Locals wish to contribute to Ethiopia

Father Egan claims

Local ecumenical leaders have found themselves under pressure to collect money for victims of starvation in Ethiopia, but the pressure is not coming from the higher-ups. The nudging, according to Father Joe Egan of St. Anthony's Catholic Church, is from a number of Hereford residents who are ready to contribute but have no idea who to give to. Included in that group is the fourth grade class at St. Anthony's School, which made $142 one morning selling cupcakes.

"I just heard about two kids in the same family who have asked their parents not to give them Christmas presents but to give them the money to send to Ethiopia," the new parish priest related. "In fact, they've already given some of their own money."

Earlier this week, Egan and a volunteer committee met during the noon hour to get the ball rolling. Included were representatives of Church Women United and the Ministerial Alliance.

"I don't think we'll have to stimulate the people much to get involved," Egan predicted. "That's already happening. We'll just need to tell them how to go about making donations."

Egan knows what can happen when a community decides to do something about a hunger crisis, having been through it before. Five years ago, he was parish priest of a church in Cassopolis, Mich., that took part in a community-wide fundraising effort for the starving in Cambodia. The tiny town set a goal of $5,000 and raised $10,000 instead.

"I've gone through these. I know they work. We're going to put prayer into action."

The money raised will go to the Church World Service, an interdenominational organization that is well-established and known for keeping overhead at a minimum.

"I think we can safely say that 99 percent of the money we send will go to Ethiopia," Egan assured. The rest would help with the organization's administrative and public relations costs.

Accounts have been opened at both Hereford banks, and religious and lay leaders in Hereford are planning fundraising efforts for next month. Egan said a committee meeting is set for Monday at 10 a.m. in the Hereford State Bank Community Room. The funds are under the name "Hereford Save-A-Life in Ethiopia Fund."

Egan pointed out that not only Ethiopians but millions of persons in 24 countries in Africa face famine because of a three-year drought there.

"I find it symbolic," Egan mused, "that we are talking about feeding the starving in Ethiopia while we are surrounded by all this grain." Egan also feels the Christmas season is a good time to begin a campaign, "because people's hearts are open now."

Help requested for bird probe

Concerns diseased waterfowls found

The U.S. Fish and Wildlife service is asking hunters and landowners for help in its investigation of waterfowl diseases affecting birds on playa lakes in Texas, New Mexico, Oklahoma and Colorado.

According to a news release from the regional office in Albuquerque, "Each year thousands of waterfowl die from bird cholera, botulism, and other diseases." The FWS is asking people who find dead birds on playa lakes to notify them of the locations

"Upon notification, wildlife biologists will collect specimens and have them analyzed to determine cause and circumstances of death," the release stated.

Although playa lakes are important as wintering habitat for migrating waterfowl, FWS said, they can also prevent a threat by hosting diseases deadly to ducks and geese. In an effort to reduce waterfowl diseases, the Interagency Playa Lakes Disease Council was formed to coordinate waterfowl disease investigation and research and provide public information.

The council is made up of representatives from FWS, Texas Parks and Wildlife, Texas Tech University and the Hereford-based Texas Waterfowlers Association. Jim Steiert and Mike Smith of Hereford were named to the council.

Steiert said Wednesday he is not aware of any major kills in Deaf Smith County so far this winter. He also stressed that diseases which affect birds are not a threat to human health. "It's not the same cholera that affects humans," he pointed out.

Anyone who discovers dead or dying waterfowl is asked to contact the Muleshoe National Wildlife Refuge, P.O. Box 549, Muleshoe, Tx. 79347. The telephone number is (806) 946-3341.

County, appraisal boards meet

Two local governing bodies have scheduled meetings for next week, with the Hereford City Commission to lead off at 7:30 p.m. Monday in City Hall, 224 N. Lee Ave.

Directors of the Deaf Smith County Appraisal District, meanwhile, are to assemble in the 402 W. Fourth St. office at 7 p.m. Thursday. Agenda items include ratification of bills and an office report.

City commissioners are to consider, among other things, the second reading of a franchise stipulation concerning Energas. Matters pertaining to high school tournaments at the public golf course and a request street lights be placed on Fifteenth Street between Centre St. and Highway 385 are also on tap.

Furthermore, a contract is to be drawn up with the county concerning city use of the jail, N. Highway 385 storm sewer matters are to be eyed and an executive session is slated to discuss a replacement for Dudley Bayne, who is retiring from his city manager's position effective next summer.

Letters accepted until Monday

Though Friday was the announced deadline for turning in letters to Santa Claus, additional gift requests may be inserted in the Brand's front-door mail slot up until 8 a.m. Monday.

Any notes turned in after that time will not be accepted.

As has been the case for the past several years, the Brand is forwarding all Christmas present requests to Claus' North Pole residence. All letters are to be reprinted in the Brand's special Christmas issue Sunday, Dec. 23.

Funds established for Lange

Medical funds have been established at both Hereford banks for Bill Lange, who is suffering complications from a knee injury sustained at his place of employment.

A native of Hereford, Lange recently moved to Gainesville, where he is hospitalized. He and his wife Tammy Lange have two daughters, one of whom recently underwent surgery.

Donations may be taken to Hereford State Bank or the First National Bank of Hereford.

Jail bids to be acted upon

Action on recently-received bids for renovation and construction work at Deaf Smith County Jail is to be taken at 2 p.m. Monday in the courthouse by county commissioners.

On Dec. 4, commissioners learned the lowest bid was $1.56 million by Sam J. Smith Construction of Amarillo. Though $1.56 million was budgeted for the project, $120,000 has already been spent for architectural fees.

Work at the jail is to involve two phases. The first is adding a 30-by-30-foot recreation facility to one side and an expanded holding area to the other. Remodeling of the existing structure represents the bulk of the second phase.

Accord not part of new policy

Reagan aide says about Cuba pact

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Reagan administration is ruling out further talks with Cuba despite an agreement providing for the return to Havana of more than 2,700 criminals and mental patients.

"We are treating this as an isolated problem," White House spokesman Larry Speakes said Friday as he announced a deal that would clear the way for the yearly immigration to the United States of up to 3,000 former Cuban political prisoners and 20,000 other refugees.

Announcing the accord, Speakes said, "The conclusion of an agreement on this issue does not signal any change in U.S. policy toward Cuba."

"That policy reflects our serious concern about Cuba's international behavior," Speakes said. "We see no evidence that Cuba is prepared to change that behavior."

The Cubans, most of whom were convicted of crimes committed in this country, could be going home beginning in mid-January. But a federal judge's ruling in Atlanta that some 1,500 of them are entitled to a hearing could delay implementation of the agreement, reached Friday after four years of negotiations.

"We're certainly willing to talk to the Cubans if they are willing to reenter the family of nations," Speakes said. But he and other administration officials made it clear they did not think President Fidel Castro's government met that qualification.

tion problems," Cuba's official news agency Prensa Latina reported.

During his speech, Castro said Cubans who went to the United States during the Mariel boatlift did not include any who were mentally ill or responsible for "bloody acts," the news agency said.

Castro said these refugees included hundreds of people who sought asylum at the Peruvian Embassy compound in Havana before the boatlift began, Prensa Latina reported.

The Cuban leader was quoted as saying the ceiling of 20,000 visas a year was carefully analyzed during the talks. The two sides could not agree on a minimum number and agreed that both countries would try to use the quota to its maximum, Castro said.

Relations were broken in 1961 after the appropriation of virtually all U.S. property on the island. However, the United States has diplomatic relations with virtually all countries in the world, including many with whom there is sharp disagreement.

The "excludables" due to go back to Havana were among 129,000 Cubans who flocked here from the port of Mariel in 1980. Since then, the United States has accepted 2,000 to 3,000 refugees a year, mostly relatives of Cubans already in the country.

Regular U.S. visas will be issued in Cuba again as a result of the agreement. The process was suspended in 1980 when Havana refused to repatriate "Marielitos" with criminal records or mental problems — many of the same people now being returned.

Castro went on nationwide television and radio Friday night to announce "agreements between Cuba and the United States on immigra-

The 20,000-visa ceiling is the same limit applied to immigrants from other countries to the United States.

Senior administration officials, briefing reporters at the White House on an anonymous basis, said the deportations could begin within 30 days.

Texas weather 'strange' mixture

Freezing rain and snow covered much of the Texas Panhandle as a new weather system moved into the state today bringing a "very strange" combination of weather patterns, the National Weather Service says.

A system similar to the one that spawned Thursday's tornadoes in the Dallas area was expected to move into the state, possibly producing severe weather once again, said weather service spokesman Al Moller.

The approaching system includes a "very strong polar front" combined with an intense upper-air disturbance that was bringing warm moist air northward from Mexico.

"There is a strong threat of severe weather. We'll be watching it very very closely," he said.

Late Friday, temperatures in North Central Texas had warmed up ahead of the new system, despite rain and winds during much of the day, the result of a "very strange" weather system, Moller said.

State-set prices might end

AUSTIN (AP) — Both sides in the long distance phone call deregulation battle say they are pleased with a Public Utility Commission decision that could lead to an end of state-set prices for AT&T calls within Texas.

Tom Jones, an AT&T vice president for Texas, called the Friday ruling a "historic first step toward creating a truly competitive marketplace in which all customers can benefit."

AT&T claims growing competition in the long-distance business means the state should get out of regulating it. Of the 46 companies selling long distance service in Texas, only AT&T — by far the largest — is regulated by the PUC.

In a 3-0 vote, the commission decided Friday to hold hearings in 1985 to determine what parts of the industry could be deregulated.

"It may be we won't be deregulating anybody or anything for some time to come," PUC Chairman Phil Ricketts said, or "it may be sooner than we think."

Braniff cancels joint agreement

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) — A bankruptcy court ruling that bars Braniff Inc. from leasing its planes has cut Florida-based Northeastern International Airways' fleet nearly in half and forced it to discontinue service to five major airports.

On Friday, plane-thin Northeastern announced it was immediately suspending service to Los Angeles, San Diego, Las Vegas, Miami and New York's Kennedy airport.

U.S. Bankruptcy Court Judge Michael A. McConnell ordered Thursday in Fort Worth that Dallas-based Braniff could not provide aircraft to serve Northeastern routes because it violated Braniff's lease agreement with the planes' owners.

Braniff immediately recalled its planes to Dallas, which meant a loss of five Boeing 727-200s from Northeastern's total fleet of 12 planes.

Braniff on Friday asked for a stay of the ruling, maintaining that rentals are crucial to improving its ailing financial health. Braniff spokeswoman Barbara Potter said the airline wants the stay while it appeals the order.

Pentagon outlays wanted sliced

WASHINGTON (AP) — Concerned about planned cuts in domestic programs, members of Congress and state and local leaders are pressuring President Reagan to include the Pentagon in efforts to reduce the $200 billion federal deficit.

In a series of meetings Friday, administration officials were told that the military must "take its share" of the spending reductions being fashioned by the White House for the upcoming 1986 fiscal year.

The advice was offered as Reagan denied reports that work on the new budget plan had ground to a halt because of an internal dispute over how much money defense should get in the fiscal year starting Oct. 1.

Newly elected Senate Majority Leader Robert Dole of Kansas reiterated that the president's plans for a new round of budget cuts will face a chilly reception on Capitol Hill if military spending is left untouched.

"I must say it's going to have to be significant on the defense side before we sell the package" in Congress, Dole told reporters.

Discount urged for non-smokers

WASHINGTON (AP) — Non-smokers who keep their weight and blood pressure down could get as much as a 50 percent health insurance discount under a proposal endorsed by state insurance officials, a sponsor says.

William P. Daves Jr., a member of the Texas State Board of Insurance and sponsor of a resolution recommending the plan to the National Association of Insurance Commissioners, said "there's a very good possibility" discounts could reach 50 percent if the incentive for healthy lifestyles is adopted.

Under the proposal, people who are overweight, have uncontrolled high blood pressure and smoke would face a corresponding increase in their health insurance rates, he said, reflecting their increased risk of illness.

The plan is not unfair to smokers, Daves said. "The reverse is currently true," he said. "There is unfair discrimination against those people who choose those healthy lifestyles" but must pay through their insurance premiums for those who do not.

Daves' comments came Friday after the association adopted his resolution at the closing session of their week-long meeting here.

Prices of tortillas increased

MEXICO CITY (AP) — Higher prices for corn tortillas and white bread rolls, staple foods for millions of low-income Mexicans, took effect Friday in the continuing price spiral affecting basic commodities here.

The price for tortillas went up by 52 percent and bread rolls — known as "bolillos" — by 66 percent after the Commerce Department's announcement late Thursday of the change in the controlled price.

The latest increases come two months after the prices of rice, beans, eggs and cooking oil soared by 40 to 50 percent. All those staples had gone up at least once before during the year.

The government estimates that inflation for 1984 will fall between 55 and 60 percent, down from the official 80 percent rate last year. The Commerce Department controls the prices of about 300 basic goods.

"Everything has been going up, but the salaries stay the same," Estela Nigmo de Gomez, who works six days a week as a domestic employee, complained after hearing the announcement.

Feb. 21 as slated

Kelley's execution date set

WACO, Texas (AP) — Convicted murderer Carl Eugene Kelley will likely die Feb. 21 as scheduled because setting an execution date "is not an academic exercise anymore," his attorney says.

State District Judge George Allen set the execution date Friday for Kelley, who was convicted in June 1981 and sentenced to die for his role in an overnight robbery, abduction and murder spree in Waco.

"It used to be that if you could raise any one issue that wasn't absolutely frivolous, you could get a stay," John Barrett, Kelley's attorney, said Friday.

"The way things are going now, (setting an execution date) is not an academic exercise anymore. It is real," Barrett said.

He added that he'll pursue a stay anyway and that he plans to file a writ next week asking a review of the court's decision.

If that request is rejected, Barrett said he will take his case back to the Texas Court of Criminal Appeals. After that, he said he'll begin the federal appeals process.

The U.S. Supreme Court rejected arguments on Oct. 29 that Kelley was denied a fair trial when convicted in the Sept. 2, 1980, murder of Steven Pryor, who was abducted from a Waco convenience store, taken to Cameron Park and fatally shot.

The Texas Court of Criminal Appeals upheld Kelley's conviction on May 25.

Prosecutors said at the trial that Kelley and Thomas Graves kidnaped Pryor, 18, and David Wade Riley, a transient asleep in Pryor's car, from a 7-Eleven store and took them to Cameron Park, where they murdered them and threw their bodies over Lover's Leap.

Graves pleaded guilty to both killings, as well as the murder of Edward Traywick the day before at Traywick Drive-In at 1721 Trice. Graves was arrested near Hillsboro the next morning while in Pryor's blood-stained car.

Limestone dust on the floorboards led police to the park, where they found the bodies at the bottom of the cliff.

Kelley's billfold was found in the trunk of the car, and he was arrested later that morning in Waco. He confessed to his role in the homicides, saying he had shot Riley and that Graves shot Pryor. In his appeal, Kelley argued that the death penalty was unfair since he was not the one who actually shot Pryor.

But the appeals court said that under Texas law, an accomplice can be as guilty as the actual trigger-man.

Gorbachev to Britain

Visit might reveal Kremlin's thinking

LONDON (AP) — The arrival of Soviet Politburo member Mikhail S. Gorbachev today for a week-long visit to Britain may give Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher — and indirectly her Western allies — clues about current Soviet thinking on East-West relations.

Gorbachev, believed to be the second-ranking Soviet leader behind President Konstantin U. Chernenko, will hold talks with Mrs. Thatcher at her official weekend residence, Chequers, on Sunday.

The encounter with Gorbachev could give Mrs. Thatcher insight on Soviet attitudes to pass on to President Reagan when she meets him in Washington next weekend. Reagan's secretary of state, George P. Shultz, will meet Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei A. Gromyko on Jan. 7-8 to discuss new arms control efforts.

Mrs. Thatcher will meet Reagan on her way back from Peking, where she is to sign the Anglo-Chinese agreement returning Hong Kong to Chinese rule in 1997.

