

The bride was attired in a satin bridal gown complete with a chapel length train. Fashioned with a fitted bodice, the gown featured a cathedral neckline with three-quarter inch sleeves which were gathered with white satin bows.

The gown's skirt cascaded in a train of chantilly lace tiers each being accented at the center with white satin bows. The belt the bride wore also was made of white satin and was tied in a bow.

The outfit included an ankle length sheer illusion veil gathered to a silk rose that was fastened to a covered tiara which was edged in chantilly lace.

Her attendants were attired in baby blue lace over taffeta tea length dresses which featured puff sleeves, a drop waist, and scooped back neck lines. They carried blue taffeta bow bouquets of white and blue silk roses.

With the reception being held at the E.B. Black House, Danielle Simnacher and Gwen Smith served cake while Glenna West of Amarillo, sister of the bride, and Jennifer Estep served coffee and punch.

The bride held a cascading bouquet of white silk roses featuring blue silk stephanotis and blue and white streamers.

Jewelry she wore included an three strand pearl necklace that belonged to her maternal great-grandmother. The something new was her dress and the something blue she wore was a blue garter.

Carla West of Washington, D.C., sister of the bride, greeted guests at the registry while Donna Osborn, Stacy Kemp Perry, Jennifer Hicks, and Susanne Bryant assisted with the reception.

The bride's table was decorated with with a floor length bridal satin overlay made of white net and accented with blue satin bows.

The three-tiered white cake was decorated with blue silk roses topped with a bride and groom figurine standing before an archway featuring blue ribbons and bells.

For a wedding trip to Colorado Springs, Colo., the bride chose to wear a light blue cotton shirt waist dress with a corsage of white silk roses lifted from the bridal bouquet.

The couple will reside in Canyon.

The bride is a 1983 Hereford High School graduate and is majoring in elementary education at West Texas State University. She is presently employed by Dr. and Mrs. Rod Albracht of Amarillo.

The groom is a 1983 graduate of Clayton, N.M., High School. He is a senior at WTSU and coaches the WTSU livestock judging team. His major is in animal science. The groom is presently employed by Canyon Livestock Auction.

Out of town guests at the wedding included the groom's grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. Alvey Bryant of Midland and Mrs. Eva Adams, also of Midland.

Other groom's relatives in attendance were from Midland, Ira, Crane, Big Springs, Aztec, N.M., and Seattle, Wash.

The bride's grandparents, Mrs. Eunice West of Hereford and Mr. and Mrs. Clyde Gallagher of Plainview, also attended the wedding. Other relatives and friends of the bride were from New Mexico, California, Arizona, and Washington, D.C.

Cardinal to visit Lebanon

NEW YORK (AP) — Cardinal John J. O'Connor has gone to Lebanon to review a charity group's work and to greet religious leaders in that war-torn nation.

O'Connor and Monsignor John G. Nolan, pastor of the diocese of Albany, are making the trip to review the Catholic Near East Welfare Association's activities, said Joe Zwilling, a spokesman for the Roman Catholic Archdiocese of New York.

The association runs hospitals, schools and other charitable associations in the Mideast.

O'Connor and Nolan, who left Thursday, plan to return home via Rome, the spokesman said.

Monsignor Peter Finn, archdiocese director of communications, said he could make no comment about whether the cardinal expected to do any negotiating on behalf of five kidnapped Americans in Lebanon.

"To comment would jeopardize the lives of the people involved," he said.

Ann Landers Expect to be judged

DEAR ANN LANDERS: It's a name that we insist on dividing ourselves into generations as if old people spring up like a crop of oats. The teenage rebel of today is tomorrow's reactionary relic.

To the 16-year-old who complains of pressure to do well in school — so what's new? Only certain people are new, and they don't realize how old their problems are.

Parents don't need to be reminded that they are less than perfect. After all, why shouldn't they expect their kids to be better, smarter, braver and purer? Don't they hear it at every high school graduation? "You, the older generation, messed up our world. Now it's up to us to straighten it out."

OK, straighten it out. When you have accepted all the adult responsibilities along with the privileges, and have done away with world hunger, disease, drug abuse, violence, greed and corruption, then will be the time for a holier-than-thou attitude, complete with halos and medals.

If you want to judge your parents, expect to be judged the same way by your children, because you will be. And that's a promise.—FORMER REBEL, NOW AN OLD REACTIONARY RELIC IN SALEM, ORE.

DEAR RELIC: Thanks for putting into words what many of us "old relics" have been thinking for the past several years. Interesting how the years move us more "to the middle". I know because it happened to me.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: You have printed some beautiful poems and essays in your column and many of them you claim are "author unknown." I believe if you tried a little harder you could find out who wrote some of those things. For example: The poem titled "Immortality," sent by a reader who thought it was the perfect tribute to the seven astronauts who died. It began with these lines: "Do not stand by my grave and weep, I am not there, I do not sleep. I am the thousand winds that blow, I am the diamond glints in the snow."

The woman who wrote this was a lodge sister of mine. She lived in Bakersfield, Calif. Her name was Clare Harner Lyon. She died in 1971. Thank you for letting the world know.—MARION P. (TEHACHAPI, CALIF.)

DEAR MARION: Thank you for writing. I am always happy to give credit when it is due. The following excerpts may be of interest to you.

From Bloomington, Ind.: What were you doing during English literature class when the other students were paying attention? The author of the poem "Immortality" is E.E. Cummings.

From Shaker Heights, Ohio: Surely you have someone on your staff who could research the author of a poem before you rush it into print and say "author unknown." The person who wrote "Immortality" is Ralph Waldo Emerson. I didn't even have to look it up. I remembered it from high school.

From Des Plaines, Ill.: My grandmother wrote "Immortality" and it was sent to all her grandchildren when Dad found it in the family Bible 10 years ago. Her name was Emma Horton Blake.

From Clinton, Ia.: My son who is a computer expert wrote that poem "Immortality." He'd kill me if I made his name public but his initials are J.P. and he lives in Greenwich, Conn.

So, dear readers, I hope you get the idea. I got it a long time ago.

Is pot a drug? Can LSD, PCP, cocaine and pills open new worlds for you? Stop guessing. Get the facts in Ann Landers' all-new booklet, "The Low down on Dope." For each booklet ordered, send $2.00, plus a long, self-addressed envelope (39 cents postage) to Ann Landers, P.O. Box 11995, Chicago, Illinois 60611.

The penny post system began in Britain in 1840.

Double ring ceremony unites Ball, Thompson

Susan Diann Ball, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Doug Ball of Dumas, became the wife of Harry Lee Thompson, Jr., son of the late Mr. and Mrs. Harry Lee Thompson Sr.

The couple was wed in double ring ceremony at Calvary Baptist Church in Dumas on June 7 with Brother Jake Armstrong, of that church, officiating.

Keisha Blachshear served as maid of honor. Carrie Yearwood, sister of the groom, and Gaye Reynolds, cousin of the bride, acted as bridesmaids.

Amy Minkley and Michael Layman, cousin to the bride, served as flower girl and ring bearer, respectively.

Kelly Priest served as best man. Groomsmen were Russell Yearwood, brother-in-law of the groom, and Mike Ball, brother of the bride.

Robert Ball, brother of the bride, and Dennis Garrett served as ushers.

