

It's a snowstorm!

A weak front brought freezing rain to the South Plains blowing snow to the Texas Panhandle early today and by 11 a.m. Hereford had accumulated 8 inches of snow with forecasters predicting further snowfall through Saturday.
Hereford's overnight low temperature was 29 degrees and the high today was not expected to be much warmer. The outlook for Hereford calls for a 20 percent chance of light snow tonight and a 40 percent chance on Saturday.

An approaching upper air disturbance induced clouds, rain and snow over the high and low rolling plains. The National Weather Service said a weak front was stationary from southeastern New Mexico to near Lubbock and Childress.

The weather service posted a travelers advisory for slick roads because of subfreezing temperatures and snowfall. Easterly winds at 17 mph pushed the 30-degree reading at Amarillo to a wind chill index of 6 degrees.

Elsewhere, winds were gentle east to southeast. Readings ranged from the 30s and 40s to 50s and lower 60s in South Texas.

The weather service said a travelers advisory would continue in effect for icy roads in the High Plains.

Duvalier leaves country, relinquishes his power

PORT-AU-PRINCE, Haiti (AP) — Embattled President-for-Life Jean-Claude Duvalier left Haiti for France today on a U.S. Air Force plane, relinquishing power over the impoverished Caribbean nation his family had ruled for 28 years.

"I have decided to pass the destiny of the nation into the hands of the military ... so a bloodbath be avoided for my people," Duvalier said in a taped message broadcast on national television and radio at 7:20 a.m., almost four hours after he left the country.

National television and radio said a military-civilian council headed by army chief of staff Gen. Henri Namphy had taken charge.

In Washington, the U.S. State Department confirmed Duvalier was headed for temporary asylum in France and said the Air Force plane was provided at the 34-year-old Duvalier's request.

France's Foreign Ministry, however, said no country had yet agreed to permanently accept Duvalier.

Duvalier's flight came one week after the White House erroneously reported he had fled the country, prompting him to declare he was "strong as a monkey's tail." His authoritarian government had been the target of mounting protests since last November, including riots last week in which as many as 50 people were killed.

Duvalier said in his taped message that his decision to leave "permits a peaceful and rapid solution to the current crisis."

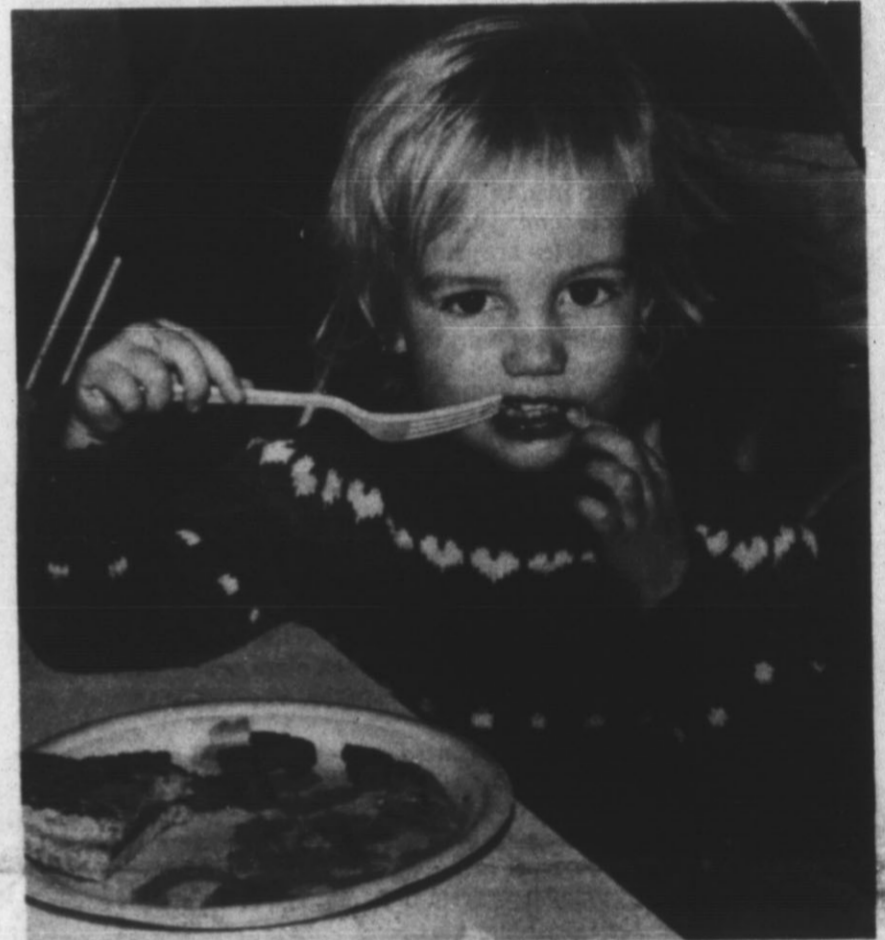

The capital, Port-au-Prince, was calm today following Duvalier's departure. Telephone and telex communications apparently had been cut with the outside world, Associated Press correspondents reported by ham radio.

A 21-gun salute was fired as members of the new governing council stood on the steps of the presidential palace. People gathered in the area shouted with joy.

U.S. Embassy spokesman Jeffrey Lite said Duvalier contacted the French Embassy Thursday afternoon to seek temporary asylum, then met with Ambassador Clayton E. McManaway to ask for transportation.

Duvalier drove his BMW sedan to Francois Duvalier International Airport before dawn today with his wife, Michele, at his side.

White House warned to negotiate or be left behind

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan's top budget officials are getting blunt warnings from Congress that the president may be left behind this year unless he "cuts the baloney" and agrees to negotiate new spending priorities.

Treasury Secretary James A. Baker III and White House Budget Director James C. Miller defended the $994 billion spending proposal before the House Appropriations Committee on Thursday, but ran into a wall of bipartisan skepticism.

Rep. David Obey, D-Wis., chairman of the Appropriations subcommittee on foreign aid, singled out the budget's proposed foreign aid increases as unrealistic in the context of heavy domestic spending cuts.

"Whoever put this budget together for foreign aid has to be out of their cotton pickin' minds," Obey said, noting the foreign package would find little support on Capitol Hill.

"There's no way on God's green earth you're going to get more than 20 percent of the members of Congress — at least in the House — when you're savaging what's happening for our own (programs)," he said.

Obey, echoing comments of other panel members, said Reagan's proposed increases in foreign aid and defense, at the expense of items such as cancer and AIDS research, will prove to be at sharp odds with the desires of most Americans.

He told Baker: "All I ask you sir, is to cut the baloney, and get to this 'Grand Compromise' — put it together now, instead of in October when we'll have to do it in such a hurry we'll probably screw it up."

Baker, while insisting again that there is no room for budget negotiation that includes defense cuts or tax increases, tried to persuade committee members that taking Reagan's prescription this year would cure the nation's deficit ills by 1991 without further cuts.

"If we are willing to do these things the president is asking us to do, we can see this budget balanced — zero — in 1991," he said. "The president's budget represents a very balanced and reasonable approach, if we have the courage and will to make it work."

Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger defended the increased spending asked for his department, telling the Senate Budget Committee that it is necessitated by a continuing Soviet military buildup. Committee Chairman Pete Domenici, R-N.M., suggested the Pentagon "could live ... with a smaller increase."

Reagan himself, asked about reports that his one-day-old budget was already dead in Congress, also maintained the hard line. "We'll give it artificial respiration," he joked.

House Minority Whip Trent Lott, R-Miss., predicted that Republicans unhappy with the White House version would draft their own budget within two weeks that gives less to defense and more to domestic pro-

Unemployment rate fell in January

WASHINGTON (AP) — The nation's civilian unemployment rate fell to 6.7 percent in January as the improving economy created 565,000 non-farm jobs, the government said today.

