WASHINGTON (AP) — Leaders of the Senate Budget Committee have hit a political roadblock over how much to raise federal taxes next year, slowing — and possibly jeopardizing — congressional approval of a federal spending blueprint for fiscal 1984.

In a day of dramatic votes taken in public and tense negotiations in private, the Republican-led committee deadlocked Thursday on how large a tax increase is needed in 1984 and in later years to offset the burgeoning federal deficit.

"We have been unable to arrive at anything that looks like a compromise," said Sen. Pete Domenici, R-N.M., the committee chairman, late in the day.

"We discussed a range of numbers," said Sen. Lawton Chiles, D-Fla., the senior Democrat on the panel.

Warnings of a budget crisis were echoed on the other side of Capitol Hill by House Republican Leader Robert H. Michel, R-Ill., who said that the entire process could collapse this year in Congress "and we may end up with no budget resolution whatsoever."

Michel raised the possibility of a revolt by conservatives of both parties and middle-of-the-roads to actions taken by both the House and the Senate Budget Committee in voting far less for defense programs than Reagan sought

"It's highly likely we will not get a conference report," reconciling the budget approved by the House last month with the one now progressing slowly through the Senate, Michel told a group of reporters Thursday night.

In a series of four votes on Thursday, the Senate Budget Committee divided into three groups: hardline Republican conservatives who will accept no tax increase at all, uncompromising liberal Democrats who insist on repeal of the third year of the tax cut and a middle group from both parties who will support the tax increases over the next five years as a means of reducing the federal

Some of those in the middle is Chile, who said unless taxes are raised next year to reduce the deficit, "We are jeopardizing the economic recovery."

Conservatives like Orrin Hatch, R-Utah, said the tax cut should be permitted to take hold so consumers will spend and invest the money they receive and the recession will end.

"Raising taxes is not a way to balance the budget," Hatch said.

Sources, who spoke on condition they not be identified, said Domenici by late Thursday had proposed a $7 billion tax increase for 1984. But Democrats found the figure too low and rejected it.

Nonetheless, private negotiations were expected to resume today, and some progress was possible before the committee's next meeting on Tuesday.

Until Thursday, the 22-member committee has been moving fluidly to set budget targets that other congressional panels are required to meet when they set the size and shape of the federal government for the fiscal year beginning Oct. 1.

The committee had agreed

Adelman's confirmation failed to end arms control debate

WASHINGTON (AP) — The 57-42 Senate vote confirming Kenneth L. Adelman as the nation's next arms control chief failed to end the dispute over whether his selection enhances or impairs chances for meaningful arms control.

In the aftermath of the Thursday vote, the culmination of three months of hearings and debate, President Reagan and Adelman called separately for bipartisan reconciliation to move arms control forward while some senators said the choice of Adelman makes such cooperation unlikely.

The Soviet Union's official news agency called Adelman "an outright hawk" and said his selection proves the Reagan White House is interested in amassing more arms, not controlling them.

Principal Senate opponents said Adelman prevailed because Republican senators who might otherwise have voted against him were subjected to intense presidential lobbying.

Some of Adelman's supporters said his victory puts clear responsibility on President Reagan to make headway in arms negotiations. They said they used their support to wrest concessions from the administration that were otherwise unobtainable.

The opponents maintain the administration's triumph in salvaging the Adelman nomination will turn sour as the Soviets move to convert Adelman's arms control views into a propaganda windfall in Europe.

Reagan told a news conference he hopes "that this positive step will mark the beginning of a new bipartisan consensus on the vital issue of nuclear arms reduction."

"I'm convinced that Kenneth Adelman will prove that the confidence which the Senate has expressed in him today is well-founded," Reagan said.

"And if we're met with reciprocal seriousness of purpose from the Soviet Union, 1983 can be a year of historic importance in securing a more solid and stable peace through arms reductions," the president said.

Adelman, who personally buttonholed many senators in his own behalf in the days before the vote, promised at a separate news conference in New York City to open immediate arms control consultations with key senators, including those who fought hardest to block his confirmation.

From Moscow, the Soviet news agency Tass labeled Adelman a foe of arms control and said his confirmation was due to "fierce arm twisting" by the White House.

All five of the Senate's contenders for the 1984 Democratic presidential nomination voted against the nomination and four of them spoke against it on the Senate floor.

Swift Independent Packing Company (SIPCO) President and Chief Executive Officer John A. Copeland Thursday told a group of Deaf Smith

County Chamber of Commerce officers and board members that he hoped that the local SIPCO plant "is being a good citizen," and that SIPCO officials in the corporation's main office in Chicago, "are very pleased with the way things are going," at the plant here.

Copeland, and three other top SIPCO officials, flew to town Thursday to meet with the chamber representatives and city officials for an informal noon luncheon at the country club. The trip was also Copeland's first to Hereford since SIPCO went through the negotiation process last year as it tried to purchase the idled Armour & Co. plant here.

In addition to the chamber reps, local dignitaries at the luncheon included Hereford Mayor Wes Fisher, City Manager Dudley Bayne, and bank presidents Jim Sears and Craig Smith.

The SIPCO head was introduced to the gathering by chamber president Bob Sims, who thanked the SIPCO people "for expressing confidence to move into our area and make a business go." Copeland told the chamber officials that his company appreciated the help the chamber provided in keeping the local plant non-union.

"We were overwhelmed by the response you people gave us in helping to keep this plant non-union," he said. "I have been in this business for 35 years, and this was the first time we've ever won a vote in a major plant."

SIPCO employees recently narrowly rejected a proposal to join the United Food and Commercial Workers organization on March 31.

The vote count in that decision was 181-171 against the proposal by Union Local 540. Copeland also cited the plant's productivity as a pleasant surprise for SIPCO officials.

"We are very pleased with the way things are going here. The productivity is up much quicker than we had planned, and that speaks well for the workers we have hired," he said.

"Again, we couldn't be

Space shuttle stranded in Texas

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — NASA officials monitored weather conditions between here and Florida today to determine whether the stranded space shuttle Challenger could resume its piggyback cross-country voyage.

The reusable spacecraft, fresh from its maiden five-day mission, glided into Kelly Air Force Base atop a modified 747 jumbo jet Thursday for what was supposed to be a 1½-hour refueling stop.

But stormy conditions scrapped plans for Challenger's one-day ride to Kennedy Space Center in Florida from Edwards Air Force Base just north of Los Angeles.

"We don't want to do any damage to the shuttle," said NASA research pilot Fitzhugh Fulton, who flew the jet that ferried the shuttle to San Antonio.

"Rain drops are like pellets when you're up there and have a very erosive effect," Fulton said.

NASA troubleshooters had considered flying over the Gulf of Mexico as an alternate route to Florida, but scuttled the plan after storms brewed up offshore.

Best quarter since 1952

Wholesale prices continue to drop

By SALLY JACOBSEN
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — Wholesale prices, driven down by cheaper oil, fell 0.1 percent in March and 4.1 percent in April, calculated annually, for the year's first three months, the government said today.

Energy prices overall fell 3.2 percent for the month, the fourth straight decline. Gasoline prices tumbled 6 percent and home heating oil prices dropped 7.6 percent.

For the quarter, energy prices overall plunged 34.4 percent at an annual rate. Not since 1976 have wholesale prices fallen for a full calendar quarter, the Labor Department said in releasing today's price report. The economy's January-March performance was the best for any quarter since 1952.

The report lent fresh support to economists' predictions that, for all of 1983, inflation at the wholesale level may be less than 1 percent, which would be the economy's best showing since the mid-1960s.

As for last month, food prices rose 0.5 percent, their second monthly rise. Vegetable prices soared 21.3

percent in an apparent reflection of bad growing weather in the agricultural regions of California.

Beef and veal prices rose 3 percent; pork prices were up 0.8 percent. Poultry prices tumbled 2.9 percent.

But the higher food prices were more than wiped out by the good news on energy expenses. The overall energy price decline outpaced the previous month's 2.9 percent drop. Energy prices had fallen 2.2 percent in the January report.

The only dark cloud on the energy front today was the 2.5 percent increase posted for natural gas prices. Those prices had risen 3.2 percent in the preceding month.

The energy prices reported today were actually for February; those calculations lag a month behind the rest of the index. Department analysts say energy companies report their prices too late for inclusion in the most current monthly measure.

Energy prices have fallen in recent months largely because of worldwide cuts in crude oil prices. But those reductions are not expected to trigger further retail price cuts; indeed, many oil companies have recently started raising prices to retail dealers.

Tonight's the night for filing returns

WASHINGTON (AP) — Millions of taxpayers are lining up in banks, accountants' offices and at post offices today to square things with Uncle Sam for another year.

Midnight tonight is the deadline for most couples and individuals to file their 1982 tax returns, and members of Congress seized the opportunity Thursday to assail the tax system as complex and unfair, and to offer their own plans for cleaning it up.

Sen. Bill Bradley, D-N.J., and Rep. Richard Gephardt, D-Mo., unveiled a refinement of their simplified tax that attracted widespread interest last year. It would wipe out most deductions, most people would pay a 14 percent tax rate and 70 percent of taxpayers would get a tax cut.