Candlelighters were Anna Stinson, cousin of the bride, and Amanda Cross, niece of the groom.

Soloist, Salendá Baldock provided music as organist Paul Humphrey played "This is the Day", "Theme from Ice Castles", "My Only Love", and "There is Love."

Given in marriage by her father, the bride was attired in a white wedding gown featuring a close-fitting bodice embellished with simulated pearls and sparkling sequins.

Schiffli embroidery detailed the lace stand-up collar and illusion net formed the front yoke. The dress was fashioned with ruffle trim and a full skirt. Tiers of lace and polyester sheer extended into a heart-shaped train and a long, button and loop closure completed the gown in back.

Schiffli embroidery, sequins and simulated pearl trim was featured on the bride's headpiece and polyester lace trim accented the walking-length veil.

The bride carried a crescent shaped bouquet of cascading dusty rose colored silk roses, and dogwood accented with lilies of the valley.

At a reception held in the Fellowship Hall of Calvary Baptist Church, Glenda Minkley, Rose Huckabee, and Shirley Hokanson assisted with refreshments.

The couple will make their home in Dumas.

Red Cross Update

Special thanks to the Water Safety Instructors and Aides for getting our Water Safety classes off to a good start. The next classes will begin June 30 and finish July 11 at the City Pool. Preschool classes have not been scheduled. If an instructor is available to teach preschool, a special session will be held. Water Safety Instructors and Basic Swimming Instructors teaching this session are Elaine Taylor, Doris Rush, Brenda Goheen, Rose Goheen, Tim Martin, Cindy Duncan, Jan Klepac, Clay Stribling, Florence Robinson, Ronny Sanders and Margot Sims. Aides are Brian Goheen, Wesley Taylor, Olivia Brown, Margie Guerro, Nell Culpepper, Margaret Gamez, Tamara Hamilton.

The Uniformed Volunteers met Thursday for their regular noon luncheon. Plans were discussed for the membership meeting to be held Tuesday, June 17, 7:30, at the Red Cross office. Plans were also discussed for the Jubilee. New officers were elected. Those officers are Lottie Wertemberger, President, Ruth King, Vice President and Alice Gilleland, Secretary. The next meeting will be July 10, noon, at the Red Cross office. Those present were Alice and Aron Gilleland, Nell Culpepper, Mildred Brown, Olivia Brown, Lesvia Brown, Ken Brown, Ronita Henson, Bertha Dettman, Margaret Gamez and Betty Henson.

A recertification class in CPR will be held Monday, June 16 at 4:00 at the Red Cross Office. This class is for persons whose certificates are about to expire this month and who need to have their certificate renewed.

The Annual Membership meeting will be held Tuesday, June 17, 7:30, at the Red Cross office. New members to the Board of Directors will be elected and activities reports will be given. Anyone interested in Red Cross activities is invited.

The Deaf Smith County Chapter of the American Red Cross is a United Way Agency.

DESIGN MARKET SET
NEW YORK (AP) — More than 100 designer sources are expected to participate in Design New York 1986, the third annual international design market to be held here Oct. 8-11. Among events will be behind-the-scenes factory visits and Showroom Seminars focusing on industry problems and how to solve them.

Design New York is sponsored by the Resources Council, a national trade association headquartered here that fosters communication between the interior furnishings industry and design professionals.

Workout programs switch to video

The publishing industry has for some time been pumping out a steady stream of health and diet books on how to lose weight, stay trim, gain health and generally feel good about yourself physically.

Now the advice on how-to has gone audio-visual. It's only fitting.

At the top of The New York Times' miscellaneous best-seller for months has been "Fit for Life," by Harvey Diamond and Marilyn Diamond. Now it has been adapted to audio cassette.

In addition, you can hear "Jane Brody's Weight Loss Program;" "Fit or Fat," from Covert Bailey's trim book; "Peak Performance," by Dr. Charles Garfield; "Dr. (Stuart) Berger's Immune Power Diet," and Gary Null's "six weight loss programs."

A series of six "20-Minute Workouts," by Susan Rasmussen Englander, is on audio cassettes, promising to "firm up soft muscles, trim down, lift sags and improve your overall shape and physical conditioning." Without turning a page.

And if you want to see how it's done, check the video store.

That how-to list is topped by "Jane Fonda's Workout" videotape, with its sequels, "...New Workout" and

"...Challenge Workout." ("...New Workout" and "...Workout" are both in the top 10 among videocassette sales as listed by Billboard magazine.)

Other "name" video workout instructors include Olympic gymnast Mary Lou Retton, with "Fun Fit Workout for Kids," Debbie Reynolds' "Do It Debbie's Way," and Raquel Welch's "Total Beauty and Fitness."

The basketball dribble was first used professionally by Bert Loomis in 1896.

Douglas praises libraries

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Actor Kirk Douglas, presiding over the reopening of the public library branch destroyed four years ago by fire, declared his love for libraries "as the son of illiterate immigrants."

"Libraries are the temple, the synagogue, the church of our civilization and they should mean everything to us," Douglas said Thursday.

The new $3.2 million library was donated by Samuel Goldwyn Jr. in honor of his late mother. At the ceremony, Los Angeles Mayor Tom Bradley accepted the Frances Howard Goldwyn Regional Branch Library from Goldwyn.

The two-story building has towering ceilings, big windows and an interior decorated with huge reproductions of posters from classic movies like "Citizen Kane."

Only one U.S. President has held a Ph.D. degree — Woodrow Wilson.

A Flair for Design

Most accessory arrangements, either of wall art or tabletop pieces, are more effective in uneven numbers. This is a very loose rule, and of course, would not apply to symmetrical arrangements, which are ones that are perfectly balanced on both sides of an imaginary line with matching objects. This type of balance is considered to be more "formal", while an asymmetrical or uneven balance is used on a more casual situation.

If you are uncertain about the placement of artwork on a wall, lay the pieces on the floor, working out your arrangement roughly there before putting any nails in the walls. Your most important tools are a yardstick, pencil with an eraser, and the right kind of nails, or hangers. These may all be found at most variety or hardware stores.

At FINISHING TOUCHES, we will be more than happy to help you with your accessory arrangements as well as design assistance early in your project. Call 364-8870, or come by 501 E. Park.

McDowell, Bridges united Thursday

Brenda Jo McDowell, daughter of Forrest and Ruth McDowell, was united in holy matrimony Thursday evening with Tracy Daniel Bridges, son of Edwin and Christine Bridges. The couple married in the Church of the Nazarene at 7 p.m. with the Rev. B.G. Hill of Greenwood Baptist Church officiating.

The bride was given in marriage by her father and matron of honor was Pam Marchman. Joe Don Zetsche served as best man, and cousin of the bride Jill McIntire and Debbie Gallagher acted as bridesmaids.

Joe Aguirre Jr. and Jacob Hanyen Jr. served as groomsmen with Tim Riley, Rick McDowell, brother of the bride; and Mike Bridges, brother of the groom; serving as ushers.

Stephanie Walker, daughter of Valerie Walker who is sister of the groom, and Justin Walker, nephew of the groom, served as flower girl and ring bearer.

White arch shaped candelabra trimmed with dusty rose and white roses served as centerpiece at the front of the church. The candelabra also featured ribbon and greenery held 15 votive candles.

