Deaf Smith site 'slightly' better

By REED PARSELL Managing Editor

According to a draft environmental assessment released today, Deaf Smith County's proposed site for a nuclear waste dump was only "slightly" perferred over the nearby Swisher County candidate location.

Regardless of the differentiating. margin, Deaf Smith has been selected as one of three top sites for the nation's first high-level atomic garbage repository. That distinction, announced Wednesday by Department of Energy officials, effectively removes Swisher County from further consideration.

According to the Deaf Smith County draft environmental assessment book - comprised of more than 1,000 pages - initial review of project guidelines left the two Panhandle counties even in the search project. Radiological safety would be better served in Deaf Smith, the EA said, while Swisher had preferred environment, socioeconomic and transportation features.

"The Deaf Smith site was identified as the preferred site," its EA reads, "mainly because it is farther from highly populated areas than the Swisher site. The Deaf Smith site is approximately 17 miles from Hereford, whereas the Swisher site is five miles from Tulia.'

Swisher's location was judged to be seven miles closer to a highway and 20 nearer a rail line.

"Because the siting guidelines specify that conditions relative to radiological safety are of primary importance," the EA states, "the difference in distance to transportation routes is considered to be of lesser importance than the difference in distance to population centers."

A persual of the EA revealed no mention of Vega, a town of around 800, being about eight miles from the Deaf Smith site.

ford, Wash.; Richton, Miss.; and Yucca Mountain, Nev.

Of the five candidates, Deaf Smith was found to be the top-ranked facility, when all considered factors were averaged, regarding "postclosure." That term refers to the period after a repository has been filled and sealed off. Davis Canyon was second, followed by Hanford, Yucca Mountain and Richton. Regarding "preclosure" - events leading up to construction of the dump along with its operating life considerations, the EA places Yucca Mountain an overall first, Hanford second and Deaf Smith third. Richton and Davis Canyon follow in that order.

When both postclosure and preclosure factors are weighed, the EA says, Yucca Mountain emerges as the overall average leader. Deaf Smith is second, Hanford third, Richton fourth and Davis Canyon fifth.

'As a set," the EA claims, the top three locations "offer maximum diversity in geohydrologic settings and in rock types for the selection of the site for the first repository. Such diversity increases the probability that sites suitable for site selection (recommendation for development as a repository) will be available even if studies should reveal a generic deficiency in one type of rock or geohydrologic setting."

DALLAS, IX 752

The EA is referring to Deaf Smith's site being placed on a salt formation, the Hanford on basalt and Yucca Mountain on tuft.

"In conclusion," the EA reads, "the DOE believes that the Deaf Smith, the Hanford and the Yucca Mountain sites offer, on balance, the most advantageous combination of characteristics and conditions for the successful development of a repository and should therefore be recommended for characterization." Anyone wishing to obtain copies of the EAs may write to: U.S. Depart-

After considering evidence since about 10:00 Wednesday morning, the jury returned indictments based on statements made by Smith during a 222nd District Court hearing in March of 1983.

That same hearing had been the basis of the aggravated perjury indictment returned March 31 of this year and later dismissed.

Smith allegedly testified during the hearing that he "did not engage in criminal defense work." According to one of the indictments returned Wednesday, Smith was at the time representing Deaf Smith General Hospital Administrator James Bullard in a Parmer County Court matter.

Smith was also alleged in that same indictment to be representing Refugio Enriquez of Hereford in Justice of the Peace Court. Enriquez had been charged with interfering with compulsory school attendance of a minor child, a charge that was later dismissed by a special prosecutor.

The second perjury charge against Smith referred to his involvement in a manslaughter charge brought against Abelardo Tijerina of Hereford. Also during the March 1983 hearing. Smith is purported to have said he did not participate in grand jury proceedings against Tijerina

Smith had been set for trial Oct. 22. but the indictments were dismissed by Boone during an Oct. 12 pre-trial hearing.

Travis Ware of Lubbock, appointed by Boone, served as special prosecutor during Wednesday's proceedings. Boone had been appointed to the case after 222nd District Court Judge David Wesley Gulley recused himself.

Ware said last week it is a fairly common thing for a grand jury to reconsider the evidence after indictments are dismissed. Judge Boone had agreed with both the defense attorneys and Ware that the original indictments were vague and poorly worded.

The indictments were drafted by state Assistant Attorney General Linda Walden, who met with the grand jury at its request.

Gov. Mark White has made plans to be in Hereford Saturday for a rally regarding Deaf Smith County's selection as a nuclear waste ump "preferred" site.

According the the governor's office, it is expected White will be joined by Attorney General Jim Mattox, Agriculture Commissioner Jim Hightower and several state senators and representatives. The raily is to show state legislators are supporting those area citizens who oppose the high-level atomic waste repository being placed here, the governor's office claimed. As of this morning, the raily was scheduled for 10 a.m. in the Hereford High School auditorium.

Hodel confirms site preferred

By REED PARSELL Managing Editor

Energy Secretary Donald Hodel Wednesday afternoon confirmed Deaf Smith County contains one of three preferred sites for the nation's first high-level nuclear waste dump.

A 90-day period for public comment was to commence today. At least 50 hearings have so far been scheduled for during that time, Hodel claimed.

"Unless something completely unexpected occurs during the public comment process," Hodel said, the three preferred sites are to be objected to detailed site characteriza- us.' tion studies beginning a year from next spring.

Hodel, appearing at a Washington, D.C., press conference heard live by the Brand via a telephone, said Yucca Mountain in Nevada and Hanford, Wash., represent the other two preferred dump locations. Both those sites rest on government land, the Nevada tract being a military test site and Hanford a place where much low-level nuclear waste is stored. Those three were singled out from the field of nine sites considered since late last year. Wednesday's announcement seemed to eliminate nearby Swisher County, the only other Texas candidate location, from further consideration in the search for the first high-level repository.

The Deaf Smith County site is a nine-square-mile area approximately 16 miles northwest of Hereford and eight miles southwest of Vega. Its specific location was decided earlier this month, as DOE officials originally proposed the area be two miles further west.