Sen. Dan Quayle, R-Ind., proposed a similar plan. And another proposal, by Rep. Leon Panetta, D-Calif., would allow a four-member family $13,333 income without paying taxes.

The system is "beginning to crumble under its own weight," Gephardt said. "But help is on the way."

Don't hold your breath. Sponsors of tax-simplification plans agree there is little chance Congress will approve any wholesale revamping of the income tax in the next several years.

In the meantime, between 5 million and 10 million couples and individuals faced the task of completing their returns and getting them postmarked before midnight.

The Internal Revenue Service estimated that instead of filing their returns, as many as 3 million others would file a Form 4868 with a payment of estimated taxes by midnight, and wait as late as Aug. 15 before filing a completed return.

When all 1982 tax returns have been filed, there should be between 96 million and 97 million of them, up about 1 million from last year. Close to 80 percent will get refunds.

If you think your taxes are a little lower, you're right — but not by much. The Tax Foundation, a nonprofit group, estimates the average worker will have to work eight hours a day through May 2 this year just to pay

It wasn't exactly a clash of Southwest Conference powers, but the Horned Frogs and Razorbacks took to the court in a Hereford & Vicinity YMCA basketball league battle Thursday afternoon at the West Central gym. The first and second grade girls played with all the intensity of their collegiate counterparts, however, with the "Hogs" notching a 14-4 victory. The game was the first for the young cagers to use a "mini-ball," which fit their petite hands a little better than the standard size ball they had been using. ## Video cattle auction a success

AMARILLO, Texas (AP) — When the auctioneer stepped to the microphone at the Amarillo Livestock Auction and began speaking at his usual 90 mph clip, the weekday auction fell into a familiar routine — minus the cattle.

Entire lots of calves and yearlings were being placed on the selling block, bidders' hands were waving frantically, and the competition was fierce to get the very best animals.

But there was not a single cow to be found in the auction ring. The stars of the event were on huge 40-inch television screens as the livestock auction conducted its first video sale.

More than 40,000 cattle — 10,000 calves and 30,000 yearlings — were auctioned Thursday as buyers competed for cattle that are being sold for future delivery.

"We were pretty pleased with the business," video auction director Jack Tompkins told the Amarillo Globe-News. "We ran all the cattle through, and the people at the auction seemed interested in the idea."

Not only were people in the auction ring interested, but so were buyers in Oklahoma City, Okla.; Jackson, Miss.; and Lake Placid, Fla. Television screens were placed in hotels in each of those cities, and buyers thousands of miles from Amarillo were able to bid on the cattle. The out-of-town buyers were linked to the auction through two conference call lines. One telephone line allowed buyers to listen to the auctioneer as he barked sale prices, while the other line allowed buyers to relay their bids to auction officials in Amarillo. Although no sales totals were available Thursday night, buyers in Oklahoma City and Amarillo were the heaviest buyers in Thursday's sale, while Mississippi and Florida buyers were a little more tentative, an official said.

"The folks from here and Oklahoma City definitely did the most business," Tompkins said. "But we didn't expect much action from Florida on the yearlings. They were fairly active when the calves were offered."

He said buyers from Mississippi also showed interest in some of the calves, although heavy rains in the Jackson area kept cattlemen busy on the ranch and away from the auction.

Boat grounded on rocks after storm Thursday

PORT MANSFIELD, Texas (AP) — A seismographic vessel remained grounded on rocks at a jetty today after a collision during heavy seas that forced the evacuation of 20 crewmen, officials said.

"I don't know what's going to happen to it," said U.S. Coast Guard Seaman Louis Ruiz at the Port Isabel search and rescue station.

A dispatcher for the Willacy County sheriff's office said the boat, owned by Western Geophysical Co., was resting on its side near the jetty.

Company officials toured the site earlier, but had not determined the extent of damage to the vessel, the Coast Guard said.

The Houston-based Western Gulf smashed into the jetty near this Gulf Coast community in stormy seas Thursday while exploring for oil and gas deposits off Padre Island, officials said.

Pounded by 12-foot seas, the 100-foot-long craft sent out a distress signal just before 8 a.m. as it was forced sideways onto rocks, the Coast Guard said.

There were no injuries, officials said.

A helicopter from the Coast Guard station in Corpus Christi aided in a rescue of two crew members. The others escaped by climbing a rope stretched precariously between the crippled boat and the jetty, officials said.

Bill to give more local control to schools passes

AUSTIN (AP) — Senators have approved a bill that educational officials have assured will finance public schools but avoid local property tax increases.

Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby said Thursday the bill would give local districts more control over expenses and would offer property tax relief.

The measure was the Senate's response to a House committee vote Wednesday night holding the line on salaries for schoolteachers during 1984-85.

Hobby said the bill was worked out by all major Texas educational organizations and would retain automatic teacher pay raises in current law, totaling 9 percent — or $923 million — over the next two years.

The bill also would provide that no district would receive less state aid than it is currently receiving.

"The most important concept" of the bill, Hobby said, would be the creation of an Education Excellence Fund, built on state tax money appropriated by the Legislature. This would be in addition to the Foundation School Program, which provides state aid to districts.

All districts would share in the excellence fund, with 35 percent going for "any legal purpose" and 65 percent for increases in salaries for classroom teachers and other school personnel.

Minimum salaries for teacher aides, secretaries and administrators, as well as teachers, would go up 1 percent a year for each $150 million appropriated by the Legislature.

Suit alleges Lewis formed sham corporation

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) — Texas House Speaker Gib Lewis and an associate formed a sham corporation to reduce Lewis' tax liabilities, a federal court suit alleges.

The suit seeks the recovery of $450,000 in debts owed by W.W. Shipman & Son Inc., a produce firm owned by Lewis and James L. Odum.

A petition of bankruptcy was filed for the corporation on April 8, 1982, court records show.

Rufus Garrett, a court-appointed trustee for the corporation, filed the suit Thursday in federal court.

Lewis said he was not aware of the suit and referred all questions to his attorney, Dee Kelly of Fort Worth.

Lewis' press secretary, Dick Merkel, told The Dallas Morning News that Lewis had been asked as recently as three weeks ago about the possibility of a lawsuit concerning his interest in Shipman.

But Merkel said if Lewis had any further comment about the suit, "he's going against my instructions."

According to the suit, the Shipman family operated the fruit and vegetable business for many years. Buck Shipman sold it to Lewis and Odum in 1973, with each holding a 50 percent share, the suit said.

The business was converted to a corporation on Jan. 20, 1981, and by the time it filed for bankruptcy protection last year the liabilities exceeded assets by $450,000, the suit said.

Ethel Merman 'stable' after brain surgery

NEW YORK (AP) — Broadway musical comedy star Ethel Merman was listed in "stable but satisfactory" condition today at Roosevelt Hospital after surgery for a brain tumor, a hospital spokesman said.

Miss Merman, 76, underwent nearly four hours of surgery Thursday and emerged about 1 p.m., spokesman Bernie Wisneski said.

The entertainer was hospitalized after she collapsed April 7, less than 24 hours after she had made her regular Wednesday visit to the hospital where she works as a volunteer, chatting and joking with patients. At the time it was feared she had had a stroke, but after several days of observation the tumor was diagnosed.

She was expected to remain in the hospital's intensive care ward several more days, hospital officials said.

Miss Merman's illness prevented her from making a scheduled appearance at the Oscars show Monday night in Los Angeles.

The singer, known for her belting voice, made her Broadway debut at age 23 in 1930 in the Gershwin musical "Girl Crazy," which featured the song, "I Got Rhythm."

In colonial Williamsburg

3-day summit may cost $6 million

WILLIAMSBURG, Va. (AP) — Colonial Williamsburg will be giving up a most sought-after commodity — tourists — when eight leaders of the industrial world meet in this restored 18th century capital to discuss the state of the 20th century world.

During the three-day summit beginning May 28, the restored capital of colonial Virginia will be closed to the public for the first time in its 56-year history.

President Reagan, host for the ninth annual Economic Summit of Industrialized Nations, wants "to try to change summits as they have evolved over the years to a meeting of a more informal nature," said Michael McManus, the president's summit administrator.

Because of security, the public will not see Reagan or the other leaders — British Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher, French President Francois Mitterrand, Canadian Prime Minister Pierre Trudeau, German Chancellor Helmut Kohl, Japanese Prime Minister Yasuhiro Nakasone, Italian Prime Minister Amintore Fanfani and Common Market President Gaston Thorn.

"About half the time the heads (of state) will be alone," without their aides or the press, attending meetings, said McManus.

They will be in elegant surroundings.

Colonial Williamsburg contains more than 130 original or restored 18th and early 19th century buildings on about 90 acres of gardens and public greens. It was John D. Rockefeller Jr. who in the 1920s provided $190 million to restore and maintain it as a historical monument.

Since Williamsburg was selected last summer, a White House staff of 70 people has been working on where they will put the eight leaders and their entourages, plus journalists and their electronic equipment. The entire operation is expected to cost between $6 million and $8 million.

"The most difficult problem that we've had to handle is the usually large number of press expected to attend," McManus said.

To accommodate reporters and support crews, expected to number between 4,500 and 6,000, a sports arena on the nearby campus of William and Mary is undergoing $500,000 worth of alterations.

