Reagan to Retain Draft Registration, Prosecute

By TERENCE HUNT
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Reagan administration, opting to continue draft registration, is vowing to prosecute the more than 800,000 young men who have failed to register unless they sign up during a temporary amnesty period.

In a sharp reversal of his campaign statements, President Reagan said Thursday he was retaining draft registration because it would save up to six weeks in mobilizing recruits in an emergency.

Violators of the law — who would face a maximum penalty of five years in prison and a $10,000 fine — will be allowed to sign up without penalty during a 30- to 60-day grace period, the administrator said. Details on when the grace period starts and how long it will last are still pending.

Presidential counselor Edwin Meese III expressed confidence that most young men would register now that confusion about the future of registration has been cleared up.

And those who still refuse? "Under the law they have to be prosecuted," said Meese.

However, he suggested that extraordinary steps will be taken before the government moves against violators.

"There are several enforcement steps before a prosecution is initiated," Meese said. "They are counseled, they have people come to their home and talk to them about the (law) and explain the law carefully to them."

Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger said today that "it's a considerably more dangerous world" than when Reagan opposed draft registration during the 1980 presidential campaign, and that the Polish crisis was figured in the president's decision.

Interviewed on ABC-TV's "Good Morning America" show, Weinberger said the primary reason for Reagan's change in position was a new finding that registration would save six to seven weeks in the event of an emergency manpower mobilization — not the three to five days he said was the Selective Service's estimate in 1980.

Leaders of the anti-draft movement denounced Reagan's decision as hypocritical. Sen. Mark Hatfield reminded the president of his 1980 statement that the chief objection to draft registration was on moral grounds, and that the program was morally unjust except in a severe national emergency.

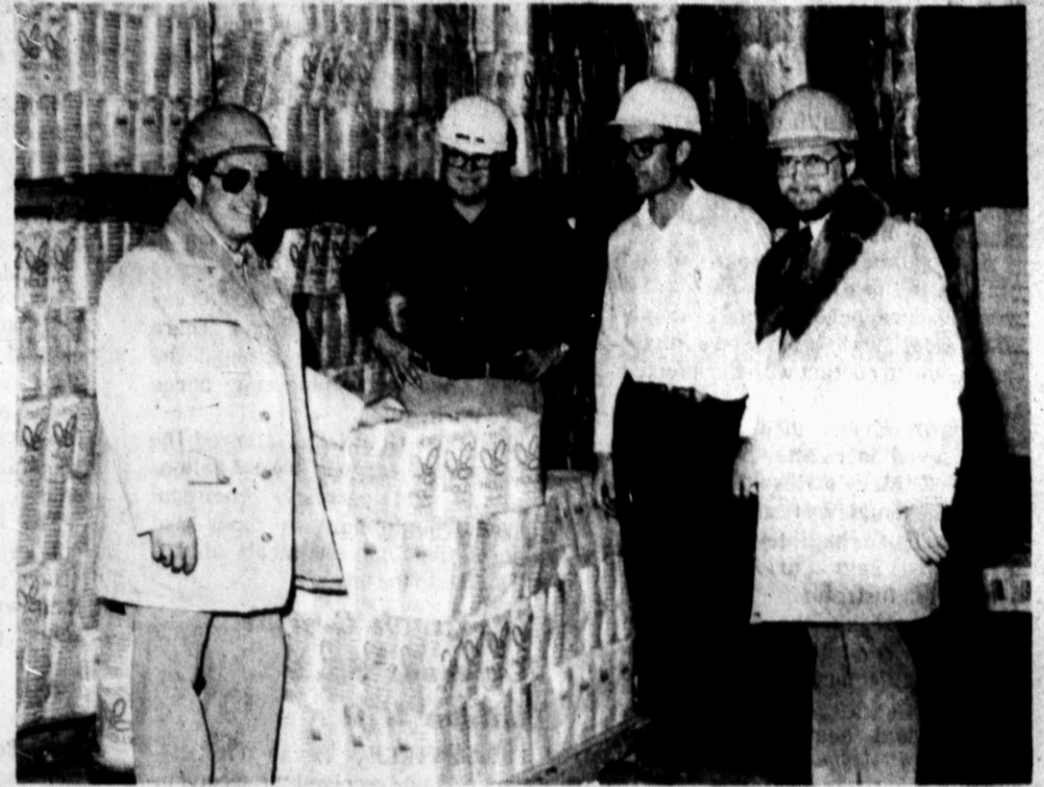

"That moral standard is as valid today as when the president made it," said Hatfield, an Oregon Republican who enlisted Reagan's help in an unsuccessful attempt to block registration in May 1980.

In his announcement Thursday, Reagan said registration did not foreshadow a return to the draft. Quoting his own words from a 1980 letter to Hatfield, Reagan said, "Only in the most severe national emergency does the government have a claim to the mandatory service of its young people."

The next sentence of that letter — which was omitted from Reagan's statement Thursday — said, "In any other time, a draft or draft registration destroys the very values that our society is committed to defending."

Reagan's statement Thursday — which was read by Meese — assured the nation that there was no national emergency.

Crimestoppers Board Plans Presentations to Clubs

By BOB NIGH
MANAGING EDITOR

Deaf Smith County Crimestoppers, Inc. will be introduced to the area with a series of presentations to civic clubs and other groups in the near future. That's the decision made by the Crimestoppers board of directors yesterday.

Crimestoppers was organized recently, and has begun to grow with the advent of the "Crime of the Week" program, and donations to a reward fund by area businesses and individuals.

Dr. Duffy McBrayer is president of the board, heading a group of 12 volunteers, who oversee the program.

The organization, its purpose and aims, and just how it works will be presented to the public through a letter mailed out to all individuals, businesses, and clubs on the chamber of commerce mailing list, and through the series of talks presented by Crimestoppers, Inc. board members at various club meetings.

The organization's publicity committee, comprised of L. Jean Henry, Chip Formby and Bob Nigh, will be setting up the talks for the board members.

Assistant District Attorney David Martinez, who has already spoken before a few local clubs on the subject, will help put together the oral presentation.

The board chose the club approach after deciding yesterday that a town meeting would not draw a large enough audience.

In the letter, which will be drafted by District Attorney Roland Saul and Dr. McBrayer, a fund raising effort will be announced, along with the announcement of the available speakers, and an update of progress made.

Crimestoppers, Inc. hopes to deter crime by offering rewards for information leading to arrest and indictment in a felony case. Reward money is kept in a fund, and is made up of donations from local benefactors.

Saul told the board yesterday that several calls concerning the "Crimes of the Week" have been received, and that leads are being checked out.

Informants in the Crime of the Week program receive a reward of $500 in the event of arrest and indictment. Callers may remain anonymous, and will be given a code number by which all future contact will be made.

In other action yesterday the board accepted the resignation of vice-chairman Dwight Turner, who moved to Amarillo recently. Lloyd Mannon was named to replace Turner on the board, and to assume his vice-chairman's position.

'Loud Splash' Heard By Stakeout Officer

ATLANTA (AP) — A police stakeout officer testified today that he heard a "loud splash" in the Chattahoochee River and saw lights appear on a bridge just before Wayne B. Williams' car was spotted moving slowly over the bridge.

Williams, 23, is on trial for murder in the slayings of Jimmy Ray Payne, 21, and Nathaniel Cater, 27, two of 28 young blacks slain here in a 22-month string of killings. No arrests have been made in the 26 other deaths.

The bodies of Payne and Cater were found in the Chattahoochee downstream from the bridge, which an expert has testified was the most likely dumping point for the bodies.

Bob Campbell, a police recruit stationed on the riverbank under the bridge as part of a stakeout project, testified today he heard the splash in the pre-dawn hours of May 22, 1981.

"I grabbed my flashlight, night stick and walkie talkie, ran up to the bank ... looked out over the river and I could see waves over the river," Campbell said. "I shined my flashlight and saw the waves moving toward the bank."

"I looked up and all of a sudden lights appeared on the bridge, right above where the splash was. They started moving away from me, across the bridge," he said.

Campbell said the splash was "much larger" than splashes made by beavers which he had seen on earlier stakeouts.

The lights he saw on the bridge were "directly above where I thought the origin of the splash was," he said.

Cater's body was found in the river May 24, 1981, about a mile downstream from the bridge. Payne's body had been found in the same general area a month earlier.

FBI Sharpshooter Waylays Robber

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — A bank robber was in critical condition today after being shot while holding a gun to the head of a bank secretary and marching her toward a busy highway, authorities said.

