Smith sells to Furr's, to close store Saturday

Furr's, Inc., has purchased the Smith Food & Drug supermarket here in Hereford, it was revealed to Smith employees at a 12:30 p.m. meeting today.

A Smith official, Richie Smith, told employees that Furr's will purchase the store here, as well as Smith stores in Plainview, Pecos and Fort Stockton. Employees here were told that the Smith store would close at 6 p.m. Saturday.

Employees were told they could file an application for employment with Furr's or with Smith for its El Paso and Albuquerque stores. Furr's operates the new Save 'n' Gain store in Hereford.

The closing will affect over 100 employees at The Hereford store.

Smith employees also heard a brief message from Roland Hasenoehrl, president of Furr's. He said there was not much he could say at this time and no decision had been made on what to do with the Smith building.

According to employees,

Hasenoehrl said that Save 'n' Gain had lost hundreds of thousands of dollars in the past few months and, while the company felt positive about business in Hereford, there was a limit on how many supermarkets could make a profit in the city. He added that the economy had much to do with the transaction.

The Smith official said an agreement was reached last night in Dallas on the purchase. He said the economy looked good when Smith's opened in March, but the store had been struggling in recent months.

Save 'n' Gain opened its $5.5 million supermarket here in February. The Save 'n' Gain building is a modern 65,000 square-foot building. The store employs about 150 people.

The Furr's operation includes more than 100 stores and the facility here was the 21st Save 'n' Gain store to be opened.

After the Smith store opened in March, there were some speculation that the two large supermarkets were too much for a city the size of Hereford. Competition between the two stores has provided some of the lowest grocery prices in West Texas for area shoppers.

Reagan will face tough questions at tonight's conference

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan, struggling to get off the defensive and quell reports of dissension within his administration, faces questions at a news conference about sending arms to Iran, a nation he accuses of fostering terrorism.

The president meets the White House press corps tonight for the first time in three months, and questions are certain to focus on recent turns in the Reagan administration's foreign policy.

Attention was expected to turn to matters such as Reagan's denial that he had swapped arms for hostages with Iran, as well as the confusing results of his Iceland summit with Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev.

On the domestic front, Reagan most probably will be asked about his failed campaign to hold onto a Republican Senate and whether he plans to take a confrontational or cooperative style with the new Democratic Congress during his first two years in office.

White House spokesman Larry Speakes told reporters Tuesday that Reagan and his staff prepare so extensively for the quizzing that "we can guess 99 out of 100 questions that you guys pose and we can tell 'em nine times out of 10 who's going to ask them."

Reagan's news conference comes a week after he attempted to curb media speculation about the deal with Iran in a nationally televised speech. Reagan said he wanted to give the facts to the American people because he had been forced by media reports to make public the secret relationship with Iran.

Fourteen percent of 1,464 adults polled nationwide by the Los Angeles Times last weekend said they found Reagan's statement essentially true.

The president said he had approved a secret effort to establish contacts with moderate elements in the Iranian government and admitted that some U.S. arms had been shipped to Iran as a result. He denied that the arms were traded for the release of three Americans held hostage in Lebanon.

The arms shipments to Iran were part of a seven-year pattern of CIA operations to gain favor with the Tehran government while at the same time trying to destabilize it, according to unnamed sources cited by The Washington Post today.

Reagan also is expected to be queried on the apparent split within his administration over the Iranian connection and his reasons for not informing congressional leaders and the Joint Chiefs of Staff about the operation.

Secretary of State George Shultz has clearly distanced himself from the administration's decision and has refused to make clear whether his aversion to the plan might prompt him to leave the administration. Secretary of Defense Caspar Weinberger also is reported to be uncomfortable with the administration's actions.

Tax withholding forms expanded to four pages

WASHINGTON (AP) — More than 100 million workers are about to have their first encounter with the new overhaul of the federal income tax.

Within the next several days, employers across the nation will begin receiving supplies of a revised Form W-4 that every worker is required to file to adjust the amount of taxes that will be withheld from paychecks once the new law takes effect Jan. 1.

The sooner the form is filed, the better for most workers, says the Internal Revenue Service. Under the law, employees have until Oct. 1 to complete the form, but a person who waits that long could face a penalty for having too little withheld earlier in the year.

Whatever simplification is expected from the new tax law, it is not evident in the new W-4 forms. The old form and its instruction covered two pages; the new version, unveiled by the IRS at a news conference Tuesday, covers four pages and includes a 22-column table of figures.

It could have been made simpler, said IRS Commissioner Lawrence B. Gibbs. But in 1988, when workers begin filing tax returns under the new law for the first time, "many taxpayers would learn they owed thousands more in taxes and, in some cases, penalties as well," he said.

"Going from two pages to four means a more complicated-looking form and the greater likelihood of some public confusion but doing so also means people's withholding will be reasonably close to the actual amount of tax owed," Gibbs said.

The W-4 form has been revised to reflect that the new tax law raises personal exemptions and standard deductions but reduces some itemized deductions and repeals others. The aim is to permit workers to bring their withholding reasonably close to their actual tax liability.

About three-quarters of the 102 million tax returns filed this year claimed refunds, meaning those taxpayers had too much withheld from their paychecks. Refunds averaged $982. Many people deliberately have taxes over-withheld because they like to get a one-time refund, but Gibbs said those who want to balance withholding and liability will find it easier under the revised form.

To fill out the form, workers will have to estimate what adjustments (such as Individual Retirement Account contributions), itemized deductions and tax credits they will have under the new law for 1987.

Over half of all workers — chiefly those who do not itemize deductions and do not have a working spouse — will be able to adjust withholding on the new form without making any calculations at all, said Arthur Altman, the IRS official in charge of forms.

A worker may claim one withholding allowance each for self,

The Christmas Stocking Fund may not be empty this year, after all.

The Brand has heard from at least four citizens who want to continue the program if they can get others to join them in helping administer the CSF program.

They ask that any reader who is interested in serving on the anonymous committee to contact them by calling Speedy Nieman at The Brand. This writer will pass your name along to the interested persons, and they will contact you.

The interest in continuing the program came after an article in Sunday's Brand announced that the group which has sponsored CSF for six years had decided to discontinue it.

"We just believe the CSF program is too important and is too much of a community tradition to drop," said one of the group. "We think we can get the help through a number of organizations to properly distribute the help to less-fortunate families," said another.

The interested people already have an office available for accepting applications, but they want to have a representative group of people involved in the program. Because of the nature of the program, the group said it was their desire for the committee members to remain anonymous.

The Brand has agreed to continue its role in publicizing the program and taking contributions if a credible organization is formed to continue the stocking fund.

A sailor stationed on a far-flung U.S. outpost was noted for his deep loyalty to his fiancée. Then one day he received a callous letter telling him she was going to marry someone else, and would he please return her picture.

He was so upset by this treachery that his buddies rallied to avenge their friend. A collection of photographs, snapshots, and pin-up girls was made from every man on the base. They were packed into a huge crate and shipped to the fickle girl.

