During 'friendship' visit

Bush's motorcade assaulted KREFELD, West Germany (AP) - Hundreds of screaming anti-American protesters threw stones and bottles at Vice President George Bush's motorcade today during his visit honoring German-American friendship.

"Bush go home!" the 200-300 of crowd demonstrators yelled. They tore up pavement stones and hurled them at the fivevehicle motorcade as it was. heading toward a luncheon at a nearby hotel.

The motorcade drove on as police charged the protesters. There was no immediate report on any damage to vehicles or injury to occupants.

The protesters, many of them waving black flags and wearing black masks, symbols of West Germany's anarchist movement, hurled anything they could get their hands on at the motorcade.

There was no immediate report on the number of arrests or injuries, though witnesses said police dragged at least 10 rioters away.

demonstrators were injured. "Chase out the Yankees, shatter NATO!," many screamed. Others yelled "U.S.A., SS, SA!" - coupling America with Adolf Hitler's notorious elite Nazi storm troopers and SS.

The violence erupted when protesters began stoning police while marching toward a hall where Bush was speaking. Officers used clubs to disperse the crowd.

Extra security for the eight-hour Bush visit was imposed after an unexploded bomb was found Friday outside a U.S. firm in Dusseldorf.

Bush arrived in Dusseldorf from London aboard Air Force Two at 9:56 a.m. He was greeted by Chancellor Helmut Kohl.

The two leaders then flew by helicopter to Krefeld, the Rhineland textile center where Bush commemorated the first organized emigration of German families from Krefeld to Germantown, Pa.,

Seidenweberhaus, where Bush and Kohl addressed an invitation-only audience of several hundred Germans and Americans, a blackout pitched the windowless room into darkness for about five minutes. Investigators did not rule out the possibility of sabotage.

Bush did not mention the demonstration in his opening comments, nor did he directly refer to the North Atlantic Treaty Organization plan to deploy new U.S.-built nuclear missiles this year in West Germany, Britain, Italy, Belgium and Netherlands.

Bush arrived in West Germany from London where he said Friday that NATO will begin deploying the 572 U.S. cruise and Pershing 2 missiles on schedule despite Soviet warnings and some European opposition.

Aides say the purpose of the 14-day, eight-nation European tour is to discuss U.S.-Soviet missile negotiations and U.S. policy in Central America.

Caution urged during holiday

The Regional Commander of the Texas Department of Public Safety called on drivers to use extreme caution in traveling the streets and highways in Texas during the July 4th holiday weekend:

Major Vernon Cawthon said, "We realize the added dangers of traveling by motor vehicle during holiday periods and want to help motorists avoid the tragedy and suffering which could mar this otherwise happy occasion."

He pointed out that the DPS will be conducting its holiday "Operation Motorcide." He said," We will continue to work with the news media to keep motorists posted on unusual traffic conditions and to advise them on where and why serious holiday accidents are occurring,"

Cawthon said, "Excessive speed and driving while intoxicated continue as the primary law violations contributing to fatal accidents," and he warned, "DPS troopers have been directed to be especially watchful for motorists exceeding speed limits or under the influence of alcohol."

Cawthon also reminds motorists that many lives could be saved and serious injuries could be reduced during the crowded driving time through greater utilization of seat belts.

He added, "The DPS will place all available troopers on the state's highways during the holiday, and we urge every Texas driver to join in an all-out effort to make the July 4th holiday as safe as possible."

Southwestern Bell Vice President Paul Roth said the rate hike request "is not like any other rate case" Bell has filed before. "This increase is urgently FRANKFORT, Ky. (AP) - Gov. John Y. Brown Jr., complaining of chest and back pains, was admitted to the emergency room of a hospital here Friday night, where he was held for two hours before being flown to another hospital in Lexington.

A nurse and a governor's aide said the 49-year-old Brown did not appear to have suffered a heart attack. "It's not that bad," said aide Frank Fox.

Fox said the governor was transferred from the King's Daughters Memorial Hospital to the Albert B. Chandler Medical Center in Lexington because he could be treated there by his own doctor.

"Gov. Brown was seen in the emergency room for chest discomfort," said Eloise Yount, nursing supervisor at the King's Daughters hospital. "It appeared it was not a heart attack.'

She said it seemed certain Brown would remain overnight at the Lexington hospital.

Brown was hospitalized five days in March 1982 after feeling what he described as "a little flurry" in his blood pressure.

Astronauts get weekend off after six days in space

(AP) - The astronauts of Challenger, back on Earth from six days of flying the 'best yet" mission of a space shuttle, were given the weekend off to relax with their families and reset their topsy-turvy sleep cycles.

-Space agency officials granted the astronauts - exhausted from their 98-orbit, 2.5-million-mile voyage their first full day off in weeks today. They needed it to adjust biological clocks turned upside down during the mission.

On Monday, mission commander Robert Crippen is to lead his crew of three men and Sally K. Ride, America's first woman in space, into the first day of about three weeks of debriefings.

The Flight Seven crew landed at Edwards Air Force Base, Calif., on Friday after a wet, low layer of clouds blocked two attempts to make the shuttle's first landing at the Kennedy Space Center in Florida.

The landing site change was the only major disappointment in a mission that the shuttle program's director said was the best yet by America's winged spaceships.

Crippen, Ms. Ride and their crewmates, John Fabian, Frederick Hauck and Norman Thagard, twice prepared to land at Kennedy. and twice mission control gave them a "wave off," sending them around the world on another orbit each time.

Lt. Gen. James A. Abrahamson, director of the shuttle program, said the mission accomplished 96 percent of its objectives, including the launch of two satellites and the first major use of its robot arm.

Failure to land at Kennedy will not set the space program back "in a significant way," although another attempt to land in Florida will not be made "most likely" until Flight 11, he said.

Asked if he thought Flight Seven was the "best yet," Abrahamson said: "I'd say yes, when you measure the complexity.

Crew members said they enjoyed the mission.

Technicians at Edwards began preparing Challenger for a piggyback ride across the country atop a 747 jumbo jet. Abrahamson said the trip will add eight days to preparations for Flight Eight and could cause a delay in the mid-August launch plan for that mission.

Flight Seven's accomplishments include:

Completion of 56 of 58 flight test objectives. Only the Kennedy landing and a touchdown in a crosswind were missed.

- Deployment of two commercial satellites for Indonesian and Canadian customers who paid $11 million each. Ms. Ride and Fabian launched them to within .015 degrees of the target, the most accurate deployments yet.

- The first practical use of the shuttle's 50-foot robot arm. Ms. Ride and Fabian used the device to release a German-built instrument package four times into freeflying orbit and then pluck it back. The instrument package was returned to Earth and will fly again in a later mission. This important test for the arm was in preparation for an April 1984 flight when it will be used to repair a broken satellite, a mission Crippen will command.

Furry conductors shorting lights

BELLEVUE, Wash. (AP) - Frisky gray squirrels are becoming a major cause of power outages in the woodsy suburbs east of Seattle, as their high-wire acts become igh-voltage deaths, utility fficials say.

"Ten years ago you would t one a month," said Bob llespie, spokesman for get Sound Power & Light based in Bellevue, a city 74,000 residents across Lake Washington from Seat-

But in 1982, Puget Power logged about 200 "squirrelrelated outages," and there are already more this year, Gillespie said Wednesday.

Squirrel outages usually happen when one of the rodents, scampering on a power pole, bridges two hot wires or transformer bushings, where the wires go into the transformer. The squirrel becomes an instant, furry conductor for a huge jolt of electricity - and dies. It also blows a fuse.

In the last two weeks, squirrels have blown fuses six times, including at least two outages in one day in the Newport Hills area, pegged as a squirrel hot spot.

Last month, a squirrel crossed a breaker switch in a substation, killing both itself and power to about 3,400 households in Bellevue and Redmond, another suburb.

Last summer, a squirrel caused $10,000 worth of damage when it crossed a circuit and knocked out the utility's Eastgate substation, Gillespie said.

Newport Hills resident Clyde Margolis says the squirrel population is booming in her neighborhood, probably because of the mild winter.

"It's squirrel city out there. Our cat is bringing one or two a day into the house," she

Such stories don't surprise wildlife experts, who say the local gray squirrel population has been on the rise for years.

"The living conditions for squirrels are improving because they live with man and eat foods associated with become and semi-tame," said Richard Taber, a professor of forest zoology at the University of Washington. "Basically, what's happening is that with the increase of people out there in what used to be woods ... we are simply creating a better squirrel habitat.

Puget Power says it won't declare war on squirrels. That could cause a public relations headache in an area where the creatures are star attractions in parks, school campuses and backyards.

Instead, Gillespie said, the utility is looking for ways to keep squirrels from killing themselves on company equipment. Puget Power is experimenting with plastic sleeves on transformer bushings in problem areas, including south Bellevue and Newport Hills.

Reagan wants to find out about material

WASHINGTON (AP) -President Reagan says he'd like to "get at the bottom" of how his 1980 campaign obtained briefing material prepared for then-President Carter.

So far, he has been briefed about the matter by his chief of staff, James A. Baker III, who the chief White House spokesman said had reviewed with Reagan the press coverage of the issue.

Deputy White House press secretary Larry Speakes said that Reagan had read the letters of four administration officials outlining their recollection of the material, but had made no comment on the letters. The briefing material in question was said to have been prepared for Carter as he studied for his debate with Reagan on Oct. 28, 1980, in Cleveland.

The president told reporters during a picturetaking session Friday that the issue amounted to "much ado about nothing." He denied knowing anything about it, and said he saw nothing strange about the fact that the four officials said they could recall little, if anything, about the material.

Speakes challenged two of Carter's key advisers in 1980 to make public any specific allegations of wrongdoing, and said: "I'd be willing to bet you a buck they're not as clean as a hound's tooth."

Actually, Medicare was in worse shape last year when the trustees warned it could go broke by 1986. Congress already has taken some steps to reduce Medicare's longterm deficit.

The trustees cautioned that if there is "any severe economic downturn" over the next four years, Social Security's old age and survivors fund could run into short-term trouble anew.

"After 1987 the program's ability to withstand economic downturns is projected to improve steadily," they said.

Vatican says Walesa lost battle

WARSAW, Poland (AP) -Lech Walesa, off to do some "hard thinking" about his meeting with the pope, went

Although the Vatican newspaper says the Solidarity chief who fought for workers' rights has "lost his battle," his wife insists he doesn't intend to quit anything.

On Friday, a day after Pope John Paul II completed an eight-day pilgrimage to his homeland, a senior Polish official said the Communist government might soon remove martial law.

Martial law was suspended in December 1982, a year after its imposition on a society galvanized by Solidarity's demands for workers' rights and other freedoms.

Maj. Wieslaw Gornicki, an adviser to Poland's military leader, Gen. Wojciech Jaruzelski, said the pope's visit "facilitates and speeds up the potential possibility for lifting martial law."

But Western and Communist sources cautioned tight controls might replace martial law.

Walesa, meanwhile, seemed to indicate he's not about to play a major part in Poland's future.

"It is not important who solves problems - if there are better people to do that, then OK, let them go ahead," he said in an interview with NBC Television.

Earlier Friday, he cancelled a news conference in Gdansk, his home city and birthplace of the nowoutlawed labor union, saying he was going fishing. He told NBC he had "some hard thinking to do about my talk with the pope."

In the last hours of the papal visit, Walesa, his wife, Danuta, and four of his children met the pope in the ski resort of Zakopane. Police kept reporters at bay, and the pope left the meeting, then Poland, without disclosing what was said. In Rome, the Vatican newspaper L'Osservatore Romano said in a front-page editorial: "Officially Lech Walesa once more leaves the scene. We can say that he has lost his battle ...

"Walesa appears to have entered into this spirit."

The editorial also said Walesa "had to meet the Holy Father as a private person in a secret manner without demanding to count any longer in the present phase of life in his country."

In Gdansk, Danuta Walesa was asked if her husband and the pope discussed the Solidarity's leader future role in the labor movement.

Tax troubles

The Texas Research League has published an analysis of the Texas sales tax, citing the growth of the sales tax income and what it means not only to the state government but to the cities of Texas as well.

And the League forecasts trouble ahead for the sales tax, which means trouble for everybody since we all now depend upon it so much.

In Perryton, for example, the income from the one cent city sales tax passed the revenue generated from all property taxes last year.

The general sales tax was truly the "savior" of the Texas state revenue system when it was enacted in

Although Texas held off a sales tax for years, along with an income tax which is still being held off, after the sales tax went into effect and people got used to it, Texans accepted it.

Polls consistently show that the average Texan believes the sales tax to be a fair one, based on the ability to spend and that it has given the property owner some relief from taxes.

The Texas sales tax contains many exemptions, primarily the exemption on food. Yet people are comfortable with it.

The 4 per cent state sales tax last year brought the state a total of $3.483 billion. The typical Texas family paid a total of $192 per year in state sales taxes.

As often seems to be the case, the sales tax went up after it was enacted. It started out at 2 per cent and went to 3 per cent in 1968 and 4 per cent in 1970.

The League analysis of the sales tax income generated by the sales tax shows that a great deal of the income generated from this tax comes from businesses.

Texas is one of the states which does not grant an exemption on purchases of machinery and other tools of production. With the slowdown in the oil industry, these sales tax payments have also declined.

During the current fiscal year sales tax income is lagging, and this will be the first time collections fall below the previous year. This is cause for concern, if not alarm.

One of the reasons for the slowdown is in the lower economic activity across the state, caused by the recession. Signs are there that the recession is easing and sales taxes may increase again.

Another reason is the reduction in the rate of inflation. When goods do not rise in price, there is no automatic increase in the sales tax, applied as a percentage of selling price.

The Texas Research League says that all state spending, and most local spending, is based on a prediction of continued growth in the sales tax. If it fails to grow, or slides backward, then there will be more serious probleets in the future.

The Penultimate Word

LONG LIVE THE POPE

I was raised in the buckle of the Bible Belt. I sometimes think my faith was more anti-Catholic than it was pro-Jesus. I do not understand very much about the causes of prejudice, but I do understand enough to know one of the major causes is fear. We fear what we do not understand. The combination of the fear and ignorance creates a prejudice. Prejudice leads to more ignorance and more fear and before long a certain redness begins to grow around the neck area.

