House panel wants eased credit for farmers

WASHINGTON (AP) — The House Agriculture Committee, concerned about the hundreds of thousands of farmers behind in their loan payments, wants to require the government to ease its credit obligations.

Rep. Ed Jones, D-Tenn., says the plan "strikes at the very heart of the depression in rural America today, ... offering hope to the most hard-pressed farmers of this country."

In endorsing the proposal by voice vote Wednesday as part of a major emergency farm credit bill, the committee's Republicans and Democrats ignored Agriculture Secretary John Block's threat to consider asking President Reagan to veto the entire package.

Officials said the plan would effectively bar the Farmers Home Administration, the government's rural credit arm, from foreclosing on farmers who qualify for the special assistance.

The committee must still take final action on the overall credit package, which also calls for higher farm lending limits than Reagan recommended and continuation of some rural credit programs he wants ended. It's more extensive than one passed several weeks ago by the Republican-led Senate Agriculture Committee, but both bills include the mandatory special assistance plan.

Block contends that requiring credit assistance isn't necessary because only about 100,000 of the nation's 2.4 million farmers face serious financial problems, and most of those cases already are being handled administratively.

More importantly, he says, a mandatory assistance program will ruin the credit integrity of American agriculture.

"If the administration decides not to go along with it, that's its business," said Jones, chairman of the credit subcommittee who has been pushing the legislation for nearly a year. "But the farmers have my support."

The House plan requires Block to reschedule, consolidate or reamortize FmHA loans held by farmers who can prove they're in a financial bind through no fault of their own.

Block would have to defer repayment of any FmHA loan and interest for one year if farmers can prove there is no other way to stay in business and that after the deferral expires they will be able to resume regular loan payments.

Real Irish not awed by St. Patrick's Day

Whether it be drinking green beer, eating green cookies, wearing shamrocks or pinching the unpatriotic who forgot to wear a speck of Emerald in honor of Ireland, Americans are having a party today.

"I think St. Patrick's Day is done up more here," says Sister Rose Winkle, a native Irishwoman. Now an American citizen, she says she is from "the Texas of Ireland," County Cork in the southern part of the isle.

In her homeland, St. Patrick's Day is an ordinary day celebrated with a mass in honor of the patron saint. And though most people will wear a little sprig of a shamrock on their lapel, there is not the pinching fine for lack of green that Americans impishly practice.

Yarbrough arrested on Carribbean island

AUSTIN (AP) — Former Texas Supreme Court Justice Don Yarbrough, who fled the country after losing his appeal of a perjury conviction, was captured after he ventured away from his safe retreat on the Carribbean island of Grenada, officials say.

The fugitive ex-justice was arrested Wednesday on the independent island nation of St. Vincent 19 months after fleeing Texas to avoid a five-year prison term.

Acting on the fear that Yarbrough might post bond and flee, officials left Wednesday night to begin extradition proceedings.

Yarbrough was ordered to prison for a 1978 perjury conviction. He faces an additional charge of felony bond-jumping, authorities said.

"I'm enormously pleased. I'm delighted," said Travis County District Attorney Ronnie Earle, who announced the surprise arrest at a hastily called news conference Wednesday evening along with Gov. Mark White.

Yarbrough had fled Texas with his wife and two children to attend medical school in the Caribbean island of Grenada. He had successfully avoided arrest there because the United States has extradition problems with that island state.

But two weeks ago, Yarbrough left Grenada on a trip to the nearby island of St. Vincent, and U.S. authorities made their move.

Yarbrough was spotted by U.S. consular officials in Kingston, the capital of St. Vincent, and arrested by local authorities, said Gilbert Pena, head of the governor's Criminal Justice Division.

"A couple of weeks ago we heard there may be an opportunity to make the connection in St. Vincent, so we were in contact with the U.S. marshal's office and the U.S. attorney's office in St. Thomas (the nearest U.S. territory), who were assisting us in developing a plan to get him," said Pena.

After the arrest "the governor in St. Vincent decided to let the U.S. government have him — not on an extradition basis, but simply as a person who is almost deported, an undesirable person," Pena (See ARRESTED, Page 2A)

County reviews policy

Deaf Smith County commissioners viewed a new county personnel policy as prepared by George Loudder of Amarillo during a special called meeting Wednesday afternoon, making a few changes on the document.

The final draft of the proposed policy will be presented for the court's approval in the near future.

Some of the areas discussed by the county fathers included compensation for overtime, restrictions on political activity by county employees, and a grandfather clause regarding the accumulation of sick leave based on tenure with the county.

Colony on moon predicted by 2,000

SPACE CENTER, Houston (AP) — Man may be ready soon to establish a permanent lunar colony and tap what may be a vast storehouse of raw materials on the moon, a group of scientists said here Wednesday.

A series of speakers at the 14th Lunar and Planetary Science Conference at the Johnson Space Center said that technology, some available and some being developed, will make it possible to establish a mine, factory or a science station on the lunar surface by the end of this century.

"I think we will have a moon colony by 2000," said Hans Mark, a deputy administrator for the National Aeronautics and Space Administration. "We will have the enabling technology in this decade."

He predicted that NASA will develop a space station orbiting the Earth and an orbital transfer vehicle by 1990.

Once the orbital transfer vehicle — a spacecraft which flies only from low-Earth orbit to high-Earth orbit — is developed, "we'll realize how easy it would be to go on to the moon."

George Mueller, a former NASA executive who helped direct the Apollo program, said that modern studies have suggested the moon could be used for a variety of purposes.

He said it could possibly be mined for oxygen — to supply rocket engines and space colonies — or to harvest a variety of precious metals.

One study, said Mueller, suggested asteroids, which are rich in platinum, iridium and other rare and valuable metals, could be forced to crash into the moon. The asteroid minerals could then be collected by lunar robot machines.

Mueller said it is still not known for sure if there is water on the moon, but if such deposits exist, they could be exploited to make hydrogen and oxygen, the basic components in a powerful rocket fuel.

But Mueller said the most logical use for the moon in the near term would be to establish it as a solar power generating base, producing electricity for use on Earth.

A vast field of solar power cells — which convert sunlight to electricity — could be constructed on the moon's surface that is constantly in direct sunlight, he said.

Electricity generated by the power cells could be converted to microwaves and beamed to Earth, then converted back to electricity.

"This is technically feasible and within the state of the art," said Mueller. A 200-megawatt station could be built on the moon within a 10-year period using lunar materials for 90 percent of the construction.

Nuclear weapons freeze 'assured'

WASHINGTON (AP) — Congressional supporters of a nuclear weapons freeze resolution say House passage of the measure is inevitable despite Republican tactics which blocked a final vote after 12 hours of floor debate.

Freeze proponents also sought to play down conflicting views which emerged during Wednesday's debate over what specific weapons would be affected if a freeze with the Soviets was negotiated.

Rep. Edward J. Markey, D-Mass., a leading freeze advocate on Capitol Hill, asserted that GOP "dilatatory tactics were successful in postponing the inevitable. But next week the people of this country will be heard."

The House's Democratic leadership had forecast easy passage of the resolution — calling for a "mutual and verifiable" freeze to be followed by nuclear arms reductions — after a single day of floor action.

However, Republicans voted solidly against a motion to limit debate so that the measure could be put to a vote by midnight. They were joined by more than 40 Democrats to prevent the Democratic majority from forcing an early decision on the measure.

The action put the resolution off until Monday at the earliest because the House plans to do no legislative business on Thursday, which is St. Patrick's Day, and will not be in session on Friday.

Majority Leader Jim Wright, D-Texas, said it was "by no means certain" that the freeze would be the first order of business when the House returns next week. He said a decision would be made "after we have had a chance to regroup."

Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill, D-Mass., estimated that the measure had enough support to pass by 60 to 100 votes.

Possibly with an eye toward the county's Bull Barn deposit problem, the school board Tuesday proceeded with caution before making a decision on use of school gyms. Trustees discussed all the angles before amending policy to allow the YMCA and other youth groups sponsored by non-profit organizations to have free use of gyms.

County commissioners had learned that good intentions sometimes backfire. After taking money from their own pockets to help two youth groups with the Bull Barn deposit, they discovered that everyone wanted equal treatment.

Personally, we liked Commissioner Bill Bradley's idea of lowering the deposit from $1,500 to $500. Bradley said damage caused by users of the county facility had never amounted to the lesser figure.

Do you consider yourself an average American? According to one set of figures, that would make you 30 years old and you'd drink three or four beers a day.

Sometimes statistics are deceiving. A wise man once pointed out that "figures don't lie, but liars figure."

The U.S. Census Bureau recently released a Statistical Abstract of the U.S., 1982-83, and it indicated that the average age is 30.3, compared to 27.9 a decade ago. Life expectancy is now 73 years.

Indicating the mobile society in which we live, the findings show that 45 percent of us changed addresses at least once in the past five years. In the education area, 17.1 percent of us have completed college, compared with 11 percent 10 years ago.

Seems we're getting older and wiser, according to those statistics.

Survivors sue

LULAC over slaying

ALBUQUERQUE (AP) — The League of Latin American Citizens has been sued for $1.75 million by the survivors of an Albuquerque man who was killed outside a LULAC club two years ago.

The family of George Almaraz contends in the lawsuit that national and local officers of the Hispanic organization failed to provide adequate security at the club.

The lawsuit seeks $750,000 in economic damages, $750,000 in compensatory damages and $250,000 in exemplary damages.

In August, Danny Pete Blea was convicted of murdering Almaraz in an alley next to the club following an argument. Blea also was convicted of aggravated battery and aggravated assault for shooting bartender Patricia Campos.

Blea was sentenced to life in prison, but that term doesn't begin until he completes a 49-year sentence for heroin trafficking, state prison officials said.

During the trial, Blea testified that he drank at least 25 beers and tequila shots at the club the evening of Jan. 26, 1980.

The lawsuit says Blea was not a member of the club and shouldn't have been allowed on the premises. In addition, the lawsuit says, Blea had displayed a pistol the previous night at the club and threatened to kill anyone who bothered.

Despite the threat, there was "no security whatsoever at the bar, aside from a female bartender," the lawsuit said.

American arrested as Libyan spy

BERN, Switzerland (AP) — An American who worked here as a waitress has been arrested and charged with espionage for collecting sensitive information on Swiss officials, authorities said today. She reportedly passed the details on to a Libyan diplomat posted in Bern.

Swiss officials identified the woman as Alexandra Lincoln, 30, dubbed the "Mata Hari of Bern" in local newspapers today.

They said the Libyan was out of the country and would shortly be leaving his post at the embassy in Bern.

The newspaper reports said Ms. Lincoln, whom they called an "attractive blonde," had worked since 1980 at exclusive restaurants frequented by politicians and government officials. They said the Libyan paid her 14,000 Swiss francs, or almost $7,000 for the information.

Government officials would not discuss details of the case and the newspaper reports did not say what information she is accused of passing.

There was no answer at a telephone number listed for Alexandra Lincoln in Bern.

Steer may have been raised improperly

HOUSTON (AP) — The grand champion steer from this year's Houston Livestock Show and Rodeo may have been raised improperly, say officials who are conducting an investigation.

Assistant General Manager Leroy Shafer said Wednesday the probe concerns allegations that Black Velvet, sold by Clifton Smith, 18, of Lyford, in the Rio Grande Valley, might not have been raised in the Valley and might have received steroids.

Questions were raised during the selection process by other exhibitors, who said it is difficult, if not impossible, to grow long, thick hair on an animal in a warm climate. Smith said he used fans to keep the animal cool.

Oil well firefighter Paul "Red" Adair paid a record $140,000 for the animal, saying he would donate it to charity.

Doctor rules suicide in death of woman

HOUSTON (AP) — A doctor who ruled a woman found with 31 stab wounds in her body committed suicide admits the case is "very confusing," but says evidence backs him up.

Bonnie Grace Wright was found dead in the kitchen of her west Houston townhouse March 5. Police said the door was locked and there was no sign of a struggle.

Deputy Medical Examiner Dr. Aurelio Espinola said he thought at first Ms. Wright had been killed by someone else, but decided she had committed suicide because of a lack of defensive wounds on the hands and arms and because the apartment was not disturbed.

He said he concluded "these wounds are self-inflicted and that she did this to build her courage and finally inflicted the fatal wound."

Communism-godless religion

Communism is a godless religion; it helps to understand that.

President Reagan told a convention of evangelicals in Orlando, Fla., that "communism remains the focus of evil in the modern world."

He urged churchmen to use their pulpits to mobilize support for our military buildup.

This president is not the first to construe communism to be the "focus of evil."

But history's wide-angle perspective suggests that every Communist in the world could drop dead at 10 o'clock tonight — and at 10 tomorrow morning we would still suffer 99.44 percent of our problems, including potentially fatal problems.

Were every Communist destroyed, you'd still be unsafe in your house, your car, your streets.

Our nation would still be bleeding red ink.

And more nations have bled to death that way than were ever destroyed by an enemy's marching legions.

I mention this because in the name of opposing communism we are being asked to supply another $100 million in weapons and cash to El Salvador's government.

Though El Salvador's priests are on the side of the rebels.

So which is the "focus of evil?"

Assistant Secretary of State for International American Affairs Thomas Enders explains our involvement in El Salvador is an effort "to keep that region from falling under the control of Marxist-Leninists."

He suggests that to do less would evaluate in the fall of Guatemala and Costa Rica and Honduras.

This is the same "domino theory" that motivated our dead-end involvement in Vietnam.

And the sound of another hundred million and another hundred "advisors" is a familiar sound.

