HISD distributes corrected district maps

Hereford Independent School District administrators distributed handbills in a four-block area of west central Hereford Friday night - the eve of a run-off election - after discovering earlier in the week that a map which had been published by the HISD outlining district boundaries did not show those streets to be a part of Voting District 1.

Voters in that district were to vote Saturday in a run-off election between Steve Coneway and Margaret Marshall. The neighborhood omitted in the map included the home of a relative of Sammy Gonzales, a candidate in that district who was defeated in the general election on April 6.

The handbills were printed in English and Spanish for the approximately 40 voters in the neighborhood and included a copy of a corrected map of the district.

Superintendent Harrell Holder said Friday evening that the addresses in the area were included on voter rolls, but a person who relied on the map published by HISD would not have seen his address depicted on the map.

Holder said included among the addresses left off the map are those:

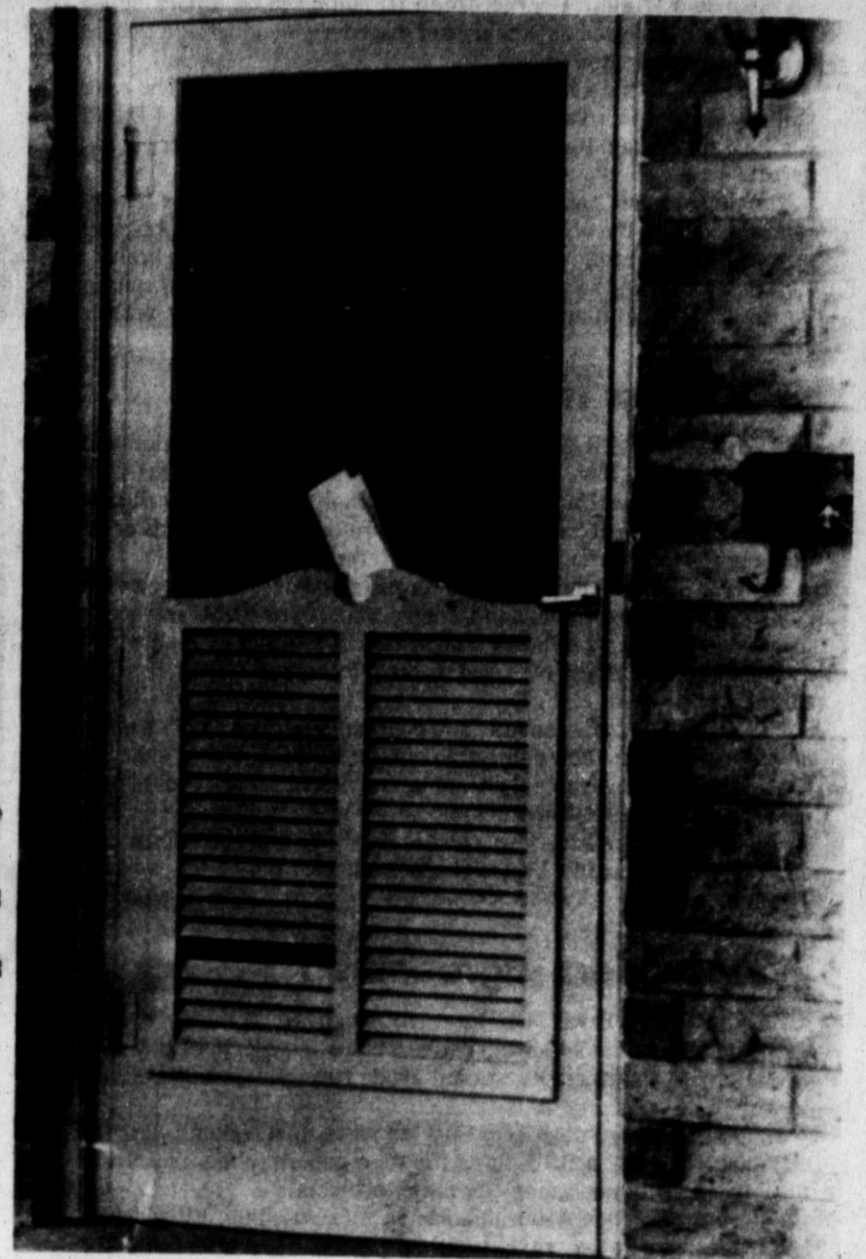

- In the 100 block of Catalpa Street.
- In the south side of the 100 block of Lake.
- In the north side of the 100 block of Kibbe.
- On the east side of Knight between Kibbe and Lake.
- And on the West Side of U.S. 385 between Kibbe and Lake.

Holder said the error was discovered earlier this week when someone went to the school district office to vote absentee, and the office realized that the address was on the voter rolls but not on the map.

He said Friday evening that the media was not contacted by his office concerning the area due to pending legal advisement which was not given until Friday morning.

Holder said the handbills were being distributed as a result of the legal advisement.

The map was originally published under court order after the district agreed last year, in an out of court settlement, to divide the district into five single-member and two at-large voting districts. A suit had been filed claiming that the at-large districting method diluted the Mexican American vote.

Voting Notice

About 40 voters in a two block area were notified with handbills Friday night that their neighborhood should have been included as part of District 1 on a map published by the Hereford Independent School District. A run-off election between Steve Coneway and Margaret Marshall was held Saturday.

Blue law repeal may disappoint hopeful Sunday shoppers, may not

AUSTIN (AP) — Texans counting on wide-open Sunday shopping if the Blue Law repeal bill is approved might be charging toward disappointment, says the sponsor of the repeal measure that is halfway through the Legislature.

"If people are expecting all the stores in the state to be opened on Sunday they are going to be surprised," said Rep. David Cain, D-Dallas. "I would be very surprised if the department stores that are not opened now on Sundays would just open their doors to a bunch of retail traffic on Sundays," he said. "As far as a bunch of stores in suburban malls opening, I'd be pretty surprised."

Cain will be pretty surprised, some retailers say, predicting the death of the 1961 Blue Law probably would open most stores — either by choice or economics.

"I can tell you with a great degree of certainty that all your major stores will open. When all your major stores open it means all the stores in those shopping centers will open. You can bet your last dollar on that," said Mickey Moore, director of the Texas Retailers Association, which likes the Blue Law.

"I think you are going to see a lot of doors just blow open," said Frank Griffiths, consultant for the major retailers who combined to fight for repeal.

Robert Mettler of San Antonio, president of Texans for Blue Law

Repeal and chief executive officer of Joske's, indicated his stores most likely would open on Sundays if the Blue Law is stricken.

"I would assume we would. We have plans to be opened each and every Sunday available," he said.

Sunday store hours probably would be about noon to 5 p.m., he said.

Cain's repeal bill, which would keep the Blue Law in effect for auto dealers, was approved 102-40 in the House last week. It's up to the Senate now, where sponsor Ray Farabee of Wichita Falls says he is "very close" to having the needed votes.

"It's looking good in the Senate," Griffiths said. "We can smell victory."

Assuming Senate approval and Gov. Mark White's OK, the Blue Law would die Sept. 1, which is a Sunday. Assuming all the stores that joined Texans for Blue Law Repeal would take advantage of the new freedom of commerce, Texans could expect these stores to open Sundays: Joske's, Haverty's Furniture, K

LSC bill would restructure cooperation with agencies

Nineteenth District Congressman Larry Combest introduced a bill on Thursday that he claims would restructure the current cooperation between the Legal Services Corporation and the state agencies it funds.

Combest had said Monday that he hoped to file the bill by June 1, but Thursday he scheduled a Friday morning news conference and announced that he had decided to step up his work on the proposed bill.

Combest was in Amarillo Friday morning for a meeting of the Panhandle Feed and Grains Association.

The bill would allow the LSC to have more control over the agencies it funds, one of which is Texas Rural Legal aid. It would also speed up the process whereby LSC can defund such agencies if they are found to be in violation of the Legal Services Act.

"The defunding process can take easily up to four years," Combest said during the 10 a.m. news conference at the Villa Inn. "Our bill would set specific time limits. We would like to see a period of about four months for defunding."

Thirteenth District Representative Beau Boulter of Amarillo is co-sponsoring the bill, Combest said. In turn, Combest will co-sponsor a bill Boulter plans to file that would eliminate the LSC completely.

Combest said he has contacted congressmen from California, where he understands funding has resulted from the activities of legal agencies, and he expects support of the bill from them.

LSC would like to have a different relationship with the state agencies it funds, Combest told reporters, and he said he is working with LSC to do that by amending the Legal Services Act.

Mayor Wes Fisher was among several Hereford residents who attended the news conference. "I think he's taking the reasonable approach," Fisher said afternoon. "We'd all like to see complete defunding, but in lieu of that this bill is a move in the right direction."

Former Deaf Smith County Commissioner Bruce Coleman said "anything that will increase the LSC's ability to deal with abuses of the agencies it funds is welcome."

Since last November, LSC's Office of Compliance and Review has twice been in Hereford to investigate citizen complaints about the local TRLA office. Combest said he will push the bill regardless of the results of the latest probe, which are expected to be made public later this month.

Auto thieves a discriminating lot

WASHINGTON (AP) — Automobile thieves are a discriminating lot, according to a government ranking of cars most likely to be stolen.

They turn their noses up at the mundane and average, but can't stay away from the sporty and luxurious cars even when some have sophisticated anti-theft devices.

A list made public Friday by the National Highway Traffic Safety Administration ranked the Buick Riviera, a top-of-the-line specialty sedan, as the most likely car to be stolen. It had a theft rate in 1983-84 of a little more than 16 cars per 1,000 vehicles produced.

Toward the bottom of the list of 130 cars were the Lincoln-Mercury

Grand Marquis, various Volvo models, the Honda Civic and Accord, GM mid-size cars such as the Pontiac Phoenix, Chevrolet Cavalier and Oldsmobile Firenza, and an array of relatively rare vehicles, including three versions of the Rolls-Royce.

The chances of these cars being stolen ranged from zero for the Rolls-Royce, since none was reported stolen during the two years, to just over 1.7 per 1,000 vehicles for the Cavalier.

The likelihood of a car being stolen was more than 10 times greater among the dozen cars at the top of the list than among those toward the bottom, although auto theft experts warn that other factors such as geography and where a car is kept should be taken into account.

"The thieves are going to steal what the general public wants," explained Lt. Richard McQuown, a member of the Kentucky State Police and recent president of the International Association of Auto Theft Investigators. He said the rankings

City commission meets Monday

Hereford city commissioners plan to appoint a city health officer, appoint a member to the planning and zoning commission and approve a member for the Deaf Smith County Appraisal District.

Also on the agenda are authorization of bids for pesticide application, a resolution correcting errors on the tax roll, discussion on purchase of real estate and matters pertaining to legal action against Herb Vogel.

Nothing Stops A Golfer!

They put City Commissioner Emory Brownlow on the throne Friday as he teed off in the special Fellowship of Christian Athletes "crazy scramble" golf tournament. Brownlow headed a team that finished third. He remarked that the "team was not flushed with victory, because our game has gone to pot!" Many of the golfers in the benefit tourney felt wiped out after trying to hit the ball from precarious positions. (See tourney results on sports page.)

Hospital to host open house

Deaf Smith General Hospital will have an open house from 1 to 5 p.m. Sunday, May 19. A tour of the facilities will be conducted during the event.

Renovation of the hospital is completed and the public is invited to see the remodeling as well as meet with hospital staff.

Refreshments will be served on the east lawn of the building and balloons will be provided for children.

Texas poodle honored for saving two lives

KERRVILLE, Texas (AP) — Leo the poodle is America's top dog — according to a dogfood company — because he saved two children from an angry rattlesnake last year.

The 4-year-old standard white poodle won Ken-L-Ration's "America's Dog Hero of the Year" for protecting the youngsters even though he had been bitten six times by the snake.

The animal is owned by William Callahan and his wife Lana of Hunt, about 20 miles west of Kerrville.

Leo performed his heroics last August when the Callahan's son Sean, then 11, and his 9-year-old sister Erin were playing near the Guadalupe River

A five-and-a-half-foot rattler coiled ready to strike inches from Sean's leg.

According to a news account in the Kerrville Daily Times, Leo jumped between the boy and the snake and was bitten six times in the head.

Callahan saw the incident and carried his children to safety.

He later returned to the scene and killed the snake.

The dog survived after six days in a veterinary hospital.

For the honor, Leo received a year's supply of dogfood and a trip to New York for several television appearances.

Death caused by choke hold

DALLAS (AP) — The Tarrant County medical examiner's office has ruled the death of a 23-year-old man in the custody of Arlington police was caused by a "choke hold" administered by one of the officers.

Police said William George Aman III collapsed on a parking lot when he was arrested on a charge of disorderly conduct at a lounge in southwest Arlington on Nov. 27.

The ruling on the cause of death was issued Thursday. The case will be referred to a Tarrant County grand jury, Police Chief David Kunkle said Friday. But he defended the actions of the officers in the arrest.

Kunkle said that Aman struggled with the officers during his arrest when one of the officers applied a "carotid restraint," applying pressure on the carotid artery to restrict the blood flow to the brain.

Authorities said the medical examiner's office has yet to rule in the case of another man who died in Arlington police custody on Dec. 17.

U.S. must maintain strength

COLLEGE STATION, Texas (AP) — U.S. arms negotiator and former U.S. Sen. John Tower told a university commencement audience Friday the United States must maintain proper military strength or "we will have delivered our future into the hands of an adversary who does not have our best interests in mind."

Tower, a Texas Republican who represents the U.S. at the current strategic arms negotiations in Geneva, told Texas A&M University graduates America's military budget cannot be sized to "budgetary constraints, but must be sized to requirements driven by that threat."

The nation's future economic and political health depend far more on external rather than domestic policies, he said, adding that the first priority of government should be to "afford security to its people against its external enemies and adversaries."

"Isolationism is a luxury we can ill afford. We must be citizens not only of Texas and the United States, but citizens of the world," Tower said.

City leaders agreeable

BEAUMONT, Texas (AP) — Although a New York firm downgraded Beaumont's bond rating Friday, city leaders said they are happy to retain an investment-grade rating after a $20 million loss.

Standard & Poors Corp. told City Manager Karl Nollenberger the city now warrants a BBB-plus rating for general obligation bonds the city issues to raise money for major projects.

Before the city lost $20 million to Fort Lauderdale, Fla., based-ESM Government Securities when the firm collapsed March 4, the company rated Beaumont's bonds A-plus.

The city still awaits a new rating from Moody's Investors Service Inc. which has said it will have an answer for the city by the end of May.

Moody's suspended the city's bond rating after news of the ESM collapse.

"It's good news," Nollenberger said. "We could go to the open market right now and be able to sell our bonds."

But the lower rating will mean higher interest rates, he acknowledged, and the city may not immediately reschedule a public bond sale.

Unusual love affair arranged

TAMPA, Fla. (AP) — She's an attractive, full-figured 27-year-old Tampa belle. He's a Canadian who's tall, dark — and gray. Although they've never met, they'll soon pack their trunks off on a long, romantic interlude.