My first encounter with a real live Catholic was awe-inspiring. The Second World War was going on and there was a small air base in our town. An airman from the base became the scoutmaster for our troop. We loved him before we ever found out he was a Catholic. This knowledge confused us because we still loved him, but thought we weren't supposed to.

While at camp we were supposed to take a 17 mile hike to fulfill merit badge requirements. We hiked into the small town nearest the camp. I walked with the scoutmaster and asked him to tell me about Catholicism. With no intention of proselytizing, he told me about his faith. He took me to the Catholic church in the small town and told me the hows and whys of their worship. I was fascinated.

Word got out about our conversation. The scoutmaster almost got fired and the Baptists started their own troop to protect us from such evil influences. The Baptist troop proved to be a disaster, but that is another story.

This is the kind of root from which I was hewed. With the knowledge of my background maybe what I want to say will be more significant.

This week I have stood in awe of the Pope in Poland. Never have I seen such bravery. Never have I seen such grace under pressure. I still have some trouble with all of the trappings of the Papacy, but I have no trouble with John Paul II. In him I see the carpenter cleaning out the Temple. In him I see the Messiah rattling the status quo of ancient Rome and yet loving little children and sinful adults.

This week a hardshell Baptist felt solidarity with a Pope and shouted, "Viva, le Papa."

Panic in Washington

WASHINGTON -- They have begun to panic. A frenzied desperation has engulfed the city of Washington, D.C. For the tax and spenders who have ruled the roost for two generations know that July 1 is rapidly approaching.

Voice of Business

This year, July 1 is not just another day. It is the day that all Americans will receive a 10 percent reduction in tax rates - the third installment of the 1981 tax cut. And this is bad news for big government. The liberal politicians who have built their careers spending other people's money know that something must be done. But what is that something?

Oh, they've tried to stop the tax cut before. The summer of 1981 saw the special interests dragging out the big guns to defeat the people's tax cut. But Ronald Reagan had just been elected President, carrying 44 states on the promise that the confiscatory marginal tax rates would be brought down. For once, the American taxpayers rose up and drowned out the voices of Washington's special interests - the bureaucrats, the public employee unions and the recipients of federal giveaways. Official Washington felt unloved and unappreciated for their long years of selflessly spending our money. They regrouped and laid down a heavy counterat-

First, we were told that tax cuts would be wildly inflationary. This argument was dropped when inflation fell from double digits to below four percent. The promised skyrocketing interest rates did not materialize. Rather, the prime interest rate fell from 21.5 percent to 10.5 per-

This having failed, the second line of defense ran as follows: The tax cut won't work. Supply-side economics will not bring recovery. Oops. Recovery came. The stock market soared past the 1,200 mark; housing starts and auto sales rose; more than 800,000 new jobs were created in the first five months of the year; more than a million new small businesses incorporated in the past two years.

Next argument: Tax cuts are responsible for the deficit. The American people were asked to ignore the $200 billion plus increase in federal spending. Such ignorance, however, is not to be found outside Washington and the people were not fooled into believing that the federal government had been transformed into bureaucratic Twiggy. Now, with only a few short weeks until July 1, Tip O'Neill has come up with one last line of defense. The tax cut is unfair. Now a 25 percent acrossthe-board cut in marginal tax rates may strike you and me as the arithmetic definition of fair, but the liberals in Congress have decided in their desperation to appeal to the basest of human emotions-

They assure us that their latest brainstorm-a $700 cap on the July 1 tax cut-would only affect taxpayers earning $50,000 and up. Their understanding of the tax code, however, is no better than their understanding of economics. The "tax cap" is not aimed at playboys sitting on the decks of their summer yachts clipping coupons. Rather it is a declaration of war on the middle class. The cap would take its greatest toll on single taxpayers with taxable incomes between $30,125 and $55,300 and married couples with taxable incomes between $35,225 and $109,400. The biggest losers would be families where both the husband and wife worked - four out of five of all families earning over $35,000. Also at the receiving end of

As for the rich-the supposed targets of this tax increase this latest tax increase would be over 2.5 million small businesses (including 350,000 family farms) which are not incorporated and pay individual tax rates.

- only nine percent of those hurt by the "tax cap" earn over $100,000. The "tax cap" will fail. It is a last ditch attempt to keep more money in Washington and out of the hands of those who earned it. It is born of desperation.

Even Congressmen should know better.

Indefensible spending

WASHINGTON (NEA) - After months of intense public debate and delicate behind-the-scenes negotiations, Congress is on the verge of adopting a budget resolution calling for a five percent increase in defense spending next year. That represents only half of the 10 percent increase insisted upon by the White House - but adoption of the lower figure will hardly be a serious setback for President Reagan and other advocates of profligate military spending.

Obscured by the controversy over the extent to which the defense budget should be expanded next year is the fact that a massive military buildup already has been funded through extraordinary increases in recent years.

In a series of actions unprecedented in modern non-wartime years, the Pentagon's budget was increased by 14.7 percent in 1981, 9.2 percent in 1982 and 4.8 percent in 1983. Because those figures are compounded on a cumulative basis, another 5 percent increase would mean that the 1984 military budget will be 38 to 40 percent higher than the comparable 1980 figure.

Moreover, the supposedly modest additional 5 percent increase would have virtually no impact on efforts to reduce federal budget deficits which are likely to soar to unmanageable levels in future years.

Fashion from all parts of the globe

By Florence De Santis

DUSSELDORF, West Germany (NEA) — Beyond the self-important Paris salons, the lively runways of Milan and even the bustling showrooms of Seventh Avenue, fashion creation today is spreading over the world. The internationalization of fashion can be seen in young Japanese designers doing a strange, heaped-up, layered look; in London's 'punk" school of poverty looks and in the national influences seen from the 40odd countries who come to IGEDO, world fashion trade

With everyone meeting on the common ground of Dusseldorf. copying becomes more and more difficult. The West Germans, formerly devoted followers of the Italians. have melded the leather and huge shoulders of France's Claude Montana and the street looks of London's punk trend for their own wave of proletarian fashion.

nic colors of South American countries and the individualism of designers from such outposts as Israel and Finland doing their own After all, proletarian may be a new idea for the once-cool, classic couture style of proper Germans, but Peru had the workaday poncho forever. So Inca Export showed it in a luxury version of gray alpaca with white furry borders, as a city cape. From Colombia came Evidalia Martinez, who designs handsome jackets, ponchos and capes in hand-woven natural wool, the edges in boldly crocheted beige and dark brown wool. Like her macrame evening gowns and shawls, they're all made for her by Artesanias de los Andes (Artisans of the Andes) in cottage industry conditions.

Half a world away. Tamara Yovel designs for Rikma in Israel, in layered themes known to that firm nese layered looks. In oatmeal knit tweed, she showed capes and separates worked with elaborate ribbon trims. Quite different were the sweaters and bottoms of Israel's Gabi Modell, in cream wool knit, with wrapped, side-draped skirt or red-piped gray dirndl beneath the width of dolman sleeves. Center panel motifs or side-placed dramatic abstracts turned these outfits into fashions wearable anywhere.

Some European designers, hardly knowing which way to look these international days, played it safe with both oversized punk looks and slim classics in the same collection. However, the Italians kept their cool. In Krizia's ready-towear, called Krizia Poi, the theme was slim, colorful separates under coats and jackets with wide-shouldered loose cuts. Giorgio Armani did slim suits for his Mani collection, also wide-shouldered, but fitted new draped cut.

And then there were the newer, smaller houses grouped at IGEDO under the label "Die Strasse" (The Street). French, Swiss, German, English and Italian, they included everything from Zig Zag's black and yellow "Spider Man" comic strip outfit to Nuvola's lovely cream chemise dresses patterned in the softest pastel tones, all knit. In between came proletarian leather, puffy ski jackets for street wear American-type sportswear by a firm that even calls itself U.C.L.A.

Broadway music written in hills of Tennessee

By JOE EDWARDS Associated Press Writer

GATLINBURG, Tenn. (AP) - Broadway music is being written in the hills of Tennessee where the only skyscrapers are the mountains and where New Yorkstyle bustle gives way to a slowed-down country

Amid the majesty of the Smoky Mountains and rural folk who say "y'all" and eat grits, Broadway music is being written by the husbandwife songwriting team who composed "Bye Bye Love" and "Rocky Top.

In this town of 2,900 where a subway would be a tourist attraction and mugging is the kind done before a camera, Boudleaux and Felice Bryant face a new challenge after 30 years of writing most of the million-sellers for the Everly Brothers and scores of country-styled tunes.

The Bryants are writing 50 songs for an unnamed play, which will be based on a book written by Laurie Coe, daughter of Broadway veteran Fred Coe. About 20 of the songs will be chosen for the play, described by Bryant as a drama-comedy about New Yorkers.

"I hope they'll be ballads, ensemble numbers, comedy, the whole thing you expect in musicals," Bryant said.

The Bryants have never written Broadway music before, except at a workshop in Nashville some 10 years ago which Bryant describes as "just practice."

Exclaims Felice: "I've learned a new phrase, 'Hit' the boards.' I'm excited." The phrase is a Broadway term for beginning a play.

"It's quite a challenge," Bryant said in an interview in his office where you can gaze out the window and watch the Smoky Mountains swallow

It was this quaint east Tennessee resort town that inspired the Bryants to write the 1968 bluegrass music classic "Rocky Top." The song, recorded by the Osborne Brothers. Last year the song joined "Tennessee Waltz" and others as the official Tennessee state songs.

The song was written as a diversion while writing more solemn material.

"We wrote this as a break. We 'took 10' and wrote 'Rocky

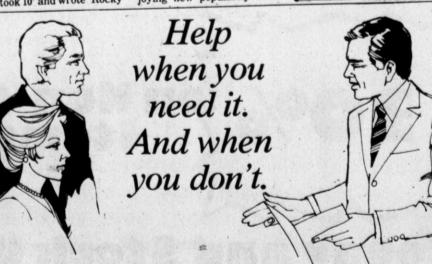

For the Everly Brothers, the Bryants wrote "Wake Up Little Susie," "Bird Dog," "All I Have to Do Is Dream," "Poor Jenny" and others besides "Bye Bye Love."

Stan Shaw always had I'm going to be great syndrome

LOS ANGELES (AP) -Stan Shaw, who stars with Ralph Waite in the CBS series "The Mississippi," mapped out his career when he completed school and has stuck to his timetable and goals since then. He says he regards himself as "a different kind of actor."

Shaw "You have to plan," he said. "Some people just want to work and they'll take anything. I wanted to do films and movies of the week and basically that's what I've Shaw said, "This is my first series although I did two pilots, 'The Buffalo Soldiers' and 'Venice Medical.' I've never really wanted to do a series. There're never any decent roles for blacks. The shows were all sitcoms and acting stupid and I didn't want any part of it.

"I was offered roles on sitcoms but I wouldn't do them. I wouldn't even do a guest shot I don't like being funny. I'm a different kind of actor. I held out and I made it. Don't misunderstand me, I'm not against comedy. I got started in three musical comedies on Broadway. I just don't like what they're doing in television comedy. It's buffoonery.'

Shaw is a serious-minded young actor who went straight from his high school graduation in Chicago to a role in "Hair" on Broadway. More plays followed, along with roles in such movies as Bingo Long Traveling All-Stars and Motor Kings," "The Boys in Company C," and "The Great Santini." He starred as Will Palmer, Alex

Haley's grandfather, in "Roots: The Next Genera-

"I got my first part on Broadway before I graduated from high school," he said. "I staved on Broadway for five years in different shows. I've always had the 'I'm going to be great' syndrome. I've never had to deal with failure. I've lost parts but I knew something else was coming along." In "The Mississippi," a CBS spring series returning in the fall for its first full season, Shaw plays Lafayette

"I have so many actor friends who hate their series," he said. "I love my show. I'm lucky. I think 'The Mississippi' is breaking grounds on subject matter in how it attacks things. Ralph and I both like shows that mean something.'

The Mississippi River remains the focus of the series, which strives for a Mark Twain quality as Waite, Shaw and Linda Miller roam the river in a paddlewheel boat. Waite plays a lawyer who picks up cases along the river, Miss Miller is his protege and Shaw takes care of the boat and acts as Waite's investigator.

The series is filmed entirely on location along the river. For the fall, the company will start at Minneapolis and work its way downriver to St. Louis, Memphis, Vicksburg and New Orleans.

Shaw was excited that his mother, Teddy Shaw, was coming for a visit. He is the son of jazz saxophonist Eddie Shaw, but his parents were divorced when he was 2.

A golfer in search of an errant golfball in Melbourne, Australia, discovered a toadstool weighing twenty-two my partner. Whenever I get a job I call her and tell her. She worked at two jobs to raise me. I always said when I hit it I was going to take care of

Three indicted for slavery

federal indictment accuses three men of forcing 12 illegal aliens from Mexico to work in slavery on an East Texas tree

Named in the 24-count indictment returned here were Steven Lane Crawford of Center, Randall Craig Waggoner of Nacogdoches and Joe Armando Gonzalez of Rocksprings.

Crawford and Waggoner were indicted on 11 counts of holding undocumented Mexicans in involuntary servitude on Crawford's tree farm near Center. Gonzalez was accused of transporting illegal aliens.

All three were charged with conspiring with unidentified others between Jan. 1 and Feb. 16 to violate immigration laws by transporting aliens who had entered the country illegally.

The three were named in 12 counts alleging they transported the aliens from Rocksprings, in Southwest Texas, to the Center farm.

According to the indictment, Waggoner paid Gonzalez $950 to round up the Mexicans and offer them jobs. Waggoner then herded the aliens into a rented 5-by 8-foot trailer hitched to a pickup and drove them 500 miles to the farm, arriving the next morning, the indictment said.

Frisco: breathtaking in more ways than one

By HELEN KLEIN

No matter how much you've heard about San Francisco and its hills, it comes as a surprise. It doesn't seem credible to the stranger to San Francisco that any city could exist built on so steep an angle.

The pragmatist demands
"What are the first floors of those houses like?" The aestheticist must rearrange his or her traditional notions of balance and perspective.