It is true indeed that Kremlin policy has been and remains to "communize" the world —

Even as our policy remains the "democratization" of the world —

But wherever Moscow has sought to enforce its godless religion — most recently in Poland and Afghanistan — the Soviet thrust has been weakened, not strengthened.

Communism in Latin America will be altogether as ineffectual as it has been in black Africa.

And if somebody is going to go broke trying to indoctrinate the world, better them than us.

The United States best serves the seeking world as a lighthouse — with a bright light planted on a firm foundation.

Despite Irish parade boycott, New York continues celebration

By LAWRENCE KILMAN
Associated Press Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Despite a boycott of today's St. Patrick's Day parade by the Irish government, 23 bands and some politicians because of its controversial grand marshal, officials vowed the event would be held "with dignity and pride."

"We're not going to let them hijack the parade," said Mayor Edward Koch, as final preparations were made for New York's 221st annual celebration of Ireland's patron saint.

Gov. Mario Cuomo said he would "never miss" an opportunity to celebrate the "magnificent culture" of the Irish.

The 23 bands, Irish government, 26th U.S. Army band and such politicians as Sen. Daniel Patrick Moynihan and former Gov. Hugh Carey planned to boycott the parade because of the election as grand marshal of Michael Flannery, an Irish Republican Army sympathizer.

However, parade organizers said they expected a larger than usual crowd of 160,000 people, as opposed to the usual 120,000.

Cardinal Terence Cooke, archbishop of New York, did not say whether he would review the parade from the steps of St. Patrick's Cathedral on Fifth Avenue, as is customary.

The cardinal cited as "a new danger" statements that the event had turned into a "pro-IRA parade."

Kennedy, Moynihan, Carey and other members of the Friends of Ireland, a political caucus, released a St. Patrick's Day statement which termed 1982 "a year of disappointment and concern for all of us who hope for peace in Northern Ireland."

The message, signed by 26 U.S. senators and 48 representatives, had critical words both for the outlawed Irish Republican Army and British authorities in Northern Ireland.

Parade officials, trying to downplay the controversy, noted that more than 140 bands remained in the parade and others might take the place of those who dropped out.

"We expect a great parade, with dignity and pride," said parade committee spokesman Martin Dunne. "The purpose of the parade is not to focus on the controversy in Northern Ireland."

That's only part of it."

Flannery, 81, was acquitted last November of conspiring to smuggle weapons to the IRA. He said he was working with the Central Intelligence Agency, a claim the CIA denied.

Flannery has long been active in Irish civic affairs and is founder of Irish Northern Aid, which supports anti-British groups. He was elected grand marshal by a parade committee vote of 510 to 12.

After the vote, the Irish government announced all its agencies, including Aer Lingus, the Irish airline, would boycott the parade. That sparked the U.S. Defense Department to order that no federal troops — including the 26th U.S. Army Band, a traditional participant — could march in the parade.

Among the bands that dropped out was the contingent from Toms River High School East in New Jersey, which was named best band of the 1981 parade.

that early experiments using simulated lunar material have developed a number of suggested techniques that could be used to mine iron or other minerals from moon rock and soil.

Hugh Davis, head of Eagle Engineering, a space technology firm, said his company has conducted a study which shows the moon could be used economically as a source of oxygen for the nation's space operations.

He said the element could be extracted from lunar rock, stored in tanks, then ferried to Earth orbit for use as fuel in rockets.

Wendell Mendell, another JSC scientist, said it costs as much energy to send a rocket to the moon as it does to put a satellite of equal weight into the permanent orbit 23,000 miles above the Earth that is now used by communications satellites.

He said a major effort could establish a moon colony within 25 years.

The first step, he said, should be a satellite orbiting the lunar poles. The satellite, he said, would study lunar chemistry and geology.

In the next step, scouting expeditions would be sent to locate likely colony sites.

And finally, he said, a series of modules would be sent to the lunar surface and installed at the selected sites with a blanket of soil for protection from the sun.

The conference is scheduled to continue through Friday.

Israeli soldiers accused of threats

By The Associated Press

An American general has accused Israeli soldiers of deliberately threatening and insulting U.S. Marines in Lebanon and asked the United States to prevent further confrontations, according to a report published today.

The report, a copyright dispatch from the Washington bureau of Knight-Ridder newspapers, appeared a day after five U.S. Marines were slightly wounded in a grenade attack in Beirut, gunmen wounded eight Italian soldiers nearby and a landmine killed two Israelis east of the Lebanese capital.

In Washington, President Reagan said Wednesday he would press for the withdrawal of Israeli, Syrian and Palestinian forces from Lebanon, and an administration official said chances have improved on breaking the 10-week diplomatic impasse on reaching a pullout agreement.

The U.S. official, who declined to be identified, called the grenade attack on the American soldiers "an isolated incident."

The Knight-Ridder report quoted Gen. Robert Barrow, the commandant of the Marine Corps, as saying ugly confrontations between the Israelis and Americans Marines have included "life-threatening situations, replete with verbal degradation of the officers, their uniform and country. Unfortunately, and of greater concern to me, (is that) incidents of this nature are the rule, rather than the exception..."

Five other people were injured, one critically.

Santiago Guterrez, the 42-year-old husband of Maria Guterrez, was hospitalized in Lubbock in critical condition with second- and third-degree burns over 90 percent of his body.

Glora Pena, 39, was also hospitalized in Lubbock General Hospital and was listed in serious condition with second- and third-degree burns.

Her husband, 44-year-old Alvaro, and his son, 10-year-old George, were listed in stable condition in Odessa Medical Center Hospital, said hospital spokeswoman Sarah Mancha. A second son, Alvaro Jr., 13, was treated for burns and released.

Pena said his family was in the kitchen when the explosion occurred. They rushed to a bedroom and jumped out of a window just before the fire swept through the home, he said.

Witnesses said flames roared through some nearby trailer homes, all located about 10 miles west of Odessa.

"That is as close to hell as you're ever going to get," said a neighbor, Nancy Turner.

Another witness, Linda Wilhelm, said the flames completely illuminated the inside of her trailer home, which was parked half a mile from the blaze.

"I've never heard anything like it," she said. "I had the blinds pulled all the way, and the whole house was lit up."

Odessa is located in the heart of the oil-rich Permian Basin.

Hereford area, calls March 17 "a national holiday like the Fourth of July."

"Most local communities will have their own little march," he said. "It's a day we've got championship games in national sports."

And Paddy's day is an excuse to bend Lenten restrictions a bit and imbibe to celebrate, he noted.

Since the Irish have the gift of gab, there are about as many legends of St. Patrick as there are Irishmen. Thomas Patrick Delany's version is that Nile of the Nine Hostages (a pirate that kids jokingly call Nile of the Nine Sausages) captured 16-year-old Patrick, the son of a French patrician that encyclopedias say lived in Scotland, and sold him as a slave. Patrick became a wineherd and, much like the prodigal son, only had slop to eat. He lived there for six or seven years before he escaped to home.

"It's said he would hear in dreams that the Irish needed to be saved from evil ways," Delany said.

Patrick answered the missionary call in 433 A.D. after studying at St. Martin seminary in Tours. Arriving in the heathen land of Druids, he saw the shamrock, already thought to be a magical plant, as a key in his ministry.

"St. Patrick used it as a symbol to explain the Trinity," Delany said. "It had the three leaves, but was still part of the one."

St. Patrick returned to the swine boss and eventually converted him and his family.

Delany said that in the period of 700 to 900 A.D., Ireland became known as the Isle of Saints and scholars because the people got the faith so strong. St. Patrick is said to have built 365 churches, each with a school, during his mission.

Sister Rose advises to take the snake stories with a grain of salt. Legends say St. Patrick drove the serpents from the island with a drum. Another story has him breathing in snowballs and ice to successfully start a campfire. And it is said he cursed Druid kettles so they wouldn't boil, making the heathen repent.

The saint's fervor, in reality and fantasy, continues in the Irish and anyone who has a teaspoon of Irish blood in them.

American celebrations began with the Charitable Irish Society of Boston in 1737. The "proud immigrants were joined by Philadelphia's Friendly Sons of St. Patrick in 1790, and another chapter in New York four years later.

March 17, 493 A.D., is generally thought to be the date of the missionary's death, and was thus selected for celebration. Historians are unsure of St. Patrick's age at death, but place it between 88 and 121.

When Sister Rose goes home to visit, the American passport makes travel a little easier.

"As far as they're (her family) are concerned I'm still Irish. Being an American just makes the paperwork a lot easier," she said.

Arrested

was set up quickly because of fears that Yarbrough might post bond.

Pena said he did not know when Yarbrough would be brought back to Texas.

"It's going to be just like extraditing him from another state," since St. Thomas is a U.S. territory, he said.

Yarbrough actually enrolled in school in Grenada in 1980, but he was not officially a fugitive until the following year when he failed to show up for a formal sentencing hearing Aug. 11, 1981. His appeals had run out.

He had resigned from the Supreme Court on July 16, 1977 amid controversy over his qualifications to hold a seat on the court. Critics said he was elected because of the similarity of his name to that of former U.S. Senator Ralph Yarborough, D-Texas, and Don Yarborough, a former Republican candidate for Texas governor.

Yarbrough, who said God had told him to run for office, won election to the court in November 1976, but quickly found himself in mounting legal troubles.

Several civil suits against him stemming from past business deals sought about $1 million in damages. This led to more problems for Yarborough, who was a relatively unknown Houston lawyer when he ran for the Texas Supreme Court.

Prosecutors accused him of lying to a grand jury that was investigating allegations that he plotted to have a witness killed to keep him from testifying against Yarborough in civil suits regarding his financial dealings. The alleged plot was foiled and no one was hurt.

Yarbrough was convicted on the perjury charge January 27, 1978, but appealed. He remained free on $5,000 bond pending his appeal, and Pena said that bond had been forfeited.

Yarbrough's lawyer, former Texas Attorney General Waggoner Carr, said his failure to show up for the sentencing hearing in 1981 was "a complete surprise."

In September of 1981 a Travis County grand jury returned an indictment accusing Yarborough of jumping bail.

Vandalisms reported

Hereford police received a report of a fence vandalism at Bluewater Gardens Apartments and of writing on the walls at Community Church.

Patrolmen also assisted the county on a domestic call and filed a report of a stolen bike. A $250 tire and wheel were stolen from a vehicle at the bowling alley.

Three citations were issued and one minor accident checked.

The old redhead dead at 79; loved by millions

NEW YORK (AP) — Fans mourned Arthur Godfrey, the ukelele strummer whose gift of gab made him a radio and television favorite for five decades, and even the singer he once fired on live TV recalled Godfrey as "the greatest salesman in the world."

Godfrey, who liked to call himself the Old Redhead and who was once dubbed "the Huck Finn of radio" for his folksy wit, died Wednesday at age 79 after being hospitalized 13 days for emphysema and pneumonia at Mount Sinai Hospital.

The entertainer will be cremated without any public service, said a spokesman for the William Morris agency, which represented Godfrey.

"I hope — indeed I shall pray — that he will rest in peace," said Julius LaRosa, the singer "discovered" by Godfrey and then fired by him on the air in 1953, shocking the nation.

LaRosa had just finished singing "Manhattan" on the TV show "Arthur Godfrey and Friends," when Godfrey turned to the audience and announced, "This is Julie's swan song." He accused LaRosa of a "lack of humility."

The singer told reporters Wednesday night that he and

Godfrey never reconciled, but he credited Godfrey for giving his career a boost and recalled Godfrey as "the greatest salesman in world."

From his signature greeting of "Howa'ya, Howa'ya," to his public battle against lung cancer, Godfrey did everything with his own brash style. He liked to say that you "get as much out of life as you put into it."

"You had nothing to do with your birth, and you can't control the circumstances of your death. But you can do something about living," he told one interviewer.

"He made the personality more important than the talent," recalled another easygoing TV celebrity, Art Linkletter.

At his peak in the 1950s, Godfrey had a Monday-through-Friday daytime show, "Talent Scouts" on Monday night and an hour of "Godfrey and His Friends" on Wednesday nights. His weekly prime-time audience measured 82 million viewers.

In 1959, it was reported that Godfrey's shows brought in $159 million in advertising for CBS.

His "Talent Scouts," with an applause meter that measured audience response to unknown performers, is credited with giving newcomers Pat Boone, Barbara McNair, Vic Damone, Johnny Nash, the McGuire Sisters and Shari Lewis their start.

Godfrey never claimed to be much of a singer himself, but he loved to perform.

He threw himself into his work and into other pursuits as well. He flew his planes around the world, and twice got into trouble for buzzing an airport. Godfrey's career got its start about the time the stock market was plunging the nation into depression in 1929.

Then a Coast Guardsman, Godfrey and some friends were in a Baltimore pub listening to amateurs perform on a local radio station. His friends, who had heard Godfrey's banjo plucking, urged him to audition.

He got a 15-minute spot on the station and was billed as "Red Godfrey, the Warbling Banjoist." The spot was sponsored by a pet shop that sold bird seed. It paid $5.

From there he went to Washington with NBC and then to CBS in 1945, where he became one of the network's biggest assets.

Some sponsors complained about his ad-libs, especially when Godfrey would tear up their scripts and tell the audience "Nuts to that!"

A typical Godfrey aside came one day when he was touting a shampoo supposed to contain milk and eggs. "If your hair is clean you can always use the stuff to make an omelet," he cracked.

His successful lung cancer surgery in 1959 made front-page headlines and his pluckiness during his recovery brought him an outpouring of public affection. He later campaigned to increase public awareness of the disease.

Godfrey retired from regular radio broadcasts in 1972. The secret to his longevity as an entertainer, he said, was in his willingness to meet new challenges.