The man, shot once in the head by an FBI sharpshooter about 7:30 p.m. Thursday, was in intensive care at Wilford Hall U.S. Medical Center after his surgery ended shortly after midnight, said Air Force Sgt. Stephen Mitchell.

The two people abducted during the robber's getaway attempt — 36-year-old bank secretary Patricia Johnson and 19-year-old bank customer Todd Curtis Cummings — escaped uninjured, police said.

Cummings described his captor as "real calm, not harsh in his demands. It was like he had planned this for years. He knew what he was doing. He acted very determined, not insane."

Police said they did not know who the robber was, that he was not carrying any identification. They described him as in his late 20s or early 30s.

The man, wearing a ski mask, robbed the Valley High Bank, took Ms. Johnson hostage, commandeered Cummings' pickup truck and ordered Cummings to drive until he forced him out of the truck two miles away, a mile from Lackland Air Force Base, authorities said.

He then forced Ms. Johnson to stick her head outside the

Richburg To Sign With TTU

RICHBURG

Hereford standout Aubrey Richburg has announced that he intends to sign a scholarship with Texas Tech University on the national letter of intent day Feb. 10.

Richburg, a 6-2, 220-pound imposing physical specimen, is one of the most sought-after linemen in the state. He listed the possibility of being able to play on the varsity level perhaps in his first year at Tech as one of the main reasons for his decision to sign with the Raiders.

Richburg was sophomore of the Year in District 4-5A in 1979, and was All-District both offensively and defensively the past two seasons. He was named to the Amarillo Globe News Super Team this season for the third successive time, and also to the Lubbock Avalanche Journal's All South Plains Team.

"We're really proud of him," an excited HHS coach Don Cumpton said today. "We think he'll do them a heck of a job, and we know he's happy that he finally made a decision and got rid of the recruiting pressure some."

Brand Managing Editor Bob Nigh was visiting with Richburg today, and will present an in-depth story on the recruiting chase and Richburg's plans for the future in Sunday's edition.

Soars to 8.9 percent

Unemployment Sets Post-War Record

WASHINGTON (AP) — The nation's unemployment rate surged to 8.9 percent in December as joblessness among adult men, historically the most stable element of the labor force, set a post-World War II record, the Labor Department reported today.

The Bureau of Labor Statistics said the half-percentage-point jump — from 8.4 percent to 8.9 percent overall — left close to 9.5 million Americans out of work as the economy plunged into a deepening recession.

The agency said the number of "discouraged workers" rose by about 150,000 in the fourth quarter of 1981, to 1.2 million, the highest level recorded since the government began keeping those statistics in 1970. Discouraged workers are classified as those who report to government surveyors that they want to find work but have given up the search in futility.

Black unemployment reached 17.4 percent last month, another post-war record.

Department analysts said the overall jobless rate last month approached the 9 percent high in May 1975, toward the end of a months-long recession brought on by the Arab oil embargo.

If unemployment exceeds 9 percent — as many private economists predict it will this year — it will reach the highest level since the government began keeping month-to-month figures in the late 1940s.

At the White House, deputy press secretary Larry Speakes noted that the administration had expected a rise in unemployment but added that "we anticipate that at the end of the second quarter, third quarter that our programs will begin to work and that we will see an upturn in the overall economy."

He said the administration has confidence "our programs will work."

In the past, administration officials have said rising unemployment is the price the nation must pay for bringing down double-digit inflation.

Since July, the department said, more than 2 million Americans have been thrown out of work and the unemployment rate has shot up almost 2 full percentage points.

The highest post-World War II unemployment, before monthly figures were compiled, was a 9.7 percent jobless rate in 1941, which eased substantially during World War II.

The all-time high was the 24.9 percent annual rate of unemployment registered in 1933, during the depths of the Depression.

Adult males traditionally have composed the largest element of the labor force and December's whopping eight-tenths-of-a-percentage point spurt — from 7.2 percent to 8 percent — is a harbinger of further employment hardships in the months ahead.

Black teen-age unemployment improved slightly last month, however, falling to 42.2 percent from November's record 45.7 percent.

"Persons who lost their jobs as a result of layoff or permanent separation accounted for all of the December increase in unemployment," the department said. A large part of the layoffs occurred in the durable goods industries, particularly automobile manufacturing.

The department said there was little change in the

Five Injured In Train Derailment

By KATHY HORAK
Associated Press Writer

THERMAL, Calif. (AP) — A mile-long freight train carrying radioactive americium derailed in a sparsely populated area, injuring five people who had hopped rides, officials said today.

There was no danger "as far as we can tell," from the derailment of 14 of the freight's 55 cars, said Kim Wong, health physicist for the California Occupational Safety and Health Administration.

Authorities initially reported that the train was carrying uranium and that four people were killed.

Wong said the train's manifest listed uranium. However, Southern Pacific officials at the scene said the only radioactive material was americium, contained in 2½-inch steel capsules used in oil drilling operations, and the company shipping the material, Schlumberger Inc. of Houston, said it only transports americium.

The five injured were all described as Mexican nationals, said Lynne Lugo of Indio Community Hospital. All suffered fractures and cuts, and one was listed in critical condition. Another was listed as very serious and a third as serious; two were not classified.

Tony Adams, a spokesman for Southern Pacific, said the injured were transients who had taken "unauthorized" rides on the train. No members of the train crew were hurt, but a county firefighter suffered a twisted knee, Riverside County fire

Youngster Develops Disease, Officials Close Day-Care Center

PORT ARTHUR, Texas (AP) — Officials closed a day-care center after a 4-year-old girl died of what physicians believe to be a highly contagious form of meningitis.

Port Arthur health department officials closed the center Thursday and urged the parents of 78 classmates to have their children vaccinated against the disease.

Staff members at the Sacred Heart Children's World day-care center also were encouraged to take the oral vaccine, along with others who might have come in contact with the infected child.

LaDawn Evans died Wednesday night, seven hours after being admitted to St. Mary's Hospital, officials said. The child was suffering from convulsions, a high fever and cold symptoms, said Carl Clark, city health administrator.

Physicians said the child died of what appeared to be Neisseria meningitis, an infection of the central nervous system.

Clark said health officials had decided to close the school while awaiting final autopsy results.

Dr. Avila Arcala, acting director of the city health department, said physicians had not determined how the child contracted the disease.

Barge Fire Flares Up; Coast Guard Keeps Waterway Closed

GALVESTON, Texas (AP) — An unexpected fire on a grounded barge in Galveston Bay has forced the U.S. Coast Guard to keep the Gulf Intracoastal Waterway closed.

The Coast Guard had decided to try to allow ships and other vessels to travel through the canal for the first time since the barge struck a drawbridge early Sunday and burst into flames, said Lt. Bill McHenry.

Trains began moving across the damaged drawbridge Wednesday, railroad officials said.

Coast Guard officers thought the waterway could be reopened after the fire burned itself out.

But the smoldering vessel flared up again Thursday, and officers decided to wait again "until the barge was more stable," McHenry said. There were no ships passing through the canal when the smoldering barge flared up, he said.

The Coast Guard had allowed the barge and its cargo of 400,000 gallons of toxic and corrosive chemical acrylonitrile to burn in hopes that none of the toxic chemicals aboard will spill into the bay.

Research Center Receives $5.2 Million Gift

KINGSVILLE, Texas (AP) — Texas A&I has received the second installment of a two-year $5.2 million grant for wildlife research from the Caesar Kleberg Foundation for Wildlife Conservation, school officials say. The $3.3 million gift is intended to continue the work being done at the Caesar Kleberg Wildlife Research Institute and the Kleberg Hall of Natural History, both on the school's campus, said Dr. Bill Franklin, president of A&I.

The institute and natural history center were established last year through a $1.9 million gift from the Kleberg foundation, Franklin said Thursday.

Two Injured In School Bus Wreck

AMARILLO, Texas (AP) — Two Amarillo men were critically injured and an 8-year-old boy suffered minor injuries after a pickup truck collided with a schoolbus at an intersection in this Panhandle city, police said.

The driver of the pickup, James E. Eves, 46, and his passenger, Douglas B. Shively, 37, were reported in critical condition after the accident Thursday afternoon, officials said.

The boy, Jorge Ruiz, was treated for cuts and bruises at an Amarillo hospital and later released, police said.

The bus driver and seven other children on the bus were not injured, officials said. The children were on their way home from an elementary school, police said.

Glomp Attacks Government Actions

By The Associated Press

Poland's Roman Catholic primate attacked some of the government's actions under martial law in a public sermon, and the Communist military regime tried to prevent widespread dissemination of his criticisms at home and abroad.