According to Hodel, the 90-day comment period ends March 20. In July, he said, five of the nine sites are to be nominated for further consideration. Three of those - most likely the three announced Wednesday will be recommended by the DOE for detailed site characterizations.

A final selection will be recommended to the president in 1990, Hodel said, who in turn take the recommendation to Congress. The involved state would be able to give a "notice of disapproval" which can be overridden only be a majority vote of Congress.

Should no Congressional action be taken within 60 days of the state's

As one of three repository candidates

notice, the president would have one year to present one of the two other sites for consideration, Hodel said.

Draft environmental assessments (see story, Page 1), to be released today, were used to determine the preferred sites. On Wednesday, Hodel claimed the EAs were "not casually or easily put together." Two years of hard work went into the project, he said, and the EAs "represent the best information available to

Ben Rusche, director of civilian radioactive waste management for DOE, appeared with Hodel at Wednesday's press conference. He explained the EAs were part of the search process defined by 1982's Nuclear Waste Policy Act, which he described as "the most exciting and perhaps momentous legislation Congress has ever adopted."

Though not "everyone has agreed with everything" in the process so far, Rusche said, he has been pleased states are willing to work along with DOE officials in the search for a dump.

Later in the conference, both Rusche and Hodel declined to speculate what effect a suit filed against DOE by Texas government officials would hafve on the project. That matter was tied up in the courts, they said.

High-level atomic garbage, produced by nuclear power plants, is now temporarily stored by stockpiles ____WASHINGTON (AP) - Consumer in 27 states. According to Hodel, there are now 10 tons of the waste and an additional 30 tons is expected to exist by 1990. The first repository would have a capacity storage of 70 tons, the act states.

Nuclear power now accounts for about 13 percent of the nation's energy needs, Hodel said. Should the anticipated new plants be built, he claimed, that percentage would rise to 18 or 19 within a decade.

The first question asked Hodel by reporters Wednesday referred to a statement made earlier this fall by Texas Gov. Mark White. Hodel had promised, White said, that should Phillip Gramm be elected to the U.S. Senate, no Texas site would be further considered for a repository.

Hodel denied ever making the remark and implied White was either mistaken or misgouted. He did allow, however, "the quality of (the) delegation" Texas sends to Washington might have some influence in the selection process.

One reporter asked what Panhandle farmers could be told to assure them the Ogallala Aquifer - a major source for irrigation and other agricultural chores - will not become radioactive.

Anyone who examines the project in a "reasonable" way, Rusche said, should realize the shaft used to bury nuclear waste will be sealed. "I think one can be very confident that the aquifer will not be contaminated."

'We're not pioneering anything in the area of science," Rusche said.

Asked how the Deaf Smith County site could be preferred since it was only this month specified, Rusc replied there are several acceptable dump locations within the county. The change was made, he said, after comments received during the spring and summer were evaluated.

prices rose a scant 0.2 percent in November as the previous month's sharp gains in food and gasoline prices were dramatically moderated.

The overall increase was the smallest in five months.

Food prices rose just 0.2 percent, half the October rate, while gasoline prices were up 0.4 percent, a small fraction of the prior month's 1.8 percent gain.

With only one month left, prices for 1984 were rising at an annual rate of 4.1 percent, virtually matching last year's decade-best 3.8 percent.

Gas fire burns for two days

ROUND TOP, Texas (AP) - Oil well firefighter Paul "Red" Adair used 75,000 gallons of water to snuff a gas fire that burned for two days and injured five men.

"One minute it was there and the next minute it wasn't," reporter Penny Ullrich of radio station KGID said of the inferno. "The fire was out, but the spew of gas continued. So instead of being flaming, it was just a white cloud of spray coming out of the ground."

Adair's crew, which capped the well with a 10,000-pound blowout preventer Wednesday, planned to hook up the device to a gas line belonging to Giddings firm Clajon Gas Co., said Brady Clark, president of well operator Cedar Hill Petroleum Inc. of Brylan. The site is about 100 miles west of Houston.

Adair hesitated to say the danger was past once the well was capped.

"It's like a blind date," he said. "You don't know what you've got."

Workers poured 7,500 gallons of water a minute onto the blaze for 10 minutes, extinguishing the fire at 11:30 a.m.

Church vows to help homes

AUSTIN (AP) - The pastor of a Corpus Christi church that runs unlicensed children's homes has vowed that the church will do whatever needs to be done to keep the homes open.

But he said the schools cannot submit to state regulation required by a Texas Supreme Court ruling.

The Supreme Court on Wednesday ruled that the People's Baptist Church, formerly run by the late evangelist Lester Roloff, must submit its three children's homes to state regulation if it wants to continue operating the facilities.

William Ball of Harrisburg, Pa., a lawyer for the church, has told the court the church would close the homes if it lost the case, but Ball declined to comment Wednesday.

Pastor Wiley Cameron said, however, the church "will take all necessary steps to preserve its liberty to serve children." Cameron did not specify whether that meant an appeal to the U.S. Supreme Court, and he would say nothing more than what was contained in a prepared statment.

Tech sued by homosexual groups

LUBBOCK, Texas (AP) - Texas Tech University has been sued by a group of gay and lesbian students who contend the administration's refusal to officially recognize the organization violates its members' constitutional rights.

The lawsuit, filed earlier this month in federal court in Lubbock, is similar to an action the Gay Student Services Organization at Texas A&M University filed in 1976 after it was denied recognition.

The 5th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals ruled in favor of the A&M gay students' group in August, but the university has filed an appeal with the U.S. Supreme Court.

In the Tech case, the lawsuit was prompted by the university's decision to deny an application for organization filed in July by Student Services for Lesbians-Gays and Friends, said Robert Reed Obenour, president of the group.

In denying the application, Dean of Students Larry Ludewig said, the group's "stipulated goals and proposed activities..are detrimental to the educational purposes of the university."

'Abitrary, capricious, uncaring'

News Roundup White criticizes dump search

By REED PARSELL Managing Editor

Of all the comments made Wednesday concerning Deaf Smith County being one of three preferred sites for a high-level nuclear waste dump, perhaps the harshest words came from Mark White.