"If you want to last, you have to grow," he said. "That little screen is merciless and if you aren't constantly more interesting and intriguing, they — the public — will drop you, ruthlessly."

Godfrey was born Aug. 31, 1903, in New York City but was raised across the Hudson River in Hasbrouck Heights, N.J. He was married in 1938 to Mary Bourke, and they had a daughter and two sons.

Agency agrees to investigate deaths

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — Federal and state medical sleuths have started an independent probe into "suspicious" infant deaths at a county-operated hospital to determine if one factor links all the deaths.

A Bexar County special grand jury is investigating a string of deaths at the pediatric intensive care unit of Medical Center Hospital from 1978 to early 1982.

The Center for Disease Control and state investigators became involved at the behest of District Attorney Sam Millsap.

"Our investigation may lead to one person, or it may lead to a bacteria or virus," the CDC's Greg Istre said Wednesday. "Or we may not come up with a definitive answer."

Istre began the federal investigation March 10 but he repeatedly refused Wednesday to disclose any particulars of his early findings, or what trends the CDC already might have detected.

He said only that he noted "an apparent increase" in the infant mortality rate, but would not elaborate.

He also conceded his medical investigative team "may not be able to get around" the fact that no autopsies were performed on the children.

"We may come up with no answers," said Istre, who works in the Oklahoma City office of the Atlanta-based federal health agency.

Millsap said Wednesday that the CDC's report will "provide a focus" for his investigation to "determine just exactly what the cause of these deaths was and, at some point, from our perspective as prosecutors, whether criminal charges should be filed."

The district attorney has refused to disclose how many deaths have been termed "suspicious."

Istre has scores of pediatric medical records to examine and plans to interview some hospital officials, who already have been "very cooperative," he said. He is being assisted by three representatives of the Texas Department of Health.

The CDC's probe is epidemiologic, meaning it centers on groups of people, rather than individuals.

"We'll compare people with an adverse outcome (death) with people who are well," Istre said.

"If it turns out there is a criminal nature, then it's not up to us to prosecute. That's up to the district attorney," he said.

Istre's detailed report, which will not be completed for "at least several weeks," will go directly to Millsap, he said.

The investigator said his agency decided to conduct the independent investigation because "the apparent increase in deaths in the hospital was of sufficient number and sufficient data to do a study."

Millsap said his office will not be idle while waiting for Istre's report on Medical Center Hospital.

"We'll continue interviewing doctors, nurses and other people we believe have information that may be useful to us in our pursuit of the truth," the district attorney said.

"We're not running out of people to talk to," he said. "Not by any stretch."

The CDC recently tackled a similar investigation into infant deaths at Toronto's Hospital for Sick Children.

Texas-Alaska feud sparked by a jest

AUSTIN (AP) — Gov. Mark White says he was only kidding when he slighted a certain northern state that is bigger than Texas, but some irate Alaskans apparently took him seriously.

White said Wednesday he was "delighted" that an Anchorage radio station was running a rather uncomplimentary song dedicated to him, but that it was all misunderstanding of a compliment he tried to make.

Last month, White told an audience of local government officials in College Station that Alaska was trying to lure Texans to vacation there, but that he did not know "why anyone would want to go to that cold, barren place."

Employees of station KF-QD responded with the song, sung to the tune of "The Yellow Rose of Texas," with lyrics, in part:

"He can talk about his oil wells and 'bout the Rio Grande,

"But nothing can compare to our great Alaska land.

"The biggest thing in Texas, that small state way down south,

"The biggest thing to see there is Gov. Mark White's mouth."

White said the Alaskans apparently don't know a compliment when they hear one.

Throw gimmicks out the window

NCAA tournament madness begins tonight

By The Associated Press
Turn off the shot clocks and erase the three-point line. The March Madness which the NCAA Basketball Tournament has become doesn't need gimmicks.

When the first round gets under way tonight, 38 of the 48 teams will have to adapt to new rules — no shot clock, no three-point basket — which actually are old rules. And until their teams take the court, coaches will have to wonder whether their charges can make the transition without undue confusion. "We were working on a couple of things today in connection with the shot clock," said Boston College Coach Gary Williams, whose 11th-ranked Eagles are seeded fourth in the West Regional. They play Sunday in Corvallis, Ore., against the winner of Friday night's clash between 19th-ranked Oklahoma State and Ivy League champion Princeton, which ousted North Carolina A&T 53-41 in one of four preliminary-round games.

"One was getting across the idea that a team could get a lead and then hold the ball on you," Williams said. "It's something we didn't worry about during the year when we had a shot clock (in the Big East Conference). It's something new that you have to consider. We have a couple of days to work on it."

The East Regional gets under way tonight in Greensboro, N.C., where LaSalle, a 70-58 winner over Boston University in the preliminary round, meets Virginia Commonwealth and James Madison faces West Virginia. Friday night in Hartford, Conn., Rutgers tackles Southwestern Louisiana and Morehead State plays Syracuse.

In the Midwest tonight, Purdue faces Robert Morris — the Colonials won their preliminary-round game from Georgia Southern 64-54 — and Illinois State goes against Ohio University at Tampa. Friday night, the scene shifts to Evansville, Ind., where Marquette tangles with Tennessee and Alabama-Birmingham meets Oklahoma.

The Midwest opens tonight at Houston where 15th-ranked Tennessee-Chattanooga faces Maryland and Alabama plays Lamar. Friday night, the action is in Louisville where 20th-ranked Georgetown plays Alcorn State, an 81-75 preliminary-round winner over Xavier of Ohio, and Iowa meets Utah State.

In the West, tonight's doubleheader at Boise, Idaho, sends Washington State against Weber State and Illinois against Utah. Friday night in Corvallis, it's 16th-ranked North Carolina State vs. Pepperdine in addition to Oklahoma State-Princeton.

Second-round action takes place Saturday and Sunday when the seeded teams make their tournament debuts. The East seeds, in order, are third-ranked St. John's, No. 8 North Carolina — the defending NCAA champion — unranked Ohio State and No. 18 Georgia.

In the Midwest, the seeds are second-ranked Louisville, fifth-ranked Indiana, No. 12 Kentucky and ninth-rated Arkansas. The Midwest seeds are top-rated Houston, No. 10 Missouri, 13th-ranked Villanova and No. 17 Memphis State. And the West finds Boston College seeded behind fourth-ranked Virginia, No. 7 UCLA and No. 6 Nevada-Las Vegas.

The Atlantic Coast Conference's final exposure to its experimental rules — a 30-second clock and a 19-foot three-pointer — came last weekend in the conference tournament, which North Carolina State won 81-78 over Virginia.

"I think we'll be able to make the adjustment," said N.C. State's Sidney Lowe, the tournament MVP. "The younger guys might rather play with the clock, but you've got three seniors who can play either way."

The Wolfpack hit 108 of 247 — 43.7 percent — from three-point range during the regular season while shooting 47.2 percent overall.

"We hope we can bounce back from the loss to N.C. State and play our best basketball," said North Carolina Coach Dean Smith. "We're going to work very hard this week to prepare for playing under NCAA rules."

And Virginia's Terry Holland said the 30-second clock "helped us so much during the year that it's hard for me to say much about the three-point field goal." Virginia's 106 three-point attempts were the fewest by any ACC team.

The only tournament teams which played without either a shot clock or a three-point basket this season are LaSalle, Robert Morris, James Madison, Princeton, UCLA, Washington State, Utah, Pepperdine, Southwestern Louisiana and Marquette.

Austin advances past Allen in Virginia Slims tennis action

Nifty Catch

Zane Sessions (left) of Hereford and Danny Williams of Brady proudly show off a string of stripers, caught earlier this month at Lake Amistad. The largest of the sting weighed 30 1/4 pounds, and was 38 inches long. This catch is among many good reported this season at Lake Amistad, located just north of Del Rio on the border between Texas and Mexico.

Watch that dial TV schedule confusing

By DAVE GOLDBERG AP Sports Writer

At 3:07 p.m. EST on Sunday, CBS will join the Syracuse and Ohio State NCAA basketball tournament game in progress, unless Morehead State upsets Syracuse or Alcorn upsets Georgetown and except in Iowa and Missouri and Beaumont, Texas. Wait a second — that's Saturday, and only if Lamar beats Alabama.

Let's start again. CBS is televising the first and second rounds of the NCAA basketball tournament this weekend. All eight games on Saturday and all eight games on Sunday will be televised somewhere. Even in Iowa, Missouri and Beaumont, Texas.

What follows may help explain why your favorite team is or isn't on television this weekend.

Within the framework of the regional lineups determined by the NCAA, CBS determines the starting times. On Saturday, it has four basic times, with each time zone of the country seeing three games (a few cities, with home teams in late games, will get four games). On Sunday, there are three basic times, with two games going to most areas.

What most of the country sees is determined the same way networks always determine what they televise — they pick the games they think will bring the biggest audience. That is, national attractions (Virginia and Ralph Whatisname, Houston, North Carolina, Louisville, Georgetown, et al.); and the best matchups — games that figure to be close enough to keep the viewers — plus regional games featuring local teams.

But there's a catch. What if a no-name beats a name in the first round, as Middle Tennessee beat Kentucky last year. That ruined a matchup between Kentucky and Louisville that CBS had planned for its prime Saturday game.

This year, CBS is hoping that Syracuse beats Morehead, Alabama beats Lamar, Georgetown beats Alcorn State; generally, that favorites win.

"We think we've protected ourselves," says Kevin O'Malley, the executive producer of the telecasts. "If one of the name teams gets beaten, we think we can come in with another name team in its place."

The one exception is at 1 p.m. EST Sunday, when CBS is counting on showing most of the country Georgetown and Patrick Ewing against Memphis State and Keith Lee. It sends O'Malley into superlatives. "Lee and Ewing have never met," enthuses O'Malley. "It's a great matchup."

But what happens if Alcorn doesn't cooperate with CBS and upsets Georgetown? CBS has a shoulder game — the contest between Ohio State and Syracuse that will start at 1:40 EST. It plans to show the end of that game after Georgetown-Memphis State. If Alcorn plays Memphis, CBS will switch at 1:40 to Syracuse-Ohio State, which otherwise will be shown only in upstate New York and Ohio.

NIT first round

DePaul, TCU victorious

By The Associated Press

For a change, DePaul Coach Ray Meyer knows that today's newspaper will contain at least one piece of good news.

An embarrassed first-round loser in the last three NCAA basketball tournaments when DePaul was ranked among the nation's elite, Meyer finally avoided the opening-round jinx Wednesday night. Freshman Tony Jackson scored 20 points and keyed a second-half surge that carried the Blue Demons to a 76-73 victory over Minnesota in one of seven first-round National Invitation Tournament games.

So it wasn't the coveted NAAs. At least Meyer gets into the second round.

"Tomorrow morning, I don't have to read in the paper that we lost in the first round," the veteran coach said after the game.

Elsewhere, the University of New Orleans stunned LSU 99-94 in overtime, Texas Christian nipped Tulsa 64-62, Oregon State trounced Idaho 77-59, Fresno State defeated Texas-El Paso 71-64, South Carolina trimmed Old Dominion 100-90 and Iona whipped St. Bonaventure 90-76.

DePaul broke its game open in the second half with bursts of 7-0 and 10-0 that opened a 66-50 lead with eight minutes to play.

"We decided at the half that we were quicker and realized we could run," said Meyer. "The difference in this one was the first five minutes of the second half. We brought the ball down seven times and came away with 15 points."

At Baton Rouge, La., reserve Acie Sanders scored eight points in overtime, including two insurance free throws with 11 seconds remaining, as New Orleans shocked LSU. UNO, 23-6, never led until Sanders' tip-in gave the Privateers an 86-84 lead after 20 seconds of overtime.

Sanders made a three-point play with 1:09 left in the extra period, then added his two free throws for a 97-94 lead with 11 seconds remaining. Oscar Taylor, who led the Privateers with 22 points, added two free throws with nine seconds left.

Smith said he put Sanders into the game mostly because he plays good defense.

"He's a kid who plays his role. He was a starter for us the first two years, but now comes off the bench and does what we ask him to do. Tonight, that was scoring at a crucial time," Smith said.

Smith also made a crucial decision concerning Claude Butler, who was yanked from the game late in the first half with no points and six turnovers. LSU was leading 51-38 at the intermission and, said Smith: "My assistants didn't want him to start the second half. I disagreed and said, 'If he doesn't do well, we'll take him out.' Thank goodness we went with him."

Butler scored 13 of his 15 points in first 10 minutes of the second half as UNO tied the game at 63-all.

At Tulsa, TCU's Doug Arnold hit a jump shot with five seconds left to lift the Horned Frogs over the home team. Arnold, a 6-foot-9 senior, finished with 20 points and 17 rebounds.

At Corvallis, Ore., Charlie Sitton scored 19 of his 21 points in the second half as Oregon State roared from behind to down Idaho 77-59. Steve Woodside and Danny Evans added 18 points apiece for the Beavers, who trailed 35-32 at halftime.

At Fresno, Calif., Desi Barmore had a perfect night with 5-for-5 from the field and 10-for-10 from the free throw line to lead Fresno State over Texas-El Paso. The 6-7 Barmore scored 10 of his season-high 20 points in the final five minutes as he paced a 16-4 burst after the game was tied 54-54.

At Columbia, S.C., Jimmy Foster scored a career-high 31 points and Kenny Holmes added 24 to lead South Carolina to a 100-90 victory over Old Dominion. Holmes scored 12 points in a second-half surge that helped the Gamecocks open a 67-49 lead.