And, anybody who's unused to climbing up and down such hills on the way to work or to go shopping or catch the bus finds it hard to fathom that long practice can inure one to those hills and those climbs.

Yet, San Francisco flourishes, gathering devotees — and rightly so! For, it is an exceptionally charming city with masses of picture-perfect Victorian homes in amazing pastel colors lining its streets, scads of restaurants serving a vast variety of food, and charming shops by the dozen.

It has enough of every thing that makes a city worth visiting — and worth living in: cultural attractions. ambience, the flavor of the past, the dynamism of the present as it rapidly strides into the future.

The Victorian buildings which characterize so much of San Francisco are balanced by the modern skyscrapers clustered in the financial district — build-ings such as the Embarcadero Center and the Transamerica Pyramid which, modern as they are, harmonize with the rest of

The quiet charm of those same Victorian-lined streets is in direct contrast to the bustle of the district around Fisherman's Wharf, where so many of the city's fashionable shops and restaurants are situated

Setting aside for the moment such de rigueur tourist sights as Fisherman's Wharf, Alcatraz and Golden Gate Park, much of what is to be enjoyed in San Francisco is unusual, unique to the city and more charming than earth-shattering.

Lombard Street for instance, dubbed "the crookedest street in the world," snakes its way down a particularly steep hill. lined with homes whose residents, one imagines, must get terribly bored with the hordes of tourists gaping at their out-of-the-ordinary domiciles. The curves are so hair-raising that driving down Lombard Steet is somewhat akin to a roller coaster ride, without the element of speed.

The Mission Dolores is one of the few buildings in San Francisco to survive the cataclysmic earthquake of 1906. It dates to 1791, and is an excellent - and charming - example of Spanish mission architecture.

Its adobe walls are four feet thick, and the ceiling is painted with geometric Indian designs, the colors for which were manufactured from vegetable dyes.

Not to be missed by the chocoholic is Ghirardelli Square, an enchanting restaurant and shopping com-plex located in a 70-year-old chocolate factory. Today. Ghirardelli chocolates, ice creams and confections are sold at an Ice Cream Parlor within the square which exudes the tantalizing aroma of fresh chocolate to lure the passers-by.

Despite the hills, San Francisco is a walking city, and visitors should make an effort to explore the various neighborhoods on foot.

Of particular note are exclusive Nob Hill, Cow Hollow with its potpourri of one-of-a-kind shops; Japantown and Chinatown, which is the largest Chinese settlement outside Asia.

If you want to take a load off your feet, take the ferry to Sausalito, a quaint seasio village across the Bay. Above and beyond the charms of Sausalito, the ferry ride provides the sight-seer and the shutterbug with glorious views of the Golden Gate and Oakland Bay Bridges, of Alcatraz, and of the San Francisco skyline.

The boats leave from the San Francisco Ferry Building, which boasts a tower modeled on the Giralda in

The purr-fectly wonderful cat

If cats are not the most beautiful of Nature's crea-tures (and there are many who swear they are), they are certainly the most mys-terious. Alternately playful and aloof, they are the objects of unending specula-tion, much of it admiring, some of it untrusting.

Since the Middle Ages cats have been associated with the legendary "forces of darkness" as witches' familiars (everyone remembers Graymalkin in Macbeth). and as harbingers of evil (the black cat whose path is not to be crossed on pain of disaster).

But, in antiquity, deities were believed to take on cat form (the Egyptian goddess Bastet is an excellent example of this ) — rightly, as most cats would certainly agree, for modesty, however becoming, is not generally a component of the feline per-

Cat-lovers who enjoy fondling and playing with domestic puss, would do well to recall that felis domesticus is a relative of such royalty of the jungle as the lion and the tiger and, basically a predator by nature, is descended from wildcats who hunted live meat as a matter of course

However, felis domesticus is ultimately its own creature and possesses that most admired characteristic, the ability to purr, which is lacking in many jungle cats — and which signifies that, though of common ancestry, domestic and wild species of cat long ago parted com-

The cat is the vainest of creatures, spending hours grooming and pampering itself with care and preci-perfect. For one, it has no sense of humor, particularly about itself, and has a habit of looking something between amazed and appalled when it is the subject of laughter

The Cheshire Cat of Alice in Wonderland fame to the contrary, cats are physiologically incapable of smiling. Instead, cats express plea sure and other feelings through their entire body, which is particularly lithe and well-suited to this purpose — arching their backs when angry or afraid, and using the all-purpose tail to denote such emotions as anger (all puffed up like a raccoon's), happiness (standing up stick straight as the cat parades in its pride), and contentment (the tail of a curled-up cat will gently sway and often energetically swish while it is being stroked, having a pleasant dream, or being spoken to).

"I grew up on a ranch in a California mountain community (Yucaipa) and I had to take the bus to school every day. I spent a little more time on the bus than I did in school."

Miss Anton, along with John Forsythe, Linda Evans, Ursula Andress and Lee Majors, was a guest star on the two-hour "Love Boat" movie filmed recently in mainland China. The project was onagain, off-again because of the Chinese displeasure over the defection to the United States of Hu Na, the young tennis player. At the last moment, the trip was declared

"There may have been ofsaid Miss Anton, "but we certainly didn't see anything like that. When the ship arrived in China, the reception was tremendous. Maybe they do that for every cruise ship, but it seemed special to us. They had banners welcoming the Love Boat and schoolchildren doing dances.

"The cooperation was total: Maybe that was because China is so interested in the tourist business, and this was a great way of showing off the country."

A 5-foot-11 blonde beauty is bound to attract attention in China, but she said that the Chinese were intensely curious about all Americans:

"Wherever we went, we felt something like animals in a zoo," she said. "If you stopped for a moment, you'd immediately be surrounded by 80 people, staring. They wouldn't touch you, they just wanted to look. And when they saw me getting made up and teasing my hair, they were fascinated. They had never seen anything like it.

Singer has worked hard for her money

LOS ANGELES (AP) -When Donna Summer belts out the lyric of her new hit song, "She Works Hard For The Money," the millionaire queen of disco says she's singing about women she knows - including herself.

"I was poor longer than I was rich," she says emphatically, recalling a youth spent working at odd jobs. "I haven't forgotten other people's hunger and pain. I'm very conscious of it.

Ms. Summer, hitting the road this month after two years off to have two babies, says she's back at work out of both desire and necessity.

"If I don't work, who's going to pay the bills?" she asks, enumerating a long list of obligations including the one-tenth of her annual income that she tithes to various churches as a dedicated born-again Chris-

The largest drain on her finances, she says, was a bitter and prolonged lawsuit with her former record company that cost her $1.6 million to fight and was finally settled out of court.

In the midst of the suit, Ms. Summer's career stalled as she discovered she and her husband, songwriter Bruce Sudano, the new parents of a little girl, Brooklyn, were expecting another child. Ms. Summer, who has a daughter, Mimi, 10, by a previous marriage, gave birth to Amanda Grace last August.

The legal problems had begun when Casablanca Records, the firm that discovered Ms. Summer as a sexy voice on a Germanproduced record, "Love to for them.

Love Ya, Baby," was sold to Polygram International.

"When they bought Casablanca, they were mainly buying me," she says. 'But I was no longer there.'

Ms. Summer says both companies had ignored a "key man" clause in her contract that said that when Casablanca founder Neil Bogart left his company, Ms. Summer was also free to leave. Ms. Summer, who had already sued Bogart for alleged mismanagement of her early career, became embroiled in another lawsuitwith Polygram.

"It was harrowing," she recalls. "And then in the middle of all of it, Neil died."

Bogart, a onetime boy genius of the record industry, died of cancer in May 1982 at the age of 39.

"I loved Neil," says Ms. Summer. "My life in America began with Neil. But I wasn't happy with the way he had dealt with me. He was a businessman, and I don't blame him for that."

During Bogart's fatal illness, Ms. Summer says she and her former mentor managed to bury some of their disagreements.

"I said, 'OK, enough is enough," she recalls, inadvertantly quoting the title of one of her hit songs. "I told my lawyers they were fired. I went in and saw the guy at Polygram personally."

The result was a settlement in which Ms. Summer received "a few million" in frozen back royalties and Polygram received her agreement to record one original album and some additional material

Lighter side

ATLANTA (AP) - Some Atlanta promoters have come up with a bright idea for luring people back downtown for a little nighttime fun.

They threw a party Friday night with the spotlight on the city's renowned Peachtree Street - and just about everywhere else.

Atlanta has become a leading convention center. but visitols and locals long have claimed there is little to do downtown after dark.

So a coalition of public relations specialists, businesses and two radio stations staged a "Light Up Atlanta" bash, with street dancing, fireworks and thousands of lights illuminating the city's downtown until midnight.

Atlanta hotels offered special rates for weekend party-goers, whila downtown bars and restaurants instituted special prices. Merchants threw sales, and the Atlanta Public Library got in the act, too - with a special screening of "Gone With The Wind," the epic film of the city during the Civil War.

Cubists hang triangle to square in gallery

LONDON (AP) - Douglas Cooper, a wealthy Briton who lives in Monte Carlo, put on a suit of startling blue checks, picked up his walking stick and went to London's Tate Gallery to see a first - the major cubist artists together in a show.

Tall and still strong-looking at 72, Cooper knew Pablo Picasso and Georges Braque, who created cubism in Paris in the early 1900s, and he organized the Tate show. But seeing him there was like confronting a prodigal son.

A fierce critic of English art and the stuff the statefunded Tate was buying in the 1950s, Cooper so distracted then-director Sir John Rothenstein that Rothenstein punched him on the nose.

The blow resounded down the years. Rothenstein is long retired and Cooper is happier with the Tate's present director, Alan Bowness.

There never was an exhibition like this and nothing like it will be seen for 50 years," he said of the cubism show. "I've always wondered why it wasn't done before."

Tackling the question of why it took 70 years to get the finest works of the major cubists together, Bowness said: "It's strange but true.

"There is a popular idea that cubist painting is difficult to understand, that it lacks color and will not appeal to the public. There have been smaller exhibitions of cubist artists but not of cubism. This one should be popular."

Art historians say the square-looking portraits, landscapes and still lifes express the troubled modern world that was stumbling toward the cataclysm of World War I in 1914.

The Tate show of 233 paintings and sculpture demonstrates cubism evolving through the finest works of Picasso, Braque, Juan Gris and Fernand Leger. Also represented are sculptors Henri Laurens and Jacques Lipchitz and five associated French artists.

By GEOFFREY MILLER AP Sports Writer

WIMBLEDON, England (AP) - Kathy Jordan, playing inspired tennis, beat an ailing Chris Evert Lloyd 6-1, 7-6 Friday in the biggest upset of the Wimbledon championships.

The 23-year-old Jordan. from King of Prussia, Pa., moved proudly into the last 16 and ended one of the greatest success runs in the history of tennis.

Lloyd, 28, had never previously fallen short of the semifinals in any of her 34 Grand Slam tournaments since she first captivated the Forest Hills crowds at the U.S. Open as a 16-year-old schoolgirl. She has won Wimbledon three times and been runner-up five times, and was the No. 2 seed this

The ex-champion dodged newsmen's questions about her condition and insisted that Jordan had won on

"I have never made excuses and I am not going to do so now," Lloyd said with a laugh. "You'll get nothing out of me."

She cut the interview short saying, "I've got to go, I've got to go," and left the room. Alan Mills, the tournament referee, said later he knew Lloyd was ill.

"She made no request for her match to be postponed,"

All-England Club sources said she was ill during the night and had seen a doctor Friday morning.

For all Lloyd's misfortunes, Jordan was still Wimbledon's heroine. She produced the best serving seen in the women's tournament thus far. Her volleying was top class and Lloyd could not pass her with any consistency.

Carling Bassett, 15-yearold Canadian prodigy, staged the day's other upset. She played on the famed center court for the first time and eliminated 17-year-old Andrea Temesvari, the 14th seed, 6-3, 7-6.

Jimmy Connors, defending his men's title, eliminated Henrik Sundstrom of Sweden 6-1, 7-6, 6-2 and reached the last 16.

Connors was a step ahead of his 19-year-old rival for most of the match. But Sundstrom, one of a rich crop of young Swedish players who have followed in the wake of Bjorn Borg, had two set points in the tiebreaker of the second set.

Sundstrom thought he had won the second of them with an ace. But the ball was ruled out on a hairline decision and Connors resumed his march to victory.

Three other men's seeds won as expected.

Kevin Curren of South Africa, No. 12, whipped Rodney Harmon, 21-year-old rookie pro from Michmond, Va., 6-4, 7-5, 6-2. Harmon reached the quarterfinals of the U.S. Open last year as an amateur but only got into Wimbledon as a "lucky loser" from the qualifying tournament. In other matches, Brian Gottfried, No. 13, defeated Joao Soares of Brazil 7-6, 6-2, 6-2 and Tim Mayotte, No. 16, beat Brian Teacher 7-6, 6-4, 6-7, 6-3.

The crowd was still buzzing about Lloyd's defeat when they settled down to watch two fascinating women's matches, widely apart in character.

First came Bassett and Temesvari, two of the game's prettiest up-and-coming voungsters.

Then two veterans, carrying 73 years between them, faced each other for the 33rd time. Billie Jean King, 39, seeded 10th, out-volleyed Rosemary Casals, 34, 6-3, 6-4 for a place in the last 16.

It gave King a 30-3 margin in the meetings with her old friend and rival.

In other key wommen's matches, Andrea Jaeger, No. 3, beat Susan Leo of Australia 6-3, 6-2; Wendy Turnbull of Australia, No. 7, beat Wendy White 6-3, 6-4; Barbara Potter, No. 11, ousted Camille Benjamin 7-6, 6-2 and Kathy Rinaldi, No. 15, edged Betsy Nagelsen 6-0, 6-7, 6-4.

Lloyd's defeat left Martina Navratilova, the defending champion, a stronger favorite than ever for the women's crown.

A crowd of 10,500 sat around No. 1 court and watched amazed as Lloyd bowed to the super-confident Jordan.

Nobody knew that Lloyd was sick. But they could see she was a long way below her best form.

"Kathy played very, very

Lloyd said afterwards.

Jordan broke in the third game and then went to 3-1 after a long game of four deuces. At that stage there was no real sign that Lloyd was in trouble.

