Miss America told to give up crown

Give It Back

With temperatures climbing into the mid-90s the last few days, it's nice to take a few minutes to cool off. Kevin Winget, 14-month-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Wayne Winget, likes to eat an afternoon snack of fudge popsicles. What he does not like is having to share his frozen concoction with an uninvited guest—even if it is his best pal, Pootsie. (Photo by Sandy Pankey)

By ROBERT WADE

Associated Press Writer
ATLANTIC CITY, N.J. (AP) - Vanessa Williams, asked to surrender her 1984 Miss America crown for posing for nude photographs "totally inconsistent" with the pageant's image, probably can keep the $125,000 she earned for personal appearances, officials say.

Miss Williams, 21, the first black to wear the crown and the first of the 57 pageant winners to be asked to relinquish her title, has until Monday to meet the pageant's request that she step down, said Albert A. Marks, Jr., executive director of the contest.

Under the pageant's rules, Miss Williams would be replaced by the 1984 runner-up, Suzette Charles, Miss New Jersey, who also is black.

"This is a unique and terribly difficult situation in the 63-year history of Miss America," Marks said at a news conference Friday.

Marks said the pageant's executive board, which has scheduled another meeting on the matter for Monday, asked Miss Williams to step down because she violated a morals clause in her contract by posing for nude photographs in intimate positions with another woman.

'Totally inconsistent' posing

The photos are being published in the September issue of Penthouse magazine.

Marks said he believed Miss Williams would give up her crown voluntarily "because she knows that the photographs are totally inconsistent with the Miss America image."

He estimated Miss Williams has earned about $125,000 for personal appearances since winning the pageant in September 1983, and said she will probably be allowed to keep the money. Her earrings are being held in an account to be given to her at the end of her tenure.

Marks told The New York Times that the money Miss Williams has earned so far "is hers to keep." He said he was not sure what would happen to the $25,000 scholarship she earned when crowned.

Miss Williams, of Millwood, N.Y., refused to speak with reporters when she arrived in New York on Friday from Little Rock, Ark. Her spokesman said she would not comment until a 2 p.m. news conference

Monday at a New York hotel.

Marks said, "She told us some nude photographs had been taken...She said she was sorry. She was tearful to the point of hysterics."

Miss Williams' mother, Helen Williams, said she was disappointed with the pageant's decision to seek her daughter's ouster. She said her daughter "obviously made a decision not in her own best interest."

Pageant officials noted there is no specific rule against nudity, but that Miss Williams violated a morals clause requiring "the maintaining of the dignity of the crown of Miss America."

The photographs were taken by free-lance photographer Tom Chiapel when Miss Williams worked for Chiapel as a makeup artist and receptionist and before she won the pageant, said Penthouse publisher Robert Guccione. He described the pictures as "quite exciting."

He said he had a release form signed by Miss Williams and Marks said Miss Williams verified she had signed the release.

County blessed agriculturally

By KIM THOGMARTIN
Staff Writer

If the greatest miracle of all is birth, perhaps the second greatest miracle is growth. Since the beginning of time man has tilled the earth and nurtured plant life, enjoying the life-sustaining fruits of his labor at the end of each season.

In Deaf Smith County, where the sun shines brightly and the growing season is long, the miracle of growth is evidenced in an abundance of grains, vegetables and fruits. Fertile volcanic soil laced with a generous lime content, especially when drenched with mineral-rich water from underground reservoirs, produces hard winter wheat with a protein content that is usually 14 to 17 percent.

The county boasts 600,000 acres of cropland, about half of which is irrigated. Wheat, milo, corn, cotton and sugar beets are harvested by the tons each autumn. Nearly 10,000 acres is in vegetables, many of which are still planted or harvested by hand, including potatoes, onions, carrots, lettuce, cabbage and cantaloupes.

In 1960, Henry Turner questioned why all of the wheat grown here should leave the county before returning to the grocery shelves in flour sacks and as biscuit mixes. He bought himself a stone mill and started cranking. By 1965 Frank Ford and George Warner had become involved, and the company began to grow.

During the wheat harvest just ended, Arrowhead Mills, as the company is now known, bought more than one million pounds of wheat from the farms of Deaf Smith County. Boyd Foster, president of the 17 million a year business, said soybeans, corn, rye and tritacle are also processed in the mill.

People all over the nation, but especially health enthusiasts on the East and West coasts, buy the locally grown flours, cereals and mixes because they are free from sprays, commercial fertilizers and refining processes.

A.G. and Lillie Grisham have known a lifetime of growing things. Married 62 years ago in June, they have worked side by side in gardens and fields all over the state of Texas. The couple moved to Hereford 21 years ago after retiring from their 640-acre farming operation in the Simms community.

Since then, the garden near their home on S. Main Street has produced table vegetables for friends, neighbors and steady stream of regular customers. Grisham said in the interest of his health he reduced the garden to one acre this year. In the past, five acres was not unusual. "I have picked as many as five bushels of peas a day," he remembered. When the garden was at its biggest, a typical harvest might be 50 bushels of green beans, 75 bushels of peas and 100 bushel baskets of sweet corn.

Grisham couple takes advantage

The Grishams have an orchard as well, enjoying their own peaches, pears, apples and grapes. Mrs. Grisham makes sure the flower boxes that adorn the front of the house are filled with colorful blossoms every summer.

"There have been many days when he would be in the garden from sunup to sundown," Mrs. Grisham said of her husband. "In the wintertime, he just sits in his chair. When spring comes, he's like a butterfly. I'm glad to see it come."

Mrs. Grisham is 84, her husband is 82. "We thank the Lord for our health," she said. A native of Mississippi, she visited her uncle in Wildorado one year when she was young. She met A.G. and stayed in Texas, but is still very much the soft-spoken, southern belle.

Mrs. Grisham's father grew things too, on a patch of land northeast of Jackson. A running springs watered the family crops of cotton, corn, peas, peanuts and sugar beets.

"We had an organ in the parlor," she remembered. "People would come and sing while I played. I played the violin, guitar and mandolin too."

Mrs. Grisham, as now, was a lady in her teenage years. "We didn't think smoking was very nice."

Area relocation plan detailed

By REED PARSELL
Managing Editor

Not long ago, the local police and sheriff's offices received the following message from the Texas Department of Public Safety.

"Norad has reported aggressor ICBM firings. Missile trackings indicate that multiple nuclear detonations may occur in all DPS regions within the next hour. Begin implementation of shelter and radiological defense plans."

Not real, of course, the message was part of an emergency civil defense drill conducted about once a year. It was part of a series of war-time simulations to which city and county officials had to respond, explained Fire Marshal Jay Spain, civil preparedness coordinator.

Should the threat of nuclear attack seem strong, Hereford is targeted to receive 22,896 evacuees from the Amarillo area. All would come via Highway 60 and be situated, according to the Deaf Smith County Emergency Operations Plan, "within 72 hours after the relocation has been directed."

To combat doubts three days would be available for such a transportation maneuver, the plan offers, "A nuclear attack on the United States would most likely be preceded by a period of international tension and crisis. Sufficient time would be available for protective actions to be taken, including the temporary relocation of residents of probable target areas to safer locations.

Proposed housing for the bomb-fleeing immigrants is based on one person for every 40 square feet available. The largest capacities would be offered by La Plata Junior High School and Hereford High School, which would put up 2,460 and 2,183 people, respectively. Tierra

In case of nuclear attack threat

Blanca Primary School would sleep 961, Northwest Primary School 934 and Stanton Junior High School 892.

In all, 83 "congregate care" facilities are listed to house 22,896 evacuees. "The use of private households to quarter relocatees is not planned," according to the emergency operations booklet. "However, it is assumed that at least some local residents will voluntarily offer to lodge relocatees in their homes temporarily."

Most of the primary housing structures are schools and churches. Several hundred area businesses, however, are presented in the plan as surplus congregate care facilities should the need arise. The emergency capacity for Hereford and surrounding Deaf Smith County, the plan states, is 74,409.

Nutrition is to be offered through two meals per day, with each meal period lasting five hours and evacuees expected to consume their food within half an hour. "In a few instances," the plan allows, "limited seating capacities will require that individuals finish their meal and leave the dining area in less than 30 minutes."

Fifty-four locations are given by the booklet as feeding facilities, a majority of them schools and churches. The heaviest burdens are to be carried by HHS (2,728 people) and La Plata (2,654). First Baptist Church is to feed 1,091, while First Methodist Church has been assigned 904 meals.

Local restaurants dominate the list of 18 surplus meal providers. Should nuclear bombs appear likely to explode in the Panhandle, those in Hereford would be asked to go to fallout shelters, which are based on one person per every 10 square feet. Though an air flow of 10 cubic feet per minute is required, most of the proposed shelters do not contain such ventilation abilities, the plan says.

Upgrading of shelters would likely be accomplished, the booklet puts forth, should nuclear war appear imminent. If Sugarland Mall were upgraded, for instance, more than 11,000 people could remain there and be exposed to no more than 2.5 percent of outside radiation, the plan claims. The high school could reportedly give similar protection for 8,061.

"As a point of reference, and to show why the protection provided by most existing buildings is not sufficient, a person in a one-story single-family residence would be exposed to 50 percent of the radiation intensity outside the building," the plan reads. "Exposure levels in homes and unimproved commercial buildings could reach lethal levels while persons in existing or upgraded shelters were experiencing little or no harmful effects."

The entire emergency operation would be headed by an executive staff. Chief executive officer of the group is to be the mayor or county judge. He would be joined by the civil preparedness coordinator, city and county commissioners, a public information officer and either the city or county attorney as legal officer.

Twenty-three law enforcement personnel, with the same number of squad cars, are to be in charge of maintaining order. Officers from the local police and sheriff's departments would comprise the force.

Robbers elude law officers

VALLEY VIEW, Texas (AP) - Five heavily armed men who staged a daylight bank robbery and escaped in a stolen helicopter successfully eluded law officers, who made a futile attempt to track the bandits across Oklahoma by radar.

Clad in beige jumpsuits and armed with automatic weapons, the five men executed with military precision the six-minute robbery of the Valley View National Bank at about 9:30 a.m. Friday without firing a shot, according to Larry Todd, a Texas Department of Public Safety spokesman.

After holding customers at gunpoint and taking an undisclosed amount of money, the robbers boarded the waiting helicopter and headed for Oklahoma, authorities said.

"It was over in a matter of seconds," said Cooke County Sheriff's Deputy Jim Westfall. "Those people knew what they were doing." FBI agent Hal Bureson in Oklahoma City said there was no indication the helicopter had landed or refueled in Oklahoma. He said he had no clues to where the aircraft was, but did not believe it was in Oklahoma.

Group opposes ordinances

HOUSTON (AP) - A city councilman who pushed for a referendum aimed at repealing two gay rights ordinances says the issue facing voters is "what sort of city we will give our children and grandchildren."

Members of a group opposed to two recently passed gay rights ordinances said Friday they feel confident voters will overturn the municipal laws in a January referendum.

The Committee for Public Awareness submitted to the city clerk's office on Friday more than twice the number of signatures needed to force a referendum on the issue.

The city council narrowly passed the ordinances, which forbid discrimination against individuals on the basis of sexual orientation in city jobs, on June 19.

During a news conference on the steps of City Hall, City Councilman John Goodner, who was the main impetus behind the petition drive, said, "I don't think there's a chance" that the council will rescind the ordinances.

Mourning begins in city

SAN YSIDRO, Calif. (AP) - Eight minutes of confusion over orders for marksmen to shoot James Huberty, who killed 21 people at a McDonald's restaurant in a rampage to "hunt humans," made no difference in the number of casualties, police said Friday.

A weekend of mourning began late Friday as about 400 people attended a rosary for four of the dead.

At Our lady of Mount Carmel Church, soft sobbing filled the sanctuary where three caskets lay, covered with a thick blanket of flowers. Jackie Wright Reyes, 18, and her 8-month-old son, Carlos, of San Ysidro shared one casket. Maria Elena Colemenero, 18, of Tijuana, Mexico, occupied a second. Nine-year-old Claudia Perez of San Ysidro rested in a child's casket between the others.

Monsignor Frank Aldaforo had said earlier, "We try to do the best we can for everybody and cheer them up." A Mass was scheduled Saturday morning.

Meanwhile, Huberty's wife said she wished it was "a bad dream and I'll wake up." And a friend said one of the Huberty's daughters had played with one of the young shooting victims earlier in the day.

Negotiations finally completed

WASHINGTON (AP) - The two major postal unions, after storming out of contract talks, say "negotiations are over" with the U.S. Postal Service because management bargainers insist on a three-year wage freeze.

Negotiators for the two unions left the bargaining table Friday night just minutes before their contracts expired at midnight. Together, they represent 500,000 postal workers.

Under federal law, the breakdown triggers a period of fact-finding and binding arbitration that could last until Dec. 10, according to a statement by Postmaster General William F. Bolger.

Strikes against the Postal Service are illegal and Moe Biller, president of the American Postal Workers Union, urged members to "keep your cool."

"The National Executive Board of the American Postal Workers Union has determined that no job actions will take place if we do not reach an agreement," Biller said.

He and Vincent Sombritt, president of the National Association of Letter Carriers, said their unions would consider whether to stage nationwide strikes when they hold their conventions the week of Aug. 19.

Parliament approves amnesty

WARSAW, Poland (AP) - The Polish Parliament approved a general amnesty for the nation's 660 political prisoners today, including seven jailed Solidarity leaders and four top union advisers.

The amnesty also would include thousands of people jailed for non-political crimes.