At New Rochelle, N.Y., Steve Burt scored 24 of his 33 points in the second half, breaking the single-season Iona College scoring record and rallying the Gaels over St. Bonaventure. Iona overcame a 42-38 halftime deficit as Burt, a 6-3 junior guard, brought his season total to 696 points, surpassing Jeff Ruland's 685 in 1979-80.

The first round continues tonight with William & Mary at Virginia Tech, Wake Forest at Murray State, Tulane at Nebraska, Alabama State at Mississippi and Northwestern vs. Notre Dame at Rosemont, Ill. Friday night, it's Bowling Green at Michigan State and Fullerton State at Arizona State.

In Tuesday's openers, South Florida trimmed Fordham 81-69 and Vanderbilt defeated East Tennessee State 79-74.

Knicks outlast Bucks, 105-93

By WILLIAM R. BARNARD AP Sports Writer

The New York Knicks are not only winning, they're doing it convincingly and against some of the best teams in the National Basketball Association.

In their last three triumphs on the road - against New Jersey, Boston and Milwaukee, who have three of the five best records in the league - the Knicks have built 20-point halftime leads.

Wednesday night's 105-93 victory over the Bucks in Milwaukee also gave New York a seven-game winning streak for the first time since February 1981. All the victories have come against winning teams.

"We have been playing very well, obviously," Knicks Coach Hubie Brown said, "and it is because we have gotten strong performances by just about everybody. There is no one guy to key on."

Bernard King and Sly Williams scored 15 points each for the Knicks, while Trent Tucker and Bill Cartwright had 14 apiece.

"Hubie has a pretty deep team there," said Milwaukee Coach Don Nelson. "New York has been the hottest team in the league."

Elsewhere in the NBA, Atlanta beat Washington 94-81 in overtime, New Jersey tripped Cleveland 96-90, Utah bombed Detroit 125-115, Philadelphia beat Boston 105-100, Los Angeles topped Phoenix 104-95, Seattle stopped Kansas City 110-102 and Chicago edged Golden State 113-111.

After leading by seven points going into the second period, the Knicks outscored the Bucks 39-26 in the second quarter to go up 64-44 at halftime.

The Knicks built their largest lead, 70-48, in the third period before Sidney Moncrief, who led the Bucks with 19 points, sparked a 10-0 comeback to make it 70-58 with 5:20 left in the period.

But Cartwright scored 10 points, including two consecutive dunks on assists from Williams, in the fourth quarter to keep New York's lead in double figures. Its average margin of victory during the seven-game winning streak has been 11 points.

"We knew they would make a run at us, but we never let them get within 10 in the fourth quarter, which I was really happy with," Brown said.

The Knicks, who were 14-26 and in last place in the Atlantic Division Jan. 22, are now 35-30 and would make the playoffs if they started today.

"Hubie just told us to be patient and that when we learned his system, we would start winning," Knicks guard Ernie Grunfeld said. "We knew it would take a while, and it did take the first half of the season."

76ers 105, Celtics 100

Andrew Toney scored 12 of his 33 points in the fourth quarter and Moses Malone added 28 points as Philadelphia beat Boston without injured Julius Erving and flu-plagued Maurice Cheeks.

Toney outdueled Boston's Larry Bird, who had 30 points, as the 76ers won their 23rd game at home, improved their record to 55-9 and took an 11-game lead over the Celtics in the Atlantic Division.

Lakers 104, Suns 95
 Los Angeles won its fifth game in a row as Earvin "Magic" Johnson had 25 points, 11 rebounds and eight assists against Phoenix.

Dennis Johnson led the Suns with 23 points, while Kareem Abdul-Jabbar, who had only seven points with 3:45 left, finished with 12 to keep alive his streak of scoring in double figures in 437 consecutive regular-season games.

Nets 96, Cavaliers 90
 Albert King and Michael Ray Richardson each scored 19 points and New Jersey held off a late Cleveland rally to win its fourth straight game.

The Nets led 83-71 with 7½ minutes left, but Phil Hubbard scored nine points during a 17-7 spurt in the next six minutes as the Cavaliers cut the deficit to two. But consecutive baskets by Darryl Dawkins and King made it 94-88 with 29 seconds left and New Jersey went on to beat Cleveland for the 13th straight time.

Hawks 94, Bullets 81

Atlanta never led in regulation time, but outscored Washington 14-1 in overtime to take a four-game lead over the Bullets in the race for the final Eastern Conference playoff spot.

Johnny Davis scored 10 of his 22 points in the extra period for the Hawks, who trailed 70-60 with 8:29 left in regulation. Greg Ballard had 26 points for Washington.

Sonics 110, Kings 102
 Gus Williams scored 22 points and Jack Sikma added 21 points and 19 rebounds as Seattle won its fourth consecutive game and handed Kansas City its fourth loss in a row.

The Sonics broke away from a 36-36 tie with eight straight points in the second period and the Kings never got closer than five points the rest of the way.

Jazz 125, Pistons 115
 Rookie Jerry Eaves scored 35 points and John Drew added 34 as Utah stormed past slumping Detroit.

The Jazz trailed 80-69 midway through the third quarter, then outscored the Pistons 56-35 the rest of the way. Eaves had 15 points in the period to spark the rally.

Terry Tyler led Detroit with 26 points, but Kelly Tripucka scored only eight, 19 under his average.

Bulls 113, Warriors 111
 Reggie Theus scored 13 of his 32 points in the final period to pace Chicago over Golden State.

Theus broke the last tie of the game with 3:40 left with a jump shot that made it 105-103.

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Tom Watson, Gil Morgan and the rest of a star-laden field should be able to forget about dodging raindrops for the weekend's final rounds of the New Orleans Open.

People are a bit touchy about the weather here, where rain last year turned Lakewood Country Club into a swamp and caused the Professional Golfers' Association tournament to be extended by a day and shortened by a round.

Still, it's the best field ever assembled for the tournament and about as good as one's apt to find at any but a handful of stops on the tour. Fifteen of this year's top 25 money winners are entered.

The tournament is sponsored by U.S. Fidelity & Guaranty Co. for the second year. The purse was raised to $400,000, helping to make March the richest month of the PGA season.

Gil Morgan, with winnings of $136,943 this season, heads the list of current money winners who were to begin play today. Tom Watson, second on the list of career winners with $2,907,784, is the biggest name in the field.

But Hal Sutton, the Shreveport, La., golfer who set a rookie record last season, also figured to draw a gallery as the closest thing to a hometown favorite in the tournament.

Sutton is 22nd on the list of money winners this season after finishing 11th last year.

Last year, only 54 holes could be completed. The finish was pushed back until Monday after five inches of rain washed out late starters on Friday and more rain prevented play on Saturday and Sunday.

Scott Hoch is back to defend his title.

Ron Lutze, groundskeeper at Lakewood Country Club, said the 7,080-yard course is dry, lightning fast and capable of taking several inches of rain without hindering play.

"We're so dry right now that we can handle it," he said.

"The course is playing short...the roughs are short - you can't grow much rough this time of the year," said Lutze.

"The greens are in good shape. They ought to really shoot in low numbers."

"They're hitting 8 and 9 irons in the holes where they're normally shooting 3 and 4 irons," he said.

The tournament is the final event in the Seiko series, which offers $150,000 to the most consistent finisher in the past 12 months of tournaments and lesser amounts to the next seven.

Taking aim on fraudulent calls

In recent months, you may have read that Southwestern Bell is beginning to take steps to cut down on the number of fraudulent long distance calls placed from public telephones and charged to an unauthorized third number.

Effective April 1, the company will begin a new procedure that is designed to eliminate fraudulent calls.

On that date, all Southwestern Bell operators (as well as operators from independent phone companies) will start requiring approval from an individual at the third number before the call is put through.

While this new procedure may cause a slight inconvenience for customers desiring to place legitimate bill-to-third-number calls from public telephones, it will benefit everyone in the long run.

First, this will greatly reduce the burden on customers, who help shoulder the cost of fraudulent third-number calls through higher rates. And secondly, there will be less expense of having to investigate those types of calls, which also drives up rates.

Actually, the new third-number verification will cause a delay of less than one minute. If the operator is unable to verify the charges, the caller will be asked to provide alternate billing (such as charging the call to his or her Southwestern Bell Calling Card or placing the call collect).

A convenient billing alternative

The Calling Card may represent the most attractive alternative to third-number billing. Not only are direct-dialed Calling Card calls faster and more convenient than third-number and collect calls, they cost less. Depending on the distance of the call, a Calling Card can save you up to 50 cents on interstate calls and 75 cents on intra-state calls.

To apply for a Calling Card, call your Southwestern Bell business office (listed in the Customer Guide section of your local directory). There's no charge to obtain a Calling Card, and having one can eliminate the need for carrying change to place phone calls.

Watch for phone cables when digging in your yard

Now that spring is just around the corner, you may be planning gardens, lawn landscaping, putting up a fence, or other outdoor activities.

If so, you'll want to be on the lookout for buried telephone lines and cables when you dig.

We started moving our cable and wire from overhead to underground a few years ago to help protect phone service from ice, wind and rain. But, it also increases the chance that you might cut off your own service, with nothing more than a shovel or ditch-digging machine.

If you think there may be a cable or phone line underground in the area where you want to dig, but you don't know for sure, just dial "O" and ask for "Enterprise 9800." We'll tell you what to do, and if necessary, send a telephone person out at no cost to show you where a cable runs in your area.

Remember: If you have something to talk about, don't hesitate to drop me a line.

Divorced from Dodger Blue

Garvey begins new era with San Diego Padres

YUMA, Ariz. (NEA) — For the first time in 27 years, Steven Patrick Garvey, who is all of 34 years old, is starting out a spring thoroughly divorced from Dodger Blue. Just as he is thoroughly separated (on the way to being divorced) from Cyndy Garvey, the mother of his two pre-teen daughters.

The process, Steve Garvey feels, has humanized him on both counts — in the public's view.

"The perception of him as the perfect All-American man with the perfect career and the perfect family has been altered. The alabaster figure on the pedestal has teetered and is down there on the ground, walking with the common people.

"They can relate to me," muses Garvey, the San Diego Padres new first baseman, as he contemplates the change. "They didn't know it, but they always could. It's particularly so with the press. They're no longer looking for flaws. Now they write more about me professionally: 'Steve Garvey is from a middle class family. His dad is a bus driver for Greyhound. His mother works hard (as an insurance adjuster), and they're both still working. They had an only son who played from 8 in the morning till dusk, and developed himself.' They gave me a tremendous set of principles. And I've been successful."

The association with Dodger Blue came in the spring of 1956, when he was 7 years old and with his father went out to the Tampa airport to meet "KO 1," the private plane of the world champion Brooklyn Dodgers. The team trained then as now in Vero Beach, but flew to the west coast of Florida, where Steve was born and raised, for five days of exhibition play. His dad drove the team bus to the games, and Steve served as the bat boy on the field.

For the next 11 springs, while he became an all-state quarterback, an all-state baseball slugger, and also played basketball and golf, Garvey was the Dodgers' bat boy. He went off to Michigan State to play football, and in his sophomore year he started eight games at defensive back. But then the Dodgers picked him No. 1 in a special phase of the free agent draft in June 1968, and his future was ordained.

He had already met Cyndy, a stunning blonde freshman. And in 1971, by which time he had already progressed through the minors to a permanent spot on the Los Angeles Dodgers, they were married.

As he prepares to start his 13th full season in the major leagues, with the San Diego Padres, Garvey has played 1,107 consecutive games at first base, all with the Dodgers. In the 11th Padres game in 1983, he likely will become the National League all-time leader for playing consecutive games, passing Billy Williams of Chicago.

It might have been with the Dodgers, who, after his contract lapsed in 1982, were willing to renew it for four years at a sum of over $1 million per annum. But Garvey insisted on five years. That led, in his words, to "the termination of our association."

"All I've done my whole career with them," explains Garvey, "was to promote the image of the Dodger organization. I never lied or tried to deceive them. I told them I thought I could play for five years and I wanted to play for five years. And they wouldn't see it."

The words are not impassioned. Ever controlled — and that control is transferred to his immaculate grooming, from the carefully combed forelocks to the laces on his shoes — Steve tries to deflect any hint of bitterness. But it's there by insinuation.

He says, "You have 3 million people coming into your park, and suddenly you decide you're going to get rid of all these guys (in addition to Garvey, the Dodgers also disposed of longtime third baseman Ron Cey) and put in young guys. Now you're cheating your public, unless all these guys come together and win this year."

"A guy in my position, who has been synonymous with this organization and can still contribute, and whom the public en masse wanted to stay, it wasn't easy to leave. It was the single, toughest decision I ever made."

After seven consistently productive seasons, in which he averaged over 300 and over 100 runs batted in, Garvey is coming off two sub-par years, in which his batting average, his RBIs and his home run totals dropped off severely. Since he is 34, a relatively advanced age for a player, there is some doubt about his ability to play out his new five-year pact with San Diego.

"I'm sure I can," he rebuts, "or I wouldn't have signed it. And if it turns out at some point that I can't, then that'll be my last year. Say in the first half of 1987, I see I can't play up to the standards I set for myself, I'll end it that year. I worked too hard to get where I am."

That is the mortal Steve Garvey talking, conscious of his professional and personal setbacks.

"People put me on a pedestal," he says, "and they were looking for flaws and cracks. If there was one little thing, 'Oh, somebody perfect doesn't do that.'"

"I kept saying, 'Listen, I'm just a human being.' All I'm trying to do is be the best possible person I can and the best professional."

A professional, by definition, is one "participating for gain or livelihood." By his salary, at least, Garvey is doing the best he can.