"It's a huge love affair," said Joe Abrams, the matchmaker who's arranging the first of two romantic weekends for Shena, the star elephant of Tampa's Lowry Park Zoo, and Buke, a featured pachyderm at African Lion Country Safari near Toronto.

City Hall got involved Thursday when the council approved two 1,400-mile trips, one to bring Buke to Tampa for a brief courtship, the second to ship the couple to Canada while the Tampa zoo undergoes a $14.3 million renovation.

Abrahams, the city's Parks and Cultural Services administrator, is hoping Shena will come back pregnant.

Asked the cost of insuring their tryst, Abrahams replied, "More than peanuts."

Homeless cats 'five-star' guests

BOCA RATON, Fla. (AP) — For about 60 pampered guests of the elegant high-rise Boca Raton Hotel and Club, the good life means food, lodging and neutering.

The 60 homeless cats — petted and fed by staff and guests alike — will be rounded up and neutered at the Boca Raton Humane Society next week. Hotel officials, worried that the good life could mean a cat population explosion, will foot the $500 bill.

After sterilization, they'll be brought back and released on 177 acres of lush, landscaped hotel grounds they call home.

"They're five-star guests," said Sonya Jacobsen, spokeswoman for the 1,000 room hotel where a night's accommodation can cost $300.

For the cats, the big event of the day is at 5 p.m., when they head for the hotel's marina dock to wait for fishing charters to come in with their catch.

Governor cuddles with Boa Derek

LITTLE ROCK, Ark. (AP) — Gov. Bill Clinton got a chance to cuddle with Boa Derek when he proclaimed National Pet Week in Arkansas.

Boa is a boa, as in constrictor, a kind of snake that sometimes dispatches its prey by crushing it.

Clinton had no warning of the encounter Friday when Dr. William R. Roberson of Little Rock, a veterinarian, unfurled the snake from what looked like a brief case lying innocently at Clinton's side.

Clinton held it for a minute or so, but decided that manipulating the gently twisting snake and reading the proclamation was too much to attempt.

Ag secretary gives prediction

OAXACA, Mexico (AP) — Agriculture Secretary Eduardo Pesqueira predicts this year's harvests will be "reasonably good, not unrealistically good."

Pesqueira told agriculture department employees in this southern city that Mexico is becoming self-sufficient in wheat production and is reducing its sorghum imports.

The outlook for harvests is fairly positive because heavy rainfall earlier this year have left reservoirs full in most of the country, Pesqueira said at the meeting Thursday.

During talks today

Leaders urge 'early, reduction'

BONN, West Germany (AP) — Leaders of seven major industrial democracies today urged "early and substantial reduction" in barriers to free trade but, bowing to stubborn objections by France, left unclear when a new round of global trade talks should begin.

Knowledgeable sources said compromise language for the final communique ending the two-day economic summit made clear that most of the summit leaders favor starting the trade talks in early 1986, the target date sought by President Reagan and Japanese Prime Minister Yasuhiro Nakasone.

The sources, who spoke only on condition that they not be identified, said West German Chancellor Helmut Kohl, the summit host, apparently had failed in an attempt to persuade French President Francois Mitterrand to close ranks and agree to a specific date.

"After long, long discussions...Chancellor Kohl had to accept the fact that President Mitterrand would not agree," British Chancellor of the Exchequer Nigel Lawson told reporters.

Lawson said the seven leaders — representing the United States, Britain, France, West Germany, Italy, Japan and Canada — quickly agreed to other points in the draft communique, including a pledge to continue following economic policies that dampen inflation and encourage investment.

Mitterrand has insisted that before setting a date for the first global trade talks since 1979, an agenda must be set in advance in the interest of protecting European farmers. The French leader also wants to tie such talks to parallel international monetary reforms aimed at curbing fluctuations in the value of the U.S. dollar on world currency markets.

White House spokesman Larry Speakes confirmed Mitterrand's adamant position as Reagan and the leaders of six U.S. trading allies began their final, formal summit session this morning in a wood-paneled room in the ultramodern Federal Chancellery.

"France is the odd man out," Speakes told reporters.

Asked if he was disappointed about the prospect of failure to set a firm date for trade talks, Reagan replied, "Of course. Yes."

Deputy White House press secretary Robert Sims said the communique calls for a ministerial-level meeting under the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade by the end of this summer to fashion an agenda for any future trade round.

Lawson, too, said that despite Mitterrand's refusal to go along, he believed trade talks would begin sometime next year.

The wording of the communique suggests that summit leaders made little headway in suggesting new ways to resolve nagging old problems of high unemployment, the unstable dollar, high interest rates and Third World debts.

Kohl, however, was ready to offer an endorsement of Reagan's "Star Wars" plan for a space-based antimissile defense system, in his statement concluding the summit, the sources said.

That move, plus the call for opening trade talks "as soon as possible," allowed Reagan to preserve the appearance of salvaging what could have been embarrassing summit reversals on two key points.

Reagan already had won summit support for his negotiating stance in arms control talks with the Soviet Union in Geneva, Switzerland, but encountered opposition to his some of his trade, foreign policy and defense initiatives.

Unprecedented actions taken

VATICAN CITY (AP) — Pope John Paul II, incensed by a French film that portrays the Virgin Mary as a cabbie's girlfriend and shows her nude, is taking his campaign against it to the international airwaves.

Last week, the pontiff sharply criticized "Je Vous Salue, Marie" (Hail Mary) directed by Jean-Luc Godard, saying it "distorts and insults the spiritual significance" of Christian beliefs.

Italian newspapers said it was the first time in his nearly seven-year pontificate that John Paul, a frequent critic of what he considers media excesses, attacked a work of art by name.

But now he is going even further.

An announcement carried Thursday by Vatican Radio and the Vatican daily, L'Osservatore Romano, said that the pope will recite the rosary in front of the Apostolic Palace on Saturday evening "to repair the offense inflicted" on the mother of Jesus by the film.

It will be carried live worldwide by Vatican Radio, the reports said.

The film depicts Mary in modern times as the daughter of a gas station attendant and the girlfriend of a taxi driver named Joseph. She is depicted nude in some scenes.

A message from Cardinal Agostino Casaroli, the Vatican secretary of state, said John Paul had joined members of the Roman Catholic Church's Rome diocese in "unanimous deploration" of the film.

The movie "affronts fundamental themes of the Christian faith and distorts and insults their spiritual significance and historical value," the message said.

Mart, Levitz Furniture, Sears, Target, Toys "R" Us and Zales.

Several stores already opened Sundays for restricted sales also joined the repeal effort, including, Tom Thumb-Page, Handy Dan, Eckerd's, Kroger and 7-Eleven.

Cain said the biggest immediate effect of repeal would be in those stores now opened Sundays for sale of everything but the 42 items banned by the Blue Law.

"The grocery stores, the convenience stores and the hardware stores that are now opened Sundays will not have to worry about fencing off areas," he said.

The Texas Retailers Association support of the Blue Law is based, in part, on the fear that mom-and-pop

The telegram prompted satire as well as protest from the Italian press.

A leading Italian newsweekly, Panorama, ran a cover of a bare-breasted woman on a cross, entitled "Our Lady of the Scandal."

Director Godard told Il Messaggero the pope's comments were "a great reference" for the film. But the 54-year-old director, who helped pioneer the French New Wave with were no surprise to law enforcement officials.

What thieves want, according to the government ranking and car theft experts, are automobiles that have a high dollar value and great demand either as complete cars or as parts.

In addition to the Riviera, the top 10 cars in popularity among auto thieves in 1983 and 1984 were the Toyota Celica Supra, 14.9 thefts per 1,000 cars produced; Cadillac Eldorado, 13.5; Chevrolet Corvette, 13.3; Pontiac Firebird, 12.4; Chevrolet Camaro, 11.7; Mazda RX-7, 11.6; Porsche 911, 10.9; Oldsmobile Toronado, 10.5; and Pontiac Grand Prix, 10.4.

Fourteen of the top 20 cars came from General Motors Corp.

"We have over half of the market," GM spokesman David Hudgens said. "People like our cars."

A GM engineer, Tom Kelly, quickly rejected suggestions that GM cars might be easier to steal.

stores would be forced to open on Sundays — by economics or by mall contracts.

In some malls, the big stores dictate shopping hours.

Stanley Guzik, manager of Benold's Jewelers store in Austin's Highland Mall, has fought repeal.

"It's awfully rough on a family-owned business. You can imagine who'll be working on Sundays," he said.

"I don't think we are going to have much of a choice. If the mall says open, you're opened," said Guzik, who already works long hours.

And he's figured that he would survive Sunday work "as long as I have a big screen TV to watch the Cowboy games."

the 1960 film "A Bout de Souffle" (Breathless), complained that John Paul "hasn't even seen the movie. And if he hasn't seen it, how can he condemn it?"

Vatican spokesman Joaquin Navarro said he could not say whether John Paul had seen it or not. But Vatican sources, who spoke on condition they were not identified, said a copy of the movie was at Vatican City.

The Corvette long has been among the most stolen automobiles, although in recent years GM has offered a sophisticated anti-theft alarm system as standard equipment, Kelly said.

"Your pro is going to be able to get the car if he wants it," McQuown noted.

The list is based on car theft statistics from the FBI's National Crime Information Center. It covers 1983 and 1984 model cars stolen in those same years and ranks them on the basis of stolen vehicles compared with how many of the cars were built.

The ranking, which is still subject to minor shifting, was developed to determine what cars should be considered "high theft" vehicles under a law passed last year that requires all "high theft" cars to have identification stamped on certain parts.

The top 65 cars of the 130 cars listed would be considered "high theft" vehicles, according to Barry Felrice, the agency's associate administrator for rulemaking.

Thieves steal nearly 1 million cars and trucks each year, according to the National Automobile Theft Bureau, a private organization affiliated with the insurance industry. A decade ago about half of the stolen cars were recovered, but today that figure has dropped to about 15 percent, theft experts said.

Veteran investigator familiar presence in court

ANGLETON, Texas (AP) — He is a familiar presence in the courtroom whenever a criminal trial is conducted.

His large frame is usually draped on a chair by the courtroom door, long legs stretched out in front of him, boots crossed, hands clasped over his silver belt buckle. To some, he might appear relaxed, even lethargic.

But his eyes never rest. He watches the jurors intently, gauging their reaction to the testimony.

He watches the prosecutor for any sign that assistance is needed. He watches the defendant, and he watches the onlookers.

If the defense raises a surprise issue, he will slip quietly outside and return quickly with a note or file for the prosecutor.

If a defendant who has been in the jail for a while awaiting trial makes a sudden move or starts looking around the room, he rises and moves silently to the front of the courtroom, always taking an outside seat in case he has to move quickly.

He has been involved in virtually every single criminal case that has gone to trial in the county in the past 12 years, and was the crucial factor in many of them, but his name rarely appears in the news.

J.R. "Jimmy" Jones keeps a very low profile, and he likes it that way.

Jones is the chief criminal investigator for Brazoria County District Attorney Jim Mapel's office. He's been there for 12 years, through three district attorneys.

Jones was born in Ardmore, Okla. He moved to Angleton with his family when he was 10, and has lived in Brazoria County ever since.

Cecil Wingo, now chief investigator for the Harris County Medical Examiner's Office, remembers Jones as "just a kid when I was the chief of police in Angleton."

"He was a latent Indy 500 driver," he recalled, "and I had the opportunity of chasing him around a little bit."

"I had a feeling about him, though, even back then. Maybe because a law officer sees something of himself in others, but I felt he'd become a lawman."

Sure enough, in 1955, just after Wingo left Angleton to become a border guard, Jones got his first job in law enforcement, with the Angleton Police Department Wingo had organized, when then-Police Chief Chester Simon hired him to check the parking meters, long since gone from the city streets.

"I walked meters for him, hoping he'd hire me," Jones said, and he did two months later, Jones began night patrol duties for Simon.

Since then, Wingo has had occasion to work with Jones, and pays him a high compliment today.

"He'd do to go to the river with," Wingo said of Jones. The saying harks back to the times when Texas Rangers patrolled for bandits along the Rio Grande, and the integrity of who you went to the river with might mean whether you came back or not.

Jones set his sights on a county lawman's job early, and left the Angleton department in 1956 to work as a dispatcher for former Sheriff J.W. "Jack" Marshall.

The confines of an office didn't suit him, and he resigned a few months later to work as a welder's helper. It was the last time he would ever leave the field of law enforcement.

He became a patrolman for the Clute Police Department in 1957, was quickly promoted to the rank of sergeant, and when Chief Raymond Hill left the department in 1958, was named acting chief of police.

Still anxious to expand his territory, Jones went back to work for Marshall as a deputy later that year, and in 1959 attained the rank of investigator a duty he shared with Robert Gladney, who would later succeed Marshall as sheriff.

Jones met Charlotte Jakubec, a Freeport police dispatcher, while working in the Brazosport area, and they were married in 1959. The couple bought a home in Angleton where their two daughters, Delores and Loretta, were born.

But even then, he was a lawman first.

In fact, Jones recalled his job nearly spoiled his marriage before it began.

Jones said he and the late Bob Elder, a fellow Sheriff's Department investigator who later joined the Texas Rangers, were "up in Fort Worth chasing some crook or the other around."

"Bob said, 'so, you're getting married tomorrow.' Then he asked me, 'hey, isn't there a wedding rehearsal or something tonight?'"

"You never saw a case wrapped so quick, or a faster ride from Fort Worth to Angleton," Jones recalled with a grin.

He made it to the rehearsal dinner, but the incident was just one in what would be many missed family occasions.

"I don't know how she's put up with it all these years," Jones said of his wife. "She raised our children, and I know it was hard on her, because I always put my job first."

"Back then, it wasn't unusual for an investigator to be gone 80 percent of the time."

In 1965 Jones felt the need for a 40-hour (more or less) work week, so he could spend some time with his growing children.

He accepted the position of sergeant of investigation offered him by Alvin Police Chief Leon Levy, and moved his family to Alvin, where he and his wife live now, but in 1967 he went back to the Sheriff's Department as chief of criminal investigation.

"I enjoyed my work in Alvin, but there were still those boundary lines ... and I was used to taking on the whole county," he said.

Jones joined the district attorney's office in 1973, and just about everybody who has worked with him has a favorite memory of the man.

Freeport attorney Ogden Bass was the first district attorney Jones worked for.

"We'd bring sack lunches every day," Bass said, "and we had a little television set we watched at lunch time."

"There was some difficulty over the program. Jimmy liked 'The Untouchables,' but I always favored 'Perry Mason,'" Bass said.

Bass also recalled a time when "Jimmy was tested, and he does indeed have a hard head."

"We were trying a man on a burglary charge, when an onlooker in the courtroom stood up and made some very loud and, as I recall, vulgar, comments to the court."

"The judge shouted 'stop that man!' as the culprit headed for the door, and Jimmy got in his way."