The rolls of those officially listed as out of work fell below 8 million for the first time in Ronald Reagan's presidency, to 7,831,000 from 8,023,000 in December.

The 0.2 percentage point drop from December's 6.9 percent rate was paced by an influx of new service-related jobs that raised the number of working Americans to a record of nearly 109 million, the Labor Department said.

The civilian unemployment rate was the lowest since March 1980, when it was 6.3 percent. The total of unemployed Americans was last below 8 million in May 1980.

An alternate rate, combining the 116.8 million-member civilian labor force with the 1.7 million members of the Armed Services stationed in the United States, was at 6.6 percent last month, the department said.

Today's report appeared to buttress President Reagan's prediction that the average combined civilian-military unemployment rate for all of 1986 would be 6.7 percent, down from 7.2 percent in December.

That prediction, however, is based on the economy growing at an annual rate of 4 percent this year instead of the 2.4 percent rate the Commerce Department reported for the fourth quarter of 1985.

In a separate report, the department said the number of "discouraged" workers, those listed as out of work more than six months and not looking for employment, fell to 1.1 million, the lowest level in more than four years. Discouraged workers are not counted on the official unemployment rolls because they are not considered part of the labor force.

The commissioner of labor statistics, Janet L. Norwood, said total employment tapered off much less from December to January than would be normally expected because of cold weather and the end of the

Unofficial results of Philippine election trickle in MANILA, Philippines (AP) — Unofficial results trickling in from today's bitterly fought election between President Ferdinand E. Marcos and Corason Aquino gave conflicting reports of who was ahead. The government reported 26 people killed in election day violence, and there were widespread reports of fraud.

With only several dozen precincts reporting five hours after the polls closed, results were widely varied. There was no overall tally from several agencies trying to count the vote.

newspapers showed him ahead, 44,655 to Aquino's 36,258 nationwide. Two other counting operations, the official Commission on Elections and the National Movement for Free Elections, or NAMFREL, had released no overall totals six hours after the polls closed.

An official election commission count was not due until Monday.

In Marcos' traditionally strong areas north of Manila, the State

Evaluation system needs reform

AUSTIN (AP) — The 1984 school reform effort could be sabotaged if principals wind up with too much power in the teacher evaluation process, says Sen. Carl Parker, a sponsor of the education bill.

Texas public schools suffered for years while principals were in charge of evaluations, Parker told the State Board of Education Thursday.

"They just haven't had the guts to write down the truth about some of their fellow workers. We've got to do away with that buddy-buddy, good ol' boy system. I think it exists still," he said.

The evaluation system is the "heart and soul" of the reform package, according to Parker, chairman of the Senate Education Committee.

The state board is working on rules for the system. A board committee Thursday listened to several hours of testimony about the proposed rules, which are scheduled for a March vote.

Under the proposal, the assessments — which can lead to pay hikes — would be done by principals and independent evaluators.

Hobby not ready to push button

AUSTIN (AP) — Texans are in no danger of a quick tax hike and probably well-insulated from a state income tax for quite awhile, says Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby.

But the oil slump and a statewide economic decline are cause for state revenue concern, he said in a Thursday talk to an Austin Lions Club luncheon.

"The decline in oil prices may be a boon to consumers, but it costs Texas jobs and tax revenue," Hobby said.

He added, "No, we are not going to need an immediate tax increase. But undoubtedly in the future we will have to build revenue from other sources. This process began two years ago when the base of the sales tax was broadened."

Asked by a club member for his assessment of the chances of a state income tax in coming years, he said, "None."

"I don't think states are under any obligation to repeat federal policy mistakes," Hobby told the club.

Tax hike and revenue-crunch talk increased in Austin this week as the price of oil on the spot market continued to drop. Not much Texas oil is sold on the spot market, but that price can be a "predictor" of what contract prices will do, said Hobby.

Floodwaters prompt sewage spill

DALLAS (AP) — Officials say millions of gallons of raw sewage are pouring into the Trinity River south of here after heavy rains flooded a sewage treatment plant.

A spokesman for the river authority said the sewage spill at the Trinity River Authority's Ten Mile Creek plant near Ferris began about 7 p.m. Wednesday and was expected to continue through at least today.

The severe rainstorm Wednesday evening caused an excessive flow of wastewater into the plant, said the spokesman, John Jadrusch.

He said river authority officials had to divert almost 800,000 gallons of raw sewage per hour, or about 19 million gallons per day, directly into the creek to prevent flood damage to the plant's equipment.

Ten Mile Creek flows into the Trinity about six miles south of Seagoville.

Jadrusch said the diversion of sewage into the creek was gradually decreasing as runoff from the storm declined. He said the spill would continue "possibly for another day or two."

Along the Trinity downstream from the plant, residents reported no fish kills or other problems related to the sewage spill. They said the river was running high from this week's rains, meaning the sewage was being greatly diluted as it entered the Trinity.

Duncanville, DeSoto, Cedar Hill, Lancaster and Ferris are served by the Ten Mile Creek plant.

Texas Water Commission officials said the plant's capacity has been taxed by rapid growth in those communities and it often spills sewage during heavy rains.

National

VA cuts could prove devastating

WASHINGTON (AP) — New limits on the size and use of Veterans Administration mortgages will have "a devastating effect" on the nation's veterans, a banking industry leader says.

The VA on Thursday said new restrictions would place a $90,000 limit on home loans that the agency will insure, and allow no VA-backed refinancing of existing VA-insured loans.

They would also prevent second-time use of the VA home loan program. Veterans who have a VA-backed loan, or who previously did, will not be allowed to use the program again, even if they have paid off their VA mortgage in full.

"These proposals will have a devastating effect on the mortgage market and on the veteran home buyer," said Warren Lasko, executive vice president of the Mortgage Bankers Association, whose member bankers make loans under the VA guarantee program.

"Veterans who wish to refinance high-interest rate VA loans will no longer be able to do so. Refinancing VA mortgages reduces the risk to the government by allowing a homebuyer who may be financially strapped a lower-payment mortgage," Lasko said.

The changes are being taken to comply with spending restrictions under the Gramm-Rudman balanced-budget act. Officials said the limits could also mean VA loans will be denied to thousands of qualifying veterans this year.

The VA currently does not limit the size of loans they will back, but most lenders maintain a $110,000 limit for VA loans with no down payment, with larger amounts available if a down payment is made. The VA guarantees to lenders a portion of the mortgage amount, up to $27,500.