With the federal government paying the bill, the college is adding air conditioning and improving the arena's electrical capacity.

A briefing platform will be constructed on the main floor, with eight briefing rooms, camera platforms and interview booths throughout the building.

To hold down costs, the Reagan administration is asking automobile companies to lend cars for the official delegations and is inviting fast-food restaurant chains to provide food for hungry journalists.

More elaborate meals are planned for leaders. President Reagan will host a state dinner, probably at the Rockefeller Folk Art Center, McManus said.

The focus will be on "traditional American meals," said Anne Haskell, a summit spokeswoman, with Craig Claiborne, New York Times food columnist, called in to consult on menus.

The eight leaders will be staying in the historic area, but summit organizers are keeping quiet on exact locations for security reasons.

In preparation for the event, telephone lines and extra power cables are being laid, more than 100 gardeners are sprucing up the grounds and restored buildings are getting fresh paint jobs.

The White House summit staff began moving its operation to Williamsburg this month and will be in place by early May.

Stock market rises with gasoline prices

By The Associated Press

The stock market continued climbing to uncharted heights, fueled by rising expectations of continued economic recovery and low inflation — even though gasoline prices are going up.

However, higher prices could reverse recent gains on inflation, according to analysts. Overall wholesale prices in March were scheduled to be released by the government today, along with last month's industrial production figures.

Stock prices, meanwhile, continued setting new records Thursday. About two issues rose for each one that fell on the New York Stock Exchange, and the Dow Jones average of 30 industrials gained 8.61 points to a record 1,165.25.

Big Board volume slowed to 90.16 million shares from 100.32 million Wednesday.

Reports Wednesday of higher auto sales in the first 10 days of April were considered optimistic for the economy. Traders have been concerned about sluggish consumer spending for cars and other durable goods.

The latest increases in wholesale gasoline prices, as much as 4 cents a gallon, come on top of a nickel-a-gallon rise in federal gasoline taxes that took effect April 1.

Dan Lundberg, publisher of the Lundberg Letter that keeps track of gasoline prices at 17,000 service stations nationwide, said "it is almost inevitable" that the wholesale price increases as well as the full tax increase will be passed on to customers at the pump.

The average retail price for all grades of gasoline fell from $1.30 a gallon in July 1982 to $1.12 last month, according to Lundberg. It stood at a record $1.38 in March 1981.

U.S. automakers continued to call back laid-off workers this week, with more callbacks planned next week due to industry plans to increase weekly production by nearly 20 percent from year-ago levels.

The five major domestic carmakers reported Thursday that 235,200 workers were on indefinite layoff this week, down from last week's 239,200 because of callbacks at the Big Three.

Temporary furloughs this week dropped to 6,006 versus 18,483 last week.

Meanwhile, Ward's Automotive Reports, a trade journal, said the companies are planning to produce 137,451 vehicles this week, up 19.95 percent from the 114,664 built a year ago, and a 9.4 percent gain from last week's 125,702.

So far this year, car production has climbed 32.8 percent over 1982, to 1,770,506 vehicles this year compared with 1,333,326 last year.

In other economic news, the number of Americans filing first-time claims for jobless benefits in the week ended April 2 fell by 11,000 from the previous week, to 487,000, the Labor Department said. But the total number of people getting unemployment compensation benefits under the basic 26-week program run by the states was 3,862,000 in the week ended March 26, up 19,000 from a week earlier, the agency said.

Baby's transplanted liver appears to work

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (AP) — Surgeons gave a critically ill boy a new liver early today, hours after his mother took him before a congressional subcommittee to plead for federal aid to cover the huge cost of transplants.

The child, 13-month-old

Brandon Hall of Walnut, Miss., was with his mother in Washington, D.C., on Wednesday when doctors found a liver for him from a 9-month-old girl killed in a traffic accident in Richmond, Va.

Clayton Braddock, a spokesman for the University of Tennessee Center for the Health Sciences, said the boy was taken to surgery at 4:45 p.m. Wednesday. The operation, expected to take seven to 12 hours, was continuing early today but Braddock said the liver had been implanted and appeared to be functioning.

Brandon's mother, Billie Hall, 38, testified before the House Science and Technology subcommittee about an hour after she was told that a donor liver had been found for her son.

"I was real surprised and happy and scared," she said late Wednesday as doctors operated on her son. "They say he's just doing real good. And I'm doing fine."

Mrs. Hall, who is unemployed and separated from her husband, told the House panel that federal medical programs must help cover the cost of organ transplants.

"There needs to be something done about Medicaid helping these children," she said in a tearful appeal. "It's so terrible to see a child die because he can't get the money."

Brandon, lying in her lap, could be heard gurgling fretfully during her testimony.

Residents of Mrs. Hall's amount approved by the Democratic-controlled House.

"I think we're going to have to increase taxes if we're going to be honest with ourselves," Andrews said shortly before the vote.

In practical terms, if the Democratic-sponsored $30 billion figure had been approved, it would have been necessary to call off the 10 percent tax cut which is to be felt in consumers' withholding rates July 1.

Sen. Lawton Chiles, D-Fla., the senior Democrat on the committee, said he also wants to repeal indexing, a change in the tax law designed to protect taxpayers against inflation, but which also will cut tax revenues.

In other votes, the committee rejected an outright freeze on any new taxes over the next five years, a proposal for a $36 billion tax increase in 1984 urged by liberal Sen. Howard Metzenbaum, D-Ohio, and another plan for a $2.7 billion increase for 1984 which Reagan would have supported.

to cut President Reagan's defense buildup in half and to increase spending on non-military programs by $8 billion over the president's recommendation.

1983 taxes. That's one day fewer than last year, due mostly to the phased-in reduction in federal income taxes.

Figured another way, the foundation estimates the average person spends two hours and 40 minutes of each working day just earning money to pay state, local and federal taxes. That is one minute less than last year. The federal share is one hour and 44 minutes — easily the biggest claim on earnings.

Housing takes 94 minutes a day; food, 67 minutes; transportation, 43 minutes; medical care, 35 minutes; clothing, 22 minutes; recreation, 21 minutes, and all other, including savings, 38 minutes.

The figures are somewhat misleading, however, because they assume that all taxes are paid by individuals and none by businesses.

More than half of all taxpayers hire somebody to help fill out their returns. And many of the last-minute filers apparently were making trips to the bank to open an Individual Retirement Account to lower their tax bills.

Auction

"Jackson had about five inches of rain, so the situation there really hurt the sale. But we still had a little activity out of them, too," he said.

Activity may have been slow in the east, but buyers in the auction ring seemed to embrace the idea. Future delivery sales have been devoid of competition in the past, since there have been few auction opportunities for such transactions.

Tompkins said in the past most future delivery sales were made at a cattleman's ranch as two or three bidders were brought out to survey the animals for sale. With a limited number of people bidding on the cattle, prices generally were kept down by the lack of competition.

Pee Wee Friemel, a buyer from UMBERGER, said he thought the sale would offer both cattlemen and buyers opportunities unavailable before the advent of video sales.

"I think this has got its place," he said. "You get to see more cattle than you normally would. It'll never replace the regular sale if you want cattle for immediate delivery, though."

Friemel said he wanted to buy a lot of about 100 cattle for his ranch to help him graze on some of his excess wheat. He said he liked the cattle on sale, but questioned the accuracy of the video pictures of the animals.

"You've got to wonder if maybe they don't look a little better on video than they are in real life. It's just like a person on camera. A girl might look real pretty on a television show, but if you saw her in real life she might not look as good," he said.

Despite the lingering questions about electronic sales, Tompkins was encouraged enough by Thursday's sale to schedule another video auction for May 12.

Tompkins said the second auction will originate from Amarillo and retain a sales outlet in Oklahoma City, since the two cities are the largest feeder cattle markets in the nation.

He said he was unsure whether the two other outlets will remain in the Southeast.

He expected the other sites to shift as the cattle offered for sale shifted. Thirty-two of the more than 100 lots offered for sale were from Florida, creating interest from the Southeastern cities. The remaining 70 lots were from Texas, Oklahoma, New Mexico and Arizona, he said.

Color analyst gives 4-H clothing program

The 4-H Clothing Club program was presented recently at the Community Center by Lori Stevens, of Amarillo color analyst and class instructor. There were 17 4-H members and parents present for the program.

Miss Stevens shared some advantages of a color analysis, some being: 1) save time, effort and money while shopping by knowing your correct colors, lines, designs and textures; 2) your wardrobe begins to expand with each piece being color coordinated; 3) discover new colors for you; 4) learn to adapt your individual look to current trends and fashions; 5) learn which colors are your dramatics, elegants, romantics or neutrals; and 6) learn the direct connection between your coloring and your inner essence or personality.

She also discussed the four basic harmony groups: the lively spring, subtle summer, dynamic fall and winter.

Lori has her art degree in interior design from Bauder Fashion College in Arlington. Her education also includes the Fashion Institute of Design and Merchandising in San Francisco and intense color study with Veronica Bralik, Color Consultant and Designer for Textile Designs, San Francisco.

Educational programs conducted by the Texas Agricultural Extension Service serve people of all ages regardless of socio-economic levels, race, color, sex, religion or national origin.