"I believe the bureaucrats in Washington," the governor said, "will soon hear from the people of Texas about this arbitrary, capricious, uncaring and unreasonable approach to following the very sound congressional mandate that was issued. Before the people of Deaf Smith County will glow in the dark, sparks will fly."

White's remarks were read over the telephone Wednesday afternoon by Steve Frishman, director of the Texas Nuclear Waste Programs Office. The governor has made plans, Frishman said, to be in Hereford Saturday morning for a rally (see first item in Local Roundup, Page 1). "We don't think Texas should be made a dumping ground for the rest of the nation," said Jim Mattox, state attorney general. "There may be a place in Texas that would be suitable. It is most certainly not in land in the state of Texas, and having to drill through those aquifers."

Mattox also took exception to the nine-square-mile Deaf Smith County candidate site being defined only earlier this month. "If Texas draws the black bean," he said, "our Panhandle residents will have had two weeks instead of two years to respond. I ask you, is there any semblance of fairness and equity in that?"

The Associated Press, which printed the Mattox comment, also quoted local politician James Voyles. 'We've opposed it and we're still opposed to it," the county commissioner said. "I don't think the fight is over. But it's kind of hard to fight Washington.

Voyles said he would move if Deaf Smith were to host the dump. "We have so much agriculture right in this area that is very vital to our food supply. I don't think we can afford to take a chance on losing that when there are other areas less likely to have those problems."

Though the proposed dump site rests in Deaf Smith County, it is about 10 miles closer to Vega - the Oldham County seat - than Hereford.

the middle of the prime agriculture One Vega resident, C.E. Betts, offered his comments about the repository search to the Associated Press.

"They shouldn't put it in an area like this," the owner of the Vega Motel said. "There's millions and millions of acres of wasteland in the United States, but instead they want to put it under beautiful and fertile farmland. It's pitiful."

"I'm not surprised that we were selected as one of the three top choices," Deaf Smith County Judge Glen Nelson told the Brand Wednesday afternoon. "I'm disappointed they didn't recognize (requests for) a delay in this."

Nelson said he has a feeling Deaf Smith will be ultimately pegged to host the repository. Proof should first be established, he commented, the Ogallala aquifer will not be contaminated by the dump. "I'm not completely satisfied they'll be able to seal off the water formations."

Though retaining his neutral stand on the matter, Hereford Mayor Wes Fisher said he was continuing to monitor research regarding possible adulteration of the water supply. If contaminated waters are found, he said, "we'll scream."

Deaf Smith's preferred status did not come as a surprise to Fisher. "I felt all along we'd be in the top three."

Another local politician and, like Fisher, a Republican, who did not speak out against the preferred status announcement was Garth Thomas. "I don't see why it should be something to fear," the Buffalo Lake Water District board member told the AP. "I see significant economic advantages in the long range. We're already seeing advantages."

Phil Gramm, elected last month to replace John Tower as a U.S. Senator for Texas, said the dump would probably be awarded to Hanford, Washington. There, he claimed, public opinion favors being awarded the repository.

"I remain adamantly opposed to the creation of nuclear waste repository anywhere in Texas," Gramm told the AP. "Fortunately. the Energy Department has already indicated through public statements of Secretary (Donald) Hodel and other officials that any state which strongly opposes a nuclear waste repository - as Texas does - will not get one.

Soviets' 'Star Wars' concern said shared

LONDON (AP) - Soviet official be no Soviet preconditions on Mikhail S. Gorbachev again expressed concern that President Reagan's "Star Wars" project jeopardizes future arms talks, and Britain's top opposition leader says the concern is "widely shared."

Gorbachev made his remarks in a three-hour meeting with the leader of the opposition Labor Party, Neil Kinnock, and the party's foreign affairs spokesman Denis Healey, on the fifth day of his weeklong tour of Britain.

Kinnock, at a news conference, said Gorbachev told him there would preliminary talks between U.S. Secretary of State George P. Shultz and Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei A. Gromyko in Geneva Jan. 7-8.

'Specific reference was made to the possible development of what is called 'Star Wars' - the militarization of outer space," said Kinnock. "They are extremely concerned about that, and I think their concern is widely shared."

Healey added: "What the Russians are really saying is that if the Americans decide to go ahead with the so-called Star Wars system, the itiative, offers the world the hope of Russians, instead of trying to copy them, may decide to adopt methods of penetrating whatever system the Americans produce. That will obviously set limits on the possibility of negotiating cuts in offensive missiles.'

Gorbachev, seen as a possible successor to Soviet President Konstantin U. Chernenko, has stressed Moscow's line that progress in nuclear arms talks would be impossible if the arms race is extended to space with the development of antimissile weapons based in space.

U.S. Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger told a news conference in Washington on Wednesday that the Star Wars project, officially known as the Strategic Defense Inlasting peace instead of resorting to "mutual terror" to avert nuclear war Weinberger also said the Soviets are clearly pursuing a Star Wars research project of their own.

British government sources reported Sunday after talks between Gorbachev and Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher that the two leaders were equally anxious to halt an arms race in space.

Mrs. Thatcher, who is due to meet with Reagan this weekend on her way back home from Peking following the signing of the agreement between Britain and China on Hong Kong, reportedly described the Star Wars project as an impediment to

Attacks defensive, CIA claims

WASHINGTON (AP) - American helicopter crews employed by the Central Intelligence Agency fired on Nicaraguan government forces twice this year in actions the CIA contends were defensive, U.S. government officials say.

But a congressional oversight committee is questioning whether the first clash on Jan. 6 at the northern port city of Potosi might have actually been an offensive strike against a Nicaraguan government arms storage facility.

The second clash occurred on March 7 at the southern port of San Juan del Sur during a wave of CIA-directed mining and sabotage raids against Nicaragua's port facilities, said the officials, who spoke only on condition they not be identified.

No Americans were reported injured in either fight.

In explaining the clashes to congressional oversight committees, the CIA said the American-manned helicopters intervened to protect specially trained Latin commandos, working for the CIA, who had come under fire from Nicaraguan government forces, the officials said.