Woman's joining Kiwanis Club upheld

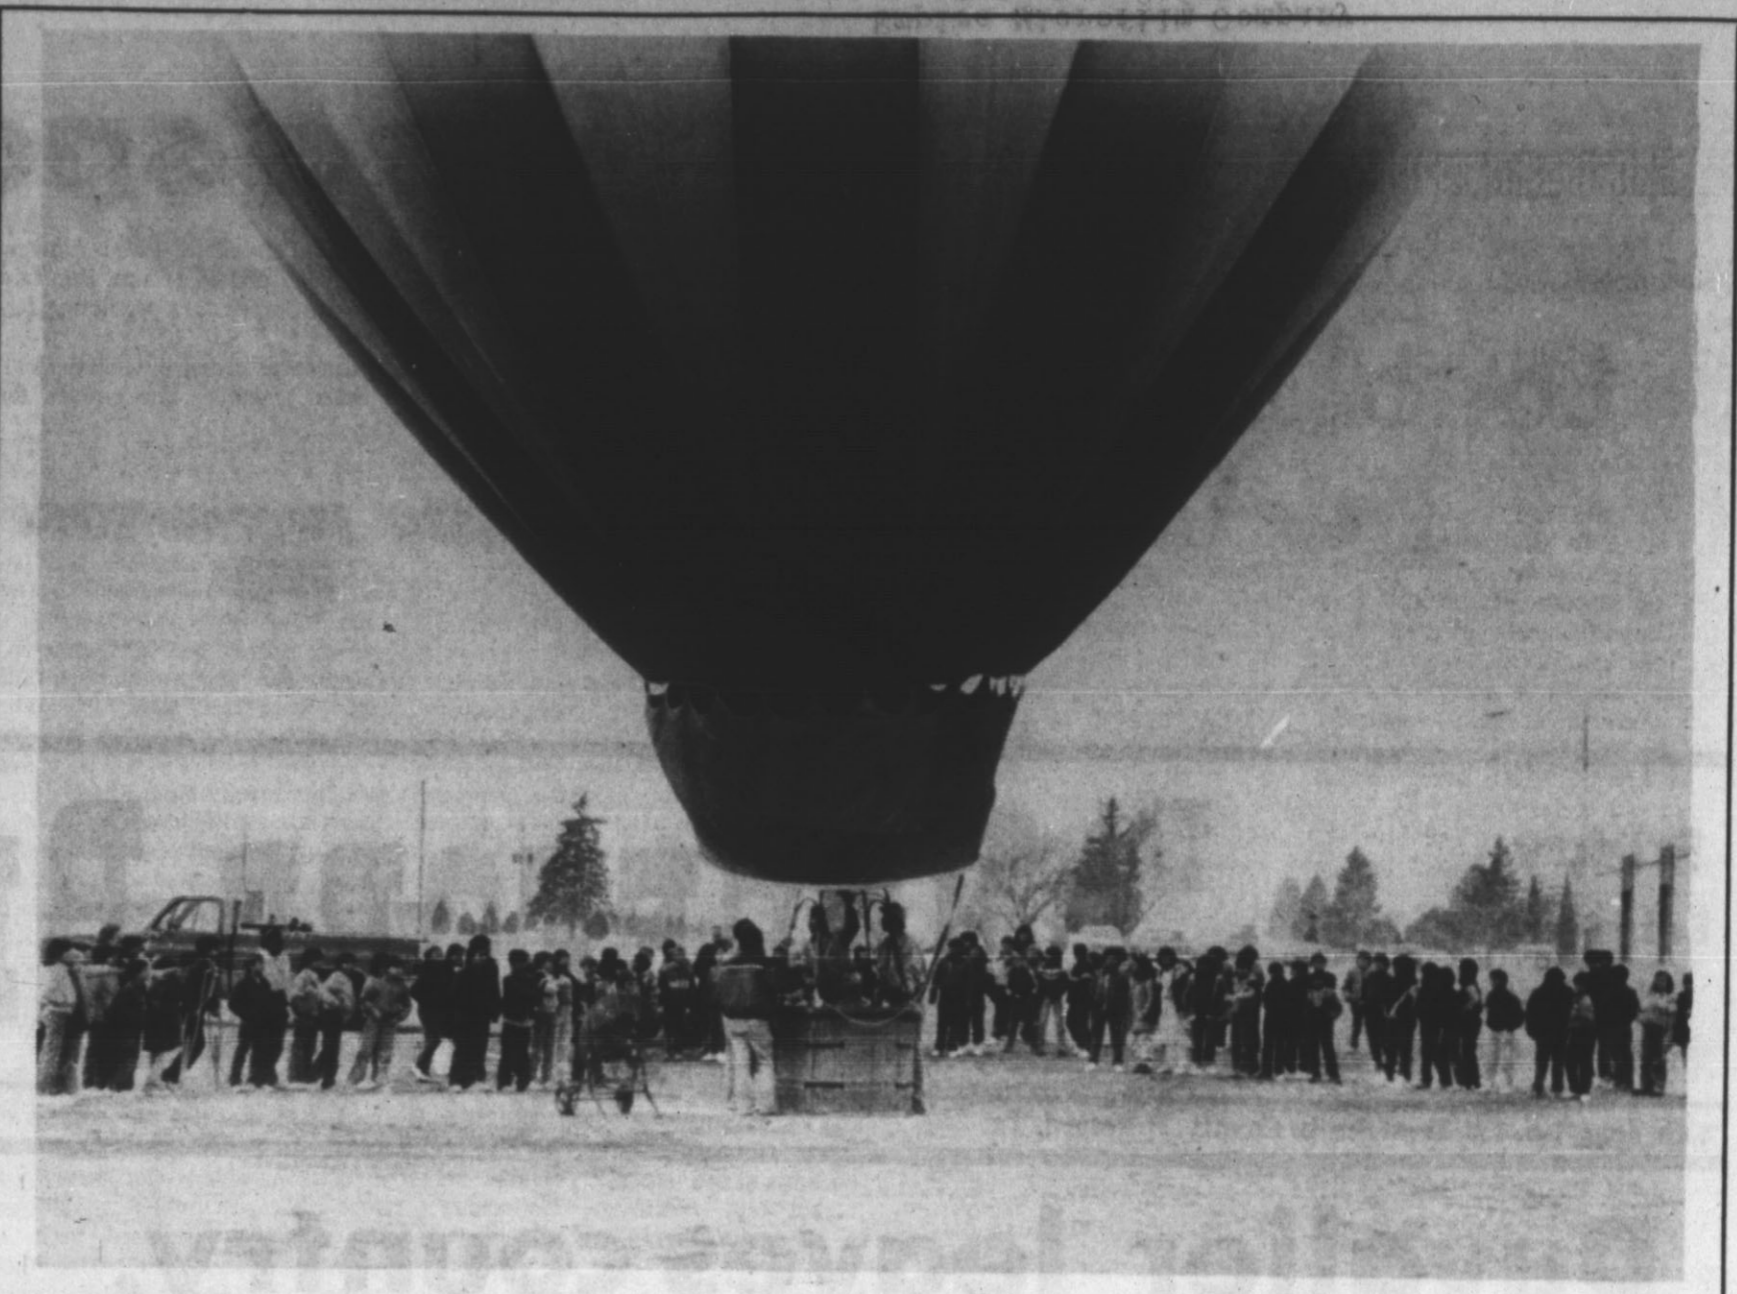

NEWARK, N.J. (AP) — The men-only policy of Kiwanis International can be considered as offensive as a whites-only policy, a judge has ruled in upholding a woman's membership in a New Jersey chapter of the international service organization.

U.S. District Judge H. Lee Sarokin issued his ruling Thursday in a case brought by the Indianapolis, Ind.-based Kiwanis against its Ridgewood chapter, where Julie Fletcher, a 45-year-old businesswoman, has been a member for two years.

Kiwanis International had sought to stop the chapter from using the Kiwanis trademarks, saying the chapter had violated the organization's constitution by admitting a female.

In a 39-page ruling, Sarokin said, "To permit women to become members of Kiwanis harms no one; to prohibit women from becoming members harms us all."

Ms. Fletcher, an art consultant, said after the ruling that she was "delighted."

security forces, luggage and other members of the Duvalier family. They left on a C-141 military transport.

Lite said 23 people accompanied Duvalier out of the country, including his mother, his two children, two children from his wife's previous marriage and three security guards.

"We have been in touch with some of the members of the new government. We are hoping to be able to work with them," said Lite. "We hope it is an orderly transition conducted without bloodshed and violence."

Duvalier, nicknamed "Baby Doc," took power at age 19 in 1971 after the death of his father, Francois "Papa Doc" Duvalier. The elder Duvalier was elected in 1957 and eventually named himself "president for life."

Namphy, head of the new governing council, called on national television for "calm and serenity." He said the military had no political ambitions, "not now or ever."

The television identified other council members as Col. William Rigala, Col. Max Vales and two civilians, Gerard Gourgue, chairman of the Haitian Human Rights Commission, and Minister of Public Works Alix Cineas.

The broadcast said Col. Prosper Avril was an adviser to the council.

In Paris, the French Foreign Ministry announced that "in cooperation with the United States," it would temporarily accept Duvalier in order to allow a "transition" to democracy.