The Sejm, or parliament, approved the amnesty bill by a vote of 365 to four, with eight abstentions.

The vote coincided with weekend celebrations marking the 40th anniversary of the proclamation of Communist rule in Poland and was viewed by Polish, opposition and western diplomatic observers as a major conciliatory gesture by authorities toward their opponents.

Polish leader Gen. Wojciech Jaruzelski, who personally approved the decision to go ahead with a general amnesty, according to Polish, western and diplomatic observers, was not seated in the chamber for the vote. There was no explanation for his absence.

Parliamentary Deputy Eugenia Kempara told the chamber the amnesty was another step of giving back to society those who got involved, for one reason or another, in those activities inconsistent with society's aims.

Ports assume normal operations

LONDON (AP) - Ferries sailing from Dover carried 2,000 trucks and 100,000 vacationers across the English Channel, and other ports rapidly resumed normal operations when workers returned to their jobs after a 10-day dock strike.

Union leaders prepared today to present the agreement, reached Friday after a 15-hour session, to a conference of 70 delegates for formal approval.

But longshoremen at 12 ports, including Britain's major container port, Felixstowe, did not wait for official approval. They returned to work Friday, immediately after labor and management announced an agreement to settle the strike by 35,000 workers.

Officials had no estimate of the cost of the strike, which idled more than 90 ports and halted 75 percent of Britain's import-export traffic. Thousands of tons of fruit and vegetables rotted in stranded trucks.

From telephone call

Police led to kidnapper

EVANSTON, Ill. (AP) - A telephone call from a childhood friend led police to a "dog-tired" Alton Coleman, wanted in a six-state reign of murder, rape and kidnapping until he and a female companion were arrested quietly in a park, authorities said.

Coleman, 28, offered no resistance when he was taken into custody about noon Friday, although he carried one bloodied knife in a pocket and a second in a sock, police said.

His companion, Debra Brown, was arrested as she began to leave the park. A .38-caliber pistol was found in her purse, authorities said.

"He was just smiling," said Sgt. Kathryn Hynds, who helped arrest the pair, ending a frantic search through the Midwest for Coleman, a suspect in six slayings who last week was made a special addition to the FBI's "Ten Most Wanted" list.

As he was arrested, authorities declared Coleman a suspect in a seventh killing. The body of Eugene Scott, 77, a retired Indianapolis businessman, was found Thursday along a roadside. The victim's car was found Friday near Evanston.

"He looked tired, dog-tired," Ms. Hynds said. "He must have known it was the end of the road. He was tired, past tired, maybe in the overtired stage."

Bail was set at $25 million for Coleman and at $20 million for Ms. Brown, 21, whom authorities describe as his accomplice.

Coleman, his hands handcuffed to his waist, spoke just three times during the 25-minute bail hearing, responding, "Yes, I do," when U.S. Magistrate Carl Sussman asked if he understood his rights, the charges against him and the proceedings. Detective Susan Triguorea, the first officer to spot the fugitives, said she was cruising in an unmarked car and saw them sitting on park bleachers overlooking some basketball courts.

Ms. Hynds and Sgt. George Scharm moved in to arrest Coleman while two other officers arrested Ms. Brown, who had begun to leave the park, police said.

"We had our guns drawn," said Ms. Hynds. "When we approached him, he was seated on the bleachers."

"He acted very casual," said Scharm. "He offered no resistance whatsoever."

Police said Coleman's hair was cut very short, making identification difficult, and that he was identified through fingerprints.

Coleman's alleged crime spree began May 29, when a 9-year-old Wisconsin girl disappeared. Her body was found June 19 in Coleman's hometown of Waukegan, and Coleman was charged with kidnapping and murder.

Authorities then pursued Coleman and Ms. Brown through Illinois, Indiana, Ohio, Michigan, Wisconsin and Kentucky.

Coleman has also been charged with the murder of a former Sunday school teacher in Norwood, Ohio and the abduction of an Indiana woman whose body was found in Detroit. He is wanted for questioning in another Indiana slaying and the death of a 30-year-old Toledo woman and her 10-year-old daughter.

Friday morning Evanston police received a call from a childhood friend of Coleman who had seen him walking in Evanston, a Chicago suburb, said Cmdr. Ernest Jacobi.

Letters to the Editor

Dear editor:

We ask your help in expressing our gratitude to the community for its support of Kids, Incorporated this season.

A myriad of businesses have backed us financially (through sponsorships; buying ads in programs for our Babe Ruth tournament; an outright donations - in some cases, unsolicited.)

The City of Hereford came to our aid with a nice "donation." The Commissioners' Court (Deaf Smith County) indicates it will be helping with some physical improvements in the near future. The Chamber of Commerce has done a number of kind favors as well.

We've had support from the general public when we went door-to-door selling soap and candy.

The Elks Lodge let our teams use their swimming pool without charge.

And obviously, we've received untold hours of volunteer help from coaches, board members, parents and friends.

We're most grateful to all of these, and others we may well have overlooked.

We'd encourage support for one more activity to be presented this summer by Kids, Incorporated, and that's a stage performance featuring Cuzzin; Tom Graham of Luling, Texas. He's an entertainer and recording artist ("Them Danged Old Cows") and will be here August 7th during the Jubilee.

We do hope everyone will plan to attend, both for the entertainment value and to help KI at the same time.

Thanks sincerely,
Buddy Peeler
Kids Incorporated President

EMERGENCY

Firefighting, meanwhile, is to be accomplished by a staff of 24 people.

La Plata's gymnasium would serve as the primary health care facility. The plan outlines a staff of 35 physicians, 14 dentists, 128 registered nurses and 85 licensed vocational nurses. There are to also be two ambulances.

Several local businesses and manufacturers are to provide services and supplies for the emergency operations. Water is expected to come from the city's 27 wells, while sewage systems are hoped to also be operable.

"The relocation period may be terminated by a peaceful resolution of the crisis or by nuclear attack on the United States," the booklet states. "Planning must be accomplished for both contingencies."

"...When the situation permits, and in accordance with national policy, the governor will recommend that the relocated population return to their homes. Local governments will be notified when a decision to end relocation is imminent."

A thought from Mark Twain: "The best way to cheer yourself up is to try to cheer someone else up."

As the years turn

75 YEARS AGO

In conversation with a traveling man from Fort Worth yesterday, he declared to the Junior Brand editor that he had visited nearly every town in the Panhandle and a large part of the towns in north Texas and that Hereford excelled all of them as to streets, sidewalks, residences and business houses. "I never saw a cleaner town anywhere," he added. "Your homes are above the average in cost and I see no shacks scattered about to mar the general beauty of the city."

A young banker from Plainview, who was in Hereford last Monday, he declared to the Junior Brand editor that he had visited nearly every town in the Panhandle and a large part of the towns in north Texas and that Hereford excelled all of them as to streets, sidewalks, residences and business houses. "I never saw a cleaner town anywhere," he added. "Your homes are above the average in cost and I see no shacks scattered about to mar the general beauty of the city."

50 YEARS AGO

Thru yesterday 2,426 head of cattle had been purchased in Deaf Smith County in the government's emergency relief program. The sales represented $23,536. Of this total $4,999 had been delivered. Checks were arriving in every mail.

Fire almost completely destroyed the interior and machinery of the John Jacobsen blacksmith shop last Friday afternoon when a fire broke out near a gasoline power motor used to drive the shop machinery. A tank of gasoline above the power motor, and lubricating oil on the floor became ignited from a shorted current in the ignition near the carburetor caused the greater part of the blaze.

25 YEARS AGO

Bids will be opened on about $385,000 worth construction and renovation for the county Wednesday. Deaf Smith County Commissioners at that time will consider offers from Construction companies on the building of a new jail and extensive renovation of the existing courthouse.

A loss of approximately $1,300 resulted when lightning struck a pig parlor on the Cord Hammock place killing 12 hogs and two registered sows.

10 YEARS AGO

Hereford City Commission, hope of providing the city with more water wells, approved Tuesday the $50,000 purchase of 21.1 acres near North Park from John D. Pitman.

A continuation of growth Deaf Smith County's tax rolls has resulted in a $10,000 yearly net income increase for General Hospital, the hospital's board of directors learned Tuesday.

1 YEAR AGO

Five years after being fired by Ford Motor Co., Lee Iacocca can take credit for one of the great comebacks in business history, the rescue of the nearly bankrupt Chrysler Corp., which could post a $700 million profit this year.

The Reagan administration expects the Polish government to decide to end martial law next week and release some political prisoners, state Department officials say.

FARMING

She learned to cook and sew after her mother died when Lillie was 14. "I remember once I made a blue silk dress. It had short sleeves, so my Dad wouldn't let me wear it."

The Grishams reared two sons, Milford and his family are missionaries in Argentina and Jim lives in Clovis.

Rolland de Beaudignies enjoys growing things on his farm in the Westway community. He still lives on the family farm in Belgium but come to Texas two or three times a year to visit son Hubert and soak up the sunshine. "I'm happy to be here, he commented during a recent visit. "It's freezing in Belgium right now."

The Beaudignies grow wheat, milo, cabbage, broccoli, turnips, carrots, squash, onions and pumpkin. This year, they planted about three acres of willoof. The European variety is sort of in the cabbage family, but Beaudignies said there really isn't a domestic vegetable to compare it with.

The willoof plants are grown in the soil until September. Then, they are pulled up with a carrot harvester and placed in cool rooms where running water helps the roots grow for another 20 days. The leaves can also be eaten like a salad but it's the root that is most in demand. Belgians usually boil it and smother it in cheese sauce, Beaudignies said.

The willoof is the first of several alternative crops planned by the family to conserve water. With the underground water table dropping and the price of running irrigation pumps going up, the Beaudignies are thinking about the future of farming in Deaf Smith County.

But that's another story.

Martin, Qualls exchange vows

The chapel of First Presbyterian Church in Amarillo was decorated with potted caladiums in baskets and an arch trimmed with greenery for the recent wedding of Vivian C. Martin of Canyon and Michael C. Qualls of Amarillo. Dr. James R. Carroll officiated.

Parents of the bride are Mr. and Mrs. Quentin Martin of Canyon. Patti Hendon Farmer of Canyon served as matron of honor and George Enloe of Amarillo was best man.

Bridesmaids included the bride's sister, Mary Thompson of Hartley, and Dianne Stone of Lubbock. Steve Webb and Art Mulligan, both of Amarillo, served as groomsmen. Bill Martin of Canyon, brother of the bride, escorted guests to the pews.

The bride's niece, Monica Martin, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Q. Martin II, was flower girl. The bride's nephews, Lance and Matthew Thompson, sons of Mr. and Mrs. Danny Thompson, were ring bearer and train bearer, respectively.

Chris Griffith played traditional wedding selections.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore an ivory satin gown featuring antique lace bodice trimmed with seed pearls, elbow-length sleeves, and full, floor-length skirt. Her full-length train was bordered with seed pearls and lace inlays. She wore a wreath of ivory silk flowers in her hair and her grandmother's pearls, and carried a bouquet of white roses, carnations and gardenias accented with greenery.

The bride's attendants wore floor-length, rose colored gowns with full skirts and puffed sleeves which fit just off the shoulders.

Kelley Tindol of Uvalde served wedding cake at the reception held at Back to Eden in Amarillo.

The couple is at home in Amarillo after a wedding trip to Corpus Christi.

The bride was salutatorian of her 1978 Hereford High School graduating class. She graduated from Texas Tech University in 1982 and plans to graduate from Texas Tech School of Law in May 1985. The bridegroom is a self-employed investment banker in Amarillo.

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — A showing of 1,000 years of Islamic art will be on view at the Minneapolis Institute of Arts July 28-Jan. 2, 1985.

"Islamic Art From the Permanent Collection" features miniature paintings, calligraphy pages, glasswork and woodwork, intricate inlaid metalwork, ceramics and books.

The objects, all drawn from the institute's permanent collection, are from Iran, Iraq, Egypt, India, Turkey and Syria, which all came under the influence of the Islamic religion. They span many centuries and diverse cultures but they are linked by their Islamic heritage.

Conference scheduled for young people

Over 150 teenagers from the Panhandle and adjoining counties of Oklahoma and New Mexico are expected to attend a substance abuse conference early next month at West Texas State University.

The Young People's Conference on Substance Abuse and Peer Pressure is planned for Aug. 3 in the Henson Activities Center. The event is held in conjunction with the eleventh annual Tri-State Institute on Substance Abuse.

Dr. Paula Englander-Golden, Oklahoma University professor and originator of the nationally-acclaimed Say It Straight program, will keynote the Aug. 3 proceedings for both the young people and adults. Dr. Golden's program is designed to help young people combat the influence of drug abuse in their peer group.

A special feature of this year's conference will be a presentation on sports medicine by Amarillo physician Dr. Richard Rehm. Dr. Rehm will conduct a three-hour session for coaches and young athletes with an emphasis on the effects of drugs on athletic performance and physical development.

Other speakers will concentrate on drugs and the family, effective communication and recognition of common street drugs.

Dormitory space for the pre-conference event is available at WTSU at a cost of $7.50 for the night. Registration for the conference is $10 which includes the noon meal. Scholarships are available by calling 1-800-692-4165.

The local Chemical People Task Force will be paying the fees for six young persons to attend the conference. Interested students are asked to contact Barbara Karins at the center, 364-6111.

English preferred

Don't you think it would be logical to have English as the "official" language of the United States?

Well, to most people's surprise, English is not legally our official language. That's why there is a law requiring that ballots be printed in English and Spanish.