Ann Landers Feeling confined

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I am 19 years old, have four brothers and we are strict Italian Catholics. I have a 9 p.m. curfew and am not allowed to go with a boy unless one of my brothers goes along.

No young man is anxious to take out a girl a second time if he knows her brother is going to chaperone. We can't even carry on a normal conversation. The two guys end up talking sports and I just sit there.

I have asked my mother how will I find a husband if I am not allowed to look for one. She says, "Good girls don't look for husbands. A respectable boy will find you."

My father is very jealous of any boy who speaks to me in church. When a fellow asked if he could walk me home my father said, "She knows the way home." The fellow never looked at me after that.

Can you help? — Too Protected In Queens

DEAR QUEENS: A 19-year-old girl should have a great deal more freedom than you are getting unless she has proved she can't handle it. Ask an enlightened young priest to intervene on your behalf.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I read recently that tooth implants may make bridgework obsolete in the near future. Craig R. Hassler, a physiologist at Battelle Memorial Institute at Columbus, Ohio, and Robert H. Downes of Ohio State University College of Dentistry have developed an artificial tooth root that can be implanted into the jawbone.

Hassler and Downes have been testing the implants on volunteer patients for four years and have had an 80 percent success rate. The artificial root is made of cement-fired alumina. The root, which is tapped into a socket formed in the patient's jaw (with local anesthetic), remains in the jaw from three to six months. During that time the bone grows into the grooves of the root and is locked into place permanently. A crown can then be fitted on top of the artificial root after a dental post and core are cemented into it.

There are so many of us older folks who would be thrilled if this procedure could be done on us. Please look into it. — Over 65 In Portland, Ore.

DEAR OVER: I checked with one of the country's most distinguished authorities, Dr. Paul Goldhaber, dean of Harvard School of Dental Medicine. Dr. Goldhaber said: "In recent years, alumina tooth root implants have demonstrated promising results, but they are still in the experimental stage. Although Dr. Hassler's 80 percent success rate is encouraging, one of the problems with ceramic alumina as an implant material is its brittleness."

Currently there are many other types of dental implants available. The American Dental Assn. recognizes their value. However, the association still considers dental implants too new for routine use.

A list of dentists who treat patients with dental implants is available from the American Academy of Implant Dentistry, 515 W. Washington St., P.O. Box 2002, Abington, Mass. 02351.

The Consumer Alert

by Jim Mattox
Attorney General

AUSTIN—Thinking of buying a new car? After shopping around, many Texans may find the cost of a new car prohibitive and decide to purchase a "nice" used car.

A used car may provide inexpensive and reliable transportation. On the other hand, many consumers may find a used car provides them with many a sleepless night.

Consumers should be especially wary when buying a used car. The Consumer Protection Division of my office is constantly receiving complaints from used car purchasers involving problems which could have been easily avoided by following a few simple suggestions.

Unlike a new car, used cars usually are not covered by warranties of any kind. In reading a contract to purchase a used car, look for a clause disclaiming warranties. Many times this may be in the form of an "As Is" clause. This simply means that the car is sold "as is" and the owner is making no claims as to the reliability of the vehicle.

The effect of this clause is that the consumer will probably have to pay for any repairs to the car regardless of when they occur. Always ask if the seller provides a warranty. If a warranty is provided, ask what it covers, how long it is for, who can perform repair work under it, and always get it in writing.

There are several other steps you can take to protect yourself when purchasing a used car. First, have an independent, experienced mechanic check the car for you to ascertain the condition of the vehicle.

Mexican customs halt food inspections

EL PASO, Texas (AP) — Americans shopping in Juarez are once again being allowed to buy groceries in small quantities and take them north across the border, but Mexican officials say an export ban imposed last fall is still in effect.

Motorists leaving Mexico on the international bridges with a "family shopping basket" of goods were allowed to pass freely on Thursday — in sharp contrast to a total ban that was in effect in Juarez the past two weeks.

Only large exports of basic goods by motorists were prohibited when a nationwide ban took effect last fall in Mexico, but the Juarez customs office started an unannounced crackdown March 30 with car-by-car inspections and confiscation of all basic goods.

However, Juarez business and industry representatives took their complaints to Mexican customs director Javier Garduno Perez in Mexico City Wednesday.

Garduno issued a directive Thursday ordering an end to the local policy that had been put into effect at the Juarez-El Paso bridges.

"Economic activity was reduced in the city by 50 percent," Artemio Jayme Salazar, president of the Juarez Chamber of Commerce, told the El Paso Times.

"It was not just the grocery stores, but hairstylists, auto repair shops and liquor sales were hurt," Jayme said.

After Garduno's action, Juarez customs director Luis Gutierrez y Gonzalez warned that Americans still should not try to take large amounts of basic goods out of Mexico. There will be occasional inspections, and people with large amounts of goods will be asked to return them to the store, he said.

Third, ask for odometer statements and check the mileage indicated with previous owners and the back of the inspection sticker on the vehicle.

Finally, do not be rushed by an overzealous salesperson. Consumers should always take their time to shop around, read all papers involved in a sale, ask questions concerning the warranty and be certain that everything is filled out properly.

To obtain information on the reliability of a particular model, according to surveys of consumers, see the "Annual Auto Issue" (usually in April) of Consumer Reports.

For information on performance tests and specifications of a car, look in the back issues of Consumer Reports in your public library until you find the issue reporting on the year and model car you are interested in.

For general information on purchasing and maintaining any car, including "crashworthiness" test results, you can obtain free a 68-page book called The Car Book by writing to U.S. Department of Transportation, National Highway Traffic Safety Administration, Washington, D.C. 20590.

For a more complete guide, order The Lemon Books ($7.95 + $6.00 postage) from The Center for Auto Safety, 1223 Dupont Circle Building, Washington, D.C. 20036.

By following these few simple suggestions, you may obtain several years of reliable transportation and avoid the headaches of costly and time-consuming repairs. Should you encounter problems with your used car or a seller of a used car, contact our Consumer Protection Division Regional Office nearest you.

Cholesterol research now being conducted

A nationwide study to determine whether lowering cholesterol reduces the risk of a second heart attack is continuing at four regional medical centers. The program is supported by the National Institutes of Health and has more than 700 volunteers from throughout the country.

The Midwest Center is located at the University of Minnesota in Minneapolis with Dr. Henry Buchwald as the principal investigator for the project.

With heart disease the No. 1 cause of death in the United States, researchers feel that it is essential to have an answer to the cholesterol question.

The Midwest Center is still accepting volunteers for a short period of time. Persons under age 65 who have had their first and only heart attack within the past five years, and have not had heart surgery, a stroke or diabetes, may qualify.

Mexican Archbishop defies law barring clergy

HERMOSILLO, Mexico (AP) — Like all clergymen in Mexico, Monsignor Carlos Quintero Arce is bound by the country's constitution to stay out of politics — not even speak publicly of them. Nevertheless, he speaks out.

The 63-year-old archbishop of the capital of this northern state says the church must be the voice of the people and Roman Catholics must see that the laws of their country do not conflict with the moral laws of the Gospel.

"There is separation of church and state in Mexico and that is a good thing," the monsignor said in a recent interview, "but Christians must participate in the political and social process. The Christian must commit himself to being, through his faith, a light to the world."

The Mexican constitution strips the clergy of the right to vote or participate in politics. Any statement by a bishop is interpreted here by many politicians as interference by the church in matters legally beyond its jurisdictions.

Quintero Arce considers this attitude a legacy of the violent years of revolution and the 19th century reform laws that did away with many of the rights of the church.

This is being overcome slowly, he maintains.

"The church does not seek to control the state," he said. "It does not seek power. The words and the attitude of the bishops are only to light the path of the people."

"The church is neither leftist nor rightist. It is evangelical. It opposes capitalism and it opposes collectivism because both go against the dignity of man."

Although not an arbiter of politics, Quintero Arce is a respected voice throughout the country and state politicians have been known to visit him for long chats.

Unlike other Mexican bishops, Quintero Arce does make statements on political issues.

Speaking of President Miguel de la Madrid's campaign for "moral renewal," Quintero Arce claims that corruption at all levels continues to be a Mexican plague and contends that people are not convinced of the government's good intentions because there has been no attempt to investigate officials of previous administrations.

Earlier this year, the attorney general's office in Mexico City said it investigated but rejected allegations that de la Madrid's predecessor, Jose Lopez Portillo, diverted public funds "for individual or improper uses."

"We must have an attitude of honesty in the public and private sector. We cannot have again the reports of millions of dollars stolen in Pemex, (the state-owned oil monopoly), for instance, or in any of other state agencies."

Quintero Arce holds that Mexicans are now mature enough politically to "demand a more active participation in the political and social process."

Kohl meets with Reagan at 11 a.m.

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan and West German Chancellor Helmut Kohl see "eye-to-eye" on the need to deploy U.S. missiles in Europe this year if agreement is not reached with the Soviets to bar all missiles, U.S. and West German officials say.

Kohl and Reagan planned to confer at the White House today, with much of their talk expected to focus on plans to deploy U.S. cruise and Pershing II missiles in West Germany and elsewhere in Europe.