"So he hauls off and hits old Jimmy square on the head with his fist ... and broke his hand," Bass concluded, adding the fellow was subdued after the confrontation.

Mapel, who at that time was an assistant district attorney under Bass, said the picture of Jones that stands most vividly in his mind is one of the lawman and a just-convicted prisoner who broke away from a deputy while making a phone call before being jailed.

"Jimmy caught him at the railing, just before the stairs on the third floor" of the courthouse, Mapel said. "And when I rounded the corner, it looked like both of them were about to go over."

They didn't, and Jones took the wayward prisoner to jail in spite of his protests, but Mapel said the picture of the two of them hanging over that third-floor railing has always stayed with him.

Angleton attorney Jerry Farrer, who was first assistant district attorney under Bass, remembers that incident, and another that left an "impression" on him.

"I was trying this guy for attempted murder," Farrer said. The man's defense was that he had shot the other man accidentally.

"Jimmy told me, 'now, when you get this guy on cross-examination, get hard on him, because you're going to make him mad and he'll break,'" Farrer recalled.

"So I really let him have it." Then, giving the defendant the weapon used in the shooting, Farrer told him "okay, now show me how you shot him five times and it was an accident."

The man got mad and broke, just as Jones predicted, Farrer said.

"He yelled 'I shot that — and I'm glad of it' and then he hit me with the gun."

"So I looked around for Jones, because I knew he was going to come and protect me," Farrer said. "He was in the back of the courtroom, laughing like crazy."

Matt Wingo, a former lieutenant in the investigation division of the Sheriff's Department, said Jones "engineered things behind the scenes, and then he'd be gone."

"You wouldn't realize what he did until you got to the courtroom and realized you were sitting there making a case because of his work, and he'd never take the credit for it."

Magic of lights

(Editor's Note: May 11 is the fiftieth anniversary of the Rural Electrification Administration.)

Few moments in life can be compared with that "magic" day when for the first time we reached up and pulled the metal chain on a single-drop socket hanging from the ceiling and the room flooded with light.

Only those who lived without electricity for years can understand. Trying to read, to study, to do hand-work in the dim yellow glow of kerosene lamps was difficult and eye straining. Even the advanced Aladdin lamps or carbide lights were weak compared with "electric lights."

Those who were born into the electric age in rural areas can't possibly imagine the drabness, the dullness, that marked life on the farm without electricity.

No hot water unless you heated it on a wood stove.

No refrigerators, No icemakers.

No air conditioners.

Countless "no's."

Ironing day in the summer was torture for the women: A roaring fire in the kitchen stove was necessary to keep the flat irons warm. Flushed faces beaded with perspiration, damp blouses, blistered fingers, drudgery, and aching backs were the inheritance of every farm wife and daughter.

The twin to the misery of ironing sat in the backyard - the iron washpot, black-stained from wood fires that burned in hot weather and cold. Nearby was the back-breaking, knuckle-burning washboard.

The wait for electricity was almost unbearable. As a young farm boy in Central Texas, I sat on the roof of our farm garage for hours, each day for weeks, watching the distant crews as they "set" the light poles and strung the wire. I thought they would never reach our farm. Finally the house was wired with single-drop sockets and bulbs in each room. No other electric appliance was then affordable.

Finally, finally, finally came the day when the meter was installed and the final connection made.

A magic moment. No thrill since has matched it.

It's important to remember that electricity came late to the rural areas of America - long after the cities and towns routinely enjoyed its benefits. Rural America lived in darkness and suffered back-breaking labor until the momentous Rural Electrification Administration legislation was enacted into law.

The fierce pride that farm people once held for their rural electric cooperatives (REC's) has since subsided into indifference, and the luxury of electric power is now taken for granted.

Bootleg Philosopher

Constitution protects rock-n-roll sound

Editor's note: The Bootleg Philosopher on his Johnsongrass farm on Tierra Blanca creek discusses a Constitutional issue this week, in his own way.

Dear editor:

Although Thomas Jefferson might have busted out laughing at the idea that such an issue would even come up, the Supreme Court has ruled that rock 'n' roll music is protected by the First Amendment to the Constitution.

According to an article I read last night because there wasn't anything funny on television, a city in California tried to ban a rock 'n' roll concert in a city park. The musicians, as they called themselves, sued, and the case got all the way to the Supreme Court.

The Justices deliberated, then let stand a lower court ruling that rock 'n' roll music is a form of expression and therefore is protected by the First Amendment.

I guess rock 'n' roll music is a form of expression, but so is a cat's howling at midnight in your neighbor's backyard, but it has never occurred to me that the cat has a constitutional right to its performance.

The Founding Fathers were far-sighted indeed when they wrote the Constitution, but it would have been impossible for them to imagine they were writing a document that protects the sounds of rock 'n' roll and loud-mouth cats.

The article didn't report how the Supreme Court justices voted on that Constitutional crisis, but if the vote was, say, 7 to 2 in favor of rock 'n' roll, my guess is that the 7 have never heard such music and the 2 have.

Yours faithfully,
J.A.

Letters to the Editor

Dear editor:

We are writing out of concern for the children of Hereford Public Schools. Our children were in the Hereford Schools for one semester in the fall of 1983. My husband and I have over twenty years of teaching experience, and are therefore qualified to speak to the issues.

Our concern is the reading program as implemented in the system last year. We found the teachers very willing and helpful to work with our children, however they were saddled with a very unworkable program, by the administration. We attempted to warn the administration that this program would not achieve the desired outcome, but we got a deaf ear. Our warning was based on our observations from other districts and in other states.

In the fall of 1983, the administration attempted to force our daughter to repeat Kindergarten, based on her age, reading ability, and failure to get previous school records by the desired date. We refused to allow this action, and moved to another town in January 1984. Now, fifteen months later, she is a happy, well adjusted second grader. She no longer cries every day that she has to go to school. In recent achievement tests she scored a reading level of 4.3 (which means fourth grade level at the third month), and an overall battery score of 4.1 (which is first month of the fourth grade).

Our son, who greatly enjoyed grades K to 5, and especially liked to read, developed a distaste for school in general and reading in particular, due to his one semester involvement in Hereford ISD. Currently he is finishing seventh grade and is in a reading contest (to read at least two thousand pages of grade level material for the six weeks).

It is our hope that the people of Hereford will restore the quality of education in their schools, by voting or whatever means necessary.

Sincerely,
Mr. and Mrs. Kirt Bell

Dear editor:

The recent awards The Brand received are just confirmation of what we have been seeing happen to our local paper. The quality of news reporting has improved tremendously and especially the lack of violent and sex-oriented stories which used to appear in the paper, making it something less than family-oriented.

The pictures and increase in the number of same is really an enjoyment. Of particular note, the Easter front-page with the religious theme was so refreshing and a great improvement over chickens and rabbits. Photos of the children in connection with the antique show and also the museum were delightful.

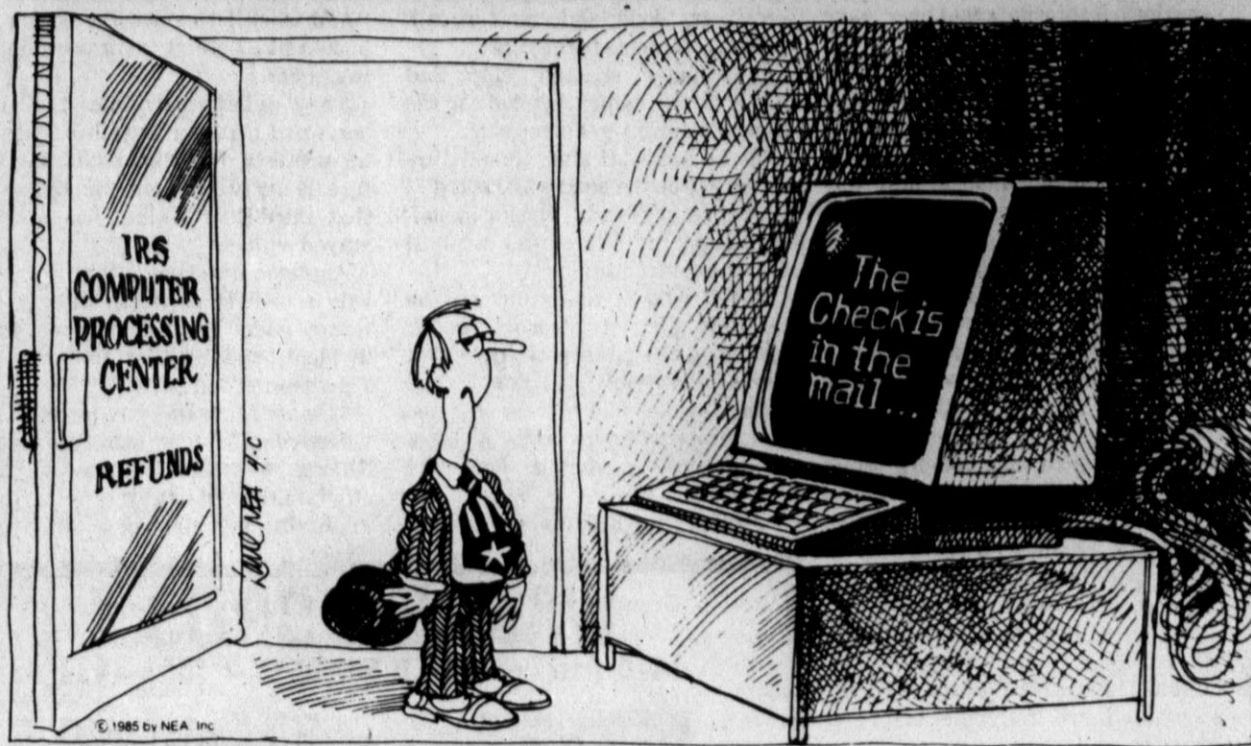

Your coverage of church activities and especially Church Women United make it known to all readers what I think is a good measurement of our town, church-oriented.

God bless you in your important work. We are so very proud of you and the excellent paper you are producing.

Sincerely,
Edna Marnell

The Penultimate Word

THE CYCLES

Is it just me or have the cycles slowed down? I have noticed that all things seem to go in cycles. Clothes go out of style and, in time, the original styles return. Ties get wide, then narrow, then wide again. Lapels on coats follow the same pattern.

I have a closet full of wide ties waiting for the cycle to come around again. I am afraid to throw them away because their day could happen at any time. The problem is the cycle is late and shows no sign of returning. The latest thing in ties seems to be weird things that do not touch the neck. The look seems to be the "I have been hard at work and have loosened my tie so everyone will know" look.

Ties are not the only cycle that seems to be late. For years I have been waiting for music to make a comeback. I thought the wild screaming of people with gravel in their throats would fade away. The Beatles started the current trend when I was young enough to have been captured, but I was far too stuffy at the time.

Everytime the cycle tries to move back they add a new wrinkle. Wild hair, wild moves, and now pornographic lyrics. You know it is time for a change but none seems to happen. Even the country and western singers are getting into the act. Country singers are supposed to be good ole boys singing about drinking and trains. Now they are sissified dandies singing songs that make sailors blush.

I keep thinking that beauty will make a comeback. What's going on in our world? Women are into the baggy look. With all of the emphasis on being slender it looks like the clothes would emphasize the svelte instead of making even the slenderest appear fat. I saw a lady dressed in the latest fashions. She looked like a little girl dressed in her daddy's clothes. Her daddy was overweight.

I recognize that I am getting old and crotchety. I recognize that life is passing me by while I sit and dream of better days. I recognize that the day may never come, but still I sit and wait for the cycles to come around again.

Before I die, I want to once again see sensible religion, quality products, good music, beautiful women, decent lyrics, rich farmers, truthful politicians, and honesty all in vogue and in practice. The cycles seem to have slowed down.

What happened to our tax cuts?

By Richard L. Leshner,
President

WASHINGTON - We hear a great deal of noise from those liberals who insist that the way to handle the federal deficit is to raise taxes rather than cut government spending.

One of their arguments is that taxes were slashed too much in 1981 when Congress passed the Economic Recovery Tax Act (ERTA). They say that we are all undertaxed and must bear a greater burden to allow their favorite spending programs to continue.

Nonsense! In the first place, ERTA—which among other things cut personal income taxes by 5 percent and indexed future taxes to inflation—didn't make taxes too low. In fact, if anything, it left our overall taxes at too high a percentage of the nation's gross national product.

And in the second place, since 1981, Congress has quietly taken away about half of the ERTA tax cuts!

The Tax Foundation Inc., a Washington think-tank, has just completed an exhaustive review of the impact of ERTA and found that we will be paying $84.1 billion more in taxes than we would be if Congress had not slipped in a series of tax hikes.

This increase in taxation is the result of major tax bills enacted from 1981 through 1984, together with increases in Social Security taxes scheduled under pre-1981 legislation.

Under the tax structure in place before 1981, federal receipts in 1985 would have been $821.3 billion. ERTA cut that by just over 20 percent. But because of the other legislation, actual receipts this year are estimated to reflect a cut of just 10 percent.

The first slash at this tax reduction took place the very next year when the Tax Equity and Fiscal Responsibility Act of 1982 (TEFRA) took back $40.7 billion of the intended ERTA tax cuts in such areas as removing "unintended benefits and obsolete incentives" and raising excise taxes and employment levies.

TEFRA added $12.4 billion to 1985 individual income taxes, $19.3 billion to corporate income taxes, $5.4 billion to excise taxes and $3.5 billion to social insurance contributions, largely employer payroll taxes.

Also in 1982 Congress passed the Highway Revenue Act which hiked gasoline taxes and highway user fees.

Then in 1983 the Social Security Amendments and the Railroad Retirement Revenue Act boosted 1983 social insurance taxes with some offsets in individual income taxes. The trend toward higher taxes suffered in an all-too-short pause when other legislation that year reduced taxes by repealing the withholding of interest and dividends that had been a part of TEFRA.

But last year Congress went right back to taking more and more of our money when it approved the Deficit Reduction Act, raising 1985 taxes by $9.3 billion.

In addition, there were increases of $22 billion through automatic hikes in Social Security taxes scheduled in pre-1981 legislation.

I find it interesting to note that tax hikes are always called by some fine-sounding title such as "deficit reduction" or "tax equity and fiscal responsibility" to hide their true impact from the voters.

Now, after all of this, they want to raise our taxes more, rather than having the gumption to do something about runaway federal spending.

To paraphrase Shakespeare, I say it is high time to cry "Hold, enough" to the high-taxing big spenders. The American economy cannot afford more taxes and the American people cannot afford more high levels of government spending.

This is the year we must reverse these trends if we are ever going to do so. Congress must hear from the American people that they have had enough.

You never, never ever, quit!

Basketball season is behind us. Your team either lost or won. Except the Coalton Bearcats. They did both.

Coalton West Virginia High School plays Class A basketball. Coalton's enrollment is smaller than that of most Class A schools in West Virginia but Coalton plays six-on-the-floor.