Withdrawal from UNESCO warning

WASHINGTON (AP) - The Reagan administration says U.S. withdrawal from UNESCO should serve as a warning to other international organizations that mismanagement and anti-Western policies could jeopardize American support.

The administration, in a widely expected announcement, said Wednesday it is pulling out of the 161-member body because of "endemic hostility" toward the West, its "extraneous politicization" and inefficient management.

The U.S. withdrawal from the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization becomes effective Dec. 31.

The United States has been a probationary member since last December when it gave the required 12 months notice of its intention to pull out.

The circumstances that impelled us last year to announce our plan to withdraw have not changed sufficiently this year to warrant a change in our decision," said Assistant Secretary of State for International Organizations Gregory J. Newell.

New U.S. planes being considered

LONDON (AP) - The Soviets are eroding NATO's technological lead in air power with a new generation of fighters, but U.S. efforts to develop planes with voice-activated weapons could make up lost ground, the new Jane's aircraft yearbook says.

'Air power remains one of the most effective deterrents to war at every level, but the present situation is far from satisfactory for the leaders of NATO military forces," said editor John W.R. Taylor in the 1984-85 edition of the authoritative "Jane's All The World's Aircraft," published today.

The Soviets now have three advanced all-weather fighters, the MiG-29, the Sukhoi Su-27 Flanker and the MiG-31 Foxhound, in service or due to become operational soon that pose a major challenge to the West's long-held air superiority, Taylor said.

On its side, NATO has the U.S. F-16 Falcon, F-15 Eagle, the F-18 Hornet and Europe's Tornado. Taylor said all will be improved with more powerful engines and a dvanced technology over the next decade, but most have run into problems already.

However, U.S. designers are working on Advanced Tactical Fighter, of ATF, programs aimed at providing front-line superiority over the Soviets until at least 2025.

Worthy Example

Ethiopia is hungry. Of every thousand Ethiopian babies, 143 die during their first year - most starve.

For all the emergency food aid moving into Ethiopia from many nations - mostly from us - one-in-five Ethiopians is malnourished.

Yet, Ethiopia is but one of 18 African nations thus stricken.

In the two decades since African nations demanded and got their "independence' most have been backsliding into poverty. Africa has fallen further behind.

Food out put per capita is down. Agricultural marketing is inefficient. Incentives to farmers are nil. Basic farming is done mostly by women and by them grudgingly.

Then, starting in 1973, seven nations in western Africa were hit by severe drought.

And starting in 1980 that drought reached eastward and southward into another 11 nations. And even without drought, 47 percent of Africa is too dry for crops.

And while food production per capita is declining 1 percent a year, procreation continues to increase the African population 3.5 percent a year.

Despite the best the West can do, a grim prospect.

And, ironically, our good intentions could deliver more nourishment only to compound the problem.

HEMISPHERE IN FERMENT

If we are looking for trouble-we need not leave our home hemisphere. Trouble is almost everywhere in Latin America.

During just one recent day ... In Bogata, Colombia, a fatal bombing outside our embassy killed one, wounded six.

In Santiago, Chile - a national strike - flaming barricades - a state of siege.

Chile and Argentina are but barely back from the brink of war.

Uruguay has elected a democratic president, but the military has not let go of the reins and may not. The several Mexican connections continue to move coke and pot across our border. If a Castro - or a Moscow - wanted to cripple the United States, a Trojan horse could do it; outsiders bringing in drugs we can't handle and debilitating disease for which we have no natural immunity. Ecuador is expelling priests it calls traitors.

Bolivia's labor unions called a general strike.

A Guatemala City official machine-gunned dead.

Nicaragua is at war with itself. Honduras is a staging area for Nicaraguan overthrowers and Hondurans are in Washington pleading for more help from us.

So if policing the hemisphere were up to us we could be ALL over - like a barefoot boy stompin' ants.

Once upon a time Mexico, Central America and South America freed themselves from foreign domination. During the 150 years when they were going our way we did nothing to coerce them.

Beyond the most difficult thing of all: being a worthy example.

One of fewer than ten women in administration in the Hereford Independent School District, Marylin Leasure has not found the transition difficult from teacher to administrator.

"It hasn't been a hard switch. The teachers are so helpful and have made it easy," Leasure said.

She taught algebra and geometry all day until two years ago when the position of activities director became available. She took the half-day position and continued to teach the other half of the day.

As activities director, she publishes a weekly and monthly calendar for the teachers and makes the school calendar where she schedules all of the student activities.

In May, she accepted the position of assistant principal-another halfday job.

"I do a little of each job all day long," Leasure explained. "Sometimes it's awkward to both discipline and work with the kids. They might come in in the morning for disciplinary problems and then I'll see them in the afternoon to check on their caps and gowns for graduation."

Leasure said that she liked the decision-making aspect of her new job, but that it was tough.

"You use a lot of judgment in disciplining, but I like to work with the people," she said. "I like the detail and meeting deadlines.

"When you have a directive you must be diplomatic. You must get your point across without hurting other people's feelings.

"Administration has a whole different set of rewards than teaching," she continued. "In the office you work with personnel and must manage your own skills to get along with everyone else."

In order to be an assistant principal, Leasure had to have a master's degree in education and a mid-management certificate. Three years ago she went back to West Texas State University to begin work on her master's.

"I started back because I thought it would simply help me in dealing with people," she explained. "I about going into ad-

MARYLIN LEASURE

"I'd always like to have the door open to go back to teaching," she said. "I miss the contact with the hids and getting to know them. Kids aren't tense in the classroom like they are in the office."

When teaching, she saw anywhere from 100 to 150 students each day. Presently, she seldom sees more than 20 students in a day.

Leasure views the HISD as an extremely innovative district-one in which people are always watching out for new legislation and how it will affect the school system.

"We're really a step ahead of all the other schools," she said.

In addition to her two-part job, Leasure is student council sponsor and senior coordinator. She must prepare the caps, gowns and diplomas for graduation.