The French communique said the Haitian leader would go to an unnamed third country. However, a ministry spokesman later said that no country has yet agreed to accept Duvalier.

In Washington, State Department spokesman Gregory Lagana said no American troops have been sent to Haiti. The department estimates about 6,000 Americans currently are in the Caribbean country.

"We're watching the situation carefully," he said. "There are Americans there and we're watching the situation to see if it deteriorates."

He added, "If the situation does worsen, then we'll have to take a look at it and see what needs to be done."

Sporadic rioting broke out in November and intensified two weeks ago with student protests in the cities of Gonaives and Cap-Haitien, in which five people died.

Rioting eventually spread last week to the capital of 1 million, Port-au-Prince. At least 50 people were reported killed before the militia imposed order.

UNEMPLOYMENT

holiday buying season.

She said in testimony before the congressional Joint Economic Committee that the seasonally adjusted increase of 205,000 retail jobs over the month "probably resulted from the fact that fewer workers were hired during the holiday season and, therefore, fewer were laid off in January."

Without the adjustment process, designed to account for predictable, periodic fluctuations in employment patterns, retail employment actually fell from 18.3 million to 17.7 million last month.

Other service-related jobs increased by 115,000 in January while manufacturing employment climbed 8,000, its fourth straight monthly increase. At 19.5 million, manufacturing employment, however, was 135,000 under the level of a year ago.

The 6.7 percent civilian unemployment rate last month was 4 percentage points below the 10.7 percent peak registered at the depth of the recession in November 1982.

At that time, the rolls of the unemployed totaled more than 12 million.

Fitness classes offered

A six-week session of fitness classes for women will be starting at the Hereford and Vicinity Y on Feb. 17.

Non-Y members are welcome. Babysitting will be provided for a small cost during the class.

government-run Philippine News Agency reported Marcos ahead in five precincts by votes of 2,000 to zero.

Government television was reporting results from throughout the country, but was not adding them up.

Sen. Richard Lugar, R-Ind., chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations committee and co-leader of a 20-member U.S. observer group sent by President Reagan at Marcos' invitation, said after a helicopter tour of some polling places that despite some evident abuses, he believed "the will of the voters will be expressed."

"I have been in 14 precincts where they finished the count, with Mrs. Aquino having a slight lead in those precincts," Lugar said. I find it disquieting that the official national television station... is reporting wildly disproportionate statistics in favor of President Marcos (and) attacking Namfrel, the citizens watch committee."

In the conflicting results reported from near and distant parts of the country, the tally in the vice presidential race between ruling party member Arturo Tolentino and opposition candidate Salvador Laurel was similar.

Amid widespread reports of fraud, intimidation and violence, the turnout was reported heavy among the nation's 26 million voters, with many people still lined up as polls were to close. Under law, many stayed open late to accommodate voters within 30 yards of the polls at the 3 p.m. closing time.

BUDGET

grams for middle-class Americans.

Senate Majority Leader Robert Dole, R-Kan., chalked up all the exchanges to normal early budget histrionics and political gamesmanship.

"I think we ought to have the rain dances for a couple of weeks and let people howl and scream," Dole said, referring to Democratic plans to take the Reagan budget on the road for five regional hearings next week. "Nothing makes any sense that anybody says now."

ing time.

Hours after voting began, the armed forces chief indefinitely extended a "red alert" that was originally to last 24 hours. The alert, declared at noon Thursday, is customary for Philippine elections.

The Philippine News Agency reported that 26 people died in election day violence including nine national police officers and two schoolteachers killed in an ambush on the southern island of Mindanao an hour before the polls opened.

PNA said "sketchy" reports indicated that members of the communist New People's Army attacked as the police escorted the teachers and election officials with ballot boxes to a voting center.

The Aquino camp produced a steady stream of complaints and allegations about fraud, irregularities, and attempts by armed thugs to intimidate voters.

Marcos, accompanied by his three children, flew by helicopter to vote in his home town of Batac, northern Luzon. He told reporters a final survey showed he would win with 63 percent of the vote.

Gen. Fabian C. Ver, the armed forces commander who is Marcos' closest crony and accompanied the president to Batac, told The Associated Press the election was "progressing and peaceful."

Mrs. Aquino, who has said Marcos is her "No. 1 suspect" in the 1983 assassination of her husband voted at a schoolhouse at Hacienda Luosita, a sugar plantation owned by her family in Tarlac province, 70 miles north of Manila.

Marcos called the special election more than a year before his term was to end, partly because of U.S. pressure to make military, economic and social reforms and quell a growing communist rebel threat.

Mutual trust in congregations shaken by undercover agents

NEW YORK (AP) — In their home congregations, members get particularly close and open with each other. That's a purpose of a local church, to draw people together in a shared faith that enhances mutual trust.

But in that intimate atmosphere, recent events have shown that there sometimes may be secret government agents, pretending religious devotion, covertly taping discussions and conversations.

That situation has shocked many church people, leading to a major federal lawsuit challenging the practice and giving an Arizona lawyer handling the case a personal stake in it and passion about it.

"I am a lifelong Presbyterian, and the biggest mistake the government made was to go into my church with my family there and surreptitiously tape it," said Peter D. Baird, a Phoenix attorney.

The lawsuit, filed by the American Lutheran Church, the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) and four of their congregations, claims violation of their rights by the government's covert operations, and asks a halt to such practices.

Baird told a group of church editors that having "personally tasted" those practices, "I have a duty as a lawyer" to do something about them.

He and law associates have already contributed up to 2,000 hours of legal research on the case, filed last month.

"The personal sacrifices that my family will have to make financially are very, very serious," he said, calling this a gift to principle and church.

The taping by hired government informants of church services, Sunday school classes and personal conversations came out at the current trial in Tucson, Ariz., of 11 church people accused of harboring refugees from Central America.

The informants, posing as sympathizers of the sanctuary movement, have been key prosecution witnesses.

The Rev. James Oines, pastor of Alzona Lutheran Church in Phoenix, among the congregations involved in the suit against the government operation, says it had an intimidating effect on members after they learned of it.

He says refugees quit gathering for Bible study or worship, parishioners have become afraid to talk about personal problems on the telephone and are wary of new members or visitors, fearing they are government informers.

Communal trust is considered basic values of congregational life, where varied kinds of people come together, united in a fundamental dedication that adds confidence to their relationships.

Yet now for some of those sanctuaries of mutual reliance has come evidence that imposters may be present, that unfriendly eyes may be listening, that suspicious eyes may be watching, and hidden "bugs" taking things down.

It destroys "the trust that brings church people together," says United Methodist Bishop Elias Galvan of Phoenix.

Baird asserts that his wife, Sara, and his 5-year-old daughter attended church services at which two government informants tape-recorded the worship and copied license plate numbers of cars parked outside.

The churches emphasized the suit is not concerned with the sanctuary movement's help to refugees, but is testing "proper behavior by government investigative agents in relation to the churches on any question."

American Lutheran Church Presiding Bishop David W. Preus of Minneapolis says the four congregations involved in the suit undoubtedly "had their ministries damaged" by the operation of agents "posing as friends."

The Rev. James E. Andrews of Atlanta, chief executive of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) says federal authorities seem "increasingly intentional about forcing religious bodies to conform to government policies" and "willing to act punitively toward uncooperative religious groups."

Ann Landers Point well taken

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I am 16, a guy, normal in every way, not smarter than my peers, or dumber, either.

Not a day goes by that I don't hear an adult compare our generation with theirs. It is either, "We didn't know what drugs were when we were growing up," or "A girl who let a fellow kiss her on a first date was considered a tramp."

If their teenage years were so perfect and pure, how did they manage to raise a bunch of delinquents like us? Is it rock 'n' roll music that has made us self-destructive? Or do we resent being pressured to get good grades so we can make "top" schools and give our parents something to brag about?