Upon opening the crate, she found a note reading: "Please pick out your picture and return the rest to me. This is a little embarrassing, but I don't remember which one is yours."

WTSU board throws support behind school president

CANYON, Texas (AP) — West Texas State University regents gave President Ed Roach their wholehearted and unanimous support despite a no-confidence vote the faculty earlier gave him.

"The board feels that Dr. Roach had done an outstanding job during these times of financial difficulties for higher education," Board President T. Boone Pickens said after the Tuesday vote.

The vote follows two weeks of controversy at the university during which time faculty members voted no confidence in Roach and the Alumni Association gave Roach its support.

"In as far as Dr. Roach is concerned, the task at hand is not completed and the job will not be easier, but we as a board wish to express our appreciation to him and offer our total support."

The board also postponed any decision regarding cost overruns of the president's house and discussed in a 1½-hour executive session real estate the university may need as its campus undergoes changes, said Ralph Spencer Sr., an Austin architect.

Pickens asked Regent Tom Christian, chairman of the board's finance and administrative services committee, to look into options the university has to pay the $211,000 it owes for the president's house.

The president's residence project was originally approved by the Coordinating Board, Texas College and University System, for $494,900.

But, WTSU spent $991,000 on the house.

In October, coordinating board members said they could justify $285,700 in cost overruns but voted to require the university to pay the remainder with private funds.

The expense for the president's residence added to the controversy surrounding Roach.

Faculty members complained the home was being built at a time when the school was forced to make deep cuts in its budget.

Judge to take unpaid leave

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) — State District Judge Tom Cave, charged with swapping courtroom leniency for sex, began an unpaid leave of absence Tuesday after his request for a salaried leave was denied.

The State Commission on Judicial Conduct rejected Dave's request to continue getting his $75,587 annual salary while on leave, said commission director Bob Flowers.

Flowers would not say why the commission refused the pay request, but said the judge will be allowed to contest the decision during a Jan. 9 hearing in Austin.

The Texas Constitution allows the commission to suspend a judge under indictment, with or without pay, as soon as the indictment is issued. But the commission generally allows judges to step aside before they are suspended.

In his request to the commission made yesterday, Cave, 56, said the 11-count federal indictment against him is based on witnesses who are not credible.

"I assure you that immediately following my vindication at trial, I want to resume my duties," Cave said in his letter sent Tuesday to the commission.

Tom Hill, one of Cave's attorneys, called the judge's request "not a pleasant decision, but one we thought was best for all."

Before being indicted Friday, Cave said in an interview with The Dallas Morning News that he planned to continue as 213th District Court judge.

The judge, along with attorney Ronald Aultman and bail bondsman Joe Dorsey Adams, was accused of conspiracy to violate civil rights, violation of civil rights and mail fraud. Aultman faces three additional charges of witness tampering.

The 18-page indictment accuses the men of coercing female probationers to have sex with Cave in return for leniency from the bench. In one case, the indictment alleges Cave had sex with a probationer about 90 minutes before she appeared in his court.

Board OK's homeowner rate increase

AUSTIN (AP) — Insurance companies that claim destructive weather in recent years hit them in the pocketbook have been granted an average increase of 8.6 percent on Texas homeowners' insurance premiums.

The new rates approved Tuesday by the State Board of Insurance include increases of as much as 23.1 percent for homeowners who opt for reduced deductibles in their coverage.

The insurance industry, citing three years of weather-related losses, pushed for a 19.9 percent statewide average increase in homeowners' rates.

"Obviously, we want what we wanted," Rick Gentry of the Texas Insurance Advisory Association said after the board set the rates Tuesday.

But Gentry said the industry would not challenge the new rates, which take effect March 1.

Actual rates vary by territory and type of coverage. For example, the annual premium on a $100,000 brick veneer home in Houston, with 1 percent deductible, will increase from the current $541 to $559. The increases are more severe for homeowners who opt for lower deductibles.

Gentry said the industry needed higher premiums because of weather-related losses dating back to Hurricane Alicia in August 1983, severe winter weather in December 1983 and a series of losses in 1985.

Military hurt by falling oil production

WASHINGTON (AP) — Weak prices for oil and the resulting decline in domestic production could jeopardize U.S. national security in the event of a military mobilization, according to a report given to a cabinet-level group.

However, administration officials have been skeptical when the argument of national security has been raised, saying it masks a plea for economic relief from a financially ailing industry.

The National Defense Council Foundation, a conservative study group, has submitted a paper making the mobilization argument for review by the cabinet group headed by Deputy Energy Secretary William F. Martin.

The foundation's energy expert, Milt Copoulos, attacks the conclusions of a Pentagon study in March that the United States could get enough non-Middle East oil to handle the 30 percent increase in demand that mobilization would bring even with heavy curtailment of civilian use.

That study assumes U.S. production in the lower 48 states would remain at the current 8.8 million barrels a day, Alaskan production could increase by 0.5 million barrels, the Strategic Petroleum Reserve could supply 2.7 million for six months and imports could rise to almost 10 million from the current 7 million.

Pope calls for end of mistrust

DHAKA, Bangladesh (AP) — Pope John Paul II today urged the estimated 50,000 people attending an outdoor Mass to brush aside "fear and distrust" between the less than 300,000 Christians and almost 100 million Moslems in desperately poor Bangladesh.

"Everyone, especially the young, must learn always to respect one another's religious beliefs and respect freedom of religion which is the right of every human being," he said in a homily at the Ershad Army stadium where he also ordained 18 Bengali priests.

The Mass was held just hours after the 66-year-old pontiff arrived for a one-day stop in Bangladesh — the first leg of a six-nation Asian and Pacific tour. He also planned to visit an independence war memorial and meet other religious leaders and Catholic bishops before leaving Thursday for Singapore.

Bangladesh, a tiny overcrowded nation of 103 million people, is more than 86 percent Moslem, 12 percent Hindu. Christians number only 280,000, including 180,000 Catholics in this moderate Islamic country.

This, the pontiff's 32nd foreign trip, is his longest-ever pilgrimage to spread his message of brotherly love, social justice and unity among religions.

"There are many things that Christians and Moslems have in common as human beings and as believers," he told the predominantly Christian crowd, which included a small number of Moslems.

"Sometimes Christians and Moslems fear and distrust one another as the result of past misunderstanding and conflict," he said. "This also is true in Bangladesh."

Standing in front of the outline of a huge lotus and a red sun, the pontiff told the crowd that showing "your Moslem brethren and others that your Christian faith, far from weakening your pride in your homeland and your love for her, helps you to prize and respect the culture and heritage of Bangladesh."

John Paul, who became pontiff in 1978, was invited to Bangladesh by President Hussain Muhammad Ershad, who met him at the airport. About 200 to 300 school children were also there to greet the pope with flowers and garlands, but there were no welcoming crowds on the streets in this city of 5 million.

Houston Chronicle

HOUSTON (AP) — Johnny's doctor has a great bedside manner, but his antiseptic white walls and sterile surroundings make your child nervous. What's the cure?