You'd think it would be simple enough to pass a constitutional amendment declaring English to be our official language. However, a Senate bill introduced several years ago by Sen. S.I. Hayakawa of California has languished in a committee cubbyhole.

The bill has been revived by Sen. Walter Huddleston of Kentucky and there have been recent Senate hearings on the matter. Some liberal congressmen are opposing the amendment on the premise that it represents an attempt to discriminate against Hispanics. We cannot understand that line of reasoning.

It does not make much sense to print ballots in Spanish when all of the information about an election, from the candidates to the issues, is presented in English.

Forcing newcomers to learn English is not a hardship if they expect to become citizens. Generations of Germans, Dutch, Italians and others learned English in order to qualify for citizenship. Learning English is the best possible way for newcomers to move into the mainstream of American society.

Rural schools suffer

Big-city coyotes are in the hen house, and fixin' to eat the lunch of rural and suburban school districts in Texas.

The new education bill will make minimum foundation money away from school districts with strong tax bases and lower their permanent school fund money to 60 percent.

Approval of the bill will cost Andrews schools about $1.4 million, plus whatever it costs to implement all the new programs approved by the educational reforms. But it's not just school district like Andrews that will be penalized. Suburban districts such as Pasadena, Plano and Galena Park will give up funds to Dallas and Houston schools.

Approval of an educational bill that, in the long run, closes down rural schools, penalizes most schools with any kind of oil and gas production, and has the effect of moving money from this area of the state into the coffers of the big city schools of San Antonio, Austin, Houston, Dallas, and Corpus—plus penalizes athletes that have long distances to travel is gonna renew talk and action about separating West Texas from the rest of the state.

Bob Campbell, writing for the evening newspaper at Lubbock, reported recently on an increase of talk about secession by unhappy West Texans.

'A separatist movement to make West Texas a state could be spawned if public disgruntlement over the political and economic disadvantages being suffered by the region became severe enough,' the article quoted state Senator John T. Montford.

And while Montford said that, as a current state office-holder, he would not advocate such a move, former governor Preston Smith said he would.

'I think there are a lot of times when there is some aftershock, some bitterness, like in Hance's election,' Montford said. 'If the perception were such that we were always the stepchild, then I think that a lot of people would talk about it.'

If West Texans suffered aftershock from Hance's treatment downstate, wait until the Senate version of the education bill becomes the law of the land.

Reviewing past discussions and attempts of varying seriousness since the mid-19th century to make West Texas a separate state, former governor Smith said, 'Personally, I think it would be tremendous. We would be the richest state in the nation.'

Noting that Texas has always had the right to divide into five states, West Texas being one of them, the former governor said Congress would be much more likely to approve West Texas alone becoming a state. Such a move would leave the other four regions of Texas intact as one state.

We've got North and South Carolina, North and South Dakota, Virginia and West Virginia—why not Texas and West Texas.

The last serious effort to create a state out of West Texas was in 1921—and led to the creation of Texas Tech. Over 5,000 people, angered by Gov. Pat Neff's veto of a bill to give West Texas an agricultural and mechanical college, met in Sweetwater and passed a resolution of separation.

Governor Neff relented—and Texas Technological College was created, thus quieting the separatist movement.

Smith said in recent years West Texas has been at more and more of a regional political and economic disadvantage in relation to the other sections of the state. "The rest of the state has used us to finance all of their programs," Smith said.

If San Antonio and Dallas think they are economically deprived now as far as schools are concerned, wait until they've got to go it alone without any aid from West Texas.

If the big city coyotes are going to raid the hen house, perhaps it's time that we moved the hen house to West Texas.

Evolution examined

The debate over evolution has never shaken my faith in Scripture: "In the beginning, God..."

I grew up taught that creation was created by a Creator.

I have read and listened with fascination to the evolutionists who believe that creation evolved from nothing "with a big bang."

Now I've found a scholar—actually a chemical engineer—who combines those two views in a book called "The Fourth Kingdom."

Succinctly stated, William Sauber figures that, "In the beginning God, with a big bang created the heavens and the earth."

I'll buy that.

Sauber's concept of the "fourth kingdom" is predicted on a fascinating presumption that evolution is an orderly progression from minerals to vegetables to animals.

The "animals" include us.

And next to evolve is what he calls "the fourth kingdom."

Here is his scenario: As planet Earth cooled, all was "mineral."

The first crude cells to populate the planet resembled bacteria which evolved into the first plant cells—"vegetable."

Thence, up from the sponges and the protozoa came worms, fish, reptiles, birds and mammals and us.

It required the development of the human brain—plus dexterity—to allow us—men and women—to create the next evolutionary advancement—spaceships.

Mr. Sauber sees us eventually embarking on a space ark to leave this planet in favor of more friendly ones.

"Machines will fulfill our destiny."

His prelude of "The Fourth Kingdom" may fascinate you as it did me. It may merely make you happier that you lived when you lived.

But inevitably you should be reassured by the certainty with which this evolutionist—in the end—is forced to concede that the proof of a Creator "has been uncovered by the scientific process itself."

That Einstein, who perceived reality far more deeply than most of us, left us this legacy: "There is a creative force, a higher intelligence, operating in nature and in the universe."

And that Darwin, were he alive today, sharing what the life sciences are now learning, would have to rewrite his own evolutionary theory to acknowledge: "In the beginning, God..."

The Penultimate Word

CONVENTIONS

We called him Brother Stigler. No one called him by his first name—not even his wife. It was not that he demanded such respect, he got it the old fashioned way, he earned it.

The one thing that riled his Tennessee blood to a boil was long announcements at religious meetings. He would grouse about the fact that we announced every meeting in the world. At one conference he could bear it no more. The announcements droned on ad nauseam.

Finally, Stigler arose and said, "Mr. Chairman, though it seems impossible, in the midst of all of the announcements we have suffered through, we have overlooked one event. Next Sunday there is to be a rattlesnake hunt in Okeene, Oklahoma."

I thought of Stigler last night when the Democrats were going through the roll call to elect their candidate. As each state was called someone would go through a long litany about their great state. Virginia had to announce that Thomas Jefferson was born in their great state. Kentucky had to try to out brag Virginia.

I sat up to watch this circus. Some of it was frightening. It is a little scary to realize that a decision as important as selecting a presidential candidate was being made by a bunch of drunks in silly hats. I consoled myself with the thought that the real decisions are made in smoke-filled rooms behind the scenes. Then I remembered the smoke-filled rooms are full of drunks in funny hats.

I stand in amazement that the system works at all, but somehow it does.

The first event I ever watched on TV was a Republican convention. Dwight Eisenhower was nominated while I looked on in fascination and horror. One night the convention droned on and on. Speeches were long and boring. Roll calls were sillier than usual. Suddenly some guy pulled a "Stigler." The guy was drunk, but he has always been one of my heroes.

With slurred speech he began to holler for attention. "Mr. Chairman! Mr. Chairman! Mr. Chairman!" Finally he was recognized. He said, "Mr. Chairman, I love my country. I am willing to die for my country, but I don't want to die tonight. I move we adjourn."

They should have listened to him, but they didn't.

Warm Fuzzies,

Economic policies applauded

By Richard L. Leshner
President

WASHINGTON—The centerpiece of Ronald Reagan's campaign for the presidency in 1980 was the Kemp-Roth tax cut, a 30 percent reduction in individual income tax rates.

President Reagan's landslide victory that year, combined with his party's winning control of the Senate and adding dozens of members in the House of Representatives, ensured that tax rates would indeed fall. And true to his campaign promise, the administration drafted and passed through Congress the Economic Recovery Tax Act of 1981. It wasn't Kemp-Roth verbatim—rates were cut by only 25 percent and the rate reductions were delayed—but it was pretty close.

Political observers, economists and, last but not least, American taxpayers are beginning to watch the 1984 presidential election for clues as to what changes in the tax code we can expect in 1985. In general, Republican candidates oppose raising federal taxes and argue that the deficit spending problem should be attacked with a combination of spending restraint and continued economic growth. Democrats have tended to focus on increasing taxes. Voters in November will choose between these two contrasting approaches in the presidential election, as well as in Senate and House races.

It is not surprising that the two major parties in the United States would offer conflicting policies vis-a-vis the deficit. That is why we have two parties and not one. What is surprising, however, is that this early in the 1984 campaign major figures in both political parties, representing liberals and conservatives, are building an uneasy consensus on a rather important tax issue. That is the concept of a flat tax.

Now the flat tax coalition is a rather broad one at the moment.

There are more than a dozen separate bills before Congress all parading under the rubric of the flat tax. Most are not a true flat tax with one rate and no deductions. But all are attempts at gross simplification of the tax code.

Now, some flat taxes are flatter than other flat taxes, but they all make some movement toward three principles. A reformed federal income tax, they agree, should be simpler, more fair and economically efficient, i.e., it should provide greater incentives to work, save and invest.

In the interest of simplicity and fairness, each of these proposals reduces the number of exemptions and deductions in the tax code and also reduces the number of income tax brackets. This would be progress toward a tax code understandable to individuals without an advanced degree in accounting, and it would also increase confidence in the tax code by assuring Americans that other taxpayers are not getting away with paying "less than their fair share" through complex and costly loopholes.

To promote economic growth, the flat tax proposals reduce the top marginal tax rate from the present 50 percent to a high of 30 percent in the Bradley-Gephardt bill and to as low as 10 percent in Rep. Mark Siljander's (R-Mich.) legislation. Reducing the number of exemptions and deductions also begins to get the government out of the business of using the tax code for social engineering. ("Do what Uncle Sam wants you to do and you get a nice tax deduction.")

I do not mean to exaggerate the degree of consensus surrounding the flat tax proposals. Very real differences remain.

The Kemp-Kasten flat tax proposal would establish a top marginal tax rate of 25 percent and, by doubling the personal and dependent exemptions, remove all federal taxes from the first $14,000 of income for a family of four.

The Bradley-Gephardt flat tax would establish rates of 14 percent, 26 percent and 30 percent. Unfortunately, this bill would also increase the capital gains tax and repeal indexing of tax brackets, bringing back the hidden tax of bracket creep.

Sen. Dennis DeConcini's (D-Ariz.) flat tax proposal would establish a 19 percent flat rate and fully integrate the corporate and individual income taxes.

One danger posed by the movement toward the flat tax is that some politicians see the flat tax as a way to increase taxes under the guise of tax reform. We have been fooled by this strategy before. Thus, as the political campaigns of the fall heat up, we must be very careful to examine the various proposals and ensure that "broadening the tax base" does not become this year's euphemism for hiking taxes.

Still, despite the differences, it is heartening to see congressmen moving away from the idea of a graduated income tax designed to punish work and savings. This movement toward a bipartisan understanding of the role of incentives in economic growth certainly shows that we have come a long way in the last few years.

And given the tremendous growth and job creation spurred by the 1981 reduction in income tax rates, just imagine the growth and progress possible in the last half of this decade if marginal rates were actually dropped to a maximum of 30 percent or 25 percent or 19 percent or even 10 percent. If the 1984 campaign brings such progress, hold onto your hats and get ready for an economic boom such as the world has never seen before.

Bootleg Philosopher

Wherever went investigation?

Editor's note: The Bootleg Philosopher on his Deaf Smith County grass farm seems a little puzzled this week.

Dear editor:

Everybody has heard the stories about the military spending $800 apiece for screwdrivers and $150 for claw hammers or whatever and other hair-raising examples of outrageous waste, but there's something about all this that puzzles me.

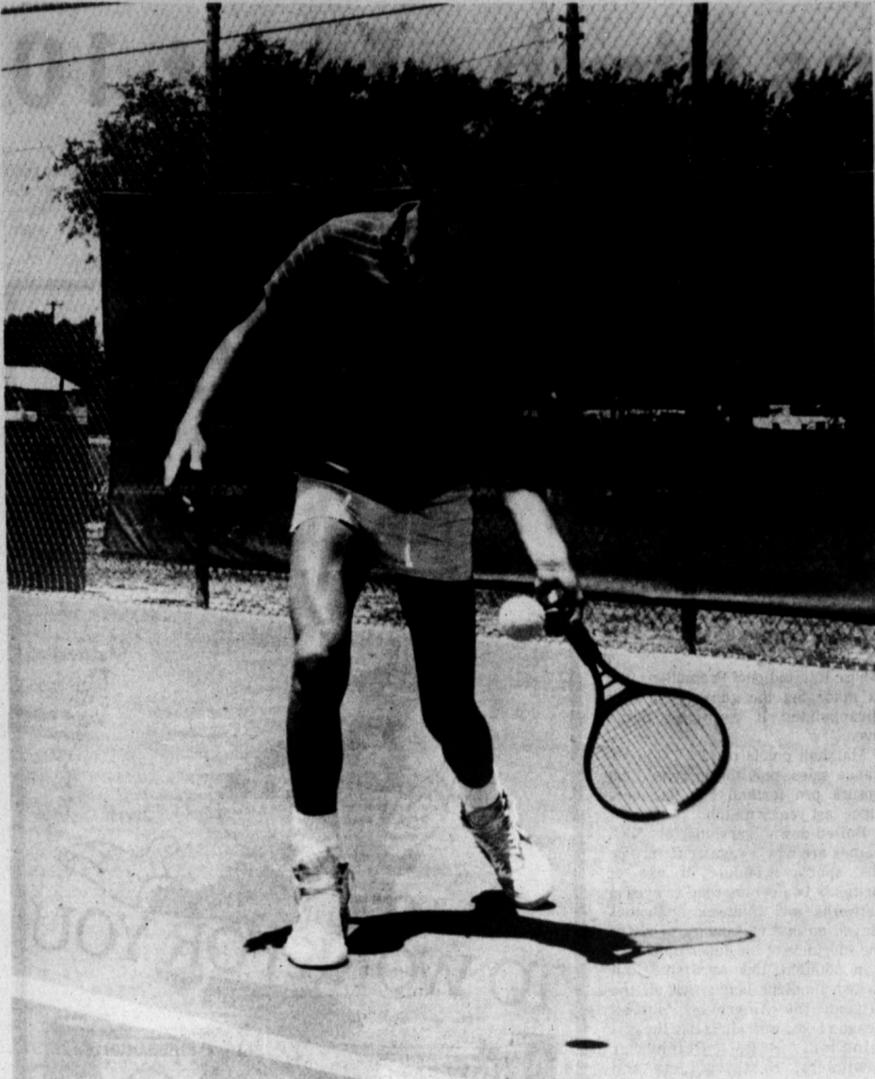

When a reporter gets hold of one of these stories and it makes headlines, the military brass says it is "instituting measures to curb the practice," and the story fades away. Then a few months later something else comes out, like the military admitting it disposes of 3 billion dollars worth of surplus parts each year to junk dealers, then a little while later discovers it needs them back. The junk dealers are happy to oblige, selling the parts back at several times what they paid for them.