But Jordan then hit her stride, moving to the net and volleying, and dropped only three points as she raced through the next three games for the set.

Lloyd led 4-0 in the second set and appeared on the way to recovery. But then Jordan regained the initiative and won three games in a row.

For once there was no guile in Lloyd's game. She repeatedly hit cross-court forehands from her baseline, and Jordan saw the shots coming and cut them off at the net.

As the points flowed away from her, Lloyd showed no sign of changing tactics. Lloyd held her service to lead 5-3. Back came Jordan with a battery of service winners and forehand volleys, and it went to a tiebreaker. Jordan won it 7-2. She led 4-0 and Lloyd never looked capable of getting back into the match.

Spring superb for Texas schools

An AP Sports Analyis By DENNE H. FREEMAN AP Sports Writer

The Texas college sports scene has closed shop until September but there were some remarkable happenings this spring to ponder over the summer.

For example, FOUR Lone Star schools earned national baseball or softball titles.

The Texas Longhorns captured their fourth College Baseball World Series title in Omaha, Neb., beating Alabama in the final. Texas went undefeated through the tournament.

Earlier, Omaha was also the site for another national championship. The Texas A&M's women's softball team edged Cal-Fullerton to nail down the first place trophy.

Sweep vaults Rangers in front

By SCOTT McCARTNEY Associated Press Writer

ARLINGTON, Texas (AP) - After 17 innings and 5 hours, 22 minutes of baseball, about 24,000 fans stood and clapped as the second of two games ended.

Texas Rangers' loyalists finally have something to cheer about.

After years of frustration and failure, the Rangers look like winners. They stole two game from Oakland Friday night, 6-5 and 6-2, and moved into frst place in the American League West.

That's four consecutive wins, six games above .500, 11 wins in their last 15 games and the first time they have been in first place this late in the season since July 2, 1978.

'We've seen every team in the (West) division and there's nobody that's much better than us overall," said Bill Stein, who had four hits on the night and drove in three runs in the nightcap with a double and a single.

"I think they know it too," Stein added. "They see we don't give up if we're behind. They know they can't relax, and that's a big plus."

Charlie Hough saw the Rangers rebound from 4-0 deficit in the first inning of the first game to win 6-5 in the ninth inning when Larry Parrish tripled and Pete O'Brien stroked a tie-breaking single.

At 34 and in his 14th major league season, Hough has been around long enough to know when to seize the mo-

Hough fanned six batters with his dancing knuckleball and led Texas to a 6-2 triumph in the second game.

'When you're down four runs in the first inning and you come back and win a doubleheader, that's a confidence-builder," said Hough, 6-6, who retired 16 in a row at one stretch. "That was a big game to win after we battled back in the first game.'

Hough said the Rangers' climb into first place wasn't all that important at this stage of the season.

"They're not going to call off the season and say you won, but I think it's good for the fans and good for the organization as a whole."

Mike Smithson scattered 11 hits but joined Hough as a complete-game winner.

"I was hanging my breaking ball early, said Smithson, 6-5. "Then I loosened up and got in the flow of the game." The 6-foot-5 hurler said he appreciated Doug Rader's decision to stick with his struggling starter. "That's a big confidence booster. Anytime a manager has that kind of confidence in me, it's got to bloom," he Oakland Manager Steve Boros went to his bullpen five times during the two games, and his reliever allowed nine hits and four runs. "At some time these guys have to show they can do it," Boros said. 'If they can't do it, we'll have to make changes." Hough, Boros said, "was excellent.

He could be one of the stars of the 1984 Los Angeles Games

Three years ago, the powerful, long-striding Cuban finished a badly beaten fifth in the 400-meter race, an event he had won along with the 800 - in the 1976 Olympics. The 400 and 800 double never had been accomplished in Olympic history, and Juantorena returned to Cuba a national

In 1977, Juantorena's career hit another high when he set a world record of 1 minute, 43.44 seconds for the 800. But not long after that, he was stricken with sciatica and tendinitis, missed most of the 1978 and 1979 track and field seasons, and was unprepared for the 1980 Moscow Games.

His invincibility was over - and so, it appeared, might be his track career.

But Juantorena appears to be back - not as strong or as fast as he was, but still an imposing figure.

In a rare appearance in the United States, the 32-year-old Juantorena finished a coasting second Friday in a semi-final heat of the 800 in the Los Angeles Times-TAC International Summer Games.

He was clocked in a leisurely 1:48.94, behind Johnny Gray of the United States (1:48.85). But Juantorena was satisfied - with his performance and with the new $500,000 track in the Los Angeles Coliseum, the site of next year's Olympic track and field competition.

"Just for qualifying, this was a very easy race," he said. "This is a really, really marvelous track.

"It is very fast and soft ... for my old legs."

Juantorena's aging legs will get their next test on the track Sunday in the 800 final. This is the first track and field competition in the Coliseum in nine years, but its opening day drew little fan response. Less than 1,000 watched in the 92,000-seat stadium.

Funseth shares lead who was celebrating his 22nd birthday in the men's 10 000 despite erratic play

CALGARY, Alberta (AP) - Rod Funseth said he was pulling the ball Thursday and pushing it Friday, but he still shared top spot after two rounds of the Professional Golfers Association Seniors tournament.

He fired a 69 late Friday afternoon to tie Don January at 135 and 7 under par, midway through the $200,000 Peter Jackson-sponsored tournament

Funseth began the first round Thursday by pulling two consecutive tee shots into the rough but fought back to make par.

"It was almost like you birdied the first two holes because you were so happy with what happened after," he said.

It was the same story, but somehow reversed, after Friday's second round..

"Yesterday I started out on the first two holes and pulled my first two tee shots, so I was going to make sure I didn't do that today," he said. "Then I pushed both of

He got under a tree with his first drive and settled for a bogey. On the second, the shot was so wide he ended up on another green

'So actually I felt pretty happy being one over after two holes. It could've been worse." As the round continued Funseth managed four birdies to put him in the lead coming up to the par-three, 17th hole. A good tee shot put him 95 yards from the pin.

"Then I hit it over the green with a wedge...and put it right under a fir tree," he recalled with disgust, shaking his head.

Spectators almost lost sight of Funseth as he waded in among the prickly branches for a chip shot onto the green.

"I couldn't see anything looking out. All I could see was the ball looking down."

He caught enough of it to move about eight feet from the pin but then missed to force a fourth shot and his second bogey of the round. A par on the 18th left him in the seven-under tie with January.

One of the most frustrated athletes was Debbie Brill, Canada's top woman's high jumper and a two-time gold medalist in the British Commonweath Games.

Not having been informed that the woman's high jump qualifying had been canceled because of an insufficient number of entries, she suffered an injury to her right knee during a warmup.

She said it was uncertain whether she would be able to compete in Sunday's final.

Abundant Life

NOT TROUBLE-FREE By Bob Wear

Most of us realize, by now, that there is no such possibility as a trouble-free life situation. There is, however, a desirable situation which is available to us, a situation we can plan and bring into being. We do this by refusing to "emotionalize" what is occurring, and by keeping the things which are happening outside of ourselvse. In this way, we can deal with problems and difficulties with the maximum application of our capabilities.

We make mistakes, for example, but we are not mistakes just because we make mistakes. If, however, emotionalize our mistakes, and thus take them into the privacy of our inner being; we make living unnecessarily difficult, we make too much trouble for ourselves. We must let these mistakes remain outside where they belong, where we can see them and deal with them effectively. Some may be corrected and forgotten, but some cannot be corrected and must be forgotten; except for the lesson we learn. Just because we make a mistake it is not necessary that we decide that we are a mistake. You and I must be bigger than the mistake, we must remain in command, we must continue to live a positive, constructive manner of life.

So, all of us have problems. We can keep them at a proper distance where we can see them clearly. In this way, we can deal with them objectively and much more effectively. If we permit them to crowd in, take over, cloud and perhaps distort our thinking; we make ourselves less able to cope.

"Trouble creates a capacity to handle it. I don't say embrance trouble. That is as bad as treating it as an enemy. But I do say, meet it as a friend, for you'll see a lot of it and had better be on speaking terms with it."-Holmes.

We must not enslave ourselves to undesirable and unwanted events and happenings, and this is what we do if we dwell on them and talk about them. It is better that we choose the "upbeat" and the "up-grading" thoughts and movements and hold to these. In doing this, we can handle everything more successfully. This works, and all of us are free to make our

Economy, deficit are climbing

NEW YORK (AP) - The economy isn't the only thing growing these days.

Along with smiles over a strengthening recovery from recession, there are some frowns over another type of expansion, the bulge in both the federal deficit and the money supply.

Financial markets were unsettled this past week by all this growth and economists are divided over whether it poses a threat to hopes for a sustained recovery.

Among the encouraging signs was a government estimate this past week that the economy is growing at an inflation-adjusted annual rate of 6.6 percent in the stilluncompleted second quarter, up sharply from the 2.6 percent increase in the first three months of the year and the fastest growth since the first quarter of 1981.

Automakers said sales of new cars soared 73.1 percent in early June from a year ago, reaching the highest rate in four years. The government said personal income rose 1.2 percent in May, the largest monthly rise since July 1981, and that consumer spending rose 1.4 percent.

"All economic signs point to a strong recovery," President Reagan said.

Then there was less welcome news of growth.

The Treasury Department said the deficit in May widened to $29.3 billion, a record for any month. For the first twothirds of the fiscal year, the deficit swelled to $161.8 billion from $81.1 billion in the same period a year earlier, far above the record $110.7 billion for all of the previous fiscal year

Political battles over the budget for the next fiscal year heated up, with Congress adopting a spending plan that provides for higher taxes, more domestic spending and less money for the military than the president sought. Against this background, the interest rate paid by the government in the sale of $26.65 billion of bills, notes and bonds this past week rose to the highest levels of the

And concern persisted as the money supply measure M1, representing cash and deposits in checking accounts, remained about 14 percent above levels of a year

Electric plant to close

CICERO, Ill. (AP) -Western Electric's oldest U.S. plant, which helped spread telephone service across America, is facing retirement, bringing down the curtain on a workplace that pioneered employee

The gradual closing of the Hawthorne Works, announced Friday, will mark the end of a factory that boosted worker morale with such activities as company baseball games, on-lant tennis courts,

a club and even a discount

The plant opened in 1905 on a 292-acre tract of prairie outside Cicago when Western Electric was picked by the Bell System to lead production of telephone equipment. It will start shutting down later this year and be completely closed in 1986, company ofjicials said.

The factory's workforce has dwindled to 4,200, from a peak of 48,000 during World War II, as new technology made the plant's products obsolete, officials said.

Plant general manager Virgal Schad said at a news conference that 2,300 of the employees - whose average age is 49 - would be eligible for pensions over the next three years.

Lucas linked to 35 cases

MONTAGUE, Texas (AP) A drifter's claims to have killed 100 women have drawn law enforcement officers from as far away as New Jersey to this small North Texas town where they hope to close long unsolved murder

New Jersey officials said they would question the drifter, Henry Lee Lucas, in Montague today about the death of an unidentified teenager whose body was found in Blairstown, N.J., last July.

Texas officials say they have linked the former mental patient to at least two of the so-called "I-35" murders, a series of slayings in which about 20 young women were found slain along Interstate Highway 35 from Austin to Oklahoma during the late 1970s and 1980.

Lucas, convicted in 1960 of murdering his mother, has been charged with three slayings this week, has talked about the killings of as many as 60 women, and claims to have killed 100 in all in Texas and 15 other states.

Travis County sheriff's deputies traveled to Montague Friday and after meeting with Lucas said they were "quite close" to solving the case of Sandra Dubbs, a 34-year-old Missouri woman whose badly decomposed body was found near Austin

Williamson County Sheriff Jim Boutwell said Lucas had been linked to a body found about 30 miles north of Austin along I-35 in 1980.

The woman, judged to be in her early 20s, was nude except for socks and a ring on one finger. Lucas knew things about the case that only the killer could have known, Boutwell said.

Lucas, who was released in 1975 from a Michigan prison where he was serving a sentence for his mother's slaying, is being held under $1 million bond. Montague County District Attorney Jack McGaughey said Friday it "will be several days or a couple of weeks before anything further develops in the case." Officials expect psychiatric evaluations on Lucas in about two weeks.

Lucas was charged Thursday with the murder of his 15-year-old common-law wife, Freita Loraine Powell. The girl, known as Becky, was a runaway from Jacksonville, Fla., investigators said. Lucas led police to her remains, buried in a rural area of Denton County.

He also is charged with the September murder of Kate Rich, 80, of nearby Ringgold. Police found bones believed to be Mrs. Rich's remains in a wood-burning stove in Lucas ramshackle Stoneburg house. Lucas was indicted Friday in the slaying of a young female hitchhiker whose headless body was found near Plainview in 1981. Her head had been found in the desert near Scottsdale, Ariz.

Lucas, who lived in nearby Stoneburg, says he has killed women in New Mexico.

Arizona, Utah, California, Oregon, South Dakota, Minnesota, Illinois, Michigan, New Jersey, West Virginia, Louisiana, Oklahoma and Missouri, according to authorities.

Dallas brothers open exhibit

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) - More than 1,200 art lovers, including the cream of Fort Worth society, gathered to view for the first time an exhibit of ancient art spanning more than a millenium of early history.

The 166 art objects, including coins, painted vases and small bronzes, are the collection of two sons of the late Texas oil tycoon H.L.

"This is the largest turnout we've ever had for the pening of an exhibit, Kimbell Art Museum spokeswoman Ruth Ann Rugg said.

The exhibit, "Wealth of the Ancient World: The Nelson Bunker Hunt and William Herbert Hunt Collection," opened to the public today following a black tie cocktail party preview for Kimbell patrons Friday night.

The art objects cover the period from approximately 700 B.C. to 400 A.D.

"They're great historical items and show what was important (to their) standard of living." Bunker Hunt said, adding that he has two reasons for collecting them.

"I like them and I consider them also a investment," he said.

The Hunts' exhibit - only part of their holdings in ancient art - includes 15 painted vases, 38 small bronzes and 112 rare gold, silver and bronze coins.

Even as a child, Bunker Hunt was interested in coins, but did not become a serious collector until recently.