Five players include Rodney Elmore and Junior Phillips and Jamie Rossie and others—

And forever on the sidelines but as much in the game as anybody is Tammy Primavera—a girl.

A 16-year-old girl. In Coalton in the West Virginia mountains folks are used to making do without.

Many make do without even a telephone.

But if the one-crop economy of the coal country of Appalachia is less than prosperous perhaps it pulls families together.

And school loyalties are such that for the quarter-final game between Coalton's Bearcats and the Burch Bulldogs 6,516 people jammed the bleachers of Charleston's Civic Center.

It was obvious by halftime that the Bearcats were in trouble—48 to 32.

But among the cheerleaders on the sidelines, Tammy Primavera continued to dance about and shout encouragement.

In her pleated blue and gold cheerleading skirt and blue and gold knee-length stocking with CHS proudly emblazoned on two sides...

Tammy participated with her school's other girl cheerleaders in their pyramid and coordinated high-kicks—but then—her hands cupped to her lips—Tammy was calling out improvised cheers of her own.

Even when the game was down to six minutes left and her team was trailing now by 13 points she never let up:

"C'mon, Brad," she shouted, "There's time! There's time!"

And her beloved Bearcats fought back to within nine—but there wasn't time.

Coalton lost. The quarterfinal game was their last game, yet, even in defeat...5 ft. 2 in., 100-pound Tammy was chanting and her cheering section was echoing: "Are we proud of our team? Yes, we're proud; yes we're proud!"

Coalton is proud of her, too. You see...

The auburn-haired cheerleader, the scrubbed sophomore of Coalton High, does all that she does and is all the inspiration she is on a leg and a crutch.

The other leg—all of it—she sacrificed to a malignancy when in kindergarten.

Tammy Primavera's last name, in the land of her ancestors, means "springtime."

In the impoverished mountains of West Virginia it means the behinder you are the harder you try and you never—never ever—quit!

San Antonio firm develops smokeless cigarette

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — Gerald Mazur isn't blowing smoke when he talks about his company's product — a smokeless cigarette. It's the latest thing in the tobacco industry — guaranteed to raise a few eyebrows and draw some indignation in the nonsmoking section of an airliner.

FAVOR looks like a conventional Judge rules cigarette, smells like one, and smokers say it even tastes like one. But unlike your usual Marlboro, this cigarette doesn't take to a match. Consequently, there are no ashes, no ashtrays, no cigarette stubs and no smoke to raise the ire of nonsmokers.

"We make no health claims and we make no cessation claims," Mazur said, one of the original founders of Datapoint Corp. "It's just a viable alternative to tobacco pleasure."

The product began flavor and aroma consumer testing this past week and is scheduled to go on the market in September.

Mazur, chairman and chief executive officer of Advanced Tobacco Products, Inc., says the genius behind the product is Phil Ray, president and chief of technology for the firm.

A mad-scientist type, Ray said he had been a three-pack-a-day smoker for years.

"It got to be less and less popular. I had to ride in the back of an airplane," he said.

So he went to work and developed the smokeless cigarette, a pencil-thick cylinder filled with a fibrous substance laced with a pure nicotine solution. The cigarette also is treated with special flavors and aromas — like vanilla, cocoa and licorice that make it more authentic to the senses.

Ray frequents a laboratory where there are "Thank You For Smoking" signs, a smokeless cigarette dangling from his lips.

He and Mazur go way back — to at least 1968, when they formed Datapoint, the computer manufacturing firm based in San Antonio.

Both eventually left Datapoint for other ventures.

In 1978, Mazur said he heard Ray had developed a smokeless cigarette.

"My first reaction was 'is he out of his mind? Whoever heard of a smokeless cigarette?'" he said.

But the invention piqued his interest enough to prevail upon Ray to sell him a small interest in the idea.

Then about two years ago, Ray approached Mazur for help in raising enough capital to produce a marketable smokeless cigarette.

The two decided to run a survey in selected cities, which found 78 percent of those asked said they would buy the product.

Armed with that assurance, the Mazur and Ray formed ATP and issued a public offering May 23, 1984, that raised $8.1 million.

The money has enabled ATP to hire the expertise Mazur and Ray said they wanted to perfect the product and to move into 40,000 square feet of office, lab and manufacturing space in a new industrial park north of San Antonio.

When the operation is in full swing, there will be two assembly lines with the capacity to produce 51 million packs of cigarettes annually.

Each pack of FAVORS contains six cigarettes that "smokers" draw on. Each one, Mazur said, contains the tobacco pleasure of five cigarettes.

"It's just like chewing gum. When it's lost its flavor, you can tell. You're just sucking air," he said.

Mazur doesn't claim to be part of the nation's competitive cigarette industry, which in 1983 did $160 billion worth of business. ATP is just making a tobacco product in the same leagues as snuff and chewing tobacco, he said, and it's subject to the same regulations as those products.

Test marketing for flavors and aromas began May 1 in Westchester County, N.Y., and FAVOR is due to go on the market in Austin in September. From there, ATP will move into the Dallas-Fort Worth area and Houston.

"We're not going to change the world. It's just an alternative," he said.

Abducted children belong to father

DENTON, Texas (AP) — After an extraordinary hearing that continued into the early morning hours, a judge ordered today that two small children located through a national "missing" telecast be returned to the father from whom they were abducted almost two years ago.

State District Judge Larry Sullivant said he felt he had no other alternative but to return their children to their father, Dr. Edwin A. McDonald of Fresno, Calif., and honor the California court order that originally gave him custody, rather than his ex-wife, who had them when they were found earlier in the week.

"The children have been made fugitives, and they can no longer have the benefit of a normal family relationship," Sullivant said in announcing his decision about 1:45 a.m. today, ending a hearing that began at 5:30 p.m. Friday.

"I pray to God the children can recover from this traumatic experience," Sullivant added.

Teresa McDonald, 9, and her brother, Edwin, 7, were located in Denton, 35 miles northwest of Dallas, on Tuesday, the day after Teresa's picture was shown on national television following a telecast of "Adam," the true story of a missing child. Someone called a national hotline telephone number and reported having seen the girl at a private school in Denton.

The children were with their mother, Terry Lanotte-McDonald, 34, who authorities said had been living in Denton for the past 18 months under an assumed name. She was arrested on a warrant alleging child abduction, but was released after making $8,000 bond.

Her lawyer, George Carter of Fresno, said after the hearing ended that she would not fight extradition back to California.

Ms. Lanotte-McDonald cried when the ruling came, and began screaming after she was helped out of the courtroom and into a hallway. McDonald dropped his head when he heard the news, and his present wife reached over to hug him.

Family turned $60 investment into 12th largest grocery chain

AUSTIN (AP) — A can of corn here, a bag of charcoal there. Milk and bread, butter and eggs, sugar and flour. It has added up over the years.

Operating from the Rio Grande Valley to Ennis and from Bay City to Del Rio, the descendants of Florence Butt of Kerrville expanded her $60 investment into the 12th largest grocery company in the United States, all without leaving Texas.

For 80 years, not a day has passed without a Butt in charge or without a Butt giving credit to H.E.B. employees and customers for the success of the company.

Along the way, they tossed nickels and free chickens off roofs, and gave away shiny new cars, mink stoles, trading stamps, and cash prizes. They survived the Depression, hurricanes, fires, and a sibling rivalry. To keep pace with the technological revolution they automated and computerized. When 1980s shoppers signaled a desire to get back to basics, they began reinstating the bulk foods that were the staples of Florence Butt's business in 1905.

Shoppers at neighborhood H.E.B. grocery stores today contribute to a home-grown, family-held retailing empire that expects 1985 sales of almost $2 billion.

But at best, the sophistication, diversity, and magnitude of the business register only subliminally on the shopper pushing a cart down the aisle in search of the ingredients for school lunches, Saturday cookouts, Sunday dinner, or the hors d'oeuvres that will be within reach when the neighbors show up for a round of Trivial Pursuit.

From the shoppers' point of view, the grocery store experience is universal. Is the price right? Is there a choice between name and house brands? Is the food fresh? Is the store clean? Are the employees polite and helpful? In recent years, shoppers have asked more. Are there generics, fresh seafoods, a bakery, a deli, at least one express check-out lane, film developing, a pharmacist, a complete drug selection? Can you pay your bills, write a check for cash, or use an electronic teller machine?

Austin shoppers who think all supermarkets operate alike may recall that A&P quit the battle here in the 1960s, Kroger pulled out during the 1970s, and Handy Andy sold out in 1982. Last year in Houston, Weingarten closed or sold its 70 stores. This year Eagle closed or sold its 22 stores in the same city. Neither bigness nor heritage guarantee survival.

With 147 stores in 77 cities and 20,000 employees, the H.E. Butt Grocery Co. prospers in a business where the competition is sometimes ruthless. More than holding its ground against national giants like Safeway and regional competitors like Tom Thumb, H.E.B. is charting expansion beyond its traditional turf. It is a Texas success story, the dimensions of which are little known outside the food industry. And it started in the Hill Country.

For the last 75 years, H.E.B. has been shaped by Howard E. Butt, 90, the man whose name the company bears, and by his son, Charles C. Butt, the president since 1971. But it is a company started by a woman under adverse conditions in a remote section of an adopted state.

Florence Butt came to Texas in 1905 from Memphis because Tennessee doctors had recommended the climate and medical facilities in Kerrville as possibly beneficial to her husband, who suffered from tuberculosis.

With three young sons to feed and clothe and a husband unable to work, she knocked on the doors of Kerrville homes in search of customers for her A&P grocery products, shipped to her by a relative.

According to an eight-page history of the company's origins written more than a half-century later by her son Eugene, one woman slammed the door in her face and said, "I don't buy from peddlers."

"Mother was a very refined woman, and this hurt her deeply," Eugene recalled.

Although she died in 1954, the image that endures today is of a woman of intelligence, fortitude, dedication, and generosity. For $9 a month, she rented a two-story frame building, moved the family in upstairs, and opened the first Butt grocery on the ground floor. It was still the era of the horse and wagon, credit and delivery, and pickle and cracker barrels. Charlie, 14, Eugene, 12, and Howard, 10, at first delivered orders in a baby carriage, then a red wagon. A horse and wagon were acquired later.

There is no clear record today that accounts for the early success of the business. A family's will to survive cannot be discounted.

Eugene recalled that Howard began to assume management of the business when he was 15 or 16.

"One thing he did was cause mother to stock tobacco," Eugene wrote. "She was always opposed to this, but it was causing loss of trade."

The irony of Howard's early business instincts is not lost on longtime H.E.B. shoppers who remember that his supermarkets added beer and wine to their shelves in the late 1970s only after he, in the role once held by his mother, was convinced by his staff that the change was necessary to compete with rival stores.

Howard graduated valedictorian from his high school class, served in the Navy in World War I, and came home in 1919 to take over the business. A string of failures followed. Stores were opened and closed in Center Point, Junction, Brownwood, Eagle Pass, Uvalde, Crystal City, and San Angelo. It was 1926 before one of the series of "second" stores, in Del Rio, proved profitable.

Along the way, Eugene discovered he did not like the grocery business and left it for the Post Office. The business finally took hold in the late 1920s when Howard bought three Pig-gly Wiggly stores in the Rio Grande Valley. In 1928 the company offices were moved to Brownsville from Kerrville.

In high school, Howard had given himself a middle name, Edward. In 1935 he lent his name to his 28 stores. C.C. Butt Grocery, which had been named for Florence's husband and which had become C.C. Butt Cash Grocery, then became the H.E. Butt Grocery Co.

"I might tell you just a little bit more about my father and how he got started," Charles Butt said over lunch at El Mirador, a San Antonio restaurant where nothing on the menu runs much more than $4. The meeting had taken weeks to arrange because, as his public relations spokesman said, "Mr. Butt doesn't give interviews."

Negotiating the interview was touchy. Corporately, H.E.B. prefers traditional publicity, like that accompanying store openings in small towns. To say H.E.B. is comfortable when its philanthropy is publicized is not to say it seeks press acknowledgment of its good deeds.

Gott, M.D.

Eating habits lead to gas

DEAR DR. GOTT — I am writing about a very embarrassing problem. I am 68 and in good health. The problem is gas; it doesn't matter what I eat. We like to eat out once in a while, but I am too embarrassed. What can I do?

DEAR READER — Intestinal gas has two components: swallowed air and the products of bacterial action.

Many people have the unfortunate habit of gulping air when they swallow, because they eat too quickly or have a natural tendency to swallow air when they drink. Of course, carbonated beverages provide carbon dioxide, which, when ingested, can cause abdominal distention and gurgling. If you are a gulper, you can significantly reduce intestinal gas by analyzing your eating habits, slowing down and making an effort to avoid air swallowing.

The gas produced by intestinal bacteria is quite another matter. When certain foods are partially digested and enter the large bowel (colon), the normal bacterial inhabitants of the intestine break down these foods. I'm oversimplifying the process, but the end result is gas. Gas-producing foods are a traditional source of jokes, but there is no doubt that beans and legumes do encourage bacterial action.

Recently, nutritionists have discovered that the non-absorbable sugar, sorbitol — a common non-caloric sweetener — is a primary source of gas due to bacterial action. "Sugarless" chewing gum and candy, for instance, can turn an otherwise harmless person into a social liability.

Anyone who suffers the indignity of intestinal gas can usually improve the situation by eating carefully and eliminating specific foods. An over-the-counter medicine called simethicone often can aid gas reduction.

DEAR DR. GOTT — I have been having trouble with weak knees for several years. I am 51. I cannot get up from any sitting position without pushing up with my hands. I am a fairly active housewife. Is there some exercise that would help this problem? I am not overweight. I have always been slender.

DEAR READER — I cannot tell from your question whether your difficulty is due to weak knee joints or weak thigh muscles. I think you ought to see an orthopedic specialist, because if you have arthritis, for example, medicine may help you. On the other hand, muscle weakness is more serious and could represent either an early nerve disorder or a primary muscle disease.

DEAR DR. GOTT — My husband developed very bad breath. After trying all the usual things, we discovered that half a glass of buttermilk after each meal did away with the odor. Perhaps you could tell us just what the buttermilk does. Could bad breath be caused by some kind of body-chemical disorder that some folks have?

DEAR READER — Buttermilk contains, among other things, harmless bacteria called lactobacilli. Possibly these helpful germs are neutralizing bacterial degradation of food caught between your husband's teeth. Perhaps the lactobacilli themselves are contributing to an initial digestive process that takes place in the mouth, thereby preventing food particles from being broken down — in a smelly way — by the billions of other organisms that inhabit our mouths.

'Bubble Boy's' death provided missing link, doctors say

HOUSTON (AP) — The death of David the "bubble boy" was a "powerful lesson for medicine" because it provides the "missing link" between viruses and the development of cancer, his doctors say.

"Because of David's life, we will be able to devise strategies to combat cancer, for which we now have no perfect therapy," said Dr. William T. Shearer, the boy's primary physician and chief of allergy and immunology at Baylor College of Medicine.

