

Artificial heart pioneer Barney Clark dead

By BOB MIMS Associated Press Writer

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — Barney Clark, "a very stoic, very strong man" who traded a peaceful death from heart disease for a painful, uncharted medical odyssey, died 112 days after becoming the first human to receive a permanent artificial heart.

The end Wednesday night for the courageous retired dentist came "in peace and with dignity," said University of Utah Medical Center spokesman John Dwan, shortly after the 62-year-old Clark died of "circulatory collapse due to multi-organ system failure."

His death at 10:02 p.m. MST followed a day of medical setbacks in which Clark was returned to intensive care and fell from fair to critical condition.

It was a quick, quiet, painless death, Dwan said.

Clark was "a very stoic, very strong man," said Helen Kee, hospital director of nursing. "A man who chose to do what he did knowing this could be the result."

His death came almost 16 weeks to the minute after he was rushed into surgery late Dec. 1, life rapidly draining from his tissue-thin natural heart.

Without the experimental device, he would have become one of 8,000 to 10,000 Americans who die each year from cardiomyopathy, a degenerative, inoperable disease of the heart muscle.

He had been suffering since Saturday from a fever and increasingly severe kidney failure, problems that doctors said were probably caused by a common virus. By Wednesday, he had colitis in his bowel and evidence of pulmonary hypertension in his lungs.

Dr. Chase Peterson, university vice president for health sciences, said doctors also worried that Clark might have suffered an infarction — or death of tissue — in his bowel, which would have killed him in two or three days.

The air-driven, polyurethane heart began pumping in Clark's chest early on the morning of Dec. 2. He went on to celebrate Christmas and a Jan. 21 birthday that his family thought he would never live to see.

Clark, from the Seattle suburb of Des Moines, spoke publicly just once about the mechanical heart, in a taped interview made March 1 and released a day later.

He acknowledged life with the device had been hard. "But all in all it has been a pleasure to be able to help people," he said.

Dwan said Clark was expected to be buried in Seattle, but had no other details on the funeral arrangements.

Just after noon Wednesday, the medical team rushed to Clark's room, alarmed by a brief but sudden drop in the amount of blood his heart was pumping. The problem then mysteriously began correcting itself.

No mechanical problems were found, and "it's my understanding that the heart was working perfectly" until Clark died, Dwan said. He would not say when the artificial heart was disconnected.

With Clark at his death were Dr.

William C. DeVries, the surgeon who implanted the plastic heart, attending physician Dr. Lyle Joyce and Dr. Robert Jarvik, the heart's inventor. Cardiologist Dr. Fred Anderson and hospital staff members were also present.

Dwan said Clark's wife, Una Loy, was in an adjacent room and the mood "was quiet and dignified."

Clark's son, Dr. Stephen K. Clark, a surgeon in Seattle, was unaware his father had died when contacted by telephone.

"Thanks for the information," he

A&M economist says

High PIK signup should help farmers

COLLEGE STATION, Texas (AP) — Most Texas farmers have agreed to go along with a new "payment in kind" program of the federal government that will pay them in surplus commodities in exchange for holding a portion of their cropland out of production. The involvement across the state in the PIK program astounded many agricultural leaders, a Texas A&M economist said Wednesday.

The result, said Dr. Ron

Knutson, an economist in marketing and policy with Agricultural Extension Service, should be stronger farm prices.

The program should get rid of surplus stocks of commodities that have plagued the marketplace for the past several years, Knutson said.

"We have the potential for a substantial drawdown in surplus stocks of farm commodities due to the large number of farmers signing up for PIK," Knutson added.

President Reagan, in proposing the program, said the reduced surpluses combined with lower 1983 production, should give farmers the higher farm prices they have been demanding.

Nationwide, farmers have signed contracts to take $2.3 billion acres out of production under the federal programs, including the Reagan administration's payment-in-kind program, the U.S. Department of Agriculture announced Tuesday.

In Texas, more than 60 percent of Texas' 200,000 farmers have pledged to remove a total of about 9 million acres from production, the USDA said. That's more than a tenth of the production being held back nationwide, officials said.

Farm leaders say they didn't expect the PIK program to catch on like this.

"The participation has surprised everybody," said Plano farmer William Wells. "We haven't had anything like this before. I think if you can get the farmer in better shape economically, it will help everybody dealing in agriculture." Bob Poteet, executive vice president of the Texas Cotton Association, said the PIK program can help producers as well as reducing the nationwide surplus.

"But there is an underlying problem — that's that the reduction in supply may stimulate production abroad and compete even further

City crews busy repairing streets

City maintenance personnel have been busy this week repairing potholes left on city thoroughfares as a result of the unusually severe winter, but they have a long way to go before city streets are back to normal according to Street Superintendent Jerry Carr.

Public asked to pressure for defense

WASHINGTON (AP) — For two years, President Reagan has said that if he can't make Congress see the light, he will let it feel the heat.

That is how he describes his efforts to build public pressure on the Senate and on the Democratic-controlled House when key economic votes approach.

With his speech Wednesday night on the Soviet buildup and his proposal to develop a missile defense system, Reagan turned to an often successful tactic to work his wake of the numerous snowstorms this year have been filled. He added, however, that his crew still has a lot of work ahead getting areas which have deteriorated due to the hard freeze-melt-freeze again cycle.

A construction crew will begin coping with that problem in about a week after the city commission approved a bid of over $200,000 for city street repairs.

Carr said that the removal and replacement of several intersections will be necessary. He mentioned areas on Ranger Street and Greenwood Street as the ones needing the most attention.

Carr, who has been with the city for 24 years, said that the damage this year was the worst he'd seen since he has worked here.

He supervises a crew of eight men, two of which are kept busy hauling brush and another which runs the street sweeper.

"That gives us only five men to keep the streets in repair and blade the alleys and caliche roads, so you can see we keep pretty busy," he said.

Peskey Problem

City of Hereford Street Superintendent Jerry Carr exhibits one of the problem areas located on Greenwood Street. This stretch of pavement here will have to be stripped out and replaced with a new layer. Carr said that the city has a lot of areas such as this one, and that crews will be kept busy for quite a while with the repairs. Heavy snow damage this winter has hiked the usual $40,000 to $60,000 spent on street repair up to $200,000. (Brand Photo).

The question of whether Deaf Smith County might be selected as the site of a nuclear waste repository is apparently drawing more and more reaction from citizens. Several groups have voiced opposition and The Brand has published several letters from individuals who oppose such action.

Until a "news leak" several weeks ago indicated our county might be one of the finalists, residents had been relatively quiet about the proposal. Perhaps many citizens thought it would never happen here; perhaps others didn't think it would affect them, and maybe some thought it would be an economic boost to the community.

Call it prejudice if you wish, but some citizens were not impressed with the environmentalist-types brought in to tell us that doomsday was at hand if we wound up with a nuclear waste dump. On the other hand, many citizens were not reassured by the Department of Energy presentations, either.

We can't tell you, with any feeling of certainty, that the repository would be safe, or that it would be highly dangerous.

But, we sure agree with some of the opposition that a nuclear waste repository would bring us some potential dangers that are not now present. The potential dangers of damaging our underground water supply, of transportation hazards, of tarnishing our image as a foodstuff producer — these make good arguments as to why Deaf Smith should not be selected as the site for the nation's first high-level nuclear waste dump.