'As a young kid, I had a coin collection - it wasn't ancient Greek or Roman - it was more foreign coins," Hunt said. "As I became familiar with the ancient coins, I decided to collect a

"I don't know how you value one-of-a-kind things," he said. "Some people would say they don't appeal to them - and others they do appeal to. I really don't know how you put a monetary value on them."

The Hunt Collections are to be on exhibit at the Kimbell through Sept. 18.

The display then travels to the Virginia Museum of Fine Arts in Richmond (Oct. 19-Dec. 11); The Detroit Institute of Arts (Feb. 1-March 24, 1984); and the Dallas Museum of Art (April 25-June 10, 1984).

Asked whether he would attend openings for the other exhibitions, Bunker Hunt said, "As far as I can, I will."

Stock market again confounds experts

TETT TITTET TOT TOT TOT TOT TOTAL TOTAL

NEW YORK (AP) - In its reaction to the reappointment of Paul Volcker as chairman of the Federal Reserve, the stock market has once again demonstrated its propensity for confounding the experts.

After President Reagan announced his decision last weekend to keep Volcker at the helm of the central bank, many market analysts confidently predicted an explosive response among in-

Almost everyone agreed that the week on Wall Street would begin with a surge of buying. The only big debate was over how long it would

As it turned out, nothing of the sort materialized. The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials declined about 3 points Monday in one of the quietest sessions this month on the New York Stock Ex-

The remainder of the week saw brisker activity, but stock prices continued to drift. The Dow Jones industrials closed Friday at 1,241.69, down .50 from the week before.

The NYSE's composite index, meanwhile, rose .82 to 98.82, and the American Stock Exchange market value index was up 12.12 at 492.76.

Big Board volume averaged 93.56 million shares a day, against 100 million the week

Many Wall Streeters were vocal supporters of Volcker all through the spring as the debate raged over whether he should keep his job after his current term expires in

Critics elsewhere might have blamed Volcker for causing, or at least contributing to, a severe recession in 1981 and 1982 with a policy of tight credit. But leaders of the financial community almost unanimously hailed his success in curbing inflation, in restoring international confidence in the dollar, and in apparently setting the stage for a recovery in business activity.

That same kind of acclaim was still being heard in the past week, despite the markets' ho-hum behavior. It appeared, many analysts sald, that stock-market participants simply had taken Volcker's reappointment into account ahead of time, pushing all the leading indexes to record highs at mid

But the suspicion also began creeping into some observers' comments that the

Fed chairman might now be contemplating some policy changes that he could not judiciously have made before the question of the chairmanship was settled - specifically, some new tightening of credit to rein in the recent rapid growth in the money

As many Fed-watchers point out, Volcker has a longstanding reputation as an artful, poker-faced player in the running match of wits that goes on between the central bank and traders in the securities and currency markets.

"To the extent that his role is to stay flexible and adapt to changing conditions, perhaps the uncertainty surrounding his true intentions is not only desired, but actually sought," said Lee Idleman, director of research at Dean Witter Reynolds Inc.

From Volcker's point of view, Idleman theorized, "the next few months may represent the best time slot, or 'window,' to get the surging money supply back under control again - even by raising rates temporarily, if necessary. Such tightening now would allow renewed monetary growth and lower interest rates heading into the politically crucial months of early 1984.'

Paul Boltz, financial economist at the investment management firm of T. Rowe Price Associates, said several factors argue against any dramatic moves toward tighter credit in the immediate future.

"The international debt situation remains dangerous, and though the economy is gaining a little steam, the upturn unfolding does not qualify as an overheated economy," he said, adding that the Fed "will not risk terminating the recovery."

However, Boltz added, "the president's reappointment of Chairman Volcker is an endorsement of the generally taut monetary policy that has kept a rein on the economy and squeezed inflation."

Volcker and other Fed officials surely feel that way, he said. When the Fed's policy-setting Open Market Committee meets next month, in Boltz's view, it may well opt "to begin phasing in a touch more restrictive

ROCHESTER, N.Y. (AP) -How did the Soviet state gain so much power and its citizens so little?

The answer lies in 1,000 years of autocratic rule, from Byzantine times through the Mongol Empire, the "westernization" begun by Peter the Great, and the Bolshevik Revolution, says Brenda Meehan-Waters, associate professor of history at the University of Rochester. "Peter the Great's 'westernization' didn't include individual rights," she said, noting that he often took severe measures to ensure that nobles served the interests of the state. "Lenin," she added, "did not view Bolshevism as a mass movement, but as an elite conspiracy, based on his distrust that workers could create socialism on their own."

DEAR FRUS: I sent your letter to the Danbury chief of police, Nelson Macedo, and asked, "Why not?" I received the following reply:

DEAR ANN: The Danbury Police Department has some interesting programs that youths in the community may join. For example: The Police Athletic League Explorers Club. The Explorers are instructed in many police subjects and given uniforms. They perform various police duties under the supervision of a sworn police officer. Naturally, because of civil liability and physical dangers, we have guidelines and administrative controls for the safety of the members, both male and female.

"Another organization the Danbury Police are involved with is Operation Saferide. Saferide is an emergency number teens may call should they need a ride after drinking too much. Member's in the Saferide program provide rides that help reduce accidents and death on our highways.

PRE 4TH OF JULY

Glamor comes in glittering packages this fall as sequins, bugle beads and jewels show up on clothes for after five.

The goose is said to be one of the oldest domesticated animals. Geese were depicted in drawings on the walls of King Tut's tomb.

In 1793, town trustees in Lexington, Kentucky ordered an end to horse racing in the streets. It was frightening the pedestrians.

When the Montgolfier brothers flew the first manned hot air balloon on June 5, 1783, the newspaper of that era was supported by small reader ads which have evolved into today's classifieds.

Just as two hundred years of aviation has brought the world together and improved our lives, newspaper classified advertising has also come a long way and made our lives better and

Off the Runway

First look at fall fashion

By ANNE WINSTON

I realize it's only June and you've hardly begun to work on your suntan, but in New York and Dallas and California the fashion folk have made their decision for fall; and that includes Betty Sue down at the Emporium.

She read all the fashion trade papers. She listened to all the experts at the seminars. She looked at hundreds (even thousands) of garments and she ordered the ones she thinks will please you.

The money's spent, so I thought I'd give you a little preview of what you'll be seeing in the stores within the next four or five weeks.

These predictions come from Marjorie Reich, head of M.M.I., one of the fashion services used by major retailers and designers when they begin to give shape to a fashion season.

Reich and her staff scout the U.S. and Europe looking at fabrics, yarns and people, analyse the results and make predictions about what will sell in retail stores. Here's what she says about fall '83:

Shapes will have emphatic shoulders and fall close to the body--but never pinch. Hemlines may be anywhere, opt for the most flattering for your leg, however, the general rule is: 'The straighter the skirt, the shorter it should be. The fuller the skirt, the longer it can be.'

Colors to make your wardrobe look new for fall include the browns-from earth to chocolate; the blues-from electric to navy; the oranges-from shell to pumpkin; bright red as a foile for darks; jewel tones; winter white; and gray-especially in flannel.

If you're a working woman, make your most important fall purchase a dress, especially if you haven't bought one in years. You'll be amazed at the variety and at the new looks.

Perfect for the office is the coatdress, done in lightweight but firm wools such as gabardine or menswear worsted tropicals. Trimly tailored, these dresses have enough structure to give them a businesslike air.

For non-business hours, there will be two important trends for fall. First, exercise and dance clothes will take to the streets with the proper cover ups. Don't hesitate to wear your leotard and tights with a wrap skirt to the grocery or your fabulous new running suit to a backyard

The second phase of casual wear involves lots of hardware--zippers, snaps, D-rings, clasps-you name it and you'll find it on the weekend pants and jackets and shirts that look new this fall. You'll also find an abundance of pockets on these garments cut from sturdy fabrics.

At the other end of the social scale, eveningwear shines, shimmers and glitters. Bugle beads, sequins and jewels adorn sweaters and dresses that turn you into the most glamorous of girls.

After all this, if you simply must have the newest, the most fashionable look around, look for a knit.

Reich describes it as "The single biggest happening for fall '83." She sees knits in all forms—sweater knits, jerseys and sweat-shirting—and all garments—dresses, suits, blouses, sweaters, coats and accessories. It's the most emphatic way to make a new statement for fall.

Liz Caperton, 17-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Sam Caperton of South Bend, recently competed in the State 4-H Food Show on the Texas A&M Campus at College Station.

She is the granddaughter of Mr. and Mrs. C.R. Caperton of 604 Avenue F, Hereford.

Miss Caperton competed and won the Main Dish division of the Young County and district food shows last fall before entering her recipe for Chiles Rellenos in the state

Three judges questioned her on nutritional information as well as judging her food. She competed with 13 other district winners from all over Texas.

Below is her prize winning recipe

Chiles Rellenos 3-(4 ounce) whole green chiles 1-(8 ounce) package Monterey Jack Cheese cut lengthwise into 9 strips. 1/2 cup all purpose flour

1/8 teaspoon salt 1/8 teaspoon pepper

3 eggs, separated

3 tablespoons, all-purpose

vegetable oil 1 Jalapeno pepper, sliced and seeded (optional) meat sauce

Slit each chile lengthwise and remove seeds; stuff each with a strip of cheese. Combine 1/2 cup flour, salt and pepper; dredge each stuffed chile in flour mixture. Set

Beat egg whites (at room temperature) in a large mixing bowl until stiff peaks form. Beat egg yolks until thick and lemon colored; gently fold yolks and 3 tablespoons flour into beaten egg whites. Dip each floured chile in egg batter and fry in deep hot oil (400 degrees) for 2 or 3, minutes, or until golden brown, turning once. Drain on paper towels. Garnish with pepper slices, if desired. Serve with meat sauce Yield: 4 servings.

New bride honored

Sandy Slentz, who was recently married to John Slentz, was honored with a bridal shower last Saturday in the home of Doris Umsted 223 Cherokee.

Receiving guests with the honoree were her mother, Vera Briscoe, and her mother-in-law, Joan Slentz.

Jodi Hamilton asked guests to sign the registry book and she also registered gifts. Robin Umsted served fruit, coffee cake, and punch from silver service at a refreshment table which was covered with an off-white lace cloth.

Hostesses for the shower were Deane Jones, Jan Metcalf, Melissa Tubb, Ann Crouch, Merle Clark, Ms. Hamilton, Libby Huffaker, Mary Douglas, Ms. Umsted, Nelda Fortenberry, Juanita Poteete, Betty Williams, Mary Crist, Sarah Goodfellow, and Gwen Lon-

Indian dancers perform

The Kwahadi Indian Dancers will perform summer ceremonials at the Kwahadi Ceremonial Kiva, Plains Blvd. at Bellaire in Amarillo, on July 1, 2, 8, 9, 15, and 16.

The program will begin at 8 p.m. each evening. Tickets are $2.50 and $1.50, with group rates available.

The Kwahadis are Explorer Scouts from the Amarillo area who have gained fame for their portrayal of Indian dances since 1945. The show is presented by almost 100 boys and leaders and includes dances from all over North America.

Vows repeated by couple

Kerri Monette Cardinal and Richard Keith Spears, both of Amarillo, were married in a candlelight ceremony June 18 at Wesley United Methodist Church. The Rev. Jesse Hodge, pastor, officiated. Church decorations included two baskets of blue and white mums and gladiolus.

The bride is the daughter of Lonnie Cardinal of Hereford and Mrs. Alfonso Martinez of Amarillo. Parents of the bridegroom are Ms. Loretta Spears of Hereford and Burl Spears of Greeley, Colo.

Sherri Crawford was maid of honor and Steve Spears, brother of the groom, was best man.

The bride's train was carried by Michelle Martinez and flower girl was Angela Martinez. Both are daughters of Mrs. Alfonso Martinez. Chris Cardinal served as usher and Tommie Sue Lookingbill as organist.

Given in marriage by her brother, Kevin Cardinal, the bride wore a white quiana gown trimmed with seed pearls. Her veil was also accented with seed pearls and she carried a bouquet of blue and white carnations and baby's breath.

Her attendant wore a long white dress with blue trim. Rebecca Hodge registered guests at the reception which

Anti-drug abuse laws signed

Two bills supported by the Texas Medical Association to crack down on drug abuse have been signed into law by Gov. Mark White.

One measure makes lookalike drugs illegal in Texas, and the other law in effect removes the much-abused methaqualone drug (Quaaludes) from the marketplace. The common street name is "ludes."

Attending the recent signing ceremony at the Capitol was Dr. Stuart Nemir Jr. of Austin, chairman of TMA's committee on alcoholism and drug abuse

The first law prohibits the manufacture, sale, and delivery of look-alike drugs, also known as imitation controlled substances. They are made to resemble controlled substances such as amphetamines.

These imitations usually consist of some combination of phenylopropalomine, ephedrine and caffeine, all legal, over-the-counter drugs. But the combinations have users, often teenagers.

In addition, a particular are a number of less-abused, danger exists for the person who has been taking lookalikes in modest amounts and then unknowingly takes the qualone bill were Sens. real thing. The Food and Drug Administration has confirmed 12 deaths associated with the use of look-alike drugs

For all of these reasons, the 22,000-member TMA pushed for passage of this bill. The sponsors were Sen. Bob Glasgow (D-Stephenville) and Rep. Gary Thompson

(D-Abilene) The second law reclassifies methaqualone as a Schedule I drug, the most dangerous of the five categories under the state's Controlled Substances Act. The effect of classifying a drug under Schedule I is to make it unavailable for prescription by physicians. Heroin, codeine, and morphine are other Schedule I

Teenage dwarf enters experimental program

SHREVEPORT, La. (AP) Seven years, hundreds of injections, dozens of roundtrips from Shreveport to St. Louis and 25 inches later, David Lawrence leads what most people would call a typical teen-age life.

He could have lived his life standing only 3 feet 5 inches tall, with all the inherent pro-hypopituitary dwarfism. But he participated in an experimental growth hormone program and achieved unimagined success.

The story began 12 years ago. From age 6 to 11, David did not grow even a fraction of an inch. His parents, David Sr. and Diane Lawrence, had been worried about their blems that accompany son's lack of growth, but they were reassured by their family physician that he was a slow grower and would grow in spurts. Not being "doctor hoppers," the Lawrences said, they accepted the medical opinion.