Maybe if parents would accept their kids for what they are and not make them feel like failures when they don't snag every honor in school it would make for better family relations. Also, Ann, while you're at it, please tell me if today's teenagers are all that different from your teenage children?—LOOKING FOR ANSWERS

DEAR LOOKING: I have no teenage children. I do have two teenage grandchildren, however, and one who is out of her teens.

The drug scene in high school today is a more serious problem than it was in previous generations. True, we had alcohol but pot was unheard of an nobody I knew snorted coke.

Not all girls were virgins until marriage, but there was less promiscuity because of fear of pregnancy. The Pill changed that.

Your last point is well taken. Parents should not use their children as status symbols. Too many teenagers are made to feel like failures if they don't achieve the lofty goals set for them. Sadder still, they often give up because they lack the motivation to make something of their lives if they feel they have been a disappointment.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: We keep hearing the lyrics to rock music are creating violence among our young people and have caused an increase in suicide. Do these words sound familiar?

"Rock-a-bye baby in the tree top
When the wind blows, the cradle will rock.
When the bough breaks, the cradle will fall,
And down will come baby, cradle and all."

Here's another example:
"Three blind mice, three blind mice,
See how they run, see how they run.
They all ran after the farmer's wife
Who cut off their tails with a craving knife
Have you ever seen such a sight in your life
As three blind mice?"

We grew up with these nursery rhymes and nobody thought a thing about them. Why the hullaaloo now?—JUST ASKIN' IN FORT WAYNE

DEAR F.W.: Teenagers tell me they pay very little attention to the lyrics. It's the beat they like. The same is true of the nursery rhymes. In my opinion the serious damage results from the constant violence that children see on TV. Something must be done about the thousands of corpses that are being dumped into the nation's living rooms.

How to—and how much? Find out with Ann Landers' new booklet, "How, What, and When to Tell Your Child About Sex." For your copy send 50 cents along with a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope to Ann Landers, P.O. Box 11995, Chicago, Illinois 60611.

Abdul-Jabbar scores 46

By MICHAEL A. LUTZ
AP Sports Writer

HOUSTON (AP) — Kareem Abdul-Jabbar says it's the challenge of winning but his teammates say he gets ready to play against "the kids."

The 17-year veteran scored a season high 40 points in a Sunday game against the New York Knicks and rookie Patrick Ewing.

CYCLING

MOSCOW (AP) — Soviet cyclist Gintautas Umaras set a world record in the individual 4,000-meters at the National Winter Cycling championships, clocking four minutes, 34.103 seconds, the official news agency Tass said.

The previous mark of 4:37.60 was set in 1983 by former world champion Viktor Kupovets of the Soviet Union.

HOCKEY

MONTREAL (AP) — Edmonton Oilers center Wayne Gretzky, who scored 12 goals and added 31 assists last month, was named as National Hockey League player of the month for January.

It was the second consecutive month that Gretzky has won the award.

Gretzky helped the Oilers to a 10-4-1 record by registering a point in 14 of the 15 games, and on 43 of Edmonton's 77 goals during the month. He had one six-point game, three four-point games, and five three-point efforts during the month.

Ty Cobb, the all-time leader in career batting average with .367, played in 17 World Series games and hit only .262.

Through the 1985 season only five men had connected for three home runs in one game in both major leagues. The latest to do it was Larry Parrish of the Texas Rangers. Others who did it were Babe Ruth, Johnny Mize, Claudell Washington and Dave Kingman.

Jabbar gave Houston's Akeem Olajuwon another lesson in the fine art of sky-hooking Thursday night with a new season high 46 points en route to a 117-95 National Basketball Association victory.

"Kareem always plays better against Olajuwon," Lakers forward James Worthy said. "It's because of all the comparisons. He's been around 17 years but he still has to show the kids he's the best."

Jabbar was perfect in the first quarter, scoring 20 points on nine of nine shots from the field and two free throws to set the tone that didn't change throughout the game.

But he would only discuss the game in terms of the team.

"This game was important to us because we haven't been playing well lately and we are trying to get our act together," Jabbar said. "We've been trying to play without Magic (Johnson) and it's a benefit to get him back."

The Lakers grabbed the opening tip and never trailed in the game, bursting to a 19-point, 66-47 halftime lead.

The Rockets, trying to establish themselves as the Lakers' equal in the Western Division, trailed 86-72 going into the fourth quarter and cut the lead to 88-77 with 9:47 left to play before the Laker blew the game open.

Houston Coach Bill Fitch said the game was important but he didn't want to overemphasize the defeat.

"You don't have too many games this early in the season with as much hype and Hollywood to it," Fitch said. "But let's don't over-emphasize the results, whether you win or lose."

Jabbar outscored Houston's Twin Towers, Olajuwon and Ralph Sampson, who scored 18 and 17 points for the Rockets.

"He (Jabbar) played real tough," Olajuwon said. "I tried to go around him and steal the ball but he slipped around me and went to the basket. I know we can play better, that's why this is so disgusting."

Magic Johnson, playing in his second game since missing six games with a knee injury, scored 15 points and James Worthy hit 14 for the Lakers.

Johnson, who received more votes than any player in balloting for the All-Star game Sunday in Dallas, said he would play in the game despite his injury.

"I just asked Gary (Vitti, team trainer) if it would hurt me to play," Johnson said.

The Rockets trailed by 19 points at the half and although they outscored the Lakers 10-2 to start the third period, Los Angeles still held a 16-point edge at 86-72 going into the final quarter.

Shortest NBA player is in slam dunk competition

By ED SHEARER
AP Sports Writer

ATLANTA (AP) — If you think a 308-pound running back scoring a touchdown in the Super Bowl is unusual, just wait until Spud Webb shows up for the National Basketball Association's slam dunk competition in Dallas Saturday.

Dominique Wilkins of the Atlanta Hawks will be there trying to defend his title with a series of spectacular slams, but he won't come close to being the crowd's favorite.

Webb, a 5-foot-7 rookie with the Hawks, sewed up that role as soon as the list of eight competitors was announced for one of the sideshows the NBA holds in conjunction with its annual All-Star game, which will be staged in the same Reunion Arena Sunday afternoon.

Webb's size will be the main reason the crowd should be on his side. He's the shortest player in the league this year and one of the smallest in the history of the NBA.

Not many people Webb's size can touch the rim, which is 10 feet above the floor, but, thanks to a 42-inch vertical leap, this 5-7 person can dunk a basketball.

"I'm very excited about it," Webb said. "I just want to try to compete, try to go out and win. It's a competition type thing."

Webb has been in competition a long time, proving there is a spot for the little man in a sport dominated by men a foot or more taller. He played high school and junior college ball in his home state of Texas and then spent two seasons in the Atlantic Coast Conference at North Carolina State.

Webb decided to go for a pro career, and, after being cut by the Detroit Pistons, landed a spot on Atlanta's roster as a free agent. He's been averaging about six points and three assists per game.

"The six to 10 minutes I play each game is great," Webb said. "Some rookies don't even get to play and I get to play every night out. I've just been enjoying it. I'm glad to be a part of the team."

Webb has become a fan's delight throughout the NBA. He recently drew a loud ovation in Boston, where fans tend to show such favoritism only for their beloved Celtics.

"When you get an ovation in Boston, it's great," Webb said. "I've heard not many (visiting) players got an ovation there."

Webb knows his size is the reason he's become such a favorite around the league, but he's tired of talking about it.

"I don't ever think about size, but everybody talks about it," he said. "I hear it every day. I hear it all the time. I hear it too much. I just go out and do the things I do."

"It's going to be fun," Wilkins said of the upcoming slam dunk competition. "He'll (Webb) have a lot of people behind him. Nobody ever sees a guy that little in a contest like that."