There are too many "unknowns" in the nuclear waste business and, after all, fear of the unknown is one of the greatest of fears!

State Sen. Bill Sarpalius won a victory in the Senate with his drunk-driving legislation and he hopes the House will approve the bill. He and his staff compiled some impressive statistics to show that alcohol abuse is a problem on the highways, as well as other areas.

The figures claim that 50 percent of highway deaths last year were related to alcohol consumption. The statistics also say that 77 percent of all crimes committed in the state last year were alcohol related, including 80 percent of all child abuse, 80 percent of all fire deaths, 35 percent of all murders and 65 percent of all drownings.

New UW president out to 'repay dues'

Gene Ehler, District Manager for the Energas Company in Hereford, has been elected as the new president of the Deaf Smith County United Way organization, and the new president is accepting the challenge with a go-get 'em attitude as he hopes "to pay back some of the dues I owe the community I live in."

Ehler, 41, says that all citizens "take something from the community either directly or indirectly," and volunteer work, such as with the United Way, gives each of them the chance to repay some of that debt.

Ehler, who celebrated his 20th anniversary with Energas Wednesday, contends that "people are the key to the United Way."

"We have to get them (people) involved," he said. "It doesn't really matter who's in charge of what as long as the people who are working in the campaign are sold on the United Way."

In a community which has a long history of not meeting United Way goals, Ehler said that perhaps better communication is the key to more success.

"I've thought a lot about how we can improve participation, and maybe we need to do more in letting the citizens of Hereford and Deaf Smith County know what the United Way agencies are and how they contribute to the betterment of the community," he said.

While Hereford has had trouble meeting goals in the past, Ehler feels that a solid foundation does exist upon which to work.

"Rocky (outgoing UW president Rocky Lee) and his staff did an excellent job," he commented. "There has to be something there why we aren't reaching our goal even though a lot of people have worked very hard, and we hope to build on what has been done in the past to get it done."

Ehler has a history of hard work behind him, working up to the management level after beginning as a maintenance and construction crew member with Energas two decades ago. He began with the company in Lubbock and managed offices in Lockney and Floydada before moving to Hereford in January of 1980.

House Democrats hand Reagan budget defeat

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Democratic-controlled House has handed President Reagan his first defeat of the 98th Congress, approving a budget plan for fiscal 1984 that would slow the president's defense buildup, increase domestic spending and raise taxes by $30 billion.

Even as Reagan was defending his defense program in a nationally-televised broadcast Wednesday night, the House voted 229 to 196 to adopt "A Democratic Plan For Economic Recovery."

House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill Jr., D-Mass., said the vote reflected a major political shift in both the House and among voters.

"The people believe that Reagan policies are unfair and have gone too far," O'Neill said. "The House voted to restore fairness and balance to our national policies."

Because Democrats won an additional 26 seats in last November's elections they now hold a 268-166 majority over House Republicans.

In a sharp break with the last two years, there were only 36 Democratic defections, allowing House leaders to claim their first victory on a budget blueprint since Reagan took office.

Only four Republicans voted with 225 Democrats in approving the budget proposal. House GOP leader Bob Michel of Illinois said the spending and taxing plan was approved without Republican support because of the Democratic election gains last November and resentment of Reagan's budget victories in 1981 and 1982.

"This alleged budget should be titled, 'The Revenge on Ronald Reagan Act of 1983,'" Michel said. "It is the offspring of an unholy union between political spite and political opportunism."

The Democratic budget, said Michel, "is nothing more than a statement of political principle and a framework for the Democratic National Convention platform in 1984."

The budget plan now goes to the Republican-controlled Senate, where leaders have been deadlocked with Reagan over his insistence on a 10 percent defense increase, not including inflation.

No decisions are expected there until Congress returns from an Easter recess early next month.

Ultimately, the federal spending limits for the next fiscal year starting Oct. 1 will be set in negotiations between the House and Senate, and some House members said privately that because of deep political differences with Reagan and Republicans, they doubt that a final budget resolution can be agreed to this year.

Rep. Jim Jones, D-Okla., chairman of the House Budget Committee, said if that happens, "We will see fiscal anarchy."

In an interview, Sen. Pete Domenici, R-N.M., chairman of the Senate Budget Committee, said of the Democratic budget, "I don't believe it could be implemented even in the House...It is very questionable fiscal policy. This will put the president cleanly on the offensive."

Andropov ill with kidney, heart trouble

MOSCOW (AP) — Soviet leader Yuri V. Andropov is suffering from kidney and heart trouble, which have kept him away from his office for more than a week, Soviet sources said today.

The sources said Andropov was hospitalized. One source said he was still in the hospital. The reports could not be officially confirmed and the state-controlled press has not said that Andropov was ill.

The sources, who requested anonymity, said the problems were not life-threatening and that Andropov, 68, would return to work soon. U.N. Secretary-General Javier Perez de Cuellar was expected in Moscow Sunday. A clearer indication of Andropov's health would be apparent if he goes ahead with a meeting with Perez de Cuellar.

One source said Andropov's kidney ailment was chronic but that he also began suffering heart problems about two weeks ago. Doctors recommended he be hospitalized in Moscow for treatment and to rest.

He was said to have entered the hospital some time after March 15, the day he met with a group of Soviet-bloc ideologists who were in Moscow to mark the 100th anniversary of the death of Karl Marx. It was his last time he was seen publicly.

Pacific storm heading for West Coast

A Pacific storm packing high winds and heavy rains headed for the already battered West Coast today, while snow hit the central Rockies and rain drenched much of the Deep South.

Heavy thundershowers, the vanguard of the latest storm, pounded northern and central California, including Sacramento and the northern San Francisco Bay area.

Winds and rain from the storm was expected to strike California, Oregon and Nevada, with a 2-foot blanket of snow predicted for the Sierra Nevada.

Thunderstorms with winds gusting to 45 mph will wallop the northern California coastline, said John Plankinton, lead forecaster at the weather service's office in Redwood City.

"There is the potential for damage," Plankinton said. "The showers coming in today may leave an average of about a half-inch of rain throughout the larger San Francisco Bay area but some places will have much more."

In the South, rain spread from Mississippi to the southern Atlantic Coast, with thunderstorms over Florida and snow over parts of North Carolina and Virginia.

The Midwest, which was strafed by late winter storms earlier this week, got a welcome dose of sunshine Wednesday.

High temperatures ranged in the 40s from the upper Mississippi Valley to New England, with highs in the 20s across northern sections of the Great Lakes and northern New England.

The West Coast and the southern Plains expected highs in the 50s, with highs up to 60 degrees in the Sunbelt. Temperatures soared toward the 80s in southeast Florida and into the 70s over much of Texas.

Temperatures before dawn ranged from 1 degree in Marquette, Mich., to 72 degrees in Key West, Fla.

Rhodesia by any other name

In Rhodesia, southern Africa, tribal rivalries date back to the early 19th century.

It was white British settlers (the country was never more than three percent white) who managed to bring a semblance of peace to the warring tribes by declaring them "one nation, indivisible" in 1890.

But old hatreds festered. Recent years civil strife became civil war.

Warriors of both camps murdered whites, plundered white properties — until the white rulers of Rhodesia agreed to national elections in 1980.

And the white government of Ian Smith was voted out.

The black government of Mugabe took over — changed the name of the country to Zimbabwe.