Gorbachev, 53, the youngest member of the Politburo is viewed as a possible successor to the 73-year-old Chernenko. His trip to Britain gives him the chance to argue the Kremlin's views, examine Western economic methods and lifestyles, and gain exposure in the West.

At home, Soviet leaders live protected lives, keeping their movements and even their family relations a careful secret. In the West, they face more public exposure. Gorbachev, for instance, took part in two hours of give-and-take with parliamentarians when he visited Canada in 1983.

British officials say they do not know if there will be similar sessions or a meeting with the press during this trip.

For the British government, Sunday's meeting with Mrs. Thatcher and talks Monday with Foreign Secretary Sir Geoffrey Howe will be the highlights of Gorbachev's trip, which also includes talks with top agriculture and foreign trade officials.

An aide close to Mrs. Thatcher, who spoke on condition he not be identified, said "the concentration is obviously going to be on East-West issues" when the prime minister confers with Gorbachev.

Another British official, who also commented on condition he not be identified, said Gorbachev's visit also offers Britain "an opportunity of showing ... how a Western democracy with a free or mixed-market economy operates."

Paul Harvey Weaning Time

It's weaning time for Americans. When we were weak and our government was fat it was right that government should nourish us. Which it did.

Now we are fat and our government is in debt. It's weaning time.

President Reagan was elected the first time to cut taxes, curtail inflation, end recession, which he did.

Now he is setting out to do what he was re-elected to do — cut government spending, reduce the federal deficit.

His final budget to be announced in mid-January will begin the tedious process of re-teaching Americans to stand on their own feet and to feed themselves.

Government-paid health care will be less. Ouch already!

Farm subsidies will be trimmed. And government pensions.

And veterans' benefits. And subsidies for development of synthetic fuels.

And each of those groups is represented by an "organization" or

BULL the modern day law was passed, and it was aimed at helping the small businessman who was losing dollars to the giant discount stores that were opening on Sundays.

The legislation now prohibits the sale on consecutive Saturdays and Sundays of some 42 various things. It has been described as the statute that says you "can buy things in bottles, but not an opener; paper plates, but not china; film, but no camera; wooden ladders, but not metal ones; a hammer, but no nails; cosmetics, but no mirror; a comic book, but not a teddy bear; food, but no kitchen utensils."

Court tests have proved the validity of the Blue Law, all the way up to the U.S. Supreme Court. It may be another case of the courts, attempting to protect civil rights, have a difficult time deciding what a "necessity" is on Sunday. Individuals have different answers for that question.

You may have read that some 250 Houston stores defied the Blue Law on the Thanksgiving weekend. It proved to be the biggest single buying weekend of the year.

Maybe all those Christians counted Thursday as the day of rest for that week.

an "association" which will scream bloody murder.

"Yes, I voted for budget cuts, but I didn't mean me!"

This president is counseled by such study groups as The Heritage Foundation and the Grace Commission.

The farflung financial empire of Peter Grace will feel the squeeze when his own commission's recommendations become effective — yet he is a grandfather also and feels so strongly that the alternative is national bankruptcy that Grace is spending his own money on a campaign to enlist 50 million voters to keep the heat on Congress.

Where else will waste be eliminated, fat be trimmed?

In education — energy — transportation — and housing aid.

In the 1986 budget the president must slash at least $40 billion dollar deficit in 1988; our fiscal situation is that near desperation. So we should do more, we dare not do less.

The president himself will have to bite the bullet. He will have to forgo some of the increase in military spending which he considers urgently important.

But until we tourniquet our national hemorrhage, we are in much more immediate danger from red ink than from red guns.

Catalog made-to-order for romantic people

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP)—“As I leaned toward the flickering candle, the black jet beads sparkled and the net veiling of my hat dipped over one eye. I caught Phillippe’s look of total approval.”

“Thank goodness,” I thought, “that women are wearing hats again!” Ashley D. Adams said.

The veiled hat is $80. The romance is free.

Harlequin romances meets mail-order business — that’s the latest venture of three Fort Worth entrepreneurs who envisioned a new way to market specialty items in a catalog.

Exotic locales and sales pitches, romances and refunds, adventures and advertisements — that’s the dichotomous world of Ashley D. Adams, a character created by Mary Elizabeth Ashley to appear, not between the sheets of a Gothic romance, but in the pages of a catalog.

The catalog company, Nostalgia Shoppe Inc., is a division of Haltom International. Its idea was generated by Haltom’s chief executive officer Ron Adams, businessman Bob Driscoll and the catalog’s president, Mary Elizabeth Ashley.

The Woman’s News wrote that “Ashley’s running commentary is high entertaining and only a little less camp than a Barbara Cartland novel.”

Ashley prefers sleeping on satin sheets — “ordinary sheets are so declassé,” she says — deploring practical things that look practical, and keeps her secret rendezvous key hidden in an elliptical opium box (priced at $70) that she discovered on a journey to India.

As the masked Ashley travels via her magic time machine through the pages of the catalog, her descriptive commentary is as imaginative as her romantic adventures.

“Under the scorching Indian sun, I imagine myself and Clark riding this horse-drawn carriage, with Gunga Din at the reins — frightfully unaware what awaits us,” she says, referring to a $45 brass copy of an antique Indian toy horse and carriage.

Next to a selection of earrings, Ashley declares: “Lobe and behold, I joked to William as he nibbled on my ear. To this day I’ll never know if it was me or my geometric earrings that inspired his attentions.”

A $25 Victorian-style whistle inspires Ashley to say, “It was a dark grey night and Byron was late. Clutching this silverplated Victorian whistle, engraved with scrolls and flowers, I felt safe. Not only could I summon for help, but I was comforted knowing that inside this authentic replica of the 1893 original was a secret compartment containing a lock of Byron’s hair. My friend Karensa uses her whistle as a key chain and for discreetly storing her smelling salts and cash.”

In another picture, wearing a $500 sequined gown, a flirtatious Ashley notes, “Some dresses are made for memorable nights. This one can create one.”

And, as Ashley would expect, the first catalog has been a smashing success, Mary Elizabeth Ashley said, adding, “It has been way over projections.”

“We did followup calls on more than 400 mail-order customers,” she said. “They said the story is so cute they saved it. People usually look at catalogs and then throw them away. Instead of being disposable, people were captured by the cover, read the story and were entertained by it. And that was our goal.”

Ashley also captured the attention of US magazine and CBS television, which plans to run a spot of the catalog and its character shortly before Christmas.

What Mary Elizabeth Ashley stresses is that it is a “Texas” catalog with at least half of the items offered by Texas artisans, including 22 from the Fort Worth-Dallas area.

“I have always thought that Fort Worth — and Texas in general — was rich, rich shopping ground,” she said. “A lot of people skip hometown. They think New York’s the place to go shopping, but it’s right here,” she said.

Silk flowers manufactured by an Arlington woman tempt Ashley to say, “Sipping mint juleps one spring afternoon, I pointed out the magnolia tree to Montgomery, saddened that my favorite flower comes and goes so quickly. The next afternoon, what did I find but three extraordinary, handmade silk matgnolias lying on my swing!”

Although not everything in the catalog is Texas-born — including a $22,900 authentic replica of a 1929 Mercedes SSK (what else would Ashley use to whisk from party to party?) — Mary Elizabeth Ashley wanted to ensure that it has a definite Texas taste, from a lunch box full of Gold Medal Pralines, to a red Christmas stocking filled with ashes and switches for bad little children, to haute couture designs, all created by Fort Worthians.

The Ashley D. Adams spring catalog is already in the works, as is a collection of letters and experiences that Mary Elizabeth Ashley plans to include in a future book: “How I Began in Mail Order and Got a Marriage Proposal.”

“This is a very public business,” she said, adding that the marriage proposal was real. It came from a mountain recluse who had seen her picture in the catalog and called long-distance from a phone booth to offer his hand in marriage.

So far, she has heard from the editor of Forbes magazine, who suggested that a leather portfolio would be marketed better with his magazine peeking out of the case rather than another’s. “Frederick and I share thoughts, jokes and secrets but not our supple leather portfolios!” Ashley says.

Some of Mary Elizabeth Ashley’s favorite stories come from people who send long letters along with their orders telling her about their gout, their cataract surgery and their varicose veins.

“People reveal so much by mail,” she said. “They’re just wonderful.”

Before joining Nostalgia Inc. Mary Elizabeth Ashley was a marketing consultant who, incidentally, owned a gold mine in Alaska with 20 people.

Looking for a way to sell raw gold direct from the mine, the group developed a “security pill” just as the price of gold soared.

It was a capsule — similar to a real one — that contained a piece of raw gold and was packaged in a little leather sack with a note explaining how to use it. The group advertised in the Wall Street Journal, and sat back and waited for the orders to come in, she said.

“You were supposed to put the security pill under your pillow and think secure thoughts,” she said. “Silly, huh? But it made money.”

This was six years ago. “Things don’t happen like that in the mail-order business anymore,” she said. “Now it is more scientific.”

After months of marketing research, Nostalgia Inc. set out to find just the right items with the criteria: “I had to want it, and it had to be animated,” she said.

“We had a raft of people — an army of little gnomes — going around Texas asking ‘Do you have some people with speciality items we can mass-produce and sell?’ We had so many responses, we were able to select special pieces.”

Among the best sellers since the catalog hit home mailboxes in August is the sequined dress — Dolly

Parton bought one, Mary Elizabeth Ashley said — a $13.50 set of frosted candle Christmas tree lights, and a $15 voodoo doll that comes complete with pins and suggested target areas (such as “beach-bulge” on the hips) as vulnerable bullseyes for those you love to hate.

“It’s fun to get even when you’ve got your very own Sweet Revenge Doll,” Ashley says with a chuckle. “Don’t y’all have someone in mind who’d just hate for you to own one... or more?”

Talk not cheap

Who was it that said, "Talk is cheap"?

Well, a lot of folks don't charge anything for advice, and that's probably what it's worth. However, if you go to an "expert", a consultant in a specialized field, you'll pay a hefty fee for the advice.

As taxpayers, you and I foot the bill for a lot of advice to people we've elected to do a job. Besides paying salaries for elected officials and bureaucrats, a big hunk of the state's budget went to about 16,000 private consulting firms last year for their expert opinions.

According to a report from the state comptroller's office last week, state agencies spent $59.7 million last year for professional advice from outside consultants. I shudder to think what our consultant bill is on the federal level!

In the state budget, more than 60 percent of the consulting fees went for engineering, medical and architectural services. Advice on education cost $3.2 million while outside legal help amounted to only $2.3 million.

In this complex society of ours, a lot of our tax money is used to make sure we don't violate someone's civil rights. That's where we've been hit the hardest on the local level—outside legal aid has increased tremendously the past two years.

The county, for instance, budgeted $60,000 for legal services in the 1984-85 year. Commissioners have already had to spend $85,000 in just two months for the fiscal year! The Hereford School District has also been hit hard for legal fees.

And, the majority of those legal fees have come as a result of the county and school defending suits filed by the Texas Rural Legal Aid. It's no wonder that local citizens started asking questions about the process and demanded an investigation of the TRLA office.

The Legal Services Corporation sent one of their attorneys to investigate the situation here, but his findings may not be reported for several months. Some local citizens feel that a "slap on the wrist" might be the most to expect from the LSC.

With that in mind and with Congress looking for ways to trim the budget, maybe taxpayers will urge their Congressmen to start the budget cutting by eliminating the Legal services Corporation.

The Last Word

This column is not really the last word. It carries that title in response to Doug Manning's weekly column, "The Penultimate Word," which means "next-to-the last."

If you'll notice in the columns below and to the right, there is an advertisement in the space normally used for Manning's column. We had several offers to purchase that space this week, and we just couldn't turn them down. Manning explained it in his column last week:

"I feel quite fortunate that I don't have to pay 'Old Skinflint' for the space in his paper. Speedy prints all the news that will fit around the ads. Somehow he makes room for me each Sunday. Fortunately he has not yet had to choose between my stuff and an ad. If the choice comes, old Penultimate will become gone."

Doug was right. The choice came and I had to choose between his stuff, which I publish free, or a paid advertisement. That's the reason readers will see an ad in the space reserved for The Penultimate Word.

We could probably get a premium rate for his space every week, but there are a few readers who like Doug's column. It will return next week...I think!

As the Years Turn

75 YEARS AGO

Thirty states are hit by the new United States criminal code which limits C.O.D. whiskey shipments.

E.E. Ramsey, who owns a well improved farm just west of town, while somewhat inclined to keep the "odds and evens" even on the boosting proposition, easily makes a record on the combination of milo maize and hogs.

As a result of feeding, he has recently brought to the market three porkers whose total weight dressed footed 1,290 pounds. These hogs were 19 months old.

50 YEARS AGO

Without a cloud in the skies, the sun was all but obliterated from view by a sandstorm yesterday that raged from shortly after 9 o'clock until late in the day. Coming from the west on the wings of a strong wind, the dirt-mostly New Mexico soil-filled every nook and cranny. This was the second sandstorm during the past week. Last Saturday the same thing happened. Skies were overcast all day long. So dark was the day in both instances that lights were necessary indoors.

Canyon High School's boy and girl basketball teams will be guests at the high school gymnasium Friday night for games with Hereford aggregations. New uniforms are expected to be worn by the Whitefaces when they take the court.

25 YEARS AGO

Except for a few finishing touches, the new Hereford Community Center should be completed this week, according to announcement issued by City Manager, Dudley Bayne. Finishing work on the $107,400 project will culminate a year-old dream of youth and adult residents of Deaf Smith County.

10 YEARS AGO

Associated with the better sales during the holiday season are the problems of shoplifting and hot check writing. Most store managers in a spot survey Friday, agreed they had experienced some of both.

Ten thousand hunters, it is estimated, took to the grain fields and lake bottoms in a three county area around Hereford Saturday morning to try their hand at one of the most challenging of game birds, pheasant. Deaf Smith, Parmer and Castro Counties were the focal point of hunters from as far away as Georgia and Tennessee.

1 YEAR AGO

Pat Ferguson of First Realty was named "Realtor of the Year" Thursday evening at the annual installation banquet of the Hereford Board of Realtors.

Harvesting of major crops in Deaf Smith County is complete, with sugar beets the only commodity not affected by the drought and early freeze.

U.S. Chamber Voice of Business

Less spending said solution

WASHINGTON - According to the authors of "Trivial Pursuit," eight-ninths of an iceberg are below water. Now, the one-ninth of the iceberg that appears above sea level can be quite impressive, but the business end of the iceberg—the part that rips open the hulls of ill-fated ships like the Titanic—is the bulk of the iceberg that lies below the sea.

I am reminded of the qualities of icebergs by the obsession on the part of many politicians with the federal deficit. How many times have we each heard politicians tell us that the federal deficit is the "most important issue of the day."

Poppycock. Let's remember here just what the deficit is. It is the difference between what the federal government spends and what it takes from us taxpayers. It is the portion of the federal budget paid for with borrowed money rather than with money taken directly from the taxpayers via the 1040 statement.

We are told to fear the deficit because it threatens to raise interest rates and choke off economic growth. How is this supposed to happen? Well, we are told, large deficits require the federal government to go into the credit markets and borrow money. This money borrowed by the federal government is no longer available for private borrowing needs.

Private borrowers looking for cash to invest in new plants and equipment or purchases of houses and cars find less credit available and bid up the price of credit, the interest rate. Higher interest rates will then slow down economic growth by raising the cost of capital and reducing the amount of investment businesses are willing to put into constructing new plants and the purchase of new equipment. Similarly, consumers who face these higher interest rates will borrow less and buy fewer cars and fewer houses. This reduces the demand for autos and homes and puts workers out of work.

Thus, to summarize: Big Deficits crowd out private borrowing. This raises the cost, or interest rate, for borrowing. This discourages investment by businesses and borrowing and consumption by consumers. This reduces output, jobs and leads to a recession.

This scenario is all well and good except that it starts from a false premise. The deficit doesn't crowd out private economic activity. Federal spending does. All the money used to pay for the federal government, whether borrowed or taken in taxes directly out of the pockets of the American people, is money denied the private productive economy. The deficit is simply the top of the iceberg. It is highly visible, but it is the entire iceberg that threatens shipping lanes just as it is the total amount of government spending that threatens to crowd out the private economy.