Uncensored reports from Warsaw said Archbishop Jozef Glomp, spiritual leader of Poland's 32 million Catholics, charged that more and more workers were being required to renounce their membership in the Solidarity labor federation to keep their jobs.

"Extraction of such declarations is unethical. There is a clear principle, also respected by our civil code, that declarations made under coercion are not valid," he told 3,000 people jammed into St. Peter's Cathedral in Warsaw for Mass Wednesday evening.

The archbishop also criticized conditions for those interned under martial law and expressed regret at the growing division of Polish society into "authorities which order and coerce, and subjects who are silent and who hate."

But he stressed that "revenge is the worst way of righting wrongs" and repeated his previous call to avoid bloodshed. "It is more heroic sometimes to live for the motherland than to die for it," he said, quoting his predecessor, the late Cardinal Stefan Wyszynski.

Deputy Minister Boguslaw Stachura told two parliamentary committees 5,906 people had been interned under martial law, but 839 were released for "humanitarian reasons," leaving 5,067 still in detention camps around the country, Radio Warsaw reported.

Western journalists' reports of the archbishop's sermon were stopped by the censors, and there was no mention of the archbishop's remarks by the official media. But it was assumed that his words would be spread across Poland speedily by word of mouth and by clandestine leaflets circulated by Solidarity activists still at large.

Another uncensored account said Western observers reported the withdrawal of about half of the estimated 40,000 troops deployed around Warsaw after martial law was proclaimed Dec. 13.

This was interpreted as a sign of growing government confidence that order had been restored. But the government itself indicated that large-scale worker boycotts around the country were hampering production already reduced by shortages of raw materials, equipment and spare parts and severe winter weather.

Radio Warsaw reported that troops were working in factories and mines and on farms and "protecting" transportation around the country.

Wladyslaw Baka, the economic reform chief, said some enterprises would be forced to close because of "a grave deficit of raw and other materials as well as energy sources," another broadcast said.

The government radio also suggested food shortages were growing more acute, and PAP, the official news agency, said blizzards in northern Poland the north brought down power lines, closed the Baltic ports and disrupted rail service.

Elsewhere, the Czechoslovak news agency CTK reported that 25,000 Soviet, Hungarian and Czechoslovak troops would conduct joint military maneuvers Jan. 25-30 in western Czechoslovakia, not far from the Polish border.

Pickets Posted At Texaco, American Petrofina Plants

PORT ARTHUR, Texas (AP) — About 4,000 Oil Chemical and Atomic Workers union members at the nation's largest Texaco plant and another 500 at the American Petrofina Co.

refinery here ignored an international union agreement and went on strike today.

Union officials of Local 4-23 in Port Arthur, which represents about 3,000 of the plants 5,000 employees, said about the workers at the Texaco refinery struck after company officials refused to extend their contract and talks broke down.

Negotiators met for an hour Thursday afternoon but talks reached an impasse over pension rights, union spokesman R.C. Graffagnino said.

Charles Rentz, a Texaco spokesman agreed, saying pensions were the main point of contention.

"This issue is so important, the company could not consider continuing a labor agreement subject to any further such misrepresentation (of pension rights)," Rentz said. Operations at the Texaco plant would continue "as usual," despite the strike, with supervisory and technical personnel working in three shifts around the clock, Rentz said.

National union leaders, seeking to end a two-month stalemate over contracts for 55,000 oil refinery workers, agreed in Denver Thursday to extend their strike deadline and softened their stand on key contract demands.

James Saxon, spokesman for the OCAW local, had said earlier the picket line would be established early today "unless something drastic happens."

"We proposed the (contract) extension to the company and they refused," Saxon said. "They refused to extend the contract, as requested (by union leaders)."

Union president Robert Goss said contracts covering OCAW-represented workers at about 400 plants owned by 98 oil companies were to expire at midnight Thursday and lack of progress at the bargaining table created "an automatic strike situation."

Texaco officials refused union demands and local OCAW negotiators walked away from the bargaining table Thursday afternoon. He said local union representatives and company officials were working out an "orderly shutdown" late Thursday night, Saxon said.

Union leaders in Denver who had requested the extension were "disappointed" when they heard of Texaco's refusal, Saxon said.

The Justice Department's disclosure on Dec. 31 that it was seeking a settlement represented a sharp change from the department's position immediately after President Reagan took office a year ago.

The department had abandoned previous negotiations begun by the Carter administration, but officials in the departments of Commerce and Defense reportedly urged Reagan to resume negotiations.

Cummings, who in an interview said he worked as a disc jockey for a company that provides entertainment at Lackland Air Force Base, said he knew Ms. Johnson from having been a customer at the bank.

"I wasn't frightened," he said of his reaction during the ordeal. "I was real calm. I told her 'Stay calm, we'll get through this.'"

Shortly after Cummings was released and talked to reporters, police ushered Ms. Jackson out a back door. Police Chief Marion Talbert said that she asked that she not be interviewed by the press, that she just wanted to go home.

"She's relatively calm," Talbert said. "She's probably in shock."

Desegregation Efforts Succeeding

BUFFALO, N.Y. (AP) — When court-ordered desegregation began here five years ago, black parents were highly critical of the public schools and white parents threatened to send their children to private or suburban schools.

Today, city and education officials say desegregation has led to an improvement in public schools, including a diversity of educational programs and higher test scores for students.

"Schools in Buffalo are better than they were in 1976, no doubt about it," said Daniel Acker, president of the local chapter of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People.

Since 1976, Buffalo has been undertaking step-by-step desegregation of its schools, largely through voluntary busing and "magnet" schools, which stress special curricula such as science and the performing arts to attract students from all parts of the city.

"We have a waiting list of suburban children wanting to go to Buffalo schools," Acker said. "I never expected that."

With little turmoil or fanfare, this industrial city of 357,000, where almost 50 percent of the 48,000 public school students are black, has succeeded where other metropolitan areas have failed, education officials said.

"Buffalo is a model," said James Barnes, director of the National Educational Strategic Center in Hartford, Conn., which, on grants from the Ford Foundation, has monitored desegregation in an original agreement with AT&T in 1956. The government and the company agreed to transfer jurisdiction of the 25-year-old agreement to federal court in Washington, where an antitrust trial had been scheduled to resume next week.

In advance of the announcement, trading in the stock of AT&T and related companies was halted on the New York Stock Exchange.

Trading was also halted in the stock of International Business Machines Corp., the target of the federal government's other major pending antitrust case, immediately prompting speculation among analysts that a development in that case might be imminent.

IBM spokesmen declined comment and the exchange said it did not know the nature of the pending development. Sources at the company said a major development was imminent.

In New York, the Justice Department and IBM were granted a hearing at 4 p.m. today before U.S. District Judge David Edelstein, who was hearing the case. With that announcement, speculation heightened even further that there was also a major development in the IBM case.

The AT&T announcement was made at a noon news conference called by Assistant Attorney General William Baxter, in charge of the department's anti-trust division, and AT&T Chairman Charles Brown.

The administration disclosed on Dec. 31 that it was negotiating a settlement with Bell Telephone.

A major antitrust suit to break up the Bell System was filed by the Ford administration in November 1974, and the trial in the case, in recess over the Christmas-New Year's holiday, had been due truck and shout demands to police, including that police officers come up to the truck, police said. After they refused, he started walking toward busy Loop 410 with a gun pointed at the secretary's head, police said.

As he walked, he was trailed by a dozen police officers and FBI agents 10 to 15 feet behind. When an FBI sharpshooter had a chance to shoot the robber without hurting his hostage, he felled him with one shot to the head, said police Capt. James Robinson.

"He stated he would blow up the whole block unless he was allowed to leave. He did not request a vehicle, just said he wanted to get out of 'here,'" Robinson said.

Robinson said the man claimed to have dynamite strapped around his chest but in fact had a pillow made to look like he had dynamite.

Police recovered a briefcase full of cash. Authorities said the robber collected money at the bank by going from teller to teller with the bank manager held at gunpoint.

Cummings said that as he was approaching the bank, the robber was coming out, with a cocked pistol in his right hand and his left arm holding Ms. Jackson.

"Young man, let's go for a ride," Cummings quoted the robber as telling him.

"Where do we go?" he responded.

Cummings said that after ordering him to drive through a residential area, and, after two police cars were spotted, the man abruptly told him to get out of the car. "He said, 'Stop the truck. You've got to go do something. Negotiate. Tell them to get back or I'll kill both of you.'"

"I turned off the ignition, yanked out the keys and got out. I started walking real slow toward the officers, threw down the keys and said, 'I'm a hostage.'"