Crayon coloring, "Sesame Street" murals and lots of toys. Some children's clinics and dentist's offices are trying this decor, hoping to ease children's fears.

One clinic with children's art on the walls and furniture built for pint-sized patients is Texas Children's Hospital Clinical Care Center.

The hospital's first off-campus pediatric center, which opened in mid-August, treats little ones needing specialized care in nine areas, ranging from eating disorders to neurological problems.

The 46,176-square-foot facility was built to house offices before Texas Children's bought the building and converted it to a clinic.

Architect Vic Gelsomino, Bridgette Schleicher, hospital architecture director, and Janet Sanders, interior designer, worked extensively on the interior of the $6.7 million project.

"We wanted it warm, cheerful and appealing to children of various ages could relate to it," said Sanders, who has picked out wall and carpet colors and art work for hospital interiors for 16 years.

Sanders chose a bright "but not too faddish" color for each level of the brick building. The first floor, housing 16 multiple-use examining rooms, features blues mixed with shrimp and maroons.

The children's reception area has many features for little ones, including muted blue cut and uncut pile carpet for crawling babies and romping toddlers.

Tables and chairs are durable, safe and fun to climb on. Modular ottomans have nylon fabric coverings which have been coated with Scotchguard and are removable for easy cleaning.

Armchairs with rounded blue frames are weighty enough to remain upright even when energetic toddlers and preschoolers use them for diving boards.

The area also has a play corner with miniature rounded drum and oak butcher block tables with matching chairs and toys displayed on shelves for children to grab.

Examining rooms, designated with clear plastic plates featuring silk-screened butterflies, dogs and seals, have toddler-size chair for patients, two armchairs for parents and a cushioned swivel chair on wheels for the doctor.

There's even a chalkboard above the examining table to keep the patient busy.

Idling cropland could increase prices

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sharp increases in consumer food prices and unemployment will occur if new programs are designed to take huge amounts of surplus cropland from production, an economic analysis by the Agriculture Department predicts.

Some critics of farm policy want strict programs of supply management to curb excess production of wheat, corn and other crops to drive up prices and improve farmers' income.

The department's Economic Research Service said Tuesday that 1986 net farm income may be in the range of $26 billion to $30 billion, a $1 billion increase from the agency's forecast last month.

In 1985, net farm income dropped to $30.5 billion from a record of $32.7 billion in 1984, a year in which a huge rise in farm inventories ballooned net income figures from $13 billion in 1983.

By USDA reckoning, net income figures reflect changes in the value of crop and livestock inventories.

The report said that a large-scale acreage program to idle 125 million acres, about half the program crop acreage base, could boost U.S. farm prices 30 percent to 40 percent from their 1985-86 level. By comparison, the 1986 program idled about 44 million acres.

As a result of such a massive acreage program, federal spending for price support and income support payments "would fall to nearly zero" after a few years and farmers' net cash income would probably rise, the report said. In contrast, spending for various farm programs in the fiscal year that ended Sept. 30 rose to a record $25.8 billion.

"However, large farm price increases (caused the sharp cuts in production) and would likely reduce U.S. farm exports 30 to 50 percent," the report said. "Also, the mix of foods purchased by domestic consumers would shift away from more expensive high-value products in response to a 30-35 percent rise in retail food prices."

Further, under such a program,

U.S. agriculture's contribution to the nation's economy could be cut by $50 billion to $75 billion a year, with a loss of as many as 2 million jobs, the report said.

Under another method of calculation, the "net cash income" of farmers this year is expected to be in the range of $42 billion to $46 billion, down $1 billion from the October forecast. Net cash income in 1985 was at a record high of $44 billion, according to the report. The midpoint in the 1986 range would also be $44 billion.

The agency computes net cash income of farmers by subtracting gross cash expenses from gross cash income from farming operations.

"Net cash income for crop farms is expected to be down in 1986, going from 1985's average $27,000 per farm to about $25,000," the agency said in a brief summary of a December outlook report. "Government payments to crop farms will rise more than 50 percent, cushioning this year's drop in commodity prices."

Economists said lower expenses this year should save crop farms more than $3 billion in 1986.

Although wheat, corn and soybean exports are expected to rise 12 percent, 5 percent and 3 percent, respectively, in 1986-87, the increases "will not be enough to drop (surplus) stocks sharply" and there have been suggestions that USDA implement marketing loans to boost exports further, the report said.

spouse and dependents. A special allowance will be permitted a single person with only one job; a married person who has only one job and a non-earning spouse, or a married person whose second-job earnings or spouse's earnings total $2,500 or less.

In 1987, one allowance will be worth $1,900, the value of the personal exemption under the new law. That means that for each allowance claimed, $36.54 of a worker's weekly wages will be exempt from withholding.

The new form gets more complicated for those with a working spouse, more than one job or a significant amount of non-wage income. And it will be more complicated still for those who itemize deductions, claim a tax credit, take the special new deduction for being 65 or blind, or those with such deductible IRAs, business expenses, moving expenses or other adjustments.

Ann Landers Ex-prostitute

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I am an ex-prostitute who walked the streets of Portland, Ore., for two years. During that time I had several frightening experiences. I worked for a pimp who abused me. I was arrested and jailed, robbed by customers and raped by a man I refused to accommodate because he looked crazy and violent.

I know what it's like to be alone and afraid. I was afraid of my pimp, the police and the weirdo customers, and terrified that my family might find out what I was doing for a living. I was also afraid I would be stuck in that rotten rut forever because I didn't know how to get out.

A new judge changed my life. After my last arrest he ordered me to get into a program called Our New Beginnings. This program helps women escape from a life of crime, prostitution and drugs. Through counseling, guidance and love, we are able to help ourselves.

I know you reach all kinds of people. The girls I worked with read your column every day. They need to know they aren't trapped forever, that help is available, and they CAN have a better life if they want one.

I consider myself the luckiest girl in the world to have gotten out of a business that would surely have landed me in a mental hospital or on Death Row for murder. Or some john would have killed me.

I urge all women who are where I was a few years ago to contact Our New Beginnings, 1814 N.W. Hoyt, Portland, Ore., 97209. SIGN ME FREE AT LAST

DEAR FREE AT LAST: Here is your letter and my heartfelt thanks for writing it. I have received many letters from prostitutes who say they want desperately to get out of the business but are scared to death of their pimps and afraid of being penitents.

Your letter gives them a plan of action—a place to go where they will be protected from harm and given emotional support. Newcomers can get courage and hope from the women who know the ropes and are living proof that there can be a decent life after prostitution.

I urge every hooker who is reading this column to contact this group at once. You have nothing to lose but your chains.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: My husband is a veterinarian. I work as his office manager. Today he received payment from a client whose dog had died of heart failure before surgery. Attached was a letter accusing him of being cold-hearted and money-hungry for requesting payment on services performed on a dead animal.

That dog died from causes beyond anyone's control. He could not have been saved. I understand the owner's grief and the need to blame someone. But I wonder how many physicians get such letters.