The focus of attention is important. If the politicians believe that the deficit is the 'real problem,' then they are likely to argue for higher taxes. If they understand that total government spending is the real culprit, then they will realize that tax increases simply replace the crowding out of borrowing with the crowding out and disincentive effects of taxation.

One hopes that Congress will then come to grips with the only known cure for too much spending: less spending.

Bootleg Philosopher

Editor's note: The Bootleg Philosopher on his Deaf Smith County grass farm finds a new problem in Washington this week.

Dear editor:

I hadn't thought about it before, but one of the problems facing the U.S. Treasury, in addition to being head over heels and a trillion or so in debt, is how to stay ahead of progress.

Inventors have just about perfected a copying machine that can copy a dollar bill so accurately you can't tell it from the real thing. You can see what the unscrupulous can do with that. They'll turn out dollar bills wholesale that are cashable and spendable but aren't worth anything, in comparison with the genuine dollar bill which is worth a full 49 cents.

After the crooks succeed with reproduced dollar bills you know they'll graduate to 10s, 20s, and 100s. That would of course take the country's only supply out of the hands of the Federal Reserve and cause widespread unemployment at the government's printing presses.

To head this off, Treasury officials are now trying to perfect currency that can't be copied, by using exotic shades of ink, invisible threads and such like. I suppose somebody in the copying machine business is waiting to get hold of one of the new bills to see if he can tinker his machine into thwarting threads and exotic ink.

This type of progress is a nuisance. People haven't got time to examine each dollar bill they get to see if it's genuine. Most people, following the leadership of the government, spend their money as fast as they get their hands on it.

Well, they don't follow the government's leadership altogether. The government, you know, spends it faster than it can get its hands on it. About 200 billion a year. Washington is now trying to decide whether it should spend less or grab faster.

Yours faithfully,
J.A.

Letters to the Editor

Dear editor,

I have lived in Hereford for the past seven years and have grown to love the town and its people. I notice each year at Christmas Hereford merchants plead with people to keep Hereford dollars here so they encourage people to shop with the Hereford merchants.

I firmly believe in shopping in Hereford because it is those merchants who are supportive of the community in every respect and they deserve our business. Recently, however, I called a local store to place an order. The employee who answered the phone replied, "We're busy right now, can you call back?"

On another occasion within the same week, I tried to redeem a coupon that was sent to me by mail. One clerk informed me that I could redeem the coupon when I picked up the layaway purchase. Later when I went to do just that, I was informed they could not accept the coupon. The stipulations reported to me by both the clerk and the assistant manager were not written anywhere on the coupon. Coupons should not be printed if the merchants can not or will not honor them.

Perhaps I am from the old school but I was taught that we must please our customers, and without the customer, we have no business. Most local merchants are helpful, cordial, and I am proud to shop in their stores; they will continue to receive my business. As for the others, I will not bother them by shopping in their stores.

Sincerely,
Jackie Hammett

Navajo leaders fighting big government

CANONCITO, N.M. (AP) — Canoncito Navajo leaders are clamoring for more autonomy, saying they can provide for their people better than the central government of the nation's largest Indian tribe.

It's a battle of history versus current needs; of big government versus the little guy with a new idea. And it threatens the framework of the tribal government.

"We can't be on our knees to the Navajo tribe all the time asking them to give us money," says George Platero, the Canoncito band's representative to the Navajo Tribal Council. "We want them to give us the authorization to use the federal money, to have it directed to us so we can do our own thing."

Tribal officials say the only legal way Canoncito can get such direct funding is to become a separate entity from the Navajo tribe, a move they likely would fight.

"The Navajo tribe is probably afraid that if they let us go, there would be others who would want to go, too," Canoncito President Tony Secatero said.

Canoncito is one of three "satellite chapters" of the Navajo tribe, separated by miles and mountain ranges from the main reservation. Navajo leaders say the other two chapters, Ramah and Alamo, have raised similar autonomy questions.

The dispute between the band of less than 1,700 at Canoncito and the central government peaked earlier this year over a plan to build a dog racing track at Canoncito.

The band's leaders wanted the track to take advantage of the proximity of Albuquerque, which is only about 30 miles away, and to provide jobs for residents.

But the Tribal Code forbids gambling and alcohol sales on reservation land and the tribal headquarters in Window Rock, Ariz., nixed the plans. Investors since have taken the $10 million plan to Santa Ana Pueblo, which wants to implement it despite state opposition.

The dog track fight raised the question of who owns Canoncito land and gave the band's leaders the impetus to push for more local control.

Both sides scurried to research documents that set aside the land as a reservation to determine who was right. The research so far has been inconclusive: Canoncitos say they have an ancient right to the land; tribal officials say government documents give Canoncito lands no separate status.

"All of these lands remain under the central administration of the Navajo government until our research determines otherwise," said John Chapela, counsel to Tribal Chairman Peterson Zah.

Chapela said the tribe's legal department is continuing the paper chase "to determine if there was in fact any intent (by Congress) to give Canoncito any independent status."

Secatero and Platero insist the land was given to the local band in 1877 through government allotments and the grants should override a 1949 law that set boundaries for the reservation. They have demanded that land that would revert to the Navajo Nation when a tribe member dies revert instead to Canoncito.

As important, however, is their desire to control funding and programs at Canoncito.

"The way it works now is that the Navajos request funds for Canoncito, but most of the funds are used for administrative costs in Window Rock," Secatero said.

Chapela denied that assertion, saying less than 15 percent of federal grants are used for administrative costs.

Either way, say Secatero and Platero, the money that trickles down to the Canoncito band isn't enough for the social and economic programs their people need.

"The Navajo tribe has to give it to us at their discretion," Platero said. "They use their discretion to throw us a penny."

The Canoncito leaders believe they could get more federal funds with less administrative cost if they could apply for grants themselves rather than through the tribal government.

"We have the capacity to administer the contracts and government programs," Secatero said. "We've trained our people to do that."

The training has come through the band's past successes in getting government funding and money from the private sector, he said.

Secatero said a school and clinic being built on the reservation, an alcoholism prevention program and other projects have been funded by money gathered from foundations and the state and federal government "without the assistance of the Navajo tribe."

The band has made those strides because of its unique local government set-up, he said.

Most of the 109 local chapters of the Navajo Nation govern by a town meeting system that sends resolutions to the central government. The actual decision-making and funding is handled by officials in Window Rock.

The Canoncitos have a 12-member tribal council that makes its decisions from the people's recommendations and officers, including Secatero, who implement the decisions and represent the band when making contracts with outside groups.

"We feel we are a very beneficial model for the Navajo Nation," Secatero said.

Chapela said the nation would welcome a model for changing local government structures, adding, "there's always room for improvement."

One of Zah's campaign platforms when he was elected was to place more control with local chapters. But Chapela said the method for the decentralization still has not been decided.

"The analysis of ways in which the central government can better provide services and be more accountable to the local chapters is continuing," he said. "Hopefully, in the future we'll be able to provide options to the chapters on tribal government and local government."

He said one possibility is the passage of a Navajo constitution that would establish central and local powers. He said the idea of a constitution has been argued in the tribe since 1934.

Another possibility for Canoncito would be to separate the band from the Navajo tribe. But Chapela said that might not be a smart move even if it became an available legal option.

"The primary question they would have to ask is would they be doing themselves a disservice by really obtaining an independent status when they would be competing for funds the way any other Indian reservation would be," he said. "Given the size of Canoncito — population-wise and land-wise — I think it would have to be a very close evaluation of whether they would benefit in any way."

Besides those problems, Secatero said, the Canoncitos feel they are a part of the Navajo tribe and would prefer to continue the ties.

"At this point in time, we have made no attempt at separation and have no plans to do so," he said. "We're trying to compromise to get more autonomy and direct funding to serve our people."

In one area, compromise is paying off. After several meetings, Navajo leaders have given their support to attempts to get a Bureau of Indian Affairs police program at Canoncito.

Currently, law enforcement for Canoncito operates out of Crown-point, nearly 150 miles away.

"When people are incarcerated, they take them all the way to Crownpoint in a cage," Secatero said. "Some of them never return. They just hang around up there. We want to work with the (nearby) Laguna Detention Center and work with the bureau police."

Secatero said the police negotiations are a step in the right direction and he is eager to push forward.

Future projects include getting more jobs for band members, solving the land dispute and possibly developing a recreational facility to attract tourist dollars.

He also wants to work with Albuquerque planning officials to make sure the city doesn't harm Canoncito land as it expands westward.

"We know what we want to do," he said. "We're certain of what we're after."

He was born in a small village - the child of a peasant woman. He never wrote a book, never had a hit record, never attended college, and never raised a family.

He never did any of the things that usually accompany greatness. His life took place some 19 centuries ago, and yet today, he is the ultimate example of love.

Hereford responds well Friday

San Francisco beats L.A., claims record

By ERIC PREWITT
AP Sports Writer

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Joe Montana completed eight straight passes, two of them for touchdowns, in an early hot streak which carried San Francisco to a 19-16 victory over the Los Angeles Rams Friday night and made the 49ers the first team in National Football League history to win 15 regular season games.

The 49ers, who ended their 15-1 season with a nine-game winning streak, had little offensive success after the first period, in which they built a 14-3 lead.

But the San Francisco defense held Eric Dickerson, the Rams' record-breaking running back, to only 98 yards. Dickerson, who finished the season with an NFL-record 2,105 yards, sat out most of the last quarter.

Los Angeles, 10-6, could have clinched a National Conference wildcard playoff berth by winning. Now they have to await the outcome of other weekend games to see if they'll qualify.

Barry Redden, playing in Dickerson's place, powered for big running yardage in a late Rams' drive which fizzled at the 49ers' 24-yard line. Mike Lansford kicked his third field goal of the night with 3:43 left in the game.

The Rams got the ball back with 1:49 remaining and quarterback Jeff Kemp was sacked by the 49ers' Gary Johnson in the end zone for a safety with 1:06 left.

Montana's touchdown passes, making his season total a career-high 28, went 47 yards to Freddie Solomon and one yard to tight end Earl Cooper.

The 49ers' Dwaine Board recovered a fumble by Dickerson at the Los Angeles 17-yard line late in the first period. A Montana TD pass to Wendell Tyler was nullified by a penalty, but Ray Wersching gave San Francisco a 17-3 lead by kicking a 38-yard field goal in the opening minute of the second quarter.

Dickerson was held to 19 yards on seven carries in the first quarter, but he had 95 by halftime and ran four yards in the second period for his 14th touchdown of the season.

Lansford, who kicked a 41-yard field goal in the first period, booted a 28-yarder on the final play of the first half, cutting the 49ers' lead to 17-13. Another field goal attempt, from 30 yards, was blocked by San Francisco lineman Lawrence Pillers in the second period.

In the scoreless third period, Dickerson carried the ball four times, was thrown for losses twice, and showed only one net yard gained. He gained four yards early in the final period to reach 100 for the game, but then lost two yards on his last carry of the night.

Last Sunday Dickerson broke the single-season rushing mark of 2,003 yards set by O.J. Simpson 11 years ago.

Hereford girls basketball coach Larry Sowers said Friday night's game against Caprock was one that the Whitefaces desperately needed to win.

Team members must have heard him.

The Whitefaces scored 26 points the first period to Caprock's 8 and went on to record their third District 3-5A victory, a 74-58 decision over the Longhorns in the CHS gym in Amarillo. The win improved Hereford's records to 3-1 in league play and 4-5 overall.

"We played really well in streaks," Sowers said. "I guess our starters played as well as they have all year, even though things got a little tight in the last quarter."

Caprock, which now has lost 21 consecutive district games, pulled to within 10 points in the fourth period. However, the hot-shooting Whitefaces never let the Longhorns closer.

For the night, the Herd connected on 30 of 57 field-goal attempts for a 52.6 percent mark.

"We were playing a lot of people in the last quarter, and the game shouldn't ever have gotten as close as it did," Sowers said. "I was pleased the way we played, but we're going to have some help from our bench."

"The Caprock kids played hard, too. They definitely have some shooters." The Longhorns, now 2-10 and 0-5, were nearly as hot as the Whitefaces. From the field, Caprock hit 18 of 35 shots for 51.4 percent.

Stacie High led Hereford shooters with 26 points, including 10 of 12 free throws. Sowers said High played one of her best games this season.

"Stacie got in a little foul trouble again," he said, "but this has to be one of her better games. Natalie (Sims) also played another good game. She's really been playing well."

Friday night, Sims was 10 of 13 from the field to finish with 20 points. Sims is shooting close to 55 percent from the floor for the season.

Darla Alford had 12 points for Hereford, another good showing according to Sowers. Lori Niblet, making her first start in several games, finished with 6 points and 13 rebounds.

Shelly Edwards scored 6.

The Whitefaces now are to play Amarillo Monday at 6 p.m. in the HHS gym. Amarillo, 9-3 and 3-2, was a 68-49 winner over Lubbock Friday.

In the Hereford-Caprock junior varsity game, Caprock won 48-36. Emma Gonzales led the Whitefaces with 8 points.

Hereford boys defeated

Turning the ball over three times in the last 45 seconds, the Hereford Whitefaces allowed Caprock to slip away with a 61-60 District 3-5A win game and the other two while the Whitefaces were behind. A disap-

One of the costly turnovers came while Hereford was leading the ball (See BASKETBALL, Page 9A)

On the Ball

By DENNIS BALL

For the teams' purposes, the floor at the high school gym makes that facility better than La Plata's.

For the fans' wishes, the appearance and comfort of the La Plata gym makes it better.

Contentions like these have surfaced and recently been heightened by supporters of both arguments when they talk of Hereford High School basketball.

Wayne Thomas, a local attorney present at Lions Club a few weeks ago, drilled Hereford girls basketball coach Larry Sowers with questions concerning the location of games.

"Don't you think that the fans need to feel welcome at your games?" Thomas asked. "You'd probably have a lot more fans at games if you played at La Plata (where HHS played until the 1982-83 season) instead of the high school."

Fans don't like having to watch games in the small gym at high school. Seating is not comfortable and little space is provided for fans to walk back and forth between the bleachers and court.

Sowers admitted that La Plata might be nicer for fans, but moving back would create problems for the team — such problems as having to play on a floor with dead spots and having "to live out of a suitcase."

Four dressing rooms at La Plata — two for girls and two for boys — should allow the teams to set up shop there. However, a lot of transportation problems must be figured in.

If high school players travel to La Plata to practice every day, they naturally would want to play there. If that scenario were to take place, the junior high players would have to travel to high school for the same purposes. And most junior high students don't have a license.

Sowers and boys coach Mike Fields must feel caught between a rock and a hard place. Sure it would be great to have a new place to play, but not at the expense of players.

There also has been talk of building a new gym. But so far, it's a lot of talk and not much action.

According to Deaf Smith County Clerk David Ruland, Hereford citizens overwhelmingly were against a proposed bond election a few years ago that would provide funds to build a new facility.

A Hereford Independent School District Board committee currently is investigating the possibility of proposing another bond election to the public, said Harrell Holder, superintendent.

Cowboys relax

Playoff hopes still alive

DALLAS (AP) — The Dallas Cowboys breathed a sigh of relief Friday night as the San Francisco 49ers pushed back the Los Angeles Rams, keeping the Cowboys' playoff chances alive.

"This means we have life again," said Dallas running back Ron Springs. "We're ready to roll. Our destiny is now in our own hands."

About 20 members of the Cowboys team gathered at Springs' home Friday night in Dallas to watch the Rams-49ers game with San Francisco taking a 19-16 win.

Springs said a Rams' victory would have killed the Cowboys' hopes for a wild card berth.

"It would have meant the end of the world for us," he said.

The Cowboys meet the Miami Dolphins Monday in Miami. A win over the Dolphins would give the Cowboys a last-ditch chance for the playoffs.

Springs said this week's practice sessions were "like a funeral" after last week's 30-28 loss to the Washington Redskins.

