

Shuttle investigation began immediately

SPACE CENTER, Houston (AP) — The search for what caused Challenger to explode, killing all seven aboard, began even before the burned, twisted pieces of the spaceship had all splashed into the Atlantic Ocean.

NASA engineers started the investigation within seconds of the blast that shattered the Florida sky at 11:39 a.m. EST Tuesday, and it may take months and hundreds of experts to reach a conclusion that could determine the shape and future of NASA's manned spaceflight program.

A formal board of investigation will be named soon, according to shuttle program director Jesse Moore, but an interim panel already has begun collecting data. When the formal board meets, it will face a mountain of data, thousands of photographs and libraries of papers tracing the history of each and every one of the millions of parts that made up space shuttle Challenger.

Findings may take months

Controllers in Mission Control moved quickly to preserve any clues. Even as smoke from Challenger's fireball hung in the blue Florida sky, a spokesman said the Houston controllers were storing computer data to make certain it was not erased and lost.

"Mission Control is frozen at the point of the explosion," Johnson Space Center Public Information Chief Harold Stall said. It will stay that way for the investigation, preserved at a moment of disaster, he said.

Miles of computer tapes from the maze of mechanical brains in Mission Control's backroom will be reviewed "millisecond by millisecond," said a computer engineer.

NASA officials generally declined to be identified, but most said the investigation will follow the pattern of earlier space agency accidents, including the 1967 fire that killed three astronauts in an Apollo spacecraft.

An official said experts will be searching for hints of what might have led to the explosion, looking particularly for clues of anything out-of-the-normal, such as temperature or pressure increases or aerodynamic buffeting.

At the Kennedy Space Center in Florida, ships and helicopters rushed to where debris from the shuttle fell. Some pieces were recovered, and officials said it is expected that other pieces will be reclaimed from the ocean floor.

A few pieces "five or 10 feet long" were spotted, but most of the recovered items were thermal tiles, about 30,000 of which covered the shuttle to protect it from reentry heat, said Col. John Shultz, director

Lyng named USDA chief

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan today named Richard E. Lyng, once the No. 2 official in the Agriculture Department, to succeed John Block as head of the agency.

Reagan, introducing Lyng at a brief Oval Office ceremony, said the nation's farmers "are going to have a sound and solid friend in Dick Lyng" as they work to overcome the economic problems that continue to plague the farm belt.

Acknowledging that "we have a farm problem," the president said Lyng, in implementing the new farm bill adopted last month, "will help get farming more into the market economy and rectify some of the things that have been wrong" with federal farm programs.

Lyng, 67, served as California secretary of agriculture from 1967 to 1969, during Reagan's tenure as governor and in 1980 headed the Reagan-Bush campaign effort among farmers and ranchers. He had served four years as an assistant secretary of agriculture under President Nixon, and Reagan brought him back to Washington as deputy secretary.

Lyng left the administration a year ago to become a private consultant. With the announcement three weeks ago that Block planned to resign and return to farming, speculation immediately centered on Lyng as his most likely successor.

With Lyng standing next to him in front of a roaring fire in the Oval Office, Reagan told reporters, "I have every confidence the farmers are going to have a sound and solid friend in Secretary of Agriculture Dick Lyng."

Asked why he didn't chose "a working farmer" for the post, Reagan said Lyng "has been a pretty hard-working farmer most of his life."

The new secretary-designate, who faces Senate confirmation proceedings, has spent most of the last two decades involved in agricultural marketing.

He served as a director of the Commodity Credit Corp., the Agribusiness Advisory Board and the Chicago Mercantile Exchange after leaving the California Department of Agriculture.

He has also served as president of the American Meat Institute, an industry group.

HIF elects Mars

Jack Mars, manager of Energas, was named president Tuesday when directors of the Hereford Industrial Foundation held an annual membership meeting and elected new directors and officers.

Other new officers elected were Garth Merrick and Jim Conkwright, vice presidents; Terry Langehennig, treasurer; and Mike Carr, secretary. The five new directors named to the board were Conkwright, R.L. Blakeley, Tom LeGate, Bobby Owen and Jerry Walsh. Bill Harris was also named to fill an unexpired term.

Terry Bromlow, president for 1985, presided at the meeting where directors discussed the status of the property owned by the foundation, current industrial plans, and financing programs available for industrial prospects.

Bromlow said the foundation is seeking to locate an industry in the former Haxel Manufacturing building, which is owned by the foundation. The sewing operation declared bankruptcy and the equipment is still in the building. James Witherspoon purchased the equipment, subject to certain provisions, and he is seeking a sewing operation to take over the firm.

Secretary Carr, who is also manager of Deaf Smith County Chamber of Commerce, reported the group is working with two industrial prospects at present. He also reported that Valley View Energy is making plans to start construction on the manure-fired electrical generating plant by April.

Carr also reported that the city and the chamber are making application

Honoring Astronauts

The flag at Hereford High School, like others across the nation, flies at half staff in honor of the seven astronauts who were killed in Wednesday's space shuttle explosion.

Most property taxes paid, deadline soon

At two days before the delinquency deadline, the Deaf Smith County Tax Appraisal office reports that approximately 88 to 90 percent of the taxpayers have paid up.

Fred Fox, chief appraiser, said that number is about average for this time in the collection period.

Procrastinators have until 5 p.m. Friday to hand deliver taxes to the office. Fox said payments mailed must be postmarked no later than Jan. 31 or they will be considered delinquent.

"We expect to be pretty busy this week," Fox said. The tax office last week mailed out delinquency notices reminding taxpayers that after Feb. 1 the penalty and interest goes up to seven percent of the tax bill.

Fox indicated contentment with the collection rate considering the general slow economy in the area and the malaise of reappraisal this year. Although taxing rates were not drastically affected this year, reappraisals gave many taxpayers valuations that doubled their tax base.

Property owners who postpone payment until after March will have a nine percent penalty and interest added to their bill, after April 1, 11 percent; after May 1, 13 percent; and after June 1, 15 percent.

Notices will be mailed in May to show delinquent taxes for the current year and warn that names to property owners will be turned in to the delinquent tax roll.

Fox also noted that business rendition notices have been mailed. Inventory of furniture, fixtures, etc. may continue through April 1.

Special school meeting tonight

The Hereford Schools board of trustees will conduct a special meeting at 8:30 p.m. today to consider the hiring of a new head football coach. According to state law, the board may go in closed session to discuss personnel.

False alarm reported

The Hereford Volunteer Fire Department responded to a false alarm Tuesday afternoon after a woman reported a fire to the sheriff's department.

Firefighters also doused a dumpster fire in the alley at 409 Ave. H at about 8 p.m. Tuesday.

One person arrested

Hereford police arrested one individual on a warrant Tuesday and responded to reports of a tricycle theft, a battery theft and a complaint about a speeding vehicle.

The school board will apparently select a new athletic director and head football coach tonight. Although a rumor was circulated early this week that Don Cumpton, former A.D. and coach here, will be the new man, a check with school board members this morning indicated no choice had been made. No one would say that Cumpton will not be the new coach, but all said that no agreement had been reached between board members before tonight. Trustees agree there are five or six very good candidates.

had several calls at the newspaper office wanting to know why we left some names out.

We want to make it perfectly clear that we do not withhold names for friends, advertisers, or persons of "status" in the community. All persons who were indicted in the drug bust were listed in our report, except for those who had not been picked up. When these suspects are located and arrested, their names will be published.

We do not withhold names in felony cases and we have been assured by the district attorney's office that all names in these drug charges were released. The DA said he had heard rumors around town that some names of persons indicted had not been released. He added that there were "a few more names we would like to have on the list, but we didn't have the evidence."

Smithee to seek second term

John Smithee, Amarillo Republican, announced in Hereford Tuesday his intention to seek reelection for a second term as State Representative, 86th District, comprised of Randall and Deaf Smith counties.

Smithee, 34, says the challenge for the next term is simple. "Texas needs more new business and industry, more jobs, and more growth. You don't accomplish this by raising taxes. We must balance our state budget without new taxes."

Smithee maintains every state agency must find ways to make additional cuts and contends that his legislative office has set an example. "At the end of 1985, we turned back almost 25 percent of our yearly budget unspent. If every area of state government would do the same, we would have a $4 billion surplus," said Smithee.

In November, Smithee was named as one of the "Ten Best" legislators in Texas by a group of statewide conservative organizations. Earlier this month, he was one of three Texas legislators to meet with President Reagan in Washington to discuss the administration's 1986 federal and state initiatives.

Smithee served on the science and technology and the judicial affairs committees. He was one of the founding members of the Texas Conservative Coalition, a group of legislators concerned about the recent rapid growth of state government and tax hikes.

Infant to get mom's marrow

HOUSTON (AP) — Doctors will give a 3-week-old boy about two tablespoons of his mother's bone marrow tonight in hopes of helping him develop the immune system he has lacked since birth.