Earlier this week a woman's cat died. She was an old cat and had too many medical problems to go into here. The woman phoned yesterday to say, "Don't send me a bill. I'll be damned if I'm going to pay for a cat I didn't get back." Bang went the receiver in my ear.

Not all people are like that, thank heavens, but enough are so that sometimes I wish my husband were in another line of work—FED UP IN FORT WAYNE.

DEAR F.W.: I'm sure most people believe the veterinarian did his or her best, whether the animal lives or dies, and that he should be paid. Don't let a few lemons sour you on the human race.

DR. GOTT When a physician is incompetent

By Peter H. Gott, M.D.

DEAR DR. GOTT — Have you personally reported an incompetent doctor to the medical board? Do you know of any case in which a doctor has been prevented from practicing?

DEAR READER — I have not reported an incompetent doctor to the medical board because I have never personally been involved with a doctor whom I consider to be incompetent. I don't agree with the manner in which some of my colleagues handle medical problems, but this doesn't mean that they are incompetent. They may not agree with what I do, either.

This is not to say that there are no incompetent doctors. I do know of physicians and surgeons who have been prevented from practicing by having their hospital privileges suspended or their licenses revoked. However, before such a devastating punishment is handed out, the alleged incompetent is entitled to a variety of legal avenues to protect himself. These include a fair hearing by the medical or ethics board of the county or state medical society, the right of legal representation to refute the charges or the mandatory use of medical or psychological treatment. For example, some doctors with drug-related or psychiatric diseases can be rehabilitated and allowed to practice their trades under supervision.

All doctors are human; all humans make mistakes. But human frailty does not necessarily mean incompetence. On the other hand, there are ways to remove an incompetent doctor from practice. These vary from state to state, so if you believe that a doctor is incompetent, I suggest that you write the board of ethics or board of censors of your state medical society to find out how alleged incompetence is handled in your community. I'm sending you a free copy of my Health Report, CHOOSING A PHYSICIAN: MAKE A DECISION FOR GOOD HEALTH, which tells how to find a good doctor and also mentions complaint procedures. Others who would like a copy should send $1 and their name and address to P.O. Box 91428, Cleveland, OH 44101-3428. Be sure to mention the title.

DEAR DR. GOTT — I had bad trouble with diarrhea in 1960. I got a prescription for a bottle of blackberry brandy with something else mixed in. It helped a lot. The druggist and the doctors have heard of it, but can't get it anymore. Do you know of anything else that might work?

DEAR READER — There are many products designed to relieve diarrhea. Two over-the-counter remedies are Kaopectate and Pepto-Bismol. Other medicines, which are available by prescription in this country, contain derivatives of opium, an effective anti-diarrheal. If you have had no major trouble with diarrhea in 26 years, I doubt that you need any medicine. If you are having recurring diarrhea, see a doctor to find out why.

DEAR DR. GOTT — Although I enjoy your column and find your answers informative, it seems a shame that so many people have to write to a newspaper for answers to medical problems. I assume that because of the many lawsuits, the doctors have to be very cagey in answering patients' questions. Good patients have to suffer because of those looking for a fast buck. Where is this lawsuit frenzy going to end?

DEAR READER — Good question. I wish I had an answer. However, I do not believe that people write me because their doctors are afraid of lawsuits.

Most of the questions I receive seem to come from sincere, perfectly ordinary people who are ashamed, embarrassed or hesitant to query their own doctors. I try to give common-sense answers to these questions so that patients will feel less intimidated about going to their own physicians for further information, clarification and discussion.

Although I am happy to answer questions, my replies are not meant to be the last word. I hope to encourage people to seek out their own, more individualized medical attention. I like to think that what I do in print is exactly what any good doctor would do in the office. It's certainly what I do. I, too, am fearful of possible lawsuits; any intelligent, practicing doctor is, because so many lawsuits are ill-founded and frivolous. I think that people write to newspaper columnists because patients have a need to know about health issues and, unfortunately, doctors are often too busy or seem disinclined to provide information.

DEAR DR. GOTT — My son, 5, stuck a Cheerio up his nose two years ago. The nurse tried to remove it with a Q-Tip, but just shoved it up further. Since then my son has had constant sinus problems, but the doctor says the Cheerio couldn't still be in there. What should we do to help his sinuses?

DEAR READER — The Cheerio could still be providing a source of irritation and inflammation in your son's nose. The grain fiber in the Cheerio might not be dissolved by nasal secretions. Take him to a qualified ear, nose and throat specialist for a thorough examination.

DEAR DR. GOTT — A number of years ago I had a large part of my colon removed. I happened to mention it to a young intern at a hospital, who told me it would grow back. Is that true?

DEAR READER — False. The human body is not capable of regenerating intestinal tissue. That intern has a lot to learn. Was he kidding?

Dr. Gott's new Health Report on MENTAL AND EMOTIONAL ILLNESS describes the different types of illnesses and the treatments available. For your copy, send $1 and your name and address to P.O. Box 91428, Cleveland, OH 44101-3428. Be sure to mention the title.

Memorial Presented

The Ifetayo Horizon Group of the Hereford Council of Camp Fire, Inc. recently presented a check in the amount of $1,886.79 to the council in memory of Sid

Killough Endowment Fund established

A check in the amount of $1,886.79 was recently given by members of Ifetayo Horizon group to the Hereford Council of Camp Fire, Inc. in memory of Sid Killough.

Members of the group graduated from Hereford High School in 1980 and earned the funds throughout their Camp Fire years. The money was recently taken from a savings account and given to the council to establish the Sid Killough Endowment Fund. The proceeds will be used to provide scholarships for boys and girls who could not otherwise attend camp.

The Ifetayo advisor is Rosie Griffin. Group members include Brenda Brown Sermino, Barbara Brumley, Kelly Cherry, Janelle Coupe Casey, Karen Drake, Karla Driskill Lynch, Lynn Garrett Hamby, Jennifer Griffin, Kerry Hacker Whitson, April Holly, Laura Martin Schlabs, Lesley Metz, Lynette Rhoton Byerley, Ellen Shields, Linda Walker, Sheri Whitaker, Tania Willson Devin.

Killough was an outstanding camping volunteer who helped make the camping experience a memorable event.

Turkey cost about same

Prices for whole turkeys should be about the same as last year, says a Texas A&M University Agricultural Extension Service poultry marketing specialist.

According to Dr. David Mellor, the cost for plain store brand turkeys should be in the range of $.60-$.70 per pound, while national brand basted turkeys will cost $.90-$1.00 per pound.

Although this year's turkey stocks are higher than in 1985, he says this shouldn't affect the retail price, since most turkey is now processed into parts or other food items.

"For greatest economy, the consumer's best bet is to look for holiday sales on plain, store brand turkey," Mellor advises.

Extension nutritionist Marilyn Haggard notes that the cost-per-serving may also vary according to what type of turkey you buy.

"Many smaller families are choosing to cook a turkey roast or parts," she says. "The cost per pound may be higher, but it may be worth it on a per serving basis, especially if it reduces waste from leftovers that aren't used."