West German sources said Kohl will want assurances from Reagan that the United States is negotiating seriously with the Soviets at Geneva toward an agreement to restrict missile deployment in Europe. U.S. officials said Reagan will give those assurances.

The meeting, their first since Kohl led his Christian Democratic Party to victory in West Germany's March 6 parliamentary elections, was scheduled to last 2 1/2 hours.

Invited by Reagan, Kohl arrived Thursday night for what was described as a 24-hour working visit. The two leaders also met in Washington in November.

Senior U.S. officials who briefed reporters on the visit said the two leaders would discuss NATO's plans to deploy U.S. missiles in Europe later this year, U.S.-European and East-West trade issues and plans for the seven-nation economic summit conference in Williamsburg, Va., May 28-30.

The Geneva arms talks are scheduled to resume on May 17. One official said Reagan and Kohl would discuss the U.S. negotiating strategy in detail and try to anticipate Soviet moves at Geneva and in efforts to foment anti-missile sentiment in Europe.

Besides West Germany, NATO missiles also may be deployed in Britain, Italy, Belgium and the Netherlands.

Kohl is making the trip partly as a representative of the European Common Market countries. The United States and the Common Market currently are at odds over European subsidies on farm exports, which American farmers say unfairly deprive them of markets.

In another area of disagreement, the Kohl government has been opposed to President Reagan's hard-line approach to East-West trade aimed at discouraging European sales of technology to the Soviet Union.

Otto Lamsdorf, the West German economics minister, has said Reagan's idea for restricting East-West trade will worsen record unemployment in Europe.

"There are some obvious differences... but we are confident we can work these problems out," said a senior State Department official who briefed reporters at the White House on the understanding he would not be identified.

Regarding the missile issue, government sources in Bonn said Kohl will stress West German hopes for an interim agreement at the U.S.-Soviet arms talks in Geneva.

Peace marches protesting the NATO deployment plan drew some 750,000 participants in West Germany over the Easter weekend, according to organizers. The Kohl government hopes to limit the protests by convincing the German people that the United States is engaged in serious negotiations with the Soviets.

Anti-nuclear protests are expected to pick up steam throughout Europe as the deployment dates approach.

Carla was once a real one

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Rhea Perlman, who plays cocktail waitress Carla Tortelli on NBC's "Cheers," once served spaghetti to friends of former Chase Manhattan Bank chairman David Rockefeller.

Well, more or less. What actually happened was that she dropped the food all over them.

The petite actress was waiting tables in the Rainbow Grill at the top of the RCA building in New York — the corporate headquarters of NBC.

"It's a private club for hot-shots," she said. "They had all kinds of rules. I was used to working in a regular place. One day I was serving some friends of David Rockefeller. The kitchen was three floors down and you had to carry the food up three flights of stairs on heavy silver trays."

"My arms were tired and I couldn't put the tray down on the little thing they had for it. I dumped spaghetti, fish and everything all over Mr. Rockefeller's friends. They had me out of there so fast. It was like the cartoon of the little dog being kicked out the back door."

It's an embarrassing experience Miss Perlman owns up to. On the other hand, Carla, earthy and acid-tongued, would probably regard it as a highlight.

Carla is the Greek chorus on "Cheers," a comedy series set in a sports-oriented bar in Boston.

Down on the farm, crime provides big profits, little risk

DES MOINES, Iowa (AP) — Modern-day rustlers are finding easy pickings in the Midwest. Pull a chain, and $50,000 worth of grain comes pouring down a chute. Force a door, and $100,000 worth of herbicide fills a truck.

Down on the farm, it's here a theft, there a theft, everywhere a big theft, and millions of dollars of goods are vanishing into a vast agricultural market stretching from Canada to Mexico.

Once gone, there's little hope of tracing the grain, chemicals, hogs, cattle, tractors or the thieves who stole them, officials say. The goods turn up at the slaughterhouse, shipping terminal and country store — with little chance of figuring out what was stolen and what was not.

"It's a low risk situation," said Gerald Shanahan, director of the Iowa Division of Criminal Investigation. "It's done in rural areas where no one sees them, it doesn't take long to steal the stuff, and by the time the theft is reported, if it's reported, the thieves are long gone."

"If you compare this stuff to bank robbery, you see that the risk is much lower and the take much greater," Jim Lovelace, a special agent with the Omaha office of the FBI, said Thursday. "Bank robbers usually don't get very much money, there are witnesses, and hidden cameras mean their faces will be all over the evening news.

"On the other hand, the guy who steals grain or chemicals usually doesn't have any of that to trouble him, and the stuff is valuable," Lovelace said. "We've seen farm thefts of chemicals worth $300,000 in one shot."

"No one seems to keep statistics on this kind of theft, but in my opinion it has to be in the multimillion-dollar range," said Dick Bacon, special agent in charge of the organized crime unit of Minnesota's Bureau of Criminal Identification. "Everytime they go into a place they leave with $100,000 worth of goods, whether it be herbicide or soybeans."

"We're only catching a small percentage of them, and those who are caught usually get off easy," Bacon said.

The FBI is involved because the stolen goods cross state lines. "It's hitting everywhere," said Herb Hawkins, special agent in charge of the bureau's Omaha office. "We have some ongoing cases of chemical thefts from Minnesota to Oklahoma. They steal the stuff in one state and try to sell it two states away."

Authorities in Iowa, Illinois, Minnesota, Kansas and Missouri say the thefts are acts of small bands of rustlers working within rural crime networks of hundreds of people.

Chemicals — herbicides and fertilizers — are valuable targets. Some herbicides sell for as much as $70 a gallon, and a twin-trailer truck can haul 800 to 900 cans.

Trevino claims he'll win again

HILTON HEAD ISLAND, S.C. (AP) - It's coming to an end, Lee Trevino, said, those two years of frustration that made him a non-winning also-ran and even prompted thought of quitting competitive golf.

"It never crossed my mind that I might not win again," the 43-year-old Trevino said Thursday after he had played the back nine in a course record-matching 30 on the way to a 66 and a share of the first round lead in the $350,000 Sea Pines Heritage Classic.

"I'll win again this year. No question in my mind about it," Trevino said, then flashed that famous grin.

"And it might be a biggie. Yeah, it might be one of the biggies. I just might jump up and sting somebody."

He stung the 6,650-yard Harbour Town Golf Links — which he called his favorite course in the world — with six 3's on the back nine as he barged out of the pack late on a cloudy day and tied South African Mark McNulty and young Jodie Mudd for the top spot.

A single stroke off the lead at 67 were Donnie Hammond, Bob Eastwood, Larry Mize and Fuzzy Zoeller, the former Masters champion who twice holed from off the green.

Ben Crenshaw, who did not have a bogey in his round, topped the big group at 68. Also at that figure in the scoring that was exceptionally low for this course, were Steve Hart, Morris Hatalasky, Dan Forsman, Mac O'Grady, Jim Nelford and Scott Simpson.

Tom Watson, the defending champion and current holder of the U.S. and British Opens, struggled to an erratic 74 and was in danger of not qualifying for the final two rounds Saturday and Sunday.

"I had four 6's," Watson said. "That's good in poker, not so good in golf." His round included an eagle-3, four birdies, three double bogeys and three bogeys.

Trevino's string of 14 consecutive seasons in which he had won at least once, a streak that started with his 1968 U.S. Open triumph, ended last year as he struggled through the worst season of his career.

He played in near-constant pain and eventually, late in the summer, had surgery on his back.

"I told you at San Antonio that if the back didn't get better I might quit," Trevino said.

"Well, the back is 100 percent now. I can play again. And I'm ahead of schedule. Off this round, I'm ahead of where I figured to be.

"I have to play a lot to play good. I have to play and practice a lot. That's why I never play good in the spring. It's too cold. And there isn't enough daylight for me to practice enough."

"This year, I've had a lot of television. And that's cut it down even more."

"But after the next couple of weeks, the TV schedule gets lighter. I start my real playing schedule at Houston (May 5-8)."

Schlichter bitten by the betting bug

By WILL GRIMSLEY AP Special Correspondent

It is a little chilling when you pick up a paper and see that Art Schlichter, a Baltimore Colts quarterback out of Ohio State, is caught up in a gambling mess.

It doesn't involve betting on football or throwing games. It's a case of getting bitten by the betting bug — not so rare a malady in this get-rich-quick society of ours — falling into a mud puddle over his head and finding himself involved with some shady company.

What makes the scene so unusual is that it doesn't involve a bunch of hardened jockeys, conspiring to fix a horse race; an old pro football player down on his luck or — as in the widespread college basketball scandals of the 1950s and 1960s — a bunch of gullible kids picking up little more than pocket change to shave points for some wheeler-dealers.

Art Schlichter epitomizes the "All-American Boy." He grew up on the outskirts of Columbus, Ohio, the son of a well-to-do soybean and corn farmer. As a teen-ager, he never had to wait for anything. When he graduated from high school, his dad bought him a car.

An outstanding athlete, Art was courted by many colleges but he enrolled in the one that stirs the blood of every Ohioan — Ohio State. How could you refuse when you're recruited by the man himself, Woody Hayes?

The rest of his college career was the stuff you read in those pulp sports books. When the Ohio State Buckeyes trotted out of their opening game in 1978 it wasn't Rod Gerald, who had led the team to two consecutive Big Ten titles, at quarterback but the rookie, Art Schlichter, calling signals.