Oscar Drew Cantu of Corpus Christi suffers from severed combined immune deficiency syndrome, a rare genetic disorder that renders the body unable to fight disease.

The infant will receive marrow intravenously from his mother, Belinda Cantu, said Dr. William R. Shearer, chief of allergy and immunology at Texas Children's Hospital.

He will be the sixth child at Texas Children's to receive transplanted marrow from an unmatched donor. Two other children who underwent the procedure still live.

Cantu, born Jan. 5, has the same disorder that kept David, Houston's "Bubble Boy," confined to a sterile environment for 12 years. David died in February 1984, about four months after undergoing an unsuccessful bone marrow transplant.

Shearer said the procedure will be complicated by the presence of maternal lymphocytes — Mrs. Cantu's infection-fighting cells — in Oscar's body. Maternal lymphocytes usually die out of an infant's body shortly after birth.

The presence of the lymphocytes in the baby's bloodstream may cause graft-versus-host disease, a condition in which the transplanted cells reject the child's body.

Officials arrest suspect in robbery

CARROLLTON, Texas (AP) — Police say a suspect was arrested in the shooting death of a teen-ager after they received more than 300 tips following the broadcast of a videotape of a convenience store holdup.

But no single tip led to the arrest, and there are no plans to pay off a reward offered following the November robbery, one officer said.

Lt. Pete Cole said Carrollton police had more than 300 suspects soon after the robbery-shooting was broadcast by television stations nationwide. They were narrowed to 33 and eventually to a 22-year-old Flint, Mich., man taken into custody Friday in a separate case in Mesquite, another Dallas suburb.

Matthew McKay, 17, was shot at point-blank range during the convenience store robbery Nov. 21. He later died at a Dallas hospital.

A store camera taped the robbery and the tape was later broadcast by stations nationwide as officials sought help in the search for suspects.

Police took out a murder warrant Tuesday against the Michigan man, who was held Tuesday night at the Lew Sterrett Justice Center on $500,000 bond for the aggravated robbery charge in Mesquite.

Cole said officials were preparing capital murder charges against the man, who had been a suspect in McKay's death since December.

"We are not obligated to pay a reward to anyone," Cole said. "But if anyone wants to come forward with more information to enhance the evidence ... we still have some reward money left."

Scientists report huge fossil find

WASHINGTON (AP) — Scientists have made the largest fossil find in North America, uncovering more than 100,000 bone pieces of animals 200 million years old at a site in Nova Scotia, the National Geographic Society announced today.

The fossils, representing the crucial period in history when dinosaurs emerged to become masters of the Earth, were discovered on the shores of the Bay of Fundy north of the coast of Maine.

Geologist Paul E. Olsen of Columbia University's Lamont-Doherty Geological Observatory and biologist Neil H. Shubin of Harvard University led the field work that made the discovery last summer.

"Bones were sticking out all over the place. They were everywhere," Shubin said of the site, located on the north shore of the bay near rural Parrsboro.

Some of the more significant finds so far are 12 skulls and jaws of Tritheledonts, the reptiles that are closest evolutionally to mammals. They are the first found in North America and represent the largest single collection of these rare fossils in the world, the scientists said.

Other skulls, teeth, jaws and bones unearthed at the site along the water's edge belong to dinosaurs, ancient crocodiles, lizards, sharks and primitive fish.

Peres visits West Berlin

BERLIN (AP) — Israeli Prime Minister Shimon Peres wound up his nine-day European tour today in the divided German city of Berlin, where Adolf Hitler plotted the annihilation of millions of European Jews.

Peres' itinerary included a visit to West Berlin's Jewish community, the largest in Germany with 6,300 members. Before Hitler came to power in 1933, Berlin had 170,000 Jewish citizens, many of whom perished in the Holocaust.

The Israeli leader was met at Berlin's Tegel Airport by Mayor Eberhard Diepgen and West Berlin Jewish Community leader Heinz Galinski. Peres then was taken on a brief driving tour of the city, where 4,000 policemen have been assigned to guard him.

Late Tuesday, about 550 demonstrators marched from Wittenbergplatz to Adenauerplatz in West Berlin to protest Israeli Middle East policy toward Palestinians. Police said most of the demonstrators were leftists from the city's Alternative List Party and Palestinians in West Berlin.

Police reported no incidents, but protesters carried such signs as, "Attention For The Victims Of German Fascism Cannot Be An Alibi For Not Calling Genocide Genocide."

Peres' one-day trip includes a talk with West Berlin students at the Reichstag, the former Parliament building beside the Berlin Wall.

Israeli jets raid refugee camp

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Israeli jets bombed the outskirts of a Palestinian refugee camp in southern Lebanon early Wednesday, state-run radio and Israeli military sources said.

It was the first Israeli air raid on Palestinian bases in Lebanon this year. There were 13 such raids last year, the last on Oct. 27.

A broadcast on state-run Beirut radio quoted unnamed hospital sources in Sidon, the provincial capital of southern Lebanon, as saying at least three civilians were wounded in the five-minute raid on pro-Syrian Palestinian guerrilla bases near the Ein el-Hilweh camp.

Israeli military sources in Tel Aviv said three buildings were bombed — a two-story structure belonging to the Abu Musa faction of Al-Fatah, a two-story building occupied by the Palestinian Liberation Front and a building of Ahmed Jibril's Popular Front for the Liberation of Palestine-General Command.

All three groups are closely allied with Syria and opposed to Palestine Liberation Organization chairman Yasser Arafat.

TV intimate messenger

NEW YORK (AP) — In two days, the nation went from the exhilaration of the Super Bowl to the depths of despair over seven fallen astronauts. It all happened on television, America's most intimate messenger of life and death.

Tuesday, on TV screens all across America, these were some of the nation's shared images: a shuttle disintegrating into an explosive ball of fire, schoolchildren crying for their beloved teacher, a Cape Canaveral flag at half staff.

Once again, television united the country in a shared experience. Once again, the emotion was grief.

"Everybody has a share in it, in part because so many of us saw it," said ABC anchor Peter Jennings. "There's something quintessentially American about sharing grief in public. It's a cathartic experience. No other nation places such a public premium on the loss of life."

Other disasters have had many more deaths. The plane crash in Gander, New Foundland. The Beirut barracks massacre. But, for various reasons to this nation of collective TV watchers, the shuttle Challenger going down with seven aboard meant more and hit us harder.

"It's not a numbers game, it's what it stands for," said Rick Kaplan, executive producer of ABC's "Nightline." "This was a terrible blow to the American psyche."

The deaths in Beirut came in a war zone, where violence is not unexpected. This was totally unexpected, a catastrophic shock, Kaplan said. "We own space. We've had great confidence in it, and it blew up right in front of our eyes."

ABC, CBS, NBC and Cable News Network, perhaps sensing America's need to learn, feel and grieve, provided non-stop coverage. ABC's "World News Tonight" and the "NBC Nightly News" devoted their entire broadcasts to the single subject; the "CBS Evening News" spent nearly all its time on it. Single-subject coverage, although not unprecedented, was most unusual.

Dan Rather, Peter Jennings and Tom Brokaw all closed their nightly newscasts with short personal essays on what the tragedy meant.

Rather called it a "death in the family," and spoke about "seven searchers," including teacher Christa McAuliffe, "pushing the edge of the envelope, full-out, full-throttle, reaching for the sky."

ABC, CBS and NBC all had one-hour news specials on the tragedy

Tuesday night. ABC's "Nightline" also added 30 minutes.

Why did this story evoke such an outpouring of emotion?

Bill Wheatley, executive producer of the "NBC Nightly News," said it was because of "the horror of seeing this on live TV." Jennings said we all were "immediate participants." President Reagan had seen it as everyone else did — on television.

Over and over again, in slow motion, frame by frame, we saw a soaring Challenger plucked from the sky in a ball of flame.

Wheatley said another factor in why this story gripped us so was that Americans could relate to McAuliffe, the schoolteacher-mother-neighbor, as one of their own.

"It's because vicariously nearly every person in this country feels themselves on the launch pad going up," said Rather. "There's no doubt in my mind people feel a oneness."

Emotionally, Rather and Kaplan compared the day to only one other event — the assassination of President Kennedy. Rather nearly broke down several times, but he said he thought about the supreme professionalism of "seven brave people" and fought back the tears. "I gave myself a lecture," he said.

Jennings also felt choked up during his nearly six-hour solo anchor stint in the afternoon. "Oh God, not here," he said.

The professional, calm, deliberate demeanor of the anchors served as an important role model in times of tragedy, a valuable outlet to a grieving nation grasping for answers, said one psychologist.