Two large white wicker baskets holding flower arrangements of dusty rose and white roses complimented with white ribbon streamers also adorned the front of the church.

Family pews were marked with dusty rose bows as Carolyn Evers played the musical selection "I Love You Truly" which was vocalized by Edwin Bridges, father of the groom.

The bride entered the church attired in a white silk organza gown featuring a sweetheart neckline trimmed with alencon lace and miniature seed pearls.

The gown featured a fitted bodice decorated by matching lace and had a cathedral length train.

She wore a fingertip length illusion veil and carried a bouquet of white silk flowers entwined with white satin ribbon.

The bride wore a pearl drop given to her by her parents, and a blue garter.

Attendants were attired in dusty rose tea length dresses fashioned with ruffle sleeves, sashes which tied in the back, and carried bouquets of rose and white roses.

For a reception held in the fellowship hall, the bride had a three-tiered cake iced in pale mauve butter cream.

The bottom tier had deep mauve roses and moss green leaves with ruffles, scallops and shells. A stacked second tier was in the shape of a hexagon with tiny drop flowers and leaves.

The top layer was separated and decorated in mauve sweet peas, roses and leaves. Top borders were reverse shells and bottom borders featured large shells accented with moss green leaves, mauve sweet peas, and drop flowers.

Ceramic bride and groom figurines topped the cake as it was served by Sherry McIntire, cousin of the bride.

The groom's cake was a large round chocolate cake iced in chocolate butter cream. It featured chocolate swirls, large shells, a cluster of roses and leaves on top. It was served by Valerie Walker, sister of the groom.

Connie Hart served punch and coffee while Maria McDowell, sister-in-law of the bride, registered guests. Brandy Hightower handed guests rice bags.

After a wedding trip to Red River, N.M., the couple will be at home in Hereford.

The bride is a 1986 graduate of Hereford High School and is employed at Forrest Lumber. The groom is also Hereford High School graduate from the class of 1985 and is also employed at Forrest Lumber.

Out of town guests attending the wedding include friends and relatives from Dallas, Louisiana, Amarillo and Dimmitt.

Computer analyzes lifestyle

ANN ARBOR, Mich. (AP) — An unusual collaboration between the University of Michigan's fitness center and its art school has resulted in a modular health testing system.

Developed for hospitals, corporations and other organizations which provide on-site health screening, the project is called the "Lifestyle Analysis System."

According to Prof. Dee Edington, director of the university's Fitness Research Center, the system is a versatile, economical set of fitness testing equipment that can easily be transported or set up permanently at any work site.

"To our knowledge, it is the only system of its kind that is specifically designed for health screening," Edington says.

Designed by art student Gary Helfand, the system has cubical units that can be set up as a series of work stations, collecting information such as body fat, flexibility, grip strength, lung capacity, blood pressure and exercising and resting heart rate.

The test information and other health data are entered into a computer equipped with specially designed software to provide a printed analysis of the individual's current health status.

BOOKS

Two non-fiction bestsellers are featured this week at the Deaf Smith County Library. "The Great Getty" by Robert Lenzer and "Bess W. Truman" by Margaret Truman will be available for check-out this week.

"The Great Getty" is the story of the life and loves of J. Paul Getty, the richest man in the world. By 1957, Jean Paul Getty was the richest man in the world—and the richest man ever to pay only $500 or less a year in income taxes.

By the time Getty was 24, he had made his first million, become estranged from his very proper parents, and gotten slapped with a paternity suit. By 1930, he had married and divorced three different teenaged girls within five years—only to marry twice more, one time neglecting to divorce his previous wife first. After wresting control of the family trust from his deaf and aging mother, Getty established himself in the midst of the Depression as an international oilman—one of the first to see the potential or Arab oil—and an international bon vivant.

When J. Paul Getty died in 1976, he left behind a fortune in art and oil that soon became worth over $6 billion. He left behind a reputation as the savviest, most compelling, and contradictory business genius ever. This is the first authoritative account of the richest man in America.

"Bess W. Truman" is more than a rare, intimate and surprising portrait of a famous First Lady who kept her deepest feelings, and considerable influence on President Truman, hidden from public view.

Bess Wallace was born in 1886 in Independence, Mo. into a secure world full of strong ideas. Young Bess was beautiful, popular, a strong-willed young woman who could play a nifty third base and swim and ride as well as any boy. Harry Truman was just a farmer's lad to whom Bess always seemed out of reach. Their courtship was long and arduous. For sixty-nine years, Harry would be at the center of Bess's life.

Margaret Truman has been able to draw on her own personal reminiscences and a treasure trove of letters never before published. "Bess W. Truman" recreates the human drama of an extraordinary woman and a man who has become a beloved American president.

Chamber Singers to perform

'Hereford Night' slated Friday at Palo Duro

In celebration of 21 years of production, "TEXAS" is sponsoring "Hereford Night" at Palo Duro Canyon Pioneer Amphitheatre on Friday June 20, at 8:30 p.m. in appreciation to the community for their continued support of the musical drama.

Limited seating is available for the night through the Hereford Chamber of Commerce.

The Hereford Chamber Singers will perform for Hereford Night prior to the show on June 20. Under the direction of Bill Devers, a former cast member of the first "TEXAS" show in 1966, the group will entertain in the patio area of the theatre from 6:30 until 8 p.m.

"TEXAS" plays nightly at 8:30 p.m. except Sundays under the stars in Palo Duro Canyon State Park near Amarillo and Canyon.

Written by Pulitzer Prize winning author, Paul Green, "TEXAS" has entertained 1.7 million persons since 1966. Last year, audiences totally 90,000 came from all over the world to see the historical production.

It is a story set to music and dance that tells of drought and rain, sorrow and joys of the early Texas Panhandle pioneers. Told by a cast of 80, the play emphasizes the struggles of the early settlers, farmers and ranchers and how their eventual collaboration led to the settling of the area.

Special sound effects bounce off the canyon walls to create crackling thunder, while spectacular lighting produces a ballet of fire and realistic lightning.

Donna Sue Dolle, a member of the hospitality crew, is the granddaughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ed Loerwald and the niece of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Brorman and Mr. and Mrs. Simmacher of Hereford. Brian David Rooney, also a member of "TEXAS" hospitality is the grandson of Mr. and Mrs. Carl Kropff of Hereford.

Cary Douglas Reams, a musician with "TEXAS", is the nephew of Mrs. Frankie O'Rand of Hereford.

Tickets are $8, $6.50 and $5 for adults and $3, $3.25 and $2.50 for children under twelve.

For the special reserved seating for Hereford Night, contact the Hereford Chamber of Commerce at 806-364-3333. For reservations for other "TEXAS" performances, call the office in Canyon at 806-655-2181.

Ready For Hereford Night

The cowboy and the lady from the musical drama "TEXAS" will be among the entertainment for "Hereford Night" on Friday, June 20. The Hereford Chamber Singers will perform from 6:30 until 8 p.m. before the 8:30 p.m. show in the Palo Duro Canyon. Seating for Hereford residents and ticket information is available through the local Chamber office, 364-3333.

At least 430 persons were killed, more than 1,000 injured, and about 10,000 left homeless in a 1968 series of earthquakes in Sicily. The Italian government later estimated damage at $342 million.