"I've never been in this position before," said Springs, a six-year veteran of the team.

The Cowboys have made the playoffs 17 of the last 18 seasons under Coach Tom Landry's leadership.

DOESN'T WANT NBA
LOS ANGELES (AP) — Cheryl Miller, the star of the Southern California women's basketball team and the leader of the United States feminine gold medalists in the Olympics, has no desire to try out for a National Basketball Association squad.

"I have played some exhibition games against men," she said, "and there is no way women can compete with them. They are too strong physically."

In Houston finale

Younger players to see action

By MICHAEL A. LUTZ AP Sports Writer

HOUSTON (AP) — The Houston Oilers, 3-12, and Cleveland Browns, 4-11, go into their final National Football League game in the Astrodome Sunday with little more to play for than pecking order in the National Football League draft and a good start on next season.

Houston Coach Hugh Campbell and Cleveland's Marty Schottenheimer will try more for victory than a chance to look at young players.

"I think we'll really point to this game to try to go out and see what level we can end the season at," Campbell said. "Hopefully, it will be at our highest level of the year. That's would be important."

The Oilers lost their first 10 games of the season but rallied for three victories in the past five weeks.

The Browns have been victims of close losses all season, including three defeats that came on the final play of the game. Last week's 23-20 loss to Pittsburgh came on the next to last play of the game.

"I've always contended that there's nothing much to be gained by losing and when you are 4-11, I would be less than honest if I didn't say that a win would enable me to have good taste in my mouth," Schottenheimer said.

"Our objective to win every game we play. When that's over, we'll decide what we need to do about next season. Right now we're interested in winning a football game."

The Oilers have already taken long looks at their youthful team, Campbell said.

"We wanted to get the younger people playing time and we feel we've done a pretty good job of that this year," Campbell said.

"We would hate to end this season and not have a strong opinion as to the future of any player. We think we've gotten that done."

Cleveland tight end Ozzie Newsome, named earlier this week to the Pro Bowl for the second time in his seven-year career, needs 85 yards receiving against the Oilers to become the Browns all-time leader.

Newsome caught 10 passes for 102 yards in an earlier 27-10 victory over the Oilers.

Oiler running back Larry Moriarty has had 100-yard performances in three of his last four games. He gained only 81 yards in the Oilers' last meeting with the Browns when he was forced out of the game in the fourth quarter with a pinched nerve in his neck.

Kickoff is at noon CST.

On Connors, McEnroe

Tennis players' opinions differ

By STEPHAN NASSTROM AP Sports Writer

GOTEBORG, Sweden (AP) — Arthur Ashe usually wants John McEnroe to play the first match against the No. 1 player on the other team, and for McEnroe to be drawn for the fifth match in case the decision comes down to the final match.

"But we've got two horses here now, so the draw doesn't really matter," says Ashe, the U.S. Davis Cup team captain.

The draw was held today, and the best-of-five match final opens Sunday with the first two singles matches on a clay-court in the 12,300-seat Scandinavium Arena.

Unlike Ashe, Peter Fleming, who's undefeated in Davis Cup doubles play with McEnroe, has an opinion on which match he wants on first. Fleming said he would like to see Jimmy Connors play Swedish No. 2 Henrik Sundstrom in the first match.

"That sounds interesting," said

Ashe. "We have our best chances against Sundstrom."

Sweden's top player, Mats Wilander, is match-tough after defending his Australian Open title on grass last week. Ranked fourth in the world behind McEnroe, Czechoslovakia's Ivan Lendl and Connors, Wilander has evenly split his six career matches against McEnroe and enjoys a 2-0 edge over Connors.

"Wilander is going to be difficult for both (McEnroe and Connors)," said Ashe. "Wilander being so match-tough is a major concern."

"John has been out for six weeks and Jimmy has not played any tournaments for five weeks."

McEnroe, the reigning Wimbledon and U.S. Open champion, was suspended three weeks after pushing his fines this year past the $7,500 limit in a stormy semifinal Nov. 4 over Swedish doubles star Anders Jarryd in the Stockholm Open.

Boston player uses head in win

By The Associated Press

A play by Kevin McHale that literally could have been termed "heads up" helped the Boston Celtics hold onto their perfect home record and left Utah Jazz Coach Frank Layden shaking his head.

McHale led all scorers with 25 points as Boston defeated the Jazz 117-105 Friday night in the National Basketball Association. But it was his fluke basket to give Boston a 98-82 lead in the fourth period that really set the tone, as far as Layden was concerned.

"When a ball goes up in the air, hits a Celtic on the head and goes into the basket, you know you're in trouble," Layden said.

Actually, the Celtics had pulled away from Utah before McHale's "header" went into the basket. With five minutes gone in the second half, Utah had battled into a 69-69 tie. At that point, Larry Bird's 20-foot jumper triggered a skein of 17 straight Boston points.

In addition to his 25 points, McHale had 16 rebounds, and Bird added 22 points. Darrell Griffith and Adrian Dantley had 24 points apiece for Utah.

Boston, 20-3, leads the Atlantic Division by two games over the Philadelphia 76ers, who beat the Milwaukee Bucks 115-111.

76ers 115, Bucks 111

While the Celtics were building upon their homecourt fortunes, the Bucks saw their winning streak at home end after 10 games. Julius Erving scored a season-high 32 points to lead Philadelphia, which outscored Milwaukee 10-2 late in the fourth period to take control.

Milwaukee cut the lead to 106-104 on Terry Cummings' layup with 1:37 left, but the 76ers scored the game's next five points from the free-throw line to thwart the rally.

Cummings also had a season-high point total, scoring 37.

Pistons 120, Pacers 96

Detroit went on a 22-6 tear in the first quarter, led by Bill Laimbeer, to put away the Pacers early as the Pistons won their fourth straight. Laimbeer scored 14 of his 26 points in the opening quarter and that early lead, coupled with Indiana's 33 percent shooting from the field, enabled Detroit to take a 34-16 lead into the second quarter.

"Once I started hitting, I kept looking for them and kept shooting until I started missing," Laimbeer said.

Detroit led 87-43 going into the final period. Isiah Thomas had nine points and five assists in the third period for the Pistons.

Granville Waiters led Indiana with 14 points.

Nets 111, Bulls 109

Otis Birdsong's layup with 49 seconds left snapped a 107-107 tie, and the Nets held on to beat Chicago, which lost for the third straight time. Birdsong finished with 24 points, and New Jersey got 18 apiece from Buck Williams and Michael Ray Richardson.

Michael Jordan missed a jumper with 30 seconds left, and teammates Orlando Woolridge and David Greenwood missed on follow-ups before Birdsong came away with the ball. Jeff Turner hit a 15-footer with 11 seconds left to lock it up.

Jordan led all scorers with 32 points.

Mavericks 119, Spurs 102

Dallas held San Antonio to three field goals in a 12-minute span of the third quarter, and the Mavericks led 95-71 going into the fourth quarter of an easy victory over the Spurs. Rolando Blackman led the Mavericks with 27 points, and George Gervin scored 17 for the Spurs, all in the first half.

San Antonio has lost 10 of its 12 road games. The 119 points was the most scored by Dallas this season.

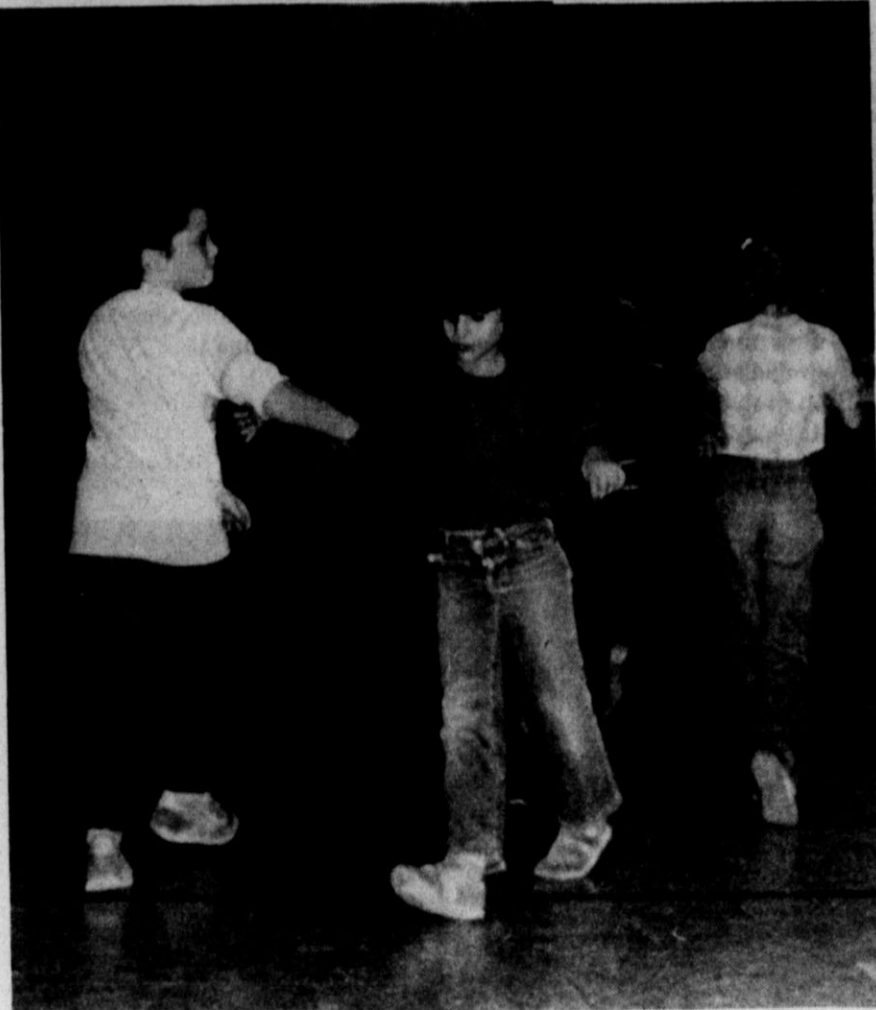

Kings 123, Nuggets 117

Reggie Theus hit four free throws to give Kansas City a 110-104 lead with 5:47 left, and the Kings held on to send Denver to its first home loss of the season. Forward Eddie Johnson scored 32 points to lead Kansas City.

The Nuggets pulled within 119-117, but Don Buse hit a pair of free throws with 22 seconds to play, putting the game out of reach.

The Nuggets led by as many as 11 points in the first half, but Kansas City pulled within 63-58 at halftime and outscored Denver 22-5 to lead 82-72 with 5:25 to play in the third period.

New Year's not same again pointed Hereford coach Mike Fields said opportunities presented themselves, but that the Whitefaces couldn't take advantage.

"We still need to be doing things near the end of the game in order to win," he said. "We didn't play well, and we probably should have won."

However, Fields was pleased with the play of 6-2 senior Kevin Redus. The Hereford coach called Friday's game one of the best for Redus, who scored 22 points and picked off 10 rebounds.

In addition, Redus was eight of 10 from the line.

"Kevin played one of his better games this season," he said. "We just didn't give him much help."

Redus topped all Hereford scorers. Bobby Baker had 18 for the night, Rodney Torres 10, Mike Scott 5, and Sammy, Suarez and Blair Rogers each scored 2.

"Our press didn't help us at all tonight," Fields added. "Caprock beat it a lot better than anybody has done all year. And why that is, I don't know."

A bright spot for the Whitefaces was their free-throw shooting. In addition to Redus' eight-of-10 effort, other team members combined to finish the night at 23 of 31 from the line, a 74.2 percent mark.

Friday's performance must have Fields a little concerned about Monday's game with Amarillo (7:45 p.m. in the HHS gym).

"We'll have to play by far our best game of the year against Amarillo," he said. "I hope we can stay with them."

Amarillo, 9-3 and 2-1, was a 56-44 winner over Lubbock Friday.

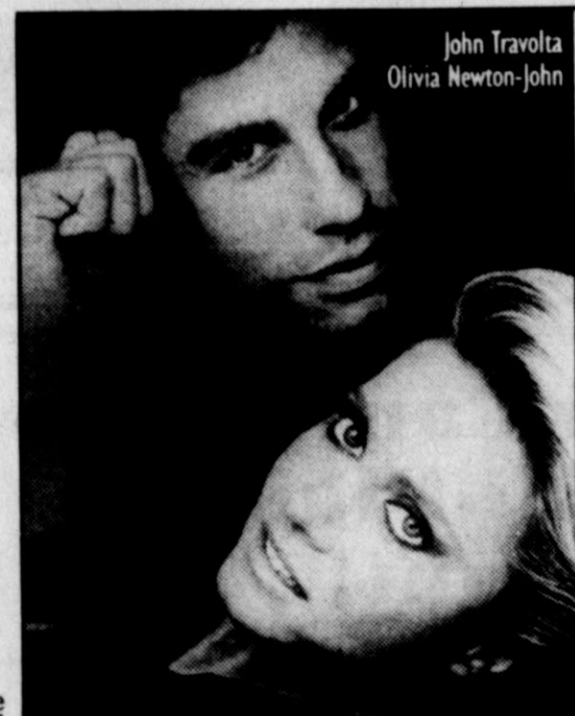

Caprock won the boys junior varsity game from Hereford Friday, 72-43. Kyle Streun scored 10 points to lead Hereford.

The only fighter ever to win the heavyweight championship on a foul was Germany's Max Schmeling, who defeated Jack Sharkey of the United States in 1930.

New Year's Eve will never be the same again in Hereford since the coming of the Cowboy Country Club! Country music star Gene Watson will headline the dance on New Year's Eve, while the evening starts with 50 of the top bull riders in the country competing for prize money exceeding $6,000 in the one-head contest.

The bull riding contest begins at 5 p.m. on Dec. 31. Watson, who first hit the big time in 1974 with his recording of "Love in the Hot Afternoon" will do two shows at 9 and 11 p.m. His latest hit is "Got No Reason for Goin' Home." Pake McEntire will also appear with his band, "The Limestone Gap."

The Meadowlands racetrack in East Rutherford, N.J., handed $4,148,063 in betting on July 20, 1984, a world record for a harness track.

"It would take a bond election to get the funds for a new gym," he said. "We need to see if people are willing to build a new $2.5 million facility or if they want a little gym at La Plata that would cost less."

Holder said people probably would vote for a small gym, if they approved the construction of a new facility at all. The board is to meet Tuesday.

Ruland and La Plata Assistant Principal Dempsey Alexander don't believe citizens would approve construction of a new gym.

But even the building of a little gym at La Plata doesn't solve the problem of the floor. What alternatives are there that haven't been mentioned?

Seating could be replaced at high school. And that definitely would be a step in the right direction. Girls assistant coach Cindy McMillin suffered a broken bone in her wrist attempting to pull out the bleachers not long ago. It's almost too late for this year, but it could be done for future years.

Between 750 and 800 fans were present for the ball game Tuesday between Plainview and Hereford. Some school officials have said Tuesday's crowd was larger than crowds were at La Plata in year's past.

If we truly want another gym, we've got to show HISD that we do. Would you be willing to pass a bond election?

Just moving back to La Plata is not going to solve the problems.

Sutcliffe loaded down in Chicago

By JAMES LITKE

AP Sports Writer

CHICAGO (AP) — Less impressed by cold cash than the thought of a warm holiday, Rick Sutcliffe literally backed an armored truck up to the gates of Wrigley Field and allowed the Chicago Cubs make him baseball's wealthiest pitcher.

The 6-foot-7, red-bearded right-hander on Friday ended weeks of speculation and courtship by four clubs, insisting loyalty and an unsettled score convinced him to return to Chicago.

The bottom line was $9.5 million for five years, but Atlanta, Kansas City and San Diego, Sutcliffe said, were all throwing around figures that were "basically the same."

"I don't know if it was loyalty or what, but something happened here the last three months of the baseball season," Sutcliffe said. "They took a person who was spinning his wheels and the fans, the organization and especially the players behind me turned it around."

After reviving Chicago's baseball fortunes by leading the Cubs' first post-season run since 1945, Sutcliffe and the National League East Division champions came up one game short of the World Series when the Padres climbed out of an 0-2 hole to win the NL playoffs.