David, 12, died of blood cancer caused by a common virus that apparently was carried into his body by a bone marrow transplant doctors hoped would provide the immune system that nature forgot to give him.

The boy's body was unable to muster a defense against the virus, triggering a deadly case of B-cell lymphoma, a cancer of the white blood cells that make antibodies.

The Epstein-Barr virus, one of the most common germs, is known as the cause of infectious mononucleosis. About 90 percent of Americans carry the virus, but most people have a natural defense against it.

"Almost everybody will acquire the EB-virus in their lifetime. But most people won't become ill, and in fact, most won't even know they've acquired this virus," said Dr. Ralph Feigin, chairman of pediatrics at Baylor who also treated David.

In people with weak immune systems, such as David, the virus can cause cancer, Feigin said. The virus is difficult to detect because it hides in human B cells, which fight bacteria.

"Now we find in that youngster that that process has been illustrated better than any case on record," Shearer said. "David has provided the missing link that connects virus infection with the development of cancer."

A report about David's death was published today in the New England Journal of Medicine.

In a brief statement released by Baylor, David's family said, "His additions to the essence of science — the collection of useful knowledge — offers reassurance for many. We wish to believe it was part of God's design that David should do that."

David, whose last name has never been disclosed, was born with severe combined immune deficiency, a disorder that left his body defenseless against infection. He spent all but 15 days of his life in a series of plastic bubbles.

Doctors gave David a transplant of bone marrow from his 15-year-old sister, Katherine. They discovered after the transplant that she had been exposed to the virus.

The transplant failed, and 124 days later, on February 22, 1984, David died.

Because he lacked a healthy immune system, the virus attacked what few B cells David had and triggered a runaway growth, Shearer said at a news conference Wednesday. Most people have a natural defense to stop the process, but David did not.

Finally one cell emerged as the predominant cell and reproduced vigorously, Shearer said. The cells then began secreting immunoglobulins, which produce antibodies.

"It was one B cell gone berserk. It became malignant and secreted immunoglobulins — so much so that we were initially confused and thought the transplant was working and that David was developing an immune system," the doctor said.

David signed the consent form before the procedure and knew that he might contract cancer from the transplant. Tests after his death showed all three patterns of cell growth in tumors found throughout his body, Shearer said.

"Because of David, we can now explain that to patients in a much more detailed way. We can tell them how this might happen," he said. "It's a powerful lesson for medicine."

Herd football team begins spring training

By GARY CHRISTENSEN
Sports Editor

Spring training for Hereford High School football players began last week with about 75 athletes attending practice sessions.

Coach Jerry Taylor, head coach of the Herd, reports that about 112 players had been scheduled to practice in the spring, but more than 30 of them are ineligible because of the "pass-fail rule."

Students must pass all classes to be eligible for athletics or other extracurricular activities, and the rule has taken its toll on one fourth of the 1985 football squad.

Coach Taylor began spring training without 24 members of the 1984 team who graduate from high school this spring.

Four offensive starters and five defensive starters are returning.

The offensive starters back are Brett Clements, center; Casey Smith, guard; and Vincent Brown and Allen Dudding, running backs. Defensive starters who return are Adam Olivarez, tackle; Curtis Cotten, linebacker; and Stefan Hacker and Rodney Torres, secondary players.

Also back is Patrick Phibbs, who saw much action in the secondary last season.

"Spring training is a time for us to work on the fundamentals of the game. We're looking for blockers

Bluebonnet Bowl has new time, maybe new stadium

HOUSTON (AP) — New Year's Eve Bluebonnet Bowl will kick-off at a new time this year and the game may also be moved to a new location, bowl officials say.

Jack Busiek, president of the Greater Houston Bowl Association, said Friday the bowl's board of directors voted to move the game to Rice Stadium. The Bluebonnet has been played at the Astrodome since 1968.

"There is a strong possibility that we will play our 1985 game at Rice Stadium," Busiek said. "Hopefully, we'll be able to make an official announcement next week."

The main holdup is that Augie Er-furth, Rice executive athletic director, was at Southwest Conference meetings in Dallas this week.

Two weeks ago, bowl officials announced that this year's game would begin at 1:45 p.m.

Reasons for switching to the outdoors include finances and a better football atmosphere, officials said.

Minimum playoffs by bowls to participating teams may be raised this year by the NCAA from $400,000 to $500,000. Last year, West Virginia and TCU received almost $450,000 from the Bluebonnet.

Officials said the rent for Rice Stadium is more in line with what other bowls around the country pay for a one-day event.

Spring Training

Coach Jerry Taylor of the Hereford High School football team analyzes the efforts of the Herd during spring training. The Herd began the spring practice sessions on Wednesday and are expected to finish spring training on May 18.

and tacklers," Coach Taylor said.

"We like spring training. It gives us something to look forward to. It gives us a considerable amount of carryover into the two-a-days in the fall," he continues.

"I think it helps them become better ball players," he adds.

The HHS team has 21 calendar days to hold 18 workouts. The last practice will probably be on Tuesday, May 18.

Athletes who were in ninth grade this school year attend practices five days a week, for an hour and 45 minutes each day.

Varsity players work out two to two and a half hours each weekday, and also on Saturday morning.

"We're expecting some of the ninth graders to work out with the varsity. It just means we're giving them an opportunity to work out with the varsity, not necessarily that they are on the varsity," the HHS coach said.

Taylor notes that the Herd plans to team scrimmages at 10 a.m. Saturdays, possibly at the stadium starting next Saturday. The public may watch the scrimmages.

Taylor declares that most positions are wide open and are not sewed up by anyone.

"We're looking for the 22 best football players. Hopefully some of them will come through and be pleasant surprises for us," Taylor said.

The team's strengths in spring training, Taylor said, are the players' attitude and desire. Basic fundamentals are emphasized and concentrated on in spring practices.

"One of the biggest weaknesses this spring is not having a frontrunner in each position," Taylor said, adding that he hopes that some athletes will come forth in various positions in two weeks.

Taylor rates Palo Duro, Amarillo, and Plainview high schools as the top three opponents in District 3-5A next season.

"We're going to have to be ready to play, coming out of spring training," Taylor said, noting that the Herd plays Palo Duro the second week of the season.

Blocking Practice

Two members of the Hereford High School football team go through a blocking drill as part of the team's spring training, in preparation for the 1985 season this fall.

FCA Tourney Winners

This foursome took first place in the Fellowship of Christian Athletes golf tourney Friday afternoon at Pitman Municipal Course. Don Clements, Mike Fields, Don Martin and N.D. Kelso shot a three-under 32 to win the 9-hole "crazy scramble" tourney, with proceeds going to the FCA chapter for summer camp in Colorado.

Nine-hole event

FCA golf tournament held

A team composed of Mike Fields, Don Clements, Don Martin and N.D. Kelso took first place in the Fellowship of Christian Athletes Benefit Golf Tournament here Friday at Pitman Municipal Course.

The real winners in the "Crazy Florida Scramble" tourney were the local FCA members who will use the proceeds for a summer camp in Colorado. The adult chapter of FCA sponsored the tourney with Tommy Bowling and Don Clements as co-chairmen.

The winning team had a 32, three-under par on the 9-hole layout. Placing second with a 33 was the team of Jim Bullard, Bill Allen, Larry Sowers and Robert Kuback.

Each hole had a special feature, or handicap, including teeing off while sitting on a commode seat; hitting blindfolded, teeing off with a putter, teeing off with a crooked driver, using the worst drive of the foursome, hitting with a long driver, and hitting a tee shot left-handed.

Twenty-eight players participated in the tourney. Members of the two top teams received golf balls as prizes.

Youth baseball players in fund raising project

Baseball and softball players in Kids Inc. leagues are working on their fund-raising project this week. The concentration on fund raising is going on for about a 10-day period, notes Randy Evans, president of Kids Inc.

The baseball and softball players are selling candles, thermometers and calendars this year.

"We would appreciate everyone's support in helping these kids," Evans says.

The first indoor professional football game was played in 1902 at New York's Madison Square Garden.

Getting Creamed

Ted Taylor, youth minister at the First Church of the Nazarene, was fair game on Wednesday night for getting attacked with shaving cream, gelatin, or anything soft and slimy. The creaming was a privilege offered if 150 teens would attend the evening's activities. Taylor's group was just under its goal, but his "friends" Ed Wandling of First Christian Church and Randall Stotts of First Baptist Church brought a bus and a van full of eager teenagers to boost the attendance and enjoy the torture.

Americans respect religion more than other institutions

Americans have more respect for organized religion than for any of the country's other major institutions, and the impression is growing that religion is having greater impact on society.

But there has been a downward trend in the view that religion can answer most modern problems, although a majority still think it can do so.

These are among findings summarized in the latest reports of the Princeton Religious Research Center, a branch of the Gallup poll organization, which gathered the data.

Results of recent surveys also show some key differences between evangelicals and non-evangelicals on some major social issues, but also some striking concurrences. Protestant and Catholic views ran parallel on several issues.

A majority of both — 73 percent of Protestants and 72 percent of Catholics — favor prayer in public schools. Majorities — 51 percent of Protestants and 59 percent of Catholics — favor a ban on abortions except in case of rape, incest, or when the mother's life is endangered, Gallup finds.

Most Americans also are found to think it is proper for religious groups to express their views about political, social and economic matters, but not to oppose or endorse specific candidates.

Only a tiny minority, 3 percent, say their pastors have ever sided for or against particular candidates.

The findings were based on interviews with scientifically selected cross-sections, most of them involving 1,000 or more people.

The topmost degree of confidence expressed in organized religion, compared to other institutions, continued a consistent pattern turned up over the past decade.

Similar to results of six previous surveys conducted since 1973, the new study found that two-thirds of Americans — 64 percent — have a "great deal" or "quite a lot" of confidence in organized religion.

The next highest rated among U.S.

institutions, as measured by the degree of confidence in it, was the U.S. military, which 58 percent of the people voiced substantial trust.

In ensuing order, with the percentages having confidence in them, were these institutions:

Banks and the U.S. Supreme Court, both 51 percent; public schools, 47 percent; newspapers, 34 percent; organized labor, 30 percent; the U.S. Congress and big business, both 29 percent, and television, 26 percent.

While a majority — 56 percent — think religion can "answer all or most of today's problems," the proportion has showed a steady decline from what it was 10 years ago — 62 percent.

The present level was even further down from the high optimism of a quarter century ago when 81 percent in 1957 felt religion offered solutions to most all difficulties.

Nevertheless, the proportion of Americans who think religion is increasing its influence on American life has risen almost steadily from a low of 14 percent in 1970 to a current 42 percent.

The importance of faith to individuals has remained relatively steady over the past five years, with 86 percent saying it is "very important" or "fairly important".

REMEMBER THESE SAFETY TIPS

- Watch for power lines when climbing in trees.
- Do not climb electrical poles, towers or structures.
- Do not trim trees near power lines.
- Do not set ladders or scaffolds near power lines.
- Do not shoot at insulators on poles, towers or structures.
- Never climb on or go inside a substation fence. Call SPS to help you retrieve anything thrown into the substation or caught in its fence.
- Avoid using electrical tools like lawn mowers or hedge clippers when grass and leaves are wet.
- Be careful when digging. Call SPS to find out if there are any buried electrical lines in the area.
- Electrical cords should not be spliced or taped. Repair by shortening them or replace them entirely.
- Beware of exposed wires.
- Don't touch portable appliances (coffee makers, radios, hair dryers, etc.) with wet hands or while standing or sitting in water.
- Don't post signs on utility poles. A lineman hitting a nail with his cleat could slip and fall. Also, nails can snag protective gloves and destroy their insulation value.

Officials warn of possible land losses if drought continues

SAN ANGELO, Texas (AP) — Many West Texas farmers and ranchers stand to lose their land if a dry April stretches into May, a Texas A&M University agriculture expert has warned.

"It doesn't look good," Ken Cook, district 7 extension director said Wednesday. "We're going to lose a certain percentage of producers every year. We're going to accelerate that the longer the drought stays on."

April's sparse rainfall pulled San Angelo's year-to-date total below average for the first time this year. So far, the city has received 3.16 inches, or 0.86 inches below normal.

Jim Boyd, a National Weather Service forecaster at Mathis Field in San Angelo, said the 0.42 inches of rain received in April was significantly lower than the 1.75 inches the area usually gets, despite ample rain in other parts of West Texas.

"It was a considerable shortfall," Boyd told the San Angelo Standard-Times. "We just haven't had enough moisture. We missed some good chances when it went to the west or to the north of us. We haven't had everything together to make it rain."

He said the area has about a 50-50 chance of getting its normal 2.52 inches of rain in May.

The situation now is almost as critical as it was a year ago, he said, adding that some farmers were unable to get a crop started in 1984, and some are anxious about 1985.

"If we miss two years in a row, we could have a problem," Cook said.

Some ranchers who bought livestock recently could face another critical loss this year, he said. Farmers and ranchers can't count on receiving credit to pay for buying livestock feed in the absence of native grasses.

"Some who sold their livestock enterprises and bought back in will have to go back and sell off again," Cook said. "There's not enough agriculture credit in Texas to pay feed bills. The credit has been strained to the limit."

"In the first of March, we were in excellent shape," Cook said. "At the first of May, it doesn't look so well. It all hinges on one thing. They call it 'rainfall.' You can make a lot of mistakes in agriculture if you just get rainfall."

Dale Wilde, who with his brothers John and Donald, farms near Wall, Midkiff and Coyanosa, said he remained optimistic despite the year's low rainfall thus far.

"I have to be," he said. "I like farming too much to give it up."

Red Cross Update

By BETTY HENSON
Red Cross Executive

Special thanks to the members of the Touro Amis Study Club for the donation of $200 for the child safety seat loan program.

Our Chapter is beginning a loan program for families that cannot afford a safety seat for their children. An educational program is also a part of the program. Parents will learn to use the seat correctly and also learn why it is important to use the seat regularly. The chapter also has a film on seat belt safety that is very informative. Call the Red Cross office if you are interested in this program.

Strikes out nine

Blyleven shuts out Rangers 4-0

CLEVELAND (AP) — The last time he pitched, all the frustrations of a winless April had built up in Cleveland Indians' right-hander Bert Blyleven until he blew a fuse and made obscene gestures to the fans in Baltimore.

That incident Sunday cost Blyleven a $250 fine and a three-day suspension that he's appealing. But he says it also lifted an emotional burden from his shoulders, enabling him to turn in his best effort of the season Friday night in a 4-0 victory over the Texas Rangers.

"I'm not a real emotional person. But when I exploded, I think it helped me," Blyleven said after limiting the Rangers to four hits. "It relieved some of the tension that had built up inside of me. It made me feel like two telephone poles had been lifted off my shoulders. I'm still sorry I did it, though."

Blyleven 1-2, struck out nine and walked three while pitching his 47th career shutout, moving him into the 25th spot on the major leagues' all-time shutout list. The effort lowered his earned run average from 5.64 to a still uncharacteristic 4.35.