Outside of school, she enjoys needlework, sewing and cooking. She is a charter member of Toujours Amis Study Club and chairman of that club's scholarship committee.

She assists with the fourth, fifth and sixth grade choir at First Baptist Church and teaches the fifth and sixth grade Sunday School class. Her husband, Ray, is employed with Leasure Body Shop. ## Who's Who in Who's Who WTSU - When Who's Who Among until the ripe old age of 37. After rais-

Students In American Universities And Colleges announced 53 selections from the West Texas State University student body, some interesting patterns emerged. The "typical college student" of a few years back doesn't seem to be an appropriate stereotype anymore.

Among the standout WTSU students recognized this year, 66 percent are women, 28 percent are married, and 13 percent come from outside the state of Texas. But perhaps the most startling figure in the WHO'S WHO statistics is the large number of returning students on the list. Nearly one of three WHO'S WHO inductees are older students who have returned to college for one reason or another.

Obviously, a sampling of 53 students is hardly adequate for predicting any nationwide trends. But the figures from WTSU do lend support to current theories among teachers and school administrators that college education is being perceived more and more as a lifelong process.

Returning students come back to the classroom for a wide variety of reasons. Some want to keep abreast of the latest research in their fields. Others are in the process of changing careers or improving their positions in their present careers. Still others delayed entry into college or had their formal education interrupted by jobs, marriages, children, or personal crises, and are only now finding the time to return.

For example, look briefly at Joyce Fowler and Janie Sims, who are among WTSU's 1984 WHO'S WHO recipients. Joyce didn't enter college ing a family, she decided to pursue a career in journalism. Now she's editor of the alumni newspaper as well as the campus newspaper, The Prairie.

Janie, on the other hand, worked on a music performance degree at WTSU for three semesters before leaving school to go on the road with "Sunday," a Christian singing group. Janie was gone four years before she and her husband decided a stronger foundation in music training was a must for her career. Now, thanks to the added help she has received, Janie is singing beyond anything she formerly would have anticipated and thinking about a career in opera.

Dozens of other stories, just as interesting and unique, could be told by the other WHO'S WHO inductees, and each might strike a blow at the stereotype of collegians we carry in our minds. The university experience isn't just for that kid down the street who brings home sacks and sacks of dirty laundry every weekend. Even the "older folks" are in college now, and doing quite well, thank you.

She should finish the degree in August, 1985. At that point, she will need only three more courses for her mid-management certificate.

One of her required courses is a law class in which she has studied House Bill 72.

"H. Ross is trying to turn out a lot 1 Tbsp. butter of skilled mathematicians and scientists but not everybody can do that."

Just two of the pressures from HB 72 are the raising of the passing level and the mandated tutorial sessions. Now, anything below 70 is failing.

women have a dowager's hump - a hump in the upper spine, between the shoulders. It is also called a "buffalo hump" and is caused by degeneration of the vertebrae. The body of a verteal of these wedge-shaped vertebrae in and estimates of the rate are as high

DEAR DR. LAMB - I am 74 and the upper spine will curve the spine forward, producing the dowager's hump. This also results in a loss of height. Pain may occur when degeneration of bone, and bone spurs caused from attempted repair, impinge upon nerve roots. This can cause pain along the pathway supplied by that nerve.

The bone degenerates from osteo-porosis, a common problem in small women after the menopause. It is a serious disease. Many fractures including hip fractures - are caused bra is round, like a spool. It loses bone at the front part, which causes it to become wedge-shaped. Having sever-within six months after the fracture, these people already have a variety of serious medical problems.

The two main causes of osteoporosis are a decrease in estrogen asso-ciated with the end of the childbearing years and a lack of calcium. I have discussed these problems in a new issue of The Health Letter, Special Report 24, Osteoporosis: Porous Bones, which I am sending you. Others who want this issue can send 75 cents with a long, stamped, selfaddressed envelope for it to me in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, NY 10019.

Your loss of bone may be able to be stopped even now if you take enough calcium, as in a quart of fortified skim milk a day, and you may even benefit from some estrogen. A proper exercise program that helps you maintain function and flexibility may also help.

DEAR DR. LAMB - If I don't sleep with my head elevated, after several hours my nose closes up and my head aches. Is this sinus-related or is it caused by little blood vessels

> DEAR READER - Whenever the pressure inside the blood vessels increases, it increases the flow of fluids out of the circulation into the tissues and slows the normal return of fluids from the tissues to the circulation. The net result is swelling.

Pressure increases in relation to body position and the heart. If you are upright, the pressure increases at all points below the heart and decreases at all points above the heart. So during the day, the pressure in the head is decreased. But at night, when you lie down, it increases to the level of pressure near the heart. That increase does lead to swelling.

Hereford girls basketball coach Larry Sowers Wednesday had mixed emotions about the first "half" of the season.

While obviously disappointed in the Whitefaces' 4-7 record near the Christmas holidays, the coach expressed happiness in some individual performances. Sowers added that the team wasn't that far off what he expected at this point.

"Looking at our record," he said, "you'd think we weren't doing anything. But we just haven't been able to win a lot of close games. Maybe we will."

With the exception of Hereford's opening loss to Levelland, the Whitefaces have been within three points of the lead the last two minutes of their seven losses. Hereford also has lost two overtime games, both to Clovis.

Free-throw shooting has been part of the Herd's problem, Sowers said.

In the ball game in Clovis Tuesday, Hereford went to the charity stripe only nine times all night while Clovis took 34 free shots. Sowers said that was a result of lack of strong inside play.

Even if he might be disappointed with some aspects of his offense, Sowers had nothing but praise for the play of 5-6 junior Natalie Sims. Sowers said Sims was an all-around , weren't able to finish the job," said player who made a minimum number of mistakes.

DETROIT (AP) - Monte Clark, fired as head coach by the Detroit Lions three days after concluding his fifth losing season in seven years, said he would leave the National and dignity."

"The self-satisfaction of knowing that you've done your best is worth something, too, so I'm going to try to dignity as I've had during my tenure here - no parting shots or anything," Clark said Wednesday in a telephone interview.