Flue vaccine recommended

ATLANTA (AP) — The national Centers for Disease Control has announced the recommended flu vaccine for 1986-87, designed to offer better protection after a dramatic change last winter in the Type B flu virus.

"We never predict what the virus is going to do; we can't predict stability," said Nancy Arden, a CDC flu specialist. "But we hope we have picked the strain that's most representative of the B strains that were circulating."

The 1985-86 vaccine had protected against the Type B flu known as the U.S.S.R. flu. But early this year, that strain began showing drift toward a new and different Type B flu, which has come to be known as the Ann Arbor flu.

Type B flu was the most prevalent strain in this country last year's the nation was hit by the disease. Every state was hit by the disease.

The new vaccine, described in the CDC's annual flu recommendations, protects against Ann Arbor and two other flu strains, the so-called Chile flu and a new strain known as the Mississippi flu.

The CDC recommends vaccine chiefly for people at greatest risk of serious complications if they get influenza — adults or children with cardiovascular or pulmonary disorders and people over 65, people with diseases such as diabetes and anyone who wants to reduce the chances of infection.

Vaccine is about 70 percent effective in preventing influenza, Ms. Arden said.

Doctor fees were raised 7 percent

CHICAGO (AP) — Doctors raised their fees 7 percent, or three times the rate of inflation, in the year after the American Medical Association ended a voluntary freeze on physician rates, federal statistics show.

But an AMA spokesman says the fee increases were justified by an 8 percent jump in the cost of running a doctor's office during that time.

Meanwhile, a consumer group labeled the rise in doctors' fees as "gouging as usual."

The AMA's freeze, which began in March 1984, succeeded in bringing down the rate of increase for doctors' services, said Daniel Ginsburg, a U.S. Labor Department economist.

"But now, there's a return to normalcy as physicians try to catch up," he said.

According to figures from the U.S. Bureau of Labor Statistics, doctors' fees rose 7 percent in the 12 months after the AMA freeze ended in March 1985, compared with a 2.3 percent increase in the overall cost of living during the same time period.

In establishing the voluntary freeze, the Chicago-based AMA urged the nation's 390,000 doctors to stop fee increases for a year to aid the nation's economy. The group said the move saved consumers about $1 billion.

Dr. James Todd, the AMA's senior deputy executive vice president, defended the fee increases since the freeze ended.

Doctors' fees still lag behind costs because the cost of operating a medical office rose 8 percent during the year, Todd said, largely because of increases of as much as 50 percent for malpractice insurance.

But Charles Inlander, executive director of the People's Medical Society, maintained that "gouging as usual has continued ever since the AMA called for a freeze."

Doctors have raised their fees because hospital admissions and operations have declined, so they must charge more to maintain their incomes, said Inlander, whose group is based in suburban Philadelphia.

Duck painter keeps models in deep freeze

ASHLAND, Ore. (AP) — Unlike John James Audubon, the great 19th century naturalist and wildlife painter, who hunted for his models and posed them with wire, Gerald Pettitt relies on a 35mm camera for realistic form.

He also keeps models in his freezer.

"They're not much good for shape, but the color's good," said Pettitt, as he pulled out plastic bags, held them up to the light, and identified the lifeless forms inside as a pheasant, a towhee, a mountain quail and a sapsucker.

"Look at the iridescence on the neck," he said, taking a band-tailed pigeon out of a bag and gently stroking the golden feathers.

The 60-year-old artist has been painting watercolors for the past 25 years and sells them at the Cascade Wildlife Gallery, which he owns with his wife, Kay.

Pettitt's studio is in a bedroom of his house in a hilly neighborhood of Ashland. A window looks out over a valley to the foothills of the Cascades, which stand between the artist and the marshes of the Klamath Basin, a major stop for birds on the Pacific Flyway.

"Birds do a lot of awkward things, and once in a while I get a nice pose and work directly from it," he said.

Mounted on a gunstock with the plastic top from a coffee can for a cap on the 1,000mm lens, Pettitt's camera is about as close as he comes to hunting any more. "I never hunted enough to be a really good shot," he said. "I had a loss rate (wounded birds) that bothered me."

Friends who still hunt, cats, cars and the living room window provide him with specimens for his freezer files.

Pettitt had little training in art and actually stumbled into his profession.

Twenty-five years ago, he was walking to his welding job when he passed by the studio of wildlife artist Dave Hagerbaumer. He was struck by what he saw.

"I took six whole lessons from him," said Pettitt. "That's the extent of my formal training, except for these." He pointed to shelves loaded with books on birds and painting.

Painting remained a hobby for 12 years, until in 1973 when he realized he was doing 70 watercolors a year and selling every one.

Pettitt spends about five hours a day painting and spends the rest of his work day at his gallery.

"I know an artist who has prints done of all of his paintings, because she can't bear to turn loose the original," he said. "The idea of selling one doesn't bother me a bit."

Weight, stress concerns of study

WASHINGTON (AP) — Weight, exercise and stress emerge as concerns in a study by the National Center for Health Statistics.

The report on health promotion and disease prevention was based on a survey of 18,300 households between January and June 1985.

Findings in the study included:

— About 40 percent of homes do not have a working smoke detector, but 59 percent said their home has a working smoke detector.

— Thirty-five percent of adults never use seat belts when they ride in a car, while 32 percent said they use them most of the time.

— Nearly half of women (46 percent) said they were trying to lose weight at the time of the survey. Only 27 percent of men were trying to lose weight.

— Of those trying to reduce, 82 percent said they were eating less and 60 percent were exercising more.

— One-half of adults reported experiencing at least a moderate amount of stress in the two weeks before the interview.

— Most people (66 percent) said they sleep seven to eight hours per day. Some 23 percent sleep less than seven hours, and 12 percent more than eight hours.

— Fifty-five percent said they usually eat breakfast, 25 percent never do.

— Among women, 45 percent have had a pap smear test for cervical cancer within a year; 50 percent had a breast exam.

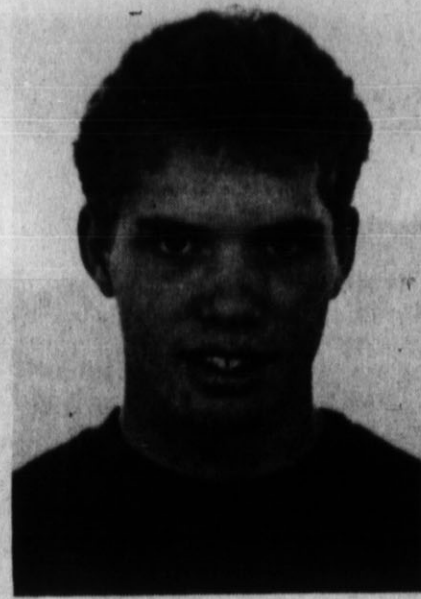

— Less than half of all Americans (42 percent) exercise on a regular basis, and only one in four has done so for five years or more.

— Three-fourths of adults have had their blood pressure checked within a year.

— Thirty-three percent of men and 28 percent of women smoke, although 80 percent of adults said they were aware that the habit increases their risk of emphysema, bronchitis and cancer.

— Twelve percent of adults admitted driving at least once in the past year after drinking.

— Some 95 percent of adults knew that alcohol consumption can lead to liver disease.