"When you're into May and you're 0-2 with an ERA over 5.00, you're a little concerned. But I knew that if kept going out there, something would happen — hopefully good," Blyleven said.

The veteran's last outing against the Rangers had been a one-hitter last July, so Texas realized Blyleven's 1985 record meant Mike Mason, 2-3, gave up all four Cleveland runs on seven hits over the first 4 2-3 innings to take the loss. Burt Hooten pitched 3 1-3 scoreless innings of relief to keep the Rangers in the game.

Cleveland took a 1-0 lead in the third when Chris Bando tripled and scored on Tony Bernazard's sacrifice fly.

They made it 3-0 in the fourth. Joe Carter singled and took third on Brook Jacoby's single, and Carter and Jacoby then pulled a double steal, with Carter scoring and Jacoby moving to second. Carmen Castillo doubled in Jacoby.

Erving leads comeback

76ers beat Bucks 109-104

By RALPH BERNSTEIN

AP Sports Writer
PHILADELPHIA (AP) — They don't call Julius Erving a "money player" for nothing.

The Philadelphia 76ers, losing to Milwaukee 104-102 with 1:20 to play Friday night, came downcourt and the ball went to Erving.

The 24-second shot clock was down to one when Erving launched a jump shot from just inside the three-point line.

Swish, and the score was tied at 104 with 56 seconds left.

The Bucks got the ball to Terry Cummings, but it was stolen by guard Maurice Cheeks, who flipped it to Erving. The player known as the "Doctor" grabbed it at halfcourt, dribbled in and scored the game-winning basket with 38 seconds remaining.

The 76ers, who had blown a third-period 18-point lead, prevailed 109-104 and now lead the Bucks 3-0 in their best-of-seven second-round National basketball Association playoff series.

In Friday night's only other game, the Los Angeles Lakers also took a 3-0 lead in their second-round series against Portland with a 130-126 victory.

Erving said of his game-tying jump shot: "I didn't have much of a choice. I had to let it go because there was only a few seconds left on the shot clock."

Lakers 130, Trail Blazers 126
Los Angeles won for the sixth straight time in the playoffs although Portland gave the Lakers their toughest test yet.

The Lakers, winning by an average of 20 points in their first five games, hadn't won previously by fewer than 16.

James Worthy scored 28 points and Kareem Abdul-Jabbar added 11 of his 26 points in a crucial fourth-quarter stretch, while Earvin "Magic" Johnson had 23 assists, one short of his NBA playoff record.

Los Angeles opened an 18-point lead late in the second quarter, and the Trail Blazers never caught up although they narrowed the deficit to four on four occasions in the fourth quarter.

Sam Bowie sank two free throws to make it 126-122 with 48 seconds to play before Abdul-Jabbar clinched the victory with the final two of his four straight free throws to make it 128-122 with 28 seconds remaining. Jim Paxson's layup just before the buzzer at the gap to four a final time.

The Blazers were led by Kiki Vandeweghe with 27 points.

Farmworker, homeport bills signed

AUSTIN (AP) — Bills to extend unemployment benefits to some 145,000 farmworkers and to contribute $25 million to lure a Navy battleship to Texas have been signed into law.

Gov. Mark White put his signature on both Thursday.

The farmworker bill for the first time includes agricultural laborers among those entitled to receive payments when out of work. Farmworkers were excluded from the old unemployment compensation law, which a judge ruled unconstitutional.

Beginning on Jan. 1, the law provides full coverage for migrant and seasonal workers on truck farms, orchards and vineyards without regard to payroll. The rest of the state's farmworkers will be phased in over a two-year period.

Texas Employment Commission officials estimate the new law will provide about $17 million in benefits each year to 145,000 farm laborers.

The workers have overcome one more vestige of plantation life which has subjected them to years of discrimination," said Jim Harrington, legal director of the Texas Civil Liberties Union.

Harrington, who represented farmworkers in the lawsuit, called the bill "a historic step in the farmworker struggle for justice in Texas, a step which signals the death knell of blatantly discriminatory laws against farmworkers."

Signing the legislation while surrounded by applauding farmworkers, White said the bill "will provide protection for all the people in our state who are going to be working and contributing and trying to improve their own lives and the lives of their families and friends."

The second bill signed is designed to boost the state's chances of landing a U.S. Navy battleship homeport by making either the Houston-Galveston area or the Corpus Christi area more attractive to Navy officials.

White said the $25 million offer proves how much Texas wants the ship. The money will be available for making improvements needed at either site, he said.

"This is now not just a promise — as other governors and states have made along the Gulf Coast — this is a commitment that has found its way into law. The money is available," White said.

White said details of the measure already have been sent to the secretary of the Navy. Navy officials have said they expect to make their final selection sometime this month.

Navy officials have narrowed the possible locations to the two Texas cities, plus two cities in Florida, and one each in Alabama and Louisiana.

Accent on agriculture

Corn planting has moved rapidly this past week. Many fields are up to stand and looking great. As the crops continue, insect problems will begin.

This past week several fields were found to have infestations of flea beetles moving from weeds and grass areas into the newly planted corn. Producers need to check fields as the corn emerges for the flea beetle.

The insect is easily recognized. The small beetles are very tiny, shiny black or greenish black insects that will jump when disturbed. They range in size from a little smaller than a pinhead to several times as large.

They damage corn plants primarily by feeding on the leaves, giving the leaves a whitened bleached appearance. Plant growth is retarded as the leaves wilt and hang limp.

Control is relative easy. Lorsban, Methyl Parathion, and Sevin are all recommended. Rates will vary depending on the product. Control in many fields can be achieved by spraying only those areas adjoining grass or weedy areas.

Producers interested in seeing new corn varieties growing may want to watch the corn variety demonstration planted on the Roy Carlson farm 1/2 mile west of Milo Center on the south side of FM Road 1057. This demonstration plot has seven white corn hybrids and seventeen yellow corn hybrids. The corn was planted on April 17 and 18 and should be up to stand this week. Watch how the various hybrids perform this year.

The 1984 Summaries of Result Demonstration for Deaf Smith County will be available this week. Producers will be receiving copies by mail. If you do not receive a copy and would like one please contact the county Extension Office at 364-3573.

SOME ATTEMPTS AT REDUCING COMPACTION may be backfiring, according to an Ohio State University agricultural engineer. According to the Ohio researcher, dual wheels, tandem axles and four wheel drive units spread tractor and machine weight over larger soil surfaces. Many sorghum producers take advantage of the improved flotation provided to get on and to work soils which might be too wet to work otherwise. The major cause of soil compaction, the engineer warns, is driving on or attempting to work soil which is too wet. A large tractor can weight up to 50,000 pounds. A combine full of sorghum can top 45,000 pounds. Soil at 18 and 20 inch depths may be compacted under such tremendous weights, and this compaction may restrict both air and water movement, thus restricting root growth, the Ohio engineer warned.

Researchers studying damaged trees

TEXAS CITY, Texas (AP) — Texas A&M University researchers are being asked to help find out what has caused plants to wilt and thousands of tree leaves to fall.

Karen Kilpatrick, an environmental control specialist with the Galveston County Health District, said researchers are studying the effects of pollution on vegetation in the industrial city.

Health officials in this Southeast

Texas community of 45,000 think the chemical ethylene may be responsible for the problem.

The health district office has received 100 calls this week from residents complaining about damaged trees and plants, Ms. Kilpatrick said. Two people also said members of their families have been bothered by sore throats, nausea and headaches, she said.

"It's difficult to tell if the same thing that affected the vegetation affected these people," she said.

Since Monday, residents living in an area just north of the city's refinery district have reported leaves dropping off trees and wilting on plants, Ms. Kilpatrick said.

She estimated 1,000 mimosa, Arizona ash, pine and oak trees have lost leaves in the last week.

"There has been a delayed reaction in a few of the oak trees. They're just starting to loose their leaves. They apparently aren't quite as sensitive as the trees that lost leaves earlier," she said Thursday. "We're also seeing a delayed reaction in some tomato plant and pear tree leaves."

Officials have not determined the source of the problem but have speculated that an ethylene or polyethylene leak at one of the refineries is to blame.

Ethylene is a colorless gas used by several refineries to make plastics. No leaks, however, have been reported, officials said.

Gerald Johnson of the Texas Agriculture Extension Service at Texas A&M said ethylene would cause the foliage to drop.

Farmers selling more produce

AUSTIN (AP) — Texas farmers are eliminating middleman selling by offering their products to wholesale buyers through farm cooperatives.

The Texas Department of Agriculture has helped form and organize farm cooperatives in the state so chain store supermarkets could buy more Texas farmer products, Agriculture Commissioner Jim Hightower said.

"Major wholesale buyers from across the state are now purchasing more products than ever before directly from Texas farmers," he said.

The Texas Department of Agriculture began helping farmers organize and form cooperatives in 1983 to make large amounts of products available to chain store supermarkets and wholesale buyers.

Kroger food stores in Houston which are now buying watermelons from a Waller County farmer cooperative once bought the melons in Florida and Georgia. A Rio Grande Valley cooperative is providing pinto beans which once were bought in Colorado.

"Cooperative marketing," TDA Direct Wholesale Specialist Gus Townes said, "makes it possible for producers with small acreages to sell to large buyers."

"TDA-assisted wholesale cooperatives in 1984 sold over $500,000 of produce," Hightower said.

Add up what a 9-month John Deere finance charge waiver means to you

Are most advertised "low-rate" finance offers the big deals they're made out to be? Not compared to John Deere's 9-month finance charge waiver on new tractors, 40- to 300-hp.* As the chart shows, the John Deere 9-month waiver is more attractive than most of the low-rate offers you've read about. And, as you can see, paying off the John Deere contract early could result in an effective rate as low as 3.38%.

Observance Planned

Mayor Wes Fisher recently signed a proclamation declaring the observance of Hereford Community Concert Association Week (May 5-11). Witnessing the signing is Ann Meyer, membership campaign drive chairman. During the week, the association's membership drive will be conducted and the campaign workers will have their annual dinner at 7 p.m. Tuesday at the Community Center. Special dinner speaker will be Mary Lloyd of New York, representative for the national concert association.

Hereford Community Concert Association Week observance begins today and will conclude Saturday, May 11. Several events have been planned this week.

The campaign workers annual dinner is set for 7 p.m. Tuesday at the Community Center and will feature guest speaker Mary Lloyd of New York, national concert association representative.

According to Beverly Brooke, dinner chairman, the dinner is being held for board members, workers, captains and spouses of the local association.

Also, the concert's annual membership drive is in full-swing. The public is encouraged to take advantage of memberships as there are several outstanding professional concerts that will be held here during the concert season.

Membership dues are $15 for adults; $7.50 for students through grade 12; and $40 for families. Memberships are available only during the campaign and no individual performance tickets will be sold.

Pioneer Day Celebration set

The public is invited to the Mid-Plains Pioneer Day Celebration scheduled to begin at 11 a.m. May 25 at the Bull Barn. Registration is $3 and will begin at 9:30 a.m. the day of the event.

During the celebration, the Pioneer of the Year will be named by KPAN radio and will receive a framed certificate from the Deaf Smith County Historical Society. Also, the oldest man, oldest woman and the one who travels the farthest will be recognized.

One class reunion, the Class of 1940, will meet at the event with a special table. The group will also receive special recognition.

The Pioneer Association will furnish the meat, bread and drinks. Members are asked to bring vegetables, salads and desserts.

United Nations Day, Oct. 24, commemorates the founding of the United Nations.

In 1978, Jane Fonda and Jon Voight got best actress and best actor awards for "Coming Home." "The Deer Hunter" won that year's best picture.

Guests welcomed by Draper Extension Club Wednesday

Vickie Higgins and Louise Walker, county extension agent, were welcomed as guests when members of Draper Extension Homemakers Club met Wednesday in the home of Johnie Messer.

Club President, Sherri Blackwell, called the meeting to order and a game, entitled "Do You Know Your Commercial?", was played as the opening exercise. Roll call was answered with "my favorite summer salad."

During the business meeting, members were advised that this week has been proclaimed as National Homemakers Extension Week and plans were made to attend the Spring Tea from 2 to 4 p.m. Tuesday at the Hereford Community Center.

Also, the Town 'n' Country Jubilee scheduled in August was discussed and Messer was nominated as the club's E.H.C. nominee for the state meeting set in September at Longview.

Members participated in a "stroll down memory lane." They brought their oldest and most interesting items.

"Eating Lightly and Counting Calories" was the program given by Walker.

The door prize was won by Walker.

"Put on Your Old Gray Bonnet" was written by Percy Wenrich and Stanley Murphy in 1909.

Members present included Tonie Vaughn, Wanice Jones, Carmen Rickman, Messer, Jason Messer, Blackwell and John Brian.

Seminar for women slated

A special seminar on Farm and Ranch Business Management for Women Landowners will be held Tuesday through Thursday at the Holiday Inn, 1-40 East in Amarillo.

A registration fee of $80 will be charged, which includes the cost of meals and materials. For registration information call Louise Walker, county extension agent, at 364-3573.

The seminar is designed to help women explore income-generating and tax saving opportunities for their farms and ranches, says Dr. Wayne Hayenga, economist and attorney with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service, Texas A&M University System.

Discussions will center on income taxes, farm leases, business organization, estate planning and oil and gas leasing.

Farm leases and operating agreements take many forms, notes Hayenga, and many of these will be discussed at the seminar including benefits and restrictions to both landowners and tenants.

Regarding income tax planning, tax-saving opportunities will be explored for business growth, land sales, retirement income and helping out children and grandchildren.

The sonar system of discovering objects under water was developed by Paul Langevin around the end of World War I.

A session on estate planning will deal with wills, trusts, estate tax deferrals, gifts, and property titles.

Estate planning tools which will be discussed include use of corporations and partnerships, selling part of the business, installment sales, oil and gas interests, special farm land valuation, deferred estate tax payments, life insurance and discounted estate taxes (flower bonds).

This is the second year Extension is hosting this program series. Other locations are Dallas/Fort Worth and San Antonio if people would like to attend at one of these locations.

Triple Donation

The Toujours Amis Study Club project committee of Laurie Owens and Rhonda Long granted three local organizations with $200 donations recently. Receiving the checks were, seated from left, Betty Henson of the Red Cross; Bill McDowell of the Chemical People; and Annette Albracht representing the soon to be opened Problem Pregnancy Center. The Red Cross will be using the money for carseat loan and rental, the Chemical People plan to purchase the McGruff series of puppet and tape programs for elementary school use; and the Problem Pregnancy Center will use the donation for operating expenses.

Career specialists gives job search tips

Eighty percent of the work force is under-employed, according to the director of Career Planning and Placement at Texas Christian University.

"This means the worker is not utilizing his or her unique combination of skills and personality in the job," said Ron Randall, who each year counsels graduates on how to find jobs.

The main reason people are under-employed is because they jump too quickly into a job without doing their homework and investigating who they are and the marketplace that would satisfy their needs, Randall contends.