"I wanted the opportunity to play for the best club I could play for," he said, "and winning it all would be even more special if we do it here."

Despite his continuing good fortune, baseball's newest millionaire appeared just as uneasy at the news conference called to announce the signing as he had weeks earlier, when he was honored as the National League's Cy Young winner.

that "people in the league don't like the Cowboys."

Dallas had only three players selected to the National Football Conference team, and no starters.

"It's quite obvious to me that people in the league don't like the Cowboys," said running back Tony Dorsett. "The voting this year was amazing. It really makes you think about it."

Safety Michael Downs felt a sense of outrage when he learned that despite six interceptions and a team-leading 93 solo tackles, he had not been selected to the team.

He said he was surprised that San Francisco's Carlton Williamson, a cornerback most of the season, made the team as a safety. The 49ers' Ronnie Lott, injured for four games, and Dwight Hicks were selected at cornerback, even though both have played safety this year.

The three 49ers were selected despite the team's ranking 17th in pass defense in the league.

"How can they select those guys?" Downs said. "If I didn't make it this year, how will I ever make it? I had all the statistics. I had the interceptions, I had the quarterback traps (3½), and I led the team in tackles."

Players on all 28 NFL teams submitted their ballots Monday. "I feel some anger because they should have been more responsible with the way they voted," Downs said. "Some of the guys who made the team didn't even play most of the year. How fair is that?"

Doug Cosbie, Randy White and Bill Bates were the only Cowboys selected to the team — the fewest number since 1975.

"I know why our guys aren't going to the Pro Bowl," fullback Ron Springs said. "Because the other teams are stuffing the ballot boxes against us. They don't like us because they think we get too much publicity. It's got to be something like that."

Although spear-throwing was known to primitive man, the javelin throw was not introduced to Olympic competition until the 1908 Games in London.

In Philadelphia, Mayor says

Chances improving for Eagles to remain

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — After a day of intense negotiations and the filing of a lawsuit by the National Football League, Mayor W. Wilson Goode said the odds of keeping the Eagles in Philadelphia had improved to "70-30."

But a source close to the team said Friday that owner Leonard Tose already has signed an agreement — although not a contract — to sell 25 percent of the team and has received part of the $30 million a Canadian businessman has offered for that minority interest.

The source said the deal with James Monaghan would require the Eagles to move to Phoenix, but Monaghan on Friday denied that the agreement stipulated a move.

Since reports of a possible Eagles move surfaced earlier this week, Tose, who reportedly is $40 million in debt, repeatedly has denied he had signed any agreement with Monaghan.

After emerging from a three-hour meeting with Tose on Friday night, Goode said he was "convinced that Mr. Tose is trying to work to find a way to keep the team in the city."

"I think there is absolutely no certainty that that will happen, but I think the odds indeed have increased because of his expressed desire to do so," Goode said.

The mayor said negotiations, which have dominated the time of city and team officials for the past three days, would continue today.

The NFL on Friday joined the city's fight to keep the Eagles in Philadelphia by filing a damage suit in U.S. District Court. The suit charges Tose with acting in "bad faith," and asks the court to prevent the Eagles from leaving Philadelphia without league permission.

The suit also seeks unspecified damages and a declaratory judgment from the court, saying that if the NFL forces the Eagles to comply with league regulations about moving a franchise, the league will not be violating any antitrust law.

"This action arises out of a threatened violation by the Eagles and Tose of expressed contractual obligations, and related implied obligations, owed by the defendants to the league to maintain the league member club in Philadelphia," the suit says.

In the suit, the NFL said it believed that the defendants, "after secret negotiations unknown to the league, are planning in the near future to move the Eagles to Phoenix, Ariz."

The league said it believes that the Eagles probably would not ask the league's permission to move, adding that if permission was sought, the move would be denied.

At NFL headquarters in New York, a league spokesman issued a statement which said, in part, that the suit seeks to stem a wave of possible club moves in the future. "What began as a trickle in the wake of the Raiders' case in California now threatens to become a flood if the Eagles leave the country's fourth-largest market," the statement said.

The league also has called an owners' meeting for next Tuesday to discuss what could be the third franchise shift in four years.

Cotton harvest only 25 percent complete

COLLEGE STATION, Texas (AP) — The first hard freeze of the season temporarily delayed harvesting and field operations in some areas, but did not harm the South Texas vegetable crop, says Dr. Zerle L. Carpenter, director of the Texas Agricultural Extension Service.

Carpenter noted in his weekly report on the state's agriculture that temperatures late last week dropped to the mid-30s in the Rio Grande Valley, but did not harm vegetables. The harvest continues for peppers, tomatoes, cabbage and lettuce, and the onion crop also is making good progress, he said.

In the South Plains, several counties have harvested about 70 percent of their cotton, while a number of others north of Lubbock are approaching the halfway mark in cotton harvesting. In counties south of Lubbock, the harvest ranges from 20 to 25 percent complete, Carpenter added. That harvest was delayed somewhat by cold weather, but light snow that accompanied it boosted moisture, he said.

Cotton harvesting is 20 to 30 percent complete in the Panhandle, and other cotton remains to be harvested in the Rolling Plains, West Central and Far West Texas, where field activity was halted by the wet weather.

The wheat crop is making good progress where moisture is adequate. Wheat pastures are generally providing good grazing in the Panhandle, where range grass is short and some supplemental feeding is occurring under range conditions.

In the Rolling Plains, germination and emergence of newly-sown wheat is being hampered by cold temperatures. Newly-arrived stocker cattle are reported with heavy health problems in Archer County. Some wheat fields cannot be grazed in Baylor County due to lack of stock water, Carpenter said.

Supplemental feeding of livestock is under way in many areas following the heavy frost and freezes. In Southwest Texas, some ranchers are again burning prickly pear cactus to provide nutrition for cattle, while others are feeding hay and range meal mixes. The hay crop is generally short in most areas of the state, with some peanut hay being baled as the peanut harvest nears completion.

Through the state, the pecan crop also is winding down with yields lighter than usual, particularly on native pecans.

Reports from district Extension directors showed these conditions:

PANHANDLE: Some light snow early in the week added to the moisture supply, which ranges from adequate to short. Wheat continues to make good progress and the cotton harvest is 20-30 percent complete. Land preparation continues active for the next spring's crops. Some range cattle are receiving supplemental feed since range grass is short.

SOUTH PLAINS: Additional moisture slowed the cotton harvest this week. Counties north of Lubbock are approaching the halfway mark in cotton harvesting, with 2 or 3 counties 70 percent through the harvest. South of Lubbock, cotton is from 10 to 25 percent harvested. Sugar beets are 85 percent harvested, and corn, soybean and grain harvests are complete. Wheat pastures are providing good grazing and stocker cattle are making excellent progress.

ROLLING PLAINS: Wheat continues to make good progress where moisture is adequate. Germination and emergence of newly-sown wheat is being hampered by cold temperatures. Native range grasses are generally short and supplemental feeding is under way for livestock, particularly in central counties of the district.

NORTH CENTRAL: Pastures are improving with recent rains, although cattle continue to be marketed despite poor prices. Supplemental feeding of livestock also has begun. Peanut harvesting was delayed by the rain, and cotton waiting to be harvested was hurt by the rain. Fields of wheat and oats are making good progress, and some hay is still being baled.

NORTHEAST: The pecan harvest is nearing an end with both quality and quantity somewhat short, although prices remain good. Wheat is providing good grazing and clovers are progressing. Livestock feeding is being stepped up. Some frosted hay is being cut due to short supplies. Vegetable crops are progressing and the sweet potato market is good.

FAR WEST: Hudspeth County recorded its first two inches of snow for the season this past week, while other parts of the district received heavy frosts. The green pepper harvest is at the halfway mark, but the cotton harvest was slowed by the wet weather. Some green cotton bolls were cracked as a result of this week's frost. Ranges and livestock are in excellent condition.

WEST CENTRAL: Cold temperatures, rain, sleet and snow combined to halt most agricultural activities earlier in the week. Pasture growth has just about stopped, and while good grazing is available for sheep and goats there is only limited grazing for cattle. Some cotton harvesting continues with low yields reported. About 90 percent of the wheat crop is up, but some greenbug activity is reported. The pecan crop is short and quality below average in most of the district.

CENTRAL: Additional moisture will boost small grain growth, and many fields are being grazed. Some producers are topdressing small grain crops with nitrogen somewhat earlier than normal. The pecan harvest is at the halfway mark. Cattle continue to move to market due to short pastures and minimal hay supplies.

EAST: A hard freeze throughout the district has made permanent pastures go dormant. Winter pastures are improving after recent rains and warmer daytime temperatures. Culling of livestock continues as owners begin hay feeding programs. Most pecans have been harvested. Some onions and greens are being planted by home gardeners. Soybean yields are good.

SOUTH CENTRAL: Wet weather halted field work temporarily, as the first hard freeze of the season arrived. Wheat generally looks good, although some greenbugs are causing problems. Oat fields also are progressing. The peanut harvest was delayed by rain. Fair yields of pecans are reported as the season nears completion. Pastures are providing little grazing so supplemental feeding of livestock is continuing.

UPPER COAST: Large sales of Christmas trees continue in Orange County, and wholesale trees are being shipped throughout the state. Soybean quality is poor as the harvest continues. The hard freeze and heavy frost of the past week have caused native pastures to go dormant, but wheat pastures are improving following nitrogen fertilizer application and rain.

SOUTHWEST: Two killing frosts stopped grass growth this past week and ranges are turning brown. Although livestock are in fair to good condition, some ranchers are starting to burn prickly pear cactus to provide supplemental nutrition, while others are feeding hay and range meal mixes. Above average livestock market activity continues. Small grain fields are progressing where moisture is adequate. Wool and mohair markets are active. Harvesting of peanuts, cabbage, carrots, broccoli, greens and spinach are in full swing. Many hunters are spending time at deer leases.

COASTAL BEND: Wheat and oat crops are progressing following recent rains. Hay supplies are short, with the final cutting about completed. Ranges and pastures have declined since recent heavy frosts. Most livestock are in fair to good condition. The pecan crop is 85 percent harvested.

SOUTH: Moisture ranges from adequate to short, with the area west of Highway 281 the shortest. Ranges and pastures are providing fair to good grazing, and most livestock are in good to fair condition. Recent temperatures in the mid-30s did not harm vegetables, and the harvest continues on peppers, tomatoes, cabbage and lettuce. Onions are making good progress. The sugarcane harvest is progressing satisfactorily. Reconditioning continues for many citrus groves.

Windbreak Seedling Program set here

The Colorado and Texas State Forest Services will provide the seedling trees to be offered again this year by the Tierra Blanca Soil and Water Conservation District.

Applications are being accepted until March 1, 1985 for participation in the Windbreak Seedling Program, with the trees to be delivered in mid to late March.

"The trees are grown in Colorado Springs and Lubbock, so they will be well adapted to the harsh climate of this area," said Jaime Neepser of the Soil Conservation Service in Hereford.

The trees cost $40 per 100 for barerooted varieties, which include evergreens, hard woods and shrubs. An order of 30 potted evergreens also costs $40. Payment is due when application is made.

Varieties available include Austrian, Ponderosa, Scotch, Pinon and Afghanistan pines, Colorado blue spruce, Rocky Mountain Juniper, Easter red cedar, ash, poplar, Russian olive, honeylocust, hackleberry, Chinese Elm, sumac, sand cherry, lilac and honeysuckle.

The local SCS office has pictures and samples of the available trees to aid customer selection, and will assist with planting and caring for the seedlings once they arrive. A windbreak tree seminar is planned for February.

The purpose of the windbreak program, according to the SCS, is to give High Plains residents an opportunity to purchase high quality, well-adapted trees to use for windbreak protection around the home, farmstead, feedlots, and for cattle and wildlife protection.

To order or for more information, call them at 364-0533 or go by the office at 315 West Third. The hours are 7 a.m. until 4:30 p.m., Monday through Friday.

Corn bound for Russia switched to other buyers

WASHINGTON (AP) — Half a million metric tons of U.S. corn, initially destined for the Soviet Union, have been switched this week by private exporters to other buyers, says the Agriculture Department.

A routine sales announcement said Wednesday that 250,000 metric tons of corn — nearly 10 million bushels — had been changed from the Soviet Union to "unknown destinations."

It was the second day in a row that a significant amount of corn was switched. The department on Tuesday said that 250,000 tons of corn had been changed from the Soviet Union to unknown destinations.

Sales are reported to USDA by private trading companies, whose identities are kept confidential, along with prices and other details. The grain initially had been reported as sold to the Soviets for delivery during the 1984-85 year that began on Oct. 1, the second year of a long-term agreement which requires the Soviet Union to buy a minimum quantity of U.S. wheat and corn each year.

Last month, Soviet representatives met here to discuss the grain supply agreement, a routine "consultation" specified by the pact.

At that time, USDA officials later confirmed, the Soviets raised questions about the quality of some of the American grain, including complaints of insect infestation. Efforts are being made to work out the problem, they said.

Wallace A. Lindell, a spokesman for the department's Foreign Agricultural Service, noted that the Soviets had complained about the quality of some U.S. grain. However, Lindell said he did not know whether those complaints were connected to the juggling in grain orders.

Counting adjustments for the recent shift of corn orders, the Soviets have bought about 11.1 million tons of grain for delivery in 1984-85, including 3.33 million tons of wheat and 7.76 million tons of corn.

A metric ton is about 2,205 pounds and is equal to 39.4 bushels of corn or 36.7 bushels of wheat.

In 1983-84, the first year of the current agreement, the Soviet Union took 14.1 million tons, including about 7.6 million tons of wheat and 6.48 million tons of corn. Also, 416,200 tons of soybeans.

The agreement requires the Soviets to buy a minimum of nine million tons of wheat and corn each year — up to 12 million tons. If more than 12 million tons are wanted, the United States must be consulted.

In September, after a spurge of buying, the Soviets were told they could buy an additional 10 million tons of grain in 1984-85, making a total of 22 million tons that is available.

Selecting top quality beef takes more than sharp eye

COLLEGE STATION — Selecting top quality, high performing beef cattle takes more than a sharp eye.

While a cattleman with a trained eye can select cattle for structural soundness, muscling, height and length, the bottom line for measuring an animal's ability to grow is performance and progeny testing, said Dr. L.R. Sprott, beef cattle specialist with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service, Texas A&M University System.

Sprott and Waller County Extension agent David McGregor worked with the Four G Ranch at Hempstead in a demonstration regarding the use of progeny testing to increase herd productivity. The demonstration was a part of the Integrated Livestock Management Program of the Extension Service.

Sprott and McGregor worked with

During World War II, in 1944, Allied troops captured the Italian city of Ravenna.

The Austrian composer Wolfgang Amadeus Mozart died in 1791.

Brett Triplett, then manager of the Four G Ranch, to begin a herd improvement program in 1978 using seven different sires. Records showed that two of the sires were consistently producing superior performing calves. Using this nucleus of calves as replacement heifers and through the selection of other superior sires, herd weaning weights increased almost 100 pounds over a four-year period.

Accurate herd records were the key to this demonstration and are essential to any performance and progeny testing program, Sprott emphasized. While record keeping and analysis requires time, it is time well spent, he added.

Records can help cattlemen compare the performance of offspring from different sire-dam combinations, the specialist explained. Animals with poor production can then be culled and replaced with those from superior performing parents.

The result will be more beef going to market, and that's the bottom line, Sprott said.

Farmer must be astute marketer

COLLEGE STATION — To make a profit in 1985, a farmer will have to be an "astute marketer."

That means he must form expectations of two essential values for making sound marketing decisions—individual farm product growing costs and commodity prices.

"From the individual manager's standpoint, estimating his own production costs should be less difficult than trying to 'figure out the market,'" noted Dr. Ashley Lovell of Stephenville, economist with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service, Texas A&M University System.