His tribal rival Nkoma continued hit-and-run terrorist raids. More and more whites fled the country.

Now that once-prosperous nation — one of the few in Africa able to feed itself — is about to be torn apart again.

When Zimbabwe's blacks wrested power from the whites in 1980 they inherited a balanced economy, a healthy treasury, a capable and honest civil service.

Though the new Prime Minister, Mugabe, was and is a professed Marxist, he sensibly avoided drastic land reforms. Even our Wall Street Journal saluted him as a "pragmatist." His country continued to prosper.

Gradually, however, Mugabe began to practice the revolutionary doctrines he had preached — raised taxes — controlled wages and prices — redistributed land — controlled imports.

And with the usual results — reduced incentive to work, reduced trade, inflation soared.

For all this political and economic mismanagement, Mugabe, having to blame somebody other than himself, is blaming others — his rival tribal leader Nkome — his neighbor-nation, South Africa.

So the massacres have resumed and Rhodesia, under whatever name, is threatened again by civil war.

Latin America, to be sure, is related to black Africa only distantly.

Yet, this further evidence that civil wars never really accomplish much should sober well-intentioned Americans who imagine that we can somehow purchase peace, wherever; that we can ensure individual rights, wherever; that we can somehow put Humpty-Dumpty together for good and forever.

We can't. We could bankrupt ourselves trying.

Anti-census groups plan boycott of West German count

FRANKFURT, West Germany (AP) — Thousands of West Germans are planning to boycott next month's national census, saying there is a danger of too much private information in centralized government computers.

Anti-census groups have set up boycott hotlines in major cities and erected boycott billboards across the country as part of a battle that pits the conservative government of Chancellor Helmut Kohl against the radical Greens party.

The government has vowed to go ahead with the $154 million census, the first in 13 years, while the anti-nuclear Greens are urging West Germans not to fill out the six-page census questionnaire.

"The census is a service to the people, not an Orwellian vision," Juergen Sudhoff, the chief government spokesman in Bonn, told a recent news conference.

Spokesmen for the Greens say the April 27 census is an invasion of privacy, and warn that government guarantees do not ensure that information will be kept secret.

The Greens called for a boycott of the headcount March 18, saying the census would give government agencies "a supermarket full of information on private citizens."

The Greens, campaigning against nuclear missiles and for environmental protection, won enough votes in the March 6 nationwide elections to put its candidates in the Parliament for the first time. It took 27 seats in the Bundestag, the lower house of the legislative body.

Two Hamburg lawyers have filed suit against the census before the West German Constitutional Court, charging that the government has not provided enough guarantees that census information remains with the Federal Statistics Office. The court has said it would take up the case.

Government officials say that West German law calls for a census every 10 years, and add that they cannot plan for needed social services without detailed demographic figures.

Some 240 anti-census activists have sprung up across the country, many in recent weeks. Government officials say they were surprised by the widespread resistance to the counting.

Many West Germans claim that names and information gathered by census takers could be passed on to the Finance Ministry, the police and other agencies despite laws guaranteeing confidentiality of census data.

"They can do whatever they want with the information," said one Frankfurt woman who asked not to be identified. "I'm not filling out their forms."

But officials say that fewer questions are asked in this year's census questionnaire than were posed in the 1970 census, and say most West Germans opposed to the counting are "misinformed."

"People here do not know the relevant laws, and have an irrational fear of big computers," Gerhard Richter, an official at the Federal Statistics Office said in a telephone interview.

Questions raising alarm among the anti-census activists are ones probing into the details of car and home ownership and sources of income.

The government is embarking on a campaign of advertisements and television interviews to counter the nationwide boycott campaign.

Officials at the statistics office declined to guess how many people would refuse to participate in the census, but said they expected resistance to drop sharply in the next few weeks because of their pro-census campaign.

The officials also said they may prosecute West Germans who boycott the counting. Those who do not fill out census forms are liable to fines of up to $4,100.

But the anti-census activists have also stepped-up their campaign in recent weeks.

In many cities, local interest groups have set up anti-census hotlines and campaigned against the counting with letters to the editor and public meetings.

In the northern port city of Hamburg, volunteers report receiving about 30 calls daily during the two hours their anti-census hot line is manned.

"Most callers say they have decided to join the boycott and want to know what the legal consequences are," said Klaus Becker, a Hamburg volunteer.

In West Germany, census forms are delivered door-to-door, and picked up by census workers later. Statistics office officials say some 600,000 people have been hired as census takers.

The census was originally scheduled for 1980, but was delayed when the Bonn government and the German states clashed over who would pay for it.

In Bonn, the Greens have sharply criticized the Kohl government for refusing to postpone the census in the face of public opposition. The Bundestag, or upper house of parliament, turned down a request by the states of Hamburg and Bremen for a two-year delay in the headcount.

House gives okay to new game law

AUSTIN (AP) — They pulled out biblical quotes, insulted state officials and pleaded for the hunters back home, but a flock of rural legislators couldn't shoot down a bill to disarm county commissioners of the power to set game laws.

"I recognize a freight train when I see one," bill foe Rep. Bill Hollowell, D-Grand Saline, said Wednesday before the House tentatively approved a measure giving the Texas Parks and Wildlife Commission authority over game rules in all 254 counties.

The bill, already approved by Senators, won 117-25 House approval and faces another House vote before going to the governor.

Rep. Fred Agnich, R-Dallas, steered the bill through the House, keeping it clean of amendments pushed by colleagues who wanted to exempt their counties.

Under current statutes, Texas game rules are a patchwork of laws. The Parks and Wildlife Commission now sets the rules in 140 counties. In 30 counties, county commissioners can veto the P&W rules.

Seventy-one counties have local exceptions to the state rules. Thirteen counties are completely exempt from the state rules.

The Wildlife Conservation Act, sponsored by Sen. Ted Lyon, D-Rockwall, would not apply to regulation of migratory game birds, shrimp or oysters.

Agnich claimed "broad support from all across the state" and from 700 hunting and fishing clubs.

"This is far and away the best way to preserve and protect the wildlife resources," he said. It's senseless to set game rules by county because animals ignore county lines, according to Agnich.

"The game belongs to all the people of this state," he said.

Mason Rep. Gerald Geistweidt — a Republican — attacked the bill as an "insidious Republican plot." The current rules are a "crazy quilt pattern because we have a crazy quilt pattern of game in Texas."

Geistweidt blasted the P&W commissioners as the leaders of "one of the most arrogant" state agencies.

with our growers," he added. Mike Moeller, a Guadalupe County wheat farmer who is president of the Texas Farmers Union, said he hoped the program "won't be a one-shot deal."

"For any kind of voluntary supply management program to work, you've got to have plenty of volunteers. The fact that Texas has a high sign-up is a very positive thing in terms of eventually getting prices back up to where they need to be," he said.

"The potential effects of PIK have already caused positive reaction in some commodity markets," Knutson said. "Whether this trend continues will depend largely on weather conditions this crop year and the level of export demand."

Knutson suggested two keys to future market trends. The first, he said, is the yield that can be anticipated from land remaining in production, since this is the highest quality cropland. Weather conditions will have a big impact, he said.

The second key to future price prospects, the economist said, is the export picture.

While the strong PIK participation may make it more difficult for U.S. farmers to sell in the export market, the potential for shorter supplies of farm products next fall may prompt some importing countries to buy now rather than wait and face possible higher prices, Knutson said.