What puzzles me about all this is where are the investigative reporters? Looks like some of them would be interested in locating the clerk or the officers or whoever who authorized the paying of $800 screwdrivers, along with the dealers brazen enough to charge that much. Looks like those hard-hitting guys on "60 minutes" for example would be chomping at the bit to flash their lights on such people and cross-examine them on television. But nothing happens, the practice goes on, and nobody gets fired.

I'd look into this myself but I'm going to be tied up the next few weeks watching political conventions on television.

Yours faithfully,
J.A.

Obscure Australian leading, Watson prepping to pounce

ST. ANDREWS, Scotland (AP) - When the 113th British Open Golf Championship began, Ian Baker-Finch was hoping for a top 20 finish and Tom Watson was looking for a record.

At the halfway point of the tournament, Baker-Finch now shares a record and Watson is hoping for another of his strong finishes.

Baker-Finch, a virtual unknown from Australia, shot a 66 Friday for a 36-hole total of 134, matching the standard for St. Andrews set in 1960 by Roberto de Vicenzo of Argentina.

"It's a surprise in that I didn't expect the lead," Baker-Finch, who finished his round just before temperatures dropped 20 degrees to 55. "I know I'm capable, but I didn't tee off expecting to win. Something in the top 20 was my goal."

Baker-Finch has a three-stroke lead over Seve Ballesteros of Spain, who won the British Open in 1979 and shot a 68 Friday. Also three strokes behind were Nick Faldo, who had a second-round 68, and Lee Trevino, a two-time British Open winner, who shot a 67 Friday.

At 138 was Bill Longmuir, one of the first-round leaders, who shot a second-round 71.

Then came the group of four at 139 that included Watson, the two-time defending champion, who has won this title five times, one short of the record of Harry Vardon.

"I played a good round of golf today," said the 34-year-old Watson of his 4-under-par 68 that left him five strokes off the lead.

"With the exception of the 17th, it was a very, very good round," he said.

Watson was seven under par when he approached the notorious Road Hole, a par-4 that Ballesteros and Trevino said should be treated as a par-5 and which Tom Kite has described as the hardest hole in the world. Watson took a six and groaned, "The Lady got me."

Joining Watson at 139 were Lanny Wadkins, Fred Couples, and West Germany's Bernhard Langer.

Australian Greg Norman, one of the three first-round leaders, was eight under for the tournament through the first six holes Friday.

Soviet-bloc meet

Two world records broken

By ERIC WAHA
Associated Press Writer

BERLIN (AP) - On a day when world records were the aim of a group of Soviet-bloc athletes, two competitors found the mark.

East Germany's Uwe Hohn threw the javelin 343 feet, 10 inches, becoming the first man to break the 330-foot mark, and Bulgarian Ludmila Andonova cleared 6-90 in the women's high jump competition, both world records set Friday at the "Olympic Day" Soviet-bloc track and field meet in East Berlin.

The meet is an annual event stressing East Germany's support of the Olympic movement. The competition this year took on a combative tone after the Soviet-led withdrawal from the Los Angeles Games.

Organizers of the meet let it be known that athletes would be trying for world records to stress that the boycott was depriving the Los Angeles Games of many of the world's top competitors.

World records had seemed out of reach Friday because of the unseasonably cool weather during the evening. Until the two records were set, most athletes appeared hampered by the chill.

Hohn, a 22-year-old soldier, hurled an American javelin to erase the standard of 327-2 set by Tom Petranoff of the United States on May 15, 1983, in Los Angeles.

Hohn's previous best toss had been 326-6 last May in Potsdam, a Berlin suburb where the "Olympic Day" competition was to wind up today.

"I knew I could surpass 100 meters (330 feet) but this wasn't a Beamon mark. I know I can throw even farther," Hohn said referring to the 29-20 long jump of Bob Beamon in the 1968 Olympic Games.

Minutes after Hohn set his mark, Andonova entered her name in the record books.

Competing alone after former world record holder Tamara Bykova of the Soviet Union failed to clear 6-70, Andonova astonished the crowd by clearing 6-90 on her first attempt. The height was initially announced as 6-9, but a remeasurement showed she had cleared 6-90.

"It was tough to compete only against the bar," Andonova said referring to the lack of competition. Her best previous jump was only 6-60, so her improvement was a startling 30 inches.

Andonova, 24, began competing in 1978. She gave birth to a daughter last October and didn't resume training until January. Her husband Atavan is the Bulgarian decathlon record holder.

Sergei Bubka of the Soviet Union, the world record holder in pole vault at 19-40, didn't come close to clearing 18-0 on his three tries. His failure was greeted with a chorus of derisive whistles from the crowd.

Sergei Volkov of the Soviet Union won the event at 18-8 and then failed at three attempts to clear 9-40.

World record holder Marlies Goehr of East Germany sprinted to a 10.91 clocking in the 100 meters, finishing comfortably ahead of the 10.91 clocking in the 100 meters, finishing comfortably ahead of teammate Ingrid Auerswald, who was clocked in 11.13. Goehr set the world record of 10.81 last summer. A 10.79 clocking by American Evelyn Ashford last summer in Colorado Springs, Colo., has never been sanctioned.

The run-up in the Olympic javelin throw is 120 feet and experts estimate it supplies about 25 percent of the throwing power.

"IT'S JUST AS GOOD AS MICHELIN AND $30 CHEAPER."

Everyone and his uncle is comparing himself with Michelin these days.

"It lasts as long as Michelin." "It handles as good as Michelin." And just in case no one has said it to you today, let us be the first to say it: "It's cheaper than Michelin."

While comparison may be one of the sincerest forms of flattery, we'd like to point out what users have learned at the hands of experience, it's only as good as Michelin when it is a Michelin!

That is particularly true of the Michelin Pilot XDA low-profile Radial. This extraordinary drive axle tire delivers up to 25 percent more mileage than the standard radials. (That offsets the lower initial price of many standard radials right off the bat.)

The Michelin XDA also makes your biggest operating cost fuel-less costly. It minimize rolling resistance significantly, and in doing so reduces fuel consumption up to 4 percent compared to standard radial tires. 4 percent over an expected original tread life of 200,000 miles is a mint of money!

The Michelin XDA drive axle low-profile radial also give you excellent retreadability and exceptional traction on wet, dry and even snowy roads!

So why settle for a cheaper tire that isn't as good as Michelin, when it's more cost-effective to get one that is as good as a Michelin - a Michelin!

MICHELIN. BECAUSE SO MUCH IS RIDING ON YOUR TIRES.

Montreal ace drops ninth of last 10

By JONATHAN VITTI
Associated Press Writer

The question used to be about Steve Rogers' ability to win 20 games. Now it is how many the injured pitcher will lose.

The 34-year-old right-hander dropped his ninth game in his last 10 decisions, giving up five runs in three innings as the Houston Astros toppled the Montreal Expos 8-4 Friday night.

Rogers has not won in the Astrodome since May 24, 1975 and owns a 1-11 career record in Houston.

But this season, Rogers' difficulty in Houston is par for the course. Friday's appearance ballooned an already-fat earned run average to 5.79 and lowered an already-impaired record to 3-10.

The same Steve Rogers who won 36 games over the past two seasons has given up 102 hits in 87 innings and walked 44 while striking out only 28. The comeback trail from this spring's shoulder injury has been all uphill.

"I've had such bad outings this year, I've had to force myself to come back, at times," said Rogers. "If I wasn't throwing crisply, I might have some doubt. But I felt good out there."

The Astros felt better. Bill Doran opened the Houston first with a double, preceding Reynolds' triple and an RBI single and Denny Walling. Walks to Jose Cruz and Jerry Mumphrey loaded the base before Enos Cabell and Terry Puhl drove in two runs with fielder's choice grounders.

Two singles and a walk in the third inning gave the Astros a fifth run before Rogers departed.

Elsewhere in the National League, San Francisco beat Chicago 3-2, New York edged Cincinnati 3-2 in 11 innings, St. Louis routed Los Angeles 10-5, and Atlanta embarrassed Philadelphia 13-1. Pittsburgh and San Diego split a doubleheader, with Pittsburgh winning the opener 4-3 and San Diego the nightcap 3-2.

Giants 3, Cubs 2

Manny Trillo made three standout plays in only his second game at third base and singled to launch a three-run rally in the fourth inning.

Jeff Robinson, 5-11, picked up only his second victory in his last 14 starts. Greg Minton pitched the last two innings for his tenth save.

Trillo, a four-time Gold Glove winner as a second baseman, made his three exceptional plays in the sixth inning.

Trillo robbed Ryne Sandberg of a double when he grabbed his smash down the line and threw him out, made a fine play on Gary Matthews' grounder and then made a diving catch of Leon Durham's line drive.

"I didn't want to play third base," said Trillo. "Everytime I play third base I lose 10 pounds."

The game was delayed by rain at the end of the seventh inning for 90 minutes.

Pirates 4-2, Padres 3-3

Tony Gwynn's three-run homer in the eighth ended John Tudor's shutout bid and rallied the Padres to split their two-night doubleheader.

Jim Morrison and Doug Fobel led off successive innings with homers and starter Rick Rhoden drove in the go-ahead run as the Pirates won the opener 4-3.

Mets 3, Reds 2

Wally Backman's double and Keith Hernandez's sacrifice fly in the 11th raised the Mets' extra-inning record to 6-0 this season and Jesse Orosco's record to 8-2.

"We have been very proficient at it (extra-inning play), mainly because we've had outstanding pitching," New York Manager Dave Johnson said. "We had it again tonight."

Cardinals 10, Dodgers 5

David Green and George Hendrick each homered and combined for five hits and five RBI.

Braves 13, Phillies 1
Brad Komminsk hit two home runs and Dale Murphy one, and the Braves took advantage of three Philadelphia errors to score eight unearned runs.
Mike Schmidt homered.

Philadelphia, Bandits to have played in England

WEMBLEY, England (AP) - The United States Football League has pitted its two most successful teams in a fight for acceptance on both sides of the Atlantic Ocean.

The league champion Philadelphia Stars and the Tampa Bay Bandits, beaten by the Birmingham Stallions in the Eastern Conference title game, were scheduled to meet today at Wembley Stadium, the revered home of British soccer.

It's only the second time U.S. professional football has dared defy soccer's stranglehold on the European sports fan.

Last year, the Minnesota Vikings and St. Louis Cardinals clashed on this same turf in a pre-season game for the older and wealthier National Football League. Despite drawing some 33,000 paying customers and causing a modest sensation in Britain, the game ended up losing its promoters roughly $1 million.

"We've got our arithmetic right this time," said John Marshall, whose International Promotions Ltd. is managing the game. "We'll be disappointed if we don't break even."

Marshall points to $200,000 in advance sales, plus the increased exposure pro football has had here since last year's match.

Boiled-down versions of NFL games are now a regular fixture on the sports schedule of one of Britain's two commercial television networks and millions of Britons stayed up late in January to watch the spectacle of the Super Bowl.

In addition, this April, the first British amateur league got off the ground, the American Football League U.K., with clubs like the Birmingham Bulls, Colchester Gladiators, Heathrow Jets and Milton Keynes Bucks.

"It's a fascinating game," said Frank Dunster, a 33-year-old stockbroker who discards his pinstripe suit and tie to manage the Stock Exchange Stags. "It's a bit like chess and rugby rolled into one."

Add to the British cult following the thousands of American expatriates living in Britain and nearby on the Continent, and Marshall believes he'll recoup some of last year's losses.

How the USFL stacks up against the 50-year-old NFL may well be a matter of indifference to the British fan, for whom the controlled violence of American football and the color and pagentry surrounding it are rewards in themselves.

Philadelphia quarterback Chuck Fusina said the Wembley crowd should expect a good show, exhibition game or not.

"We'll be giving it all we've got," he said. "We want to give the British fans something to remember."

Harry Craft in 50th year of baseball

By J.C. DEAVOURS The (Conroe) Courier

CONROE, Texas (AP) — What do the original seven astronauts, Bob Hope, Howard Cosell and George Steinbrenner have in common?

At one time or another, they, like countless others, have been acquainted with Conroe's Harry Craft.