Upon graduation, he was picked by the Baltimore Colts in the first round of the NFL draft and given a contract for $200,000 a year. His future appeared secure.

Then, last week, the roof fell in. He reported that he had lost $389,000 to bookies betting on sports, still owed quite a bit of that and was being pressured to pay up. He went to the FBI and reportedly helped in an investigation which led to the arrest of four men who were charged with illegal gambling activities.

It is naive to think that sports, amateur or professional, should be insulated from everyday temptations and greed. Athletes are as vulnerable as the stock clerk and the banker. When they get caught, it just makes a bigger splash.

That is no excuse for a kid like Schlichter. True, gambling can be a disease. No one is immune. But, of all people, Schlichter, with his strict midwestern upbringing, should have been the least susceptible. He had no excuse.

Much of the blame must be borne by society — our colleges which buy their athletic talent as they might choice beef on the hoof (Notre Dame's Digger Phelps puts the minimum price tag of a good basketball prospect at $10,000 while other coaches say it goes as high as $100,000) and let them get out before they complete the education they were supposed to be getting.

If our institutions continue to flout ethics and indulge in deceit in pursuit of athletic success and its monetary rewards, what can we expect of the kids?

Kincheon signs with Ole Miss.

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Austin Travis center Sylvester Kincheon, who said earlier that he was headed for the University of Houston, has signed with Ole Miss.

Kincheon, 6-10, said Thursday that the Rebels could give him the chance to start during his freshman year.

"The playing time and it being a better opportunity was the difference," Kincheon said. "They haven't had a big man there for awhile and I can make a name for myself. If I went to Houston, I'd always be playing in somebody's shadow."

Kincheon also had considered New Mexico State.

"The big factor was that I never talked with (Houston coach) Guy Lewis, in person or on the phone," he said. "That's no way to work. It's kind of like buying a new car without ever seeing it."

Greg Guin hit a three-run homer to propel the Arkansas Travelers to a 10-5 Texas League win over Tulsa, while Jackson won its home opener with a 5-0 shutout over Shreveport.

In other TL contests Thursday night, Beaumont downed Midland 8-4 and San Antonio posted a 3-1 win over El Paso.

Guin's blast in the bottom of the sixth put the game away for the Travelers, who evened their record at 3-3. Jerry Johnson, 1-1, picked up the win, while Tim Henry, 0-2, was tagged with the loss.

Gotay Mills also hit a round-tripper for Arkansas in the sixth. Mike Rubel had a solo homer for Tulsa in the fourth.

Mark Grant, 1-1, was the losing pitcher as Shreveport dropped to 3-3.

Beaumont sent 11 men to the plate during a seven-run sixth inning. Mark Gillaspie had a homer and a single for the Golden Gators, and teammate Ozzie Guillen drove in three runs with a bases-loaded double.

George Stablin was the winning pitcher for Beaumont, which improved its record to 4-3. Marty Kain was tagged with the loss for Midland, now 2-4.

San Antonio got a solo homer from Larry See in the seventh. Bobby Smith homered for El Paso.

Ken Howell, 2-0, pitched a three-hitter for the Dodgers and went the distance. Bryan Clutterback, 0-2, took the loss.

San Antonio leads the West Division with a 5-2 record. El Paso fell to 2-4.

Information about your changing telephone service from Gary Stevens, Community Relations Manager

Some telephones now offered for sale

In earlier columns, we've discussed several changes underway within the Bell System and Southwestern Bell. Now, there's one more.

If you are a customer with single-line telephone service, you may purchase certain telephones that before were available only on a monthly lease basis. When you purchase your set, you may save money by eliminating monthly equipment charges on your statements.

Phones for sale include standard telephone sets in both rotary and Touch-Tone® service (desk or wall units), along with Trimline® and Princess® models.

The offer also includes special feature instruments such as the Touch-a-matic® 12 adjunct dialer, the Touch-a-matic 16 and Touch-a-matic S Series telephone sets, the Action Phone™ and TeleHelper speakerphone, and the TeleHelper answer-and-record units.

FCC regulations prevent party-line customers from purchasing these phones.

Purchase considerations and warranties

Instruments already installed in a customer's home or office will cost less than equipment in our inventory. Phones sold in place carry a 30-day warranty; those sold from inventory carry a 90-day warranty.

A full text of this warranty is available free upon request by writing to Southwestern Bell Fulfillment Center, 600 St. Louis, Room 619, Springfield, MO 65806.

Purchasing your phone is optional. You may continue to lease set(s) or any of the functional instruments on a monthly basis. When you lease equipment, there's no additional charge for repair work, and you can get replacement phones whenever you move.

When you purchase phone(s), you eliminate monthly equipment charges on your statement. Over a period of time, this could cost you less. But remember, if you purchase your phone(s), you will be responsible for repairs after the warranty expires.

With credit approval, you may purchase your phone(s) in equal monthly installments (two, three or four months) — all without interest. If you prefer, you can be billed in one lump sum on your next monthly statement.

Winfield helps Yankees get back on win track

By BRUCE LOWITT AP Sports Writer

Dave Winfield confined his aggressiveness to home plate and the basepaths and got the New York Yankees back on the right track.

Jack Morris pitched in the fifth inning Thursday night. He ripped it for a tie-breaking single that led to a three-run burst and a 6-3 victory over the Tigers.

In other American League action, the Chicago White Sox outlasted Baltimore 12-11, Milwaukee defeated Toronto 5-4 and Oakland beat Seattle 5-3. Minnesota postponed its game with California because of snow outside the Metrodome and Texas' game in Cleveland was rained out with the Rangers leading 4-1 in the fourth inning.

"We just haven't gotten untracked on offense or defense and our pitching hasn't been up to snuff."

It was Thursday night. Dave Righetti, who has two of the Yankees' three victories and none of the losses, scattered three runs and seven hits and fanned seven batters before George Frazier took over with two outs in the seventh and picked up the save.

"Let's face it," said Baltimore Manager Joe Altobelli, "we're talking about a game that's supposed to be played in the summertime."

White Sox 12, Orioles 11

The temperature was near freezing, the wind was howling, rain and snow spilled down on Chicago's Comiskey Park.

subdued Baltimore. Kittle also had a first-inning sacrifice fly in the game, which took almost four hours to complete.

Rookie Ron Kittle, who had a three-run homer in Chicago's six-run fifth inning, hit a two-run single in the three-run eighth that finally gave Milwaukee its victory over the Blue Jays. The Brewers pulled into the 4-4 tie with two runs in the eighth on Robin Yount's single, Cecil Cooper's triple and Ted Simmons' single.

Healthy Bucks subdue Bullets

MILWAUKEE (AP) — The Milwaukee Bucks are finally healthy, which makes the Washington Bullets' National Basketball Association playoff hopes a little less than that.

Bob Lanier and Dave Cowens, who have started together only 13 times all season, played together Thursday night for the first time in nearly 2½ months as the Bucks defeated the Bullets 97-90 and dropped Washington below Atlanta and New York in the race for the final two Eastern Conference playoff spots.

Marques Johnson led the way with 26 points, but said the difference was the presence of Lanier and Cowens. Lanier, who missed 43 games because of knee injuries, had 14 points, nine rebounds, five assists, two blocked shots and a steal in 31 minutes. Cowens, who on Wednesday played his first game since Feb. 24, had four points and one rebound in 24 minutes.

In the only other game Thursday, the Portland Trail Blazers romped over the San Diego Clippers 120-83 as Calvin Natt scored 24 points. The victory enabled Portland to tie Kansas City for the fifth of six playoff spots in the West with Denver a game behind both.

Washington, which had won 12 of 14 games, is a full game behind the Knicks and a half game behind Atlanta in the playoff race. The Hawks have one game left and the Knicks and Bullets two each.

"We still have life," said Bullet Coach Gene Shue. "We had no control over our destiny the last three weeks until we won last (Wednesday) night. Then we had control for about half an hour. We didn't take control in that half hour, so we'll have to do it in our last two games."

The Bucks, meanwhile, are at their peak as the playoffs approach.

After 80 games, 23 different starting lineups, 27 roster changes and a total of 163 missed games because of injuries to various players, they at last have a full roster of intact bodies.

Lanier and Cowens both admit to rustiness, but Johnson said they were the difference against the Bullets.

"They give us a totally different look," Johnson said. "We have the greyhounds. Now we can let Bob and Dave control the inside. With them in the lineup, I don't have as much inside responsibility and I can play a little more open-court basketball."

Garvey nearing record

By BOB GREENE AP Sports Writer

The numbers tell the story for Steve Garvey, but not for Ruppert Jones.

Garvey, playing in his 1,116th consecutive game, one shy of the National League record, doubled home the Padres' winning run in the fifth inning as San Diego topped the San Francisco Giants 6-4 Thursday.

Jones' consecutive-game streak doesn't come close. But the Padres' All-Star center fielder, who was batting an anemic .156 entering the game, slammed a three-run homer in the victory.

"I really feel good, better than everything indicates," said Jones, who hit .324 in April last year. "I'm not worried about the slow start. I've been hitting the ball well. I'm just not finding the hole."