CRAIG WADDELL

Waddell attends energy seminar

Craig Waddell, 17, son of Mr. and Mrs. Troy Waddell was among 36 participants from the Panhandle and South Plains at a Texas Energy Science Symposium last week in Austin.

The event is sponsored annually by the Texas Atomic Energy Research Foundation, a combination of 10 electric utilities in Texas, including Waddell's sponsoring entity, Southwestern Public Service.

Approximately 400 science students and teachers from throughout the state attended the symposium.

Engine drive shafts can be destructive

The drive shafts of internal combustion engines, like those commonly found on irrigation wells, normally rotate at 1750 rounds per minute and will not stop unless switched off. "Don't go near them," advises Ken Carver, assistant manager at the High Plains Underground Water Conservation District No. 1, "they're dangerous."

The shaft, if unprotected, presents a danger for people standing or working nearby. Accidents can occur when a shirttail or sleeve gets caught on one of the U-joints located at either end of the shaft. "The incident may take only a fraction of a second, but when it occurs, it's usually serious," Carver notes.

He explains the danger, "When you get close to it, your clothing gets caught in those U-joints and it starts winding on the shaft. The next thing you know it's got you. It's just so easy to not pay attention to it when you're busy working. That's why accidents occur."

Carver recommends placing a guard or shield over the drive shaft. The most common is mesh wire guard placed to prevent contact with the drive shaft. Carver adds that most pumps that Water District personnel observe when they are working in the field do not have guards around the drive shafts.

Smokers burn more calories

BOSTON (AP) — Smokers burn up more calories than non-smokers, and this may explain why people often put on weight when they kick the cigarette habit, a Swiss study concludes.

The researchers found that when people smoke 24 cigarettes a day, they expend 10 percent more energy than when they don't smoke. At this rate, reformed smokers might be expected to gain as much as 22 pounds, assuming their food consumption doesn't change.

The fact that people often gain weight when they stop smoking is well known, but the reason for this is a matter of controversy. Some experts suspect that it occurs mainly because they start to eat more.

However, the new study argues that some of the weight gain results from reduced expenditure of energy.

The study was directed by Dr. Angela Hofstetter of the University of Lausanne, and it was published in the New England Journal of Medicine.

Group offers support to ex-fundamentalists

DALLAS (AP) — Judy, a former fundamentalist, says fellow congregation members would scold her for being "out of step with the Lord" when her arthritis flared up.

Joel says it was a year after he quit going to church that he admitted he no longer believed the Bible.

Phil, who has been a member of various charismatic groups, the Catholic Church and the Mormons, says he was hooked on religion from childhood.

Surrounded, ironically, by the Sunday School decor of illustrated Bible texts in a North Dallas Baptist church, members of Fundamentalists Anonymous said at recent meeting they felt exiled and alone after first leaving fundamentalism.

They compare their feelings to the withdrawal symptoms of an alcoholic or drug addict.

Organizers of the New York-based group say fundamentalism is an addiction because it offers a clearcut picture of spiritual values with no gray areas or uncertainties, creating a step-by-step life plan that, although restrictive, offers security.

Judy, who like other group members asked that her last name not be used, said one reason she left her fundamentalist group was because she could not accept the belief that illnesses were caused by lack of faith.

"If my arthritis was painful, they would say, 'Oh, we're sorry you're out of step with the Lord,'" she said.

But leaving meant uncertainty, Judy said.

"We wouldn't have gotten caught in it if we hadn't had the need to belong, to fit, to have absolutes," she said.

Other fundamentalist theologians say they sympathize with group members who have had bad experiences, but that Fundamentalists Anonymous organizers make a mistake when they lump all forms of fundamentalism into one category.

"Unfortunately, I think many of the people who are making up the membership of Fundamentalists Anonymous are throwing out the baby with the bath water," said Dr. Richard Land, vice president for academic affairs at the Criswell College in Dallas.

Langlois said he sees the group's purpose as seeking answers to spiritual concerns, despite its unconventional theme.

Members of Fundamentalists Anonymous say they are wary of any kind of fundamentalism because of their experiences.

"Once you find out there's no Santa Claus, you can't go back to believing it again," Judy said.

Fundamentalists Anonymous was founded by Richard Yao, a graduate of the Yale Divinity School and a former fundamentalist. Ms. McKinney said she helped organize the Dallas group after learning about the group through the television talk show "Donahue."

She said the group has been successful because it gives members a unique forum to share past experiences that people not familiar with fundamentalism would not understand.

"It's not that we are anti-fundamentalist, but within some factions of fundamentalism some very strange tenets occur," she said. "If you question, certain groups will kick you out."

Some people in the Dallas chapter — which includes former ministers and people from various sects — use the group to aid their transition to a mainstream religion, while others leave organized religion altogether, Ms. McKinney said.

"We are a buffer," she said. "We're not anti-Morm and apple pie and family."

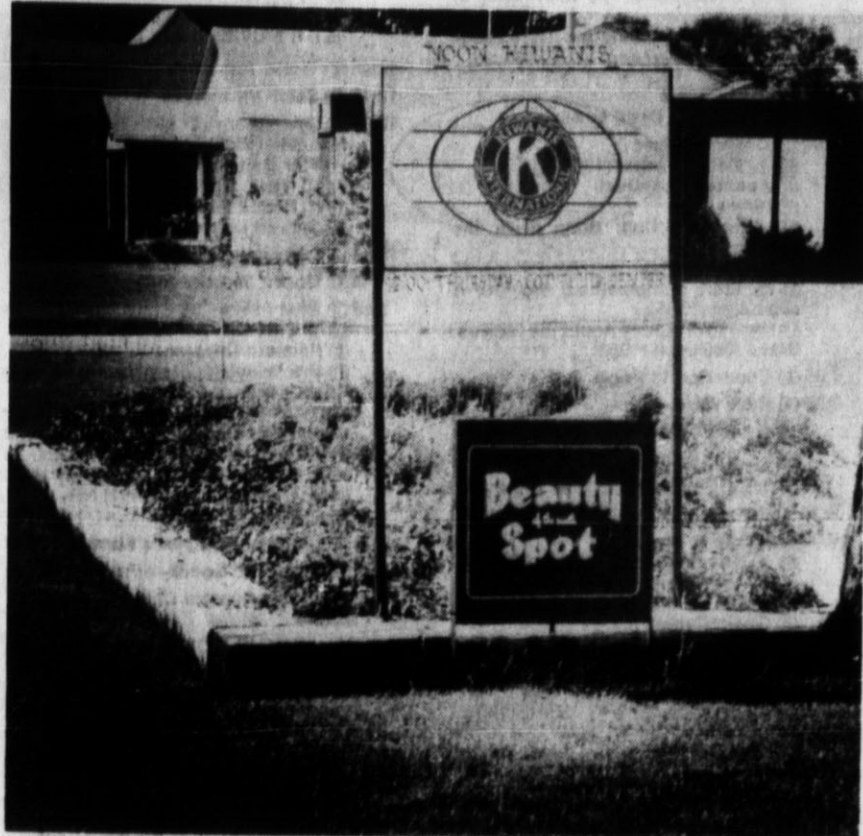

Both Land and Hannah differed between their brand of fundamentalism and what they described as legalistic fundamentalism, a heavy-handed dictatorial system forbidding compromise or tolerance of other beliefs.