"Some students can go about finding a job in a matter of weeks, while others can take up to one year to find employment," he said. "The one who takes two weeks is sometimes lucky. The person who takes a year is highly motivated and very interested in going about the job search in a proper way, because it does take some time."

In searching for a job, Randall says one needs to know what skills he has to offer, what skills he wants to use, the kind of environment he prefers to work in and the values which are important. Then when the interviews take place, one will know better if he fits the job.

Even if the first job is not the best

Among some primitive tribes, people hope to secure more game birds by drawing pictures of the creatures and imitating their cries.

choice, an employee can change jobs once in the marketplace, he said. Forty million people are in transition at any one time, so there are a lot of people looking for changes.

Summer jobs in a career-related field are an obvious benefit later, Randall continued.

"Counseling with faculty members is critical, because they often have contacts within the field." A summer job also gives experience in the process of looking for a job, overcoming the obstacles and interviewing.

Signing Proclamation

Judge Glen Nelson recently signed a proclamation declaring National Extension Homemakers Council Week May 5-11. Witnessing the signing are from left, Louise Walker, Terri Johnson, Mary

Carter and Gayle Carter. In conjunction with the observance, a Spring Tea has been scheduled from 2-4 p.m. May 7 at the Community Center. The public is invited to attend.

Homemakers Council Week to be observed

Deaf Smith County Judge Glen Nelson declared May 5-11 as Extension Homemakers Council Week. The week is being celebrated nationwide by 500,000 homemakers in the United States. Gayle Carter, Deaf Smith County Extension Homemakers Council chairman, says there are about 22,000 members in Texas and 119 club members in Deaf Smith County.

The Extension Homemakers Club program is an educational arm of the Texas Agricultural Extension Service, according to Louise Walker, county extension agent.

In honor of the week, Deaf Smith County Extension Homemakers Council will have a "Spring Tea" on Tuesday, 2 to 4 p.m. in Hereford Community Center. Club members invite everyone to come and learn more about Extension Homemakers Club work. There will be exhibits of projects and programs of clubs. Terri Johnson, Chairman of the State Texas Extension Homemakers Association Young Homemakers Committee, will be there to share the work of her committee.

Mary Carter, county TEHA chairman, says the tea is a "come and go" affair.

COLOR FOR SERENITY

Avoid bold and animated colors in rooms intended for study and rest. Soft and muted colors add a sense of relaxation and provide a restful backdrop for work or study. The same is true of a kitchen. Shocking colors tend to slow down the pace of food preparation and clean-up. Analyze the use of time of a specific room. If it is strictly a daytime room, then evaluate the color plan in terms of natural lighting. An evening room, on the other hand, will be viewed mainly in artificial light. Test colors under the corresponding conditions before making final selections. Allocation of color is not a simple procedure but one that requires some advance planning.

Selecting appropriate color schemes can often be more of a science than an art. Of course, there are always those who just have a knack for assessing the needs of a certain atmosphere while others may feel they could use some advice. FINISHING TOUCHES would be happy to answer any of your design questions...from draperies to window treatments, room additions to picture framing, we specialize in consultation and all aspects of implementation. Give us a call 364-8870 or drop by anytime during the business week between the hours of 9 and 5 at 501 E. Park.

Bright and dark colors advance; pale and soft hues reduce.

Abundant Life

AVOID ENTANGLEMENTS

By Bob Wear

WE DESIRE a pleasant relationship with other people, and this is possible if we learn how to establish this relationship so as to 'avoid entanglement'. By 'entanglement', we mean to weave in, and, as a figure of speech, to be involved, entangled in. When we permit others to become too much with us, or we too much with them; we are 'entangled', and can expect some unpleasantness, sooner or later.

HOW MUCH is too much? Of course, the answer will vary with different people and different relationships. There is a basic rule we can follow. Be aware of the limits of or the boundaries of the rights, the privacy, and the essentially personal matters of others and be very diligent in respecting these; not going beyond them, in any way. With this, we must be extremely careful about our own personal life situation. We must protect ourselves, in accordance with the same boundaries which we must respect in other people. We must keep that which is essentially personal to ourselves. We must not let ourselves become unduly dependent upon anyone else, and not permit anyone else to become unduly dependent upon us.

ENTANGLEMENT and friendship are not the same. True and enduring friendship is never an 'entanglement', but is the relationship in which all of the boundaries and limits of 'privacy' and 'rights', and 'essentially personal matters' are diligently respected. In 'friendship', there will be no efforts to interfere, in any way, in the life of each other; but, on the contrary, there will be and must be the highest degree of respect for the other person's integrity. There will be no probing to try to learn what may be going on in the other's life.

THE HAPPIEST relationship is 'guarded' with 'wisdom' & 'caution' in talk and action, and a 'cheerful kind of reserve'.

By DIANNE PIERSON
Library Director

"New Books" by Norah Lofts and Velda Johnston are featured this week at the Deaf Smith County Library. "Lady Living Alone" is Norah Lofts latest book. It takes a certain amount of courage to be a lady living alone. However, Miss Penelope Shadow, the fragile and utterly endearing heroine of Norah Lofts's witty novel, couldn't imagine just how much courage she would need. When Penelope Shadow's fourth novel becomes a bona fide success, no one is more surprised than the writer herself. Her sudden, albeit unexpected, wealth and fame prompt the delicately shy, modest Miss Shadow to assert her independence.

At age 35, she leaves the house she has shared with her half sister and niece and nephew to purchase a home of her own. But Penelope has a problem retaining servants. And she is afraid—afraid of the dark, afraid of being alone, afraid of everything in fact, save her novel writing.

One night, while driving back from a visit to a friend, Penelope stops at a guesthouse rather than face her own dark home. Terry Munce, the waiter, cook, and general houseman, makes her stay bearable. Penelope invites Terry to come and work for her, an invitation he accepts with great pleasure. Terry's kindness and utter devotion to Penelope's needs makes her life as a novelist much happier, but something in their cozy relationship is not quite what it seems, and Penelope soon discovers that, in this case, fact can be far worse than the worst of her imaginary phobias.

Also available this week is "Shadow Behind The Curtain" by Velda Johnson. For twenty years the shadow has been there, unseen, a threat to Deborah's future.

Deborah seemed to have everything—looks, intelligence, an indulgent, rich stepfather, and a handsome, wellborn fiancé. Then in her twenty-fourth year her stepfather died, leaving only debts, and when her mother also died not long afterward, she had to bear the burden of a terrible secret alone. Quite by chance, she has discovered that her real father, a man named Joseph Hartley, was alive. He was in prison, serving a life term for murdering an eight-year old girl. Hoping to find a way to prove his innocence, Deborah returned to Prosperity, New Mexico, where the murder took place.

The only clue Deborah had was Mrs. McCabe's testimony that Daisy McCabe, in the weeks before her death, kept chattering about someone named Joe. That testimony helped to convict Joe Hartley. Deborah must search for another Joe, someone who killed and then vanished like a shadow, a shadow that now threatened Deborah herself. "Shadow Behind The Curtain" is a wonderfully entertaining blend of romance and suspense.

Also available this week are The Bannaman Legacy by Catherine Cookson, "The Song of The Rainbird" by Barbara Whitnell and "Silverwood" by Joanna Barnes.

Thuett elected as nominee

Esther Thuett was elected as nominee for delegate to the 1985 State TEHA meeting set Sept. 24 in Longview when members of Wyche Extension Club met Thursday in the home of Louise Axe.

Clara Trowbridge presided during the business meeting and Pet Ott reported on what to do when the National Anthem is sung. Also, Axe reported on "How Do We Find The Childe Faptor" by Howard Morgan.

Roll call was answered by 10 members on "my favorite summer salad" and minutes were ready by Audrey Rusher, secretary.

Committee reports were given and the club voted to send Maude Richards, who is hospitalized with a broken hip, Mother's Day Cards and flowers.

The hostess report was given and Louise Walker, county extension agent, presented a program entitled "Cooking and Eating Light."

Members present included Axe, Rusher, Argen Draper, Camelia Jones, Novella Hewitt, Ott, Gene Holden, Carol Odom, Ethel Logan and Trowbridge.

The ever popular and versatile potato supplies us with many, many nutrients and is always a nutrition bargain. But potato lovers should be wary of a dangerous toxin that hides in the sprouts and skins of green potatoes.

The villain is solanine, a naturally occurring compound found in varying degrees in all potato varieties.

Potatoes themselves are not dangerous. However, when they sprout or become green due to exposure to light, the level of solanine increases.

Some individuals are cultivating potato sprouts and using them as salad topping. These may be in a grated form and may be hard to recognize, but they are toxic.

Popularity of fried potato skins poses another hazard. Skins that are green contain a high level of solanine. The compound cannot be boiled away or fried out.

Solanine has been known to cause some neurological and intestinal disorders. In a few cases it has been fatal. It's difficult at this time to say how much solanine a person can tolerate.

Take these precautions to avoid potato solanine poisoning:

-Do not consume potato sprouts or potatoes that have become green or bitter. Trim and discard green areas of potatoes.

-Guard against consumption of fried potato skins that are green.

-Store potatoes in a dark place to eliminate the production of sprouts and solanine.

Extension Homemaker Club members are my favorite group of people.

You're invited to a "Spring Tea" sponsored by them on Tuesday from 2 to 4 p.m. The tea is in celebration of National Extension Homemakers Council Week, May 5-11. There will be exhibits of club projects, programs, and scrapbooks of past accomplishments.

Extension Homemaker clubs are an educational arm of Texas Agricultural Extension Service. Members of the nine clubs in Deaf Smith County form the Council. Council officers are chairman, Gayle Carter; vice-chairman, Johnnie Messer; recording secretary, Mariellen Homfeld; corresponding secretary, Edith Higgins; treasurer, Carol Odom; reporter, Bertha Dettmann; parliamentarian, Kate Bradley.

Standing Committee chairman are yearbook: Johnnie Messer, chairman, Mary Carter, Peg Hoff, Kathy Hammock; Wynema Wheeler; Education: Jewell Hargrave, chairman, Naomi Brisendine, Lazelle Fowler, Wanice Jones, Gene Holden; finance: Carol Odom, Chairman, Mariellen Homfeld, Mona Gee, Martha Rickman, Edith Hunter; recreation: Maudette Smith, chairman, Nell Pope, Grace Covington, Tonie Vaughn, Mary Bass.

Mary Carter is serving as chairman of the County Texas Extension Homemakers Association. Terri Johnson, is the state chairman of the Young Homemakers committee.

These women are giving excellent leadership in Deaf Smith County. Do plan to come out and learn more about the Extension Homemakers Club program at the tea from 2 to 4 p.m. in the Community Center Lounge Tuesday. It is a "come and go" affair.

Educational programs conducted by the Texas Agricultural Extension Service serve people of all ages regardless of socio-economic levels, race, color, sex, religion, handicap or national origin.

Walker presents program

"Cooking and Eating Light" was the program presented by Louise Walker, county extension agent, when members of North Hereford Extension Homemakers Club met Thursday in the home of Peg Hoff.

Walker said that fish and chicken are the meats that are lowest in calories and the leanest red meat is round steak.

During the business meeting, Martha Lueb gave the council report and the May 16 meeting was cancelled. The next club meeting was set Sept. 5 in the home of Evelyn Crofford.

Lucille Gibbons and Ila Duval were welcomed as visitors by those present. They included Brenda Campbell, Edith Higgins, Naomi Brisendine, Crofford, Nell Hodges, Lueb and Hoff.

Genealogical Society meeting set

The next meeting of the Deaf Smith County Genealogical Society will be at 7:30 Thursday at the Deaf Smith County Library. The speaker will be Brick Autrey, librarian from the Dimmitt Library.

His topic will be "Railroads Coming Into Texas Before And After The Civil War." He will describe how migration into Texas was effected by where and when the railroads were built. Autrey is an authority on migration trails and patterns used by the American settlers as they moved futher and futher west. The public is invited. Come and bring a guest.

Remember the Society has acknowledgement cards for memorial gifts. Any amount is welcomed, up to and including full purchase price for a special purchase.

The book committee is making some memorial selections, including a history of southern Arkansas counties and a Utah census index. Others still in the selection stage are on Kentucky and, if possible to find, Quaker history. These books are not necessarily from Society members but are special purchases by non-members.

Other books will be purchases on a collective memorial contribution basis but will not bear a memorial name plate inside.

Two Society members attended the seminar in Amarillo April 27. The topic was "Genealogical Resources in the National Archives." It was informative and beneficial to both beginners and seasoned researchers. Three states and some twenty communities were represented.

TCU researcher studies self-injurious behavior

It begins as a tic in childhood. Instead of going away with age, it worsens and is joined by other unwanted facial contortions, body movement and vocalizations. In rare cases it leads to self-injurious behavior—chewed lips or gnawed fingers.

Tourette Syndrome is a disease that affects one in 10,000 people. Often misdiagnosed as a temporary "habit tic," Tourette Syndrome is a lifelong ailment resulting from a disorder of the central nervous system. It is only one of several rare diseases, such as Lesch-Nyhan syndrome, that causes self-injurious behavior.

What goes wrong with the brain to cause the unwanted behaviors is the subject of research by Dr. Kathryn Mueller, a psychologist at Texas Christian University. She is one of only a handful of researchers in the country—and probably the world—investigating the neuronal cause of self-injurious behavior.

"It's not a very pleasant kind of research," she said, "but it seems to me that the problem is so severe in children that it's worth it."

Dr. Mueller is studying how the brain operates in those displaying self-injurious behavior. Since science has a fairly thorough understanding of how brain signals are transmitted normally, Dr. Mueller is trying to find how the brain deviates from normal to cause self-injurious behavior. The disorder must be located and identified before medication can be prescribed to counteract it.

Although most of Dr. Mueller's work is conducted in the lab, she will begin following a new tack in her research by studying the mentally retarded. Because self-injurious behavior is much more common among the retarded, Dr. Mueller hopes to obtain from them some clue as to why they cause themselves harm.

Dr. Mueller, who has been researching self-injurious behavior since 1976, earned the master's and doctoral degrees at the University of Arizona. She has been a post-doctoral fellow at the University of California in San Diego and Marshall University in West Virginia. She has been an assistant professor of psychology at TCU since 1983.

Ann Landers

Tragic story

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I know only too well how "Heartbroken in Idaho" feels. Our 7-year-old is also the victim of a closed-head injury. He was hit by a reckless 17-year-old driver in our neighborhood.

"Idaho" suggested it might be helpful for youths to see their accident victims in the hospital, that it might make them drive more carefully in the future. I can tell "Idaho" it didn't help in our case.

The kid who hit our son came to the pediatric intensive care unit 10 days later. Our son was still in a coma, had an intercranial pressure monitor screwed down into his skull, tubes, catheters and I.V.'s running everywhere. His breathing was done by a respirator.

Did the sight of our child's suffering change this kid's driving habits? Not one bit. He still rips around the streets like a maniac. I would bet it is only a matter of time before he has another terrible accident.