This is a special season for Craft. He marks his 50th year in professional baseball.

Name someone — anyone — connected with major league baseball during this span of time and odds are that his and Craft's paths have crossed.

Craft once played against Babe Ruth; he was a center fielder for the Cincinnati Reds that won the 1940 World Series; he was a member of a National League All-Star team and an American League All-Star team; he was the first manager of a 17-year-old kid named Mickey Mantle; he was the first manager of Houston's major league team which was formed in 1962, known as the Colt .45s.

The 69-year-old Craft, who has lived in Conroe for 14 years with his wife Nell, is currently on major league special assignment for the San Francisco Giants. That is, at some time during the season, Craft views each of the major league teams, evaluating the skills of each athlete. His consultation and the information he gathers, thus, becomes invaluable to the Giants for future trades.

Why has he remained in baseball for 50 years?

Craft responded, "I've stayed with it because every facet that I've been a part of, even since my playing days...you sit down and you take stock and you say 'can I say that I've enjoyed it?' and 'do the pluses outweigh the minuses?' and I can not find very many minuses. The pluses always come out on top.

"Sure, I've had some heartaches and some things that have been kind of rough, but by and large, everything has been just great, just really pleasant."

Before moving to the Giants, Craft served in the same capacity with the New York Yankees from 1978 to 1982. He was asked about his relationship with Steinbrenner. "As far as myself, personally, he has treated me all right all the time I was there. I was never 'under the gun' because I was out traveling the 26 cities. So, I never came into this 'flack' you read about in the paper.

"I do say this — and this is my opinion and no one else's — you cannot take a player apart in the media and say 'well, he can't do this; he's sorry'; and I'm going to get rid of him...and George got to where he was too impetuous...he couldn't wait... he's (Steinbrenner) taken so many good ones apart.

"I admire Dave Winfield. He (Steinbrenner) has had so many things to say about Winfield and yet Winfield has come back, and he's never quit playing."

Craft's remark about Winfield reveals the concern he has had for players through the years. Case in point: Mickey Mantle.

As a 17-year-old youngster in the Yankees' organization, Mantle first played under Craft who managed the Yankees' Class C Joplin, Mo., team in 1950.

In Mantle's own novel, "The Education of a Baseball Player," he says Craft "was the man, next to my father, whom I wanted most to be like. He taught me many things about baseball but he taught me many more things about being a man.

"I was impressed with the way he kept up his appearance, always wearing a necktie and neat suit in the hotel lobby or on the street, and I never since have gone in much for walking into a dining room in a sweater. It seemed to me that Harry Craft always looked the part of a manager, or of a leader. He was friendly but dignified, stern but not sour, and he walked like a man who knew where he was going and what he was going to do when he got there," Mantle says in his book.

Mantle continued, "I can't say I patterned myself after Harry, for we are two very different people. But I looked up to him, enjoyed being in his company, and found myself imitating his manner of dress and public deportment occasionally, the way boys will when they find someone they admire."

Here's a footnote for Mantle fans: it was Craft that recommended the youthful slugger to be shifted from shortstop to the outfield (or possibly third base).

"He just didn't have the natural reactions that a shortstop ought to have, although he had speed, a tremendous arm, tremendous power for an infielder, and power from both sides of the plate," Craft said.

Years later, after various managerial and coaching stops, Craft took over in 1962 as the first skipper of the Houston Colt .45s.

The "Colts," with Craft winning the coin toss (as he called 'heads') with another new franchise, the New York Mets, selected Bob Aspromonte, Bob Lillis and Norm Larker, among others that were picked from a "players pool."

Lillis is presently the manager of the Astros. Craft believes in Lillis' ability as a manager. "To me," Craft explained, "Lillis proved that he had the mark of a good baseball man...when he started losing his players (due to injuries) this season and the ball club looked like it was going to fall on its face and just fall apart — he did not panic; he did not poor-mouth them; he didn't take them apart in the press or the media and he stayed with them and let them know he was behind them and finally he gained their confidence.

"I think they have more confidence now than I've ever seen a ball club have right at this particular time because they are starting to play a little better and Lillis has never lost faith in them.

"If Lillis had Joe Sambito, Dave Smith and Dickie Thon...if he had real team healthy like he had a couple of years ago...Dickie Thon could turn this whole thing around. That's my personal opinion of it," Craft said.

"I think I had a little say in Al Rosen (Astros president and general manager) trading for him. I had seen Dickie with the California Angels when I was in Arizona covering clubs for the Yankees and Al asked me about him. I said he (Thon) is one of the finest-looking young players I've seen. The reason I liked him so is because he is so gung-ho. He goes all out on everything and he's not afraid of anything. I just thought he was an outstanding prospect," Craft said.

Unfortunately, Thon got hit in the face by a pitched ball early in the season and has not yet returned to active duty for the Astros.

Lillis himself was a pretty gung-ho player. An infielder, he was the most valuable player on the first Colt .45s team. Craft remembers Lillis as "just a good solid player. He would contribute something...he played his percentages well. He never ceased to keep his head in the game and he never ceased to give you his best effort at all times."

"The moment he walked on the field and the moment he put the uniform on, you didn't have to worry about him going to loaf on you or shirk his duties. He was that type of man as a player. And he's the type of man that you look for if you say 'well, do you think he can make a manager?' Emphatically, yes! Right from the beginning. I've been in his corner all the way.

"But not all of them (managers), I can say that about," he chuckled.

How about the World Series this year?

Craft favored San Diego in the National League. In the American League, he thought Detroit, Baltimore and Toronto had a shot at the pennant. (He did not predict a series winner.)

There are two other former players under Craft that are managers of big league clubs today — Tom LaSorda of the Los Angeles Dodgers and Bill Virdon of the Montreal Expos.

Aging disease victim conquers odds

By CINDY EDWARDS
Marshall News-Messenger
HALLSVILLE, Texas (AP) — Last month, Mickey Hays celebrated his 12th birthday, an occasion doctors said he would never experience.

Mickey, who suffers from a premature aging disease called progeria, wasn't supposed to live to be 8 years old.

"The doctors said I'd never make it to eight," the 3-foot-8 boy said. "Then they said I'd never make it to 10, then 12."

"I'm fooling all of them," he said. "They just don't say anything anymore."

"I'm determined to live a long time," he said. "The doctors are just guessing about me now."

Mickey's mother, Cindy, said her 12-year-old son should have been 120 years old on his birthday June 30 since doctors say progeria causes its victims to be more than 10 years old for each year they are.

However, Mickey doesn't feel or act 120, Ms. Hays said.

"He's so full of energy, it's hard to believe he's not normal," she said.

Mickey's "doing better now than he has in a long time," his mother said. But, last year after a trip to Japan, he returned home "lifeless" and gave her a real scare.

"He'd come in after school and lay around instead of going outside and playing," Ms. Hays said. After determining it was not jet lag from the trip, she took him to his doctor and learned it was "just part of the disease."

"He (the doctor) told me he was just getting old," she said. "I quit my full-time job, took a part-time one and decided to spend as much time with him as I could."

Ms. Hays said six weeks later, Mickey started feeling better and hasn't experienced any problems since.

During those weeks when Mickey was lifeless, Ms. Hays said she panicked.

"For the first time in my life, I felt like I knew what was happening," she said. "I was scared for two months."

Now, Ms. Hays says she can look back and be thankful for having Mickey as long as she has.

Mickey says he's going to live a "long time" because "I want to." He's got trips he wants to take, deer and squirrels he plans to hunt, and a new girlfriend he wants to buy gifts for.

The youngster describes Carrie Clark as a brownish blonde who is 11 years old. "I guess we're going steady," he said. "She's wearing my necklace."

Mickey and his South African progeria victim friend, Fransie Geringer, became world-known in November 1981 when they met at Disneyland.

Fransie, who is six years younger than Mickey, is probably Mickey's best friend, despite the fact they see each other only once a year.

"We write each other sometimes," Mickey said. "Sometimes our letters get lost in the mail."

Mickey and his mother met Fransie and his parents, along with 14 other progeria victims and their families in Orlando, Fla., in June. The group gets together annually through efforts of the Sunshine Foundation, an organization that tries to make wishes come true for terminally ill children.

On the way, they stopped off in New Orleans for the World's Fair.

Later in the summer, Mickey, Ms. Hays and her sister will be going to Hawaii.

Then, it's back to school in the Hallsville Independent School District seventh-grade class for Mickey.

Since Mickey's story was told in 1981, he has received extensive publicity. However, "there's never enough," according to the youngster. "I wish I was as big of a celebrity as I used to be," he said.

Mickey's mother said she and her son go shopping or out to dinner and "there's always someone walking up to him and shaking his hand or something."

All the publicity he has received has probably helped Mickey cope with being different.

"He's always been good," Ms. Hays said. "He doesn't mind going out in public — as long as he has his hat on."

Ms. Hays said she's tried to imagine herself in Mickey's shoes. "He's a lot stronger than I am, that's for sure."

"Mickey is my strength. He's better prepared for what lies ahead than I am. He worries about me."

Last year's trip to meet the other progeria victims in Pennsylvania made a big impact on both Mickey and his mother.

One of the victims, an 8-year-old boy from Chile, died during their stay.

"That was the hardest thing Mickey has ever gone through," Ms. Hays said. "Before it (dying) had been something the doctors said could happen. After his (the victim's) heart attack, we both realized it could have easily been Mickey."

"It changed our lives," she said. "We live each day at a time and try not to plan too far ahead."

Mickey's traveling "gives him something to live for," along with his hunting and fishing trips with his grandfather.

Since his mother and stepfather divorced two years ago, Mickey's already close relationship with Ms. Hays' father has grown stronger.

"They'd do almost everything together," she said. "He's really been like a father to Mickey."

Since Mickey is growing up, he's beginning to become more independent. "He's always been independent but I've not let go until now," Ms. Hays said.

If Mickey died tomorrow, Ms. Hays said she feels like her relationship with her son has been special.

"We've done more and laughed more the last 12 years than some sons and mothers ever do," she said.

Mickey is a happy, bubbly youngster that always makes people laugh, his mother said. "When you're around him, you can't be sad. He's not that sick, little boy a lot of people think he is," she said.

He is the most outgoing of the progeria victims and tends to lead them around when they're all together, Ms. Hays said.

"They called him the Pied Piper in Pennsylvania," she said. "He told them to cover up their heads and they wouldn't be so ugly."

Today's highlight in history:

Fifty years ago, on July 22, 1934, federal agents shot and killed John Dillinger outside a Chicago movie theater.

On this date:

In 1587, a second colony — fated to vanish under mysterious circumstances — was established on Roanoke Island off North Carolina.

In 1937, the Senate rejected President Franklin Roosevelt's proposal to reorganize and enlarge the Supreme Court of the United States.

In 1942, gasoline rationing began in the United States during World War II.

In 1943, during World War II, Allied forces captured Palermo, Sicily.

Ten years ago: The United Nations command on Cyprus reported the cease-fire agreed to by Greece and Turkey was taking hold.

Five years ago: The new head of Nicaragua's supreme court predicted there would be war crimes trials following the fall of the Somoza regime.

One year ago: It was announced that Philip Habib was stepping down as President Reagan's special Mideast envoy, and would be succeeded by Robert McFarlane.

Today's birthdays: Rose Kennedy is 94. Delaware Senator William Roth is 63. Kansas Senator Robert Dole is 61. Singer Margaret Whiting is 60. Actor-comedian Orson Bean is 56. Fashion designer Oscar De La Renta is 52. Actor Terence Stamp is 44. Actor-singer Bobby Sherman is 39.

Pensions often larger than legislative salaries

By KATHRYN BAKER Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Some former Texas congressmen are receiving more in pension benefits than the salaries they made when they were on Capitol Hill, according to figures obtained from the government's Office of Personnel Management.

W.R. "Bob" Poage, 84, retired in 1978 after 41 years in Congress, heading the agriculture committee from 1967 through 1975. He draws the largest pension among the state's ex-congressmen — $72,132 annually.

George Mahon and Omar Burleson both retired in 1979 when congressional pay was $60,662. Each receives a current annual congressional pension of $65,352. John Dowdy left the House in 1973 when the congressional salary was $42,500 and receives a pension of $53,148 a year.

Mahon, 84, served in Congress for 42 years, 15 of them as chairman of the powerful House Appropriations Committee. He lived in Washington until last year, when he moved home to Colorado City, Texas.

Burleson, 78, served for 32 years and chaired the House Administration Committee from 1955 until 1968.

Both congressmen receive monthly checks of $5,446, according to the personnel management office.

"I think it's too liberal," Burleson said of the pension system in a telephone interview from Abilene. Nevertheless, he said, he accepts the monthly checks.

"Well, you surely have a lot of red tape if you don't," he said. "You can give it away through charities, and I try to do some of that."

Mahon could not be reached for comment.

Dowdy, 72, of Athens, served for 21 years. He complained that "the federal government spends too much on everything" and said he gives away a "good deal" of his pension.

Ralph Yarborough, 81, of Austin was making $42,500 a year when he left the Senate in 1971 after 14 years. He draws a federal pension of $46,008, but said part of that figure is his military retirement pay.

The highest congressional pension goes to former Speaker of the House Carl Albert of Oklahoma, who receives $87,864 annually.

Two former presidents are on the pension rolls — Richard Nixon receives $30,816, and Gerald Ford, $64,800.

Members of Congress qualify for pensions after five years of service if they elect to participate by contributing 8 percent of their salary each year, said OPM spokeswoman Sharon Wells.