Lions' owner William Clay Ford

Asked what went wrong with the Lions this season, Clark said, "You have your statement," and hung up the phone.

Ford said the team has made no decision on a replacement for Clark, who through seven seasons coached the Lions to a 43-61-1 record.

The Lions' five-person scouting group would be retained "to assure continuity in preparation for the 1985 draft," said team spokesman Brian Offensive tackle Chris Dietrich said he was sorry to see Clark leave. "I didn't want anybody to replace him," said Dietrich. 'He treated everybody fairly. He gave everybody a fair shot.'

Clark, 47, learned of his firing Wednesday in a meeting with Ford, Muir said,

The meeting was requested by Clark "to clarify his standing" with the club after he set a team record by coaching his 105th game, a 30-13 loss the Lions under Clark since 1979, Sunday to the Chicago Bears. when the team finished at 2-14-0.

"I don't really have any plans yet - just to spend Christmas with my family right now," Clark said. "I have three years remaining on the contract, so from that standpoint it's not a big concern."

Muir declined to say how much money the firing would cost the Lions, who in 1982 signed Clark to a five-year contract extension.

PITTSBURGH (AP) - Louis Lipps didn't doubt his own abundant natural ability; but never thought he would be the offensive rookie of the year in the National Football League. Or any other football league. Baseball? That's a different story.

"I'd played baseball since I was 8, 9 years old and I thought baseball would be my future after high school," the Pittsburgh Steelers' wide receiver said after being voted The Associated Press' 1984 NFL offensive rookie of the year.

"I played center field in high school, batted .385 my senior year. I hit a few home runs and stole a few bases and would have played baseball if I had been given the chance," Lipps said. "But I never got a single call about playing Although Southern Mississippi is a run-oriented team and Lipps is a wide receiver, that was his choice. He showed enough raw talent in four college seasons to be the Steelers' No. 1 draft choice last spring, despite a lack of overwhelming receiving statistics.

"He has done everything we can ask a rookie to do," said Steelers Coach Chuck Noll. "He came from a school that didn't throw the ball

Since we first ran this ad, updated resale values are available. Not surprisingly, John Deere looks even better. Is that important? Yes.

Always consider resale value when you price a field tractor. Because the differences among brands may sometimes be bigger than ANY purchase incentive. Compare John Deere with our two leading competitors. According to the Fall 1984 Official Guide of the National Farm and Power Equipment Dealers Association, the average 5-year-old John Deere 4440 sells for 108 percent of its 1979 list price. One leading competitor averages 88 percent of its 1979 list price. The other averages 74 percent. What's that mean in dollars? Add the John Deere gain on original price to the com-petitor's loss. The John Deere advantage is as much as $9,078!

Is this only true of one model? No. Every 40 Series 90- to 180-hp tractor has an average resale price that's higher than its new price five years ago.

Is resale your only John Deere advantage? No! Stop by the store. We'll be happy to explain the difference between a low-price tractor and a low-cost John Deere:

NEW YORK (AP) - Bill Maas, the most aggressive lineman in Kansas City since the days when Curly Culp was helping the Chiefs to a Super Bowl triumph, was named today by the Associated Press the National Football League's defensive rookie of the year.

Despite missing two games with a hairline fracture of his left leg and playing in pain for a half-season more, Maas' strength as nose tackle forced opponents to double-team him and freed defensive ends Art Still and Mike Bell to roam.

The combination helped the Chiefs to hold opponents to an average of 20 yards less per rush than in 1983 and only three men rushed for 100 yards or more against them as they improved from 6-10 to 8-8 by winning. their last three games.

Sowers used the work example of former Hereford player Cathy Bartels, now a starter on the team for Frank Phillips College. He said not many thought Bartels could play competitive basketball when she was a freshman at HHS, but that Bartels spent hours after school practicing. The play of HHS sophomores also

UNLIMITED MOVIES, 100 CHANNELS

You may have noticed a variety of advertisements proclaiming the advantages of owning your own satellite dish home entertainment system.

Hereford Cablevision thinks it's time you knew the facts before you buy and not when it's too late!

The Hereford Brand-Thursday, December 20, 1984-Page 9

Dy Dal moth

Fact 1 Scrambling of Services

Based on the most desired entertainment services, probably the most important factor when considering the purchase of a satellite dish, HBO, Cinemax, The Movie Channel. Showtime, and ESPN have all made public commitments to scramble their service from the satellite beginning as early as March 1985, and other services are expected to follow. Without an authorized satellite descrambler and most likely a monthly fee, viewing these services will be impossible. So, what you're watching today on satellite dish may be gone tomorrow!

Fact 2 Service After The Sale

Have you ever noticed how often the warranty runs out before you finish paying for the product? Satellite technology changes frequently and is often complicated. Many dealers sell satellite dishes as a sideline to their main-line business and contract installation and service out to a second party. Make sure the person you are buying from is (1) the person who is providing your service. (2) that he will provide spare equipment should yours break down and have to be sent to the factory for repair, and (3) he has the experience necessary to keep your system working properly.

Fact 3 Changes in Technology

Without being too technical, dish size is important. Next time you drive by the radio station, the television station, or the cable system notice the size of their dishes. As satellites are spaced closer and closer together in orbit and become more powerful, the smaller lower priced dishes will not be able to tell one satellite's signal from another, which means your picture quality will suffer or may become unwatchable.

Fact 4 Cost

Some dealers have made comparisons of their satellite system's cost to the cost of cable televison service. Keep in mind that they are comparing their lowest priced system with the maximum level of cable service which would include two(2) optional premlum services. Cable service comes with a warranty for as long as you have the service and our maintenance is free. Also, if you decide to move, an unsightly satellite dish taking up valuable space in your backyard may make your home more difficult to sell.

Fact 5 100 Channels

Before you buy, ask to see a list of the 100 channels. What you'll find is a lot of duplication. Many programmers use an East and West Coast feed that show exactly the same thing, just a couple of hours apart. Besides being several hours apart, programmers may duplicate their signal on different satellites in order to continue providing service in the event of a satellite failure. For instance, HBO is shown on three(3) different channels on two(2) different satellites. Besides, on the low cost systems you're going to be out in the cold wind cranking the dish from one satellite to another to receive your 100 channels.