Pot luck supper held

Rochelle Hutcherson and Carla Hollinger recently hosted a pot luck supper for the Young Mother's Study Club.

Following the meal, president JoAnn Carnahan conducted the November meeting.

Plans were finalized for an upcoming poinsettia sale. The next meeting will be a Christmas party on Dec. 8, for members and their children.

Those attending were Hutcherson, Hollinger, Carnahan, Lisa Blakely, Kathleen Brockman, Jeanne Lomas and Charla Schlabs.

Keep milk longer with microwave

POLLY'S POINTERS

By Polly Fisher

DEAR POLLY — I've heard you can make milk stay sweet longer by microwaving it. Have you ever heard of this? How is it done? — MRS. M.A. DEAR MRS. M.A. — The shelf life of milk can be extended by up to 10 days beyond the date printed on the carton by destroying the microorganisms that bring about off-flavors. To do this in the microwave, place the milk in its carton in the microwave oven and heat it on high until the temperature of the milk reaches 160 degrees Fahrenheit. You can take the temperature of the milk periodically or use a microwave-safe thermometer or temperature-controlled cooking probe to determine when the correct temperature has been reached. One cup of milk takes about 1½ to two minutes. Refrigerate the milk in the carton immediately. — POLLY

DEAR POLLY — A better-tasting gelatin dessert can be made by adding part canned fruit juice instead of water. A grater placed over a pot of boiling water makes a steamer for hot dog and hamburger buns. — SHIRLEY

DEAR POLLY — Fresh marjoram is an excellent room freshener. Just crush two or three pieces each about four inches long and place them on a little plate. This is excellent for bathrooms, the baby's room and other areas that need an aromatic lift. — PRISCILLA

What more luxurious gift can you give than exquisite handmade chocolate truffles? It's easy with the recipes and precise chocolate-dipping instructions in Polly's newsletter "Handmade Chocolates." This issue also includes instructions for homemade marshmallows and caramels. Send $1 for each copy to POLLY'S POINTERS, in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 91428, Cleveland, OH 44101-3428. Be sure to include the title. — POLLY

DEAR POLLY — How about passing along some tips on picking out a Christmas tree? Every year I end up with one that loses its needles before Christmas! — JANET

DEAR JANET — First of all, take your time when tree shopping and be sure you choose a tree that's fresh and will hold up for the season. I find it's best to shop early for the best selection rather than wait until the last minute when all that's left are the rejects. Besides, the tree-lot manager may not give the optimum care to the trees that you can give at home, so you're better off buying your tree a week or two before the holidays.

Choose a tree with a fresh, bright color and no brown needles. Grasping the trunk of the tree in the center, raise it a few inches above the ground and let it gently drop, so the bottom of the trunk bumps against the ground.

Some needles will inevitably fall, but if a large shower of needles falls to the ground when you do this, choose another tree.

Hold a branch in one hand and with the other hand, smooth the needles back toward the trunk (pushing them opposite the way in which they grow). The needles should bend easily and feel soft and moist. If the needles are brittle and break easily, pass up that tree and keep looking.

When you get home, put the tree in a bucket of water immediately. Keep it in water in a cool place until it's time to set it up in the house. Don't set up the tree more than a couple of days in advance, since it will dry out more quickly in the house than it will in a garage or porch, or outside.

I'm sending you a copy of my newsletter, "Caring for Christmas Trees and Holiday Plants," which has more tips for choosing, safely decorating and disposing of your holiday tree as well as directions for caring for poinsettias, Christmas cactus and amaryllis, and for forcing narcissus. Others who would like a copy of this issue should send $1 for each copy to POLLY'S POINTERS, in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 91428, Cleveland, OH 44101-3428. Be sure to include the title. — POLLY

DEAR POLLY — I bought a new calendar to send to a dear friend and her family, who I don't see often enough. To make it personal, I wrote little messages on all the significant dates: holidays and birthdays of each family member, for example. On the date of Thanksgiving, I wrote a little note thanking her for being my friend. Even though we don't get together, it will keep us in touch every day. — DOTTIE

DEAR DOTTIE — What a lovely gift! Your helpful Pointer earns you the Pointer of the Week award, a copy of my book, "Polly's Pointers: 1081 Helpful Hints for Making Everything Last Longer." Others who would like this book may order it for $6.50. Make check payable to POLLY'S POINTERS and send to POLLY'S POINTERS, P.O. Box 91428, Cleveland, OH 44101-3428. — POLLY

DEAR POLLY — With the cost of Christmas trees so exorbitant, my husband is making our tree. Select a 2-by-4 board of the height you want the tree, then drill holes all over it. Insert greenery (evergreen branches) into the holes, then spray the tree with artificial snow. Balls, bells and other ornaments can be hung on the tree, but we use two beautiful blue feathery doves perched on ours. — ROSALIE

DEAR ROSALIE AND FRIENDS — The branches may need to be secured with a little glue. Artfully done, this could be an elegant, economical Christmas tree. Many thanks for your Pointer! — POLLY

HHS varsity girls fall to Tascosa 52-49

By GARY CHRISTENSEN
Sports Editor

Despite having one player ill and unable to play, and having to play some players at unfamiliar positions, the Hereford Whiteface girls' basketball team came close to defeating a much taller Tascosa team.

Hereford held the lead throughout the second and third quarters, and then had an 11-point lead in the fourth quarter, only to lose its season opener 52-49 Tuesday night at the Hereford High School gym.

Hereford had a 10-point lead with 3:55 left in the game, but the Tascosa full-court press thwarted the Whitefaces' efforts to hold onto the lead.

Tascosa also won the junior varsity game, 38-33. The HHS varsity will play in the Big Spring tournament Thursday through Saturday, meeting Sweetwater in a first-round game.

Next Tuesday, the HHS varsity plays at home against Dimmitt at 6 p.m.

The Hereford-Tascosa varsity game Tuesday began slow for both teams. Hereford led 12-10 when the first quarter ended, and then held a 25-20 halftime lead.

Susie Kalka scored 11 points in the first half for Hereford.

The Whitefaces continued to hold a lead over the Rebels in the third quarter, leading 35-27 at the end of the period.

Hereford gained its first 10-point lead half a minute into the fourth quarter on a basket by Whitney Whitaker. A free throw by Amy Coneway with 6:46 left made Hereford's lead 11 points, 38-27.

With just more than five minutes left, two Hereford players fouled out — 5-foot-10 post Katie Ramey and also guard Tricia Kahlich.

The Whitefaces also had 10-point leads two other times: 40-30 on a basket by Kalka with 5:17 left, and 42-32 on a basket by Carmen Brockman with 3:55 left.

Tascosa then went into a full-court press, causing several Hereford turnovers and closing the gap to 44-42 by the time there was just over two minutes left.

Jeanette Mumau sank two free throws with 1:56 left for a four-point Hereford lead, 46-42. Tascosa scored a basket with 1:49 left.

Whitaker made one of two free throws with 1:44 left to give Hereford a 47-44 lead. But with 1:34 left, Hereford lost its tallest player, 6-foot-1 Carmen Brockman, when she committed her fifth foul.