In an abbreviated National League schedule, Montreal edged the Chicago Cubs 4-3 and St. Louis pounded the New York Mets 7-1.

Jones' smash off rookie right-hander Andy McGaffigan snapped a 2-2 tie in the fourth inning.

"The ballpark is so big, I didn't know it would go that far," he said of his first homer of the year.

McGaffigan, making his first major league start, also was touched for a two-run homer by Terry Kennedy, a two-run shot in the first inning.

"He looked all right," Giants Manager Frank

Robinson said of McGaffigan, who gave up seven hits and six runs in 4½ innings. "If it hadn't been for two big hits, he would still be in the game."

Former Giant John Montefusco, 1-0, went six innings and was touched for six hits, all singles.

Tim Raines tripled home two runs and Scott Sanderson tossed seven-hit ball over seven innings as Montreal stopped Chicago.

Pitcher Dan Schatzeder, who came on for winner Scott Sanderson, 2-0, to start the eighth, was struck on the right arm by Jerry Morales, the first batter he faced.

"I hit my index finger first and tore the nail back a bit," Schatzeder said. "Then it went up and struck my arm."

Santeria, Cuban voodoo, flowers in Miami soil

MIAMI (AP) — The two grieving disciples met at the Rivero Funeral Home to mourn their dead mentor, a sorcerer. As one man lay with his head in his girlfriend's lap, police say the second pumped three bullets into his skull with a .38-caliber revolver.

Police arrested Miguel Cardenas, 21, on a first-degree murder charge and blamed Santeria — the Cuban-style voodoo — for the slaying.

"It was a black magic thing," said Miami Homicide Sgt. Luis Albuerna. "Apparently the murderer thought the victim had passed along to his spiritual god-father all the bad spells on his head, and that's why he had died."

Such can be the violent and deadly ways of Santeria, the Cuban cult of magic and sorcery that permeates Spanish-speaking Miami, but usually remains hidden behind Main Street-style storefronts.

"If you drive around here, you can't help running into Santeria, if you know what you're looking for," says Dr. Charles Wetli, Dade's deputy chief medical examiner.

Much of Santeria is placid, like the scattering of cowrie shells to tell fortunes or the offering of half-filled glasses of water to honor dead relatives. But to Americans like Wetli, other rites seem exotic, bizarre — an unexpected eruption of Black Africa and the mysteries of the River Niger in the land of frozen food and time-share real estate:

—Headless bodies of goats and chickens float limply down the Miami River, sacrifices to jealous and angry gods. "We get hundreds," complains Dade water control chief Paul Hardy.

—Outside the chambers of Circuit Judge James S. Rainwater, a clerk stumbled on an apple anointed with oil and impaled on a cross, an attempted hex. "It was supposed to cloud my mind and confuse me in a civil suit," says Rainwater, who immediately took himself off the case.

—In Miami Beach, numbing drums sometimes break the night stillness. In nearby Sweetwater, colorful shrines to unfamiliar saints dot neatly trimmed lawns. Across Dade County, more than 20 boutiques sell herbs, talismans, human bones and sacred stones to believers.

"It's not my bag, but I respect it," says Miami Mayor Maurice Ferre, who joined in a ritual feast and dance to pay off a campaign debt. Shunning the wizards of the Afro-Cuban religion in Miami would be "like telling a politician in Boston he shouldn't go to the St. Anthony's parade or the St. Patrick's Day parade," says the mayor.

Santeria, the secret faith of Yoruba tribesmen in Nigeria carried to the New World in the holds of 16th century slave ships, has taken root in South Florida's soil and flowered.

Very early in the New World, Santeria became a secret faith for initiates only. Under the overseer's lash, Cuban slaves converted to Christianity, but cloaked their beliefs in the garments of their new religion's saints.

It is a melange of black and white magics and spiritualism where St. Peter is Ogun, owner of all metals and weapons, and the Christ child is Elegua, god of the tricksters.

Cubans fleeing Fidel Castro's communism in the 1960s brought Santeria to the United States, where sociologists say it became one of their survival tools.

"Santeria seems to give people a faith, a hope," says University of Miami Afro-American Studies Professor O.R. Dathorne. "I would say 40 percent of all Cubans here partake of Santeria. And only 5 percent would have a negative attitude."

In the gloom of Dade County Jail, criminals from the 1960 Mariel boatlift have built tiny altars of cardboard and paper to St. Barbara, worshipped as the fire-breathing warrior god Chango. In homage, believers offer cups of cole slaw. On their backs are tattoos of the Seven African Powers, Santeria's pantheon.

"This is a religion that is very old," says high priest Rigoberto Zamora. "It dates back to the slaves' time and we can't let it die."

But animal lovers, State Attorney Janet Reno and some Cuban-Americans have now allied to condemn some of Santeria's bloodier practices, like the nipping off of pigeon heads and the mutilation of sea gulls to tell fortunes or to appease the religion's gods.

"The primitive worship of gods through the sacrifices of birds and animals has reached epidemic proportions in Dade County," says wildlife activist Jack Kasewitz Jr. "Daily, we receive reports and bodies of sacrificed animals and birds."

Kasewitz's National Wildlife Rescue Team has joined with the Humane Society to offer a $2,000 reward for information leading to the conviction of ritual animal killers. "We're also identifying the priests and priestesses," Kasewitz said.

In retaliation, Zamora and a band of Santeria believers are printing fliers to teach the English-speaking public why their faith requires the ritual slaughter of birds, lambs, goats and deer. They plan to distribute leaflets at supermarkets to show why Santeria has a rightful place in Miami's ethnic and spiritual life.

Couple postpones marriage plans

HOUSTON (AP) — Gail Mahaffey and Larry Kello would be one day from matrimony today except that she would be kicked off the Pasadena police force if they wed. And she says they need both incomes to fight the nepotism policy.

The couple postponed plans for a Saturday wedding after a judge on Thursday refused to issue a temporary injunction blocking a Pasadena rule against spouses serving together on the police force.

"To fight the lawsuit with just one income — there's no way," Ms. Mahaffey said in a telephone interview.

The $2,500 in attorney fees so far has been paid by the Pasadena Police Officers Association, but the expected $10,000 in lawyer fees over the next two months will come from the couple, she said.

U.S. District Judge Norman Black refused the couple's request to block the spouses' rule, but he did order an expedited schedule for their lawsuit against the rule. He said a final hearing would be held after 60 days.

Ms. Mahaffey said she and her fiancée were surprised by the judge's refusal.

"We were so confident that this would go through, we had all the invitations sent out, we had the flowers ordered, the cakes, I had my wedding dress. Everything we set," said Ms. Mahaffey. "It was something we really wanted."

Kello, 34, is a motorcycle patrol officer, and Ms. Mahaffey, 30, works in the department's police academy, a job she took after five years as a patrol officer. He has 9½ years with the force and she has six. They met at work.

"Being a police officer is not a very normal life anyway. Now they're more or less telling us we can't be normal. We've been dedicated to our jobs for years. We've sacrificed. To take that away, something you have built your whole life around, that's taking a lot," Ms. Mahaffey said.

The couple filed the lawsuit Feb. 15 against the director of the Civil Service Commission of Pasadena, the three members of the commission, the city of Pasadena and the Texas Civil Service Commission.

The suit asks that two rulings by the Pasadena commission be overturned — a 1969 decision that relatives cannot serve on the force together, and a 1974 ruling specifying that if a couple on the force marries, the one with the least seniority must resign.

Commission director Bill Storey has said the panel is just trying to be consistent with its rules against nepotism. The commission policy against close relatives serving on the department together extends as far as second cousins.

Ms. Mahaffey said Thursday that if it comes to a choice between her or Kello leaving the force, the couple might decide that Kello should resign so she could keep her department insurance. She said she needs it for her 11-year-old daughter, who suffers from rheumatoid arthritis.

She said the couple cannot live together without being married because it would violate their religious beliefs and it would create a bad environment for her two children.

She said she and Kello are determined to be together — "We're going to get married — we can't give that up" — and they can't understand why their employer objects after their demonstration of dedication to their jobs.

"We have given of ourselves quite a few times, and we haven't asked for anything in return," she said. "To ask for this and get turned down, it makes you wonder, 'Why am I doing this?'"

Soldier convicted in family deaths

NEW BRAUNFELS, Texas (AP) — An Army private whose car struck and killed four members of a family, including the pregnant mother, has been sentenced to 10 years' probation.

William Dale Savage also was fined $5,000 on Thursday and ordered to defray some of the hospital and funeral costs for the family of Ruben Saucedo Sr.

The Fort Sam Houston soldier could have received up to 10 years in prison.

Savage, 23, wept Wednesday when the jury convicted him of involuntary manslaughter in Saucedo's Oct. 30 death.

A spokesman for Mothers Against Drunk Drivers in San Antonio criticized Savage's probated sentence.

"It's a mockery of justice," said Suzanne Hildebrand of MADD. "This case was not strenuously and ardently prosecuted."

Savage also is charged with the deaths of Saucedo's wife, Hortencia, 23, and their children Victoria and Ruben Jr., 23 months and 11 months.

But Comal County District Attorney Bill Schroeder said that it was not likely Savage would be tried in the other three deaths.