"Under any degree of stress, all of us want to be taken care of," said Michael Katch, a professor at New York University's School of Social Work. "On a national trauma, such as this, a Dan Rather or a Walter Cronkite are soothing, and they help us process our grief."

Jennings said he preferred the role of "purveyor of information. I'm not a father figure."

The constant communication from television can provide reassurance during national tragedies, said Van Gordon Sauter, president of CBS News. "Television provides immediacy, reliable information and, in cases like these, sorrow. In a peculiar way, as a nation, we're comforted that the information still is flowing and that we're finding out what's happened."

"In times like these, the anchorperson is the linkage, the lifeline for the nation."

Politics picks up before deadline

AUSTIN (AP) — With less than a week left to get on the May 3 Democratic and Republican primary ballots, Texas politicians turned their attention on the state Capitol to get campaign attention.

Attorney General Jim Mattox, who says he once considered a Democratic race for governor, formally announced Tuesday for re-election.

Capitol news conferences were scheduled today for two other interests in the gubernatorial contest

State GOP Chairman George Strake says he has a new statewide voter poll that shows Democratic Gov. Mark White is not as strong as he thinks he is.

A. Don Crowder of McKinney, a former law partner of Mattox, who announced recently as a Democratic candidate for governor, also scheduled a session with reporters.

Mattox, the former Dallas congressman who is finishing up his first term as the state's chief legal officer, added his name to the ballot Tuesday.

He said he was confident he could outpoll any of the possible four Republican candidates.

"They're all pretty weak sisters, the best I can tell," Mattox told a news conference.

"I will put my experience and my capability as a prosecutor, as a person who has drafted criminal laws and as a person who has enforced them, up against any one of my opponents any day of the week," Mattox said.

Mattox said friends and advisers had urged him to run for governor.

However, he said, "It didn't feel right. It didn't have exactly the right feeling. I prayed about it and decided that it was not the correct course at this time."

Mattox said that four years from now, if he wins re-election, the governorship would be one of two alternatives open to him.

"When I finish my work as attorney general, the two logical alternatives would be to run for the U.S. Senate or for governor. I'm not in a position to make that decision now. I'm not making those plans ahead of time," he said.

Mattox said recent news reports about him receiving $200,000 from a Dallas condominium builder on a real estate deal shouldn't affect his re-election campaign.

"There's nothing to it," he said. "I'm not under investigation for anything. That transaction took place before I took office. There has of Defense Department contingency operations in Florida.

The chunks will be examined microscopically and chemically for clues to the cause, direction and force of the explosion, an official said.

Investigators also will have thousands of photographs to study. At least six TV cameras were focused on Challenger as it lifted off the launch pad. Film from the cameras will be enhanced by computers and analyzed frame by frame.

Contractors who built the spacecraft components will play a major role in the study.

At the Martin Marietta plant in New Orleans where the shuttle rocket fuel tank is made, officials already were assembling data on the tank used for Challenger's launch. The silo-like vessel is 154 feet long, 28 feet in diameter, and contains 1.6 million pounds of super-cold liquid hydrogen and oxygen at the moment of launch.

Television views seem to indicate that Challenger's explosion centered on the tank, but Martin Marietta officials refused to speculate.

not been one single thought that I have done anything as attorney that was not appropriate."

In other political developments Tuesday:

— State district Judge Hugo A. Touchy of Houston announced that he is a Democratic candidate for the Texas Supreme Court seat now held by Justice Sears McGree, who is seeking re-election. Touchy was appointed judge of the Harris County state district court in 1983. He said his campaign manager would be Richard "Racehorse" Haynes, prominent Houston defense attorney.

— Former Gov. Bill Clements urged Democratic Gov. Mark White to

Letters to the Editor

Dear editor, Friday's tragedy left all of us saddened. And I remember another fire a few years ago when three children were left alone—at that time two died!

The pictures we faced as we read our Brand Sunday were pretty graphic. But what a statement they made: Do not leave your babies alone!

Sometimes we as parents forget how fragile our little ones are. At least let Friday's unfortunate accident remind us of that.

Peeler speaks to study club

Calliopean Study Club members made a donation to the American Cancer Society in memory of Teddy Alexander when they met Thursday in the home of Vera Threewit.

Also, during the brief business meeting, a letter was read from Garth Thomas requesting help in planning a reception for the sesquicentennial wagon train. Jane Gulley volunteered to be a club representative in that project.

Alva Lee Peeler gave an informative program concerning Big Brothers/Big Sisters Organization. She stated that Big Brothers was organized in 1903 and that five years later Big Sisters was begun.

The speaker explained that the Hereford Kiwanis Club made a donation of $500 to start the local organization in Hereford in 1974. Since that time it has grown each year.

The organization is supported by United Way and from private donations. There is no government assistance for Big Brothers/Big Sisters.

Peeler also explained that there are currently 56 children in the program and that all but 16 children have been paired with an adult. These children are all from one parents homes-the mother.

Most of the children in the program are suffering from poverty and emotional ills that range from mild to devastating. It requires about $650 per child per year to keep them in the program.

The next Calliopean meeting is planned Feb. 13 in the home of Wilma Nobles.

Members present included Mmes. Clyde Cave, Audine Dettrmann, Alton Fraser, Gulley, Virginia Holmes, James Hull, Sue James, Norman Kerr, D.C. McWhorter, Trow Mims, Kathlee Palmer, Kathryn Ruga and hostess, Mrs. Charles Threewit.

DR. GOTT TMJ syndrome is widespread

By Peter H. Gott, M.D.

DEAR DR. GOTT — What are the symptoms of TMJ syndrome? I have had trouble with my right jaw for five years and the doctors can't seem to do anything about it.

DEAR READER — TMJ is short for temporo-mandibular joint, the place where the jawbone articulates with the cheekbone in front of each ear.

Ordinarily, this hinge system works pretty well when we open and close our mouths. However, as with any mechanical arrangement, problems can set in after time. If there is slippage or inflammation of the joint, pain results. It's a chronic type of discomfort that, for most people, is more than a nuisance. Clicking and to-and-fro movement often appear.

TMJ syndrome is surprisingly common. In fact, some dental specialists confine their practices to TMJ problems. Some people appear to develop TMJ syndrome as a consequence of grinding or clenching their teeth at night, a sign of stress and tension. TMJ disorders may be resistant to treatment. If you have a TMJ problem, ask your dentist to refer you to an oral surgeon who specializes in this ailment.

DEAR DR. GOTT — Is it true that people with heart problems and asthma should not sleep under an electric blanket?

DEAR READER — Incorrect. I don't know why anyone would say that.

DEAR DR. GOTT — I am an 18-year-old male. For the past five or six years, my breasts have been swollen around the nipple and areola. I've been told this is normal and the problem should have disappeared by now. Can anything be done?

DEAR READER — Some breast swelling and tenderness are common for boys in their early teens. However, I think 18 is a little old and five or six years a little long to have these symptoms. See your doctor to make sure your hormones are in balance and your weight is not excessive. If you are physically normal, the swollen breast tissue can be easily removed by a reputable plastic surgeon.

DEAR DR. GOTT — I am 64-year-old lady and have problems sleeping at night. I don't want to take any medication to make me sleep. What might help?

DEAR READER — A glass of warm milk or a cup of chamomile tea may relax you at bedtime and allow you to fall asleep. Benadryl, an overthe-counter antihistamine, is useful in helping people sleep; is it safe and doesn't require a prescription. Fifty to 100 mg. is usually sufficient. Try the milk first. I'd welcome other suggestions from readers.

DEAR DR. GOTT — I was very surprised to read in one of your columns that people allergic to penicillin could use erythromycin. Doesn't that contain penicillin?

DEAR READER — No, it doesn't. Erythromycin is not related to penicillin and is considered by most experts to be the substitute drug of choice.

DEAR DR. GOTT — My grandma and grandpa say you can get a stiff neck from sitting in a breeze. Is that true?

DEAR READER — Your grandparents have a lot more experience than I do, so you better pay attention to what they say. I would be presumptuous to tell them they cannot get stiff necks in the breeze if, in fact, they do.

Some people's muscles seem to be extremely sensitive to changes in temperature. Sitting by an open window, driving in the car with the window down or being exposed to a stiff, chilling breeze can cause neck cramps in susceptible individuals. This pattern is not universal, however.

OSTEOARTHRITIS PREVALENCE

ATLANTA (AP) — Osteoarthritis is one of the most prevalent diseases in America and the chances that a person will get it increase with age, says the Arthritis Foundation.

At age 75, 80 percent of the population has osteoarthritis of the hands, 15 percent have it in their knees, and 5 percent have it in their hips.

The condition is believed to be a result of the interaction of several factors, including heredity, occupational history, weight, trauma to a joint, and possible biochemical abnormalities in the cartilage.

Ann Landers

Rebuttal good

DEAR ANN LANDERS: You recently published an attack on our jury system in personal-injury trials, but unfortunately you did not give your readers all the facts.