That left Hereford with nobody taller than 5-foot-7 in the lineup against the tall Rebel squad. Without Ramey and Brockman, coupled with the Rebel full-court press, Hereford eventually saw its lead lost and Tascosa winning 52-49.

Tascosa made two free throws after the Brockman fifth foul, to move within one point of Hereford again, 47-46. Two free throws by Coneway put Hereford's lead back to three points, 49-46, with 1:14 left.

A Tascosa basket with one minute left sliced Hereford's lead to one point, 49-48. Tascosa had one-and-one free throw attempts with 35 seconds left and with 32 seconds left, and missed both of them.

Hereford's Felicia Redmon failed in her first attempt in a one-and-one with half a minute left in the game.

Then with 26 seconds left, Tascosa gained the lead, 50-49, making both free throws in a one-and-one. Hereford suffered another turnover against the Rebel full-court press, and Tascosa scored its last basket with nine seconds left.

"You hate to go into a delay with five minutes left and so many people in foul trouble," Hereford Coach Larry Sowers said.

"We made some critical mistakes late in the game, the mistakes you make early in the season. I've learned a lot about our team."

"I feel they can be better than what I thought. We played people at positions where they haven't played. This should be good experience for them," Sowers continues.

Sowers was forced to play people at positions they were not familiar with because of guard Cindy Tice having an illness Tuesday and also because of foul trouble.

Whitney Whitaker had to play out of position, at the weak guard position, Sowers noted. "Whitney played a good game. I think she'll do better as time goes on," he said.

Katie Ramey and Carmen Brockman both had three fouls in the first half. Sowers had to play 5-foot-7 forward Felicia Redmon at the post position because of the foul trouble.

"Tonight was like have your first string quarterback in football suddenly out of the game," Sowers said.

The HHS coach also said that Susie Kalka and Amy Coneway played outstanding games.

"Susie had one of her best all-around games. Susie had a gutty, gutty performance. She had leg cramps late in the game. She played the way a senior with her experience has got to play," Sowers stated, noting Kalka's 17 points, seven rebounds, two assists and two steals.

"Amy played above her ability. She battled them all over the place. Offensively, she generally will not score a lot, but 10 points and six rebounds from a 5-foot-4 forward is not too shabby," Sowers said.

Other scorers for Hereford included Jeanette Mumau with six points, and Whitaker and Brockman each with five points.

There were 54 fouls called in the game, 31 on Hereford and 23 on Tascosa. Hereford made 17 of 29 free throw attempts, and Tascosa made 22 of 42.

The junior varsity game was close all the way. Tascosa led by one point at the end of both of the first two quarters. The halftime margin was 14-13.

Hereford led when the third quarter ended, 26-25. But in the fourth quarter, Tascosa outscored Hereford 13-7 to win by five points, 38-33.

Shea McGinty led Hereford with 16 points, seven rebounds, and two blocked shots. Susan Gage scored 10 points and grabbed six rebounds.

Melissa LaFluente led Hereford in steals with five.

Children recall dynamic father

CHADDS FORD, Pa. (AP) — Among the paintings by the Wyeth family in the Brandywine River Museum, one of the most powerful is a self-portrait of the patriarch, Newell Convers Wyeth.

A barrel-chested man with flowing dark hair and gold-rimmed glasses, N.C. Wyeth looks out from the canvas with an air of judgment, as if whatever has caught his gaze might not measure up.

Ultimately, as a splendid edition of "Smithsonian World" shows tonight nationally on public television, the painter came to believe it was himself who had fallen short, that he wasn't an "artist" but only an "illustrator."

"I think he got this complex due to stupid remarks by his contemporaries," his son and pupil, the renowned painter Andrew Wyeth, said in an interview.

"That was something that was built up by the aesthetes of that period. I think it's beginning to slightly disappear, when my father's illustrations are going to be exhibited (starting next year) in the museums of America and Europe, Russia. I think this is the first step, which should have happened years ago.

"If my father came back to life now, he'd have fainted. He really would have."

Andrew Wyeth is the youngest and most famous of N.C. Wyeth's five children, who all appear on "The Wyeths: A Father and His Family." The program is not so much about painting as it is a study in the art of raising children.

"It's about growing up in an often magical household, in which being creative and being alive were one and the same thing," says David McCullough, the host of "Smithsonian World."

Andrew Wyeth is notoriously adverse to interviews, and his agreement to grant one last weekend testifies to the family's enthusiasm for this salute to their father.

"I've felt very strongly about this film after I saw it. I was a little dubious about it at first," he said. "Now, we want to do everything possible to get this thing off the ground. I think ... it's time (the American public) had something with a little meat on it."

"And aimed at a very vulnerable subject, the family, which is taking one hell of a beating today, particularly in America," interjected Nat Wyeth, who had come to his brother's studio. "I just hope people get this message."

"We've shown this to several people," Andrew Wyeth added, "and a couple of them were fathers with young families. They've said, 'I've got to get home.'"

The family's life was centered in Chadds Ford, where the father had come early in this century to study with the illustrator Howard Pyle.

N.C. Wyeth's work included the illustrations for the Scribner's Classics series, including "Treasure Island," the altar panels at the National (Episcopal) Cathedral in Washington, D.C., and murals for the Metropolitan Life Insurance Co. offices in New York.

Anyone who has ever attended a routine company meeting understands why the leader is known as the chairman of the bored.

FHA Chapter elects new club officers

Members of the Future Homemakers of America, Hereford High School Chapter I, met recently to elect new officers.

John Cordova will serve as president; Vincent Brown, vice president; Nemesio Valasco, treasurer; and Paul Maes, secretary.

The first male president of the FHA was elected and installed during the 1986 National Leadership Conference in Orlando, Fla. Tom Lucas, a senior at Barbersville, W. Va., was elected president of the 320,000 member youth organization. He is prepared to speak out about FHA/HERO to let the general public know that every individual is a homemaker, male or female.

HHS Chapter I all-male officers represent the new image of the future Homemakers.

Seafood may present health risks due to lack of regulation

WASHINGTON (AP) — Seafood, which makes up a growing proportion of American diets because of its health benefits, also may present health risks because it is among the least regulated of foods, a private health advocacy group said today.

"The vast majority of seafood reaches the consumers' plates without being inspected by any government agency, state or federal," said a report by Public Voice for Food and Health Policy, a non-profit nutrition advocacy group.

The group said thousands of Americans become ill each year from eating seafood contaminated with bacteria or viruses, and many others are at long-term risk from consumption of products that contain toxic chemicals.

The report said the federal government should assume responsibility for setting uniform national standards for fish and seafood and set up an inspection program to make sure those standards are met, much like the program governing meat and poultry.

"The microbiological and environmental contamination in seafood is widespread and presenting harm, risks and unnecessary costs to the public," the group's report said, although it acknowledged that data on health consequences are sketchy because of inadequate reporting.

Inspection is handled primarily by the National Marine Fisheries Service, an arm of the Commerce Department. But that inspection is entirely voluntary and intended more to promote sales of seafood than to protect consumers, the group said.