Ms. Wells said congressional pensions are based on a complex formula of the ex-member's years of service and an average of the highest three years of salary received.

The formula was created by Congress and previously was the only public information on the congressional pensions. Officials at OPM contended that revealing specific pension figures would be an invasion of privacy.

But in May, U.S. District Judge John Pratt ruled in favor of a Washington television station that had sued to get the figures.

"The debate concerning federal deficits and the cost of the current federal retirement system is very much in the forefront of public attention," Pratt said. "Awareness of these issues depends on the circulation of information concerning the cost of federal pensions in relation to the amounts paid in by government retirees."

Ray Roberts, 71, of Denton — former chairman of the Veterans Affairs Committee — receives $45,108. He retired in 1981 after representing the 4th District for 18 years.

Former 22nd District congressman Robert Randolph Casey, 69, of Houston, receives a pension of $33,936. Casey served in Congress from 1959 until 1976.

Walter Rogers, 76, who lives in Maryland, represented the 18th District from 1951 until 1967 and receives an annual pension of $29,412. Richard White, 61, of El Paso, receives $28,740. He served in Congress from 1965 until 1983.

Bob Eckhardt, who served from 1967 to 1981, receives $24,108. He still resides in Washington.

James Collins, 68, who left Congress in 1981, receives $24,012. He had served as 3rd District representative since 1968.

Graham Purcell draws a pension of $20,448, after serving from 1962 until 1973.

Frank Ikard, 70, who now lives in Washington, D.C., served as 13th District representative from 1951 until 1961 and receives an annual pension of $14,352.

J.T. Rutherford, 63, of Washington, D.C., represented the 16th District from 1955 until 1963. He receives $6,576.

Fourteen former Texas congressmen are listed as pension recipients. The others either did not elect to participate or are not old enough to be receiving pension benefits yet.

Anthony, Paetzold vows spoken

Laurie Ann Anthony became the bride of Walter John Paetzold Jr. early Friday evening at St. Anthony's Catholic Church with Father Michael Wood officiating.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. L. Dee Taylor of Route 2 and James Anthony of Friona and the bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Walter John Paetzold Sr. of Route 3.

Two seven-tiered candelabra decorated the back altar and two brass candelabra trimmed with bouquets of assorted flowers trimmed the two side altars.

Mrs. Scott Wilcox served as matron of honor and the bridegroom's brother, Stanley Paetzold, was best man.

Bridesmaids included Mrs. Mark Urbanczyk, Dede Dobbins and Laura Lovell and groomsmen were the bridegroom's cousin, Randy Paetzold, Chris Carter and Jeff Mercer.

Escorting guests were Todd Taylor, the bride's brother, and Alan Koenig, the bridegroom's cousin.

The bridegroom's niece, Tara Dryden, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Gary Mac Dryden, was flower girl and the bridegroom's nephew, Brandon Coleman, son of Mr. and Mrs. Gary Coleman, was ring bearer.

Train carriers were Leslee Taylor, the bride's sister, and Paige Robbins.

Ralph Detten vocalized principal wedding selections and was accompanied by Denise Detten.

Given in marriage by her stepfather and father, the bride wore a white gown of matte taffeta. The bodice was trimmed with French beaded alencon lace and the off-the-shoulder neckline was enhanced with full puff sleeves detailed with schiffli lace.

The full skirt flowed from the waistline and was decorated at the front with tiers of lace edged ruffles surrounded by a large alencon lace applique.

The hemline of the gown was encircled with a full ruffle and flowed to a full cathedral-length train which was also detailed with tiered lace edged ruffles.

The tiered veil of bridal illusion was gathered at a seeded pearl headpiece. She carried a silk cascade bouquet arrangement of sonia roses accented with apricot tiniflora, white sweetheart roses, pearls and baby's breath. Three mini-bouquets of sonia and white blossoms descended free-form below the cascade and together with white ribbons and lace streamers tied in love knots complemented the full bridal gown.

As a good luck piece, the bride wore a wedding band belonging to her great-grandmother, Mrs. J.L. Brooks.

Bridal attendants were attired in apricot silk taffeta gowns featuring cummerbunds and puffed sleeves with gathered roses. They carried nosegays of pixie carnations in contrasting shades of peach.

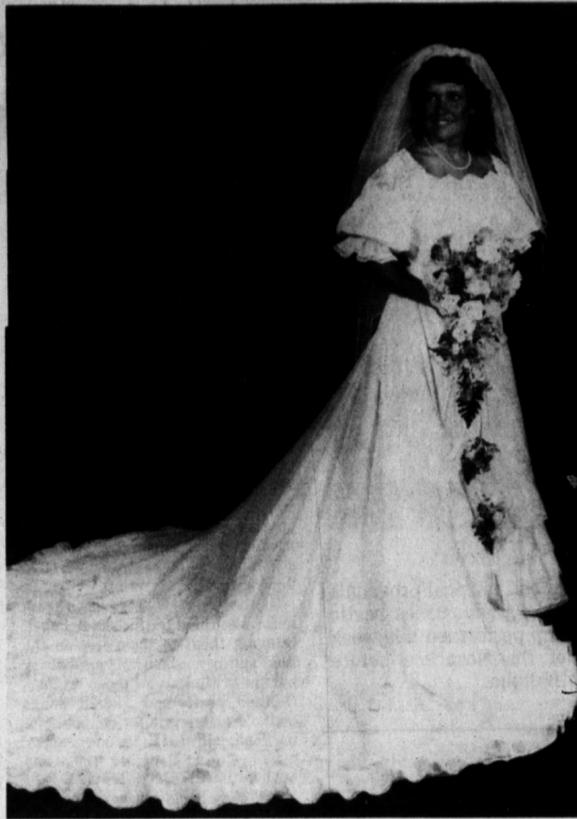

Mrs. Lynn Tarr invited guests to register at the reception held in St. Anthony's Catholic gymnasium.

Cake was served by Crystal Smith and Donna Paetzold, the bridegroom's sister, and Kelly Stevens and Cheri Barker poured punch and coffee. Tory Taylor, the bride's cousin, lectured.

Leaving for a wedding trip to Colorado Springs, Co., the bride wore a mauve and green striped skirt and blouse. The couple will make their home at Route 3.

The bride, a 1983 Hereford High School graduate, attended West Texas State University and the bridegroom, a 1983 HHS graduate, is presently engaged in farming.

Out-of-town family members who attended the wedding included the bride's grandmother, Mrs. Oral Peek, and the bridegroom's sisters and brothers-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Nick Schlafer and Mr. and Mrs. Terry Champ.

I had tried every way to lose weight and even though I always lost weight, I would always gain it back plus some more. I had not weighed myself in a long time and I could not believe I had gained so much weight. I was desperate, I cried out to God for help. Then, through a friend I found Pat Walker's. I always thought that I could not afford to go to a figure salon, but they worked it out to fit my budget. I really enjoy this new food plan and besides what it does for my figure, the Symmetric Unit is relaxing. The tapes I listen to while I take my treatments are so helpful in getting me programmed into a new way of life. I am now halfway to my goal with a 59 pounds and 58 inch loss. With help from Pat Walker's and their professional counselors I will soon be at the finish line.

Not All Hard Work

Danny Gaiter (center) of the famed Bill Gaiter Trio is now joined by his daughter, Trina, and keyboard artist Dave Redman as he travels across the country performing solo concerts. Believing quality of life is important, these musicians take time to enjoy their travels and musical programs even when following a sometimes hectic schedule. The group performed this week at the Church of the Nazarene before heading home to Indiana.

Gaither continues family gospel singing tradition

By KIM THOGMARTIN
Staff Writer

In the world of gospel music, where most performers are recognized only by devout followers of the industry, a few names are known by all.

One of those is Gaither. Bill and Danny Gaither and their sister Mary Ann gave the world such gospel hits as "The Old Rugged Cross" and "He Touched Me." When the Bill Gaither Trio was formed, Bill was 19, Danny 17 and Mary Ann only 11.

"Bill started writing songs about that time," explained Danny. "Nobody would sing them, so we started singing them ourselves." The younger Gaither, who later left the trio to launch a solo career, performed Wednesday night at the Church of the Nazarene in Hereford.

Gaither drew rave reviews from those who filled the sizeable chapel, bringing them to their feet on the final number, which was a medley of hymns written by his older brother. Gaither performed sacred songs both old and new in a rich, powerful baritone, joined at times on vocals by his 20-year-old daughter Trina and keyboard artist Dave Redman.

The 45-year-old native of Alexandria, Indiana lives with his wife and three children in a house about a mile from where he was born.

He first sang in the Nazarene Church there at the age of 3.

The trio inherited its musical talent from the siblings' mother, who sang and played the piano. "Mother is the force behind the Gaither music," Danny said.

Gaither attributed the success of the group to the fact that people could hear the songs once and go off humming the melody. "Bill's music is very singable," he explained. "And we were a family oriented group, people liked that."

Although Danny left the trio seven years ago and has enjoyed success in his solo career, the trio has carried on. Bill and his wife, who also writes, were joined by another male vocalist.

Gaither said he has never tried to write songs. "I feel my gift is to sing," he said with a smile. "There are so many good writers, and I think I am able to select from the best of the songs."

The message a song imparts is important to the veteran gospel performer. "The melody is the hooker, but the lyrics are important to me. I want the song to have a strong content."

The family logs about 70,000 miles a year, traveling the country in its own bus. "With 150 dates a year, we have to be good stewards of our time," Gaither commented. "We go home as often as we can, often for just a day or two before we hit the road again. We're all homebodies, and those stops keep us from becoming road bums."

Gaither said he has learned to make traveling enjoyable, and he knows there is a purpose to the live performing he does. "Because of what we do, we've been able to lift people's spirits."

The singer said his attitude about performing has been an involvement. "There was a time when I just sang because I enjoyed it. Then, there came a point in time when I realized I had an effect on people. This music, and everything we do, is a philosophy of life."

Gaither said he does try to influence people spiritually, but not by doing a lot of preaching between songs. "I've mainly tried to do it with living," he admitted. "I often think of my grandfather. He was very quiet, but very consistent. I've tried to be consistent, to be the same person off stage as I am on."

Gospel music is enjoying a lot of success these days, Gaither felt. "I think it's mainly because of the times. It's relative at this time, when more people are feeling a need for religion."

Gaither said his family, and the quality of life they lead has become the most important thing to him. "This life that we have is the real thing, it's not a rehearsal. I believe we should take time to enjoy it, to soak it up."

The Gaither family headed home to Indiana following their Hereford appearance. Its members expected to make a few stops along the way, maybe even get out of the bus and smell a few roses.

Original Fort Union to be open for Founder's Day celebration

Fort Union National Monument, one of the few places left where "Old West" buffs can actually stand in the wagon ruts of the Santa Fe Trail, will be open to the public during the annual Founder's Day celebration Saturday and Sunday, July 28-29.

This will be the only time of year the original Fort Union can be visited by the general public. It was built in 1851 and occupied until 1861. Today it stands on private property one-half mile south of the National Park Service attraction containing the second fort (the star fort) and the third fort (collectively occupied from 1862 to 1891), located 26 miles northeast of the Victorian homes that grace the city of Las Vegas, N.M.

One of the most famous trails in American history, the 1000-mile long Santa Fe Trail started in Franklin, Mo., and wound westward through five states to its terminus in the city of Santa Fe, capital of New Mexico. Prospective tourists interested in taking walking tours of Santa Fe Trail points of interest and other area attractions may use two toll-free numbers to request specific information. The Santa Fe Convention and Visitor Bureau, P.O. Box 909, Santa Fe, N.M. 87501, may be reached from anywhere outside New Mexico during business hours on weekdays by calling (800) 528-5369. The Taos Chamber of Commerce, P.O. Drawer 1, Taos, N.M. 87571, can be reached at (800)732-8267.

The first American-made item to be exported to Europe was a glass bottle manufactured at a glassworks near Jamestown in 1608.

NOTICIA DE ACUERDA DE DEMANDA

Para: toda persona hispana quien haya sido o sera interrogada, arrestada, detenida, cargada, o encarcelada por la oficina del sherife del condado de Deaf Smith por investigacion de su estado de inmigrante, o lpor violaciones alegadas de las leyes de inmigracion, o a toda persona hispana que fue investigada por inmigracion y no lo dejaron salir de la carcel bajo fianza, no lo dejaron tener visitantes, o tener audiencia en frente de un juez durante su detencion como los demas detenidos.

Una demanda legal ha sido archivado para Ud. quejando que el condado de Deaf Smith y el Sherife Travis McPhearson estuvieron deteniendo personas en la carcel por sospecho de violacion de las leyes de inmigracion. Para comprjometer este demanda, el condado de Deaf Smith has aceptado una orden de la corte federal prohibiendo que el sherife del condado de Deaf Smith siga ejecutando las leyes civiles y delitos menores de inmigracion.

Al mismo tiempo, el condado de Deaf Smith y el Sherife Travis McPhearson estan de acuerdo de pagar la cantidad de $11,000.00 a ciertas personas nombradas arriba. Si Ud. estuvo detenido en la carcel del condado de Deaf SMith por violacion de la ley de inmigracion (aunque al mismo tiempo le acusaron de una violacion de las leyes de trafico o de las leyes criminales) o si Ud. fue negado su derecho de salir bajo fianza, de hacer llamadas de telefono, o de tener visitantes durante su detencion en la carcel por que fue sospechado de violar las leyes de inmigracion, puede ser que Ud. puede reclamar una parte del dinero. No importa cual oficial fue el primero en arrestarle.