When David showed no growth by age 10, they decided to do something. They learned about a research program at LSU Medical Center.

Extensive testing indicated that David possessed somatropin, the chemical which causes the body to grow, but he did not have growth hormones produced by the pituitary gland. These hormones act as a catalyst to stimulate somatropin to cause growth.

Luckily for David, his condition did not include any of the other maladies which can accompany hypopituitary dwarfism - leukemia. kidney problems or diabetes, for example. And David's body was perfectly shaped.

Because of the absence of such problems, he was accepted into the St. Louis program to take growth hormones. Since the program was still experimental, the Lawrences had to assume liability in case negative effects occurred. They were willing to risk that chance, Mrs. Lawrence said, and by that time David was highly sensitive about his predica-

Growth hormones for David and others like him come from the pituitary glands of deceased organ donors at research centers. According to Lawrence, it takes 112 to 2 glands to produce enough hormones for three to seven shots, depending on needed strength for the patient.

Youngsters in the program, at that time, were allowed to remain until they reached age 18 or a height of 5 feet. Too many others needed the hormones from scarce glands to permit patients to continue beyond that age or height.

Once, for eight months. when David was 15 and had reached the desired height. he was suspended from the program. But as soon as glands became available, he was put back on hormones because he was one of the truly phenomenal growth successes, his mother said.

Initially, he grew 1 inch in four months and 3 inches in the first year. After the suspension, it took nearly eight months for the hormones to start him growing

Today he is 5 feet 6 inches tall and has the potential to grow another 2 inches. Because he is 18, his parents must now pay for the needed hormones. A three-week supply is $600. They also have been paying transportation costs the last seven years for a 15-minute checkup every four months in St. Louis.

The Lawrences feel they were in the "right place at the right time" for David and his particular problem. The extract had been tested and was fairly safe to use. Even so, those with hypopituitary dwarfism and no abnormalities can now buy synthetic hormones on the market in unlimited supplies.

Unfortunately for David, synthetic hormones cannot replace human hormones, nor can animal hormones be used. He must continue to use hormones from human pituitaries, and since they are scarce, they are expensive.

Because David's growth was so remarkable, the national television show "Hour

Lawrences and their doctor to explain the disease to TV audiences.

Mrs. Lawrence said she was elated by the experience; David was nonchalant. His experience is something he'd like to put behind him, but he agreed in order to give the parents of other children with the affliction hope that some problems can be corrected or alleviated.

On the show, David was asked if his life had changed, and he replied, "I'm more self assured."

And in a Journal interview, David was asked if he would go through the tests, long trips and injections again.

"If I had to do it again," he said, "knowing what I know I would have to go through, I probably would not. But now it was worth it."

Mrs. Lawrence's message to parents is that if they "are in doubt that their children are not growing, they should get a second (doctor's) opinion. If the child does not grow in 11/2 years, they should question that physician."

David was graduated from Captain Shreve May 23 and plans to enroll in the fall at Louisiana Tech. He is most interested in the field of sound technology.

He plays drums in his own band, Chaos; works sacking groceries; and loves to hunt and fish. He participates in the youth group at Broadmoor Methodist Church. And he "dates all the time."

Intricacies of auction trade taught at Oklahoma City school

OKLAHOMA CITY (AP) -The staccato chant rattles through the old house, then suddenly stops as the young man looks puzzled and asks what the last bid was on a bat-

"You've got to be quicker than that," says state Rep. Jay Blodgett. "That's where a ring man comes in handy."

Six other people, sitting at a table and ranged around the wall on sofas and chairs, grin a little uneasily because they know that soon they will be on the spot, trying to keep up "the call."

All are student's at Cecil Abernathy's School of Auctioneering. And while there are those who think that auctioneers, like others with the gift of gab, are born, not made, Abernathy says it takes more than just the ability to talk fast to become a successful auctioneer.

In fact, fast talking is a minor part of a 40-hour course designed to teach the intricacies of the trade.

By the time the students finish the 10-night session over two weeks, they'll not only know how to pry a higher bid from a hesitant auctiongoer, but how to get out the advertising, hire helpers, promote the sale and collect and record the money.

"Anybody can be an auctioneer with the right training," says Abernathy, who admits to auctioning off just about everything imaginable from a bed to heavy construction equipment over the past 30 years. "But to be successful, you've got to like people - and you've got to get them to like you.'

A lot of the session is devoted to attitude; how to hit the right note of friendliness used in auctions. They are a while still keeping it quarter, a half, one, 21/2, five businesslike. He and the other eight instructors constantly hammer on the any type of number. For in-'friendly business' angle of auctioneering. "You meet the best people in the world doing auctions." Abernathy says. "It's a wideopen field, and anyone with the right training can make a good living. BUt you've really got to like people."

Blodgett, who runs an auction company in Duncan when he isn't taking care of state business as a legislator. says virtually the same thing the night he is the instructor. But he emphasizes that there's more to auctioneering than just making money.

"There are auctions that make you feel a lot better than others," Blodgett tells the students. "I auctioned off a machine shop just the other day for $71,000. I did it on 10 percent commission, and we sold it out in three hours.

"That's pretty good money. But I had another auction for a lady who was going into nursing home. She didn't have much furniture, and I auctioned it off for free. Now, that made me feel really good."

Abernathy and Blodgett don't hesitate to point out the possible financial rewards, though.

"The school costs $300 for the 40 hours," Abernathy says. "I've had students who graduate on Friday night and go out Saturday and make that back in one auction."

But, he says, only about half the average class intends to go into auctioneering as a business.

"Some take the course just to get some self-confidence in front of people," he says. "Others want to learn how to do it so they can do it at social events and the like."

The students are drilled in all aspects of the auctioneering business.

"One of the first things they have to learn is the count,' Abernathy says. "There are basically only six numbers

"Of course, each stands for stance, a half could mean a half a cent, a half-dollar, $50, $500 and so on. One could mean a penny or $1,0000.

'Ninety-nine percent of all auctions will use just these six numbers."

"When you first start the sale, give them the terms," says Blodgett. "Tell them whether you'll take checks or credit cards. If I have somebody in the audience buying a lot and paying with checks, I make it a point to ease around and visit with him awhile and find out something about him.

"Somebody will always ask whether you'll help load what they've bought. That's up to you, but try to keep from doing it if you can."

Blodgett says he always makes it a rule to tell the audience "the only guarantee is that there is no guarantee. Make sure they know that you're taking the seller's word that if something is supposed to work, it should work."

While other students take the portable public address system and practice actioning off Abernathy's office contents, others talk about why they are taking the Learning to be an auctioneer was a matter of necessity for Eddie Shaw, a tall, weathered rancher clad in straw cowboy hat, blue shirt and jeans. He explains that he bought an auction house in his southwestern Oklahoma hometown of Wilson just about two months

"We used to sit around there and spend the time," he says. "The man who owned it sold out and the auctioneer asked me why didn't I buy it so we'd still have someplace to visit, so I did:

"Now my auctioneer says he is quitting, so I decided I'd better learn how to do it.' said Shaw, at 51 the oldest member of the class. "We sell anything people bring in on consignment, for a 20 percent commission.

Shaw says the auction house is strictly a family opeation. While waiting to graduate, he serves as ring man - the man who walks along the edge of the crowd and relays a bid to the auctioneer - while his wife is the cashier and a stepdaughter is the clerk.

Shaw and the rest of the class were somewhat hesitant to get up and practice the call the first night.

"That's why we start out slow," says Abernathy. "We want everybody to get to know everybody else, and to learn the count. Then, on

Army giveaways draw outcries

WASHINGTON (AP) - An records had been kept. Army spokesman says he knows of "no improprieties" in the dispersal of surplus military equipment to volunteer ham-radio operators participating in a program to help soldiers call

U.S. Rep. Joseph P. Addabbo, D-N.Y., alleged earlier this week that since 1981 the Military Affiliated Radio System, or MARS, which has its warehouse at Fort Sam Houston, Texas, had collected $55.7 million in surplus property and given some of it away to civilians.

Addabbo, chairman of the House defense appropriations committee, said congressional investigators had found some of the items were distributed as door prizes at MARS conventions and he asked Defense Secretary Caspar W. Weinberger for an investigation.

Bruce Edwards, spokesman for the 7th Signal Command, which operates MARS, said Thursday he had no knowledge of any equipment being given out as door

Most of the items were believed in usable condition, and while they were being given away the Defense Department was buying identical items needed for military purposes, he said.

The surplus property included missile parts, surgical instruments, parachutes and other items having nothing to do with communications, Addabbo said.

In a letter, he asked Weinberger to have the Pentagon's inspector general investigate the allegations and report on them within 90

Edwards said the equipment had been reclaimed from defense property disposal offices and that "there are no missiles, parachutes, or surgical instruments in the program."

Edwards acknowledged "there might possibly be" parts from such equipment. But he said that most of the items collected for the program "are old, unserviceable, used for parts or scrapped for parts.'

The equipment might be worth $55.7 million at current prices, if all of it were new, but in most cases it was not usable for its original purposes, Edwards said.

Rep. Jack Hightower, D-Texas, a committee member, said Thursday that "I think the people are very disturbed about any evidence of fraud, waste, mismanagement or abuse.

"This matter needs to be thoroughly and completely investigated." said Hightower, adding that he was confident the inspector general would give a full ap-

An increasing and significant number of American workers owe their jobs to exports of U.S.-made products. According to a current Census Bureau survey. "Origin of Exports of Manufactured Products," more than 2.6 million jobs — 12.8 percent of total employment in manufacturing — were to some degree dependent upon exports in 1981. The export role was especially strong in the key industries listed. Geographically, California had the largest number of export-related jobs (526,500) followed by New York (372,000), Texas (285,500); Pennsylvania (284,100).

They don't mess around in Loving's' ABC debut

you miss the first scene, the very first scene, of ABC's "Loving," you'll miss the first smooch, the first hint of marital hanky-panky, the first glimpse of unrequited passion and — Da-da! — the first pregnant pause.

Clearly, they don't mess around getting right to the messing around in "Loving," ABC's first new daytime serial in eight years.

"We hope they get viewers interested right away," understates Agnes Nixon, the show's creator, who also was courted by NBC and CBS but finally decided to bring the project to ABC - home of Mrs. Nixon's other soaps, "All My Children" and "One Life to Live."

The Monday-through-Friday serial, and reruns of "Too Close for Comfort," will replace repeats of "The Love Boat" on ABC's daytime schedule. While "The Love Boat" is fantasized romance, "Loving" is caricatured romance, treating relationships as one-dimensional flings. The bonds of the characters seem as lasting and deep as the actors' latest 13-week contracts.

Although ABC is No. 2 to CBS in prime time, the net-

LOS ANGELES (AP) - If work reaps greater over-all profits because of its leadership in daytime television. The stakes during daylight are enormous, which explains why ABC threw a promotional press bash, complete with heart-shaped pink cake, to hype "Loving."

CBS is trying to blunt Monday's debut of "Loving" by showcasing its soap opera stars on "The Price is Right" all next week.

But ABC has an additional promotional trick. It has scheduled for Sunday night a two-hour movie called "Loving" to introduce the serial's characters and give viewers a headstart on their misery in the morning. The "Loving" serial is scheduled for 11:30 a.m. EDT.

The prime-time launch was a stunt successfully utilized by CBS' "Capitol," which followed an episode of "Dallas" before it was planted on the weekday schedule. There are major differences between daytime and evening soaps, says Mrs. Nixon. "Daytime has the ability for character growth. In daytime, we know why people are the way they are.'

In contrast, she says, viewers know that J.R. Ewing of "Dallas" is a snake, but they don't know where he got his venom.

Sunday's "Loving" movie is not a serial. "It has a beginning, middle and end," says Mrs. Nixon. "There will be a resolution to the one main

The little president syndrome

NEW YORK (AP) - They hold minor titles and have little official authority but they often exercise great power as "dedicated public servants," a self-effacing term that veils their true goals.

They are the "little presidents," the hobgoblins of heads of state such as Ronald Reagan and Margaret Thatcher. They have a consuming desire to be in charge and subservient to none, including the boss.

Little presidents, says Eugene Jennings, who has studied them in corporate life, government, academe, religious institutions, are attracted to power because they see it as life's ultimate value they are most mischievous because they seek to formulate policy, says Jennings, a Michigan State University professor of business administration and confidential consultant to corporate chiefs and occasionally to heads of

Trucking woes frustrate White

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) - The state must find both methods and money to upgrade its deterioriating highways "even if it means raising taxes to get the job done," Gov. Mark White told members of the Texas bus and truck industry.

White told the annual convention of the Texas Motor Transportation Association he was frustrated by the state's "apparent inability" to deal with transportation problems.

"We are going to put the dollars behind it," he said Thursday.

Later, the governor conceded he first would want any tax increase to fund the teacher pay raises he has been crusading for in the Legislature.

White unsuccessfully lobbied the state's lawmakers to approve a 24 percent pay raise for Texas teachers, far above that eventually passed by both the House and Senate.

He reiterated Thursday his support of a so-called "sin tax" that would be levied on luxury items like alcohol and cigarettes to fund the teacher's increased salaries. "Don't put the tax on people who are in difficult nation," he said.

"That's why you won't see us raising the severance tax on oil and gas. Those people are already under economic hardship."

White said he would consider a second special legislative session when he receives a report on education currently being compiled by 18 members of a committee selected by the governor, Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby and House Speaker Gib Lewis.

"The question is how quickly the committee could return the report," White said.
"Hopefully, by September."

Wendt loves wife jokes

LOS ANGELES (AP) - "I love the wife jokes," said George Wendt. He had a sly smile on his face and a glass of beer in his hand.

The beer in the glass was real beer, not the foul-tasting phony stuff he has to guzzle as Norm on NBC's "Cheers."

"Norm wants to have a party and someone asks him why he doesn't have it at home, he said. "Norm says, 'My wife lives there.' Norm throws the party and someone asks, 'Where's Vera?' He says, 'She didn't hear about it.'"

Asked how his own wife reacts to the jokes, he smiled again and said, "She appreciates good humor.' Wendt met and married Bernadette Birkett when they were both performing with Second City.