The field will also include Roy Hinson of Cleveland, Jerome Kersey of Portland, Paul Pressey of Milwaukee, Terence Stansbury of Indiana, Terry Tyler of Sacramento and Wilkins' younger brother, Gerald of New York, who replaces the injured Orlando Woolridge of Chicago. Pressey and Stansbury are the closest players in the field to Webb in size, and both of them are 10 inches taller.

WEBB REMEMBERS

OXFORD, Ohio (AP) — The publicity accorded William (The Refrigerator) Perry of the Chicago Bears brought back memories to Webb Ewbank, who coached the Baltimore Colts and New York Jets.

Perry is 6-3 and 307 pounds and has been used as a fullback on occasion. Ewbank remembers Sherman Plunkett, who was 6-2 and 320 pounds. Plunkett played for Ewbank on the Colts from 1958-60 and on the Jets from 1963-67.

Ewbank says he never used Plunkett in the backfield but is confident he would have handled the job.

"Besides," Webb added, "Plunkett had one 12-yard kickoff return on his record. Perry hasn't done that yet."

THE STAMINA BOWL

SEATTLE (AP) — The game was on Dec. 14, 1985, at the Seattle Kingdom and some of the contestants are just about catching their breath.

UCLA defeated American University, 1-0, for the NCAA soccer title in a game that had eight overtime periods.

The game took 166 minutes and 5 seconds to play and was the longest in NCAA championship history. Andy Burke, a substitute, booted the winning goal against American, which had to play the last 35 minutes one man short when Serge Torrealles was ejected.

In the first Modern Olympics in Greece in 1896, the runners raced in a clockwise direction instead of counterclockwise as they do today.

Mavericks get past Trail Blazers, 115-111

PORTLAND, Ore. (AP) — Coach Jack Ramsay of the Portland Trail Blazers says there's no question his team needs the help of a healthy Sam Bowie at center.

"Playing without Sam hurts," Ramsay said after the Dallas Mavericks beat the Blazers 115-111 Thursday night.

"We just haven't played strong and tough enough at the basket at either end of the floor," Ramsay said.

Dallas, 25-22, handed the Blazers, 29-24, their fifth loss in their last six National Basketball Association games. It was Portland's third defeat at home in four contests.

After losing Bowie to a shin injury Jan. 11, the Blazers won seven out of eight games before slipping.

"It has caught up with us," said Portland's Clyde Drexler. "Our big men are tired. And we need Sam. We need that intimidator inside."

By 60-member panel

Top players in NBA history selected

DALLAS (AP) — A 60-member blue-ribbon panel of experts says that Los Angeles Lakers center Kareem Abdul-Jabbar, who has played longer than anyone in National Basketball Association history, has played better than anyone in history.

Eighteen of the panelists polled by the Dallas Morning News voted Abdul-Jabbar, playing in his 17th season, the greatest player in the history of the game. The 38-year-old player finished first in a tight race, although he received less than one-third of votes cast.

The newspaper, in a copyright story today, said guard Oscar Robertson, formerly of the Cincinnati Royals and Abdul-Jabbar's teammate with the Milwaukee Bucks, placed a close second with 14 votes.

The 7-2 Abdul-Jabbar, who will play in his 15th All-Star game Sunday at Reunion Arena, said he was happy to be recognized as the best ever.

"It's flattering," he said this week. "It's flattering even to be considered. That's as far as I go with it. I don't get caught up in it. I'm very pleased that I've done well enough that I would be considered, but I don't focus on that."

Robertson was Abdul-Jabbar's personal choice as the top player of all time. Third with 13 votes was the Boston Celtics' Russell Chamberlain, who still ranks No. 1 all-time with a 30.4 scoring average, received only six of 60 votes.

Chamberlain played for the Philadelphia and San Francisco Warriors, the Philadelphia 76ers and the Lakers. Four votes went to Celtics forward Larry Bird, while former Lakers forward Elgin Baylor got two votes.

Former guards Bob Cousy of the Celtics, Jerry West of the Lakers and Bob Davies of Rochester had one each.

The Morning News panel, comprised of current and former general managers and coaches and former players, spanned five decades of expertise.

The panel also chose Abdul-Jabbar as the greatest center of all time, and listed Bird at forward and Robertson at guard.

Abdul-Jabbar, in the center category, received 25 1-3 votes and Chamberlain and Russell tied for second with 16 1-3 votes each. George Mikan got two votes. Bird, in the forward voting, received 29, while Baylor got 22, Julius Erving of the Philadelphia 76ers seven, and Rick Barry and Bob Pettit one each.

Pat Riley, Abdul-Jabbar's coach, said it is important to the center to be considered the best of all time.

"I don't think openly he would admit that," said Riley, who voted for Abdul-Jabbar. "But I don't think anybody who has toiled for 17 years and put up with the abuse he has, who has plied his trade like he has, could want anything else. I do hope he wants to be remembered as the greatest who ever played in the game."

Spurs suffer 100-95 loss to Nuggets

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — San Antonio coach Cotton Fitzsimmons at first didn't know where to place the blame for the Spurs' 100-95 loss to the Denver Nuggets.

Could it have been the fact that the home team had only eight healthy players or was that San Antonio could only connect on 40 percent of its free throw opportunities Thursday night?

Fitzsimmons picked the latter as his reason for the loss.

"If you only shoot 11 for 27 from the free throw line, you're going to lose," Fitzsimmons said.

"We were short handed tonight, but we had opportunities to win this game. You just can't worry about injuries. You have to play hard with the people you have," he said.

Denver improved its record to 30-21, while San Antonio fell to 27-25.

San Antonio learned earlier Thursday that starting guard Wes Matthews may be lost for the season with a kidney problem. The Spurs listed five players on the pre-game injury report, including star point guard Johnnie Moore.

In Matthews' place, the Spurs started Ennis Whatley, a well-traveled point guard who was just signed to a 10-day contract on Saturday. Whatley had logged only two minutes of court time in three previous games.

Thrust into a starting role, Whatley had trouble running the Spurs' offense in the first half, throwing the ball away three times in 11 minutes.

When Fitzsimmons pulled Whatley, he inserted John Sunvold who responded with 11 points in the third period.

With 1:47 left in that quarter, Sunvold hit a 15-foot jump shot which pulled San Antonio to a tie for the first time since the opening period.

Because of the player shortage, Steve Johnson, who was listed as questionable, was pressed into duty and played 23 minutes.

Alex English led the Nuggets with 23 points and received scoring help from Lever and center Danny Schayes, who finished with 20 and 16 points respectively.

Center Artis Gilmore tallied 23 points and Mike Mitchell hit 20 for the Spurs.

With 1:18 left, his team trailing 95-90 and Gilmore at the free-throw line, Fitzsimmons turned away from the court and looked at the press bench.

"You tell me," Fitzsimmons said. "I don't want to look."

Gilmore, who was five of 14 from the line for the game, proceeded to miss both shots.

DR. GOTT

Specialist may ease fibrositis

By Peter H. Gott, M.D.

DEAR DR. GOTT — After two and a half years of testing following a severe car accident, I was diagnosed as having fibrositis. Can you give me any sources of information on this condition? I've joined the American Chronic Pain Association, but their reports seem confusing and contradictory to me.

DEAR READER — Fibrositis is a chronic tissue irritation that is often baffling. Some medicines (like cortisone) may help it; physiotherapy can relieve many of the symptoms. A pain clinic that specializes in biofeedback and hypnosis can be of value. You may be aided by seeing a physiatrist (a physician who specializes in rehabilitation medicine); most large teaching institutions have physiatrists on staff.

DEAR DR. GOTT — Does epilepsy ever go away? I am epileptic and want to keep foster kids, but I want to make sure it doesn't affect them.

DEAR READER — Epilepsy is the result of abnormal electrical discharges in the brain. It is treatable, using modern anticonvulsant medicines. Children who have epilepsy often outgrow it. Adults with epilepsy cannot spread the disease to others; it is not "caught" the way an infection is. If you have epilepsy, it can be controlled and you can be as good a foster mother as any non-epileptic woman.