Why worry about knowing production costs? A knowledge of historical and anticipated production costs is indispensable in farm management decision-making, Lovell said. Consider the importance of knowing how much it costs to produce a pound of cotton, a bushel of corn or a hundredweight of grain sorghum when evaluating these marketing alternatives: selling at harvest, storing and selling at a later date, forward contracting for delivery at harvest or at a later date, hedging in the futures market or using agricultural commodity options.

"To satisfactorily evaluate such marketing alternatives, the manager's best estimates of production costs are needed for individual enterprises," Lovell said. "If production of the commodity is in process, as in the case of the 1985 wheat crop, cost estimates should include expenses incurred to date plus projections of any remaining costs necessary to move the crop from the field."

Hay shows help educate producers

Hay shows can provide a lot of good information about hay quality and what it takes to produce high quality hay.

And hay samples at many shows indicate that more needs to be done to produce a higher quality product, according to Dr. David Bade, forage specialist with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service, Texas A&M University System.

County hay shows in coastal sections of Texas have helped producers realize the importance of hay quality and how this affects their winter feeding program, said Bade, whose efforts are in support of the Integrated Livestock Management Program of the Extension Service.

In 14 county hay shows held in 1983 in the coastal bend and upper coast extension districts, 566 hay samples had an average protein content of 7.5 percent. Seventy percent of these samples would be of high enough quality to meet the nutrient requirements of a dry cow without extra supplementation while only 17 percent would meet the needs of a lactating beef cow. Yet, hay at these shows should be better than average, Bade said.

Summarizing the hay show results, Bade noted the following:

In addition to providing a basis for marketing decisions, production costs can help provide answers to questions such as:

1. Should I grow more grain sorghum and less corn or vice versa in 1985?

2. How should I allocate my land, labor, operating, capital, machinery services and management between grain sorghum, corn and other crop and livestock enterprises?

The extension service can provide budgets to producers for individual crop enterprises, notes Lovell. These budgets are available in all county extension offices and can be used to determine the profit-maximizing crop mix for 1985 as well as to make marketing and financial management decisions.

"A knowledge of the cost of the cost of production and cash flow requirements for individual enterprises is indispensable in farm business management," Lovell said. "Farmers need to relate 1984 actual production costs to the budgeting process to complete 1985 cropping plans. An accounting system that includes individual enterprise data is essential in relating actual production costs to the preparation and updating of enterprise budgets."

Estimates of breakeven values are an integral component in evaluating marketing choices, the economist added, and those choices need to be made before a crop is ready to harvest. Again, enterprise accounting data provide the basis for accurate estimates of breakeven values.

Six county delegates attend Texas Farm Bureau meet

Six voting delegates representing the Deaf Smith County Farm Bureau attended the 51st annual Texas Farm Bureau convention recently in San Antonio.

Policies directing the state's largest farm organization were adopted by more than 1,600 delegates from 217 organized county farm bureaus. Approved recommendations on national policies will advance to the American Farm Bureau Federation's annual meeting planned for Jan. 7 through 10 in Honolulu, Hawaii.

Featured speakers at the convention included Dr. Joseph Boyle of Los Angeles, president of the American Medical Association; S.M. True of Plainview, current TFB president; and Warren Newberry of Waco, TFB executive director.

Attending from Deaf Smith County were Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Detten, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Jacobson and Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Betzen. Detten is president of the local organization.

County delegates attended conferences on federal farm programs, agricultural financing, taxes and education, workers compensation, farm labor and water transportation.

Soil big factor for septic tanks

COLLEGE STATION — Conventional septic tank systems don't always work in many areas of Texas due to densely packed clay soils, high water tables or shallow rock layers that prevent wastewater drainage.

Efforts have increased to develop modifications and alternatives which can provide adequate waste treatment and disposal in soils where these traditional systems don't function, according to Dr. B.L. Carlile, soils specialist with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service, Texas A&M University System.

"These problem conditions are quite common throughout Texas, and the pressure to develop such areas is intensifying," Carlile said. "In addition, costs for municipal collection and treatment systems are becoming prohibitive."

Several promising modifications and alternatives to conventional systems have been demonstrated and tested, the soils specialist said. Under certain circumstances, these systems are superior to the conventional systems.

Simple modifications include: —Two-compartment tank, which provides 40 to 50 percent better solids removal from the wastewater and can extend the life of the drainfield. Two tanks in a series can serve the same purpose.

—Alternating dual field, which involves a simple valve or box that allows use of only one-half of the drainfield while the other half dries out. This is especially useful on clay soils.

—V-shaped trenches combine the advantages of shallow placement and increased sidewall areas for clay soils and high water tables.

Texas pecan crop drops way down

COLLEGE STATION — Pecans, those tasty morsels that are so much a part of the holiday season, are in short supply this year, at least in Texas.

The 1984 Texas pecan crop is only a fraction of what it was a year ago, according to Dr. George Ray McEachern, horticulturist with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service, The Texas A&M University System. About a third of the crop has been harvested to date.

"We are estimating a crop of less than 20 million pounds this year," McEachern said. "That compares to last year's crop of more than 80 million pounds."

Why the sharp drop? According to McEachern, the state's pecan crop was hard hit from several fronts. The first and foremost reason was the large 1983 crop. Pecans generally produce good crops on alternate years, so that accounts for much of the decline of this year's crop.

Other factors that kept pecan production down in 1984 were the severe freeze last December which damaged some trees, the extensive drought this past summer, and a heavy infestation of pecan nut casebearers, the most serious pecan pest.

"Because of the short crop, pecan growers are getting a good price," McEachern said. "In-shell pecans currently are bringing a dollar or more per pound, and that price may increase as harvesting progresses and demand increases."

Although Texas produced a large pecan crop last year, use was heavy so carryover stocks were not that great, the horticulturist noted.

Texans can expect to see some pecans coming in from other states although the crop is also short in the other major pecan growing areas.

SIGN UP FOR SORGHUM PRODUCERS for the 1985 feed grains program extends through March 1, 1985. When signing up, you may request 50% of your projected 1985 deficiency payments when you sign up. Per bushel deficiency payments for sorghum are estimated by the USDA to be 47 cents. Advance deficiency rates to farmers will be half that rate. To be eligible for the program, a producer must agree to limit sorghum planted for harvest to not more than 90% of the farm's feed grain base, and devote to the acreage conservation reserve an acreage of eligible cropland equal to 11.1% of the planted acreage. The 1985 acreage base will be the average of the acreage planted and considered planted to feed grains in 1983 and '84. Land designated for reserve must have been devoted to row crops or small grains in two of the last three years, except for summer-fallow.

By DIANNE PIERSON
Library Director

Bestsellers entitled, "Women Coming of Age" by Jane Fonda, and "The Good War" by Studs Terkel, are featured this week at the Deaf Smith County Library.

In "The Coming of Age," Jane brings all her savvy, energy and honesty to the special needs of women 35 to 55 years of age, with a total approach to health and fitness. Based on the latest medical and scientific research, "Women Coming of Age" is the most comprehensive work of its kind ever written for a general audience.

At age 46 Jane is living proof that the process of aging is negotiable. In "Women Coming of Age," Jane demonstrates that each of us has the ability to slow many aspects of the aging process. Research reveals that much of what we call aging is simply the result of misuse and disuse of our bodies. If, like most people, you are not now at your maximum fitness, it is possible that you can actually improve with age and be healthier and stronger than you were in early adulthood.

To help you look and feel your best, Jane offers concrete information, advice, and encouragement on virtually every aspect of concern for women in midlife: the skin, body mechanics, middle-age spread, the midlife program, the prime time workout, and menopause. "Women Coming of Age" is one of the most important books you'll ever read, regardless of your age.

"The Good War" is Studs Terkel's most exciting, most popular, and most moving book, an account of the lives of ordinary Americans at home and abroad, during World War II. Terkel presents men and women recalling the time when they were all of eighteen and nineteen, thrown into the Far Pacific or confronting the Germans in the last, vicious battles of the European campaign.

"The Good War" includes the memories of some of the famous: the admirals, the politicians, the intellectuals, ranging from Averell Harriman to John Kenneth Galbraith. Equally fascinating are the views of those who formed our image of the war.

To complement this vast array, Terkel has spoken to a number of those who experienced the war in Japan, in Russia, in Germany, England, and France. He shows us the other side of the war, those who were bombed as well as those who did the bombing. The result is a rich, vibrant canvas, an epic of nearly Tolstoyan dimensions, bringing vividly to life the ideals and the innocence that made this our "good war."

Other books available this week are "Stillwatch" by Mary Higgins Clark, "Lady Killer" by Lillian O'Donnell, and "The Life and Times of Heidi Abromowitz" by Joan Rivers.

Blind girl regains sight

GROVES, Texas (AP) — Suzann Wilson, who was born with cataracts in both eyes, gives thanks for the partial vision she has gained through her lifetime of operations.

Her thanks go to the powers above — and the people who have cared enough to help her attain this remarkable gift of sight.

Suzann is a spirited 10-year-old who at present has her sights on being a "secretary, teacher ... or country singer" when she grows up.

Suzann has undergone 10 operations at Texas Children's Hospital in Houston. Her latest operation was in October, when she had muscle surgery performed on her left eye to keep it from rolling on occasion.

The only trouble she has with the eye now is that it itches. And she can't scratch it. But she can see better now than ever before. She has a pair of soft contact lenses and 20-50 vision.

Suzann has only shadow vision in her left eye. She can see with her right eye, except she has trouble with distances and small print.

Just the same, her progress has far exceeded her eye doctor's expectations. She might not have come this far without the help of the area Lions clubs. For the past two years, the Lions have been picking up the tab for her medical expenses, operations included.

The 14 clubs in District 2S1 of the Texas Lions Clubs maintain the Suzann Wilson Eye Fund. The Griffing Park Lions Club acts as custodian of the fund, according to Mike Kirby, president.

One might say the members of the Griffing Park club have adopted Suzann as their sweetheart. They see that she gets the medical care she needs, taking her for checkups and such.

On her 10th birthday earlier this month, the club presented Suzann with a birthday cake and her own Lions Club pins at its dinner meeting. She wears those pins with pride and appreciation.

Suzann expressed her appreciation at the meeting by telling them that, "I think they are the best friends a person like me can have." She and her mother both say they don't know what they would have done without the Lions' help.

Suzann, a fourth-grader at Groves Elementary School, lives with her mother, Rebecca Duncan, 40, and stepfather, Kevin Duncan, 25.

The Duncans live on tight means in a little house owned by Rebecca's parents, Bonnie and Tom Canady, who help the couple out with expenses. The Duncans spent Thanksgiving with the Candays, who now live in Florine, La.

Dietician feeds 1,810 animals

BROWNSVILLE, Texas (AP) — Raw beef, crickets, rats, rabbits, fruits and vegetables are on Jerry Stones' menu.

Those who eat daily from his menu are the 1,810 animals at Gladys Porter Zoo, one of Brownsville's top attractions.

The task for Stones, general curator of the zoo, which was rated this year by zoo professionals as one of the nation's top 10 zoos, is far greater than any mess sergeant will ever encounter.

Opening to the public in 1971, the zoo is noted for its absence of bars and cages and its collection of rare and endangered animals.

Stones' task of feeding them begins with deciding what foods to purchase. This is no simple chore because he's trying to placate the appetites of so many, while staying within a budget.

His primary responsibility is to the large and exotic mammal collection. But, he does spend a lot of time ordering and purchasing food.

Although Stones has a heavy hand in the planning, much of the food is prepared by the zoo's two full-time cooks — Uvaldo Manzano and Jesse Rodriguez.

All the animals are fed twice a day, 10 a.m. and 4 p.m. A prescribed diet based on their native food requirement with some adjustments made for certain foods is followed. The diets are decided upon, supervised and changed periodically by the curatorial staff.

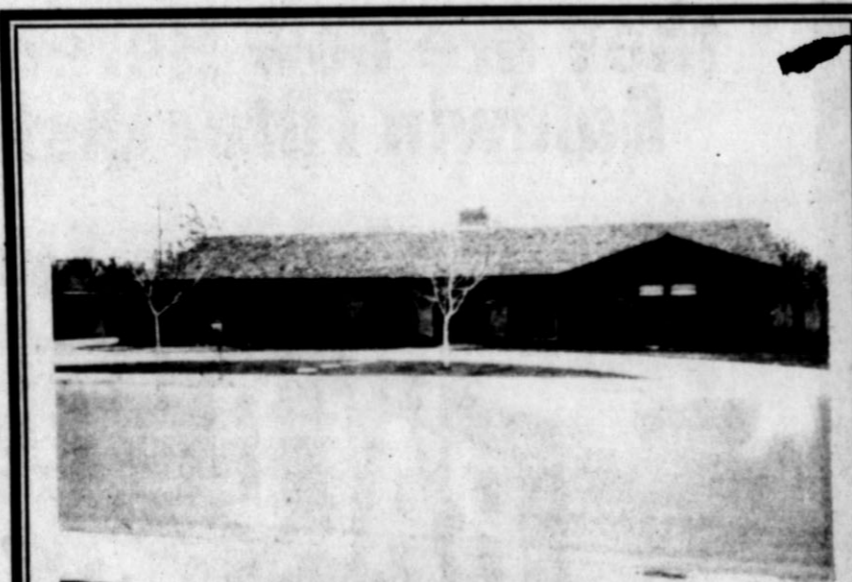

Seven days a week, early morning sounds the bugle reminding the cooks that time is of the essence while hungry animals wait to eat. Manzano and Rodriguez prepare dinner first by drilling out fruit and vegetable slices by hand with the velocity of a food processor.

"I prepare food all day long," said Manzano. "I love my job because I have compassion for the animals, because they're locked up, and I want to give myself to them, they're lonely."

In early afternoon, the cooks prepare the day's second meal (scrambled and hard-boiled eggs, fruit and vegetables.) By 4 p.m., they begin stacking clear plastic bags marked according to species and filled with food into marked buckets and cardboard boxes.

The cooks take the filled boxes via pickup and leave them with the (approximately 40) zookeepers who will do the actual feeding.

Most of the bags, if nothing else, are colorful and nutritious. The monkey and ape diet bags contain bananas, carrots, celery, watermelon, bread, hamburger patty (cooked with salt and no pepper) and hard-boiled egg.

Anti-smuggling policy leads to more Bibles

Openly and with approval of communist authorities, increased supplies of Bibles are being shipped into countries of Eastern Europe and also being produced there, Bible society leaders say.

The influx included a Christmas cargo of Bibles this week for Soviet believers.
Officials said that getting more Bibles into such areas has resulted from a broad decision by United Bible Societies, embracing about 100 national societies, to operate only through legal channels.

That policy contrasts with tactics of some other groups which attempt to smuggle Christian literature into communist countries, where the laws impose confiscation of such detected material when not officially authorized.

It has become increasingly clear that using "official channels to import Bibles or to help have them printed locally is the best policy,"

Lapidary club hosts Christmas dinner

The Deaf Smith Lapidary Club met Monday night in the Flame Room for a covered dish Christmas party.

Members exchanged gifts which were either rocks or white elephants. Whitney Voehm acted as Santa Claus for the exchange.

Hereford Country performed and afterward the 58 members and guests sang Christmas carols. Hosts for the events were Messrs. and Mmes. Jack Nunley, Ralph Packard, Bert Brown and Dale Henson.

The next meeting will be Jan. 28 at 7:30 p.m. in the Flame Room. All visitors are welcome.

High school presents 'Savage'

Hereford High School students are to present "The Curious Savage" Saturday and Sunday as their annual all-school play.

The two presentations are scheduled for 7:30 p.m. Saturday and 2 p.m. Sunday in the HHS auditorium. Tickets, which are to be on sale at the door, may be obtained for $2 apiece.

"Savage" is a three-act comedy written by John Patrick.
"This play was last presented in Hereford by The Community Player about 17 years ago," states an HHS press release. "Many of Hereford's leading citizens had roles in that production. In fact, the garden scenery used in the high school production is the same painting used in the Players play."

John Claypool, director of the all-school production, said members of the cast and theatre arts class have constructed the rest of the set.
"This meets some of the new essential elements of mastery learning required by the state," the release claimed.