"I see a core of people who have been legalized and burned out," Hannah said.

The Golden "K" Kiwanis Club has done it again. Their triangular sign located on 25 Mile Ave. was chosen as the commercial beauty spot for June. The triangular box is growing full of greenery and in the middle, the Noon Kiwanis sign stands telling when and where they meet.

The year-old group has 32 chapters across the country, the only Texas chapter in Dallas, where there are about 350 mail subscribers and about 20 people who attend the twice-

Ownership, additions announced

G. Patrick McGinty, CPA, has assumed ownership of Berry, Ham, & Co. in Hereford.

McGinty was formerly with Main Lafrentz CPA regional office in Midland-Odessa, and with Deason, Crocker, Singleton & Peters in Roswell, N.M.

He has been involved with a privately owned holding company with investments in oil, gas, ranching and real estate. He was a division controller and marketing manager of a publicly owned corporation dealing in oilfield equipment.

McGinty was secretary-treasurer of Caviness Packing Co. in Hereford for 10 years.

Also joining the firm is Marvin Sartin, CPA, management-tax consultant, and James McDowell, senior staff accountant.

Sartin holds his master's degree in agriculture economics and is active with the Texas A&M tax practitioners workshops sponsored by the Texas Agriculture Extension Service. He was with the TEAS in Lubbock as a management economist for 13 years.

McDowell returns to Hereford from Dallas where he has been controller-accounting manager for two privately held oil and gas exploration companies.

The office remains at 623 N. Main and will retain staff accountants Renee Zinzer, Barbara Franks, and Cathy Bunch.

Simple habits can ease foot problems

By The Associated Press

Your feet are made up of 26 bones, 18 muscles, 107 ligaments, 31 tendons, 30 joints, yards and yards of blood vessels, miles of nerves, and 125,000 sweat glands per foot.

Those not-so-pedestrian figures come from "Healthy Feet," a booklet from the Kinney Shoe Corp., which also says that aching feet plague almost three-quarters of adult Americans — with women the more frequent sufferers.

The booklet offers some every day advice for taking care of your feet:

- Keep your feet clean and dry; wash them in warm, soapy water. Apply powder or an antifungal spray between your toes.
- If your skin is dry, lubricate with lotion or cream, except between the toes. If your feet perspire a lot, whisk on foot powder or corn starch; sprinkle some powder in your shoes, too.

- Check your feet for signs of trouble, small injuries, red spots, fungus infections.
- Change your socks, more than once a day if necessary.
- Vary your shoes.

Once your feet are happy, take a step in the right direction — walk.

The New York State Department of Health, among other health and fitness advisers, recommends walking as one of the best of exercises. If you walk at a brisk pace and on a regular schedule, the benefits can equal, or outweigh, other, more strenuous forms of exercise, the department says in a promotional flyer.

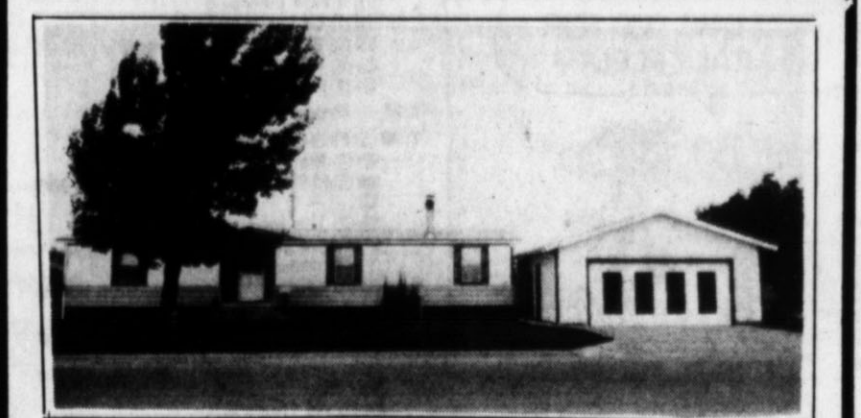

If done regularly, they say, walking will relax you when you're tense, ease your minor aches and pains, and help you maintain or lose weight. You'll find you wake up easier and work better throughout the day.

And all you need are your feet.

CLASSIFIED ADS
Classified advertising rates are based on a minimum of 30 words. One day is 13 cents per word or $2.00 minimum. Rates below are for consecutive issues, no copy change, and apply to solid ad lines only.

TIMES	RATES	MIN.
1 day per word:	.13	2.00
2 days per word:	.22	4.00
3 days per word:	.31	6.00
4 days per word:	.40	8.00
5th day FREE

Add 9 cents per word for additional days: 10 days (1 free) is $1.20 minimum; 15 days (3 free) is $2.40; month $7.20.

Classified display rates apply for special captions, paragraphing, bold type or larger type, and ads not set with full lines. $2.00 per column inch, $2 a column inch for additional insertions, or $1.75 a column inch per month.

LEGALS
Advertising rates for legal notices are $1.50 per column inch for the first insertion and $3 per column inch for consecutive issues.

Deadlines for classified ads are 3 p.m. daily for the next day's edition; 3 p.m. Friday for Sunday's edition.

Cash is required on advertisements under $10.

ERRORS
Every effort is made to avoid errors in Classified Ads and legal notices. We will not be responsible for more than one incorrect insertion. Advertisers should call attention to any errors immediately after the first insertion. In case of errors not the fault of the advertiser, an additional insertion will be given.

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) — Patti Hughes collapsed in her husband Jim's arms after a Tarrant County jury refused to give the pair custody of a child they reared for three years.
Jim Hughes pulled his wailing wife out of the courtroom Friday, refusing to answer questions. But Patti Hughes' mother, Joyce Hamm, said the family was "just devastated."
After three days and 16 hours of deliberation, all but two jurors voted not to end the parental rights of Gerald and Beverly Ready, the Granbury couple who signed documents saying they intended to give up their baby, which the Hugheses named Ashley.
No decision has been made about whether the Hugheses will be allowed to visit Ashley, the child they took in to their home when she was 2 days old. The child has been with her natural parents since December.

The Ready's were escorted out of the courtroom by three armed bailiffs as insults were hurled at the couple by relatives of the Hugheses.
"I hope the next mistake you make is at your own expense. Everybody pays but you," shouted Patti Hughes' sister, Mary Smith.
Both Ready's said they were "happy" with the decision, but were unclear whether the battle was finally over. They declined further comment.
Patti Hughes said from her home in Arlington Friday night that she didn't know whether to appeal the jury's decision.
"I don't want to stop now, but I have to decide what is best for our daughter — whether to appeal or back off," she said. "We just don't have the money at the moment."
Jim Hughes said later that he was bewildered about how a jury could award Ashley to parents who had "abandoned" her and told relatives she had died.
"How do you bring a child back from the dead after three years?" he asked. "According to the state of Texas, we were nothing more than a caretaker who paid her prenatal care, hospital expenses and raised her ... but we had no rights in the eyes of the law."
He blasted State District Judge Catherine Adamski for ordering them to return Ashley to the Ready's, and said the lawyer hired to defend Ashley, William Harris, "thoroughly confused the jury with the law rather than the best interests of Ashley."