Norm arrives at the bar for a quick one. Then maybe another one for the road. He's still there at closing time. He has his regular stool. He's a sports buff. He nurses his beers and never gets tipsy.

Wendt grew up in Chicago, where his father operated a real estate business. He graduated from Rockhurst College in 1971 then spent 21/2 vears roaming around Europe and North Africa.

"If I ran out of money I'd come back home and work for my Dad, who was very understanding," he said. "It was easy to save money because I lived at home. As soon as I'd get $800 or so I'd head back to Europe. It was better than sitting at home and wondering what I was going to do.

"I became an actor by the process of elimination. I started by ruling out everything I knew I would hate. Science, no way. Computers, no. Teaching, never. I realized I hated everything.

"Then it dawned on me I'd seen Second City a few times in college. I figured they got paid for that. And if they got paid for it I knew I wouldn't hate it. So I enrolled in a Second City workshop.

"I learned improvisational techniques," he said. "I did mostly slice-of-life things. You make it sound real. If people stop believing you you're just telling jokes. don't try to punch it up or joke

Making waves no problem

CLEVELAND (AP) - Call Sherman Lee the dean of American museum directors, which some have, and he just smiles. Call him a curmudgeon, which others have, and he stalks out of his office to look up the word.

"Let's see," says Lee, paging through an immense dic-

After 25 brilliant and sometimes stormy years as director of the Cleveland Museum of Art, Lee has to figure out if he agrees with some of those art writers.

"I oftentimes have to say 'No,' and go against the grain," he says, his eyes racing along the pages. "This is not necessarily always popular. Some people say I take a certain delight in doing it and I would not deny that. I think going against the grain is essential.

Lee, 65, who retires at the end of the month, has not hesitated to make waves in his career. His open criticism of Thomas Hoving's policies while Hoving was director of the Metropolitan Museum of Art in New York stirred the art world.

"Hoving was a populist," Lee said. "He believed in show biz and getting people's attention. He believed in exhibitions that primarily were oriented toward box office at-

"In general, because the nature of a museum is to conserve, I take a very conservative attitude towards art and the uses of art in society.'

Hoving resigned in 1977 and is now editor of Connoisseur, an arts magazine.

Lee's roaming finger suddently stops on a page in the dictionary. "Curmudgeon a grasping, avaricious man, a miser," he says. Surely the art critics are wrong.

"Two - a crusty, illtempered or difficult and often elderly person.' Now that's closer to the point," he says, laughing.

The Dutch once believed that if a stork built its nest on the roof of your house, it meant the best of luck.

UT astronomers hope for massive telescope by 1989

AUSTIN Astronomers at the University of Texas say reaches of outer space that no man has ever seen could come into view if they can raise the biggest telescope. 'We can say we see this, so we expect to see that, but we don't know for sure" what's out there, said UT astronomer Tom Barnes. "We'll be looking farther into space than man can now see with any telescope.'

money to build the world's

UT scientists are hoping to have the proposed 300-inch telescope installed at the McDonald Observatory in the remote Davis Mountains of West Texas by 1989. Fundraising efforts from private sources are now under way.

The total cost is estimated to be $47.7 million. "That's not much more than it would cost to build a building on campus, and yet it would be the biggest and best telescope in the world," said Barnes, deputy director of the McDonald Obser-

At present, the Soviet Union has the world's largest telescope, a 240-inch instrument at Zelenchuskaya in the Caucasus Mountains. The United State's largest is the 200-inch telescope on Mt. Palomar in Southern Califor-

Modern astronomical telescopes are measured according to the diameter of the dish-shaped mirror at the base of the instrument that gathers light from the stars and concentrates it on a focal plain for the astronomer. The largest of McDonald's four telescopes has a 107-inch mirror that was the world's third largest when it was dedicated in 1969. Now, it ranks only 15th, and scientists at UT say that's not good enough for Texas. 'It's always nice to be able to say, 'We've got the best. We've got a better one than the whole Soviet Union," Barnes said.

He said the university is not seeking federal funds, because the chances of getting them are remote and the school does not want to yield control to the U.S. government.

"We want this to be primarily a Texas telescope for use by Texas astronomers not just UT astronomers, but Texas astronomers," Barnes said.

He said so far UT regents have approved a third of a million dollars, and more than $1 million has been raised from private donations.

"Now we need to get someone who will provide, say a $5 million gift," Barnes

At that point, he said UT officials could go ahead and order the 300-inch curved glass mirror, which takes five years to build.

The glass "blank" alone will cost about $3.5 million, and it'll cost another $5.5 million to have its inside curve polished and ground to within a millionth of an inch of perfection.

'It'll look a lot like a giant contact lens," said Barnes. Next, a microscopically thin sheet of shiny aluminum will be sprayed on the inside surface to act as the reflector.

Transporting the fragile 25-foot-diameter disc from wherever it is built - no one knows that for sure yet - to West Texas will be a "major headache," Barnes said.

"Quite honestly, we haven't addressed the problem of how to ship it, but we know it can be done," he said.

The school announced earlier this month a solution to another major technical problem problem caused by the sheer size of the huge glass disc - how to keep it from flexing out of shape as it is rocked to and fro to track stars. It's only four inches thick and it weighs 20,000 pounds

UT scientists will use sensing devices attached to a computer that in turn will control arms attached to the back of the mirror working like huge rubber plungers, pushing and pulling to keep the mirror in perfect shape.

Barnes said having the world's largest telescope at the West Texas site will boost the stature of the school and help UT in its recruiting efforts of faculty and graduate students, and will help the state by increasing the level of academic excellence which he said attracts high technology industry.

It'll also make his job more exciting, he said.

"There's nothing that makes a class of astronomy students light up more than having their professor come in having just returned from the mountain and say, 'To hell with today's lecture - let me tell you what I discovered.' They'll be listening to someone who two nights ago was on the world's biggest telescope, learning something new."

Colcor breaks up corruption

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) -Southeastern North Carolina is a sparsely populated area of pine forests and the Green Swamp, an unlikely place for an Abscam-style FBI investigation into bribery, extortion, drug trafficking and public corruption.

"It was just a rural backwater area, very quiet," said Assistant U.S. Attorney Doug McCullough.

But one summer day in 1980, an extortionist warned the owner of a video-game parlor in the small town of Whiteville - population 5,565 - that he needed to come up with protection money or he would get hit with zoning complaints. The arcade owner was a former FBI informant who dialed the FBI in Charlotte.

That was the beginning of an undercover investigation called Colcor, named for allegations of corruption in Columbus County, where the probe began.

U.S. Attorney Sam Currin said Thursday the investigation is "the most prominent FBI undercover operation in the South.

This week, the probe netted Lt. Gov. Jimmy Green on bribery and conspiracy charges. He's the highestranking state official indicted this century in North Carolina.

Green, who lives in neighboring Bladen County, was charged with taking a $2,000 bribe and conspiring to take $10,000 in bribes a month.

He was one of two political figures indicted this week. Democratic state Sen. R.C. Soles was indicted on charges of lying to a grand jury, vote buying and aiding extortion.

So far, the Colcor investigation has resulted in 36 indictments and 25 pleas or convictions.

"Colcor has been very successful," Currin said. "I judge the success by the fact that everyone tried has been convicted but most have been guilty pleas. That's a good indication of success." Currin said Columbus County was a good location for the investigation because "it would be logistically impossible to carry on undercover operations in separate parts of the state.' Convictions of prominent

BROWNSVILLE, Texas (AP) — A Customs Service patrol officer said Friday the service was seeking "revenge" when it began prosecuting a case against him on grounds that he broke the law by working briefly in a political campaign.

Officer Jim Dukes said a government attorney who took his side Thursday in the 3-year-old case offers him one ray of hope."

Dukes, 34, was charged in July 1980 with violating the federal Hatch Act, which bars government employees from being actively involved in political campaigns.

He faces a possible 30-day suspension for working a total of about 20 hours for the 1978 re-election campaign of Sen. John Tower, R-Texas.

Dukes had worked in the campaign to meet requirements of a course in political parties at Pan American University at Edin-

He has maintained he did not violate the law because the work he did for Tower could not be considered "active" campaigning. "I engaged in what was anonymous telephone polling," he said Friday, "I made phone calls from a list of registered voters, both Republican and Democrat, and asked them if they planned to vote for Sen. Tower.

"There was no attempt to convince them to vote for Sen. Tower and no discussion of issues," he said.

On Thursday, a new government prosecutor handling the case told the Merit Systems Protection Board in Washington that the government had no business prosecuting the case.

The three-member board rules on personnel violations by federal employees. Thursday's hearing was to determine whether the board had authority to impose less than the 30-day suspension on Dukes, the minimum specified by the Hatch Act.

"I wouldn't have presecuted it frankly," he told the board. "One of my QUESTION: My child is not happy about school because he's not doing well, especially in reading. I know he's smart enough. Could there be something wrong with his vision?

ANSWER: Any child who has trouble learning to read or seeing things on the blackboard is going to be unhappy. And so will his parents if he fails in his schoolwork. Sometimes teachers think an inattentive child is daydreaming.

But maybe he's daydreaming because he can't see well when the teacher uses the blackboard to explain things. There are many signs of poor vision. For example, holding a book too close, difficulty in learning words or skipping words when reading aloud. An eye examination is the only way to find out if there's a vision problem.

Fire ant spraying completed downstate

KERRVILLE, Texas (AP) - The Texas Department of Agriculture has finished its aerial spraying of two Hill Country counties with a chemical to battle the pesky imported fire ant. The department's fleet of light planes sprayed almost 450,000 acres with the chemical Pro-Drone, short of its goal of 600,000 acres, according to spokesman Mark Trostle.

Trostle, an expert on the imported fire ant, said department officials would return to the treated areas in August to determine if the Pro-Drone was successful in battling the ants.

A second round of treatment has been planned for late September or early October, he said.

Pro-Drone disrupts the reproductive cycle in colonies of fire ants, a nuisance to farmers and ranchers and named for their stinging

Justin McBride ...checking the tested wheat

Wheat varities being tested

There are 19 varieties of wheat being tested north of Hereford at the Raymond Schlabs farm.

Schlabs has been assisting Justin McBride, Deaf Smith County Agent and the Texas Wheat Growers for many years in the testing of wheat for this area.

The Texas Wheat Growers makes the decision on what wheat will be used in the testing and where it will be tested.

The wheat will be harvested in another week or so and farmers are urged to go and see the wheat. It is located on the south side of the Schlabs farm.

The reason for testing the wheat is to help the farmer choose which wheat is best suited for this area and his own personal needs.

After the wheat is harvested results will be published in the Deaf Smith County Result Handbook which is published by the County Extension Office.

Some of the varieties being used in the test are ones already being grown in this area, some are grown in other places and some have not been released for produc-

Planting virtually complete

WASHINGTON (AP) -Corn planting was virtually complete in the major producing states as of June 19, to the according government's Joint Agricultural Weather Facili-

'Emerged fields were in fair to good condition in all areas as warm weather stimulated rapid growth," the facility's weekly report said Tuesday. "Silking was well advanced across the South. Early-planted fields reached the dough stage of (kernel) development."

Soybean planting reached 85 percent completion, about average for this time of year, the report said. A large share of the acreage was planted during the week of June 13-19 in Kansas, Michigan, Kentucky and Tennessee as farmers hurried to catch up.

The report said that cotton planting was 92 percent finished in the major states.

Senate yields to pressure

The Senate Agriculture Committee yielded this week to pressure from USDA to recommend that agricultural commodity target prices be frozen at the 1983 level. This assures that the proposed freeze will be considered by the Senate. Last month the House Agriculture Committee postponed a vote on the issue until hearings can be held.

The Agricultural Act of 1981 set annual increases for target prices to offset the increases in the cost of production. Target prices for grain sorghum were set at $4.85 per cwt. ($2.72 per bu.) for 1983; $5.14 per cwt. (12.88 per bu.) for 1984; and $5.40 per cwt. ($3.02 per bu.) in 1985. The freeze, if passed, will reduce

'84 targets by 29 cents per cwt. and '85 targets by 65 cents per cwt.

Grain Sorghum Producers Association has expressed opposition to the proposed freeze. In a telegram to Secretary of Agriculture John Block, GSPA Executive Director Elbert Harp said, 'Freezing target prices will counteract the surplus reduction benefits of the PIK program by decreasing program participation and increasing production and surplus."

Harp pointed out that the 1984 sorghum target prices, as they now stand, a re still 22 percent below the cost of production. "Target prices are theonly real price protection farmers have under the present program," he stated.

Hog producers crank up machine

WASHINGTON (AP) -Hog farmers are turning up their pork machine to a higher pitch than indicated by Agriculture Department surveys a few months ago.

If the trend continues and plans are carried out, the larger hog production could mean more pork for consumers dater this year and in 1984 - and possibly lower prices both for shoppers and producers.

The new signals were included in a quarterly report issued Wednesday by the department

As of June 1, the nation's inventory of hogs and pigs totaled 57.5 million head, up 11 percent from a year ago but still down 4 percent from June 1, 1981.

The breeding herd was 8.07 million head, up 9 percent from a year ago and 3 percent below two years ago, the report said. Market hogs, at 49.4 million, were up 11 percent from last year and 4 percent below two years ago. According to the new figures, the pig crop in the first half of the marketing year that began last Dec. 1 was 46.8 million head, up 14 percent from the same period in 1981-82 but still 2 percent below 1980-81.

The pigs born in the first quarter were up 11 percent from December-February the previous year - to nearly 20.4 million head. The March-May pig crop jumped 17 percent to more than 26.4 million

Officials said producers had 6 percent more sows farrow in the December-February period than a year earlier, while in the March-May quarter farrowings were up 17 percent.

In a similar report last March 21, producers indicated they might increase farrowings only 8 percent in the March-May quarter.

'Sows farrowing during this six-month period, at 6.22 million, were 11 percent more than during the comparable period last year," the new report said. "Pigs saved per litter at 7.53 surpasses the previous high of 7.39 in 1981."