The column dealt with a 15-year-old boy who was injured in a high school football game. A jury awarded him $6 million. During the appeals process the insurer settled for $4 million. Your correspondent made it sound as if this happened yesterday. He said the award and settlement were outrageous.

The facts are these: (1) The boy was rendered quadriplegic by injuries suffered in a 1975 game. The trial was in 1982; the settlement in 1983. (2) The boy offered to settle before the trial for $500,000 but the insurer, without telling the defendant school district, turned him down. (3) The boy's lawyers proved the school district was negligent and that the boy had suffered a broken neck because his coaching instructions were inadequate. They did not comply with highly publicized national safety standards. (4) As a result of this case, the school district instituted an exemplary safety program and a similar tragedy to another boy may have been prevented.

Yes; there are large verdicts, but they are not "wacko." One was awarded to another high school football player made quadriplegic by injuries suffered because of a defective helmet about which the manufacturer had been warned.

Another large settlement went to a 27-year-old worker made paraplegic after he was pinned under construction equipment that had defective brakes and inadequate warning devices. Still another, to an 18-year-old who had both legs cut off by a tractor-mower that lacked proper safety devices. Large settlements go to victims who are hideously injured because of proven negligence or product defects. They also go to the survivors—the mothers, fathers and children of people who should not have died.

In such cases, juries award compensation to those destined to suffer a lifetime of pain and agony in the hope of deterring future indifference or recklessness.

Large verdicts are much less prevalent than your Seattle writer and the insurance companies would have us believe. They just get more publicity. Out of 1,600 cases studied by the Civil Litigation Research Project, more than 50 percent dealt with disputes of less than $10,000; only 12 percent involved claims of more than $50,000.

Ask yourself, Ann, who do you want to decide what is just and fair compensation for horrible injuries due to proven negligence or defective products. Should it be the insurance industry? Should it be those who are responsible for the negligence or the defects? Or would you prefer a jury made up of your fellow citizens? This question, I believe, answers itself.

Instead of trying to eliminate innocent victims' historic right to compensation through a jury trial, let's try to do away with negligence and defective products. The jury is the conscience of the community. Jurors are telling business and industry that the way to eliminate wrongs is by exercising our rights, not by taking them away.—SINCERELY, PETER PERLMAN, PRESIDENT, THE ASSOCIATION OF TRIAL LAWYERS OF AMERICA

DEAR MR. PERLMAN: Thank you for giving us the other side of the story. Your rebuttal was a good one and I am pleased to print it.

Ann Landers' booklet, "Sex and the Teenager," explains every aspect of sexual behavior—where to draw the line, how to say no, the various methods of contraception, the dangers of VD, the symptoms and where to get help. Cherry tree needs a friend

DEAR POLLY — We planted a sweet cherry tree (Bing type) three years ago and it has yet to bear a single cherry. Is there anything we should be doing before spring to encourage it to bear fruit? — MRS. B.N.

DEAR MRS. B.N. — You probably need to plant another cherry tree. Sweet cherries need another sweet cherry tree nearby to cross-pollinate. The second tree should be a different variety than your first tree. For example, if your first tree is a Bing, you might plant a Windsor (another variety of sweet cherry) as a cross-pollinator. Any good nursery that sells fruit trees can give you a list of the best pollinators for various varieties.

Sour cherries such as Montmorency, peaches, some plums and some apples are self-pollinating and do not need another variety to ensure fruiting. These trees may be planted alone. However, sweet cherries, most apples, pears and some plums should always be planted with a cross-pollinating mate.

Some nurseries offer novelty trees that have several varieties of one fruit grafted onto one rootstock. These trees are self-pollinating, since the various varieties pollinate each other.

DEAR POLLY — Affix individual dried flowers to greeting cards or sheets of stationery with tiny dabs of white glue.

To add fragrance to inks, steep a half cup of strong scented dried herbs, such as lemon verbena, in ¼ cup of water for one hour. Then add several teaspoons of the strained, scented liquid to a bottle of ink. — NIKKI

DEAR NIKKI — Both your Pointers are fun ways to make letter writing more romantic! Your helpful Pointers earn you the Pointer of the Week award, a copy of my book, "Polly's Pointers: 1061 Helpful Hints for Making Everything Last Longer." Others who would like this book can order it for $6.50. Make check payable to POLLY'S POINTERS and send to POLLY'S POINTERS, Box 1216, Dept. 55, Cincinnati, OH 45201. — POLLY

Play It Again Schroeder

It is said that practice makes perfect so Chris Tardy takes time out from a busy schedule to play the pearly whites in preparation for the musical production of "You're A Good Man, Charlie Brown." Tardy will be playing the part of Schroeder during performances set for Thursday, Saturday and Sunday at the Hereford Community Center. The play is being presented by the Good Guys Nazarene Youth.

Public invited to musical production

The public is invited to enjoy a few hours of lighthearted entertainment during the Broadway musical production of "You're A Good Man, Charlie Brown."

The play, which is being presented by the Good Guys Nazarene Church, can be seen Thursday, Saturday and Sunday at the Hereford Community Center.

Desserts will be served during the dessert theatre at 7 p.m. Thursday with the performance to begin at 8 p.m. Showtime for Saturday is 8 p.m. and the Sunday matinee performance will start at 2 p.m.

Tickets for the dessert theatre are priced at $5 for adults and $3 for children 12 years of age and under. Other performance tickets may be purchased for $4 for adults and $2.50 for children.

All proceeds will be used to benefit the Haiti Missions Project.

Tickets are available at Caryn's Hallmark, Thames Pharmacy or by calling the Nazarene Church at 364-8383.

Ted Taylor and Keith Ann Gearn are directing this year's production.

Piano music will be provided by Lisa Hilton.

A nursery will be provided free of charge at the Nazarene Church during the performances.

Cast members include Don Tardy,

Recipes to be submitted by garden club

Members of Bud to Blossom Garden Club met Thursday morning in the home of Marcie Ginn, 205 Douglas, for their regular meeting.

Roll call was answered with "The Texas song I like the best."

Betty Hughes, vice-president, opened the meeting. Members decided to assist District I garden clubs by submitting recipes for a cookbook.

A Gardener's commandments were read to club members and Jane White presented a program on garden and house plant containers and reminded members that now is the time to prune trees.

The next meeting is scheduled Feb. 6 in the home of Jane White, 535 Willow Lane.

Anyone interested in visiting or joining the club may contact Tracey Duncan at 364-8010.

Phyllis Brown was recognized as a guest by members present. They included Wilma Bryan, Hughes, Karen Barela, Patricia Robinson, White and Winnie Wiseman.

In old Japan on New Year's Day, a "male" cake was offered to the sun and a "female" cake was offered to the moon.

A GOLDEN REPLACEMENT

MORRISTOWN, N.J. (AP) — For centuries, alchemists tried to make gold from base metals. Now, modern scientists have found a way to replace the precious metal.

Scientists at Allied-Signal Inc. say they have developed a new nickel-based alloy that can take the place of gold in many electronics applications.

U.S. electronics manufacturers currently spend an estimated $400 million a year for gold. Previous efforts to replace gold with such substitutes as palladium and palladium alloys have failed because of problems with their cost, performance and availability.

The new alloy contains no precious metals, is cheaper to make, and is not subject to price fluctuations. The scientists say it possesses many of the same properties as gold for manufacturing purposes.

Store tufo safely

Tofu is one "health" food that may not be healthy if it is prepared, packaged or stored under unsanitary conditions.

Tofu — or soybean curd — is a bland, cheeselike food high in protein and low in fat. Once used primarily in Asian and vegetarian cooking, tofu has become popular with dieters and is now found in most supermarkets.

Because tofu is rich in protein and moisture, it's also susceptible to the growth of harmful microorganisms, says nutritionist Marilyn Haggard.

Contaminated tofu was blamed for a recently reported outbreak of food poisoning in Washington state which afflicted 50 people with gastrointestinal infections. Investigators believe the tofu probably became contaminated with bacteria after it was packaged with contaminated spring water.

"This doesn't mean that consumers should stop eating tofu," says Haggard, a specialist in food safety for the Texas A&M University Agricultural Extension Service.

"But it does suggest that they should take the same kinds of precautions they would in buying, preparing and storing any protein food," she adds.

When buying tofu, note how it is stored. It should be refrigerated in the same type of case as dairy products. If the tofu is stored in a fresh produce case, it has probably not been kept at a cold enough temperature to prevent the growth of bacteria, Haggard says.

Check the "use by" date and abide by it. Also avoid buying tofu in a package that is bulging, since that may be a sign of growing bacteria, she cautions.

At home, keep tofu refrigerated until you use it. When you can't use the whole amount right away, submerge the remaining tofu in water inside a clean container. Then change the water every few days.