"If highly successful, PIK will likely not be used again next year. At the same time, PIK's effectiveness in reducing production this year could mean that we'll see it again when surpluses become a problem," Knutson said.

"Assuming that PIK will get us through the 1983-84 crop year without major policy changes, lawmakers are already looking ahead to 1985," the economist said.

The choice for 1985 becomes one of a continuing drift toward production controls or a policy reversal — moving back in the direction of a freer market in which farmers would have to accept lower levels of price and income support."

One strategy for moving toward the freer market concept involves "self-help" programs in which farmers would automatically share a portion of the costs of government programs when surpluses arise, Knutson said.

way on a reluctant Congress. "This is why I am speaking to you tonight — to urge you to tell your senators and congressmen that you know we must continue to restore our military strength," he said.

And, with the surprise announcement of his anti-ballistic missile system plan, the president dangled a carrot on a stick by indicating that some Pentagon funding in the future would go to a system of deterrence based on something other than the threat of retaliation.

The early public reaction received by White House telephone operators was nearly 5-1 in support of Reagan, according to Peter Roussel, a deputy White House press secretary. But on Capitol Hill, early reaction opposed the president.

Sen. Mark Hatfield, R-Ore., chairman of the Senate Appropriations Committee, said the president's "terrifying proposals" would drain funds needed to rebuild America. Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass., spoke about "the misleading red scare tactics and reckless Star Wars schemes of the president."

White House spokesman Larry Speakes said the genesis of the anti-ballistic missile proposal was a recent briefing of the president by national security advisers who painted a picture of military development in coming years and "all he could see was a buildup of offensive weapons."

said, "in a way, we were expecting that, but I have no comment."

Mrs. Clark had been in contact by telephone all day with her son and the couple's other two grown children, Gary Clark and Karen Shaffer, also of the Seattle area, Dwan said.

Gary Clark, reached by telephone, said he still believes in the artificial heart program, but would recommend it to others "if and only if they were healthier than my father was when he went in."

Dwan, who had served as go-between for doctors and reporters during Clark's tenure with the polyurethane heart, was pale and visibly shaken when he broke the news.

"At this time my thoughts go to Dr. Clark," he said. "He has really performed a service to mankind."

The spokesman said DeVries and Joyce were "saddened also. But they're professional physicians and they go about their business."

Though extensively tested in cattle, sheep and other animals, the Utah Heart was untried in a living human when Clark volunteered for the experiment. He was promised nothing; in fact, researchers warned him the device likely could cause him pain, repeated surgeries, physical impairment and his death.

At the best, they said, his life would be severely limited, spent tethered by two 6-foot air hoses to the external compressor that powered the heart.

Ultimately, both Clark and his doctors pronounced the experiment a success, and Clark said he was glad he was able to help the scientists. But the success was not without cost.

Clark returned to surgery two days after the implant so doctors could repair tiny leaks in his emphysema-weakened lungs. Three days later, he suffered a violent set of seizures, later attributed to overpumping by his new heart and a body chemistry imbalance.

The next week, on Dec. 14, Clark was hustled back into the operating theater to replace the left ventricle of his artificial heart after a valve in the device broke.

Clark later suffered through weeks of persistent and painful nosebleeds, which required a Jan. 18 operation to stop.

But he was upgraded from serious to fair condition Feb. 14 and was moved to a private room Feb. 24. Despite later bouts with pneumonia and shortness of breath caused by emphysema, doctors said Clark was looking forward to life outside the hospital in a specially equipped Salt Lake-area home.

cropland will be taken out of production this year, with about 51 percent being wheat land.

The signups revealed that 120,381 acres of wheat will be held out of production, 79,310 acres of sorghum, 23,616 of corn and 8,201 of cotton.

Farmers will be paid in wheat for the acres that they hold out of production at the rate of 95 percent of the historic yield. The payment will be 80 percent on corn, sorghum and cotton.

Two assaults investigated

Police are currently investigating two aggravated assaults involving juveniles and cases are pending with the district attorney in both.

One incident involves a 15-year-old girl who was allegedly hit and slapped by a woman while the two were in a coin operated laundry.

Another incident sent a Stanton Junior High student to the hospital after a fight in the school hallway. One juvenile hit the head of another with the end of a metal comb.

Police also report the theft of a German Shepherd valued at $150.

A man was arrested after shoplifting a tube of toothpaste from Thriftway downtown.

Patrolmen issued 13 citations.

County lawmen have cases of a theft from a vehicle at SIPCO, where cassettes, speakers and cash are missing; of a man $8,000 behind on child support; and lawmen located in Clovis a vehicle stolen from Dawn.

Letter to the Editor

Dear Editor: The pursuit of educational excellence at Hereford High School is suspect if demonstrated by the way English classes are now being handled.

Some sophomore and senior English classes will, if things go as projected, have had 11 different teachers this school year. This makes it very difficult for students to learn the most basic skills of English needed in later life.

This unfortunate situation arose as the result of the illness and death of Mr. Clark. His classes so far this year have had 8 different teachers. Finally a full-time qualified English teacher was hired to replace the late Mr. Clark.

Unfortunately these same students will be uprooted many times again because of the necessity of hiring new coaches. Because one of the new coaches is an English teacher, these classes are now scheduled to have at least two new teachers over the next nine weeks.

The present English teacher will be replaced by a newly-hired coach but, because of his coaching schedule, he cannot meet with all the classes. Therefore, several classes will have different teachers every few weeks until the end of school.

We see the necessity for coaches and understand the requirement that they must also be teachers. We cannot see why it is necessary to be so disruptive to an English class that has already been asked to change structure every few weeks.

Money alone cannot measure the damage done to some 100 students at Hereford High school. The mastery of the English language is the most important skill one can learn in school.

We do not see why the administration should release a full-time English teacher and replace her with up to three different teachers, especially when the necessity for a stable educational environment is so apparent.

We would like to see the current English teacher retained, and a new solution be found on what to do with the new coaching staff.

Sincerely,
A Group of HHS students

Dear Editor: We would like to thank Pastor McCarter for his letter in the Sunday, March 20, edition of The Hereford Brand.

It's good to know that it's not only a few of us who are aware that incidents like this one have happened in the past and continue to happen. But, if we speak up, it is attributed to our being radicals or troublemakers.

So, Thank You Pastor McCarter for a letter so well written.

Sincerely,

Art Guild members discuss art outing

The Hereford Art Guild met Tuesday afternoon in the Community Center with President Hilda Havens presiding. A new member, Carman Angel, was welcomed into the club.

An art outing was suggested for the April 26 meeting and the program committee was appointed to finalize plans and select places to go.

Opal Elliston presented Carrie Mae Doak, who gave a very interesting program on trees. As a starter, she had the group list the names of trees, their many uses, and importance in the life of man.

Ms. Doak gave many facts pertaining to the different species of trees and then displayed several oils that she had painted of scenes depicting pine, spruce, and fir in the foreground.

Before concluding she illustrated the painting of basic colors one would find in pine and aspen tree trunks.

Refreshments of punch, date bread, jelly rolls, and cheese sandwiches were served from a table carrying out the Easter motif by the hostesses, Lucile Naylor, to 11 members.