Police then arrested him, at first not knowing whether he was a suspect or a hostage. Cummings said he remained in handcuffs until Ms. Jackson arrived at the police station and confirmed his story.

"I was a suspect until I came here," he said. "Everybody was real polite. They were just doing their jobs."

Unemployment is up 1.4 percentage points from the 7.4 percent level of last July. The 8.4 percent unemployment rate of November was the highest since October 1975, when the economy was beginning to recover from its worst recession since the Great Depression.

Administration officials have said rising unemployment is the price the nation must pay for bringing down double-digit inflation.

Joel Popkin, a former assistant commissioner of the Bureau of Labor Statistics who now heads an economic consulting firm here, predicts unemployment might reach or exceed the post-World War II high of 9 percent, which was registered in May 1975, near the end of a recession brought on in large part by the Arab oil embargo.

"We don't see the con-

number of unemployed people "who voluntarily left their last jobs" or entered the labor force in search of work.

High unemployment is likely to plague the nation for several months regardless of whether the economy rallies from the current recession, private economists say.

These economists predict there will be little immediate relief from a jobless rate in the range of 8.5 percent to 9 percent of the work force, noting that restoration of strength in the labor market historically has trailed by several months the end of a recession.

In its upcoming economic forecast to accompany the proposed fiscal 1983 budget, the Reagan administration is expected to project an unemployment rate averaging 8.5 percent in 1982. That would be well above the recession highs of 1980.

Administration officials ventured no predictions for December's unemployment figures, which were being released today by the Labor Department.

The department's Employment and Training Administration reported Thursday that in the week ending Dec. 26, there were 711,500 initial claims for unemployment benefits, an increase of 61,500 from the previous week and 158,700 more than a year ago at the same time.

Treasury Secretary Donald Regan has said he expects the jobless rate to peak in January, although he mentioned no figure.

Unemployment soared from 8 percent to 8.4 percent in November, with more than 9 million people out of work. The jobless rate had spurted from 7.5 percent to 8 percent the month before.

Clements Hits Tax Policy

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Governor Bill Clements said "I told you so" when Texas Employment Commission officials carp about budget cuts, but it was the TEC's turn when Clements complained about the state's rate of return on federal unemployment taxes.

TEC officials bemoaning a 30 percent cut in their funding have gotten no sympathy from Clements, who said he told them a year ago they could expect drastic reductions. Clements says he favors the cuts.

But at his weekly news conference Thursday, Clements said he plans to ask government officials in Washington Monday why Texas employers have seen no drop in their federal unemployment tax obligations to correspond with the funding reductions.

Last year, 60 cents was redistributed back to Texas out of each dollar paid into the federal unemployment tax fund by Texas employers, Clements said. This year that figure will drop to 35 cents on the dollar, he said.

"Where is that other 65 cents going?" Clements asked. "Are we expected to subsidize Michigan or Massachusetts?"

But TEC Public Information Director Jerry Biscoe said the problem is an old one.

"Some people have just now realized what we've been saying for years," he said. "A less than 50 percent return is nothing new."

"It's very frustrating for us to contend with these problems for years and then have someone suddenly discover them," he said. "No one takes the time to be concerned until the situation is magnified."

Police Investigate Minor Wreck

Hereford police investigated a minor wreck at East Second and Lawton and received a report of a harassing phone call Thursday.

Windbreak Trees Still Available From State

LUBBOCK - Some species have been sold out, but it is not too late for West Texans to purchase several varieties of windbreak tree seedlings from the Texas Forest Service.

The Service's West Texas Nursery in Lubbock still has two varieties of conifers and five types of hardwood seedlings available for the 1982-83 planting season, which ends in late March.

According to Bob Fewin, silviculturist at Lubbock, the conifer species still available are Austrian pine and ponderosa pine. These 6 to 12-inch pine seedlings are grown in individual dual cells, 30 cells to the Styrofoam container. A minimum order is 30, priced at $30 per container (plus sales tax). They are sold by the container, or in multiples of 30. The containers are 12 inches wide by 14 inches long, by 8 inches deep, and several containers can be easily transported in the back seat of a car or pickup cab.

The hardwood seedling species still available include: green ash, honeylocust, bur oak, mulberry and Russian olive. The hardwoods are sold in minimum lots of 100 for $20 (plus sales tax and shipping costs).

The West Texas Nursery grows windbreak seedlings for a 60-county High Plains and Panhandle area, north of Big Spring and west of Wichita Falls.

Fewin said the hardwoods may be shipped, but the containers in which the conifer seedlings are grown are not designed for shipping and these should be picked up at one of three distribution points.

Planters in a 20-county Panhandle area can pick up their orders in Amarillo on March 9. On March 11, residents of a 16-county South Plains area can pick up their seedlings in Big Spring, and on March 16, seedlings will be distributed in Lubbock to resident applicants from the 24 counties surrounding Lubbock.

The hardwood species are bare root seedlings, Fewin said, and can be shipped by normal freight methods.

West Texans interested in planting trees for homestead, field, feedlot or wildlife windbreaks, should write for seedling applications: West Texas Nursery, Texas Forest Service, Rt. 3, Box 216, Lubbock, Tx. 79401, or call (806) 746-5801.

Windbreak planters may not use these seedlings for landscaping or ornamental purposes.

Fewin said the seedlings would be sold on a first-come basis until the end of the current planting season, or until the supply is exhausted.

Oklahoma Prisoners Transferred

MCALISTER, Okla. (AP) - There "will probably be" additional transfers of state prison inmates to federal prisons in a continuing attempt to alleviate overcrowding, Oklahoma State Penitentiary Warden Al Murphy says.

Overcrowding prompted officials to transfer 18 "high risk" inmates - six of them women - to federal prisons, Murphy said Thursday.

Murphy said three inmates were moved by a Florida air security firm and the rest were transferred by ground transportation to facilities in other states.

The transfer began Sunday and was completed Thursday.

Ann Landers

Got Smart Too Late

DEAR ANN LANDERS: The letter signed "It Wasn't Worth It" (about The Other Woman) really hit me where I live. I am a married man who cheated. I read that column...every word of it, three times. How true, and how painful.

I became involved with a wonderful young lady five years ago. Foolishly, I failed to break off the affair in time. Today we have a two-year-old son, and so does my wife.

Apart from the financial strain, the agony of loving two little boys, seeing them grow up without knowing each other, is unbearable. When I'm with one of my families, I yearn for the other. It's hell.

My advice to those daring machos out there is to stay home. The excitement of an affair isn't worth the price if something goes wrong. -Too Late Smart

DEAR TOO LATE: I can add nothing to your advice, but my thanks for having written it.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I am a 31-year-old male and have been compulsively washing my hands for two years. I have been to two therapists and spent over a thousand dollars, hoping for a cure.

One therapist told me to keep washing and not to try and stop. So what did I need him for? In fact, I found myself washing more after I went into therapy than before. So little seems to be known about this compulsion, I suspect the therapists don't know what to do about it.

My family can't understand it, and my co-workers think I'm strange. Although I know I am not alone I feel alienated from everyone. I see myself cursed with this affliction forever, and I'm scared.

Is there any real help anywhere? I hate to think I'm going to be a slave to this miserable curse forever. -Soap And Water, Water And Soap

DEAR SOAP: I wish that I could lead you to a cure, but I can't. All my psychiatric consultants say an obsessive compulsion is extremely difficult to cure, and your best bet is to stay in therapy. The alternative is giving up - and we both know that's not a good approach to solving any problem. So hang in there, and good luck.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I am a 20-year-old college student living with my parents. Five years ago my older sister was found in a compromising position with her boyfriend. My mother, feeling angry and punitive, made it impossible for my sister to remain at home. The unpleasant terms on which she left were never resolved.

I speak to my sister often but have promised to keep our conversations confidential. Mother knows of these conversations and floods me with questions. If I refuse to answer, or, heaven forbid, show any support for my sister, she becomes hysterical.

Frankly, I am fed up. I should not be placed in this position. It would be useless to suggest that my sister speak to mother herself because her efforts in the past have proven futile. Any suggestion? -Hot Spot In The Middle

DEAR HOT SPOT: Talk to your mother in a no-nonsense manner. Sample dialogue: "I know you are angry with 'Lucille,' but what happened between you two has nothing to do with me. I intend to continue to talk to my sister and I shall never betray her confidence, so please stop pumping me."

Leg Severed By Train Reattached

HOUSTON (AP) - A boy whose severed right leg and left foot were reattached during a 19-hour operation has a "reasonable chance" of regaining the use of his injured limbs, surgeons say.