Great Plains winds doing less damage this year

WASHINGTON (AP) — Wind damage to land in the Great Plains is down sharply from a year ago, according to surveys by the Agriculture Department.

Wilson Scaling, chief of the department's Soil Conservation Service, said Tuesday that 1.02 million acres were reported damaged in November and December by wind erosion in the most vulnerable parts of the 10-state region. That was down 33 percent from 1.53 million acres damaged a year ago.

November and December are the first two months of the annual seven-month season when winds normally are highest and the soils are driest. Surveys were made in 541 counties.

Scaling said 61 percent of the damage was in the southern Great Plains, where protective cover often is sparse because of a lack of moisture. Cropland sustained 86 percent of the damage, while 12 percent occurred on rangeland, and 2 percent on other land.

Land described as "in condition to blow" when winds are high was reported at 14.5 million acres, nearly 750,000 acres more than a year ago.

Scaling said that emergency tillage to prevent damage was used on 265,440 acres in November and December, with Texas accounting for 75 percent. Tillage consists of roughing up the surface of the soil to make it less susceptible to wind damage.

In all of the 1984-85 wind erosion season, damage was reported at 8.5 million acres in the 10 states. That was down sharply from 12.3 million acres damaged in 1983-84 when drought left sparse cover on so much of the region. That was one of the worst seasons for wind damage since the agency began records in the mid-1930s.

The worst season recorded was 1964-65 when 15.8 million acres of the Great Plains were damaged by wind. Another bad year was in 1980-81 when 14.5 million acres were damaged.

December with the damage during the same two months of 1984-85, included:

- Colorado, 5,000 acres damaged this season and 28,800 damaged in 1984-85.
- Kansas, 144,500 and 12,100.
- Montana, 217,400 and 711,200.
- Nebraska, 72,900 and 63,100.
- New Mexico, 6,900 and 4,200.
- North Dakota, 68,400 and 328,100.
- Oklahoma, 70,200 and 114,000.
- South Dakota, 8,000 and 91,300.
- Texas, 393,400 and 121,000.
- Wyoming, 32,500 and 54,300.

Budget forcing changes in chicken inspection

WASHINGTON (AP) — Federal spending rules, tightened by the Gramm-Rudman balanced-budget law, are forcing some changes among the government's chicken inspectors.

The Agriculture Department said Tuesday the rule changes will apply immediately to poultry plants that turn out young chickens — the broilers sold in supermarkets.

"Our budget situation is an added impetus to implement the new procedure now," said Donald L. Houston, administrator of the department's Food Safety and Inspection Service. "Present resources do not allow us to meet the current, nor the anticipated, need for poultry inspection that is a result of growing consumer demand."

The new procedure will be mandatory in poultry plants currently operating under "modified traditional inspection" methods, which accounts for the vast majority of plants that slaughter young chickens, he said.

Until now, the inspection procedure was divided among three inspectors. The first, using a mirror, checks the outside of each chicken carcass. The other two check the internal organs and inside the body cavity. Any trimming of bruises and other defects is done by plant employees under the direction of an inspector.

The new procedure, called "the streamlined inspection system," eliminates the first inspector. Instead, depending on the size of the plant, one or two inspectors will be used, and each will be responsible for checking an entire bird.

Quartet concert slated Feb. 2

In its recital series at Amarillo Theatre Centre, the Harrington String Quartet has incorporated the talents of a diverse group of musicians. Soprano Mary Jane Johnson, pianist James Rauscher, flutist Sally Turk, and clarinetist Bob Spring have taken their turns performing with quartet members Dawn Harms, Jim Lyon, Amy Brandonbrener, and Matt Lad.

But diversity may take on a whole new meaning at the quartet's next concert on Sunday night, Feb. 2, at 8:15.

Two guest artists, both from the WTSU music faculty and both principal players with the Amarillo Symphony, will collaborate with the quartet on a piece by Jean Francaix. David Murray will play double bass. Nothing terribly unusual there (if one excludes Davis's unusual wardrobe combinations). But Bruce Hammel will play bassoon—and what the heck is that?

The bassoon is surely one of the most misunderstood instruments in the orchestra. It is frequently confused with the oboe or English horn, or mistaken for an oversized clarinet. Perhaps that is because, judging strictly by appearances, it looks like someone made a mistake.

What is it?
"The bassoon is an instrument shaped like a tree, and too complicated for mere thee and me.

Musicians who play it have octopus hands.

To cope with the Rube Goldberg finger demands.

And learning to play one could fill you with dread.

Because of a three-and-a-half octave spread," said the poet Walter Beeler. He went on to suggest that those who found the bassoon just too difficult could always use it to cut down on their firewood bills or as a vegetable stake in the garden.

Another wag, Harvey Rudoff, wrote instructions on building a bassoon. The first step was to plant maple seeds and wait about 30 years for a tree to grow. After the tree had been cut into 10-foot sections and curved like a hairpin (no mean task), Rudoff suggested, "Drill some finger-holes in it and put on lots of keys (it doesn't matter how many; you can't have too many keys on a bassoon)."

Well, whatever a bassoon is, Bruce Hammel will play one on the witty melodies of the Francaix Divertissement for Bassoon and String Quintet. He might even be available to answer questions about the instrument at the reception following the concert.

The evening's music also will feature the Harrington String Quartet playing Schubert's Quartet No. 13 in A Minor and Samuel Barber's String Quartet. The slow movement of the Barber piece is the popular "Adagio for Strings" used so effectively as theme music in the movie "The Elephant Man."

Admission is by season's pass or $5 at the door. Large out-of-town groups who would like reduced ticket prices should contact Amy Hammel (806)656-3861.

The larger brown seaweed, or kelp, that flourishes in the waters along the Pacific Coast grows one inch per hour or two feet a day. It eventually reaches lengths of 200 feet.

All-region Band

Eighth and ninth graders from LaPlata and Stanton competed in the all-region band competition held in December. This past week they performed in a concert held at West Texas State University under the direction of Mike Bryant, Stanton band director, and James MacLaskey, LaPlata band director. From Stanton, top picture, back row are: Karl Schumacher, Brad Blum, Greg Sorensen, Ruben Valerio, Pat Rhodes, Larry Silva, Jason Bradshaw, Ruben Rodriguez, and Edward Diaz. All-

Make dieting simpler, easier

Fame, they say, is fleeting. Youth doesn't last. But the need to watch your diet goes on forever.

To make dieting easier — whether you need to lose weight or simply want to keep your weight where it is — consider these tips.

—Spread your calorie allotment throughout the day, so you're never really hungry and likely to binge.

—Always eat sitting down, never walking or standing.

—Eat slowly so that you savor what you're eating and so your brain and your stomach have time to register when you're full.

—Eat a variety of foods with a variety of textures. Chewing is likely to be more satisfying than drinking liquids.

—Keep your pantry and freezer well-stocked with low-calorie convenience foods so you're not tempted to settle for a burger and fries when time is limited.

—Plan ahead, when possible. Work from menus that are balanced, colorful and downright delicious, like this one, built around a calorie-controlled frozen dinner. Great eating for only 475 calories.

Condiments add sodium

You can carefully avoid the salt shaker and still be getting significant amounts of sodium from the condiments and sauces you use to flavor food, says a Texas A&M University Agricultural Extension Service nutritionist.

A sodium intake of 1,100 to 3,300 milligrams daily is considered safe and adequate for a healthy adult, says Mary K. Sweeten. One teaspoon of salt contains 1,938 milligrams of sodium or almost two-thirds of this daily amount.

While the specific amount will vary somewhat according to brand, recent figures from the U.S. Department of Agriculture illustrate the sodium content of many popular seasonings, condiments and relishes.

Among the sauces, soy sauce contains the most sodium with about 1,029 milligrams per tablespoon. One tablespoon of Teriyaki sauce contains 690 milligrams, chili sauce 227, Worcestershire sauce 206, and barbecue sauce 130 milligrams.

Some favorite condiments add smaller amounts of sodium to the diet, notes Sweeten. A tablespoon of ketchup has 156 milligrams while the same amount of sweet relish contains 124 milligrams.

Hereford boys led at halftime, 26-20

Sandies get past Whitefaces, 54-48

By GARY CHRISTENSEN
Sports Editor

For a while Tuesday night, the Amarillo High Sandies appeared to have been looking past the Hereford Whitefaces in District 3-5A boys' action.

Hereford frustrated Amarillo High throughout the first three quarters of play. Amarillo High, which is in first place in the district, trailed the Whitefaces 26-20 at halftime.

In the third quarter, Amarillo High managed to get ahead of Hereford, 38-34, and went on to survive the Whitefaces' scare, 54-48.

Amarillo is now 10-2 in the district, while the Herd dropped to 3-8. Overall, Hereford is 8-15 and Amarillo is 20-5.