We thought you should know the facts. Remember, if the deal looks too good to be true it probably is. In the case of many of the so-called "Low Priced" systems you get what you pay for. We hope you're still getting it by the time you pay for it.

And from all the employees at Hereford Cablevision, our wish for a Merry Christmas and a Happy New Year.

David Holt preserves mountain music

LOS ANGELES (AP) - David Holt's life took on a whole new direction 20 years ago when he found an old cowboy record in the local Santa Barbara library

"It was an old 78 record by a singer named Carl Sprague," said Holt. "I talked to a folklorist, and he told me Sprague was still alive in Texas. Sprague was the first man to ever record cowboy music."

Holt tracked Sprague down in Texas, and the old man taught him to play the harmonica. Before that, Holt had played the drums in rock 'n' roll bands.

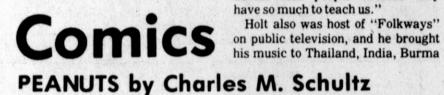

Holt then turned his attention to acoustic instruments and to preserving the old-time mountain music of the rural South. He focused on "bluegrass music," a branch of country music distinguished by its three-fingered banjo style and founded by Bill Monroe in 1945.

Bluegrass is also characterized by its use of only acoustic instruments, high tenor singing with close harmony and often the use of the mandolin. An acoustic instrument is one that is not assisted by electrical or electronic means.

Monroe's band was called The Bluegrass Boys and the term bluegrass soon became generic.

Holt is now the host of "Fire On the Mountain," a half-hour show on the Nashville Network, providing country music to 19.5 million cable television households.

bluegrass stalwarts as Monroe, John Hartford and Doc Watson. He also goes on location, seeking out the oldtimers living back in the hollows. Holt has been trekking through the mountains for 15 years to record the old music before it vanishes.

One find was Dellie Norton, 87, an herbalist and balladeer in Sodom Laurel, N.C. "She follows the traditions passed down for many generations," he said. "We can't forget about these people because they have so much to teach us."

Holt also was host of "Folkways"

So fascinated was he that Magee and his wife originally fashioned a single angel from Aside from the angels, a styrofoam wig head, white cloth and chicken wire, and hung it from a fork in the branches of his yard's most dominant tree.

"I noticed a few cars, so I decided to add Mary, Joseph. and the baby Jesus the next vear." Magee says. "The crowd got a little thicker, so every year I'd add a few more lights."

Magee still hangs that original angel. She flies, with hands clasped in prayerabove the scenes of Mary speaking to the angel Gabriel and Joseph asking for lodging in the Bethlehem Inn.

"She was originally made from a Red Riding Hood mask," Magee says, his voice sounding like he was describing a living person. "I'm sort of sentimental toward her. I give her a new hairdo every now and then."

the science of hydroponics to grow lettuce, cucumbers and tomatoes, primarily in liquidmineral solutions:

The results are large, quick-growing, clean and tasty vegetables which are fast becoming a favorite in local groceries and restaurants.

Farm manager Wayne Burkhalter Jr., a partner with Corsicana entrepreneurs Walter Erwin and Dean Milkes, said that the purity and freshness of the products comes from the control the greenhouse can exercise over the plants' environment.

The greenhouse holds about 9,000 tomato plants, 2,000 cucumber plants and several thousand heads of lettuce in various stages of development.

Golden Circle Farms is one of the largest privately owned hydroponic businesses in the state, he said.

Temperature, nutrients, fluids and pests can be tightly controlled through frequent monitoring, Burkhalter said. Furthermore, because fluid rather than soil is the nutritive medium, many plants can be grown in a small space.

"Man for centuries has tried to grow things in water. but for a long time people didn't think it could be done because they didn't realize that nutrients are nutrients whether they are found in the soil or water," he said.

One of the tenets of hydroponics is that "soil is nothing more than an anchorage medium that holds the plant in place and allows it access to the solution," Burkhalter said.

"Rather than planting in mineral-rich soil and letting rain dissolve the nutrients, we supply the solution already mixed," he said.

In a warehouse a few yards from the 20, 90- X 20-foot, linked greenhouses, plant nutrients first are dissolved in a large barrel with hot water. Then the fluid is pumped into two, 5,000-gallon tanks.

Fluid from the tanks is fed in timed, regulated doses to each plant through a system of metal and plastic pipes.

Diesel-fueled heaters warm the building in winter, and fans cool it in summer.

solution flows underneath. By the time the lettuce head is ready for harvest, the foundation is mostly roots, which are kept on the plant as it is sold to keep it fresh.

The plants are European hybrids, although Burkhalter has begun experimenting with the popular American head lettuce, which has yet to be grown successfully in a large-scale · hydroponic operation.

The greenhouse's lettuce and cucumbers were ready for marketing about three weeks ago, and Burkhalter estimates the tomatoes will be ready for sale in about three to four weeks.

Dallas wholesalers also have expressed an interest in the produce, he said, and when the greenhouse is up to full production, the business should be able to get a premium price for the vegetables in the city but still keep the price low for Corsicana-area customers, Erwin was the instigator of the commercial hydroponic project, and said he first read about the technique in a "Wall Street Journal" story about three years ago. Immediately intrigued, Erwin flew out to the California farm profiled in the article and toured the facilities.

Although he later discarded that facility's growing method in favor of other designs, Erwin was sufficiently sold on its potential to become a strong supporter of hydroponic research at shrimp farm.

Erwin later approached Burkhalter, head of the college's agriculture department, to provide the expertise for a commercial greenhouse that he and longtime partner Milkes wanted to build on property they owned in Rice. 2

After analyzing technical and financial aspects of creating such a large operation, Burkhalter agreed, excited both by the opportunities and financial gain. Burkhalter said he is kept running these days between managing the greenhouse. teaching college classes, raising cattle with his father on their Roane ranch and supporting his family, but the loves the challenge.

"It's just one of these financial investment things that if it works, it will be great," he said. "We've had to invent a lot of our own system and that's been quite an experiment.