STEVE GARVEY, one of baseball's top hitters, likes to relax by swinging at golf balls. Known for his professionalism, Garvey, a new member of the San Diego Padres, stays in good physical shape year round.

Spring record 8-1

Brewers bomb Angels

By The Associated Press

Ben Oglivie singled to drive in one of three Milwaukee runs in the first inning and added a two-run homer in the fifth, giving him four homers and 10 runs batted in as the Brewers improved their spring record to 8-1 with a 9-7 victory over the California Angels.

Elsewhere in major league exhibitions Wednesday, George Wright's three-run homer with two outs in the bottom of the ninth inning capped a five-run rally that carried the Texas Rangers to a 10-7 victory over the Houston Astros. Wright's home run came after Larry Parrish tied the game with an RBI single.

Ninth-inning lightning also struck for Pittsburgh as Dick Davis, Dale Berra and Jose Ortiz belted homers to lead the Pirates past the Atlanta Braves 4-2.

Tom Veryzer, Darryl Strawberry and Brian Giles homered for the New York Mets in an 11-6 victory over Boston, offsetting homers by Dwight Evans, Gene Gentile and Tony Armas for the Red Sox. The Mets had seven runs in the last two innings.

Rick Leach tripled in two runs as the Detroit Tigers scored five times — all after two outs — in the first inning against Los Angeles starter Bob Welch to whip the Dodgers 7-2. John Wocken-fuss homered for Detroit and Candy Maldonado clubbed a two-run homer for the Dodgers.

Minnesota got a pair of doubles from both Gary Gaetti and Randy Bush and scored eight runs for the fifth consecutive game to beat the Philadelphia Phillies 8-5. The Twins had 17 hits, including a homer by Tom Brunansky, while Tony Perez and Bill Robinson homered for the Phillies.

Richie Zisk drove in five runs with a double and two singles as the Seattle Mariners trounced the Cleveland Indians 10-5.

San Diego pitcher Dave Dravecky drilled a three-run homer, starting the Padres on their way to a 9-4 rout of the Chicago Cubs. Dravecky, who added a single in a four-run fourth, homered off Chicago starter Paul Moskau.

Dennis Martinez pitched five strong innings and Cal

Ripken Jr. doubled in a pair of first-inning runs as the Baltimore Orioles downed Montreal 3-1 in a game called after eight innings because of rain. Expos pitcher Steve Rogers retired the last 13 batters he faced after giving up the two runs.

The St. Louis Cardinals raked Cincinnati starter Mario Soto for six hits and four runs in the first inning, and then scored twice in the seventh to top the Reds 9-7. Keith Hernandez had a double and two singles to pace the Cardinals' 13-hit attack.

In a "B" game between the two teams, Joaquin Andujar pitched five shutout innings as the Cardinals blanked the Reds 1-0. George Hendrick sacrificed home the game's only run.

Jesse Barfield doubled in a third-inning run and scored on Willie Upshaw's sacrifice fly, pacing the Toronto Blue Jays to a 3-2 victory over the Chicago White Sox. Toronto nicked Chicago starter Floyd Bannister for all three runs.

A night game between the Kansas City Royals and New York Yankees was rained out.

Braxton-Spinks bout set for HBO Friday

ATLANTIC CITY, N.J. (AP) — They're finished hitting sparring partners — Dwight Braxton in a barroom and Michael Spinks in a ballroom — and now they're ready to punch each other in the home of the Miss America Pageant.

There won't be anything cosmetically pretty about Braxton and Spinks' scheduled 15-round battle for the undisputed light heavyweight championship Friday night in the 14,000-seat Convention Hall. But a lot of boxing followers expect a work of fistic art.

"They've put together a fight that's going to go down in the books," said Archie Moore, who was the undisputed light heavyweight champion from 1953 until 1960 and is one of history's great fighters.

The 69-year-old Moore watched the 26-year-old Spinks spar four hard rounds Wednesday in the quiet of a hotel-casino ballroom.

Also on hand was Eddie Futch, the trainer of Larry Holmes, who will be in Spinks' corner Friday night for the fight, which will be televised live by Home Box Office and on limited closed-circuit television in the United States.

Earlier, Braxton worked out in the noisier atmosphere of the lounge of another hotel-casino.

There was no smoking allowed — just drinking — during the training session. Tables were almost against three sides of the ring, and the bar was about 10 feet away from the other side.

Braxton, who says he is over a cold he had last week, also sparred four rounds. They were not as heated as the four Spinks worked, but Braxton was much more active than he had been on Tuesday.

"Spinks is a terrific hitter, with advantages in height and reach," Moore said of the World Boxing Association 175-pound class champion, who at 6-foot-2½ is 7¼ inches taller than Braxton, recognized as champion by the World Boxing Council. "He's had more fights than Braxton."

Actually Spinks, with a 22-0 record, with 16 knockouts, has had only one more pro fight than the 30-year-old Braxton, who is 19-1-1 with 12 knockouts. But Spinks was 93-7 as an amateur and won an Olympic gold medal in 1976, while Braxton learned to fight in prison and never had an amateur bout.

Texas behind in contracts

WASHINGTON (AP) — Department of Defense purchases of products and services plummeted in Texas last year, and the state yielded to New York its ranking as the nation's number two supplier for the Pentagon, studies indicate.

The studies, of prime contract purchases over $10,000, show that the Pentagon made over $6.87 billion in such purchases in Texas last fiscal year — or 6.6 percent of the total nationwide.

That's a drop of more $631 million from the previous year, when such purchases in Texas ran over $7.5 billion — or 8.6 percent of the nationwide total.

New York's share of such defense purchases, meanwhile, jumped to more than $7.7 billion last fiscal year from $6.5 billion the previous year.

Easily retaining the biggest share was California, where such contract purchases last year totaled more than $22 billion, or 21.8 percent of the nationwide total.

The Pentagon studies were of the net value of all Department of Defense procurement actions of over $10,000 for the fiscal year ending Sept. 30, including contract awards, job and delivery orders and price adjustments on contracts.

The studies covered prime contract awards, or contracts made directly between the Pentagon and suppliers. The totals include civil operations of the Army Corps of Engineers.

Of Texas' 254 counties, 121 benefited from such purchases last year. Among the counties benefiting most, and the amounts of purchases, were Tarrant, $1.9 billion; Dallas, $1.4 billion; Nueces, $411 million; Jefferson, $404 million; Bexar, $373 million; Harris, $319 million, and Taylor, $307 million.

Two Texas firms were listed among the nation's top 25 corporate recipients of such prime contract dollars last fiscal year.

They were Tenneco Inc. of Houston, whose subsidiaries in various states did more than $844 million in such business, and Texas Instruments of Dallas, which did more than $838 million.

New York, meanwhile, placed five companies in the top 25 and California placed four.

And while Texas' share of such contract purchases declined, California's increased dramatically last fiscal year, from $16.6 billion or 19 percent of the nationwide total the previous year.

The extent to which various states benefit from defense contracts has recently become an issue in the debate over whether to approve President Reagan's proposed 10 percent real growth in defense spending next fiscal year.

Republican Sen. John Tower, R-Texas, a staunch supporter of President Reagan's proposed military buildup, last month sent a letter to fellow senators challenging them to propose defense cuts in their own states, and received only six responses.

Tower said the reaction indicated that there is more support for defense increases than is generally recognized or that senators "clearly recognize defense spending provides a tangible economic benefit to their states."

Texas' other senator, Lloyd Bentsen, a Democrat who has called for stretching out defense increases over a longer period than proposed by Reagan, did not respond to Tower's challenge.

"We took it as a tongue-in-cheek device," said Jack Devore, Bentsen's press secretary. "I think he was trying to make a point."

Following are county-by-county totals of prime defense contract purchases of goods and services in Texas last fiscal year, which ended Sept. 30. Totals are for contract purchases of over $10,000.

Normally, the county is the area where the work is to be performed or the product finally processed. The totals do not reflect locations where work is performed by a subcontractor of the prime contractor:

Andrews, $84,000; Angelina, $1,275,000; Aransas, $1,301,000; Bandera, $95,000; Bastrop, $2,854,000; Bee, $3,040,000; Bell, $87,617,000; Bexar, $373,328,000; Blanco, $35,000; Bosque, $67,000; Bowie, $99,283,000; Brazoria, $34,076,000; Brazos, $3,960,000; Brown, $2,907,000; Burleson, $243,000; Burnet, $16,000.

STATE CAPITAL HIGHLIGHTS

By Lyndell Williams
TEXAS PRESS ASSOCIATION

AUSTIN—Several events building up steam in the Legislature came to a head last week as lawmakers scurried to find replacements for dwindling state dollars.

The hectic week began with Comptroller Bob Bullock's revised revenue forecast which was closely followed by Gov. Mark White's budget address to a joint session. Both officials recommended tax increases of different varieties.

At week's end, House Speaker Gib Lewis announced his own House Ethics Committee would investigate his failure to fully disclose his business interests.

Bullock trimmed $867 million from earlier estimates of state monies available for the next two fiscal years, blaming oil prices and sluggish tax receipts for the reduction in state cash.

His announcement immediately fueled the on-going debate of whether the Legislature should pass a tax bill or slash state spending. The Legislature itself remains visibly divided as Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby seeks a tax increase and House Speaker Gib Lewis stands adamantly against one.

Luxury Taxes
White, who earlier opposed a tax hike, told lawmakers he supported raising an additional $800 million in state revenue by taxing alcoholic beverages, tobacco and amusements such as video games and pinball machines.

The governor also suggested issuing bonds for highway construction, which got a mixed reaction.

All in all, White's budget is still over a billion dollars more than Bullock says will be available.

If White and Bullock can't agree on revenue estimates, it should come as no surprise to onlookers who have watched the pair jockey for position these past two months; it's no secret that Bullock intends to challenge White in the '86 gubernatorial race.

Special Session
Bullock has come out in favor of a nickel-per-gallon gasoline tax hike for increased state highway construction, perhaps the most palatable tax for legislators to levy and taxpayers to accept.

White avoided support of any tax hike as long as he could, and whether Bullock played a role in forcing his change of stance, White responded by suggesting tax raises for luxuries, or "sin" taxes as members sometimes call them.

But legislators don't want the political heat that a tax vote might bring, and could well fail to pass any appropriations bill this session.

Some lawmakers are already predicting a special session on the state budget as their best protection for Texas. By then, the price of oil will probably have stabilized, and lawmakers will have bought time to see whether Bullock's or White's estimates come closer to the mark.

Meanwhile, the Texas unemployment rate for February rose to a record 8.8 percent, a grim reminder to lawmakers that the economy is suffering, no matter who figures the budget.

Speaker Lewis
House Speaker Gib Lewis refigured his financial disclosure report and revealed last week he has 49 business interests not included in his original report.

Lewis, earlier caught heat from the press and some of his opposition colleagues for not revealing his business connection to alcoholic beverage interests amid charges he was sabotaging DWI reform legislation.

Last week's update revealed Lewis also has partnership ties with a horse racing lobbyist, which had gone unmentioned in an earlier financial disclosure report required by law.

Legally, Lewis slipped off the hook when the Travis County District Attorney advised that the law penalized a lawmaker for failing to file a report, but not for filing an incomplete report. Lewis will not be prosecuted, but the Ethics Committee will conduct a secret investigation.

The press also revealed that Lewis recently ordered dismantled a $100,000 sophisticated phone system in his office, which the state now has in storage.

House-Senate Fight
The Legislature narrowly averted a rare House-Senate fight last week when the House leadership retreated from a plan to change the way representatives sign up to sponsor Senate bills.

Tradition has the senator choose a House sponsor for his bill when it is considered in the House. The proposed change would have let House members sponsor bills on a first-come, first-serve basis. Critics of the plan charge it was a power grab on the part of House leadership to control, alter or kill bills already passed by their colleagues in the Senate.

Odds And Ends
—Both the House and Senate held committee hearings simultaneously on the controversial pari-mutuel gambling on horse racing bill before sending it to subcommittees for further study.

—A bill allowing gambling at Texas dog racing tracks was expected to be introduced shortly before the March 11 deadline for introducing legislation. The House began this week to debate bills on the floor.

—State Education Commissioner Raymon Bynum ruled that public school days must be at least seven hours for grades 4-12, and six hours 15 minutes for grades 1-3.

—White's two appointees to the Public Utility Commission ruled that they will oust the chairman, a Clements holdover, in favor of Commissioner Alan Erwin.

—Former congressman and ambassador Bob Krueger said he will run and soon formally announce his campaign against U.S. Sen. John Tower.

Man wanted in murders dies

WICHITA FALLS, Texas (AP) — Alaska authorities came to Texas looking for a solution to a spree of killings of young women. Now they will leave with more questions and another suspicious death — that of the man who confessed to the killings.

Thomas Richard Bunday, 35, told Alaska State Troopers Jim McCann and Chris Stockard Monday that he was responsible for five women killed during a two-year span, according to the two officers.

On Tuesday, 75 minutes after the arrest warrant that McCann and Stockard were awaiting was issued in Fairbanks, Alaska, Bunday was killed when the motorcycle he was riding slammed into a dump truck near Vernon, about 40 miles east of here, Texas Department of Public Safety troopers said.

Alaska state troopers at a Fairbanks news conference Wednesday refused to speculate on whether the accident was a suicide, but one investigator called the unexpected turn of events "mind-boggling."

McCann and Stockard said they arrived in Texas March 7 and Bunday, a career military man who was stationed at Eielson Air Force Base near Fairbanks until September 1981, admitted to them that he strangled and shot the women. McCann and Stockard said they could not arrest Bunday until they obtained warrants from Alaska. The warrants were issued at 2 p.m. CST, and Bunday was killed at 3:15 p.m., officials said.