Indiana vs. Kentucky tonight

'Oscar' time near in college basketball season

By The Associated Press

The college basketball season is approaching Oscar time, with the main producers and directors in Knoxville, Tenn., tonight, while the sport's biggest star takes the stage in Ogden, Utah.

The NCAA Tournament, down from 52 teams to 16, resumes with fifth-ranked Indiana meeting No. 12 Kentucky and runner-up Louisville taking on ninth-ranked Arkansas in the Midwest Regional at Knoxville.

The regional is loaded with three conference champions and features three of the four coaches still in contention who have captured a national championship. To wit:

—Big Ten champion Indiana is seeking its fifth national crown and third under Coach Bobby Knight.

—Kentucky claimed one of its five national titles under Coach Joe B. Hall.

—Louisville, the top seed in the region, hopes to give Coach Denny Crum his second national crown in four years.

Meanwhile, in the West Regional at Ogden, fourth-ranked Virginia with 7-foot-4 Ralph Sampson takes on No. 11 Boston College and No. 16 North Carolina State meets Utah.

THE HEREFORD BRAND SPORTS

Page 4—The Hereford Brand—Thursday, March 24, 1983

On Friday night, the East Regional at Syracuse, N.Y., pairs third-ranked St. John's with No. 18 Georgia and eighth-ranked North Carolina, the defending NCAA champion, with Ohio State.

If Kentucky and Louisville win tonight, it would set up the first collision between the two perennial powers since 1959, although the schools are located only 80 miles apart. The Louisville players are trying not to think about that.

"If we don't win (against Arkansas), there's no match-up at all," said Lancaster Gordon, the Cardinals' second-leading scorer.

"You start thinking about too many teams, it can distract you," echoed Rodney McCray.

Crum says Arkansas is probably quicker than any team Louisville has played. "We're not slow, but we're not as fast as they are," he said.

"I think our team believes they can beat them," said Coach Eddie Sutton of Arkansas. "If it were a seven-game series, we'd be in trouble, but it isn't. It's just one game."

Indiana beat Kentucky 62-59 at Bloomington in December, but the Hoosiers are without high-scoring Ted Kitchel, who underwent back surgery last month.

"I don't think the earlier game has much bearing whatsoever," said Knight.

"I really like the attitude of my team right now," said Hall. "They have a new look in their eye. They're anxious to play. Indiana is a team you have no trouble getting prepared for."

At Ogden, North Carolina State's Jim Valvano calls the Wolfpack's match with Utah "a team of destiny meeting a Cinderella team. This is a grade 'B' movie we have going here."

The Wolfpack have come from behind to win their last five games — three in the Atlantic Coast Conference tournament, plus NCAA victories over Pepperdine, 69-67 in double overtime, and sixth-ranked Nevada-Las Vegas 71-70.

"We have obviously had five incredible games," Valvano said. "I'd get nervous if we ever had the lead. I wouldn't know what to do."

Utah got there by defeating Illinois 52-49 and then upsetting seventh-ranked UCLA 67-61.

"When we were 7-10, if anyone had suggested we'd wind up in the final 16, I would have wondered where they broke out of," said Coach Utah Jerry Pimm. "We questioned ourselves for a while, but our tough early schedule helped us in the long run and now we're playing our best basketball of the year."

Atlanta Brave documentary to air next week on WTBS

By DAVE GOLDBERG AP Sports Writer

The Atlanta Braves are in the midst of their horrific late summer losing streak and Dale Murphy, who will be named the National League's Most Valuable Player, is slumping.

Joe Torre, the Braves' manager, holding a make-believe object in his hand, turns to his alter ego, coach Bob Gibson, and says: "I'd like to get his head in a vice and go 'Grrrrrrrrraaaagggg!'"

That's a high point in a four-hour television documentary on Atlanta's rollercoaster 1982 baseball season that ended with a National League West championship squeezed out in harrowing fashion on the final day of the season. It's produced by Turner Broadcasting System and it will be shown by TBS in two two-hour segments, at 8:05 p.m. EST March 28 and 29.

TBS, of course, is owned by Ted Turner who, of course, owns the Braves. So it's an in-house job. But not necessarily a house job.

"I was given the right to use my judgment," said producer Glenn Diamond. "I approached it as a reporter rather than as a team man."

That shows. The cameras and microphones roam the dugout, the locker room, even the field for a graphic argument between Torre and umpire Bob Engel from which 54 expletives are deleted. They are also in the board room for conferences involving Turner, Torre and his coaches.

Is Turner presented beatifically? Hardly. In one segment he's depicted Steinbrenneresquely ordering Torre and Gibson to order pitchers to pitch better. "We've told them, Ted," Gibson finally mutters in exasperation. "We can't go out there between the lines and pitch for them."

Much of the four hours is fan club stuff — highlights of big plays fascinating for Braves' fans, less endearing for others. There are lengthy sessions on equipment men, pregnant wives, travel and clubhouse horseplay which may be cut if the show is packaged for syndication, as Diamond hopes.

But the dugout repartee between Torre and coach-cronies Gibson, Joe Pignatano and Rube Walker is a unique manager's-eye-view of a baseball season, courtesy of a camera and sound system intruding into the dugout from a perch a mere 15 feet away.

And the final day of the season, which catches the Braves watching on a clubhouse television and clinching the pennant as the San Francisco Giants beat the Los Angeles Dodgers, transcends the cliché clubhouse.

Then there are the deleted expletives. "I'm sure we'll get some calls here saying, 'How can you put that on the air?'" said Diamond. "But that proves something; they weren't acting for our cameras."

Seattle rips Spurs, 137-117

Will real Sonics stand up

By WILLIAM R. BARNARD AP Sports Writer
Will the real Seattle SuperSonics please stand up?
The Sonics started the season as if they would challenge for the National Basketball Association title, winning their first 12 games.
But they quickly settled into mediocrity and a few weeks ago it began to look as if they might not even make the playoffs as they won just nine of 30 games.
On Wednesday night, however, Seattle handed the Midwest Division-leading San Antonio Spurs their worst defeat of the season, 137-117. It was the Sonics' seventh triumph in their last eight games and gave them a 40-30 record.

"We're getting back to the way we started the season," Sonics Coach Lenny Wilkens said. "We're not quite there yet, but we're getting there step by step."

Elsewhere in the NBA, Boston beat Atlanta 114-102, New Jersey stomped Utah 124-104, Philadelphia edged Milwaukee 104-101 in overtime, Cleveland stopped New York 84-81 and Detroit crushed Indiana 109-96.

Seattle got 27 points and 13 assists from Gus Williams, 24 points from David Thompson and 23 from Fred Brown in its victory over San Antonio.

Wilkens praised his team's defensive effort, particularly Thompson, who held George Gervin, the NBA's second-leading scorer, to 14 points, 13 under his average.

The Sonics also held starting Spurs forward Gene Banks to four points on 1-for-9 shooting. But San Antonio center Artis Gilmore connected on 12 of 15 attempts for 31 points.

Seattle led 28-24 after the first quarter before Brown got 12 points in the second period to help the Sonics take a commanding 69-55 halftime lead.

Celtics 114, Hawks 102
Robert Parish scored 27 points and Larry Bird added 25 as Boston snapped Atlanta's four-game winning streak.

The Celtics, who had lost five of their previous seven outings, had a 12-point lead before the Hawks scored nine in a row to cut the deficit to 71-68 in the third quarter. But Boston responded with seven of the next nine points to rebuild its advantage to 78-70 and the lead never fell below five again.