Para mas informes sobre los terminos del acuerdo y sobre su derecho de presentar su oposicion al acuerdo, o de hacer un reclamo de un parte del dinero, Ud. puede escribir o llamar a vs.

AMARILLO DIVISION

PEDRO CERVAÑTEZ, et al.,
Plaintiffs

GARY WHITFILL

CIVIL ACTION NO. 2-79-206

NOTICE OF SETTLEMENT OF CLASS ACTION

To: All persons of hispanic descent who have been or will be questioned, arrested, detained, charged or incarcerated by the Deaf Smith County Sheriffs Office for investigation of their immigration status, or for alleged violations of the immigration laws, or whose immigration status or alleged violations of the immigration laws negatively affected their right to release, bail, visitation, or a hearing otherwise available for a person held on other charges.

A class action lawsuit has been filed on your behalf alleging that Deaf Smith County and its Sheriff Travis McPhearson illegally detained persons in the Deaf Smith County jail because they were suspected of violating the immigration laws. In order to settle this lawsuit Deaf Smith County has agreed to an injunction prohibiting the Deaf Smith County Sheriff Office from enforcing civil and misdemeanor immigration laws and regulating enforcement of other aspects of the immigration laws.

In addition Deaf Smith County and Travis McPhearson have agreed to pay a total of $11,000 to certain members of the above defined class. If you were ever detained in the Deaf Smith County Jail for violating the immigrations laws (whether or not you were charged with other traffic or criminal charges at the same time, and regardless of who first arrested you) or were denied the right to post bond, make phone calls, or have visitors while in the Deaf Smith County Jail because you were suspected of violating the immigration laws, you may be entitled to make a claim for a portion of this monetary settlement.

For more information about the terms of the settlement and your right to file objections or to claim a portion of the money you should write or call

TEXAS RURAL LEGAL AID
P.O. Box 2223
Hereford, Texas 79045
(806) 364-3961

Attorneys at this address will assist you free of charge. You may claim money damages even if you were not in the United States lawfully at the time you were incarcerated in the Deaf Smith County jail and regardless of where you live now. If you file a claim, you will not have to reveal your immigration status.

NOTE: You must either file a claim for part of the monetary settlement or object to the settlement before September 4, 1984, otherwise any claim you may have against Deaf Smith County or Travis McPhearson for illegally enforcing the immigration laws will be barred.

Signed this 4th day of June, 1984.

Following a full week of rehearsals beginning Monday, July 30, the contestants are to be interviewed by three out of town judges at 10 a.m. Saturday, Aug. 4, at the E.B. Black House. Talent and evening gown competition is scheduled at 7 p.m. Aug. 4, with each of the three divisions counting as one-third of the judges' total tally sheet.

"At the Hop," this year's pageant theme, is to be carried out with a musical production number including singing and dancing by this year's contestants. John Dawson from KGNC Radio in Amarillo will serve as emcee and Keith Ann Gearn is pageant director.

Judges for the upcoming pageant include Mr. and Mrs. Bud Joiner of Levelland, who have worked with numerous pageants, and Christie Higgs from Pampa, instructor and model with Diane Dick Modeling Agency in Amarillo.

The current Miss Hereford, Gina Griffin, will be present to crown the winner of this year's pageant. In addition to $1100 in combined scholarships which are to be presented to the winners (Miss Hereford, $600; first runner-up, $300; second runner-up, $200), a talent award will be given for the highest overall score in the talent competition, and the Miss Congeniality award is to be presented based on a vote by all the contestants. Each participant will be given a memento of the pageant.

The new Miss Hereford is to be featured in a float sponsored by the Women's Division in the Town and Country Jubilee parade. She is scheduled to make appearances at community affairs, and is to be available for business openings, open houses and civic events during the coming year.

Contestants and their sponsors for the 1984 pageant include Ronda Batenhorst, Hi Plains Savings & Loan; Amy Quillen, Little's; Stacey High, Hereford Texas Federal Credit Union; Michelle Hughes, J.C. The "secret" to making good jelly is no secret at all — it's a combination of pectin, acid and sugar in the right amounts. Whether you make your own jelly each year or you're trying it for the first time, it pays to know how these ingredients work together.

Pectin determines the firmness of the jelly. Too little pectin can produce a jelly too soft to hold its form. But good homemade jellies don't have to have as much pectin as commercial jellies, which must be firm enough to withstand shipment.

Different kinds of pectins produce jellies with various degrees of firmness. For example, cranberry pectins yield jellies that break easily into small clumps, while apple pectins create more elastic jellies.

The acidity of the fruit also has something to do with firmness. Juices from higher acid fruits yield firmer jellies than juices from lower acid fruits, even where the pectin content is the same. Fruits actually have a mixture of acids in them. But tartaric acid, which is plentiful in grapes and currants, is more efficient for jelly-making than citric or acetic acid.

Perhaps the biggest question in jelly-making is how much sugar to add, since that can vary from fruit to fruit. Most of the time, it's better to use too little rather than too much sugar if you want a jelly that will hold its form.

Experiments show that three-fourths cup of sugar per cup of fruit extraction works better than a cup or more of sugar. Partly ripe currants, gooseberries and grapes may need one or more cups of sugar, but that depends on their stage of ripeness and the amount of water used to cook them.

Having low acid or low pectin fruits does not mean you have to give up on making jelly. Low pectin fruits can be made into excellent jelly if commercial pectin is added. And acid can be increased in a fruit juice simply by adding lemon juice or combining it with other acid fruits.

Educational programs conducted by the Texas Agricultural Extension Service serve people of all ages regardless of socio-economic levels, race, colors, sex, religion or national origin.

Dormice are not actually mice, although they are related. Dormice probably get their name from the French word "dormir," which means "to sleep." They hibernate all winter.

DISASTER INSURANCE
BOULDER, Colo. (AP) — As companies grow more and more dependent on the computer, disaster recovery insurance grows increasingly necessary for American industry, according to a maker of computer equipment.
Gil Kellersman, general manager of Ultimacc Systems Inc., says, "The average company loses its critical operating functions within two to four days after a computer center failure. In many cases, each day of inactivity results in losses far exceeding the cost of a full year of disaster recovery insurance."

AT SECURITY FEDERAL, CHECKING IS ONLY $4 PER MONTH.

AND THERE ARE THREE WAYS TO GET IT FREE!

A lot of people are paying $10 or $12 a month for checking. But why? Security Federal's Security Checking has no service charge with a $200 balance. No service charge with a $5,000 savings balance. And no service charge for senior citizens.

And if you drop below the minimum balance, it only costs $4, regardless of the number of checks you write.

Security Federal even earns 5¼% interest on every dollar. So why pay a lot of money on service charges? Make the switch to Security Checking. It saves plenty.

Between the Covers

By DIANNE PIERSON
Library Director

Action-packed novels will be available this week at the Deaf Smith County Library. J.C. Pollock, author of the best-seller, "Mission M.I.A.," returns with a fast-moving, explosive adventure story, "Centrifuge," forcefully told in the same authentic narrative voice that made "Mission M.I.A." a success.

Also available this week is "The Berlin Warning" by Nicholas Guild. It is as riveting as Follett's "Eye of the Needle" and written in the epic tradition of Hemingway's "For Whom The Bell Tolls."

In "Centrifuge," ex-Green Beret Mike Slater is invited to an isolated lake in Maine by his former unit commander, Lieutenant Colonel Bull Brooks, and sees him murdered before his very eyes. Brooks, currently head of security at a top secret CIA installation in Virginia, was about to warn Slater that the remaining members of the unit were in mortal danger because of something that took place in Vietnam just before the fall of Saigon.

From that moment Slater is a living target, caught up in a frantic race to warn the other two surviving members of the Special Operations Group team that their lives are in danger. One team member survives to join him in the remote wilds of Canada, where they lay an ambush for their predators. What Slater does not know is that he and the other survivor unwittingly hold the key to unearthing a Soviet "mole" in the heart of the CIA—and that either side could wish them dead. "Centrifuge" is a rare and powerful novel that paints an authentic portrait of betrayal violence, and courage.

"The Berlin Warning" by Nicholas Guild is a novel of love and war, set in a nightmare world where duty and passion are traps for the unwary, and death is never more than one miscalculation away.

The word from the Whitehall spymasters was "we need an American." It was Oct. 27, 1941, and Hitler was victorious from Calais to the outskirts of Moscow. Only Britain held out against him, fighting alone, stretched to the limit. Her one hope of survival was that the United States would enter the war, and the Germans were hell-bent to prevent that. It all came down to one desperate gamble.

The American they needed was David Steadman. Barely recovered from a shrapnel wound, the rich young adventurer undertakes a lethal mission at the urging of his best friend's beautiful wife, whom he has come to adore. As he flees across Europe, pursued by a SS captain who has tracked him from Spain, Steadman finds everyone turning against him. Through a farago of passions and dangerous motives, both the British and the Germans want him dead—along with the incendiary secret he carries only in his memory.

Guild is also the author of "The President's Man" and "Chain Reaction."

Also available this week is "High Command" by John Masters, "Kingdom" the story of the Hunt family in Texas, by Jerome Tuccille, and "An Unknown Man: The Triumph of Herbert Hoover" by Richard Norton Smith.

$49,900 - And if you make an offer, you might own it for less. Extra nice 2 bedroom, 2 bath, corner fireplace, new carpet, corner lot, sprinkler system. It also has an 8 1/2% assumable FHA loan.

$25,000 - For a 3 bedroom on Ave E. And such features as new carpet, new paint, new sewer line, and owner will consider all types of financing.

$32,500 - Corner lot on South Main - this one is really sharp inside and out. 3 bedrooms, 1 1/4 baths, nice carpet.

$34,900 - But owner is negotiable. This is a real nice 3 bedroom, large kitchen, and for you men a big workshop in the rear with overhead door that opens up into the alley. Perfect for the "Shade Tree Mechanic" or for extra storage. The owner is over anxious to sell, so call now!

$56,500 - 3 bedroom, 1 1/4 bath on Willow Lane. Super Sharp.

COUNTRY LIVING - Double wide mobile and 2.27 acres in a country setting. It is complete with new carpet, refrigerated air, for only $36,000.

APPROX. 2,000 SQ. FT. ON STAR STREET - possible owner financing with reasonable down payment. This is all the room you'll need and loads of extras.

$46,500 - Beach Street - it has refrigerated air, sprinkler system, storm windows, extra insulation, lots of cabinets. Housewives will love all of the extra storage.

'Purple Rain' reviewed

Prince thought hit in new film

By YARDENA ARAR Associated Press Writer

"PURPLE RAIN" marks the film debut of Prince, the summer's surprise rock superstar, and as a showcase for his magnetic, erotic stage presence, it's excellent. It's also a surprisingly good piece of film entertainment, though those with weak eardrums may choose to pass. At first glance, the credits suggest a home movie. With the exceptions of "Mod Squad" veteran Clarence Williams III and Olga Karlatos, who play Prince's parents, the principals are all members of Minneapolis-based bands who basically portray themselves. The producers are Prince's managers Bob Cavallo, Joe Ruffalo and Steve Fargnoli.

But with the help of a veteran technical crew, newcomer Albert Magnoli — who directed, co-wrote and edited — has made a professional-looking film that captures the excitement and energy of the Minneapolis club scene.

The screenplay, co-written by William Blinn, follows a tried-and-true line: A young artist, faced with personal tragedy, emerges stronger and better. Prince's character, The Kid, is already an impressive talent when the film starts, but his backstage and home life are a shambles.

His band's members are disaffected by his refusal to play their music. Zoot-suited rival band leader Morris Day hopes to oust The Kid from the club where both play. And after hours, The Kid motorcycles to his family's suburban home to find his father, a frustrated former musician, beating his mother.

Things seem to look up for Prince with the arrival of New Orleans beauty Apollonia Kordero, who hopes to get her own music career off the ground. But their steamy romance is threatened when she joins an all-girl group under Day's wing. All this grimness is thankfully leavened by some humorous touches. Most are supplied by Day, who shows real promise as a comic player. A light-hearted villain who is more upset at getting his clothes muddied than at losing the fair lady, he has a great "Who's on first" exchange with sidekick Jerome Benton.

Prince has little trouble carrying off his character's moody moments but is less successful in his romantic scenes. Apollonia's major contributions are a fetching smile and a figure that is more than adequate.

TRAVEL
Along with

Joan Coupe

The major form of recreation on Conzumel, after beaches and diving, is shopping. Mexico has long been a bargain hunter's idea of a good time, and that is especially true now after repeated devaluations of the peso. Shop around the plaza and along the waterfront. You will find nearly all the items for which Mexico is famous. They include silver, copper, tin goods, pottery and ceramics, exquisitely embroidered dresses and blouses and shirts, handwoven serapes and blankets, rebosos (shawls), huarache sandals and basketwork. Start in the stalls of the "Mercado de Artesanias," or Crafts Market, just behind the plaza. Conzumel is also famous for high-quality black coral, and though expensive here, it can be an excellent buy.

Conzumel's waters are so clear that visibility can extend a staggering 200 feet.

When you are ready to take your next vacation our staff at HEREFORD TRAVEL CENTER will be ready to help you plan it and to insure its success. Take advantage of our experience and know-how...there is never any additional charge to you. We do all the work and leave you with the packing and then all the fun. ## Drought worsens

Texas farm industry on skids

COLLEGE STATION, Texas (AP) — Texas' agricultural industry continues to look more bleak with each passing day as temperatures climb and drought conditions continue, says Dr. Zerle L. Carpenter, director of the Texas Agricultural Extension Service.