Amarillo also won the junior varsity boys' contest, by a score of 47-37. The HHS junior varsity now has a 7-14 season record.

Hereford is scheduled to play Friday at Lubbock Coronado. Game times are 6 p.m. for the junior varsity and 7:45 p.m. for the varsity.

Amarillo High jumped out to a 6-0 lead in the first two minutes of Tuesday's varsity battle, but two free throws by Rodney Torres and two field goals by Jerry Brown tied up the game at 6-6.

Hereford later held an 8-6 lead on a basket by Bobby Baker and a 9-8 lead on a free throw by Kevin Hansen. Amarillo gained back the lead, 10-9, with half a minute left in the first half, and Hereford tied it before the quarter ended.

Torres put Hereford back in the lead, 12-10, with the first points of the second quarter. The Whitefaces then led the rest of the first half, with their six-point halftime lead, 26-20, being their biggest of the half.

Amarillo scored the first six points of the second half to tie the game at 26-26. Baker put the Herd back in front, 28-26, with a field goal with 4:57 left in the third quarter. Within half a minute, the Sandies gained the lead for the first time since the first quarter, 30-28.

Baker tied the game up again, 30-30, with a basket with four minutes left in the quarter. Amarillo moved ahead 34-30, but baskets by Torres and Hansen enabled Hereford to tie the game at 34-34.

Hansen's basket came with 1:42 left in the third quarter, after he stole the ball from Amarillo. The Sandies then went into the final period with a 38-34 lead over the Herd.

Baker hit two free throws with 7:26 left in the game to cut Amarillo's lead to 38-38.

But five minutes went by before the Whitefaces could get the ball through the hoop again. The Sandies built up a 49-36 lead before Torres scored a field goal with 2:25 left.

With 1:27 left, Amarillo still had an 11-point lead, 51-40. Two free throws by Baker and a field goal by Hansen sliced the lead to 44-51.

After Amarillo made one of two free throws with 48 seconds left, another basket by Hansen pulled Hereford to within six points, 52-46, with 41 seconds left.

Time ran out, however, on the Whitefaces, and Amarillo High scored a 54-48 victory.

"I thought the kids played one of their hardest games of the year," Hereford Coach Mike Fields said. "They played good defense against one of the best teams in the Panhandle."

"We might not have won, but I think we gained a lot of respect from a real good team, and that's what we've been working for all year, to get people to respect us," Fields continues.

"If we would have scored a few more points in that second half, we would have beat them," he adds.

Bobby Baker finished the game as the Whitefaces' high scorer with 18 points, including eight of nine free throws. Rodney Torres scored 10 points, and Kevin Hansen had seven points.

Hereford made 15 of 42 field goal attempts and 18 of 24 free throws.

The Herd's leading rebounders were Baker with seven and Jerry Brown with six. Torres led in steals with four, and Brown had three steals.

In the junior varsity game, Amarillo High led at halftime, 22-18, and outscored Hereford 25-19 in the second half for a 47-37 win.

Vincent Brown led Hereford with eight points. Casey Daniel, Todd Weaver and Mark Artho each scored six points. Chris Johnson led in rebounds with eight, and Artho had five rebounds.

HEREFORD VARSITY: Bobby Baker 5-13 8-9 18; Rodney Torres 3-9 4-4 18; Kevin Hansen 3-13 1-2 7; Jerry Brown 2-4 0-2 4; Stefan Hacker 1-3 2-2 4; Doug Watts 0-5 2-2 2; Rodney McCracken 1-4 0-1 2; Kyle Stream 0-0 1-1 1. Totals: 15-42 18-24 48.

Shot Gets Blocked

Doug Watts (54) of the Hereford Whitefaces was unable to get this shot going to the basket before an Amarillo defender blocked it. The Herd battled hard against the district's first place team before losing by six points, 54-48. (Brand photo by Jeri Curtis)

Who's Open

Rodney McCracken (14) of the Hereford Whiteface varsity boys' basketball team looks for a teammate to pass the ball to during the first quarter of a game Tuesday against Amarillo High. The Whitefaces led most of the first half, and stayed close in the second half before suffering a 54-48 loss to the Sandies. (Brand photo by Jeri Curtis)

Eagles hire Bears' defensive coach

By RALPH BERNSTEIN
AP Sports Writer

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Buddy Ryan, the coach of the vaunted defense of the Super Bowl champion Chicago Bears, is the new head coach of the Philadelphia Eagles.

Ryan was signed late Tuesday, according to team owner Norman Braman and General Manager Harry Gamble.

Braman, reached by phone at his Miami home, told The Associated Press early today that "I can confirm that we've signed Ryan." Gamble said he negotiated most of the day Tuesday with Ryan before the 51-year-old coach signed a five-year contract, ending a search that began Dec. 16 when Marion Campbell was fired.

In the following weeks, there were reports that Braman strongly favored David Shula, the 26-year-old son of Miami Dolphins Coach Don Shula, followed by reports that Jim Mora, coach of the United States Football League Baltimore Stars, had agreed to coach the Eagles of the National Football League.

Mora became the coach of the New Orleans Saints on Tuesday.

Ryan has been an assistant coach in the NFL for 18 years, the last eight with the Bears. In his tenure with Chicago, the Bears were among the top 10 defensive teams six times.

The Bears this season led the NFL in total defense, capping their success by smothering the New England Patriots in a record setting 46-10 Super Bowl triumph.

Ryan has been given much of the credit for the Bears' 18-1 record and NFL title. After the Super Bowl rout of New England, the Bears carried Ryan off on their shoulders.

Before his eight years with the Bears, Ryan coached eight years the New York Jets and two with the Minnesota Vikings.

His popular "46" defense is a 5-1-5 set named after its original middleman, former safety Doug Plank, who wore uniform No. 46. The "46" forces offensive linemen into one-on-one blocking and opens up avenues for blitzing.

Ryan, a native of Frederick, Okla., was a four-year letterman at Oklahoma State from 1952-55 as an offensive guard before beginning his coaching career as a defensive coordinator at the University of Buffalo from 1961-65. He served in a similar role the next two years with Vanderbilt and University of Pacific before joining the Jets.

FOOTBALL

NEW YORK (AP) — William "The Refrigerator" Perry, the 307-pound Chicago defensive tackle who helped the Bears win the Super Bowl, was named winner of the fourth-quarter balloting for the Gordon's Gin Black Athlete of the Year.

With 160 points, Perry joins the other quarterly winners — Dwight Gooden, Kareem Abdul-Jabbar and Valerie Brisco-Hooks — in the final four.

BASEBALL

HOUSTON (AP) — The Houston Astros have come to terms with four players — pitchers Mike Madden and Jeff Heathcock, outfielder Billy Hatcher and catcher John Mizerack — all of whom agreed to allow drug testing clauses in their contracts.

"The drug tests were not required, but they have all agreed to be tested," Astros General Manager Dick Wagner said Tuesday. "There's no timetable involved in the tests. We don't plan to harass anybody."

The Major League Players Association has filed a grievance contesting the inclusion of drug testing clauses in player contracts.

Whiteface varsity girls fall to Amarillo, 68-33

By GARY CHRISTENSEN
Sports Editor

After playing a close first quarter against Amarillo High Tuesday, nothing seemed to go right for the Hereford High School varsity girls' basketball team which lost 68-33 in a home game.

The loss drops Hereford under the .500 mark again in District 3-5A, with six wins and seven losses. Overall, Hereford is 7-10.

In junior varsity action, Hereford suffered a 43-25 loss to Amarillo. On Friday night, the HHS teams play at Lubbock Coronado, with games time of 6 p.m. for the varsity and 7:45 p.m. for the junior varsity.

The first quarter of Tuesday's varsity game was tied at 2-2 and 4-4 before Amarillo gained an 8-4 lead. Amarillo then went on to lead by five at the end of the quarter, 12-7.

Disaster struck the Whitefaces in the second quarter when they were outscored by Amarillo, 20-6. Amarillo's halftime lead of 32-13 was then increased to 54-21 in the third quarter enroute to the 68-33 win over Hereford.

Scorers for Hereford included Natalie Sims with 10 points, Shelly Edwards with nine points, and Tiffne Taylor with six points.

Edwards led in rebounds with nine, and Sims had five rebounds. Kim Williams led in steals with five.

The HHS junior varsity trailed Amarillo 9-6 in the first quarter and 23-11 at halftime in losing to the Sandies 43-25. Jeanette Mumau led Hereford with seven points and seven rebounds.

Kathy Banner totaled six assists for Hereford, and Tricia Kahlich grabbed six rebounds.

The Hereford junior varsity team has a 5-12 season record.

Cowboys president repeats call for drug testing

DALLAS (AP) — In the wake of news that the New England Patriots had voted to accept voluntary drug testing, Dallas Cowboys president Tex Schramm repeated his oft-stated call for league-wide, mandatory and unannounced testing of players.