DEAR DR. GOTT — Is there any evidence that high doses of aspirin can affect the pancreas? I was hospitalized several times with pancreatitis after taking eight aspirin a day for three and a half days because of neck pain.

DEAR READER — Aspirin does not commonly affect the pancreas, an organ of digestion and insulin production. Aspirin can retard clotting, cause ulcers (because it breaks the stomach's mucus barrier), trigger asthma and result in hypersensitivity (allergic) reactions. Your post-aspirin pancreatitis may reflect an allergy to the drug; on the other hand, you may have developed a duodenal ulcer that has penetrated to the pancreas, which lies right next to the lower stomach and duodenum. The pain of ulcer can mimic that of pancreatic inflammation.

DEAR DR. GOTT — I am male, 74 and have had problems with ingrown toenails since childhood. I am able to manage all but the big toes. I have been hospitalized twice with blood poisoning. Three years ago I had the right big toenail cut off. The doctor "guaranteed" it wouldn't grow back. Well, guess what? Should I have it taken off again, or just continue to trim and soak it?

DEAR READER — After all these years, you probably know more about ingrown toenails than most doctors. Trim and soak it until that method stops being effective, then have it removed again. I've been impressed by how knowledgeable podiatrists are about ingrown nails. Perhaps a podiatrist in your community might be able to help you take care of the problem without surgery.

After being bombarded for years by information indicting beef as an unhealthy food, consumers were predictably surprised to be told last year that hamburger contains an anti-cancer compound. Reports presented at the American Chemical Society meeting indicated that ground beef has "mutagenesis modulator," a substance that somehow neutralizes carcinogens that are formed when the meat is cooked.

At the same meeting, a scientist from the State University of New York in Albany reported that ajoene, a derivative of common garlic, reduces blood coagulation and may show promise as a treatment for heart disease and stroke.

To an as-yet unknown degree, we are clearly influenced by the food we eat.

On a more practical level, recent findings indicate how various foods may modify the absorption, metabolism and excretion of medicines. This new concept goes beyond the traditional belief that certain drugs may simply irritate an empty stomach.

For example, cabbage, turnip greens, broccoli and green tea contain enough vitamin K to overcome the anticoagulant properties of Coumadin. The antibiotic tetracycline, if taken with food, can be bound in the intestine by metallic molecules to form indigestible complexes that prevent the medicine from being absorbed. On the other hand, food actually enhances the absorption of other drugs, including Tegretol, hydralazine, Inderal, Aldactone and Oxoralen. Griseofulvin, the anti-fungus remedy, enters the bloodstream at twice normal speed when taken with dietary fat.

Charcoal-broiled steak may be delicious, but it reduces the effects of several common compounds, including acetaminophen (Tylenol), antipyrine and theophylline. Erythromycin, penicillin, sulfa and aspirin are absorbed more slowly from a filled stomach than from an empty one. However, lithium enters the body more readily when given with food.

The body's acidity affects the action of drugs. A balanced-protein diet makes the urine acid, whereas a low-protein diet produces an alkaline urine. When excreted in an acid urine, acid drugs will tend to be reabsorbed, producing higher blood concentrations. By the same token, acid drugs are more promptly excreted in alkaline urine. This fact can mean that certain urinary antibiotics, such as nitrofurantoin and methanamine, may be inconsistently absorbed, depending on urine acidity or alkalinity.

Once in the body, many drugs can affect nutrition. For instance, Atromid-S and lincomycin reduce taste sensation and thus suppress appetite. Conversely, appetite may be increased by antidepressant medicine, resulting in larger caloric intake and weight gain. Cathartics may mechanically diminish nutrient absorption by increasing the transit of food as it passes through the intestine. Antacids can combine with nutrients to produce dietary deficiency, particularly of thiamine.

Many drugs, such as levodopa and certain diuretics, cause loss of potassium. Colchicine (for gout) may prevent absorption of vitamin B-12 and folic acid. Cortisone, phenobarbital and phenytoin can cause calcium deficiency.

Diuretics may enhance the effects of monosodium glutamate, causing a syndrome that resembles angina.

Finally, alcohol can potentiate the depressant effects of tranquilizers and medicine that acts in the central nervous system. It can also modify the action of anticoagulants.

The ethnic breakdown in the Democratic Socialist Republic of Sri Lanka is 75 percent Sinhalese, 18 percent Tamils and 7 percent Moors.

Scissor cutting topic of chapter program

Scherenschnette or the intricate art of scissor cutting was displayed to members of Xi Epsilon Alpha Chapter when they met Tuesday evening in Southwestern Public Service Reddy Room.

Brenda Thomas introduced her guest speaker, Kim Moore, who exhibited her framed works of art giving a brief history of each complex pattern. Several of the patterns date back to the 1700s.

Moore has received patterns depicting the Pennsylvania Dutch theme from a Pennsylvania German lady and is now awaiting the delivery of several patterns from a woman in China, the origin of "scissor cutting."

Margie Waddell, president, conducted the business meeting. The chapter voted to give a memorial to the American Heart Association in memory of Chick Holbert, husband of Beta Sigma Phi Sorority member, Jean Holbert.

Members were reminded of the Sweetheart Tea scheduled Feb. 9 in Kinsey Parlor of First Baptist Church honoring chapter sweethearts, Waddell, Cindy Garth and Karen Ruland. The sweethearts will be presented again at a Valentine dance set Feb. 15 at the V.F.W. Hall, sponsored by the City Council of Beta Sigma Phi.

Mary Brinkman announced the next meeting will be held Feb. 18 with Brenda Thomas and Lynda Brown serving as hostesses.

Brinkman and Oleta Tisdale served refreshments to Moore and members, Waddell, Debe Graves, Thomas, Ronna Howell, Jody Blackwell, Lynda Brown, Susan Shaw, Sharon Bodner, Kay Williams, Connie Matthews and Rose Marie Robinson.

Monsoons

Monsoons are named for seasonal winds (derived from the Arabic "mausim," a season). It was first applied to the winds over the Arabian Sea, which blow for six months from the northeast and six months from the southwest. But the word has been extended to similar winds in other parts of the world. Monsoons are strongest on the southern and eastern sides of Asia.

On Capitol Hill

Defense proposal under heavy fire

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan's request for a nearly 12 percent increase in defense spending is coming under heavy verbal shellfire from Capitol Hill, with Republicans and Democrats alike predicting it will be cut.

Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger fired his own shots Wednesday, telling the Senate Armed Services Committee that the military budget "has become the target of opportunistic demagoguery, and our security has suffered."

Weinberger told the panel that the $320 billion spending plan for the fiscal year starting Oct. 1 is the "minimum I can recommend in good conscience to fund a secure deterrent at a prudent level of risk."

In a heated exchange with Sen. Gary Hart, D-Colo., Weinberger declined to offer ways to cut the budget. He argued that Congress refused to honor past compromises with the administration on defense spending and that the Pentagon took an unfair share of budget cuts in past years.

"We've given at the office, the store and the Pentagon," Weinberger said. "We have not caused the deficit."

Hart responded, "I think it's safe to say you won't get your budget." Earlier, he told Weinberger that "I don't think there's a member of this committee who believes you're going to get the kind of numbers you're requesting."

Sen. Sam Nunn, D-Ga., told Weinberger that "steady annual increases are a thing of the past" and "the very best case we can anticipate" is to freeze defense spending.

Sen. Carl Levin, D-Mich., said, "I do know that this budget request won't fly" and that "this year, the issue isn't whether the defense budget will be cut, but where it will be cut and by how much."

Later, Sen. David Durenberger, R-Minn., and chairman of the Senate Intelligence Committee, predicted Congress will not approve defense increases as it slashes domestic spending.