Crop prospects in many counties look dismal and livestock conditions are going from bad to worse, Carpenter said in his weekly report on the state's agriculture.

Drought conditions continued to worsen in southern and western areas the past week, and hot, dry conditions also became more pronounced in central and eastern areas of the state. Crops and pasture and range grasses are withering and record numbers of livestock are being sold, Carpenter said. All but a few coastal counties and parts of the Panhandle and South Plains are in need of rain, he noted.

Lack of forage and stock water is causing ranchers to liquidate herds over much of West Central and Southwest Texas as well as in the Rolling Plains. Some are trying to hold on to foundation stock but are having to provide feed and, in many cases, water, Carpenter said.

Many are feeding hay to keep livestock alive, but hay prices are continuing to escalate due to heavy demand and short supplies. Dry weather has limited hay making over much of Texas, particularly in eastern counties where production is about half of normal.

As far as crops are concerned, grain sorghum harvesting is active in southern and coastal areas and corn harvesting is getting under way. Yields are running from poor to good, depending on where spring rains fell, Carpenter said. Some corn in the Coastal Bend never got enough rain to make a grain crop and was cut for hay.

Cotton is maturing rapidly in South Texas and the Coastal Bend and bolls are popping open. Harvest operations should get under way soon.

Early rice harvesting has started in the Coastal Bend and along the Upper Coast.

In the Rolling Plains and West Central Texas, crops are suffering from lack of moisture. In fact, crop acreages will be down considerably this year as many fields were not planted due to dry conditions, Carpenter noted.

The crop situation looks reasonably good in the Panhandle and South Plains due to recent rains. Dryland cotton in western counties of the South Plains is especially off to a good start, said Carpenter.

Reports from district Extension directors showed these conditions.

PANHANDLE: Most crops are making good progress although those under dryland production need rain. The wheat harvest is complete and farmers are getting land ready for fall planting. Onion harvesting is under way. Cattle remain in good shape although grazing conditions are starting to decline.

SOUTH PLAINS: Crops continue to look good, particularly dryland cotton in western counties that received recent rains. Cotton irrigation is getting into full swing; early cotton is setting bolls. Wheat harvesting and the second cutting of alfalfa have been completed. Onion and potato harvesting is active.

ROLLING PLAINS: Cotton is making limited progress due to hot, dry conditions; some fields were never planted. Some farmers are planting cotton land to mung beans and grain sorghum. Cantaloupes are being harvested in Knox County.

Livestock are going to market in record numbers as grazing and stock water decline.

NORTH CENTRAL: Dry conditions are hurting cotton, grain sorghum, corn and pastures. Hay making is limited due to the lack of moisture. Watermelon harvesting is in full swing and a good peach harvest continues. A lot of cows are being culled and calves are being weaned early due to declining grazing conditions.

NORTHEAST: Grain sorghum prospects are declining and hay making is about 50 percent of normal due to dry conditions. Lack of moisture is also affecting vegetable crops and watermelons. Pastures are deteriorating rapidly, causing an increase in livestock marketings.

FAR WEST: Both crops and ranges are starting to suffer under hot, dry conditions. Ranges, which had gotten a boost from recent rains, are drying rapidly. However, most livestock are in good condition. A good peach harvest is under way.

WEST CENTRAL: Drought conditions continue to severely affect crops and livestock. Cotton and grain sorghum prospects are poor; a lot of acreage was never planted. Irrigated peanuts are doing well. Hay remains in short supply while demand is heavy. Culling of livestock herds continues due to lack of grazing and stock water.

CENTRAL: Grain sorghum harvesting is about to start and corn harvesting is only a few weeks off. Yields will be down due to the dry weather. Irrigated peanuts are making good progress and cotton looks fair. Pastures and ranges continue to decline, causing an increase in cattle marketings.

EAST: Dry conditions are limiting hay production and are causing some stockmen to start culling cows. Corn, peanuts, vegetables and pastures need rain. Watermelon and peach harvesting continues.

UPPER COAST: Farmers are harvesting grain sorghum and the corn harvest will start soon. Early rice harvesting also is under way. Recent rains have boosted soybeans and pastures although more rain is needed in some locations.

SOUTH CENTRAL: Grain sorghum harvesting is under way and corn is maturing rapidly under hot, dry conditions. Cotton is stressing due to lack of moisture and is shedding bolls. Many cattle continue to go to market due to limited grazing.

SOUTHWEST: Some ranchers are liquidating entire herds in the face of the worst drought many can recall. Stock on hand must be fed as grazing is nonexistent. Irrigated corn and grain sorghum are maturing rapidly and will be harvested soon. Cantaloupe, cucumber and onion harvesting is about complete; yields have been low. Pecan drop is heavy due to hot, dry conditions.

COASTAL BEND: Corn and grain sorghum harvesting continues, with yields down sharply in some counties due to the prolonged dry weather. Some corn failed to make a grain crop and was cut for hay. Some farmers are baling grain stubble for hay since the hay outlook is poor. Most of the cotton is open and farmers are applying defoliants to prepare the crop for harvesting. Early rice harvesting has started. Cattle marketings continue to increase as pastures and ranges deteriorate.

SOUTH: Hot, dry conditions are allowing the grain sorghum harvest to make rapid progress. Also, cotton is opening rapidly and corn is about ready to harvest. Farmers are preparing land for soybeans and fall vegetables. Hay production is fair but livestock have limited grazing due to dry conditions.

For those selling cattle

Tax income losses important

COLLEGE STATION — Ranchers who are being forced to sell livestock because of decimated pastures and reduced water supplies should begin considering the income tax aspects of their losses, according to Joe Pena of Uvalde, economist-management with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service, Texas A&M University System.

"Income from drought sales may be treated two ways for tax purposes, depending on whether the livestock is considered inventory or breeding stock," Pena said. Both types of sales are outlined in the Farmer's Tax Guide.

Income from the sale of inventory stock may be deferred for up to one year, he said.

"Producers can elect to defer the revenue from sales of certain livestock, such as steers, heifers and calves, for one year if the sale was due to drought conditions," Pena said. However, he explained, this particular election does not apply to livestock used for breeding, draft, dairy or sporting purposes.

If, because of drought, a taxpayer, whose principal activity is farming or ranching, sells livestock in excess of the number that would be sold in a normal business year, he may elect to include the proceeds in the next year's income provided that: the cash method of accounting is used; it can be established under usual business circumstances the number sold would not have occurred; and, the drought has resulted in the area being designated as eligible for federal assistance.

Purchased livestock, such as stocker steers or heifers, as well as "raised livestock" will qualify, he said. In addition, sales made prior to an area being declared eligible for federal assistance may qualify, the economist said.

To determine the amount of income to be deferred, a producer must first calculate the average amount received per head sold during the year and multiply this figure by the excess number of head sold due to drought, he said.

When livestock kept for breeding, draft or dairy purposes are sold or exchanged solely because of drought, the sale or exchange is considered an involuntary conversion, Pena said.

A taxpayer may elect to postpone the tax on the gain from sales of breeding livestock if replaced with livestock of like kind within two years from the close of the year in which the gain as realized, the economist explained.

THE "SOBBUSTER BILL" has been passed into law by the U.S. House of Representatives. Although the name harkens back to frontier days, the problem the bill intends to rectify is modern. The bill, sponsored in the House by Rep. Berkeley Bedell, D-Iowa, among others, will deny federal farm aid to farmers who put fragile land into row-crop production. In addition, the legislation provides financial incentives to encourage farmers to plant fragile lands in grass and legumes. It also calls for a study of voluntary set-aside programs for soil conservation. According to Rep. Bedell, "Time for conserving our soil is running out. We need to deal more aggressively with this problem. With this legislation, we have begun to implement more effective conservation programs." Bedell also introduced an amendment to strengthen penalties against farming fragile land.

Attended Conference

Future farmers go to state convention

Officers of the Hereford Future Farmers of America chapter joined 5,000 members from across the state at the State FFA convention in Lubbock last week.

Among the keynote speakers was State Sen. Bill Sarpalius of Canyon, a former Texas FFA president. The state farmer degree was conferred on Jason Andrews, Jeff Bussy, Chet Bunch, Keith Kalka, Dan Meiwes, Clay Otwell, Kirk Sparkman and Gerald Tice. Robbie Phillips was given the state proficiency award in home and farm improvement. His application has been forwarded to the western region office where he will vie for regional honors. Phillips received a plaque and $100.

Phillips, who is vice president of the chapter, was also named second place winner in swine production on the state level.

Gerald Tice captured a second place award for cooperative part-time training, based on his training at White Implement of Hereford.

The local group also attended a three-day leadership conference last month at Clarendon College.

Attending the events were Chet Bunch, president; Phillips; Keith Kalka, secretary; Chad Strafuss, treasurer; Shawn Rickman, reporter; Dan Meiwes, sentinel; and Matt Schilling, student advisor.

By Agriculture Department

Report to detail last year's farm income

WASHINGTON (AP) — A report to be released soon by the Agriculture Department will shed a little more light on 1983 farm income and what went wrong with earlier estimates.

In June, the department's Economic Research Service said in its monthly Agricultural Outlook magazine that total net farm income last year was still expected to be in the range of $20 billion to $22 billion, not changed much from 1982's $22.1 billion.

But on July 3, in a brief preliminary report, the agency revised its figures drastically and put 1983 farm income at $15 billion to $17 billion. That would put last year's income, with no adjustment for inflation, at the lowest level since 1971 when it was $20 billion — which was a 20-year high at the time.

Although embarrassed by having to announce such a sharp revision, agency economists nonetheless were direct in explaining what had happened. Earlier estimates, particularly involving the value of crops and livestock sold by farmers last year, and the declining value of inventories held by farmers.

The full version of the July report is due shortly. Meanwhile, a final draft of the report explains a little more fully what has happened.

According to "recently compiled data" for 1983 production costs, the previous estimate of last year's farm expenses still stands at $135 billion to $137 billion, the report said. In 1982, expenses were $140.1 billion.

Cost reductions came about last year mostly because of huge acreage cutbacks under the government's crop program, including the PIK program which provided free commodities as "payment-in-kind" to farmers who idled additional land from the production of wheat, corn, sorghum, rice and cotton.

The 1983 income figures started to get in trouble in the computing of cash receipts farmers get for the sale of commodities they produce. In June, the agency put the total at $142 billion to $144 billion. Revisions changed it to $138 billion to $140 billion, a $4 billion change.

Another major revision was in the value of crop and livestock inventories held by farmers in 1983. Changes from one year to another are deducted or added in computing total gross income.

In June, the economists figured the value of 1983 inventories declined $9 billion to $11 billion from 1982, reflecting mostly last year's skimpy crop production caused by acreage cut-back. No changes were made in the outlook for 1984, which the agency says will improve sharply, overall. Using the same method of bookkeeping, 1984 net farm income is forecast at $30 billion to $34 billion, double last year's.

The increase is expected mainly because of much larger harvests, improved prices for some commodities, and a sharp buildup in farm inventories.

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Agriculture Department says the Soviet Union has bought an additional 401,600 metric tons of corn — about 15.8 million bushels — for delivery after Oct. 1, the start of the 1984-85 corn marketing year.

Officials said Thursday the grain will be shipped to the Soviet Union in 1984-85, the second year of a long-term supply agreement with the United States, which also begins on Oct. 1.

The sale was reported to the department by private exporters, as required by law. No prices or other details were disclosed.

However, the department says the latest estimated farm price of corn is $3.29 per bushel.

A metric ton is about 2,205 pounds and is equal to 39.4 bushels of corn or 36.7 bushels of wheat or soybeans.

Thus, the latest sales would have an estimated U.S. farm value of about $52 million.

Counting the new sales, the Soviets have bought 1.3 million tons of corn for 1984-85 delivery. No wheat has been bought for next year.

Greek Orthodox Archbishop Makarios was elected president of Cyprus in 1959. It was the island's first presidential election.

Computer net planned for producer-buyers

By GARTH JONES, Associated Press Writer

AUSTIN (AP) — The Texas Department of Agriculture is planning a computerized communications network to bring the state's farmers and ranchers closer to the people who buy their products.

"A Texas producer doesn't see many buyers when he takes his stock to the local cattle auction but this network could put him in contact with buyers anywhere in the world," Paul Lewis, TDA international marketing specialist told a briefing Wednesday.

"When an offer comes for a sale you better be able to respond if you want to make the sale," said Susan DeMarco, assistant TDA commissioner for marketing and agricultural development.

The state network will be able to be tied into the U.S. Department of Agriculture's marketing computer in Washington which has reports from markets throughout the world.

In turn, the TDA computer would be in almost instant contact with its 12 district offices and laboratories, plus its marketing specialists and analysts throughout the state. Personal computers would allow the specialists to report information and make requests from any point with a telephone.

The network has been tentatively approved by the state's Automated Systems Advisory System and will be presented to the House Agriculture Committee on Aug. 8.

"It could be in place in October," said Quentin Woormer, an assistant TDA commissioner.

Woormer said the department already has money for the "trade referral information system" in its budget.

"We expect it to cost about $500,000 but we are hopeful the federal government will pick up about half of the cost," Woormer said.

The TDA also will ask the 1985 Legislature to expand its statewide system by putting new district offices in El Paso, Corpus Christi, Texarkana and Laredo.

"These areas are not served adequately now," Woormer said. "With this system a farmer could call the district office in the morning with information on products he has for sale and in the afternoon he could drop by and pick up all the trade leads from throughout the world."