The league should begin testing despite opposition from the National Football League Players Association, Schramm said Tuesday.

"I don't think drug testing is a collective bargaining issue," Schramm said.

"I would hope that public reaction to what the Patriots have done would be such that the union would have to agree that the health and well being of the players is more important than the fallacious argument that such tests would be an invasion of privacy," he added.

The Patriots agreed to the tests after a meeting Monday in which coach Raymond Berry said the team had a growing drug problem involving about a dozen players.

Schramm said he will press for the NFL to establish league-wide drug tests by the start of next season. A decision could come in the NFL's March meeting in Palm Springs, Calif., he said.

"I'm sure it will come up, and I would hope the league would adopt a program of unannounced testing, and I would hope it would be in place before next season," Schramm told the Fort Worth Star-Telegram.

Asked what would happen if the league passed such a program and, for example, three Cowboys refused to take the test, Schramm said, "It might end their employment."

Schramm said the Cowboys, unlike a handful of NFL teams, did not ask their players to take drug tests as part of their season-ending physicals.

"We didn't think anything would be accomplished by testing for drugs when they know it's coming," Schramm said.

"My understanding is that the residue of cocaine doesn't last very long, so if a player knows when he's going to be tested, it doesn't do any good."

NBA East all-stars named

NEW YORK (AP) — Patrick Ewing, the rookie center of the New York Knicks, and six other players were added to the Eastern Conference team for the National Basketball Association All-Star Game against the Western Conference Feb. 9 at Dallas.

Joining Ewing were forward Dominique Wilkins of Atlanta, guard Jeff Malone of the Washington Bullets, center Robert Parish and forward Kevin McHale of the Boston Celtics, forward Buck Williams of New Jersey and guard Maurice Cheeks of Philadelphia.

Butkus likes watching Chicago Bears defense

By HAL BOCK
AP Sports Writer

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Dick Butkus, who played a little linebacker in his day, is like any other connoisseur of the craft. He loves to watch the Chicago Bears play defense.

Butkus' old team destroyed the New England Patriots in the Super Bowl and the Hall of Famer was suitably impressed ... no, make that dazzled ... by the modern Monsters of the Midway.

At halftime, New England was trailing 23-3 and the game was not as close as the score. The Pats had set first half Super Bowl futility records for fewest yards rushing (minus five), fewest yards passing (minus 14) and fewest first downs (1).

New England's offense finished in the black with 123 yards, second lowest production in Super Bowl history. Most of that, though, was achieved long after the issue was settled and Chicago's defenders were busy preparing for their well-deserved celebration.

"It's unbelievable to dominate like that," Butkus said. "You've got to put them right up there with the greatest defenses of all time. The Bears just outplay you man-to-man. They beat their guys one-on-one, up and down the line."

Chicago's 46 alignment, invented by defensive coordinator Buddy Ryan, features changing looks, designed to confuse the other team. It specializes in deception.

"OK, they've got the 46," Butkus said. "Somebody ought to be able to figure out something to counter it, but nobody has. Other people try to imitate it, but nobody has. You give Buddy Ryan two weeks to work out a defensive game plan, it's tough to beat them."

Of course, dominating defenses have passed this way before. Pittsburgh's Steel Curtain won four Super Bowls. The Purple People Eaters of Minnesota, whose line was coached for two years by Ryan, made it to the Super Bowl four times.

Miami's No Name defense won two Super Bowls, including one that capped a perfect 17-0 season. Dallas' Doomsday Defense with its complicated Flex formation, reached the Super Bowl three times in four years.

Then there were the pre-Super Bowl era defenses like the Los Angeles Rams' Fearsome Foursome, the New York Giants of Sam Huff, Andy Robustelli et al and the original Monsters of the Midway.

Where do the Bears fit in with all of them? Well, for one thing, it is tough to compare eras. But that may be an edge for this team.

"You've got quicker people today and that puts a lot of responsibility on the linebackers," Butkus said. "There's more double-teaming, trying to give receivers time to get open. But these guys, you just can't keep them out."

To be the best, you have to do it again and again, the way the Steelers and Cowboys did in the last decade. Consistency is the measure of greatness. The Bears have done it once. Let them return two or three more times and they'll have a more valid claim to immortality.

Foundation receives large grant

A grant of $100,000 from the Don and Sybil Harrington Foundation has been granted to the Texas Panhandle Heritage Foundation, Inc., producer with West Texas State University of the musical drama, "TEXAS." This award is to assist in the development of an endowment fund which the TPHP is working to establish at this time.

"TEXAS" has stayed in the black throughout its history, unlike most other outdoor dramas. However, there has been little reserve for emergencies, so two years ago the Board began a campaign for the development of an endowment of reserve funds, so that there would be a backlog against crises. The goal was two-thirds of one year's income, and the Harrington grant brings the total to half of the amount sought. In addition to bequests, there has also been a grant of $2500 from the M.K. Brown Foundation of Pampa.

In addition to the endowment, the Board of the TPHP has also reached out to encourage younger people to become members of the Foundation. Margaret Harper and Patty Bryant of the publicity department, often assisted by the president of the Foundation, A.W. Lair, been traveling throughout the Panhandle talking to groups about the structure of the TPHP and stressing the importance of members throughout the Panhandle.

In response to this need, the Meadows Foundation of Dallas has granted $100 for each new $10 membership up to $50,000, about two-thirds of the matching membership money has come in. To assist in the costs of this membership campaign, the Texas Commission on the Arts and the National Endowment for the Arts have granted $5000.

"TEXAS" has a strong foundation because of the interest of the people in the area around it. The present campaign will insure that the roots remain deep and that the support and interest are area wide.

Anyone interested in information or memberships should write Box 268, Canyon, Texas 79015 or call the "TEXAS" office.

Vincenzo Lunardi made the first flight in Britain by balloon in 1784, going from London to Standon in Hertfordshire.

The world's first passenger railway was opened in 1825. It ran from Liverpool to Manchester in England.

Future missions delayed

NASA looking for answers

SPACE CENTER, Houston (AP) — The year 1968 was supposed to be one of NASA's most spectacular and ambitious with 15 shuttle missions planned.

The plans, however, now lie in shambles like the debris that fell into the Atlantic Ocean on Tuesday from the incinerated shuttle Challenger.

The loss of the Challenger and its seven-person crew prompted the space agency to halt temporarily its future missions until a reason is found for Tuesday's tragedy.

"We're obviously not going to pick any flight activity until we fully understand what the circumstances were relative to launch," said Jess Moore, associate administrator for spaceflight and newly appointed director of the Johnson Space Center.

The schedule included the launch in May of two science probes that would be sent toward Jupiter. The Ulysses satellite, set for launch on May 15, was to fly aboard Challenger, and then speed on to Jupiter for a major scientific study of the largest planet in the solar system.

Another satellite, called Galileo, was to be launched from space shuttle Atlantis on May 21 and cruise toward Jupiter. It was to use the gravity of the planet to be slung toward the sun and become the first man-made object to orbit the solar poles.

Also wrecked are NASA's plans to study Halley's Comet. A special camera and satellite aboard Challenger was to gather irreplaceable data on the comet as it nears the sun.

In March, another comet study was planned aboard space shuttle Columbia. Without these two missions, the major U.S. studies of the comet are lost.

Another major loss will be the delay in launch of the Hubble Telescope, the most powerful astronomy instrument ever built for use in orbit. NASA expected it to view celestial objects that are 10 times farther away and dimmer than any seen from Earth. The telescope was to have been launched on Atlantis on Oct. 27.

Also planned for 1968, on March 20, was the first launch of a shuttle from Vandenberg Air Force Base in California. The mission, on space shuttle Discovery, would have flown over both of Earth's poles.

Launch delays also will affect a number of routine shuttle flights:

—March 20, a Department of Defense flight on Discovery with a secret payload.

—June 24, a Columbia flight that was to include material sciences research.

—July 15, a Challenger flight that was to include recovery of a satellite that has been in orbit for more than a year, testing the effects of the space environment on a variety of metals, glasses and plant seeds.

—Aug. 18, a Columbia mission that included instruments to study the Earth and its environment.

—Sept. 4, a secret Department of Defense mission set for launch from the Kennedy Space Center.

—Sept. 24, a Challenger flight that was to include launch of a major communications satellite, a twin to the one that was lost in Tuesday's accident.

—Nov. 6, an Atlantis flight that was to include the launch of three satellites.

—Dec. 6, a Department of Defense mission on Challenger.

Moore declined to speculate Tuesday how long an investigation might take, saying only that flight safety is the agency's first priority.

"It's got to be a function of what the (investigation) board finds and where the difficulties were and what corrective actions must be taken before we feel confident and safe to fly again," he said.