Stockard said Bunday, a technical sergeant at Shepard Air Force Base here, was not under surveillance at the time of the accident.

The two troopers said they first interviewed Bunday as a suspect in January. They said his name cropped up initially among thousands based on car registrations derived from vehicle sightings near the crime scenes.

As investigators continued to sift thousands of leads, Bunday's name kept cropping up, they said.

"We looked at over 200 people and his name kept coming up," McCann said. Stockard and McCann came to Texas with search warrants to inspect Bunday's home in Burkburnett. They said Wednesday that the search uncovered evidence linking Bunday to the murders, but they would not elaborate.

Bunday had no prior criminal record, the troopers said. He gave no motive for the murders, they said.

Bunday arrived at Shepard from Eielson one month after the last murder, records at the Texas military base showed.

The bodies of four of the victims were found along a 25-mile stretch of the Richardson Highway between Fairbanks and Eielson. The body of Doris Oehring, who was last seen on June 13, 1980, was never found.

According to the troopers, the others Bunday admitted killing were:

—Glinda Sodemann, 19, of Fairbanks, on Aug. 29, 1979;
—Marlene Peters, 21, of Tanana on Jan. 31, 1981;
—Wendy Wilson, 16, of Eielson on March 5, 1981;
—Lori King, 18, of Fairbanks on May 16, 1981.

Bunday denied killing Cassandra Goodwin, 22, of Anchorage whose body was found in Hurricane Gulch off the Parks Highway about 150 miles south of Fairbanks, authorities said. Troopers previously said they thought her slaying was linked to the others.

The troopers said Bunday lived in a mobile home park near Eielson. He first was interviewed when investigator Sam Barnard transported a prisoner to Texas.

In old Japan it was believed that eating ginseng root would help ensure long life.

Cass County center of East Texas oil boom

By CINDY EDWARDS Marshall News-Messenger

LINDEN, Texas (AP) — Cass County, which lay beyond the edge of the great East Texas oil boom for more than 50 years, recently became the center of a new land rush fueled by two large discovery wells — one oil and the other gas.

Landmen grubbing for oil and gas leases have descended on the quiet little courthouse here in droves.

There are 50 or 60 researchers waiting each morning for the courthouse to open, and nearby a dozen more haunt the county's only abstract office.

When it was obvious that a little discomfort was no deterrent to the landmen's zeal, County Clerk Wilma O'Rand lined the narrow halls on the first floor of the two-story courthouse with borrowed tables and chairs.

"First, they were sitting in the floor of the halls," she said.

A block away, the three-room Elliott and Waldron abstract company is equally overwhelmed by the landmen.

They began coming about three weeks ago, after Cities Service Corp. hit paydirt with a well between Kildare and Bivins — a well reportedly capable of producing 1,880 barrels of crude and 300,000 cubic feet of gas a day.

That discovery, still considered secret by Cities Service, followed by a few weeks a Marshall Exploration Co. discovery near the Cass County community of Bloomburg. That well, rated at 119 million cubic feet a day, was the basis for a Darenco Co. announcement that it plans a 10 million-cubic-foot-a-day processing plant to handle the well's sour gas production.

Both wells were drilled to 12,000-foot depths and are on leases of 3,000 acres or more by the companies who drilled them.

Courthouse officials and abstract company owners have no estimate of how long the frenzy of lease-searching will last. However, it will probably continue until "every inch of land in Cass County is leased," according to one landman's prediction.

Mrs. O'Rand said landmen researching deed records in her office began coming in the morning after the new oil discovery was reported.

"They get here before 8 a.m. and leave as we lock the doors to go home," Mrs. O'Rand said.

She said the custodians for the small, two-story, white-brick courthouse used to unlock the office around 7:30 a.m. "We came in several mornings and the office was already full."

Now, the doors are not unlocked until 8 a.m. and there's usually a line out front of the courthouse, waiting to get in to start the day's work.

Cass County is on the Texas-Louisiana border midway between Marshall and Texarkana. Its courthouse holds a complement of tiny offices.

It is plenty big for a county of 27,000 souls, but cramped quarters for the advance guard of an oil boom.

"It has been a tremendous load on us. We can't get extra help at this time, so we'll just have to manage," said Mrs. O'Rand.

At the abstract office, landmen go in and out so fast, "it's unbelievable," Maurine Buckland said.

Mrs. Buckland and husband Waylon, owners of the company located in downtown Linden, now stay open on Saturday at the request of landmen.

"They're here when we open the doors and still here when we close them," Mrs. Buckland said.

She said the activity is "the biggest thing since the Bryant Mill Field," which was brought in around 1960.

"There were probably just as many people over here, but we had two abstract offices and they were divided between the two," she said.

The influx also has stirred activity across the street from the courthouse at Anderson's Bakery and Cafe.

"We have had an increase in business. It's helped the business the last two weeks," Juanita Anderson said.

"They are all real nice. We're always glad to see new people in Linden," she said.

"We don't see them that much," said Ronnie Bonner, owner of the Northside Pharmacy.

"But we have sold a lot of yellow legal pads within the last few weeks."

The Linden town square scarcely affords enough parking places for all the new visitors. Each space is equipped with a parking meter, but the landmen quickly adopted the local custom of ignoring the red "Time Expired" tags. "Shoot, they don't read the meters here, anyway," one member of the anonymous flock observed.

Landmen don't discuss their business because it's so competitive. They are reluctant to reveal their names, too.

A reluctant researcher said the swarm will remain fascinated with Cass County records until all of the land is leased.

Another agreed, saying, "my boss told me not to come home until I leased every inch of land I could."

Prices drop creating new questions

By JOHN CUNNIFF AP Business Analyst

NEW YORK (AP) — The drop in consumer prices from an 11.5 percent rate in 1980-1981 to just 3.9 percent in 1982 brings up as many questions as answers.

Was the drop due to planning or chance? Was the high interest rate "solution" to inflation one of the causes? Were the benefits of the decline spread widely or concentrated among a relative few?

A slowing in the rate of energy prices provided 2.2 points of the total 7.7 point-drop in the inflation rate, according to Data Resources Inc., which provides much of the arithmetic for economists.

There is no question that programs to diminish usage and step up domestic production contributed to the slowdown. Gasoline prices plunged. In the earlier period they had risen 26 percent. In the latter they fell 6.6 percent.

But the question that torments inflation-fighters is the extent of their contributions in comparison to those of OPEC, with flooded the world with unneeded oil and forced prices lower.

How much of the improvement was due to domestic planning? How much to poor planning on the part of OPEC and other oil-producing nations?

An even bigger contribution to the slowdown, some 3.6 percentage points, was made by the cost of home ownership.

Home prices and home maintenance and repair costs rose, though more slowly than earlier, but the category called finance-taxes-insurance actually fell by 4 percent — after having risen earlier by 22.8.

In the conventional thinking of economists, and in the practices of the Federal Reserve Board, rising interest rates are considered a consequence of inflation and an antidote to it.

A rise in interest rates also can be a factor, and that the removal of those high rates can contribute to lessening inflation.

Food and beverages, which lent 0.9 of a percentage point to the overall 7.7 percentage point slowdown, is the only other significant contributor to the slowdown, aside from the "all other" category.

The food-beverage and energy categories involve almost all Americans, but the home ownership grouping, which made the largest contribution to the slowdown, does not. Many people do not own homes.

Even more significantly, most people do not buy homes in any given year, and so are not subjected to interest rates, which in both periods had the most significant impact on any item but gasoline.

The question that arises is an obvious one: If relatively few people benefitted from the the biggest contributor to disinflation, is the consumer price index really a proper indicator of consumer prices?

The CPI shows very little contribution to disinflation from the clothing, home furnishings and medical care categories, which are shared by all people. A contribution, in fact, of only two-tenths of one percentage point.

Dr. Willis Carrier first laid down the engineering principles of air conditioning in 1911.

Musical Entertainment

Several of the Hereford Chamber Singers, under the direction of Bill Devers, provided musical entertainment for the 64th birthday celebration of the American Legion, observed by local members of the Legion and Auxiliary on Tuesday night.

Local members celebrate 64th birthday of American Legion

Members of American Legion Post 192 and the Ladies Auxiliary held a covered dish supper and meeting Tuesday evening in the American Legion Hall to celebrate the Legion's 64th birthday.

Special guest speaker was Jack W. Flynt of Dimmitt, past national commander of the American Legion.

Following the invocation, given by the Rev. Charles Threewit, post chaplain, and the meal, which was served by auxiliary members, Post 192 Commander Robert Lohr opened the meeting.

He presented a tie pin to Ira Ott, the post's only World War I veteran, and a corsage to Mrs. Ott and Mrs. Flynt. Cindy Barrett won the door prize for the evening.

Prior to Flynt's speech, Bill and Elva Devers and a group of the Hereford Chamber Singers presented several musical selections, emphasizing World War I songs and dedicating one number to Ott.

Flynt recounted some of his experiences during this past year as national commander, saying that he had visited 15 foreign countries and all 50 states. He recently presented the Legion's Distinguished Service Award to the president of the United States.

His talk traced the history of the United States' involvement in World War I and how the American Legion was formed shortly after that war when veterans returned to this country and experienced widespread hardship and displacement upon returning to civilian life.

Many veterans suffered from diseases and disabilities, said Flynt, and the United States was ill-equipped to take care of this large number of veterans and their dependents.

The first convention of the American Legion was held in Minneapolis and a Texas was elected chairman. A constitutional document was drawn up which sought to right the many wrongs being suffered by veterans who had served their country honorably.

Some of the major accomplishments of the American Legion, according to Flynt, have been the formation of Veteran's Hospitals across the country, the G.I. Bill of Rights, educating American children in the principals of democracy, establishing loans for buying land and homes, and enlisting the help of state and national legislatures in advocating adequate military strength.

At the conclusion of Flynt's talk, Lohr introduced zone chairman, James Jesko. Roll call of posts was conducted, including Tulia, Nazareth, Happy, Dimmitt, Hart, Bovina, Friona, and Hereford. Jesko announced that Hereford will be privileged to have the dedication of a historical monument in May, having to do with the remains of the chapel from the prisoner of war camp.

Beverly Jesko asked for volunteers to sponsor V.A. Hospital chapel services and announced an appreciation dinner for hospital volunteers. Sam Crawford announced the 18th District Convention to be held in Memphis on April 30.

Lohr noted that the next regular meeting will be held April 5 and the executive committee will meet March 25. The benediction was given by Threewit.

Commanders Honored

Jack W. Flynt, left, of Dimmitt was special guest speaker Tuesday night when Post 192 celebrated the organization's 64th birthday. Flynt is past national commander of the American Legion. Ira Ott, center, past commander of Post 192, was honored as the only local member who is a veteran of World War I. Also pictured is Robert Lohr, the current local commander. The 64th birthday cakes were made by members of the Ladies Auxiliary and presented to the Legion Tuesday evening.

Wealthy dog dies

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — BeBe had everything a gray miniature poodle could want. She had plenty of love, bones, a nice place to live — and a trust fund of more than $600,000.

Bebe was buried here Wednesday afternoon, five years after a California millionaire died and set up the pooch's trust in her will.

"I'm in a state of shock," said Naomi Karins, a part-time bookkeeper who served as the dog's guardian. "I'm really going to miss her."

The poodle died Tuesday in a San Antonio veterinary clinic and her final resting place is Pet Memorial Park, in an individualized casket in her own private cemetery plot.

Mrs. Karins had refused all interviews about the dog before BeBe's death.

"They're so many kooks in this world and they just might have snatched the dog," she said Wednesday. "She was worth a lot."

BeBe became a wealthy dog when the will of Bodie Cominoli, then 72, was opened.

Mrs. Cominoli adopted BeBe in 1967, when the dog was 6 weeks old.

The woman owned a posh supper club in Woodside, a San Francisco suburb, and died "a millionaire several times over," said Mrs. Karins, who was her niece.

Mrs. Cominoli had few close relatives and no children.

Classic apparel gives a professional image

COLLEGE STATION — Classically styled garments help the professional woman project an appropriate image for business. "With the competitiveness of today's job market, projecting this image is important," says Nancy Brown, clothing specialist with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service, Texas A&M University System.

According to Brown, a recent survey shows working women believe their manner of dress is important in creating a successful image, and most said that purchasing garments which project competence is vital to their careers. Of these women, 86 percent preferred classically styled clothing and were generally less influenced by current fashion.

Because classical garments are an investment that will last for several years, less money must be allocated to the clothing budget each year, adds Brown.

Classical designs, unlike fads, are seasonless. In women's clothing they are similar to men's tailored suits: simple, clean, yet elegant. There is no clutter and no direct focus, but rather a style that reflects a hint of authority.

To achieve a classic look,

Brown recommends emphasis on suits, skirts, soft blouses, blazers and jacket dresses to develop a slim and natural silhouette.

For a businesslike appearance use straight lines, restrained curves, and vertical movement, Brown advises. Avoid soft curves, small detail and pastel colors because they project a weaker, feminine image.

A change in lifestyle is always a little scary, especially when you really like what you've been doing. For Susan Robbins, who had worked since she was a sophomore in college, leaving her position in the schools was a tough decision.

"I loved my job and it was hard to quit," she comments. "I didn't know how I'd adjust, but this is the third year that I haven't worked, and I've loved it. I've been able to enjoy my own children and their activities so much more."

"I'll probably go back to work later on, though," continues Susan. "When you feel that you are contributing and that you're good at what you do, you naturally love it. I had always worked and gone to school, doing everything I could to stay current."

"I've always had a real thirst for knowledge and believe it's important to stay enthusiastic—not become stale."