Eleven-year-old Kirk Sapp, who was run over by a train while playing with his school chums, rested at Hermann Hospital in stable condition, said Dr. John Burns, who directed the nine-member surgical team.

The youngster and several friends in his Central Texas hometown of Hearne were climbing across the coupling of two box cars Wednesday afternoon when the accident happened.

Kirk dropped his school books and as he tried to reach for them, the train began to move and the boy slipped under the wheels.

Mulligan's Stew

Ski Transylvania

By HUGH A. MULLIGAN
AP Special Correspondent

RIDGEFIELD, Conn. (AP) - Count Dracula has taken up skiing of all things in communist Transylvania.

At first, I couldn't believe it. The whole absurd idea sounded like a TV remake of an old Bela Lugosi horror film. But there was the count on skis in The New York Times sports section flapping his vampire cape on behalf of the Romanian National Tourist office. The advertising copy urged, "Ski Transylvania...$649 Complete."

The last time I was in Transylvania, years ago, the debonaire blood sucker was regarded by the communist bosses as a decadent Western invention. Dracula films and books were banned in Romania.

The party, however, had made a revolutionary hero out of Vlad the Impaler, the 15th century direct descendant of Atilla the Hun, who was the inspiration for Dublin novelist Bram Stoker's Dracula.

Revisionists saluted Vlad with a plaque on the house where he was born in Sighisoara, Transylvania, as a "Patriot, Defender of Freedom." He was cited as an inspiration to Marxist youth for repulsing imperialist invaders. No mention of his thirst for young maidens' jugulars. Party propagandists were quite vehement on that.

Well, apparently, old Vlad the Impaler, alias Count Dracula, has gone to rectification school and been permitted to don his crimson-lined cape again in the interests of promoting ski tourism.

The ad for the government owned and run Poiana Brasav Resort talks about "apres ski: disco, nightclubs and torch-lit excursions."

Just a spine-tingling minute, there. Torch-lit excursions? Where? To a nearby graveyard? A stake-driving ceremony? A coffin klotch?

When I visited the Brasav resort just before the ski season began, the government-run gift shops had no Dracula T-shirts on sale, but the image makers may already have been at work rectifying his legend.

Don't worry if you don't see yourself in the mirror when you go to shave or put on your makeup next morning. Probably just a trick of the light or a power outage.

But be sure to pack a few cloves of garlic and a tiny crucifix along with your ski wax and Doctor Dentons before accepting the Comrade Count's invitation to join him on the slopes of Transylvania.

Herd Girls Stomp Portales, 58-23

By JERI CURTIS
Staff Writer

Near the end of the first quarter of the Hereford-Portales girls varsity game last night, one of the officials said, "if Dandy Don Meredith was here he'd already be singing. Turn out the lights..."

The first quarter ended with the Herd leading 20-2.

After gaining the opening tip, the Rams' Shawna Jenkins promptly dribbled to the basket to open scoring.

Then the Herd's Cathy Lane got the ball and answered with one from the right side and followed with two more, assisted by Joyce High and Deborah Rogers.

The Herd did not let the Rams get past the half court line for three minutes straight, despite several rebounds which only became Ram turnovers.

Amy Schumacher stole to assist Lori Albracht, then Albracht stole to assist Lane in another side right shot at 3:58 left in the first quarter.

Portales had the ball about 20 seconds on their end until it was knocked out and the Herd regained possession.

Lane and Stephanie Foster each hit to get the Herd to 20.

The second quarter started with the same pace. Lane hit two in a row from the left side, but the Rams' Marla Tollett followed suit and also received a foul from High, adding a free shot to the tally. Foster hit from the front and Stacie Rhodes put in one from the line off a foul from Tollett. The Rams lost a dribble to Foster, who assisted High in another basket.

After a layup from Jenkins, Lane scored from the side and later, a foul gave the Rams a point from Terri Heflin. In turn, Schumacher got one from the line.

Walterscheid and Schumacher got buckets after two free shots by Tollett to end the half 36-10.

The Herd only allowed the Rams four baskets in the third quarter, but piled 12 more on the healthy Hereford lead to end that quarter, 50-18.

Tonja Chandler, assisted by Sharon Gamble, moved Portales to 20 with the last Ram basket of the game with 6:49 left.

Walterscheid made two free shots to start the Herd again and Hereford climbed to 58. Robbie Robinson then sank a free shot and ended the scoring at 58-23.

Hereford's leading scorers were Lane with 18 and High with 14.

Shawna Jenkins was the top Ram with eight points, followed by Tollett with seven.

The Hereford junior varsity also defeated Portales 59-22. Top Hereford scorers were Amy Noyes with 17 and Laura Kosub with 14, followed by Angela Richburg and Teresa Phipps with eight each.

Big Ten Warfare Begins

Conference Play Bumps Off Top Bosses

By JOHN NELSON AP
Sports Writer

College basketball's version of gangland warfare — the Big Ten Conference — is underway, and some of the top bosses already have been bumped off.

The Minnesota Gophers, ranked sixth nationally, and defending NCAA champion Indiana were the first two victims as all 10 teams played their conference openers Thursday night.

Ohio State won its seventh in a row, beating the Gophers 49-47, and Michigan State upended Indiana 65-58. In the other openers in the traditionally power-bent Big Ten, No. 7 Iowa downed Purdue 62-42, Illinois beat Northwestern 60-50 and Wisconsin defeated Michigan 65-63.

In games involving ranked teams, No. 12 Louisville defeated St. Louis 89-53, and No. 18 Idaho beat Nev-Reno 72-66 in two overtimes.

Ohio State improved its record to 10-3 by beating Minnesota, which lost its second game in 10. Clark Kellogg, Ohio State's 6-foot-7 junior forward, provided the winning points when he hit a basket with 2:38 to play, and the Buckeyes held Minnesota scoreless after that.

Minnesota's 7-3 center, Randy Breuer, missed a short jumper with 12 seconds left that could have put the Gophers on top.

Kellogg wound up with 14 points, and Tony Campbell had 18 for Ohio State. Breuer had 16 for Minnesota but only four in the second half.

"Right now I think we can finish in the top three," Kellogg said of the conference race, "but our goal is to win the thing. The championship is not out of our reach."

Breuer, who took Minnesota's final four shots, all misses, said Ohio State was greatly improved from last year, when the highly regarded Buckeyes slipped to 14-13.

"This year they have a lot of patience. The play their roles well. Last year they took a lot of quick shots," Breuer said.

Indiana lost its third in a row. Michigan State's Kevin Smith set a conference mark for free throw shooting, hitting 19 of 19 and a career-high 29 points. Indiana, 6-4, dropped from the national rankings last week after losing to Villanova and Kansas in the ECAC Holiday Festival.

Michael Payne and Mark Gannon led a second-half burst that carried Iowa over Purdue as the Hawkeyes avoided the Big Ten gaff to go 9-1. The pair combined for 13 points in the first nine minutes after intermission, when the score was tied 26-26, and the Iowa defense held Purdue to just 14 points in the second half.

Payne finished with 16 points, and Kenny Arnold topped the Hawkeyes with 18. Russell Cross had 14 for Purdue.

Perry Range and Craig Tucker scored 18 points apiece in Illinois' victory over Northwestern. Freshman Scott Roth's 20-footer at the jumper gave Wisconsin its victory over Michigan.

The Top Twenty
Derek Smith scored 18 points to lead a balanced Louisville offense past St. Louis in the Billikens' first Metro Conference contest. St. Louis, which joined the Metro this season after leaving the Missouri Valley, fell behind 18-1 in the opening six minutes.

Louisville, 3-0 in the Metro and 9-2 overall, also got 12 points each from Lancaster Gordon, Milt Wagner and Charles Jones. LaTodd Johnson paced St. Louis with 13.

Idaho forward Gordie Herbert scored six points in the second overtime period to lift the Vandals over Nevada-Reno in the Big Sky Conference opener for both clubs. The game was tied at 59 at the end of regulation and 63 at the end of the first overtime.

In the second overtime, Herbert, who finished with a team-leading 18 points, scored two baskets and two free throws to preserve undefeated Idaho's 12-game winning streak.

Unranked Teams
In a matchup of last season's Western Athletic conference co-champions, Wyoming prevailed, 75-49, over Utah as Cowboys forward Bill Garnett scored 26 points and grabbed 15 rebounds. Eddie Hughes scored 15 points, and Colorado State upset Brigham Young 50-40 in another WAC contest.