Religion Roundup

NEW YORK (AP) — Leaders of Conservative Judaism have praised the Reagan administration for its "strong stand" against the apartheid policy of South Africa and urged a bipartisan delegation to that country to bring back a firsthand report to the American people.

"The time has come to shift from one of quiet diplomacy to one of crying out in public protest," said Rabbi Alexander M. Shapiro, president of the Rabbinical Assembly, representing 1,200 Conservative rabbis serving congregations with 1.5 million members.

He called apartheid a "deplorable policy" that "must be protested by all men and women of good will."

VATICAN CITY (AP) — Rebuffed so far in efforts at closer contacts with China and the estimated 3 million Catholics there, the Vatican says it's hoping the situation will change.

"We hope that regular contact will become possible," the Vatican's secretary of state, Cardinal Agostino Casaroli recently told reporters. "But up to today, it has not been possible."

Indications of a possible shift were seen in the recent visit to China of the Cardinal Jaime Sin of the Philippines. He was reported as saying that authorities there told him they would not object if the "Patriotic Church" liked to align itself with the Vatican.

The government-recognized "Patriotic Church" of Catholics broke off ties with the Vatican after the 1949 communist takeover of China. The government has insisted that contacts with the Vatican are impossible until it ends diplomatic relations with Taiwan — a stand reiterated after Sin's visit.

Meanwhile, the World Council of Churches' general secretary, the Rev. Philip Potter, said after a visit to China he was impressed with "the

Calliopian hosts Mexican style Christmas party

Members of Calliopian Study Club met Thursday night for a Mexican buffet dinner.
Tables were decorated with Mexican-style decorations and lights. Christmas music played in the background. Members brought toys to donate to the Red Cross for its use. All of the members were given an opportunity to see the toys before they were sent to the Red Cross.

Members present were Zela Mae Crump, Audine Dettmann, Virginia Holmes, Faye Holt, Kathlee Palmer, Mrs. Clyde Cave, Mrs. Alton Fraser, Mrs. Wesley Gully, Mrs. Trow Mims, the Rev. and Mrs. Charles Threewit, Dr. and Mrs. Duffy McBrayer, and Messrs. and Mmes. Paul Coneway, John Gilliland, Norman Kerr, Ted McWhorter and Jack Wilcox.

The next meeting will be Jan. 10 at 7:30 in the home of Claudia McBrayer.

Your Money Counts

by Rick Roberts, C.P.A.

INCOME TAX RETIREMENT

Retired persons who are no longer "earning" money are still responsible for paying income tax. The amount of one's annual income, not the fact of employment, determines if income tax is due. A single, retired person earning $4,300 or more must file a federal income tax return. A married couple filing jointly with an income of $6,400 or more must file if one spouse is 65 or over. The income level increases to $7,400 if both have reached age 65. Estimated taxes must be paid on a quarterly basis.

If you want to be sure that you are aware of all the important new tax information, you should be working with a professional financial consultant. RICK ROBERTS, CPA, (364-7525), 138 Third, Suite A, can help you make the right decisions based on your own individual or small business needs. For all your accounting needs we are available Monday thru Friday 8:30-12 and 1-5. We would like to wish you all a Happy Hanukkah and a Merry Christmas.

Volunteers are needed to help deliver toys to needy families on Christmas Eve. Toys will be delivered beginning at 9:00 Monday morning and we hope to have them all done by 12:00. Please call the office if you can spare even 30 minutes to help with this project. Toys are still needed for this project. The toys may be taken to the high school office, the Social Services office or to the Red Cross office.

We are still collecting funds for the African Famine Relief Fund. Four dollars will feed a child one month. Twenty six dollars will feed a family for one month. Any one wishing to help is asked to send their contribution to African Famine Relief in care of the Deaf Smith County Chapter, American Red Cross, P.O. Box 1371 Hereford.

Roundup Stanton Doggie

Several years ago, the Stanton journalism class, which publishes the Stanton Doggie Yearbook and monthly newspaper, provided material for a column in the Hereford Brand. This will be the first contribution to the renewal of this column.

The school year began September with the welcoming of several new teachers to campus. DeeAnn Clifton is a new math teacher; Donnie Henderson teaches health and girls athletics. Judith Howerton, band director; Debra Irwin teaches industrial arts, Pat Liles teaches history and is working with boys athletics; and Greg Sandford teaches math and science.

Enrollment fluctuates regularly, as usual. This week there are 583 enrolled and the highest for the year was 596.

The Doggie Staff is working on the fourth issue of the newspaper, a special Christmas issue, which will be sold December 19. We are also working toward the first yearbook deadline of 36 pages.

The football teams finished the season with two wins, one tie and one loss at the annual Stanton-LaPlata end-of-the-season games. The freshmen beat previously unbeaten LaPlata, the eighth grade tied and seventh grade teams split a pair of games.

Basketball season is well underway with Stanton having eight teams in action each week. The girls' coaches this year are Suzanne Duvall and Donnie Henderson. Boys' coaches are James Salinas, Jeff Smart and Pat Liles. We appreciate the spectator support the teams receive.

Cheerleaders for the 1984-85 year are Crystal Ball, Carolyn Rieves, Carla Fry, Wendy Connally, Shawna Lambert and Melissa Lafuente. Their sponsor is Mrs. Aurora Dominguez. Twirlers are Sophie Suarez, Lori Luper and Analisa Vallejo. Their sponsor is Mrs. Velta King.

The new Industrial Arts teacher is sponsoring an Industrial Arts Club, which is new for Stanton. This club meets weekly, at night, to work on individual projects. This group has several dads involved, and has the prospects of being a most worthwhile activity. Members will have projects entered in competition both in school and in the area.

The Fellowship of Christian athletes, under the sponsorship of Suzanne Duvall, is very active this year. This group has well over 50 members and is growing. They received their shirts bearing the FCA logo this week in time of their yearbook picture.

Student representatives for the year have been elected and have begun work on the several activities they will sponsor this year. The freshmen representatives are Crystal Ball, Carla Fry, Nadine Herrera, Chad Larkin, Carolyn Rieves, Joann Urias, and Shelly Webster.

Eighth grade representatives are Melissa Bosquez, Denise Carreon, Wendy Connally, Melissa Lafuente, Rene Mercer, Ricky Rieves, and Sylvia Ruiz. Seventh grade representatives are Cindy Alvarado, Crissy Balderaz, Tina Crispen, Pearl Garcia, Vicki Mongold, Danny Ruiz, and Mary Varner. The sponsor for this group is Joe Don Cummings.

The Science team, with Mrs. Sammie Henderson as sponsor, is being organized and we will have a report on this group later. Each year the team has garnered trophies and have represented the school well.

Due to scheduling, the Stanton journalism class was limited to having only seventh and eighth graders this year. Those enrolled are Cindy Alvarado, Daniel Galvan, Gilbert Juarez, Juan Perez, Cally Revell, Michael Riley, Dolores Robles, Jennifer Trotter, Jason Bradshaw, Toby Hill, Grieselda Morales, JoAnn Pesqueda, Ricky Rieves, Richard Rodriguez, Larry Silva and Craig Provence. Carolyn Waters is their advisor.

Bjorn Borg won five consecutive Wimbledon singles tennis titles from 1976 to 1980, losing to John McEnroe in 1981.

Christmas Seal Month

Thursday Gov. Mark White signed a proclamation designating December as Christmas Seal Month in Texas. Locally, Mayor Wes Fisher also declared the observance. This year marks the 77th anniversary of the Christmas Seal, the symbolic emblem of the American Lung Association, which has aided the nation in the fight against lung diseases. Pictured with the Mayor are Mildred Fuhrmann (at left) and Jewel Smith, association volunteers.

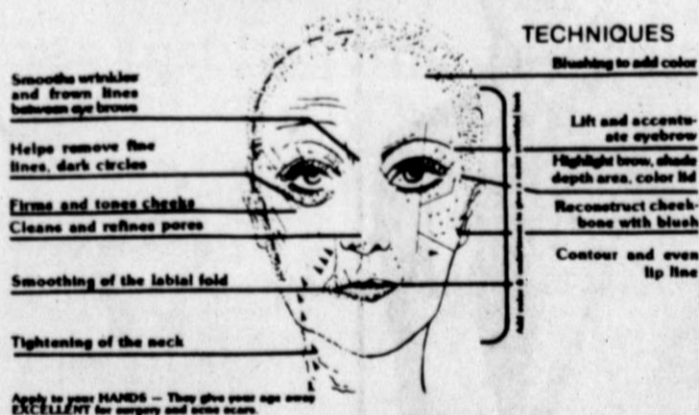

Christmas Seal Month to be observed here

The 1984 Christmas Seals have been mailed to homes throughout Texas in the 77th annual campaign for funds to support programs for the control and prevention of lung cancer, emphysema, asthma and occupational lung health hazards. The oldest voluntary health agency in the U.S., the Lung Association was formed in 1904 to combat tuberculosis, and the first Christmas Seals were introduced in 1907 to raise funds for an anti-TB program that proved successful. Today, the Association works to combat all lung disease through programs supporting smoking cessation, research and medical training, patient education and counseling, and public education on air pollution occupational lung health. It is still active in combating tuberculosis.

Ann Landers

Name is a bummer

DEAR ANN LANDERS: Why do parents give their children unisex or opposite-sex names? It was confusing enough with Lew/Lou, Francis/Frances, Kris/Chris and not knowing if Pat was a Patrick or a Patricia. Now we have Kim, Kelly, Shannon and Robbie that could be (and are) both boys and girls.

My first day at high school I told my mom there was a boy named Alice in General Science. She said he was probably named Aloysius. The next day I discovered a fellow named Lorie in English class. If Billy Jo's dad wanted a boy, did Lorie's mom want a girl?

A classmate at a recent reunion described her children as Jody (Jodie?) and Jessie (Jesse?). I was embarrassed to ask if they were boys or girls. One must listen carefully these days because Brooke is a girl, but Brooks is a boy. Alison with one I is a girl. With two I's, it's a boy. So how can a person tell when the name is pronounced? They sound the same.

I thought our church was quite progressive to let a girl play the part of one of the wise men in the Christmas pageant, when Sam turned out to be Samantha.

Then there are the names that defy pronunciation, such as Aja, Kissia, Niah, Trygve and Richelieu. Life has got to be unnecessarily hard for a boy named Marion. Why do parents do this?—Mary, Wife Of John (Milwaukee)

DEAR MARY: Don't look at me. I named mine Margo.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I would like to address this letter to "Appalled in Corning, N.Y."

DEAR APPALLED: I had not heard of the Yellowknife incident, and am ashamed that something like that could happen in my country. The gang rape of a very young teenager is hideous. To think that the girl was made pregnant makes it even more tragic.

The U.S. Citizen asked, "What in the world is happening in Canada, anyway?" I would like to ask the same question of him.

I was horrified when President Kennedy was murdered and later his brother, the senator, was killed by an assassin. I was shocked by Watergate, the Charles Manson massacre and in the past several months the rapes in New Bedford, Mass., made headlines everywhere. Innocent people were murdered in a McDonald's restaurant in California. A man ran his car onto the sidewalk in Los Angeles and killed several people.

We in Canada are not very different from you in the United States. In fact, I believe humans are very much the same all over the world—or they would be, if their governments would allow it.

In every barrel of apples one will find a couple of rotten ones. And that goes for people everywhere. Our only hope for world peace is to accentuate the brotherhood of man — our sameness and not our differences.

Please help us work toward that goal.—Your Neighbor To The North

DEAR NEIGHBOR: I could not have said it better myself. Thank you for reminding us of the common thread that runs through all humankind.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I cut this column out years ago and have carried it in my wallet. As you can see, it is yellow with age and I've lost the ending. Please find it and print it.—C. From Cereal City

DEAR C.: With pleasure. Thanks for asking.

BARBADOS

The small pear-shaped island of Barbados, at the extreme eastern edge of the West Indies archipelago, is a friendly place. It is noticeably British, with a long history of social and political stability. Of course, it also has the pink and white beaches, year-round 80-degree weather, warm, aquamarine waters and duty-free shopping that are the staples of a Caribbean holiday. However, Barbados is more than that. Anyone who ventures off to explore discovers fine Jacobean mansions, a pirate's castle, hilltop parish churches, limestone caves, botanical gardens and some of the most stunning coastal scenery anywhere in the West Indies. Ultimately, however, what impresses one most about Barbados is its friendly people.

Kingdom Seekers host holiday meal Tuesday

Rosie Wall was hostess to the Kingdom Seekers Sunday School class of Avenue Baptist Church for their Christmas covered dish dinner on Tuesday.

The Wall home was decorated throughout with a theme of Christmas trees. A revolving jeweled tree enhanced the living room, a large gift-laden tree was in the den and the dinner table was covered with a red cloth adorned with a white ceramic tree flanked by white doves holding red taper candles.

Pauline Landers, class teacher, led the opening prayer and gave the devotional thought entitled "Gifts you don't have to buy." Fannie Townsend led the recreation reading "The Night Before Christmas" with guests participating.

Ava Phillips, class mother, was a special guest. She, Landers and Townsend were presented gifts from the class. Secret Pals were also revealed with gifts. Names for the New Year were drawn along with prayer partners.

Others attending included Coy Tice, Erma Bain, Maxine Coleman, Dora Barnett, Nancy Duncan, Wilma Bryan, Luella Thomas, Velma Carroll, Trudy Gray and Shirley Brown.

Louise's Latest

By LOUISE WALKER
County Extension Agent

Extension Homemaker Club members are excellent for springing surprises.

Why just last year, they planned and almost pulled off a surprise baby shower for me. The first of Sept., my co-worker lined me up to give a program to Newcomers at 5:30 p.m. on a Thursday at the E.B. Black House. I agreed as I had given several programs for Newcomers but always at noon and never in the late afternoon. I did question the time but fell for the bit that they were organizing a working Newcomers group. I never suspected a shower or had even had a thought about one until the day before. It so happens I was giving the program for Bippus E.H.C. and they gave me a baby gift stating they were not going to be able to come to the shower the next day.

The shower was truly a surprise. I just found out about it a day early. I still vividly remember each of the baby presents and who gave each. Many I'm still using such as blankets, towels, and the carseat.

Monday's E.H. Council Christmas party topped it all. Carol Odom, gave the gift to me and made the remark that it was something that I really needed. Thoughts went through my mind - is it underwear? Do they really know mine are so worn? How do they know what I really need? Much to my surprise, it was a desk pen set. Oh, an engraving. Why, that's my name and my social security number.

Several years ago, I fussed when I had to dig around in my billfold or in the files for an old report just to find the magic number. I was always saying "I wish I had my SS number engraved on something so I could find it easily." I still need my social security number once a month for reports. I still do not know it. I finally taped it on the telephone so I would have it before me. Today the tape comes off the telephone. Now I can find my special number engraved on a beautiful marble pen set.

Another story to this, just a couple of weeks ago, my secretary and I were looking for a suitable farewell gift for Brad Morrison. We considered a desk pen set. And I thought how I wish I had one. Thanks to you club members for the creative gift.

Another special thing happened at the same Christmas party. Gayle Carter, our Council Chairman, gave each of the council officers a gorgeous red and white pillow done in chicken scratch. Their first initial graciously centered the pillow. Like an artist she signed her name and date on the back in embroidery. After she had said something nice about each officer, she presented them a pillow. Surprised again, I was on her "nice" list. Eight pillows she did. I was thinking, "My, this must have taken her all year." To find out, Gayle did start them in July - that's, half a year. But it was a beautiful gesture. Thanks, Gayle.

I could go on and on and tell you about all the nice things Extension Homemaker club members do for me. They are a dear group. The gifts are wonderful, but, most of all, I appreciate their support of the Extension program and their loving care for fellow man. To club members, I wish a loving, peaceful, and happy holiday season.