Susan says that she hopes to go back to school next year when her youngest child is in school every day. "I may begin by taking some courses I've always wanted to take," she says, "without being under the pressure of a degree plan—probably things like literature, a taste of anthropology, and physiological psychology."

"Some day when the kids are pretty well grown, I may go back to Tech and get my doctorate. That used to be really, really important to me."

"I love to go to school, and I think you lose a certain amount of discipline when you leave college," she adds.

Susan earned her bachelor's degree in education from Oklahoma State University and her master's in counseling from the Department of Psychology at Eastern New Mexico State University.

Her husband, Pat, earned his degree in agriculture economics from Oklahoma State University. He is a native of this area, and is currently engaged in farming and owns cattle. The family resides on a farm south of Hereford. Susan, a native of Newkirk, Okla., has lived here almost 12 years.

She has taught second grade, fourth grade, and junior high school students, and has been an elementary counselor, a teacher of emotionally disturbed children, special education counselor, diagnostician, and associate psychologist in the schools, licensed by the Texas State Board of Psychological Examiners.

She tries to attend at least two conferences a year, even though she is not presently working, to keep current and to sharpen her skills. She just returned from a diagnostics conference in Dallas a little over a week ago.

Susan says that her favorite position was when she functioned as a diagnostician and associate psychologist. "I love psychology and I really like working with parents," she says. "One thing that is frustrating about that position, however, is not being able to follow up on a child—not having long-term contact. That's what I miss most being away from the classroom."

"I think that people who work with children, in any capacity, need to experience the classroom. You need that perspective, and I think it tends to fade when you're not around it."

Though not in the school classroom full-time now, Susan enjoys doing volunteer work one afternoon a week at St. Anthony's School. She works with first through third grade reading. She also does substitute teaching at St. Anthony's occasionally.

Susan teaches a second grade Sunday school class at First Baptist Church, where the family attends, and a fourth through sixth grade Girls in Action group on Wednesday nights at the church. "I love that contact with the girls," smiles Susan. "They are so enthusiastic and cooperative."

Susan and Pat's son, Randy, 10, is in the fourth grade at St. Anthony's School. He is involved in Cub Scouts, plays baseball, and takes piano lessons. Paige, who is 5 years old, attends the K-4 program at First Baptist Church. She takes Suzuki violin and dancing lessons.

Their two older daughters are Casey, a junior at Chickasha High School in Chickasha, Okla., and Courtney, a freshman at the University of Virginia in Charlottesville, Va.

Susan says just keeping up with what the kids are doing keeps her pretty busy. She is an assistant den leader for Cub Scouts, and Pat coaches a baseball team.

Susan goes to exercise class every day. "I love it. It really makes me feel better," she smiles. "We do something different every time." She also likes to swim and read, and attends a Bible study one morning a week.

The family enjoys snow skiing, spending time in Ruidoso when they can. "We all like to ski except Paige," says Susan. "She couldn't care less about going up the mountain."

Living out on the farm, Susan does a lot of canning. "Pat enjoys gardening," she comments, "and would like to have a greenhouse so he could grow fresh vegetables year-round."

"Pat and I both like to cook," she continues. "His favorite meal to make is breakfast. Randy is good in the kitchen too, for his age. It's nice that he has a daddy who thinks it's O.K. to be in the kitchen."

Susan shares two favorite recipes, Chicken Noodle Casserole and Chewy Caramel Bars.

CHICKEN NOODLE CASEROLE

2 (2 lb.) chickens
1 stick oleo
1 c. onion
1 c. bell pepper
1 can mushroom soup
2 small jars pimento
10 stuffed green olives
1/2 lb. velveta cheese
1 large pkg. noodles

Boil, cool and bone the chicken and save broth. Chop onion and bell pepper; add to oleo in pan and cook until tender. Add soup, pimento, green olives, and cheese to onion and pepper and simmer until cheese melts. Add chicken to this mixture.

Boil noodles in chicken broth until tender. Mix together noodles and chicken mixture. Place in one or two casserole dishes; top with 1/2 lb. Velveta cheese.

Bake at 350 degrees for 20 to 25 minutes. Can be frozen before baking. May use rice in place of noodles.

CHEWY CARAMEL BARS

32 caramels
Two-thirds c. (5 one-third oz.) Milnot (canned milk)
1 c. flour
3/4 c. quick oats
1/2 c. brown sugar
1/2 tsp. soda
1/4 tsp. salt
3/4 c. oleo
1 1/2 c. oleo

1 1/2 to 2 c. pecans, chopped
6 oz. pkg. chocolate chips
Put caramels and milk in double boiler. Heat until candy melts.

Combine dry ingredients; cut in oleo. Reserve one cup. Press remaining mixture into bottom of greased pan. Bake 12 minutes at 350 degrees. Remove from oven and sprinkle chocolate chips and pecans over baked crust.

Pour caramel mixture over chips and nuts, and sprinkle with reserve crumb mixture. Continue baking 20 minutes. Cool or chill two hours.

There's more to fashion than style shows and models.

Anne Winston, a name respected in the apparel industry as one who "tells it like it is" in the world of fashion, will take you "Off the Runway" every week in this by-lined column.

Most newspaper readers in America are more interested in what's on their favorite store racks than the latest decrees from Paris. However, realizing that Paris does influence those fashions found in your favorite store, Dior and Pierre Cardin will be covered in the Winston column.

As a result, future columns will cover such subjects as how a garment travels from designer's sketchpad to retailer's rack, new trends in fashion for the office, or how an overweight woman can shop for flattering swimwear.

So look for the Anne Winston column to take you "Off the Runway," every week in this newspaper.

Genetic 'superiority'

DEAR ANN LANDERS: You say the notion of "pedigree-matching" might lead to destroying all humans that are mentally or physically defective. I suggest you check your logic. Also your paranoia quotient.

If I knew I had the potential for producing a child with a genetic disease—Tay-Sachs, sickle cell anemia, Huntington's, whatever—I would think hard and long before having any children. People with genetic time-bombs should adopt if they want families.

I have a Mongoloid cousin. If she had a child it would be a tragedy. (She can't even take care of herself.) If she were destroyed, it would be murder and the world would be the poorer without her affection, good humor and flashes of wit. Yet, if I knew a child of mine would be like her, I would have myself sterilized.

According to your reasoning, animal breeders should stop the selection process. Then we could all sit around and watch dogs with hip dysplasia drag their hind ends, yelping in pain, and racehorses with thin foreleg bones breaking their legs at high speed. Get with it, Annabelle.—No Adolph

DEAR N.A.: You have missed completely the point I tried to make but I am prying your letter because you do say some rather sensible things.

As a trustee of the Hereditary Disease Foundation in Beverly Hills, Calif., I am vitally interested in genetic screening, but I want nothing to do with a system that matches people for reproduction based solely on their so-called genetic "superiority." In Germany 45 years ago, Aryans were considered "superior." Remember?

DEAR ANN LANDERS: A lot of professional musicians read your column. I hope this reaches the ones it is meant for:

Dear Fellow Road Musicians: For the thousandth time we have followed you into a motel. The management took inventory of the linen when they made our reservation. They don't trust us worth a damn.

The carpeting has cigarette holes and so does the furniture. There are a couple of half-empty wine bottles in the fridge. When we checked in they apologized and told us the damage was done by the group of musicians who occupied the same rooms just before we checked in.

Everything that can be moved has been screwed down — TV, lamps and bathroom scales. The pictures are riveted to the walls.

Many of us are respectable people with lovely homes and a good standing in the community. We have pride and want to be treated with dignity.

People like you give everyone in the profession a bad name. Talent does not set you above the rules of decency. Please clean up your act.—On The Road Again In Yellowstone, Mont.

DEAR ON THE ROAD: Many self-respecting, well-behaved entertainers are going to be insulted and infuriated by your letter. But I am printing it in the hope that those who need to see it will take it seriously.

Auxiliary members report services

Neighborhood services to King's Manor residents, by individuals and organizations, were reported at the semi-annual meeting of King's Manor Auxiliary in Lamar Garden Room Tuesday afternoon.

There were such things as visits to Westgate Nursing Unit on Valentine's Day by Dorothy Betzen, who took each resident a Valentine, and "adoption" of a resident, Maude Richards, by Wyche Extension Homemakers Club, which will give her special attention.

Lottie Wertenberger, who has given well over a thousand hours of service in crafts programs, was cited for services including cutting quilt pieces and helping Westgate residents make quilts, arranging travelogues each month to give residents glimpses of various parts of the world through the eyes of local travelers, and reading newspapers to residents with poor eyesight.

Also among reports was an activity by Cultural Extension Club, providing transportation for semi-monthly visits of a librarian to Westgate, to bring books for residents' use.

Betty Martin, auxiliary president, conducted the meeting which featured activities reports. Members were reminded that annual dues are payable now and may be mailed to Mrs. H.R. Cocanougher, 106 Oak. The auxiliary is always open to new members.

For the program Tuesday, four girls from Hereford High School Orators entertained with humorous selections. Brenda Barnes presented "Billy's Alphabetical Animals," Cheri Barker's selection was "How Beautiful With Mud," Carol Estes told "The Bear Story" and Angie McLain read "Joe and I."

EXCUSES! EXCUSES!

Jesus turned to His host. "When you put on a dinner," He said, "don't invite friends, brothers, relatives, and rich neighbors! For they will return the invitation. Instead, invite the poor, the crippled, the lame, and the blind. Then at the resurrection of the godly, God will reward you for inviting those who can't repay you."

Hearing this, a man sitting at the table with Jesus exclaimed, "What a privilege it would be to get into the Kingdom of God!"

Jesus replied with this illustration: "A man prepared a great feast and sent out many invitations. When all was ready, he sent his servant around to notify the guests that it was time for them to arrive.

"But they all began making excuses. One said he had just bought a field and wanted to inspect it, and asked to be excused. Another said he had just bought five pair of oxen and wanted to try them out. Another had just been married and for that reason couldn't come.

"The servant returned and reported to his master what they had said. His master was angry and told him to go quickly into the streets and alleys of the city and to invite the beggars, crippled, lame, and blind. But even then, there was still room!

"Well, then," said his master, "go out into the country lanes and out behind the hedges and urge anyone you find to come, so that the house will be full. For none of those I invited first will get the smallest taste of what I had prepared for them."

At Wits End

BY ERMA BOMBECK

Mothers are getting older in this country...even before they have the baby.

Some recent figures show that while teenagers are having fewer babies, the birthrate for women over 35 is increasing and will probably be up 46 percent during the decade.

I know, it probably sounds like a lot of fun having a baby who will sit around and connect liver spots on Mommy's arms, but in reality, there are a lot of problems older mothers haven't even considered.

For example, just when the baby is outgrowing his need for naps, you'll grow into them. When his teeth start growing in, yours will start coming out.

I've always felt there are two things a woman should never do after the age of 35: stand in a natural light and have a child who is learning how to play the trumpet. The aging process is not helped by a child who is learning how to play the trumpet.

Probably the worst adjustment will be when the babies grow into teenagers. For example, if a mother has a child at the age of 35, her son will begin to drive at age 16, making her 51 years old. Anyone knows this is too late for patience and too early to die. I have seen younger mothers carried comatose, their bodies rigid, their eyes glazed, from the passenger side of the car even before they left the driveway.

Probably the No. 1 complaint of mothers everywhere is exhaustion. Ask yourself how you will feel when you are going to bed when your teenager is going out and getting up when he is coming in.

I had children rather late. I'm not saying they crayoned on my Social Security check or took my electrocardiogram for Show and Tell, but there were times when communication between us was a glacier period apart.

It has thrown the entire traditional timetable off schedule. I will be the oldest grandmother in North America, if indeed I live to become one at all. There is no doubt in my mind I will race my grandchild for the baby food.

In Biblical and in Literary Classic times, mothers were 13 or 14 years old. Why? One can only speculate. The kids whinned, "There's nothing to do," until their mother gave them something. They wanted to have children before it interfered with puberty. If they set an example, they could have an empty nest by the time they were 28.

I know. It's a great temptation to have a baby covered by Medicare, but if it were up to me, I'd resist it.

Fastest Shovel in the West

Deaf Smith County residents have brought fame to Hereford and Wildorado by winning the McDonald Cup Shovel Race held recently at Sugarite Ski Basin, Raton, N.M. Pictured from left are Pierre Autry, ski patrol; Ricky Lloyd of Hereford; and Joy Fowler of Wildorado. Fowler raced down the hill on her shovel in 27 seconds, just three seconds shy of the world record. For her efforts, she won the first place prize money and was awarded the coveted McDonald's cup. Loyd, third place winner, brought home the original, not-so-coveted McDonald's cap.

Museum casualty of Texas budget

AUSTIN (AP) — Gov. Mark White says he won't back a state museum to celebrate the Texas Sesquicentennial, even if the project is divorced from Gov. Bill Clements' dream of a state art museum.

The Sesquicentennial Museum Board told legislators the museum should be built, but it should be a science and technology museum that will draw industry to Texas — not a fine arts museum that will have to compete in a crowded, "elitist" market.

"I think we have higher priorities that call upon our scarce tax dollars," Gov. Mark White said Wednesday. "One of those is restoration of our Capitol."

Last week, White struck the proposed $60 million museum from his budget plan, as did the Legislative Budget Board last December. After the Feb. 6 fire at the Capitol, White had proposed turning the whole sesquicentennial into a project "to restore the Capitol's original architectural integrity and beauty."

"I think that would be one of the greatest presents that could be given to the people of Texas for the celebration of the 150th anniversary of our independence," said White.