A year before he hit our son, I spoke to his mother about his crazy driving. She called me a troublemaker and said I shouldn't bother her with such nonsense because he was "a sensible man."

Surely such lack of parental discipline contributed to our son's present condition. This once bright, top-of-the-class student is now being considered for special education classes because he "can't keep up."

So, parents, when an adult tells you that your son or daughter is driving like a maniac, please listen. He could kill himself as well as several others.--SICK AT HEART IN MICHIGAN

DEAR SICK AT HEART: Thank you for sharing your tragic story. I hope and pray those crazy drivers out there will pay attention and that their parents will take it seriously if someone complains.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: This is for

Trent Thomas initiated recently

Mortar Board, national honor society for senior students, has initiated 35 new members at the University of Texas at Austin. Among those was Trent Thomas, son of Mr. and Mrs. Wayne Thomas of 206 Sunset Drive.

Members are selected on the basis of their contributions in the areas of scholarship, leadership and service to university life. In order to be considered for membership, a student must have maintained a grade-point average of at least 3.2 (A equals 4 points.)

50th class reunion planned

The Hereford High School graduating class of 1935 will observe their first class reunion during the Pioneer Day Celebrations scheduled May 25 at the Bull Barn.

The group will register at 6 p.m. Friday, May 24, at K-Bobs and on Saturday, May 25, they will be seated at a special table during the luncheon.

A reception, visitation and tours to various attractions will be held that Saturday afternoon.

Anyone having any information about Don Atherton is asked to contact Adeline Loerwald.

It's quite likely that germs take second place to proprietary medicine ads as a prime cause for various symptoms people experience.

Joe and everyone else who thinks fat women in red, green, blue or purple polyester stretch pants should be shot.

For pity's sake, what possible difference can it make to anyone what we fat women wear? From everything we hear and read it's hard to believe that anyone is looking at us. We've been brainwashed into thinking that all eyes are on those women whose bones stick out at right angles. Believe it or not, many fat people are decent, warm, caring folks and the world would miss them if they were shot for wearing loud-colored stretch pants.

If Joe wants to get rid of ugly females how about eliminating the undernourished, emaciated dames we see jumping around on TV wearing swimsuits and exercise togs with leg-holes cut up to their armpits? Half their backsides are hanging out and their breasts are mashed flat as pancakes. This is attractive?

I don't expect you to print my letter because I have yet to see you say anything in defense of fat people. But I'm glad I wrote it.--TICKED IN TEXAS

DEAR TICKED: Here it is. Meanwhile, kwitcherbellyakin' and lose some weight. You'll feel better about yourself and it could add years to your life.

How to--and how much? Find out with Ann Landers' new booklet, "How, What, and When to Tell Your Child About Sex." For your copy send 50 cents along with a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope to Ann Landers, P.O. Box 11995, Chicago, Illinois 60611.

Radial keratotomy receives good marks in recent study

At first, the idea of carving up the clear outer surface of the human eye to improve vision no doubt seemed drastic and risky.

Now this medical procedure, called radial keratotomy, is gaining more and more acceptance as research continues. A recent study by the National Eye Institute brought encouraging news about this operation for reducing nearsightedness.

Results from the first year of the five-year study indicate that the procedure may be a relatively safe and effective alternative to corrective lenses.

Researchers warn, however, that radial keratotomy has been performed in the U.S. only since 1978, and long-term problems might not show up for 10 to 30 years. The American Academy of Ophthalmology regards radial keratotomy as an "investigational procedure" whose short-term benefits of better sight should be weighed against the possibility of problems later.

The Texas Medical Association says the procedure involves making eight to 16 tiny slashes in the cornea, a clear, dime-sized covering about as thick as a credit card. The slashes run from a point near the center of the cornea to the edge--like the spokes of a wheel.

The cuts weaken the cornea, allow internal pressure to form bulges at the cornea's edges, and flatten its center. This flattening refocuses the light entering the eye to eliminate nearsightedness, the inability to see distant objects clearly.

The recent study of 413 patients at nine U.S. medical centers consisted of 69 percent who had 20/200 vision or worse in the eye, meaning that the only eye-chart letter they could read was the big E. All but one of the 413 had worse than 20/40 vision, the minimum required in most states to get a driver's license without corrective lenses.

One year after surgery, 78 percent of the 413 had 20/40 vision or better in the eye operated on. The most common problems were "undercorrection" and "overcorrection." But the study's director reported "no severe vision-threatening complications at one year."

Vision in an eye may not stabilize for up to a year after surgery, the study notes, but nearsightedness generally decreases during this period. Radial keratotomy reduced nearsightedness in all eyes in the study but was particularly effective on those with better vision initially.

NEW RULES ON LOANS

Interest-free demand loans between parents and children shift the investment income earned by the loan proceeds from the parents' high tax bracket to the child's low one. However, the Tax Reform Act of 1984 does away with this shelter. If a minimum rate of interest is not charged, one which is to be set every six months, the IRS treats the arrangement as though that interest rate was used. The amount of interest that "should" have been collected is reported to the lender and must be reported as income. Likewise, the borrower gets to deduct the amount of interest that is reported, even though it is more than what was actually paid.

LABELS

It is easy to label things and by labeling them, dismiss them without looking to see what is really there or what the truth is.

I am running for the H.I.S.D. school board because I am concerned about the education that is provided to all our children. As a professional educator and a mother of two children, I am concerned that the education we offer the children of Hereford be the best that it can be. Our school board needs educators making decisions about the quality of teaching and learning in this district. As long as we are not meeting the needs of every student we cannot be satisfied with our efforts. I believe that our children must be treated as individuals and allowed to progress according to their abilities rather than according to calendars and standardized groups.

I think my background makes me uniquely qualified to serve on the board. I have a master's degree in education with 8 years of classroom teaching experience and am currently teaching at West Texas State University. As more and more changes come from the state, it will become increasingly important to have board members who have a thorough knowledge of the educational process and some first hand experience in what goes on in a classroom. I have the skills and experience necessary to help lead the board in that direction.

This election should be about qualifications and level-headed concern for the best education we can provide our children. It should not be about labels, rumors, gossip or distortions.

As you consider the issues and qualifications of the candidates, I ask that you vote for me this Saturday, May 4, at the Community Center. Together we can ensure that the board makes sound educational decisions.

Sincerely,

Margaret J. Marshall

Senator Bill Sarpalius says

Bad idea turns into good one

AUSTIN — Sometimes, you can take a bad idea, work on it a while, reshape it and turn it into a good idea. Time and cooperation are the keys. When everyone works together and works with patience, good things can be accomplished.

That happened two years ago when it became clear farmers were going to lose their exemption from Texas' workers' compensation law. The district judge who ruled the exemption unconstitutional, the attorney general, those backing the exemption repeal and those of us who opposed repeal worked together.

The result was a bill that continued the exemption for the smaller, struggling farmers who couldn't afford the insurance premiums. The bill, by bringing in the larger farms, guaranteed 99 percent of the state's farmworkers would be covered. Such is American compromise at its best. Two diametrically opposed sides sat down, hashed out an issue and came up with a solution acceptable to virtually everyone involved.

Now, let us turn to an example of American compromise at its worst. We refer to the unemployment compensation bill that recently passed the Senate.

The bill simply is a boondoggle, passed in a panic atmosphere with little or no regard to the farmer or, for that matter, the farmworker. It appears in theory to contain an exemption for small farmers but in reality could prove a big detriment to them.

House Bill 32, the unemployment comp bill, does make a few token nods to the small farmer. The measure, sponsored by Rep. Lloyd Criss and Sen. Oscar Mauzy, phases in the program by providing a limited exemption to farmers.

During fiscal year 1986 (which begins this Sept. 1), farmers with a payroll of $7,500 and four employees or less per quarter will be exempt from paying the insurance. During fiscal year 1987 (which begins Sept. 1, 1986), the exemption will drop to $6,250 or less per quarter and three or fewer employees.

For all practical purposes, the employee exemption is a joke. If you have more than four employees in a quarter, you're going to have a payroll of more than $7,500. Most farms in the Panhandle and on the South Plains, if they have any kind of staff, will break that exemption ceiling by the end of 1987's first quarter.

Those that escape then surely will break the ceiling by the end of 1987 harvest. After the unemployment comp program has been in effect two years, the only farms still exempted will be the so-called "hobby" farms, those operations owned by people with large outside sources of income. Sadly, things didn't have to happen this way. Serious work between all sides in-

In robbery, kidnapping

Wheelchair-bound man charged

HOUSTON (AP) — A 33-year-old Baytown man was held without bond after being accused of robbing a hamburger stand, rolling to a discount store parking lot, shooting a woman and then forcing two hostages to hail him a taxi, police said.

Edward Gale Crawford was charged Friday with attempted capital murder, aggravated robbery and aggravated kidnapping, said police Sgt. Fred Berner.

Police said the hostages were released after they helped the gunman in the cab. But a 62-year-old woman who was shot after she refused to help him flee was hospitalized Friday in serious condition, police said.

Berner said Crawford lost his legs after a train accident several years ago. They were amputated above the knee.

Investigators said a man rolled up to the counter at Mary Ann's Old Timey Hamburgers in southwest Houston about 7 p.m. Thursday and pointed a .38-caliber revolver at owner Mary Ann Rowell.

Ms. Rowell said she thought it was a toy gun and was about to knock it aside when the gunman ordered her to open the cash register.

"He just said, 'Don't say anything to anybody. Just give me the money,'" Ms. Rowell said.

After she gave him about $80, he left the restaurant.

"It took him about 15 seconds to wheel across (the street)," she said. "Nothing stopped him."

Ms. Rowell said she called a discount store across the road and warned employees that an armed man in a wheelchair was in the parking lot.

"By that time he had shot someone," she said.

The man had pulled the gun on Jennifer Westerhoff, 21, and ordered her to let him in the car.

"I had time to think about what was happening while he got his wheelchair into the car," Ms. Westerhoff said. "It decided it would be a lot more dangerous to have him with a gun to my head."

Ms. Westerhoff said she jumped out of the car and it rolled to a stop after knocking over a trash container.

The suspect got back into his wheelchair, rolled across the parking lot and confronted Roberta Rose Hinkle as she walked to her car, police said.

When Ms. Hinkle refused to give him a ride, the suspect shot her once in the chest, police charged.

Ms. Hinkle was in serious condition Friday at Ben Taub

Hospital, a spokesman said.

The suspect then took a man and woman hostage, abandoned his wheelchair and commandeered the couple's car. The couple drove him to an intersection in northeast Houston, where he ordered the couple to hail a cab.

Family depression study needs additional volunteers

Wanted: 45 family groups to participate in a scientific study taking a look at the relationship between depression and a physiological measurement of sleep—REM latency. (REM latency means the time from falling asleep to the first rapid eye movement (REM) period. REM sleep is a normal stage in which the brain processes are very active while the rest of the body is experiencing extremely inhibited muscle activity. It is the period most often associated with dreaming.)

Dr. Donna Giles, research assistant professor of Psychiatry at The University of Texas Health Science Center at Dallas, is seeking volunteers for a $292,000 grant funded by the National Institutes of Mental Health for three years. Giles, who is also associate director of the department's Affective Disorders Unit, says that past studies, including those done in the UTHSCD Sleep Laboratory, headed by Dr. Howard Roffwarg, have shown that many patients with depression have a reduced REM latency time. If it can be established that a pattern of reduced REM latency runs in the same family groups in which depression has been diagnosed in at least one family member, then perhaps a "marker" for vulnerability might be established, says Giles.

"In our studies here we have found that 60-70 percent of endogenous depression (a depression in which biological abnormalities are found and in which the experience of depression is very unlike normal sadness) have reduced REM latency," she says.

The research psychologist says that if a relationship is found between depression families and reduced REM latency time, then sleep-lab tests may have a beneficial screening procedure for depression. Individuals who are at risk by virtue of family relationships could be more sensitive to early signs and symptoms of depression.

It is speculated that differences in REM latency might exist with different kinds of depression. The investigation of these depression subgroups is an exciting new research topic, and findings may help with the development of new diagnostic tools for classifying subgroups. This in turn could lead investigators to more accurate choices for treatment for individual patients. REM latency may be one such possibility, says Giles.

These include a general feeling of sadness, apathy or loss of enjoyment in pastimes that used to be fun, changes in sleep and eating habits, the beginning of a negative attitude and negative thinking—even suicidal thoughts.

"We ultimately hope to learn more about the genetic transmission of depression," she continues. However, it must be stressed that these are all long-term goals and the current study is just 'a piece of the puzzle.'"

The researcher says she hopes that volunteers who have had a documented case of depression, that is, who have been diagnosed and/or treated for the disorder, will come forward. In addition to the person who has had a problem with depression in the past or who is currently experiencing a problem, researchers would ideally like two parents and two brothers and sisters: participants must be between the ages of 20 and 70 because these are the times considered "at risk" for depression. (Giles says that ages 15-19 are also considered at risk, but adolescents tend to have a longer REM latency.) Another combination might be two parents and two of their adult children. In addition to the 30 families with depression as established by diagnostic interviews and testing, Giles says there is a need for 15 control families. In the control groups, there must be no one with a diagnosis of depression.

Giles says that while there is no payment built into the grant for the depression groups, she hopes that people who know they have a history of the disorder in their families will want to participate. "Because those who are related to individuals with depression are at increased risk themselves for developing depression, anything we can learn will help them, either directly or indirectly."

The volunteers who have already stepped forward include a family in which the mother has depression problems. The father has never had such problems, but a son in his early thirties has a serious case of depression, which is characterized by a complete inability to function. A younger child has not so far suffered from a depressive illness.

Another case includes a husband and wife who have suffered no depressive episodes. However, one of their adult children, a fraternal twin, suffered from a severe depression that ended in suicide. To date the remaining children have shown no signs of depression.

Participants in the study will have a psychiatric evaluation and spend two to three nights in the UTHSCD Sleep Lab. When necessary, transportation expenses will be paid for family members who live outside the Dallas area.

"There is much to be learned about the physiology, biochemistry, psychology and genetics of depression. The last 20 years of research has resulted in significant advances in our understanding, and we believe that systematically following leads available to us can only help, says Giles.

Rutabagas

DEAR POLLY — How should rutabagas be stored? Do they have to be refrigerated? How can they be prepared besides mashing? — JANET

DEAR JANET — Waxed rutabagas (and I've never seen one for sale that wasn't waxed) will keep for about three months stored in a cool dry place such as a cool, dry basement or in the refrigerator crisper. Refrigeration, per se, is not absolutely necessary, but they should be kept cool and dry.

Rutabagas must be peeled before eating, of course, and they can be fixed in a variety of ways. Try cubes or sticks of raw rutabagas served with your favorite dip. I love rutabagas julienne sliced and sauteed in butter with a light-sprinkling of dill, salt and pepper. They can be mashed as you suggest, or mashed and combined with mashed potatoes. They can be boiled, then served with butter or a sauce, or braised gently in broth. They taste great when prepared in a