76ers 104, Bucks 101
Philadelphia bounced back from Tuesday night's loss to New York to beat Milwaukee for its 58th victory in 68 games and 24th straight at home.

Moses Malone had 25 points for the 76ers, including two free throws with five seconds left in overtime.

Marques Johnson led the Bucks with 24 points. His basket with 2:34 remaining in regulation tied the game at 93-93, and there were no more points until the extra period.

Cavaliers 84, Knicks 81
Cleveland beat New York for the first time in 18 tries as Phil Hubbard had 22 points and 13 rebounds and Jeff Cook made three free throws in the final 10 seconds.

The Cavaliers, who snapped a six-game losing streak, led 73-63 early in the fourth quarter, but the Knicks cut the deficit to 81-79 with 1:01 remaining. They had a chance to tie it with two free throws with 28 seconds left, but New York center Bill Cartwright missed both.

Then Cook sandwiched his free throws around a Cartwright layup with seven seconds to go.

Nets 124, Jazz 104
New Jersey outrebounded Utah 57-30 and pulled away from the Jazz with 41 points in the fourth quarter.

The Jazz had rallied from a 12-point deficit to trail only 83-78 after three periods, but the Nets scored the first eight points of the fourth quarter to pull comfortably ahead again.

Mike Gminski had four of the eight points on free throws and he went on to score nine of his 13 points in the period.

Albert King led seven Nets in double figures with 20 points.

Pistons 109, Pacers 96
Kelly Tripucka, who averaged 32 points in six games against Indiana this season, scored 38 points as Detroit handed the Pacers their fifth straight loss and 17th setback in 18 outings.

Tripucka hit 10 of 12 field goal attempts in the first half and scored 26 points to lead the Pistons to a 58-46 halftime edge.

Clark Kellogg led the Pacers with 20 points.

Rogers, Nicklaus TPC favorites says Watson

PONTE VEDRA, Fla. (AP) — Tom Watson says Bill Rogers and Jack Nicklaus are the men to beat in the prestigious Tournament Players Championship.

"I like Bill," Watson said after a final practice round for the $700,000 tournament that got underway today on the difficult, controversial Players Club course.

Rogers, the 1981 Player of the year, snapped a long non-winning string last week with a victory in New Orleans. "I was out there watching Rogers hit the ball. I like his chances very much. He's playing very well right now," Watson said.

Watson paused for a moment then quickly added: "And Nicklaus. I like Nicklaus' chances. He's playing very, very well."

And Nicklaus, generally regarded as the finest player the game has known, agreed.

"I'm starting to strike the ball real well, and that's my criteria," said the 43-year-old Nicklaus, a three-time winner of this event, billed as the annual championship of golf's touring pros.

"I made some changes in my swing at home last week, and I'm very pleased with them," said Nicklaus, who has finished eighth or better in his last four starts. "I feel my chances are better this year than they have been in some time."

Watson, the 1982 Player of the Year and holder of the U.S. and British Open titles, also is working on some swing changes. But he is far from satisfied with his progress.

"We all go through problems with our swings," he said. "I'm having problems right now. I'm not striking the ball particularly well right now. I didn't putt very well last week, or the week before that. You might say my game is pretty awful right now."

He offered a rueful smile, then took the positive approach.

"With me, though, it's like a light switch. You turn it on and off. My game can come around that fast. One key thought in my mind can do this. Who knows? I might go out and shoot 66," Watson said.

Despite his swing problems, Watson retained his ranking as one of the key figures in the field that has been reduced to 130 players by the withdrawal of three players, including defending champion Jerry Pate. He dropped out Wednesday because of a pulled muscle in his neck. "It's gotten worse," he said. "I feel like I'm wasting my time and everybody else's."

South African Gary Player and two-time PGA champion

Dave Stockton withdrew earlier.

Pate said he planned to take an extended break from Tour competition, three or four months, and may miss both the Masters and the U.S. Open.

Despite the three departures, the field remains the strongest of the year.

Among the standouts are PGA titleholder Ray Floyd, Masters champion Craig Stadler, Johnny Miller, Australian Greg Norman, Tom Kite, Hale Irwin, Lee Trevino and Arnold Palmer, a special invitee.

Portions of the final two rounds Saturday and Sunday will be televised nationally by CBS.

Drexler likes triple doubles

HOUSTON (AP) — University of Houston Coach Guy Lewis' discussion of second team All-American forward Clyde Drexler includes terms like "triple doubles" and "dipsy-do, dumble-de-dos."

The triple doubles are fine but Lewis could do with less of the dipsy-do, dumble-de-dos.

"He's one of the best assist men I've ever had at the forward spot," Lewis said.

"He's a great offensive rebounder and he's probably the best 'anticipator' I've ever coached. By that, I mean he's probably the best I've ever had at being able to steal the ball."

Lewis, however, is not as impressed with Drexler's jump shooting ability.

"I don't think he works hard enough on his shooting and I've told him that," Lewis said. "Of course, Clyde already thinks he has a great jump shot."

"That doesn't mean he's not a great player. But to be a complete player, he needs to work on his shot. When he squares up to the basket, he is a good shooter. But sometimes he takes a dipsy-do, dumble-de-do shot and they don't go in."

Drexler respectfully disagrees.

"I think I do (have a good jump shot), but as long as he (Lewis) keeps playing me on the post, he'll never know," Drexler said. "I'm really a big guard."

Drexler and the Cougars' next test comes Friday night in Kansas City, Mo. when they face Memphis State's 17th-ranked Tigers in the NCAA Midwest Regional basketball tournament at Kansas City, Mo.

Drexler has been an invaluable offensive rebounding aid for sophomore center Akeem Olajuwon.

"You have to do whatever it takes to win," Drexler said. "But if I'm playing the post next year, I'm not going to be too happy. He (Lewis) doesn't know that though."

Drexler's shooting stats have dropped off recently but Lewis says he's not concerned.

"I never worry about anybody's stats," Lewis said. "I like whatever stats help us win a ball game. If a guy gets seven steals and that helps us win a ball game, it's a great stat."

Drexler's idea of a great stat is called "triple doubles," which means double figures in scoring, rebounding and assists.

"I used to get them in high school but I haven't yet in college," Drexler said.

He came close in a regular season game against Rice, with 18 points, 11 rebounds and nine assists.

Redus hits, Carlton pounded

By The Associated Press

As a leadoff man, Gary Redus is certainly getting on base for the Cincinnati Reds this spring training. He's not only stopping at first, either.

"There's nothing wrong with the leadoff man hitting home runs," says Redus, who has hit four for Cincinnati in exhibition play, including one in the Reds' 8-2 loss Wednesday to Kansas City.

The Reds expect Redus to be as much a running threat as a slugger. Last season in the minors, he stole 54 bases in 59 attempts. He also had 29 doubles, nine triples and 24 home runs among his 146 hits. One of his homers this spring was a grand slam.

Monacelli grabs lead in Miller Open

MILWAUKEE (AP) — Amleto Monacelli of Venezuela averaged 244 for six games, taking an 88-pin lead after the opening round of the $150,000 Miller High Life Open Professional Bowlers Association tournament.

Monacelli, rolled a six-game round of 1,465.