Two legislators are seeking funding this session for an alternative science and technology museum, but lawmakers have taken no action on either proposal and are not expected to in view of projections of possible tax increases just to cover current programs.

Even the Sesquicentennial Museum Board itself has decided the state does not need nor can afford a state art museum, but in an effort to save itself has suggested a science and technology museum — actually a permanent trade show.

In 1981, Clements told museum planners he wanted the museum to be "a first-class, top-flight facility — the kind of facility the Mellon family would donate a million-dollar art collection to."

But it did not take the museum board long to hear from directors of fine arts museums around the state who informed them that such an eventuality was highly unlikely.

The board's own analysts, the Management Strategy Group, reported last December that running a fine arts museum is not so easy.

La Feria couple indicted a fourth time

BROWNSVILLE, Texas (AP) — A case called "a comedy of errors" by a state judge moved closer to trial when a grand jury indicted a La Feria couple a fourth time in the murders of two people, one of whom allegedly tape recorded his own killing.

Paul and Sherry Wolf, both 21, were charged with murder Wednesday in connection with last summer's slayings of Mrs. Wolf's ex-husband and his fiancée.

State District Judge Darrell Hester had ordered the jury into special session to fix errors in previous indictments against the couple.

Calling the case "a comedy of errors," Hester admonished Cameron County District Attorney Rey Cantu last week for mistakes in three sets of earlier indictments against the pair.

The Wolfs are charged with killing Billy Staton and his fiancée, Leticia Castro, a fourth-grade teacher in Pharr, over a child custody dispute.

Evidence to be presented during Wolf's April 11 trial for the death of Miss Castro will include a tape recording allegedly made by Staton while he was being killed, Assistant District Attorney Ted Campagnolo said.

Prosecutors said Staton had strapped a tiny micro-cassette tape recorder to his body when he and Miss Castro went to the Wolf home last July to visit his 2 1/2-year-old daughter, Melanie.

POLLY'S POINTERS
Polly Fisher
Un-sticking waffles

DEAR POLLY - I have a Teflon-coated waffle iron that sticks. I've used oils and sprays, but they didn't help. Also, how do I keep it clean? - JEANNIE
DEAR JEANNIE - At last! Someone has asked Polly to surrender her favorite waffle-sticking Pointer (or is that waffle-nonsticking Pointer?). It always works, but you do have to be prepared to waste one waffle.
Prepare your batter and preheat your waffle iron according to recipe directions and the directions that came with your waffle iron. Then start baking the first waffle. And bake it. And bake it. I mean, leave that waffle in that waffle iron until it gets very, very, very brown. Not actually carbon-black, but too brown to eat. At this point, the waffle iron will no longer be steaming at all. You should now be able to easily open the waffle iron and remove this well-baked waffle. The most it should need is very gentle prying with a wooden spatula. Now you may proceed to bake the rest of your waffles, according to directions, to golden-brown perfection. You should have no more sticking problems. To clean the grids of your waffle iron (and I presume they are removable from the electrical unit as most grids are), soak them in hot soapy water for a few minutes, then wash them with a soft sponge or dishcloth. A soft toothbrush is useful for getting any little bits out from the grooves and channels. - POLLY

DEAR POLLY - Rather than buy an expensive dusting gun to use to apply insecticides to your plants and vegetables, take a narrow, tubular potato chip can with a plastic top and cut six or seven small holes in the plastic lid. Put the dusting powder into the can, replace the lid, and you're ready to dust. It does a very efficient job and the best part of all: it's free. - MRS. G.H.

DEAR POLLY - I've found that adding a dash of ground cinnamon to whipped cream perks up the flavor and makes a delicious topping for many desserts. - S.R.

HEALTH 'ICE' those swellings
Lawrence E. Lamb, M.D.

DEAR DR. LAMB - My son is 16 years old and likes to play basketball. He is a good athlete and we encourage him to be active. Last week while playing he sprained his ankle. Evidently he came down on the side of his foot. It swelled badly and there was some discoloration from bruising. He could walk on it and did so. He gets around on it fairly well but there is still quite a bit of swelling.
My husband wanted him to soak it in a bucket of ice water when he first got home but he would not and instead he went to bed and put his foot up on a pillow. I have always heard that ice was good for sprains but some of my friends say you should use heat. Which is correct?
DEAR READER - Severe sprains should be seen by a doctor. Sometimes there are injuries that can be helped by early intervention.
Your husband's idea of treatment is an old and disproved approach. The problem with the ice bucket is that the injured person sits up with the foot down. The position of the injured part is probably the most important home aid you can apply. Swelling is made worse by having the injured part below the heart. Bleeding is also made worse this way, from an open wound or from internal bleeding of injured tissue as from a bruise or sprain.

So your son was right to lie down and elevate his foot. The sooner this can be done for any injured part the less swelling will occur.
To help you remember whether to use cold or heat there is a word used in treatment of acute sprains, ICE. It stands for application of ice, compression of the injured area with a bandage if feasible and elevation.
Cold is usually best during the first 48 hours after injury. After that heat is better to warm the tissues and begin to regain function by proper stretching and mobility movements.
DEAR DR. LAMB - Recently my husband went to the doctor because he occasionally notices blood in his stool. This happens about once or twice every few months and I am very concerned about it. There is no pain involved, however, he does become constipated quite often.
Because he is only 23 and is in good health, the doctor he saw gave him some hemorrhoidal suppositories and did not seem to think there was anything to worry about. Shouldn't he have at least given my husband an examination? I am afraid that he may have some kind of tumor or some other problem that should be treated. Any information would be appreciated.
DEAR READER - Perhaps he did at least do a finger examination. But I must say that it is important to know where the blood is coming from. It is most likely from hemorrhoids but just because a person is young does not mean that blood in the stool is not important.
I would suggest seeing another doctor or visiting a proctologist or gastroenterologist. Various infections and inflammations can also be the cause of bleeding.

DEAR DR. LAMB - A 59-year-old man has been taking five to six assorted vitamin pills before every meal for about two years. They were not ordered by a doctor.
His personality and living habits have changed drastically since taking them. Is it possible they could be the cause of the change in him? He doesn't drink or smoke.
DEAR READER - A large intake of vitamins without a medical recommendation is usually not a good idea. A daily all-purpose vitamin pill may be just fine.
The answer really depends upon what is in those vitamin pills. If each one contains the usual amount of vitamin A and D he could be getting vitamin A and D toxicity. You are talking about 15 to 18 vitamin pills a day.
Of course, his consumption of vitamin pills and the personality change may both be a manifestation of other problems. He may have started on his vitamin binge because he already had changes.
In any case, he would be wise to see a physician and have reviewed the contents of all those pills he is taking.

Theater teaches health care, family planning

KATUBA, Zaire (AP) — Lounging under parasols, breast-feeding their babies, several hundred women laugh and shout at the actors in the lively tradition of African theater. When the play ends, it's the cast's turn to shout questions at the audience.

The play is "Kwashiorok," named for the protein-deficiency disease that kills tens of thousands of young Africans every year. The plot teaches mothers that kwashiorok, which produces bloated bellies, reddish hair and stunted growth, comes from malnutrition, not an infection.

Tribal societies have for centuries employed fireside narratives and other forms of theater to pass on tribal history, morality and beliefs about the origin of man. Now, from Nigeria to Swaziland, Africa is turning to theater to teach basic health care, family planning, conservation and problem solving.

It's been particularly effective in the countryside, where there is no electricity to run movie projectors and television sets.

Accompanied by guitar and antelope-hide drums, the cast of the Mwondo Theater tells the story of "Kwashiorok" in Swahili. It's not a lecture — the cast dances and sings, the crowd roars with laughter. African audiences like to get involved, and this is no exception.

The play is about a father who meets a prostitute in a bar and gives her his money. He returns home late and, when his wife won't open the door, he beats her. She runs away.

The next day, the father leaves his children with his sister, who has several children of her own and no husband.

"Mother, you know we never have enough. How can you let more people in?" one of the sister's children screams. Her children slap their cousins in the face when they try to eat.

One of the boys dies of malnutrition, and his father and mother accuse each other in his death.

A cast member steps in to say: "If a child does not have essential nutrients, he gets the type of disease the child died of. Also, you parents should not have so many children when you cannot feed them all properly."

He points at the audience and says, "There are women here who have twins but before they (the children) are one year old, (the women) are pregnant again."

The cast then asks the audience who was to blame, and a loud discussion begins.

Mobyem Mikanza, director of the National Theater of Zaire, which operates the Mwondo Theater, says the technique works "because many people are not educated. In the United States and Europe they can read books. Here they can't read."

"But with theater, they can see. They like drama. They like shows. This is why theater is so important. It can teach more than a book," he said.

In Swaziland, American foreign aid helps finance university theater workshops that produce plays designed to provoke the audience into discussing their problems and finding solutions, instead of waiting for someone else to do it.

Story lines are selected after villagers are polled, and often include joblessness, poor sanitation, alcoholism, family planning and the need for cooperation.

Botswana began a theater campaign in 1974 to try to overcome apathy in its remote northern areas. More conventional methods had failed. Zambia's Chikwaka Traveling Theater has operated since 1971, shifting its emphasis from scripted plays to local issues and improvised dramas.

The theater department at Ahmadu Bello University in the northern Nigerian city of Zaria has been working directly with farmers who develop plays themselves. The final production is viewed as less important than the process of creation, in which the farmers find their own answers to problems.

In one drama, farmers who were being kicked off their land to make way for a World Bank project acted out possible ways of seeking redress. Some farmers became so interested in the plays they began taking them to neighboring villages.

Students and amateur theater groups have performed similar plays in Tanzania, Uganda and Sierra Leone. And the Marxist Frelimo government of Mozambique has used theater to show villagers the problems and responsibilities brought by independence.

UPWARD BOUND Trends in State General Expenditures

SOURCE: Department of Commerce NEA/Mark Gabrenya

Education accounts for the largest segment of state government expenditures, and it is rising along with other major categories. In 1981, according to Commerce Department figures, the states spent $96.9 billion on schools, up 10.2 percent in a year. Other categories were up from 1.6 percent for highways to 16.9 percent for public welfare.

El Salvador plunged into darkness by blast

SAN SALVADOR, El Salvador (AP) — Leftist insurgents entrenched on the slopes of the battle-scarred Guazapa volcano blew up two primary electrical towers and plunged most of the capital into darkness.

The Wednesday night blackout came hours after an appeals judge said he has delayed the trial of four national guardsmen in the 1980 slayings of four American churchwomen. The judge told a lower court to produce more evidence.

The rebel dynamite attack was the latest sabotage in an intensified assault this week on the country's power grid. Guerrillas periodically have wrecked power installations in their 41-month-old war to overthrow the U.S.-backed rightist government.

Repair crews restored power to most of San Salvador after 15 minutes, but about a third of the country continued without electricity because of sabotage attacks that began Sunday.

Parts of seven of El Salvador's 14 provinces have no power, affecting at least 1 million of the country's 4.8 million people.

The towers are on the southern slopes of the Guazapa volcano about 12 miles north of San Salvador, but the blasts were so powerful that residents in the capital heard them.

More than 2,000 troops, led by 400 members of the U.S.-trained Atlacatl battalion, are engaged in an anti-guerrilla sweep over the slopes of the volcano, where the rebels have remained entrenched despite repeated attempts to wipe them out.

The Defense Ministry says that since the drive began Saturday the troops have killed at least 30 guerrillas. One of the dead was the president of the El Salvador Human Rights Commission.

The independent commission confirmed Wednesday that its president, 40-year-old Marianella Garcia Villas, was killed Sunday night in a combat zone near the Guazapa volcano.

But it denied the Defense Ministry's charge that she had become a guerrilla leader known as "Commander Lucia" and said she was "assassinated together with a group of 21 peasants fleeing from an army operation."

The Defense Ministry says her body was found with those of 21 other guerrillas killed while trying to ambush a military patrol near the village of La Bermuda.

The commission said she had gone into the area to investigate charges that the army was using chemical warfare in counter-insurgency operations on the volcano's slopes.

El Salvador's conservative government and the U.S. Embassy claim the Human Rights Commission is a front group for the Democratic Revolutionary Front, a coalition of leftist parties that works closely with the guerrillas.

Prosecutor quiet despite ruling

BROWNSVILLE, Texas (AP) — Assistant U.S. Attorney Jack Wolfe is keeping quiet about an investigation into voter fraud in Duval County despite a judge's refusal to issue a gag order.

U.S. District Judge Filemon Vela denied a motion Wednesday that Wolfe be ordered to stop making comments to the news media about his investigation.

G. Rudolph Garza Jr., attorney for Duval County residents who have been accused of buying votes, filed the motion to halt statements to the press that Garza said could prejudice a jury.

Wolfe has told The Associated Press that he aims to ensure all those responsible for buying votes in the county are prosecuted and that he expects further indictments in the case.

Vela refused to issue the gag order, but cautioned

Wolfe about making extrajudicial comments about the case in keeping with court-mandated guidelines, said attorney Jorge Rangel of Corpus Christi.

Wolfe refused to comment Wednesday about the motion or the effect of Vela's direction concerning dealings with the press.

Reporters from The Associated Press, Corpus Christi Caller-Times and The Brownsville Herald had been subpoenaed to testify about their stories concerning Wolfe's comments about the investigation, but none was called, said Rangel, who represented The Associated Press.

Rangel said he would have cited constitutional privileges regarding press freedoms in moving to quash the subpoenas had the reporters been called to the witness stand.

The action Wednesday was the latest involving the vote buying investigation in South Texas.

On Tuesday, 16 Duval County residents and three Brooks County residents were named by a federal grand jury in three indictments alleging they had participated in vote buying activities.