No, that would just kill it. I don't want any money. I see people, and it these decorations) makes them happy That touches the heart." says Magee, who earns his livelihood by working part time as a sign-painter.

So why does he spend time and money setting up his scenes, or waking up late at night to let tardy spectators see his decorations?

"The kids, especially, go crazy over the angels. It's easier to explain to children all about the birth of Christ. The pictures always will stick with the kids all of their lives," he says.

Polish youth dies after hiding illness

DALLAS (AP) - Padwel Sitarz knew his parents had little money for their struggle to build a new life in a strange land.

The teen-ager, the only member of the family who spoke English, felt they depended on him so much that he hid his sickness from them, afraid they could not afford a doctor.

The 16-year-old son of an exiled Polish Solidarity leader hid the illness, that is, until he began coughing up blood at school last Wednes-

By Saturday, he was dead, the victim of a cancer that surgeons said had spread from his prostate to his lungs and stomach.

His new American friends called Padwel "Paul" and admired him for his modesty and his manners.

"He was beautiful in every way," said Margaretta Cage, his reading improvement teacher at Hillcrest High School.

Padwel's father. Longin Sitarz, was a leader of the outlawed Solidarity Union in Poland who was imprisoned in 1981 when martial law was declared.

Family members say he was freed in June 1982 after agreeing to leave Poland Sitarz, an electrician, has had a hard time finding steady work, friends said.

They said it was Padwel who opened bank accounts. filled out insurance forms. wrote checks, bought groceries and spent the summer working alongside his mother at a luxury hotel.

'My understanding is that he'd been coughing like this for some time, but he wouldn't say anything," said Ms. Cage. "He knew they didn't have any money for a doctor, so he wouldn't say anthing.

The school nurse said the boy looked as though he were going into shock. '

"He apologized for taking up my time," said nurse Jean Ansley. "He apologized for messing up the sink in the clinic. He was apologizing for everything.

AUSTIN-A panel of Texas House and Senate leaders voted last week to recommend millions in spending cuts for state agencies and universities.

But the $25.7 billion state budget shaped by the Legislative Budget Board in its final form is still about a $1 billion more than present spending. When the Legislature convenes January 8, it will have to grapple with additional cuts in areas where the panel could not reach agreement, such as federal court-ordered improvements to prisons.

The tightest budget in anyone's memory is the first concrete indication that the Legislature will not raise taxes again this session. The leadership in both chambers has publicly sworn against a new tax hike, but two-year budgets begin with the Legislative Budget Board, which is made up of key legislators from both houses

The IBB's recommendation gives no pay raise to state employees.

Higher Education

Some of the deepest cutbacks in higher education left state university officials reeling. On the average, state aid to colleges and universities. was cut some 26 percent in the fields of research, faculty salaries and operating expenses.

One encouraging note came when the LBB voted not to reduce the $100 million special fund for schools outside the University of Texas and Texas A&M University systems.

But the Legislature could still pass over the fund, which was approved by voters as a constitutional amendment in November, with a two-thirds vote.

Betting The Horses

House Speaker Gib Lewis explained that revenues could be raised without a tax increase in several ways, including a college tuition hike or the implementation of parimutuel betting on horse racing in Texas.

He said he favored letting each state agency finance pay increases to its employees out of its own budget.

oilfields, and last week Texas Land Commissioner Garry Mauro named blue-ribbon study committee to identify an answer.

On the committee are Bruce Anderson, president of the Texas Independent Producers and Royalty Owners Assn.; Jesse Luten, Jr., former general counsel for Gulf Corp.; and Max Powell, an Austin oil and gas consultant.

A major difficulty involves controversial South Texas rancher Clinton Manges, who by law is a 50-50 partner with the State since he owns the surface rights.

Manges is named in several lawsuits from various parties interested in a share of the potentially rich fields, estimated by some as high as $1 billion.

Other Events

In other unrelated events in state government last week:

-Texas Railroad Commissioner Buddy Temple's name surfaced briefly as a possibility to be new national chairman of the Democratic Party. Temple was interested, until he found no support from state party chairman Bob Slagle, who was already committed to another from out-of-state.

-Texas Republican Party chairman George Strake blasted Gov. Mark White for his "luxurious" style of living in the Governor's Mansion, and for not holding down his own agency budgets. White was out of town, but Strake, no doubt, was plowing fertile ground for new attacks in early January when campaign contribution reports are due for release. White is rumored to have raised between $1 to $2 million last month.

-A Houston legislator, State Rep. Al Edwards, was arrested last week with two others for trespassing at the South African consulate where they protested that country's racist policies.

-House Speaker Gib Lewis caught some flak for giving his support to a bill legalizing betting on the horses in Texas. Last week Lewis announced he was "warming up" to the idea of parimutuel wagering,

Oilfield Committee

Remember the massive lawsuit which saw the state take back its oil lands in Duval County from Mobil Oil?

Nagging legal questions have prevented the state from leasing those just a scant three weeks after the Texas Horse Racing Association held a fundraiser for him. The association said it raised over $25,000, but Lewis heatedly denied the money was for him, explaining that he was only having lunch with a bunch of businessmen in town for the day.

Christmas lights may ## be used anytime

NEW YORK (AP) - Christmas lights are not just for the holidays, says a residential lighting specialist.

The spotlight used to illuminate a Santa Claus, for example, can also light shrubbery and provide added safety and security to otherwise dark areas, says Nancy Christensen, of General Electric Co.

The same is true for strings of lights used on Christmas trees, she adds.

She recommends some other nonholiday uses for the lights:

- Outdoor strands of different colored lights can be used to mark summer campsites or for backyard barbecues.

Strands of lights along a door frame or hallway can serve as night lights.

- Smaller lights can be tacked along glass doors or under furniture shelving.

In any case, Ms. Christensen says, basic electrical safety is most important.

"Indoor lights are not weatherproofed and must not be used outdoors," she says.

Frayed or exposed wires must be properly repaired, or thrown away. No more than three sets of lights should be put on one extension cord, says Ms. Christensen.