Best strategy

DEAR POLLY — We put up a bird feeder last winter, but were disappointed at the lack of variety of birds we attracted. We got bluejays that kicked half of the seed to the ground, and I think they chased all the other birds away. How can we attract more birds? — SARAH

DEAR SARAH — The best strategy for attracting a variety of birds to your yard is to set up two or three feeders of different types. One might be a large feeding platform stocked with large seeds such as sunflower seeds. This will attract large birds such as bluejays and evening grosbeaks, keeping them away from the other feeders. A smaller feeder with many perches will attract smaller birds. This feeder should be stocked with a good bird-seed mix. You can also set up a feeding station on the ground to serve ground feeders such as cardinals, juncos, doves, etc. You might also put up a tiny hummingbird feeder (a special tube-type feeder filled with sugar water) outside a window. Keep these feeders spread out from each other so that each type of bird will go to its own feeder.

Other tips for attracting birds: Be sure to locate feeders near shrubs or trees that provide important shelter. However, if there are cats in your neighborhood, keep the feeders at least several feet away from low ground cover that could provide cats a hiding place when hunting. Don't locate feeders in cold, windy places; place them in bright, sunny, calm locations so birds are warmed by the sun as they feed.

And remember this most important point: Once you set up a feeder, you must keep it well stocked at all times. Birds will become accustomed to visiting your feeder. Indeed, they will rely on it for their primary food supply; if you fail to keep it stocked, they could starve.

Today in History

Today is Sunday, Dec. 16, the 351st day of 1984. There are 15 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history: On Dec. 16, 1773, American colonists disguised as Indians boarded a British ship in Boston Harbor and dumped more than 300 chests of tea overboard. The protest against tea taxes became known as "The Boston Tea Party."

On this date: In 1770, the composer Ludwig van Beethoven was born.

In 1809, Napoleon Bonaparte was divorced from the Empress Josephine by an act of the French Senate.

In 1884, William Henry Fruen of Minneapolis patented a vending machine that dispensed liquids.

In 1916, the monk who wielded powerful influence over the Russian court, Gregory Rasputin, was murdered.

In 1944, the World War II Battle of the Bulge began in Belgium.

In 1950, President Harry S. Truman proclaimed a state of emergency, citing the threat of communist aggression.

In 1960, a United Air Lines DC-8 and a TWA Super Constellation collided over New York City, then crashed, killing 134 people.

In 1976, the government halted its swine flu vaccination following rashes.

Five years ago: In an ABC interview, Iran's Foreign Minister, Sadegh Ghotzbadah, called the departure of the Shah of Iran from the United States a victory for the Iranian people.

One year ago: Congress named four members to the revamped U.S. Commission on Civil Rights, a just weeks after President Reagan had named the other four members.

Today's birthdays: Author Arthur C. Clarke is 67. Actress Liv Ullmann is 45. CBS News Correspondent Lesley Stahl is 43.

DRIVING COSTS

How much it costs to own a car

(Source: The Hertz Corporation)

NEA GRAPHIC

The cost of owning and driving a passenger car in the United States has fallen for the first year since World War II. The drop to $2,744 in 1983 (from $2,847 in 1982) was due to cuts in the annual rates of auto depreciation and interest on loan payments. It also reflected lower gasoline prices and greater fuel efficiency.

Imprisoned former chief teaches, plays tennis

MEXICO CITY (AP) — His words competing with clanging padlocks and banging cell doors, Jorge Diaz Serrano, once one of Mexico's most powerful men, says he concentrates on tennis and classes he gives to other inmates rather than on the loss of his freedom.

When the former head of the government oil monopoly Pemex was accused of fraud, the case created a sensation. Since he was jailed July 30, 1983, Diaz Serrano has gradually dropped from the limelight.

he showed how he divided his cell into a living room, "office," a small desk, and bedroom.

Because the prison is not full, the top bunk is piled with papers. Reproductions of Monets and other paintings decorate the walls.

He proudly takes snapshots of his five children and four grandchildren off the bookshelves to show to a visitor. Below are the computer and printer where he compiles statistics for the prison administration and takes classes from another inmate at night.

"My friends advised me to flee abroad and I refused," Diaz Serrano said in an interview. "I preferred to turn myself in here voluntarily — and that is how it is in the court record — to come to be tried and show my innocence."

Diaz Serrano headed Pemex from 1976 until 1981, during the country's oil boom years.

In the "moral renovation" begun after President Miguel de la Madrid took office in December 1982, he was accused of a $34 million fraud involving the purchase of two tankers.

He is being held without bond at the Reclusorio Sur, or Southern Prison, and is waiting for a judge to decide on a verdict and sentence him.

"In my case, the trial process has been prolonged excessively," Diaz Serrano said. Mexican law requires sentencing within a year of arrest, but he said government prosecutors submitted new evidence, keeping the case open.

"I think they believe that my stay should be prolonged here, according to their plans. I think the opposite," he added, chuckling.

In the meantime, he keeps busy.

"Being deprived of freedom is the worst that can happen to you," he said. "But you must not think about it, to preserve your health. That is the key to survival. Avoid thinking of your own miseries and try to keep busy to take a positive attitude toward life. Everything in life changes and this must change. When, I don't know."

At 63, he is tanned from early morning rounds of tennis on the prison courts, at the base of mountains dotted with cornfields on the southern edge of the city. His thick gray hair is combed back from his face.

Four hours a day he teaches other inmates, diesel mechanics three days a week and French and English two days.

Mexican prisoners may decorate their cells as long as it does not violate security regulations and have meals brought in. Diaz Serrano has done both.

"They accuse me of having privileges, that I have a very large apartment with many bedrooms where I have all kinds of comforts," he said motioning around his cell.

Wearing white leather tennis shoes and a brown and white running suit,

"But it all measures 3 by 3½ meters (9.9 x 11.5 feet) and in front it has seven vertical bars and 16 horizontal ones that are closed at 9 at night, closing one up until 6 in the morning," he said.

Diaz Serrano is the son of a government agricultural employee. He has a mechanical engineering degree and says he became wealthy on his own, working for 40 years in the petroleum equipment business before moving into Pemex.

Before resigning from the oil post in 1981, Diaz Serrano was mentioned as a presidential candidate of the ruling Institutional Revolutionary Party. He was elected a senator from the northwestern state of Sonora, but Congress, at the request of government prosecutors, stripped him of congressional immunity to face the fraud charges.

Because he was a businessman, he lacked an extensive network of political ties that some say might have helped him escape prosecution.

"I believe it is a hypothetical case," he said, "but it would have been good to have a strong political structure. It would have helped me a lot."

Diaz Serrano said he believes the prominence of his position was one reason he was charged.

"They chose the wrong scapegoat," he said. "I have nothing to hide. ... In the long run it will be known that the one who was lynched was innocent but it also will be known who were the ones who did the lynching."

Shortfall estimates put Bullock on hot seat

AUSTIN (AP) — State Comptroller Bob Bullock recalls Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby introducing him to a breakfast meeting of state senators as "the only man that can help us get more money."

"I could have fallen out and laid down dead," Bullock says.

The introduction was fitting, however, because tax man Bullock had a reputation of coming up with money when legislators needed it.

Put the emphasis on "had." Those days, like Texas budget surpluses, apparently are over.

"I'd say they are, and I think they've been gone a couple of sessions," Bullock said in an interview.

"About three years ago," he said, "I sat down with Hobby and Gov. (Bill) Clements, and I said, 'In the past, if you called upon me to come up with another $50 million or $60 million, I have done it, and there has been a time or two when it was really questionable whether I could do it.'"

"I want you to know that I'm not going to do that anymore. I'm going to give you an estimate, and hope it's correct, and don't ask me to (raise it). They never asked me to do it again."

Recent estimates of revenue shortfalls have put Bullock on the hot seat in Austin. But legislators know that he's been highly accurate in the past, and that his estimates are actually careful computer calculations developed with the help of indexes and experts from around the state.

The Texas Constitution requires the comptroller to submit a sworn statement at the beginning of each legislative session estimating how much money lawmakers can expect to have to spend. They can spend no more than the comptroller certifies is available, although the revenue estimates can be updated whenever Bullock thinks it's necessary.

Thus, a previous estimate that is revised upward gives the Legislature more money to spend.

To be safe, Bullock, comptroller since 1975, would issue conservative estimates and occasionally raise them to cover additional expenses — "coming up with another $50 million."

Recently, however, Bullock said he would be forced to lower his revenue estimate by more than $250 million when the Legislature convenes in January unless world oil prices turn upward. He predicted a revenue shortfall of $900 million.

His accuracy on past estimates would indicate he's probably right on the money this time, too.

Bullock's office prepared a sheet listing the accuracy of revenue estimates since 1947. The low "accuracy percentage" was 23.7 in 1951, meaning that the estimate turned out to be only 23.7 percent of the actual revenue. Bullock said that since he has been in office, the percentage has risen steadily to 88, 95.5, 96, 96.9 and 99.6.

Computers are only part of the reason why.

"With all due respect" to former comptroller Robert S. Calvert, Bullock said, "the computer over here was used mainly for mailing labels to send out sales tax returns. I believe I could take an Addressograph and do just about the same."

Billy Hamilton, director of fiscal management for the comptroller, now has 16 economists and a room full of computers to work on revenue estimates. Hamilton is a graduate of the Lyndon B. Johnson School of Public Affairs, and Bullock says, "He's the best there is."

Hamilton credits pressure from Bullock for better data for the larger staff and closer estimates.

In 1978, Bullock said, his office began accumulating data and now has 1,600 factors that go into an estimate. Some factors — industrial production, new car sales and energy demand — are predictable. Others, such as the number of housing starts in Japan, are not. Those overseas housing starts, it seems, can affect the demand for Texas products.

To refine revenue estimates, Bullock asked businesses and industries to "give us their economists one or two days each quarter to tell us what their predictions are in their business or industry. They have been very generous, for example, in telling us their expansion plans."

Also, Hamilton said, the comptroller's office surveys 300 major taxpayers each quarter, asking each 10 questions. "The main one is what is your outlook for the Texas economy — better or worse? Outlook for your industry, your business, for profit? What's your outlook for capital spending? When do you think the recession will be in Texas?"

Going a step further, the comptroller's office checks help-wanted advertisements in 12 newspapers, two from each of six regions. Hamilton said this enables the office to pick up certain signals on the economy before the information is available from the Texas Employment Commission. Fewer ads, for example, would indicate the economy is leveling off, Hamilton said.

Nevertheless, Bullock said, "It's plain guesswork with revenue from oil and gas. I'm happy if we can call it fairly close."

Asked if long-range projections had made him a believer in annual, rather than Texas' biennial legislative sessions, Bullock, "We've got to have it, man, we've got to have it."

seem to flatten my stomach. It really sticks out like a sore thumb. Do you have some exercises that could help me lose this bulge? I know I'll never get it as flat as it was before, but is there any hope of flattening it a little so it doesn't look so bad?

DEAR READER — Of course you can do something about it. You have lost weight, but you may still have excess body fat. It seems there are special places that are the hardest to reduce, and the waistline is one of them.

If you still have any fat under your skin, such as a roll around the waist, you can lose fat and help reduce your abdomen. You can do this with a combination of a diet to control calories and a major increase in exercise. Walking is a good exercise for using calories. Build up to walking as much as you can every day. You can do other exercises, too, but moderate exercise like walking, which you can do for a long duration, is often the most useful in helping a person lose weight.

You need to do sit-up exercises. Do these with your knees bent, or put your feet up on a chair or couch. That way, you will use your abdominal muscles rather than your hip-bending muscles. Many people who do sit-ups either tuck their feet under something to hold them or have someone hold them. The result is that the hip-bending muscles are used to sit up, rather than the abdominal muscles.

Leg lifts are particularly useful for the lower abdomen. These can be too much for people with a weak back, so be careful in doing them. Keep your knees bent as you raise your knees up toward your chin. Don't try to lift your feet up with your knees straight, at least when you first start. You also need to do exercises to strengthen the muscles in your back, which help you to hold your posture upright without any slumping of the spine.

I have discussed these exercises in The Health Letter 17-12, Winning the Battle of the Bulge, which I am sending you. Others who want this issue can send 75 cents with a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for it to me in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York NY 10019.

DEAR DR. LAMB — I am 23 and have had four children. When I had my last child two years ago, I put on a lot of weight. I have been exercising and not eating much food ever since. I've done very well, but I just can't

Ball receives humanitarian award

By BOB THOMAS Associated Press Writer

BEVERLY HILLS, Calif. (AP) — Lucille Ball, unquestionably the most popular comedienne in entertainment history, still reacts with wide-eyed "Who, me?" wonder when honors are heaped upon her.

She did so recently when she received Variety Clubs' humanitarian award on a CBS television special attended by the biggest stars in the industry, including Frank Sinatra, James Stewart, Burt Reynolds and Sammy Davis.

They praised her to the skies. But the zany, wide-mouthed redhead seemed vaguely unbelieving, as if they had somehow honored the wrong person.

It's no act. Lucille Ball's modesty is not phony. Rather than accept credit for the success of "I Love Lucy," she invariably claims it should be given to the writers, technicians, co-stars and especially to her former husband, Desi Arnaz.

Still, it was her timing, wails and pratfalls that made the show one of the most popular in television history.

"There comes a time in your life when you get a lot of plaques," the 73-year-old star said one afternoon in the den of the house she shares with her second husband and partner, Gary Morton. "It's very flattering, and I'll go along with it, especially if it benefits children."

Proceeds from the CBS special established a Lucille Ball Diabetes Research Library at a children's hospital in Denver, Colo.

Miss Ball got to Hollywood in 1933 via modeling. As a blonde, she appeared with the Marx Brothers, Fred Astaire and Katharine Hepburn and Ginger Rogers.

In 1940, her tresses a fiery red, Miss Ball met Arnaz, a rumba star. They married within six months.

Over the years, she's appeared in more than 75 movies and on television from 1951-74 in "I Love Lucy," "The Lucy Show" and "Here's Lucy." Miss Ball once headed a television empire that included three studios and numerous series. She and Morton maintain a production office at 20th Century-Fox, and their company produced the successful feature, "All the Right Moves," starring Tom Cruise.

Her life seems like a happy climb from one success to another. Yet even at the height of "I Love Lucy," her life was a misery.

"Living through the last five years of the show as a Pagliacci took the edge off any enjoyment I might have had," she said. "Desi's drinking and carousing were a terrible embarrassment — bad for a woman's self-esteem. The talk around town was 'Poor Lucy.' Because I couldn't face people, I became a recluse for more than 5½ years...."

"Our commitments kept us together, and I always had the hope that things would change. But they didn't."

She made the break when "I Love Lucy" went off the air. Their children, Lucie and Desi Jr., both of whom became actors, were 5 and 6 at the time.

Priest asks nagging questions

By BOB THOMAS Associated Press Writer

"MASS APPEAL" is the story of an older priest and his younger assistant who share a parish church. The comparison to "Going My Way" ends there.

Mark Dolson is a seminarian with a penchant for asking uncomfortable questions, such as: Did Jesus have a sex life? He becomes a problem to the head of the seminary, Monsignor Burke, especially when he challenges the expulsion of two candidates for priesthood suspected of homosexual relations.

Dolson turns up in the congregation of Father Tim Farley, whose one-liners and comforting homilies have made him immensely popular with his affluent parishioners. Father Farley is irritated, then intrigued by the outspoken young man. With considerable misgivings, the priest agrees to accept Dolson as his temporary assistant, especially since the seminarian faces imminent expulsion.

The young man accuses Father Farley of trying to play "Father Bo-jangles." When Farley claims a falsehood he told a parishioner was "a harmless lie," the young man comments, "I didn't know there was such a thing."

An exasperating young man, certainly. But his nagging questions cause Father Farley to examine his own values, including his concept of the Sunday collection as the "Nielsen rating" of reception to the sermon.

"Mass Appeal" is based on the Bill C. Davis play which graduated from off-Broadway to Broadway. Davis has done a splendid job of transforming his two-character play to a full-cast movie, and director Glenn Jordan ("Only When I Laugh") has made good use of outdoor locations. And he happily has concentrated on the lively exchange of ideas — a rarity in today's film world. The role of Father Farley requires an actor with magnetism and fallibility, and it's hard to imagine anyone better than Jack Lemmon. Whether cracking jokes in the pulpit or struggling with self-doubt over too many glasses of wine, he remains in total charge of the character.