In the Southern Conference, Charles Jones grabbed an offensive rebound and scored with two seconds left to give Marshall a 67-65 victory over Davidson. John Fitch hit two free throws with four seconds left to preserve Appalachian State's 64-61 victory over Furman.

Daryl Stovall and Michael Johnson each scored 18 points as Creighton won only its fourth game in 11 for Coach Willis Reed, beating Southern Illinois 77-59 in the Missouri Valley Conference.

Clemson's Ford Modest About Coach of Year

By HERSCHEL NISSENSON
AP Sports Writer

HOUSTON (AP) — "When you're winning, you don't need head football coaches," Clemson's Danny Ford said Thursday...minutes after being named major college Coach of the Year.

The 33-year-old Ford, whom Alabama Coach Bear Bryant has described as "a heck of a leader," borrowed a page from his former coach's book and poornmouthed his own accomplishments in leading Clemson to its first national college football championship with a 12-0 record, the school's best ever.

"When you do the best job as a coach, is not always when you have a good year," Ford said. "When you've got momentum going your way, it's not very hard to coach and they don't need you. It's like a child making good grades — everything's going your way and life is easy. But when things are not going well — to pull a team out of a losing skid is the mark of a good coach. I think I contributed more in past years."

In three years under Ford, Clemson's records have been 8-4, 6-5 and 12-0, a sequence which Ford described as "one year was easy, one year was hard, and this year was not too bad."

While Ford was being voted Kodak Coach of the Year by some 2,400 members of the American Football Coaches Association, Vito Ragazzo of Shippensburg (Pa.) State won out in the race for College Division Coach of the Year. Ragazzo, 54, coached Shippensburg to a 12-1 record, its best ever, and the Red Raiders reached the semifinals of the NCAA Division II playoffs.

Ford said Clemson, unranked until the third week of the season, "proved a lot of people wrong. We had so many doubters all year. At the start of the season, I don't think anyone picked Clemson to go undefeated, beat Nebraska (22-15 in the Orange Bowl) and be No. 1 because we didn't have the reputation."

"I think the Nebraska game proved a lot to people. I've heard people here (the AFCA's annual convention) say 'You guys really get after people.' I wouldn't feel bad about playing anybody right now, but early in the year I didn't want to play anybody. I was scared to death."

"People enjoyed playing Clemson last year," he said, "because they could whip us and kick us in the teeth. We didn't act like Clemson, we didn't hit like Clemson, we didn't do a lot of things like Clemson."

Ford and Ragazzo were honored Thursday night at the AFCA's annual banquet sponsored by the Eastman Kodak Co.

Ford won out over eight other Division I-A and I-AA District winners. They were Carmen Cozza of Yale, Bill Russo of Lafayette, Bobby Collins of Southern Mississippi, Hayden Fry of Iowa, Chuck Shelton of Drake, Fred Akers of Texas, Dave Kragthorpe of Idaho State and Jim Walden of Washington State.

Besides Ragazzo, the College Division nominees were Sam Sanders of Alfred, Willard Bailey of Virginia Union, Jerry Tolley of Elon, Bobby Pate of West Georgia, Mike Kelly of Dayton, Ron Randleman of Pittsburg (Kan.) State, Jim Wacker of Southwest Texas State, Fred Bleil of New Mexico Highlands and Ron Simonson of Puget Sound.

Herd Hosts Caprock Tonight

The Hereford Whitefaces host Caprock tonight at the La Plata gym, seeking their fourth win of the season. The Herd is improving with age, and battled the Borger Bulldogs well last Tuesday.

Action began this afternoon with the HHS sophs playing Canyon at 4 p.m. The junior varsity faces Caprock at 6 p.m. with the varsity match to immediately follow.

Scheduled television programming in the United States started April 30, 1939, with a telecast of President Franklin D. Roosevelt opening the World's Fair. Within three months, 10 hours of television fare a day were being beamed from the tower at New York's Radio City Music Hall to TV sets as far as 150 miles away.

Taylor Top AP Player

NEW YORK (AP) — Linebacker Lawrence Taylor of the New York Giants today became the first rookie ever to be named The Associated Press Defensive Player of the Year in the National Football League.

The honor comes just 24 hours after the 6-foot-3, 237-pounder from North Carolina was made the overwhelming choice as the NFL Defensive Rookie of the Year for the 1981 season. Earlier this week he was named to The AP All-Pro team.

Taylor was named on 22 of 84 ballots cast by a nationwide panel of sports writers and broadcasters while defensive end Joe Klecko of the New York Jets was named on 20.

Tackle Randy White of Dallas and end Mark Gastineau of the Jets tied for third with 10 votes apiece and end Fred Dean, San Francisco's pass-rushing specialist, received nine. Another rookie, 49ers cornerback Ronnie Lott, received six votes, followed by four for linebacker Jack Lambert of Pittsburgh and three for end Ed "Too Tall" Jones of Dallas.

A few days before the next-to-last weekend of the regular season, when St. Louis was preparing to play the Giants, someone asked Jim Hanifan, the Cardinals' coach, if he thought Taylor was a shoo-in as the defensive rookie of the year.

"Rookie?" Hanifan replied, almost incredulously. "He's the defensive player of the year!" He was right.

Many rookies, particularly those on defense where a mistake can mean a touchdown for the other team, worry about playing up to the expectations of the veterans, of not embarrassing themselves. Taylor reversed that process.

"He's trying so hard and doing so many things that we don't want to let him down," veteran defensive end George Martin said of Taylor, the Giants' No. 1 draft pick (No. 2 overall).

The brief squabbles by teammates over the size of Taylor's contract (worth about $1 million over three years) ended when they got a look at him during a scrimmage a couple of days into training camp. The veterans, skeptical because of all the pre-camp publicity, sat along the sidelines and watched Taylor's debut. Four sacks, three other behind-the-line tackles, a forced fumble and a fumble recovery later, he had his own cheering section.

Observers have said Taylor may be the first rookie on defense since Chicago Bears' Hall of Fame linebacker Dick Butkus for whom offenses have been changed away from what teams want to do just to deal with his presence.

In the playoff victory over Philadelphia — the Giants' first playoff game in 18 years — the Eagles assigned two-tight ends to block him. And Philadelphia quarterback Ron Jaworski admitted part of the reason he fumbled once was because he "looked across the line and saw Taylor grinning at me."

As George Young, the general manager of the Giants, put it: "He creates anxiety before the snap of the ball."

White Detests Playing In Mud

DALLAS (AP) — One of Dallas quarterback Danny White's strongest features is dodging the enemy pass rush. He just hopes that somehow Candlestick Park will dry out before Sunday's National Conference championship game against the San Francisco 49ers so his mobility won't be negated.

"I just don't like playing in the mud," said White. "I've played in it...I just like a fast track."

"Your first two steps are very important getting away from the pass rush. The mud keeps you from being effective. All of sudden the defensive linemen look like they have arms eight feet long."

White said former teammate and defensive tackle Larry Cole used to like playing in grass and mud. His theory was "it makes everybody as slow as me."

Handling the ball can be a problem, White said, but not a major one. "They change balls every down trying to keep a dry one in there," said White. "You've just got to remember to keep two hands on it all the time."

White said "the field will be just as much trouble for the 49ers as it will for us."

Asked if he thought the 49ers would be distracted by having to practice in Anaheim, offensive tackle Pat Donovan said it would probably help them.

"Philadelphia had to go to Florida to practice for our title game last year and Coach (Tom) Landry said it was advantage for them because they were away from their wives and had no distractions...they could concentrate harder," Donovan said.

Donovan said the Cowboys wouldn't be worried about the field even though they may not get to practice on it before the game.

Rice Coach Thankful Pierce Liked It Warm

By MICHAEL A. LUTZ
AP Sports Writer
HOUSTON (AP) — Rice University basketball Coach Tommy Suits can't be too critical of the sometimes hot and humid Houston weather — it helped bring forward Ricky Pierce to his doorstep. As a result, the Owls are playing like they intend to end their reign as the Southwest Conference doormat. Homesick and tired of the frigid weather in Walla Walla, Wash., Pierce brought his sweat jumper back to Texas and thawed it out at Autry Court on the Rice campus. The Owls have jumped to an 8-5 record this season with Pierce carrying the brunt of the scoring load and hitting from inside and outside with equal ease. "If you've got someone like an Earl Campbell that can gain five yards on every carry, why give the ball to anyone else," Suits said. "We've got other people who can score but until they stop Ricky, why should we do anything different." Pierce demonstrated his versatility earlier this week with a 37-point performance against 14th ranked Houston that ended in a 63-61 loss. "If you zone him, he'll shoot over you and beat you, if you play man, he'll take it to the hole," Suits said. "And if you can't get the ball to him, he'll come out and get it and still take it to the hole." Pierce, among the leading scorers in the nation with a 27.4 average, shot over and drove around and through the Cougar defense, including the defensive efforts of 7-foot Akeem Olajuwon.