"True budget reform means everybody comes to the table, including Caspar Weinberger," said Durenberger. "It's time to admit that the Defense Department can cut costs through efficiency and planning, just like everybody else."

Sen. Dan Evans, R-Wash., said, "I don't think there is any question that military spending will be cut below the president's request."

The spending plan is the sixth annual installment of Reagan's 1980 campaign pledge to "rearm America." In the past five years, the administration has spent more than $1.2 trillion to buy thousands of planes, tanks, ships, nuclear weapons, and improved training.

Weinberger urged Congress on Wednesday to stay the course, saying, "We have come too far in the revitalization of the defense program over the last five years to abandon the gains made to date."

POLLY'S POINTERS

Home tea drinks cut caffeine

DEAR POLLY — Is there much caffeine in tea? How does it compare to coffee? — MRS. K.V.

DEAR MRS. K.V. — Tea certainly does have caffeine, but only about half that of coffee. A cup of coffee has approximately 80 milligrams of caffeine; an average cup of tea 40 milligrams. Today, there are also decaffeinated teas on the market that you may enjoy if caffeine is a problem for you.

You might also try making tea-based beverages, combining the tea with fruit juices. This would further lower the caffeine content since the tea is diluted with the added juice.

If you enjoy tea, you might also try some of the delicious herb teas available. You can make your own homemade mint tea by crushing fresh mint leaves in the bottom of a cup, adding boiling water, and letting the tea steep for several minutes until the desired flavor is attained. Strain before drinking, if desired. — POLLY

Von Bulow children dedicate national center for crime victims

By MIKE COCHRAN
Associated Press Writer
FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) - With an occasional trace of fury, the son and daughter of comatose Sunny von Bulow dedicated a national center Thursday designed to aid and educate the victims of violent crimes in America.

They did so in the name of their mother, whom they contend was the target of an alleged murder scheme and a subsequent victim of the American judicial system. "We will carry her fight for justice to wherever it leads us," declared Alexander von Auersperg, 26, speaking in behalf of himself and his sister Ala Kneissl, 27, both of New York.

"It has led us here, to this time and this place," he told a news conference while dedicating the Sunny von Bulow National Victim Advocacy Center as a "living memorial" to their mother.

Von Auersperg and his sister maintain their stepfather, Claus von Bulow, twice attempted to kill their mother and in fact succeeded in plunging her into an insulin-induced coma from which she probably never will awaken.

A jury in Providence, R.I., convicted von Bulow in 1982 on two counts of attempted murder but the verdict was overturned in 1984 by the Rhode Island Supreme Court. "On a technicality, not the evidence," Ala Kneissl insisted Thursday.

In a second trial, as widely publicized as the first, a Rhode Island jury acquitted von Bulow in 1985.

Brother and sister attributed the second verdict in part to the trial judge's refusal to permit evidence indicating von Bulow stood to inherit $14 million in the event of his wife's death.

Von Auersperg, a manager of E.F. Hutton, and his sister, a wife and mother of two, mentioned von Bulow only in response to questions from reporters after the news conference.

However, they spoke of the trial and their feelings of injustice in printed matter linked to the opening of the victim advocacy center.

"For five years, we were deeply involved in a widely publicized trial concerning a tragedy which left our mother, Sunny von Bulow, in what doctors say is an irreversible coma," they said. "Throughout the trial, we were made painfully aware of the inadequacies of our justice system.

"As a result of our firsthand experience, we have committed our energies to advocate for the rights of violent crime victims."

Von Auersperg, who will serve as president and chairman of the board, was described as the major spokesperson for the center. His sister, a board member, will lend "her experience in film and documentary production" to the center staff.

Executive Director E. Gene Patterson of Fort Worth said the center will "promote responsiveness of the judicial system to the rights and needs of crime victims and implement programs to heighten America's consciousness concerning the plight of victims."

He listed three primary goals:

1. To serve as a national resource center for victims and their advocates, helping to organize local self-help groups and incorporating them into a national coalition.
 2. To develop education programs and other self-help opportunities to help victims strengthen their skills and resources.
 3. To encourage and promote research concerning crime victims and to further the victims' movement through establishment of a national data bank and resource library.
- George Morris Gurley, an official of the Chemical Bank of New York, said the center's first three years of operation will be funded in part by $1.7 million from the Annie-Laurie Aitken Charitable Trust, of which he is a trustee.

The trust bears the name of Sunny von Bulow's mother. Gurley and others said Fort Worth was chosen as headquarters for the center because of the tremendous response and support of the community and its leaders and because of its central location.

Indeed, Mayor Bob Bolen told the assemblage that Fort Worth was committed to the program and that "we're going to make it work."

In citing the need for such a center, officials quoted government figures estimating that one out of three American families will be victims of a vicious crime this year.

They said nearly 6 million violent crimes were committed in 1984 and that every 26 seconds a U.S. citizen is victimized by such violence.

Von Auersperg said the idea for such a center began during the second Bulow trial and "became defined" after meeting later with victims and victims groups.

"What greater gift could we have given our mother?" he asked rhetorically.

"Now ... everytime a victim is helped ... our mother's name will be spoken. She will be remembered."

Ohio city proud to be buckle of 'Snow Belt'

By DENNIS CONRAD
Associated Press Writer
CHARDON, Ohio (AP) - Highway signs at the edge of this village describe it as home to the maple sugar industry, but the people who live here know what really puts Chardon on the map: snow.

The hill that Chardon grew up on isn't high enough to see Lake Erie 15 miles to the north but villagers take pride in living in "the buckle on the snow belt."

Since 1946, when the Chardon water department began keeping records for the National Weather Service, the village has averaged just over 107 inches of snow per winter. Gayland Moore, record-keeper for the past 14 years, says the most recent 10-year average is about 112 inches per winter.

That's good enough, federal meteorologists say, for Chardon to rank No. 1 in Ohio for highest mean annual snowfall.

No one's saying Chardon's mean snowfall is the meanest anywhere. But it's right up there.

There's no snowfall ranking for all of the 8,000 cooperative weather stations, like Chardon's, around the nation, says Al Wallis of the National Climatic Data Center in Asheville, N.C.

But average snowfalls for the 280 major U.S. weather stations are ranked, and the top six read as follows: 1. Blue Canyon, Calif., 244.6 inches; 2. Marquette, Mich., 117.8 inches; 3. Sault St. Marie, Mich., 113.6 inches; 4. Caribou, Maine, 113.3 inches; 5. Syracuse, N.Y., 110 inches; and 6. Lander, Wyo., 106 inches.

Buffalo, N.Y., which gets a lot of bad publicity for its heavy snowfall, is ranked 10th with 92.3 inches, Wallis said.

Like many Great Lakes cities, Chardon gets dumped on because of what weather forecasters call the "lake effect." Cold winds pick up moisture as they cross Lake Erie from the west and north and release it inland as snow, especially at higher elevations.

Moore has other figures to prove Chardon's boast: "The maximum in the records was the winter of 1959-60 when we got 161.5 inches of snow. The most for any one 24-hour period was 15 inches during December 21, 1960, and in January 1978 we had 57.1 inches of snow with 13 inches of it coming on Jan. 27."

Among Ohio Highway Patrol troopers, the Chardon post is compared to an assignment in Siberia.

"It's a joke around the state; if you do something wrong they're going to send you to the snow belt with fur-lined boots," said Sgt. Ronald Kreuter.

Schools giving 'chemical free' celebrations

According to the "Texans War on Drugs" the number of high schools conducting chemical-free celebrations rose from 2 to 93 in the past 2 years. What is really exciting news is that many communities and schools around the State are not waiting for graduation time to hold chemical-free parties.

More requests for project graduation "get-started" kits have been received and it appears that the number of project graduation programs will more than double in '86-87. It is evident that as more Texas youth turn away from alcohol and illicit drugs, they will lead a new tradition of chemical-free lifestyles for their generation.