The service's inspections have been declining at the same time that U.S. seafood consumption has risen, the report found. In 1985, the average American ate a record 14.5 pounds of fish and shellfish, an 11 percent increase since 1980.

The service inspected 567 million pounds of fish in 1983, about 18.6 percent of all consumption. By 1985 that figure had dropped to 443 million pounds, about 13 percent of all fish and shellfish eaten in the country.

"The lack of a unified (inspection) program, coupled with the failures of the existing programs, put the seafood consumer in a precarious position," the report concluded.

Richard Gutting, vice president for government relations of the National Fisheries Institute, said the seafood industry has been pushing for improved inspection for 20 years, and has won passage of a $350,000 appropriation to design such a program over the next two years.

"Consumption has been increasing, and we think it's because consumers realize the health and nutritional aspects" of a low-cholesterol source of protein, he said.

Public Voice said any federal oversight should include standards for fishing vessels to assure adequate protection of the catch from sun and weather, and sanitary cold storage; a more thorough sampling system to catch microbial and chemical residues; adequate recordkeeping so problem products can be traced to the source; and sanitation standards for processing and transportation.

The organization said the Agriculture Department, which conducts the meat and poultry inspection program, would be the best federal agency to administer a new seafood safety initiative.

Association warns on diet, exercise

DALLAS (AP) — The American Heart Association says that what's good for adults is good for children, and for the first time has broadened its dietary, exercise and anti-smoking guidelines to include youngsters.

In three position papers published in the current issue of the medical journal Circulation and released today, the heart association recommended that children should avoid excess fat and cholesterol in their diets, should exercise moderately and should, above all, stay away from cigarettes.

"We are advising all children to begin now creating the habit of healthy living," said Dr. William Wiedman, former chairman of the heart association's Council on Heart Disease in the Young.

Weidman, one of the people most directly responsible for the children's guidelines, said Monday at a news conference during the annual meeting of the American Heart Association that they are virtually identical to the guidelines for adults.

"It would have been a disaster if there had been one set of recommendations for people over 18 and one for people under 18," said Wiedman, professor of pediatrics at the Mayo Medical School in Rochester, Minn.

He said he advises parents to eliminate excess cholesterol, fat and salt from their children's diets, to get them into the habit of aerobic exercise, to be sure the children maintain a normal weight, "and really lean on them about cigarette smoking," one of the leading causes of coronary heart disease.

On water rights 6-year-old battle still rages

LAS CRUCES, N.M. (AP) — Lawyers in three-piece suits and cowboy boots battled each other in the latest round of a 6-year-old fight between El Paso, Texas, and New Mexico for one of the oldest issues of the American West — water rights. El Paso, just 40 miles south of here, wants to drill 21 wells in the New Mexico side of the Hueco Basin, an underground body of water on both sides of the Texas-New Mexico border. It also is petitioning for another 266 wells in the Lower Rio Grande Basin, between El Paso and Las Cruces.

"Not one drop" of New Mexico water for El Paso has been the battle cry of those opposing the request, who have been nicknamed "no-droppers" because of their stance.

"I suggest they start implementing more stringent measures to safeguard their water sources for a long time," said Diane "Punkie" Garretson, Dona Ana County commissioner-elect.

At a hearing that began Tuesday before New Mexico State Engineer Steve Reynolds, attorney Peter Schenken, representing El Paso, was surrounded by about a dozen lawyers for the "no-droppers."

Reynolds accepted hydrologist Lee Wilson as an expert witness for El Paso subject to cross examination by opposing lawyers, who spent a good part of the morning objecting to the state engineer's decision.

Wilson testified his experience includes studies on ground water use and conservation for several New Mexico municipalities and El Paso. Throughout his testimony, Wilson referred to a two-inch-thick report he prepared for El Paso to support the city's petitions.

El Paso's current population of about 500,000 is projected to grow at a rate of about 3 percent annually, he said. The city needs to find alternative water supplies and allow the Texas side of

The Newspaper BIBLE

NOTHING SUCCEEDS LIKE SUCCESS!

With the believers multiplying rapidly, there were rumblings of discontent. Those who spoke only Greek complained that their widows were being discriminated against, that they were not being given as much food in the daily distribution as the widows who spoke Hebrew.

So the Twelve called a meeting of all the believers. "We should spend our time preaching, not administering a feeding program," they said. "Now look around among yourselves, dear brothers, and select seven men, wise and full of the Holy Spirit, who are well thought of by everyone and we will put them in charge of this business. Then we can spend our time in prayer, preaching, and teaching."

This sounded reasonable to the whole assembly, and they elected the following: Stephen (a man unusually full of faith and the Holy Spirit), Philip, Prochorus, Nicanor, Timon, Parmenas, Nicolaus of Antioch (a Gentile convert to the Jewish faith, who had become a Christian).

These seven were presented to the apostles, who prayed for them and laid their hands on them in blessing.

God's message was preached in everwidening circles, and the number of disciples increased vastly in Jerusalem and many of the Jewish priests were converted too.

Brutal murder case to trial

EDINBURG, Texas (AP) — An Hidalgo County prosecutor says the screwdriver slaying of an 81-year-old San Carlos woman is one of the most gruesome cases she's handled.

A state district court judge has ruled that the case against a 16-year-old boy charged in connection with the woman's brutal stabbing and beating death be sent to a grand jury.

Yolanda Jurado, an assistant district attorney in Hidalgo County, said Laura Bell Matheny was found Sept. 23 with screwdrivers protruding from her body.

"It's so horrible," Jurado said. "She had at least 10 other stab wounds" in addition to the beating and sexual assault the victim suffered before dying.

A screwdriver was driven into one of the victim's eyes and went "all the way through the brain," Jurado said. A second screwdriver was found pushed into her lower body, the prosecutor said.

Domingo Hirlas Jr. was 15 years old at the time the Rio Grande Valley woman's body was found in the kitchen of her two-story house east of Edinburg.

District Judge Raul Longoria certified Hirlas as an adult during a hearing Nov. 3. At a hearing last week, District Judge Arturo Guerra found probable cause to send the case to a grand jury.

Hirlas, of San Carlos, is being held in the county jail on two complaints of murder and two complaints of capital murder that allege Ms. Matheny was killed in the course of a burglary and sexual assault, Jurado said.

Within two weeks the case is expected to go to a grand jury, which will decide whether Hirlas will be indicted and on what charges, Jurado said.

If convicted, Hirlas faces an automatic life sentence but under Texas law could not receive the death penalty because of his age, the prosecutor said.

The teen-ager was arrested after his father contacted the Hidalgo County sheriff's office, Jurado said.

"The kid had made an utterance that he killed an old lady," Jurado said.

HOW TO SHOP FOR AN OB/GYN

By Harry S. Jonas, M.D., President, The American College of Obstetricians and Gynecologists

The time may come when you will have to choose an obstetrician-gynecologist. The reason may be that you have moved from one area to another. Or, you may have started out seeing the same one used by your mother or an older female relative, but now you want your own physician.