Herd opens 3-5A baseball season Friday at Lubbock

Unless the bad weather, which has plagued the Panhandle of late, travels South, Hereford will open its District 3-5A baseball season tomorrow in Lubbock against the Westerners. Game time is set for 4 p.m.

Hereford, 3-3 on the season, hasn't played in almost two weeks. The Whitefaces' last game was March 12 in the Deaf Smith County Tournament. A tournament last weekend at Pampa was cancelled because of bad weather, while Tuesday's Award winner, was pounded for nine hits in five innings as the Montreal Expos beat the Philadelphia Phillies 6-1.

Gary Carter led the Montreal offense with three hits, Al Oliver drove in two runs and Roy Johnson started the assault with a first-inning home run.

Spring sensation Mike Brown, who leads California with 13 RBIs, doubled home the tying run in the ninth inning and drove in the winner with another double in the 11th, lifting the Angels to a 7-6 victory over the Chicago Cubs.

Dave Collins' two-run single in the fifth inning off Bob Forsch rallied a split squad on Toronto Blue Jays to a 3-2 victory over the St. Louis Cardinals.

Bob Karkovice hit a two-run homer in the sixth inning and Jim Stegman added a solo shot in the seventh to help the Chicago White Sox rout another group of Blue Jays 10-1. Gene Richards and Joe Pittman led San Diego's 19-hit attack with three hits apiece and Tim Flannery slammed a three-run homer as the Padres walloped the Oakland A's 13-2.

Home runs by Bob Skube and Ben Oglivie — his fifth of the spring — in the fourth inning powered a Milwaukee Brewers' split squad to a 3-2 victory over the Cleveland Indians. Steve Trout, making his first appearance in 10 days because of a sore shoulder, pitched four scoreless innings as the Chicago Cubs defeated the rest of the Brewers 4-2.

Atlanta center fielder Brett Butler threw out pinch runner Nick Capra at home plate for the final out of the game, preserving the Braves' 5-4 victory over the Texas Rangers.

Lance Parrish homered and Lou Whitaker had four singles and a sacrifice fly to lead the Detroit Tigers to a 5-2 victory over the Los Angeles Dodgers. Bob Stanley pitched five hitless innings of relief as the Boston Red Sox defeated the Houston Astros 9-5.

Home runs by Dale Berra and Dave Parker led the Pittsburgh Pirates to a 4-1 victory over the New York Mets. Manny Castillo singled home the winning run with one out in the 10th inning, giving Seattle a 6-5 victory over the San Francisco Giants to end the Mariners' five-game losing streak.

Rick Dempsey's single with two outs in the eighth inning drove in the winning run as the Baltimore Orioles defeated the New York Yankees 5-4.

Aaron seeking commissioner job

WEST PALM BEACH, Fla. (AP) — All-time home run king Hank Aaron says he will ask major league club owners to make him the next commissioner of baseball, USA Today said in Thursday's editions.

"Since no one has stepped forward, I will," Aaron said. "I'm not saying anything against Bowie Kuhn. I just want his job."

Kuhn's contract, which expires in August, will not be renewed and a committee has been appointed to seek his successor.

Aaron, who was inducted to the Hall of Fame last year and currently is a vice president for the Atlanta Braves, said that as commissioner "I would try to bring the public trust back in the players and owners. I think I have an understanding of the game and its people that a commissioner should have. I finished my playing career on top and I wouldn't mind ending my baseball career on top, too."

Bob Lurie, owner of the San Francisco Giants and a member of the commissioner selection committee, said,

"Hank is an outstanding person, and was an outstanding player, but my first reaction has to be what is his experience, what are his abilities to administer the game of baseball?"

The San Francisco Giants were the overtime champions of the National League in 1982, winning 11 extra-inning games and losing six.

The Newspaper BIBLE

FREE, AFTER 18 YEARS OF BONDAGE!

One Sabbath as Jesus was teaching in a synagogue, He saw a seriously handicapped woman who had been bent double for 18 years and was unable to straighten herself.

Calling her over to Him Jesus said, "Woman, you are healed of your sickness!" He touched her, and instantly she could stand straight. How she praised and thanked God!

But the local Jewish leader in charge of the synagogue was very angry about it because Jesus had healed her on the Sabbath day. "There are six days of the week to work," he shouted to the crowd. "Those are the days to come for healing, not on the Sabbath!"

The Lord replied, "You hypocrite! You work on the Sabbath! Don't you untie your cattle from their stalls on the Sabbath and lead them out for water? And is it wrong for Me, just because it is the Sabbath day, to free this woman from Satan's 18 years of bondage?"

This shamed His enemies. And all the people rejoiced at the wonderful things He did.

Now He began teaching them again about the Kingdom of God: "What is the Kingdom like?" He asked. "How can I illustrate it? It is like a tiny mustard seed planted in a garden; soon it grows into a tall bush, and the birds live among its branches. It is like yeast kneaded into dough, which works unseen until it is risen high and light."

He went from city to city and village to village, teaching as He went, always pressing onward toward Jerusalem.

Ask Kate

The 'I Spy' era

By Kate Woods

Please tell me when "I Spy," now seen in reruns, first aired on TV. How many years was it on? — G. D.

Now you're talking about my personal pick for all-time best series. The adventures of Kelly and Scotty premiered on Sept. 15, 1965 and ended Sept. 2, 1968. TV was never the same afterward.

MINNOW MAVEN — What was the name of the captain on "Gilligan's Island"? It has many of us baffled. — L.K.

How does Jonas Grumby grab you? That was the captain of the Minnow's real name (played by Alan Hale Jr.).

KATE'S GREATS — For what movies did Katharine Hepburn win Oscars? — M.L.

Miss Hepburn, the only performer ever nominated for 11 Academy Awards, picked up Oscars in the Best Actress category for an unprecedented four films, "Morning Glory" (1933), "Guess Who's Coming to Dinner" (1968), "The Lion in Winter" (1969) and "On Golden Pond" (1982).

MIKE'S ORIGINS — What nationality is Mike Wallace of "60 Minutes"? — I.P.

Wallace is the son of Russian Jewish immigrants.

Karen Abney chosen to represent club

Members of El Llano Study Club met Monday evening in the home of Mrs. Delores Foster. Serving as co-hostess was Mrs. Sue Amstutz.

During a short business meeting conducted by President Jane Coplen, Mrs. Karen Abney was chosen to represent El Llano as the club's nominee for the Texas Panhandle Award for Distinguished Service.

Mrs. Abney and two members of the club will attend a luncheon to be held April 16 at the West Texas State University Campus in Canyon, at which time the award will be presented.

The club voted to have the classic photo booth at the 1983 Hereford Town & Country Jubilee in August. Members of that committee are Jeane Dowell, Elizabeth Cesar, and Billie Farr.

Helen Rose presented an enlightening program entitled "Hereford Area 1910," after which refreshments of cookies, ice cream, tea and coffee were served to those already mentioned and Donna Jones, Rhonda Wagner, Avis White, Jean Ballard, Ms. Abney, Roberta Caviness, Opal Bookout, and Donna Warrick.

received a medal for placing second; and Vince Medrano, Brant Reid, Larry Backus and Steven McMillan. Not pictured is Don Carl Tardy. (Photo by Sandy Pankey).