Hughes said that until the trial in Fort Worth began May 28, he and his wife had spent about $65,000 in legal fees to keep Ashley. He said he anticipated the trial costs to climb to another $25,000.
Gerald Ready testified during the trial that he had spent $30,000 in legal fees in his battle to get the child back.
The legal battle began after the Ready's, who were unmarried at the time of Ashley's birth, filed suit trying to get her back before the Hugheses' adoption was finalized.

Although a Johnson County judge later granted the adoption in 1984, that action was reversed last year and the Hugheses were ordered to return Ashley to the Ready's in December.
The Hugheses filed suit last year to try to end the Ready's parental rights and get custody of Ashley. It is that suit that ended Friday.
Armed bailiffs stood guard at the courtroom doors as the 12 jurors handed retired State District Judge Henry Strauss their verdict.
As the judge read the eight issues the jury had to decide, Gerald Ready grabbed his wife and buried his head on her neck, sobbing.

Although the jury agreed Beverly Ready had intended to give the child up for adoption, they found no evidence to sever her rights to Ashley.
As the judge continued reading the lengthy verdict, many of the 60 spectators on both sides sobbed.
"This is the most heart-breaking thing to happen — losing a grandbaby," said Mrs. Hamm, Patti Hughes' mother. "My kids are just ruined. It's worse than having a child die because we know she's across town."
Harris, Ashley's lawyer, also was escorted from the courthouse by a bailiff. He said he had received hate mail and "hang-up calls at night" since the trial began.

Harris said that whether the Hugheses are granted visitation will be left to Strauss.
Strauss said he will not make a decision for at least a few days and perhaps as long as a few weeks because he still needs to discuss the issue with the attorneys in the case.
The judge was asked to preside over the trial when Ms. Adamski removed herself from the case in February after receiving death threats and hate mail.

Trend growing to use auction block for real estate

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — It's a growing trend — property owners are turning to auctioneers rather than real estate agents to sell their holdings.
Many are putting their property on the auction block after several unsuccessful listing periods with a real estate agent, said Hugh Miller, president of the National Auctioneers Association.
Others, Miller said, call the auctioneer first.
"You can set the day and time of the sale of the property," he said. And if an acceptable bid isn't received, he said, the seller can reject all offers.
Another advantage, Miller said, is the seller doesn't have to post an asking price, thereby limiting what he can get.
"More and more builders and developers are seeing it as a viable way of sales," said Miller, in town to attend the Texas Auctioneers Association caucus.
Bob Emily, a San Antonio auctioneer and member of the Texas association, said auctions have proven a viable way of moving previously unsaleable property at near market value.
"Most of the time we just speed up the sale," he said. "It takes 30 days to properly advertise a property and another 30 days to close. We're doing in 60 days what it takes real estate agents nine months to do."

As a result, more and more realtors are getting their auctioneer's license, Miller said in an interview Friday.
"Realtors have seen auctions as a threat. They are not. They're a marketing alternative," said Miller, president of an auction firm in Evansville, Ind.
"The sad thing is there is a stigma to auctioneering," he said.
That stigma, he said, dates back to the days of the Great Depression, when "the family farm was sold at public auction at the courthouse door. That was the only way to sell it."
People today, Miller said, have the idea they are going to get "a good deal" when they buy at an auction.
"You are going to get a good deal," he said, "but the odds of actually stealing something are very slim."
Many property owners, he said, call him to speed the sale of real estate that has been on the market for a long time.
For example, Miller said his company was hired to handle an auction of eight condominiums that had been on the market for years on Wilshire Blvd. in Beverly Hills, Calif.

On the day of the auction, 128 people put up certified checks for several thousand dollars to guarantee their right to bid on the properties.
"The developer within 45 days had the jungle in his jeans. The auction brought 85 percent of the last asking price (of the condominiums)," he said.
"People came to the Wilshire Blvd. auction saying 'hey, maybe I can buy at half the market price,'" Miller said.
"That's the psychology that gets the buyer to the auction. They perceived they would get a good deal and they did," he said.
Auctioneers, he said, like to think they can use their "five-dollar-ten" chant to up the price of a piece of property. After all, most auctioneers work on commission and it is to their benefit to sell as close as possible to market value.
Auctioneers began coming into their own in the real estate realm when property started skyrocketing in value during the inflationary years in the late 1970s and early 1980s, he said.

At the time, Miller said, his company was selling Indiana farm land at 10 to 15 percent of its appraised value.
Auctions, he said, became a method of establishing the market value.
When interest rates ballooned to 20 percent, Miller said he and his colleagues thought "we were going to take it on the chin. But the opposite has happened."
Home foreclosures in many cities have mushroomed in the past year with the declining economy.
In Houston, for example, hundreds of residences are being repossessed each month by the Veterans Administration, Miller said.
Miller admitted his company is not always successful in selling real estate.
But he said of the 250 auctions his firm handles each year, about 100 have real estate involved.

Turtle genes may help decipher human syndrome

COLLEGE STATION, Texas (AP) — An oddity in the chromosomes of South American turtles may one day help explain why humans are born with genetic abnormalities like Down's syndrome, researchers say.
The turtles have cells with both two and three sets of chromosomes, said Dr. John Bickham, a cytogeneticist who studies the chromosomes of animals at Texas A&M University's College of Agriculture.
"It's the first time anyone has found an animal containing both of these genetic characteristics," he said Friday.
"Nothing's been reported like it before."
Bickham said the peculiar aspect of the discovery is that animals are usually born with either two or three sets of chromosomes, not both.
In normally two-set species, animals born with three-set cells are abnormal — usually reflected in the animal's physical and reproductive capabilities.
But side-necked turtles found in Surinam show no abnormalities, Bickham said, adding that about 50 percent of the turtle population has both types of cells — diploid for two-set, triploid for three-set. In comparison, similar turtles studied from Bolivia all had only diploid cells.
The turtles' triploid cells

"have half again the number of chromosomes, or 96, compared to 64 chromosomes in the diploid cells," Bickham said. "You'd think there would be some abnormalities, but there aren't, nor is there sterility."
Mutants — or deformed animals — are usually sterile, which is the case in a rare birth defect known as Diploid-Triploid Chimerism, which occurs in humans and in a variety of domesticated animals such as mink and chickens.
"The rare birth defect is thought to be the result of an individual developing not from a single fertilized egg but from two separate gametes — two eggs, or one egg with two nuclei," Bickham said. "It invariably results in aborted fetuses, in offspring who don't live long, or, in chickens and mink, it results in sterility."
"The unique thing about the turtles is that they precisely mimic the disorder," he added. "What usually results in a birth defect in some animals is apparently a normal component of the genetic system of this turtle, so you can see how people interested in birth defects might be interested in this phenomenon."
Scientists say they hope to learn how the phenomenon comes about and how turtles with both diploid and triploid cells can still reproduce.

Bickham and other researchers are using automated machinery that can determine DNA content, plus count the number of diploid versus triploid cells in numerous tissues, and relay the information to a computer for analysis.
Name change calls for new S.S. card
New brides, along with anyone else who has had a recent name change, should contact the Amarillo Social Security Office to arrange to have their names changed on Social Security records and to apply for a new Social Security card showing their new name, Jim Talbot, Social Security manager in Amarillo, said recently.
To apply for a new Social Security card, which will show the person's new name, but old Social Security number, a person needs evidence showing both the old and new names. For brides, the original or certified copy of the marriage license is the best evidence. If the bride is foreign born, she also needs evidence of U.S. citizenship or current alien status. ## Hicks says of land within nuke waste site

'Worked too hard to give up'

Mildred and Donald Hicks. "We will react to this as we need to. We don't intend on leaving and we have no intention of selling. We have put too much time and effort into getting this land the way we want it to just let it go."