Olajuwon made a spectacular block of one of Pierce's jump shots but the next time down court, Pierce faked the jumper and drove to the basket as Olajuwon flailed through the air. "When a tree falls on you once, you learn to go around it the next time," Pierce said. Pierce, who played high school basketball in Garland, couldn't adjust to the weather at Walla Walla Junior College and returned to Texas to help out his mother and allow her to see him play. And how he has played. In 65 games for the Owls, Pierce has been in double figures 62 times. Thirty-seven of those games were 20-plus performances and nine were over 30 points. He's also Rice's leading rebounder with seven or more in 41 of his games. "The first time I saw him play in a pickup game I said he's a pro," Suits said. "He's the best offensive player I've ever been associated with. When I was at Alabama (as an assistant coach) we had six guys drafted. I think he's better than Reggie King and Reggie isn't doing too bad in Kansas City." Pierce is doing nicely in Houston also, staying warm and avoiding falling trees.

Football Archeologist Digs Sports Relics

SYOSSET, N.Y. (AP) — On Sunday, Thomas S. Nikitas, along with millions of other Americans, will flip on his TV set and sit through seven hours of virtually uninterrupted football to learn the identity of the teams in Super Bowl XVI. It's certain Nikitas will be entertained. It's equally sure he won't be — like herds of others — whipped into a wild frenzy by the heroics of the modern pros, from churning Tony Dorsett to rifling quarterbacks Ken Anderson, Joe Montana and Dan Fouts. "If you put them all together, maybe add Too Tall Jones, a placekicker and punter, you might have a package almost as good as Glen Presnell," said Nikitas. Presnell? Presnell? Who's Presnell? "Came out of Nebraska in 1927, was on Walter Camp's All-America Team, played with the Ironton Tanks," said Nikitas. "The best I ever saw." "It's really a shame he has not yet been put in the Pro Football Hall of Fame." Nikitas grew up in Ironton, a coal town on the tip of the Ohio River and as a youngster saw the germ of the National Football League develop in his backyard. Son of a Greek immigrant, he moved East as a young man and continued to pursue his hobby until he retired. He is now 66. His calling card refers to him as "football buff and exhibitor." He has spent most of his life like an archeologist — grubbing around the dusty attics and forgotten closets for memorabilia and relics of a lost game. "It was tough, primitive in some ways, man against man, playing both offense and defense. It was the age of 60-minute iron men and Presnell could do it all." The Ironton Tanks, made up largely of men who fought together in World War I, were part of a rugged semipro league, formed in 1919, which also included the Canton Bulldogs, Dayton Triangles, Akron Pros, Columbus Panhandles, and Rochester (N.Y.) Jeffersons. Players, who were hired by merchants in their respective cities, received $50 if they won, $25 if they lost. Presnell was brought to Ironton by Charles "Scrubby" McMahon, who financed the Tanks, and given a job as schoolteacher at $1,500 a year. The 5-foot-11, 190-pound Nebraska star ran the ball, threw passes, kicked off, and played middle safety on defense. The semipro league operated at the time that pro football was just seeing the light of day. The American Professional Football Association was formed in Dayton, Ohio in 1919 from a group of teams from Ohio and upper New York State. A franchise cost $25. An NFL franchise today would go at $20 million and over. George Halas, known as the father of the NFL, started with the Staleys Cornstarch Company team, which he later brought into the NFL as the Chicago Bears. Cleveland, Green Bay, Detroit and other teams subsequently got into the act.

Miller Defending Tucson Golf Title

TUCSON, Ariz. (AP) — Craig Stadler had the lead and Johnny Miller, though five shots back, had his target score in the $300,000 Joe Garagiola-Tucson Open, the opening event on the 10-month pro golf tour. "Before the tournament started, I said I'd be happy to shoot 70," Miller recalled. "Well, that's what I got. Two birdies and two bogeys and lots of 2-putts. I'm pleased with it." "Now," said Miller, still suffering from jet-lag from his 20-plus hour flight from southern Africa, "I'm going to try to shoot about a 66 and get right back into it." Miller, a four-time winner of this event and the defending champion, won the biggest prize in the history of the game, $500,000, for his playoff triumph Sunday in a $1 million tournament in Bophuthatswana, then hurried back to defend his title here. "I'm better than I was yesterday, but I'm still not right," Miller said Thursday. "I figure it (the trip) cost me about three strokes. I should be back to normal about Saturday."

The 44-year-old Geiberger, a former PGA champ who is on the comeback from major surgery last year, said he has taken a club job in Colorado and will play a restricted schedule in the future, skipping the summer months. Tied at 67, two off the lead and 3-under-par on the rain-soaked, 6,797-yard Randolph Municipal course, were Alan Tapie, Leonard Thompson, Scott Simpson and Jay Haas. Bruce Lietzke, a two-time Tucson winner, had a 71. So did PGA champ Larry Nelson. Hale Irwin was in a group at 69. Stadler bogeyed his first hole, got the shot back with a birdie on the next, then started a string of three consecutive birdies with a 30-foot putt on his sixth, which he said he mis-hit, but the ball struck something on the green, went right and fell in the hole. He took a share of the lead with a 15-footer on his 11th and went in front alone on his 16th, again with a 15-footer.

Spurs Burn Warriors, 123-112

OAKLAND (AP) — San Antonio Spurs Coach Stan Albeck seemed to regard a 28-point performance as a slump in George Gervin. So he was relieved when the "Ice Man" got hot — and burned the Golden State Warriors. "Ice really got back in synch tonight," Albeck said Thursday night after Gervin poured in 45 points to lead the Spurs past the Warriors, 123-112, keeping San Antonio 5½ games atop the Midwest Division of the National Basketball Association's Western Conference. "Last night, we played the worst basketball game since I've been coaching the San Antonio Spurs," Albeck said, referring to the Spurs' 130-115 loss to Utah on Wednesday. "Then to come in here and play as well as we did, everyone in that locker room is extremely happy." "Last night at the half, Gervin was only 4 of 18 and he had one of his poorer shooting nights of the year and he still wound up with 28 points," Albeck added. Gervin hit 15 of 28 shots from the floor. And he was a perfect 15 of 15 from the free-throw line. "I just came in here ready to play tonight," Gervin said. "The final stats tell the story."

Despite Gervin, the Warriors closed to within four points, 112-108, with 2:35 left in the game. But Mike Mitchell hit a free throw and followed with a hook shot to put the game beyond reach of the Warriors. Bernard King led the Warriors with 30 points, 12 of them in the final period. The Warriors got some bad news when center Joe Barry Carroll left the game with a hyperextended knee in the fourth quarter. Team doctor Robert Albo said he will examine the knee today, and if there is no swelling, it will be up to Coach Al Attles whether Carroll starts Saturday against the Indiana Pacers. The victory gave San Antonio a 21-11 record. Golden State fell into fifth place, and out of a third place tie in the Pacific Division. The Warriors, 18-14, are six games behind the Los Angeles Lakers. PROFESSIONAL Carpet Cleaning Call 364-2390

Houston Out On Top With Sikma, Malone

SEATTLE (AP) — In a battle of the boards between Seattle SuperSonics center Jack Sikma and Houston's Moses Malone, Sikma came out on top — with some help from teammate James Donaldson. With Donaldson staving off Malone, Sikma switched to power forward and dominated the rebounding in the second half, helping lead the SuperSonics past the Rockets, 116-107, Thursday night. "It opened up a lot more things," said Sikma, who opened the second half at center, but spent the fourth quarter at forward where he pulled down a major portion of his game-high 19 rebounds. "It was a big reason for me getting more boards in the fourth quarter." Sikma also tossed in 25 points. His baseline jumper and free throw with 2 minutes 41 seconds left gave Seattle the lead for good, 106-103. Leading, 111-107, the Sonics grabbed two straight offensive rebounds that hampered Houston's comeback hopes. "We missed a couple times and got the rebounds," Sikma said. "We had the ball for 40-45 seconds. That was exactly what we needed." Seattle guard Gus Williams came up with a couple steals in the closing minute as he and teammate Fred Brown scored the game's final eight points. Each tallied 24 points. Game honors went to Houston guard Calvin Murphy with a season-high 33 points. Murphy, bombing frequently from 20 feet, sank 16 of 21 shots from the field. Seattle hit 57 percent of its shots to Houston's 54, but the Sonics made 16 more free throws than the Rockets. "You saw two of the most exciting sixth men ever to play pro basketball in Freddie and Calvin," said Houston Coach Del Harris, who has seen his team win seven of its past 11 games. "It was a beautiful game." "People got their money's worth tonight." "Seattle was able to capitalize on the mistakes that we made and turned the game around at the end. We don't normally make a lot of mental mistakes, but we did tonight at the most inopportune times." Harris dismissed the Sikma-Malone rebounding duel. Malone leads the league with a 13.3 average while Sikma ranks second at 12.8.