Fortunately for patients, in most places there is no shortage of ob-gyns, so you need to focus on picking someone who has the qualities you want in a doctor. Most women start by asking their friends, co-workers or other family members for their recommendations, but the key is asking "why" that person likes her doctor. Your other physicians and nurses also can be good sources for names.

The local medical society and area hospitals can provide you with names and the local library should have a copy of "Directory of Medical Specialists," a "Who's Who of Physicians." This directory gives information about physician training and credentials. Check to see if a physician is "board-certified." This means that a particular doctor has undergone specialized training and has passed specific examinations in that field, such as obstetrics and gynecology. Another indication of a doctor's training and involvement in the specialty is membership in a professional organization, such as The

Lasers burn through arterial deposits

DALLAS (AP) — The first human trials of laser-powered devices to burn through clogs in arteries supplying the heart show they could be cheaper than bypass surgery and more effective than balloon treatments, researchers say.

Clogged coronary arteries were opened at least partially in six of the first seven Americans to undergo the procedure that could help prevent heart attacks, said Dr. Timothy Sanborn of Boston University Medical Center.

Sanborn, describing his findings Tuesday at the annual meeting of the American Heart Association, said laser thermal angioplasty could become widespread within two years if the successes continue.

"The results look promising," he said, noting that there have so far been no important complications.

In the procedure, an optical fiber tipped with a metal cap is inserted into a blood vessel near the skin and threaded through vessels until it reaches obstructive deposits in arteries that supply blood to the heart muscle.

Light from an argon laser is fed into the optical fiber to heat the metal cap to 750 degrees so it can burn through the fibrous, waxy deposits.

These deposits, produced by hardening of the arteries, or atherosclerosis, are a leading cause of the more than 500,000 heart attack deaths in the United States annually.

Sanborn said that two research groups in England also have just begun using similar devices to burn away coronary artery blockages.

Sanborn, Dr. Gregory Abela of the University of Florida Health Science Center in Gainesville and other researchers at perhaps a dozen centers in the United States and Europe have used the devices to destroy obstructions in other arteries that are easier to treat.

Abela's device differs slightly from Sanborn's in that it allows a tiny beam of laser light to escape from the metal cap, so that the laser light itself can contribute to the destruction of the deposit.

Until about a decade ago, atherosclerosis in the coronary arteries was treated almost exclusively with coronary bypass surgery, in which the clogged artery is cut out and replaced with a piece of blood vessel taken from the leg or elsewhere.

In 1983, 191,000 bypass operations were performed in the United States, according to the heart association.

A decade ago, however, researchers began experimenting with inflatable balloons, which are threaded into narrowed arteries and inflated to expand the opening in the artery. Fifty-thousand of those so-called angioplasties were performed last year.

The laser angioplasty technique offers yet another alternative that may overcome the principal limitation of the balloon technique, namely that some 20 percent of the patients receiving it will develop new blockages in the same place within months of the procedure.

Whether the same problem will occur with laser thermal angioplasty is not yet known. But in tests with 124 patients who had deposits treated in arteries other than the coronary arteries, the treated blood vessels have remained open for a median of 11 months, Sanborn said.

Eighty percent of those patients have been successfully treated, he said, a rate comparable to that of conventional angioplasty using balloons.

Dr. Jeffrey Isner of Tufts-New England Medical Center in Boston said he has developed a device that uses pure laser light, rather than a laser-heated metal cap, to destroy arterial deposits.

The advantage of that technique, Isner said, is that it leaves the lining of the artery clean and undamaged, unlike the laser thermal devices, which leave burned and charred remains.

The danger of these laser devices is that they could burn through the wall of an artery and allow bleeding, Isner said. But so far that has not been an important problem.

"The preliminary evidence has indicated that the device can be used safely in the human situation," said Isner.

U.S. judge dismisses discrimination case

WASHINGTON (AP) — A federal judge has dismissed a lawsuit brought by a former U.S. Agriculture Department official who claimed he was transferred here from Texas because he blew the whistle on his boss for sexual harassment.

U.S. District Court Judge John H. Pratt on Tuesday ruled that James P. Jones was transferred because of poor work as high-ranking official in the Texas division of the Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service, not in retaliation for his whistleblowing.

Jones, 63, filed his discrimination suit in 1984 alleging his move out of College Station that year came because he accused his boss, Charles W. Mayfield, of sexually harassing several women in Texas ASCS offices.

Mayfield was suspended for 30 days by the U.S. Department of Agriculture after a department investigation validated Jones' accusations and found that Mayfield had sought sex in return for promotions on several occasions.

Jones' attorney, Andrew Lipps, said Pratt's decision was disappointing and that he would decide on whether to appeal after a thorough study of the ruling.

"In light of the very important issues under the civil rights laws we will be seriously considering an appeal," Lipps said.

"The findings of sexual harassment against Mayfield ... would never have come to light had it not been for the actions of J.P. Jones.

"Mayfield should take no pleasure in a decision by the court that reaffirms the Department of Agriculture decision concerning his own sexual misconduct," Lipps said.

Sworn statements by employees were taken describing how Mayfield allowed a woman to drive a government car home and that he carried alcoholic beverages in a government vehicle.

But Pratt said evidence introduced by Justice Department attorneys had convinced him Jones' transfer was made because of a poor work record and not in retaliation for blowing the whistle on his boss.

"The record clearly shows that Jones had a history of performance inadequacies over a long period ... that he frequently challenged major decisions of his superiors and was insubordinate ... that he was disruptive and disloyal and preoccupied with seeking Mayfield's removal and that there was an irreconcilable personality clash between the two men."

"The facts do not support Jones' claim of retaliation," Pratt wrote in his decision. "The decision to transfer Jones was made by Washington officials confronted with an impossible situation ... which was adversely affecting the office's efficiency."

Jones, a Republican, first crossed swords with Mayfield in 1981 after the Reagan administration named Mayfield to replace Jones as executive director of the ASCS Texas office, which oversees federal farm programs. Mayfield had previously worked under Jones in the office.

Jones soon complained that he was being eased out of decision-making in the office, then in 1984 asked the USDA inspector general to probe into allegations that his boss was sexually harassing female employees.

Shortly after Mayfield was found guilty of harassment, Jones was ordered to report for work at a new post in Washington. Jones filed charges of discrimination and he and Lipps filed suit against the department seeking his reinstatement in College Station.

Chapter meets for hat contest

A crazy hat contest was the focus of a recent social for members of Xi Epsilon Alpha and their spouses.

Gag gift prizes were awarded to winners of the contest. Susan Shaw won the prize for "prettiest hat", Janis White for "funniest hat"; Ike Graves for the "ugliest hat"; Terry Sparks for the "most unusual" and Mary Brinkman wore the "silliest hat."

Guests were served a Mexican stack supper and then paired off for a game of Trivial Pursuit with candy given for each correct answer. Chris White and Debe Graves were awarded decorative candles for correctly answering the most questions. Others attending were Charla Edwards, Connie Matthews, Weldon Brinkman and Sid Shaw.