All four family members died when they were struck by a car as they walked across old U.S. Highway 81 in this city north of San Antonio.

Savage, the sole defense witness, testified that he was "pretty coherent" when he left Wurstfest, this city's annual celebration of its German heritage. He said he drank six beers in an hour.

Town disconnects over high phone bills

HARRISBURG, Pa. (AP) — It's the battle of little Big Run, where a fight over high telephone bills has led some citizens to slam down their receivers for good.
Residents of Big Run, a tiny community of 826 in the foothills of the Allegheny Mountains are charged the highest telephone rates in the state — $21.25 per month for basic service, according to the Pennsylvania Public Utility Commission.

Some residents say they can't pay. Other simply refuse to deposit one more dime in the coffers of Big Run Telephone, a subsidiary of Citizen Utilities Co. of Stamford, Conn. And now the dispute has reached all the way to the state capital.
"There's a lot of hatred built up in the town," said Paul Kellar, a 41-year-old biology teacher and borough council president. "The company sort of has the attitude that it can take your phone and shove it down your throat."

In a protest that has now moved to the offices of state lawmakers and utility regulators here, Kellar and scores of other customers decided in 1981 that they could do without a phone.
"It was at one of our meetings that someone proposed we hand in our phones," recalled Samuel McNeil, who heads the Citizens Action Group, an organization set up to battle the rates.

"About 183 people took their phones out and others dropped to party lines. If the company didn't get the phones, the people put them in trees, they did all kinds of things to them," said McNeil.
The company currently has 790 customers in the Big Run area, down from 923 when the protest began, said Citizens Utilities spokesman Ed Kelly. According to McNeil, some residents restored service "because we have people that absolutely need the phone."

But others have learned to live without it.
"It's made the house so quiet," said Kellar's wife, Thelma. "At first you think you can't live without one but you just plan more ahead of time."
"I just refuse to give that company any more money," she said.

The Kellars clip a note pad to their front door for messages. Other residents use citizens band radios, and one ties a red towel to her mailbox when she needs a message taken to her mother across town.

Dalton Buffington, 72, said that she and her husband, who is retired, could no longer afford to pay $14 a month for a party line.

"We had it disconnected but it's still sitting in the house," she said. "We go down to my son's garage to use the phone but sometimes it's dark."

"I tell you, it's been awfully hard," she said.
Another resident, Kathy Cessna, 33, said, "I never was one for gabbing on the phone but there are times you really need it." A substitute teacher, she said she has missed out on numerous working days because the school could not reach her on short notice.

Kelly said he could not discuss the local company's rates because the negotiations with Bell, although in the past the parent firm has said the small size of the community and lack of industry in the area has helped keep costs high.

The town took its complaints to the Public Utility Commission. After a lengthy investigation, the PUC ordered last October that the local company be sold and that Bell of Pennsylvania be invited to submit a bid.

Most residents said they would prefer Bell to Big Run Telephone. The PUC said the sale was the only way to bring rates to "reasonable levels."
Bell says its current basic home rate ranges from $6.10 per month in Coudersport, a small town in north-central Pennsylvania near the New York border, to $9.60 in Philadelphia.

It submitted a $1.1 million bid in February, which Citizens Utilities is still considering. Should the deal fall through, the state consumer's advocate has prepared a petition asking the PUC to force the company to justify its continued service in Big Run. Meanwhile, the townspeople are impatient. They have mounted a lobbying effort with legislators in the state capital.

HOW WELL DO YOU MEASURE UP?

John (the Baptist) went from place to place on both sides of the Jordan River, preaching that people would be baptized to show that they had turned to God and away from their sins, in order to be forgiven.

In the words of Isaiah the prophet, John was "a voice shouting from the barren wilderness, 'Prepare a road for the Lord to travel on! Widen the pathway before Him! Level the mountains! Fill up the valleys! Straighten the curves! Smooth out the ruts! And then all mankind shall see the Savior sent from God.'"

Here is a sample of John's preaching to the crowds that came for baptism: "You brood of snakes! You are trying to escape hell without truly turning to God! That is why you want to be baptized!"

"First go and prove by the way you live that you really have repented. And don't think you are safe because you are descendants of Abraham. That isn't good enough. God can produce children of Abraham from these desert stones!"

"The axe of His judgment is poised over you, ready to sever your roots and cut you down. Yes, every tree that does not produce good fruit will be chopped down and thrown into the fire."

The crowd replied, "What do you want us to do?"
"If you have two coats, he replied, 'give one to the poor. If you have extra food, give it away to those who are hungry.'"

Even tax collectors--notorious for their corruption--came to be baptized and asked, "How shall we prove to you that we have abandoned our sins?"

"By your honesty," he replied. "Make sure you collect no more taxes than the Roman government requires you to."

"And us," asked some soldiers. "What about us?"
John replied, "Don't extort money by threats and violence; don't accuse anyone of what you know he didn't do; and be content with your pay!"
Luke 3:3-14

Goodbye stickiness

DEAR POLLY — Some time ago, you told how to remove stickiness from old plastic storage bowls and containers. I've mislaid the article. Could you please print it again? — MRS. C.H.R.

DEAR MRS. C.H.R. — This is one of those questions that pop up time and again, so I'm happy to re-run the info. Here are a couple of things to try. Rub the plastic pieces with a little baking soda on a moist paper towel, then wash in soapy water. Or, rub them thoroughly with white vegetable shortening, again washing in hot soapy water to remove all the greasiness from the shortening along with that stickiness. Or, dust inside and out with a little cornstarch, rubbing it in to the plastic. One of these techniques should do the trick for you! — POLLY

DEAR POLLY — Arthritis in my hands and wrists prevents me from twisting and removing those frustrating child-proof bottle caps on medicine bottles. Here is my method: Hold the bottle cap firmly in place as you put the bottle upside down on a hard surface (table, sink, etc.). Turn the bottle counterclockwise pressing down on the bottle cap. Hold the cap firmly to keep it from twisting and turning. Be sure to hold the cap in place as you turn the bottle upright, or you will have pills all over the table. — MRS. R.P.

DEAR POLLY — I'd like to share my effective treatment for removing burned-on food from cooking pots and pans. Remove the burned pot from the heat and let cool. When completely cool, pour in cider vinegar to thoroughly cover the burned area. Add table salt in the proportions of four tablespoons salt for every two cups cider vinegar. Let this sit for two to three hours or overnight. Most of the burned-on food will rub off with very little scrubbing. — MILDRED

DEAR POLLY — My favorite helper around the house is ordinary chalk. I use sticks of colored or white chalk to fill holes in the wall left by pictures. It can blend colors if necessary. This also works on chipped woodwork. — ROSEMARY

Food for hypoglycemia

DEAR DR. LAMB — have been diagnosed as having hypoglycemia. I'm supposed to eat high protein snacks, like cheese, between meals. Through your column I learned that cheese, chocolate, etc. cause migraine headaches in some people. I had been experiencing migraine headaches and thought they were part of my hypoglycemia. I've stopped eating the things you mentioned and the migraines stopped. The problem is, what do I eat for the hypoglycemia? Any suggestions would be appreciated.

DEAR DR. LAMB — Regarding circumcision, even the smartest medic in the world has no right to speak with authority unless he has had the experience I have had.

At age 17 I was having my first sexual experience with a beautiful girl of about the same age. I was finding it rather painful and on immediate examination I found that the foreskin had been split or torn.

The next day I went to a surgeon and had that surplus skin removed and thereafter have been able to enjoy a satisfactory sex life. Experience is far better than all the rumors or guessing regardless of what the subject is.

DEAR DR. LAMB — You probably tore the frenulum of your foreskin. This happens to both circumcised and uncircumcised males. It is the fold of tissue under the glans (head) that limits the retraction of the foreskin. Ideally it should be snipped if it limits motion for the reason you experienced. Tearing it is not dangerous, just unpleasant.

In any case, your question about protein for a low blood sugar diet is a good one. Individuals who do have reactive hypoglycemia are better off avoiding concentrated sweets and starches. Protein and fat avoid the rebound low blood glucose levels that can occur in these individuals.

But it doesn't have to be cheese. Processed cheese may be 70 or 80 percent fat in terms of calories and half of the fat may be saturated fat. It is also a relatively high cholesterol food.

A good protein snack is baked breast of chicken, which is all protein. If that doesn't appeal to you, how about some cold roast beef that has been cooked to eliminate fat to control calories?

You don't have to avoid carbohydrates. The bulky raw fruit will not increase our children need to learn faith in God, as well as the basic skills of life. As the opening of the school season draws near, remember that it is also time to begin or resume their spiritual education; to fortify them for the time when you may no longer be on hand to guide and protect them. That a large segment of our young people have never learned goodness for its own sake is tragically evident in the almost daily accounts of juvenile wrongdoing. Children are not born with this knowledge; they must be taught it. Enroll your children in Sunday school, and set your own good example for them by the way you conduct your life, and by attending your Church.

FAITH WILL PREPARE YOUR CHILDREN FOR TOMORROW

"Train up a child in the way he should go; and when he is old, he will not depart from it."
— Proverbs 22:6

"His education forms the common mind:
Just as the twig is bent the tree's inclined."
— Alexander Pope