By SHAWN COCKRUM
Staff Writer

Don and Mildred Hicks have been a part of Deaf Smith County their entire lives. They raised a son, Mark, on their land and Mark is now raising his four children on that same land—the land the Department of Energy has chosen as a possible site for a high level nuclear waste repository.

"Every time we go into town, people ask us how much we are going to get for our land... everybody thinks that we will get a fortune for it," said Hicks. "Some of them think that the DOE is going to buy our land and lease it back to us to farm. None of that makes any difference to us. We just want to keep our land and farm it the way we want to. This land has been in our family for 70 years."

The Hicks family is not the only one that just wants to keep the land. Wayne and Evelyn Richardson operate Richardson Seed Co. just north of the Hicks farm. Richardson Seed supplies high grade wheat, grain, and grass seed on a worldwide market.

"Right now we are pretty optimistic about the whole thing, I think we are going to whoop 'em," said Mrs Richardson.

The nine square-mile area in northern Deaf Smith County which has been named as a possible site for the repository includes land owned by Richardson.

Sites also were named in Hanford, Wash., and Yucca Mountain, Nev. The Deaf Smith site is the only area owned strictly by private citizens.

The entire area in the Deaf Smith site is used for agricultural production. The crops found in this Deaf Smith site are sugar beets, wheat, milo, sunflowers, corn, alfalfa, and soybeans. An estimated 8,000 head of cattle graze the area.

The Hicks farm has over 3,200 acres with 1200 acres in cultivation. The DOE may use up to 3 1/2 sections of his land or 2,200 acres.

"There is no way we will sell our land," said Hicks. "Our land is our life, there is no other place in the world we would rather live. This is and always has been our home."

During the site characterization phase of the nuclear waste project, the DOE will be drilling a test shaft to monitor pressures from the surrounding earth. DOE also plans on drilling 32 bore holes, including 12 outside the nine-mile square, along with constructing towers to monitor weather and sound.

"The whole thing will just mess us up. We have worked too hard and put too much money into this place to lose it," said Hicks. "And this does not seem to bother the DOE at all."

"There has never been a DOE man ever step foot on our land," said Mrs. Hicks. "It gives you the feeling that if the government wants something, all they do is take it."

Donald Hicks bought his first section of land in 1942. It bordered other land that had been in his family for 30 years. He has stayed established in the community. Hicks served as a county commissioner for 20 years. He is also the current president of the Hereford Lions Club. He was the president of the Deaf Smith County Chamber of Commerce in 1976 and is currently a director of the First State Bank in Vega.

"Farmers are really just a steward of the land. The land is usually passed on to you—you spend your whole life working it, and you pass it on to your children and grandchildren. If your whole life is the land you work, where are we when the land is taken away or destroyed?" Hicks asked.

Mrs. Hicks added, "We are reacting as we have to. We have no intentions of leaving and we have no intentions of selling."

"I think the DOE should really start over and reevaluate the situation. I know there is a need for a waste repository, but I don't think they are going about it right. Hopefully common sense will take over in time," Mrs Hicks said.

Aside from the everyday work on the farm and looking after the cattle, the Hicks and all the farmers in the region are constantly having to deal with reporters and television crews from throughout the nation.

"We recently had a reporter in from the New York Times here; we have a crew coming in from CNN. Some people from California are planning on making a movie about this. There is so much to do around here anyway." Mrs Richardson laughed.

"When the reporter from the New York Times was here, I told him, 'You damn Yankees got what you want. All of the nuclear plants are in the east, and the dump is going to be in the west.' Well, since then I have gotten three letters from people who read that and they said they are in full support of us. I am trying to answer everybody who writes us." Mrs Richardson said.

If the DOE decides to ever visit the Hicks family, they will be told one simple message. "Talk to our attorney."

The landowners in the area have teamed up with anti-nuclear waste groups and hired Alice Hector to represent them against the DOE. Hector, an Albuquerque attorney, has already filed a suit against the DOE claiming the Panhandle of Texas could be damaged by drilling and testing a shaft through the Ogallala Aquifer, the region's major source of water.

Texas Secretary of Agriculture Jim Hightower is also involved in the suit.

"Didn't we learn anything from the Chernobyl accident, where essential food supplies for the entire nation were contaminated. This area of the Panhandle is part of the nation's most productive lands." Hightower said, referring to last month's Soviet nuclear power plant disaster.

Nevada and Washington have filed similar suits against the proposed site.

In a telephone interview with The Brand, Washington Governor Booth Gardner said that the decision to place a site in the western part of the nation was political. Gardner said that his gut instinct is that the Hanford site will never be chosen on its own merits, but he said his big fear is that alternate sites in Texas and Nevada might be eliminated for scientific and political reasons. That would leave Hanford the choice by default, not because it is best suited for the project.

"If Nevada were to drop out because they have so many earthquake faults and Texas because they have so many congressmen in Congress, it would be pretty hard for me to tell the people of this state that the site will be located here because we have the safest site," the governor said.

"Science, not politics, must be the basis for the final storage place of nuclear wastes that will remain deadly for millennia," he said.

At a recent meeting of STAND, (Serious Texans Against Nuclear Dumping) Don Hancock of the Southwest Research Center in Albuquerque said, "The decision is totally political, totally biased and totally wrong."

Water district has contour depth maps available

Contour maps of the net change in the depth-to-water for the 10-year period 1976-1986 and the five-year period 1981 to 1986 graphically illustrate the change in water levels in the Ogallala aquifer in the 15-county service area of the High Plains Underground Water Conservation District No. 1.

"In the last five years, particularly in the southern part of the District, actual rises in the water level in many wells have occurred. These rises may indicate a stabilizing of the aquifer. Some of the rises may be a result of the filling in of cones of depression created over years of continual pumping of some wells, and some of the rises may be the result of natural recharge," explains Don McReynolds, District Geologist and Director of the Geohydrologic Division at the High Plains Water District.

A combination of many factors has contributed to the reduced rates of decline. Reduced pumpage resulting from a poor agricultural economy in combination with increased conservation efforts implemented by producers are believed to be the primary factors resulting in the reduced rates of decline.

The Water District annually measures the depth-to-water level in a network of 950 privately-owned observation wells scattered throughout the District's service area. Actual measurements of the depth-to-water in these observation wells were used in construction of the contour maps.

To be successful, both... land and water are required. If you are a farmer. And, many farmers believe reduced tillage saves both topsoil and valuable water. Winter snow can be retained by not plowing in the fall so that crop stubble will hold the snow in place. With a little weather cooperation, winter snow moisture can be enough to give the next crop a good chance. Being conservative with the plowing also cuts high irrigation costs along with lowering the bills on equipment, labor and fuel. However, farmers have found if they practice conservation tillage they must also pay particular attention to their herbicide program. Many believe the correct use of chemicals to control weeds gives better weed control than through the traditional plowing method. Even though in farming there are few absolutes, conservation tillage has proven to be a good avenue for many.