Challenger, nicknamed "Old 99" and considered the most dependable of the four-shuttle fleet, blew apart 75 seconds after an apparently flawless liftoff from Florida's Kennedy Space Center.

Moore said a panel of senior NASA members has collected and impounded debris recovered from the Atlantic Ocean, along with photographs and notes from the ground and launch support teams. The data will be reviewed by a panel, to be appointed soon by acting NASA director William Graham.

Moore refused to estimate how long it might be before the board makes a finding.

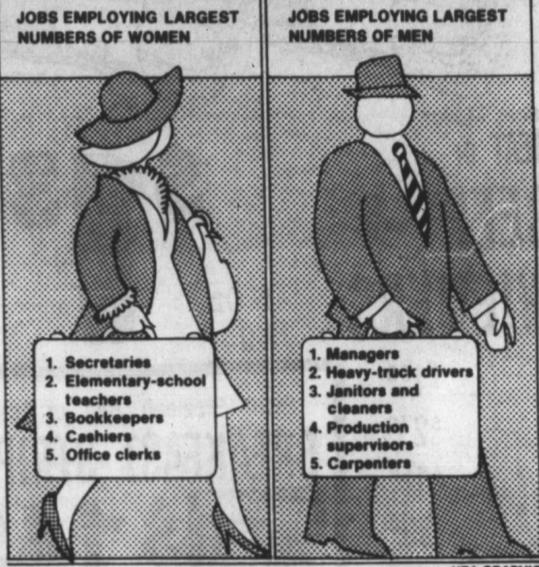

"It will be done just as quickly, but as prudently as we possibly can and as thoroughly as we possibly can," he said.

The only comparison to be drawn is the investigation that followed the flash fire that killed three astronauts aboard the Apollo 1 spacecraft on Jan. 27, 1967 — nine years and one day before Challenger exploded. It was 22 months before the next flight.

While experts predicted another long disruption of the shuttle program, most said they expected NASA eventually to lift the moratorium.

The Nuremberg Laws of 1935 outlawed Jews and made the Swastika the official flag of Germany.

Pioneer osteopath recalls early days

AMARILLO, Texas (AP) — The rough and dusty life Dr. L.V. Cradit led as a child at the turn of the century in the American West helped forge a determination he would need later in life to beat back negative ideas about his profession.

From his rugged origins in a sod house in Nebraska, Cradit went on to help charter the first osteopathic hospital in Texas.

And now the 95-year-old doctor lives in the hospital he helped create.

When the young Dr. Cradit moved to Amarillo in 1920 he became one of the first doctors of osteopathy in town, but the osteopaths were not allowed to use the one hospital in town at that time, he said.

Cradit describes the town as rugged then.

"Amarillo was a western town with lots of railroad men," he said. "It was quite an interesting place to be in."

In those early days, Cradit mostly made house calls.

Most people couldn't afford to have babies in the hospital, he said.

"I delivered more babies than I ever dreamed I would," Cradit said.

But the wariness of osteopaths was here from the start.

"M.D.s didn't know much about D.O.s then except that their hierarchy wouldn't recognize us," Cradit said.

One medical doctor would help admit Cradit's patients if they needed hospitalization.

Soon, several M.D.s, upset that an osteopath's patients were being admitted to the hospital, started a petition to exclude doctors of osteopathy from practicing at the hospital.

When other osteopaths had located in Amarillo, the group decided to start its own hospital in 1928. Those first four osteopathic doctors financed the hospital.

They converted a two-story rooming house to a 12-bed hospital, Cradit said.

They kept this hospital going until shortly before World War II when the doctors built a 40-bed hospital, which received the first charter for an osteopathic hospital in Texas. It was well equipped, he said, but due to the war, it took a while to complete because of the shortage of materials.

The osteopathic doctors ran up against opposition in the creation of this hospital, when a number of the medical men in town said Amarillo already had enough hospitals, Cradit said.

The mayor and other influential men issued an edict to let the osteopaths build their hospital, Cradit said.

"We had some friends by then," he said.

But medical and osteopathic doctors pulled together when emergencies arose. A taxing year for both doctors was the small pox epidemic of 1927.

"It developed into quite an epidemic," Cradit said, with several hundred cases recorded.

All doctors were advising people to be vaccinated, and Cradit said he immunized about 900 people in a few weeks time.

"It kept me busy day and night vaccinating people," Cradit said.

When the Depression hit, business, including medicine, slowed considerably, Cradit said.

It was the Dust Bowl era and more difficult for people to pay their bills, and Cradit himself had to borrow on an insurance policy to pay the rent on his office, he said.

A common affliction during the Depression was dust pneumonia, caused from the mighty dust storms that swept the High Plains, he said.

Many times on his house calls to families on the edge of town, dust would blast across the roads, and he could barely see to drive, he said.

But a man whose early years were spent in western Nebraska could hold strong against the ravages of nature.

Cradit was born in 1869 in a sod house on a spread in Nebraska. His father helped construct the log schoolhouse, Cradit would later attend, from willow trees along the creeks.

When he was 5 years old, he was put on an old grey pony to trudge the three miles to the log schoolhouse with his siblings, he said.

"I didn't get much schooling maybe, but it was a start," he said with a grin.

But, his father became ill, and the family packed into a covered wagon and journeyed to northwestern Missouri, Cradit said. The trip took four weeks.

"It was a pretty rugged life," he said.

At age 17, Cradit was working the night shift in a railroad yard when he became acquainted with an osteopathic doctor in Cheyenne, Wyo.

This sparked his interest. While still working at night, he would attend classes in Kansas City, Mo. to get the year of Latin he needed to attend college. Then, he went to college for two years in Kansas City.

Cradit next transferred to an osteopathic college in Des Moines, Iowa, where he completed four years.

He and his wife and child moved to Chicago where he took more training in eye, ear, nose and throat at a college there, he said.

His stint in the Army during World War I took him to Rockford, Ill. He was forced to serve as an enlisted man because the military would not recognize his osteopathic training.

Since he couldn't get a commission, he went to infantry school, Cradit said. After the four-month training, he could be commissioned as a second lieutenant.

Two weeks shy of completing his training, armistice came, and military men were pushed out, he said. But he was still promised his commission although he was leaving the military.

Twelve years later it came. By that time, Cradit had put down roots in Amarillo.

And these roots are intertwined with the osteopathic hospital he helped create.

The modern version of the hospital is now known as Family Hospital Center in Amarillo.

And this is Cradit's home now, too.

"I wanted to stay here rather than a nursing home," he said. "The attention here is great."

Mentally retarded newlyweds share life

MIDLAND, Texas (AP) — Jerry and Bonita Lakey aren't much different from any other newly married couple.

Since they began their life together last September, the Midland newlyweds have shared many of the same experiences and anxieties — tangible or intangible — that most couples encounter during the first few months of marriage.

Yet, the Lakeys are somewhat different — both suffer from varying degrees of mental retardation.

Jerry, a native of Port Smith, Ark., and Bonita, born and reared in Midland, met 12 summers ago at a local swimming pool. From there, they grew to become close friends and, then gradually, lovers.

Lakey, 35, says he was quite smitten with Bonita from the very beginning. But, because he was bashful, he didn't know exactly how to act or what to say.

Mrs. Lakey, 27, echoed the same sentiments toward her husband.

Nevertheless, Lakey finally proposed to Bonita on her 26th birthday. The couple was married less than a year later by the bride's brother-in-law in Burlington.

"Jerry and Bonita are really very responsible people," said Ray Unterbrink, executive director of the Midland Association for Retarded Citizens and a close friend of the couple. "Retardation has never been a significant problem in their lives."

The Newspaper BIBLE

HOW CAN WE TRY HIM WITHOUT A CHARGE?

"When they came here for trial," (Festus continued) "I called the case the very next day and ordered Paul brought in. But the accusations made against him weren't at all what I supposed they would be. It was something about their religion, and about someone called Jesus who died, but Paul insists is alive! I was perplexed as to how to decide a case of this kind and asked him whether he would be willing to stand trial on these charges in Jerusalem. But Paul appealed to Caesar! So I ordered him back to jail until I could arrange to get him to the Emperor."

"I'd like to hear the man myself," Agrippa said. And Festus replied, "You shall — tomorrow."

So the next day, after the king and Bernice had arrived at the courtroom with great pomp, accompanied by military officers and prominent men of the city, Festus ordered Paul brought in. Then Festus addressed the audience: "King Agrippa and all present," he said, "this is the man whose death is demanded by both the local Jews and by those in Jerusalem! But in my opinion he has done nothing worthy of death. However, he appealed his case to Caesar, and I have no alternative but to send him! So I have brought him before you all, and especially you, King Agrippa, to examine him and then tell me what to write. For it doesn't seem reasonable to send a prisoner to the Emperor without any charges against him."