Toys Galore

Mrs. James Glueck and her children, Laura and James, look over some of the toys to be featured in the Toy Walk at the St. Anthony's PTO Carnival. Mrs. Glueck is co-chairman of this booth. The annual carnival, featuring a "World of Disney" theme, is scheduled from 12 noon to 5 p.m. Sunday at St. Anthony's School. There is no general admission cost; booths will charge separately.

Walser honored on his 95th birthday

C.R. (Charlie) Walser was honored with a family birthday dinner on the occasion of his 95th birthday recently. Hosting the affair were his children, Mr. and Mrs. Guy Walser, Mr. and Mrs. Jim Clark, and Mr. and Mrs. W.H. Walser, all of Hereford, and D.C. Walser of Amarillo.

Walser's sister, Mrs. Mae Baker of Sudan, along with her son, Dexter Baker, and his wife, Ruth, were in attendance as were his nephews, Clifford Walser of Canadian and Earl Lance Jr. of Hereford, and a niece, Zella Mae Crump of Hereford.

Eleven grandchildren, 15 great-grandchildren, and four great-great grandchildren were present, the youngest being little two-week-old Holly Arjona.

Out of town family members included Joan Walters of Pampa, Gloria Grider of Irving, Carol Pappas of Temple, Leaton Clark of Austin, Lance Clark and Mildred Walser, both of Amarillo.

Also, Donnie and Doreen Purcell and children, Amy and Amanda; Becky Loman and daughter, Heather; and Bobbye and Mac Purcell, all of Canadian; and Bettye and Cleatis Hayes and Cody; and Devra and Johnny Arjona and Holly, all of Lockney.

Muscular dystrophy research continues

The term muscular dystrophy covers a group of inherited diseases characterized by muscle deterioration. An estimated 250,000 to 300,000 Americans suffer from it, with about two-thirds between the ages of 3 and 18.

Although no cure has been found, research continues. These disorders are usually genetically caused, but the specific defects have not been identified. When they are, treatment perhaps could involve replacing missing substances in much the same way that insulin injections control diabetes.

For now, respiratory exercises and antibiotics are extending the lives of many afflicted children. Exercises to stretch tendons also can help. Affected persons should remain as active as possible.

The Texas Medical Association says the most common forms of muscular dystrophy are Duchenne's, facioscapulohumeral, limb-girdle and myotonic.

Duchenne's, the most common and severe type of muscular dystrophy, is generally first noted in boys between the ages 2 and 6. The child develops a waddling gait and has difficulty rising from the floor and climbing stairs. The disease progresses rapidly, and the patient seldom lives more than 15 years after the disease strikes.

Facioscapulohumeral affects males and females equally and appears in early adolescence or in the 20s. The most recognizable symptoms are loss of facial expression and difficulty in raising the arms over the head. This is the least threatening form of muscular dystrophy because it progresses slowly and rarely causes an early death.

But considerable disability can result.

Limb-girdle can strike either sex in the first to third decades of life. Pelvic and shoulder muscles are involved, and deterioration varies from slow to rapid. Disability varies, but early death seldom occurs.

Myotonic may appear in early puberty but commonly arrives in early adulthood. Early signs include stiffness in the limbs, particularly in cold weather, inability to relax the grip after shaking hands; a tendency to trip or fall forward; and loss of facial expression. Patients rarely live out a normal life span.

More people emigrate from Mexico than from any other country. An estimated 800,000 emigrated illegally into the United States in 1976 alone.

Auxiliary members to honor state president

The Ladies Auxiliary to the VFW Post 4818 met in regular session Monday night with Doris Wilson presiding.

During the business session, all members were reminded of VFW Auxiliary state president. Betty Rose's visit to Dimmitt this Saturday. She will be honored with a luncheon at 12 noon. Each member attending will take a covered dish.

The Auxiliary Charter was draped in memory of Anne Mae Shaw, past national president.

Rose Goheen, safety chairman, gave a report on the Drug Abuse Prevention poster contest. There were 131 poster entries and Nick Morrow was the grand prize winner.

McDonald's gave gift certificates for French fries to all entries. Other businesses contributing gift certificates as prizes included White's Auto Store, Boots & Saddle, Funny Farm, Sports Stop and Mode O Day.

Thunderbird Appaloosas and Hereford Chamber of Commerce furnished Hereford bucks as prizes, and VFW Post 4818 furnished the three first prizes, including the grand prize.

Other members present were Leona Buckley, Doris Coffin, Rhonda Coffin, Maisie Heath, Essie Martin, Erma Murphey, Edith Richardson, Marta Williams, Mabel Yocum and Marie Goheen.

The next meeting will be April 4 at 7:30 p.m. preceded by a covered dish supper at 7 p.m.

Meeting scheduled

The Pro-Family Organization will meet from 12 to 1 p.m. Monday at the Community Center. Drinks will be furnished at the brown bag luncheon.

Mrs. Marge West of Amarillo will be speaking. She is currently serving on the State Board of Education.

The United States has more psychiatrists than any other nation. In 1979, there were 25,400 registered with the American Psychiatric Association and 25,400 registered with the American Psychological Association.

Genealogical workshop scheduled

A genealogical workshop on southern research with special guest speaker Beverly West Hathaway, professional genealogist of Clyde, Texas, will be presented by the South Plains Genealogical Society, from 8:30 a.m. to 3:30 p.m., Saturday, April 23, in the Municipal Garden and Arts Center, 4215 University Avenue, Lubbock.

Fee for the all-day session is $13.50 including lunch at the Center, or $10 if participants provide their own lunches. Reservations may be mailed to Blanche Park, SPGS Treasurer, 3420 57th Street, Lubbock, Texas 79413. Luncheon reservations deadline is April 18.

Mrs. Hathaway's topic is "Brick Walls in Southern Research and How to Get Over Them." A recognized authority in this area of genealogy, she has traveled widely investigating research sources in southern states, lecturing and teaching classes on this subject.

She is the author of four source books: "Kentucky Genealogical Research Sources," "Inventory of County Records of Kentucky," "Primer for Georgia Genealogical Research" and "Genealogy Research Sources in Tennessee."

Association meets for election

The Hereford Women's Bowling Association met for their annual meeting and salad supper recently in the Community Center.

New officers and directors were elected for two year terms. They included Alice Lueb, president; Helen Arntt, treasurer; Joyce Walker, Ruby Gallagher and Linda Wilcox, directors.

Other officers and directors are Charlene Sanders, vice president; Jan Walser, secretary; Pat Fowler, sergeant-at-arms, Dolores Nichols and Lois Jones, directors.

Ms. Jones, one of the two delegates, reported on the state convention held recently in Lubbock. Eleanor Hudspeth, delegate, told of the national convention which was held recently in St. Louis.

Association members approved April 30 for the Star of the Week Tournament.

Also, Ms. Hudspeth was elected delegate to national which will meet April 29-May 1 in Niagara Falls, N.Y. La-Juan Fowler was elected as alternate. Ms. Walser and Ms. Fowler were elected as delegates to the state convention in May at Fort Worth. Vi Moore was first alternate and Ms. Hudspeth, second alternate.

Joyce Walker read a letter for the National Bowling Hall of Fame and Museum reminding the Association of the amount of their donations.

Extra gifts were collected which will entitle HWBA as a patron and the name will be engraved on a donor plaque in the new building.

The first escalator was the Reno Inclined Elevator, patented by Jesse Reno of New York on March 15, 1892, and first installed at the Old Iron Pier on Coney Island in the autumn of 1896.