"It's a team effort," Harris said. "I don't care who gets them as long as it's a Houston player. However, I did think Jack showed great determination and had a great time." Malone scored 24 points, but he missed four of six shots in the fourth quarter against the 7-foot-2, 270-pound Donaldson. Seattle Coach Lenny Wilkens said Houston "hit some good shots, but if you play good defense and don't get discouraged, someone will make a mistake. We made them miss a couple at the end and we got the ball out on the break." The Sonics, who have won 11 of their past 12 home games, trail first-place Los Angeles by three games in the Pacific Division race.

Uncorrected heart damage

DEAR DR. LAMB - How completely does coronary bypass surgery restore the heart to normal function after one has had damage from a myocardial infarction? What could cause unexplained pressure in the chest upon lifting and with use of hands and muscles as in hammering nails or turning screws?

I am made to feel this is imaginary. I recently met someone who explained having the same type of pressure on hammering nails. They did not know I experienced this problem so I know I am not an isolated case. How accurate is a stress test as an indication of ability to work after bypass surgery? I had a triple coronary bypass operation. I continue to have chest pressure on lifting 25 pounds of weight and most any physical exertion that requires strength from the hand and arm muscles.

DEAR READER - You have written about a very important point. A bypass operation does not correct the damage that has already occurred in the heart muscle from a previous heart attack. It doesn't even correct the disease in the arteries. It only provides a detour around areas of the arteries that are blocked by disease.

The heart muscle damage is permanent. If it is not too extensive you will be able to return to normal function. But if it is extensive the heart muscle may be too weak to provide proper pumping action.

A stress test is fair as a measure of function. It is almost useless in evaluating the type of exertion you are asking about, lifting. Why? Because most exercise tests evaluate heart function in relation to increasing heart rate common with treadmill walking or bicycling.

Lifting increases the work of the heart by increasing the blood pressure without an associated comparable rise in heart rate. Your doctors should record your electrocardiogram when you are having chest discomfort. Since you have identified this with lifting, that is the stress that should be used in your case.

DEAR DR. LAMB - I am 19 years old and weigh 95 pounds. The only fat part of my body is my face. Is there any exercise I can do to prevent having a double chin?

DEAR READER - You can't spot reduce. There are no exercises that selectively eliminate fat from under the chin. Exercise uses calories and removes fat stores from throughout the body.

I'm suspicious that your face is not as fat as you imagine. You weigh so little that unless you are quite short I suspect you have a distorted image of yourself. In that case you need to see about some professional counseling. Such a distortion is often the basis of anorexia nervosa that induces young girls to starve and damage their health.

Now, if you have inherited the tendency to have fat pads under the chin it will be hard to impossible to eliminate such a pad by diet or exercise or both. When the condition really warrants it the fat pad can be removed easily with a simple surgical procedure. Plastic surgeons who do cosmetic surgery do such operations all the time. Student Plunges To His Death

WACO, Texas (AP) - Chris Rowan says his friend, Paul Bettencourt, told him he had once scaled Lovers' Leap - the same sheer cliff that took Bettencourt's life when he slipped and fell nearly 100 feet.

The Baylor University scholarship student plunged to his death Wednesday night on the rocky Brazos River shore after trying to climb down the treacherous face of the popular cliff, police said.

"We were just driving around with no place to go ... when Paul said he wanted to go climbing at a place he had climbed before," said Rowan, 20, who was with his wife and Bettencourt at the time of the accident.

Rowan said he had once climbed down the steep cliff during the daytime.

"He was 15 or 30 feet in front of me and he said, 'what way do I take?' and I told him, 'that way.' And, well, that's what happened," Rowan recalled.

The 18-year-old ran ahead and "almost right at the start, Bettencourt fell - he fell 80 to 100 feet," said Waco police Detective Ramon Salinas.

After the fall, Rowan climbed down the cliff to help his friend.

"I think I heard him choking. I rolled him over and then I realized how badly he was hurt," Rowan said.

Rowan said he and his wife went for help and then returned to the scene. Rowan again descended the dark cliff to Bettencourt's side, where he found his friend dead.

A Waco Fire Department boat raced to the scene and rescue workers plucked Bettencourt from the rocks. He was pronounced dead on arrival at a local hospital.

Justice of the Peace Joe Johnson said an autopsy showed that Bettencourt had a .19 blood alcohol level - twice the amount cited as legally drunk. The 18-year-old died from massive head injuries, Johnson said.

Baylor University officials said Bettencourt was a freshman business major. An honor student and athlete in high school, Bettencourt was attending college on an academic scholarship.

Police Sgt. Bob Fortune said Bettencourt's friends were "hysterical" after the incident.

Climbing Lovers' Leap is a common pastime in Waco, according to Fortune.

"People try it frequently. This is not the first victim the cliff has claimed," he said. "The cliff is almost sheer. It's a challenge to some people."

By Polly Fisher

DEAR POLLY - The previous owner of our home was a smoker. We do not smoke. Throughout most of the house, the odor is no longer present. However, it does exist in the hall closet. How can I eliminate this odor without it spreading throughout the house? - M.

DEAR M. - As a fairly recent ex-smoker myself, I understand your problem all too well. That persistent odor does seem to linger in enclosed places. A small dish of charcoal placed in the closet should help dispel it. You could also try washing the walls of the closet with a solution of water and baking soda. Or try hanging a fragrant spice pomander in the closet. Repainting the closet should also get rid of those nasty odors for good.

Don't forget that odors tend to saturate and cling to fibers, so any clothes in the closet may also have the odor of cigarette smoke. While you're deodorizing the closet, you'll want to clean or launder the clothes or they will put the odor right back into the closet. - POLLY

DEAR POLLY - Here's my favorite household hint for getting rid of cigarette smoke odors. After washing ash trays, rinse them with white vinegar. Neither my husband nor I smoke, but our friends do. When they are planning to come over, I hide a few dishes of vinegar around the room and this also cuts down on the odor considerably. - CATHERINE

DEAR POLLY - I find that juice cans (particularly from frozen lemonade) are difficult to open with a manual or electric can opener. I simply remove the entire lid by pulling it off with a bottle opener.

To eliminate the possibility of being stranded without my car keys when on a shopping trip (either because of the possible theft of my purse or by mislaying them), I always keep an extra set on a chain around my neck.

Hydrogen peroxide dabbed on an insect bite will relieve the itch. - CONNIE

DEAR POLLY - To fry bacon "flat," prick with a fork all over before frying. This way it will not curl up in the skillet. - MRS. B.

DEAR POLLY - Here are some Pointers for the kids to use at school. Buy a folder or clipboard. Before the school day is over, take as much paper as you need for your homework assignments out of your big looseleaf notebook and put it in the folder. That way you'll have what you need without having to carry that big notebook home.

I love to read. When I bring books home from the library, I write the title of the book in a notebook. That way I won't make the mistake of taking out a book I've already read.

I have a bulletin board at home in my room. I take up a list of my homework assignments on the board while I'm working. Then I won't lose them or forget what I have to do. I also tack up notes of other things I have to do for school, then take them down when I finished them. - JAN

DEAR POLLY - I usually buy sheets when they are on sale, but matching pillow cases cost almost as much as one sheet. I buy a matching twin size flat sheet instead and make it into two sets of pillow cases. That's two sets for the price of one. - D.G.W.

GOD IS WHEREVER YOU MAY GO

Even though your faith and your Church have their regular place in your daily walk of life, do you remember to include them in your vacation plans? Whatever highway you travel, God is there to provide you and your loved ones with His unfailing guidance and protection, if you will only reach out and avail yourself of it. He is everywhere, in the beauty of all the mountains, lakes and valleys of this world which He created, and so are His Churches. You can easily find them anywhere throughout the land. Remember that God never takes a vacation from you; don't take a vacation from Him!

Go where he will, the wise man is at home,
His hearth the earth, his hall the azure dome.
- Ralph Waldo Emerson

"The earth is the Lord's and the fullness thereof."
- Psalms 24:1