Looking ahead, the report said, producers indicated they will have 6.32 million sows farrow during the June-November period, an increase of 9 percent from the last half of the 1982 marketing year and 1 percent more than

"While the Reagan administration's PIK program has been described as "a band-aid to stem the flow of red ink" in our agricultural economy, the band-aid appears to be coming unstuck on three of its four corners," says Texas Agriculture Commissioner Jim Hightower. "The program was ballyhoose as a way to cut farm expenses this year, to reduce crop production, to raise crop prices, and to cut the cost of government farm programs. PIK is cutting input costs, but it looks like it will cause only minimal reductions in the size of this year's harvests, it will not raise prices that farmers receive, and it is likely to cost the taxpayer more than any farm program in U.S. history."

Battle against wasps progressing

WASHINGTON (AP) The Agriculture Department says significant progress has been made in the rearing of a parasitic wasp which shows promise of being an effective natural enemy of cropdestroying pests throughout much of the world.

Officials said Thursday that a USDA entomologist, William C. Nettles, developed a new chemical mixture which stimulates the wasp to lay eggs by the thousands.

The wasp, Trichogramma, is present in nature "but doesn't reproduce well enough to be effective for biological control" of harmful insects.

But the new chemical stimulant - a simple salt solution of potassium chloride and magnesium sulfate - will overcome this obstacle to mass rearing of the wasp for release in fields of cotton, corn, soybeans, vegetables, fruits and forest trees, said Terry B. Kinney Jr., head of USDA's Agricultural Research Ser-

"We now have the basis for an inexpensive method of rearing and collecting many thousands of Trichogramma eggs," Kinney said. The wasp lays its eggs in the eggs of other insects. But the wasp eggs hatch first, and the larvae then attack the host eggs so that they do not

About 75 insect families, including beetles, flies and moths, fall prey to the wasp.

If other obstacles can be overcome, commercial use of the wasp could result in less reliance on chemicals to control crop pests.

The experiments which led to the stimulant's development were conducted by Nettles. Richard K. Morrison and others at the department's Agricultural Research Service's cotton insects research laboratory in College Station,

One big problem remains. An artificial diet for the wasp has yet to be developed. Scientists in many areas of the world are working on the problem, however, because of the wasp's potential as a natural pest control.

Nettles said the Chinese grow the wasps on a natural diet consisting of insect blood, egg yolks, milk and salts. The diet is effective, he said, but the use of insect blood is expensive and inefficient in the United States.

Corn prices may average highest in last three years now estimated for the current

WASHINGTON (AP) -The price of corn is going up and in 1983-84 may average the highest in three years, according to new Agriculture Department projections.

Analysts attributed the improved price outlook to an increase in livestock feeding and this year's planned cutback of grain production under the government's payment-in-kind program.

Based on the new projections issued Thursday, the price of corn at the farm in the marketing year that will begin on Oct. 1 is now expected to be $2.75 to $3 per bushel, 10 cents more than USDA economists forecast earlier this month.

That would compare with a

> The analysis said that total corn and sorghum feed use estimates for the current season of 1982-83 have been boosted by 100 million and 50 million bushels, respectively.

In all total feed use of corn this year could climb to 4.5 billion bushels, up from less than 4.2 billion in 1981-82. Looking ahead to 1983-84, feed use might settle down to around 4.45 billion bushels up from 4.3 billion projected on June 13.

No significant changes were reported for other commodities. The June 1 wheat inventory, at 1.54 billion bushels, was a record carryover of old-crop wheat going into a new marketing year. A year ago, the carryover was 1.16 billion bushels.

With hog production expanding more rapidly than had been expected, more meat will be available later this year and into 1984. This will mean downward price pressures for livestock pro-

"The larger pork output is likely to have some negative impact on cattle, broiler and turkey prices, particularly this fall," the report said.

Slaughter steer prices in the fourth quarter are now expected to average $61 to $65 per 100 pounds, down about $2 from the previous forecast.

LUBBOCK, Friday, June 17, 1983

Pervasive pessimism concerning production prospects and severe but constructive criticism of the Federal crop insurance program dominated discussion June 15 when directors of Plains Cotton Growers, Inc. met in a special called session in Lubbock.

To a man the 26 directors present, representing a good cross section of the Plains, reported unsatisfactory crop conditions. Directors from some counties, generally south and west of Lubbock, lamented continued absence of planting moisture. Existing stands of cotton in the remainder of the area were described as retarded and "sick" from wet cool weather, high winds and/or intermittent hailstorms.

All were agreed that rain was an immediate must on dry fields and that warmer temperatures were equally imperative on most existing stands if the Plains is to produce anything like a normal crop.

Comic relief was provided in the otherwise gloomy picture when Lloyd Cline of Lamesa said "The only thing close to being wet in Dawson County is Ybanez."

The group was most critical of Federal crop insurance and instructed PCG staff and officers to propose that the Federal Crop Insurance Corporation (FCIC) institute a "pilot program" on the High Plains for 1984, perhaps based on adjusted provisions of the disaster program of past years. Interest in such a possibility, PCG President Tommy Fondren of Lorenzo had previously reported, surfaced in an earlier meeting between himself, PCG Secretary-Treasurer Bennie Claunch of Bula and Under Secretary of Agriculture Frank Naylor.

Fondren stated that he and Claunch had accepted an invitation to a meeting in Denver June 21 and 22 with the FCIC Board, at which time they would pursue the pilot program idea and call attention to Federal crop insurance improvements suggested by the PCG Board.

Any new or revised FCIC program, according to PCG discussion, should provide for prevented planting coverage, more realistic yields, the use of ASCS acreage measurements, correction of the excessive drain of agent commissions and the establishment of an effective means to resolve inter-agency conflicts.

On other matters the Board expressed opposition to the Administration's proposal to freeze target prices and loan rates at 1983 levels, supported the adoption of two new cotton standards and agreed that a payment in kind acreage reduction program may well be needed for cotton in 1984 unless surplus stocks in the U.S. decline to below four million bales at the end of the 1983-84 marketing year.

Texas crops report

Summer pushing crops to maturity

COLLEGE STATION, Texas (AP) - The infant summer season is bringing hot, dry weather to Texas, pushing some crops to maturity while stressing others, said Dr. Zerle L. Carpenter, director of the Texas Agricultural Extension Service, in his weekly review of agricultural conditions.

Wheat is maturing rapidly in the Panhandle and South Plains, where combines should start rolling into full swing by about the first of July. Harvesting remains active over some northern areas of the state and is nearing completion in the Rolling

Corn and grain sorghum are maturing rapidly in deep South Texas, Carpenter said, while corn is in the roasting ear stage in coastal, central and southwestern areas. Cotton has set bolls in southern and some coastal areas and is squaring along the Upper Coast and in cental sections, with insect pressures starting to increase.

Some peanut planting continues in central areas, and farmers in Northeast Texas are planning to plant a late soybean crop following wheat. Dryland cotton farmers in southern counties of the South Plains are still waiting for planting moisture, and their time is fast running out.

Time is also running out for a lot of livestock in droughtplagued Far West Texas, Carpenter said. Some cattle have already starved to death, and the rapid deterioration of range conditions has a lot of ranchers concerned.

Young crops as well as pastures and ranges over much of the state could benefit from a good rain, Carpenter said, particularly since most crops are late and entering their critical grow-

The hot, open weather is allowing hay making operations to make good progress, with good first cuttings in many areas. However, rain will be needed for additional cuttings.

Peach harvesting continues in full swing in many locations, with the Freestone peach harvest active in Gillespie County, Texas' top

Reports from district Extension directors showed

PANHANDLE: Wheat is maturing rapidly, with some limited harvesting. A good harvest is in prospect. Most crops are making good progress, with insect activity increasing. Grasshoppers are building up. Ranges continue to look good but will need rain

SOUTH PLAINS: Dryland cotton farmers in southern counties are still waiting for planting moisture and their time is fast running out. Most crops are doing well, with irrigations active. Early onion harvesting has started. Wheat is ripening fast and harvesting should start about PLAINS: ROLLING Farmers are wrapping up wheat harvesting and cotton planting. The wheat harvest has been a good one, with excellent yields in some counties. Some cotton lost to recent heavy rains and hail is being replanted. Vegetable harvesting is in full swing in Knox County and most home gardens look good. Ranges are in good to excellent shape although moisture is short in some spots.

CENTRAL: NORTH Farmers are harvesting wheat and oats and are getting good yields. Spring planted crops are making good growth, with some peanuts still being planted. Early peaches are ripening and the pecan crop looks good. Cattle generally have good grazing.

NORTHEAST: Most crops are doing well and farmers are harvesting a good wheat crop. Some farmers are getting ready to plant soybeans after wheat. Pea planting will start soon. Hay making is active and early peaches are being harvested. Cattle have good grazing.

FAR WEST: Dryland crops and ranges are in dire need of rain. Ranges continue to deteriorate rapidly under hot, dry conditions, and some cattle have already starved to death. Crop irrigation continues where water is available.

WEST CENTRAL: Farmers are still harvesting some wheat and oats, with fair to good yields. Most of the cotton crop has been planted, and grain sorghum is making fair progress. Grazing conditions have improved in counties where recent rains fell, but more moisture is needed for sustained growth and to improve stock water supplies. Harvesting of Freestone peaches is in full swing in

Gillespie County. CENTRAL: Peanut planting continues but the acreage is down. Some farmers are substituting Spanish peanuts for later maturing varieties. Cotton and grain sorghum are making good progress, but most fields will need rain soon. Harvesting of wheat and oats is moving toward completion, with fair to good yields. Grazing conditions are generally

EAST: Corn, peas and watermelons are making good progrss. Early peaches continue to produce a good harvest, and vegetable gardens are in production. Cattle look good and are still getting some grazing from clovers. Hay making is active between rain showers.

UPPER COAST: Most of the region needs a good rain to boost crops an pastures. Crops generally look good but are entering a growth period when moisture is critical. Home vegetable gardens are in production and peach harvesting continues. Hay making is active.

SOUTH CENTRAL: Crops are doing well but insect pressures are increasing in some cotton fields. Roasting ears are about ready in most corn fields. A good peach harvest continues over the area, and pecan prospects look good. Grazing is adequate but some pastures and ranges need rain.

SOUTHWEST Crop and range conditions got a boost from recent rains, but more moisture will be needed soon to sustain growth. Crop irrigations are active where water is available. Corn is nearing the roasting ear stage. Harvesting of cab-pickles continues. Livestock are in good condition.

COASTAL BEND: Most cotton has set bolls, grain sorghum is turning color, and corn is maturing rapidly. Insects are increasing in grain sorghum. Recent rains have boosted pastures and ranges, but additional moisture is still needed in some counties. Cattle are in fair shape, with flies and mosquitoes heavy in some locations.

SOUTH: Farmers are spraying cotton for boll weevils while corn and grain sorghum are moving toward maturity under hot, dry weather. Watermelon harvesting continues, but bers, cantaloupes honeydew melons are ding down. Livestock grazing conditions gene are good.

U.S. honey production a sticky situation

WASHINGTON (AP) -The Agriculture Department predicts that U.S. honey production may rise this year, thereby adding to the nation's honey surplus problem.

"Despite the cold, wet spring in the northern and eastern states, floral sources are expected to be plentiful and honey flows will likely be adequate as well," the department's Economic Research Service said Tues-new Agriculture Department inventory shows that the U.S. grain stockpile, fed by several years of bumper harvests, continues at record levels for this time of year.

As of June 1, the corn stocks totaled 5.08 billion bushels, a record for that date, the department's Crop Reporting Board said. That was up 30 percent from 3.9 billion bushels in storage a year ago.

Of the total corn inventory, 3.21 billion bushels, or 63 percent, were under government control - 483 million bushels owned outright by the Commodity Credit Corp. and 2.73 billion bushels under price support loan in the reserve program.

June 1, included: -Sorghum, 530 million bushels, up 39 percent from a year ago. The government controlled 508 million bushels, mostly under loan in

-Oats, 229 million bushels, up 51 percent from a year ago, with 5.9 million under government control. -Barley, 223 million bushels, up 49 percent from a year ago, with 104 million bushels under government

Wheat, a record for June 1 of 1.54 billion bushels, up 32 percent from a year ago, including 1.24 billion under government control as CCC stocks or in the reserve.

But honey imports also could increase from last year's record of 92 million pounds, putting further pressure on domestic prices paid to beekeepers.

Honey imports were 58.6 million pounds in calendar 1979 and declined to 49 million in 1980 before jumping to 77.3 million pounds in 1981 and then to last year's record of 92 million pounds.

"World honey supples have been increasing more rapidly than world demand, par-ticularly since 1980, and have caused prices to weaken," the report said.

The government supports the price of honey, with producers having an option of receiving a federal loan on their honey and an opportunity to pay off the loan later if market prices should be acceptable.

Under federal law, honey supports have risen annually. This year's average support

Thus, the report said, beekeepers "have been forfeiting larger and larger amounts of honey to the Commodity Credit Corp." of USDA.

"This contrasts with the earlier years when beekeepers used the program as a financial instrument to market honey in an orderly manner - using the commodity credit loans to pay operating expenses before the honey was later redeemed for market disposition," the report said.

Although the honey program is small compared to the $2-billion-a-year dairy support apparatus, it has shown a sharp increase recently.

The honey stockpile held by the Commodity Credit Corp. as of April 30 totaled nearly 120.3 million pounds at a cost to the taxpayer of $72.8 million - about 61 cents a pound.

Of the total, about 38.6 million pounds were owned outright by the corporation. while 81.7 million pounds were still under loan.

Comparatively, a year ago the corporation held a total of 49.3 million pounds of honey, which had a federal investment of $27.6 million. That included less than 5.5 million pounds owned outright and

43.8 million pounds under

Many producers contend that their industry is being jeopardized by the imports and want Congress to pass legislation which would increase the import duty on foreign honey.

Beekeeping also is vital to the annual pollination of many important U.S. fruit crops, which could be affected if the honey business turns sour.

The report held little hope that Americans will soon eat their way out of the honey surplus. Total consumption this year is expected to rise to around 250 million pounds from 241.8 million in 1982 still less than this year's output plus imports.

Last pig in Haiti dead

WASHINGTON (AP) -The Agriculture Department says that "the last pig in Haiti is dead" - killed as part of a program to curb the spread of African swine fever to other areas, including the United

A progress report on the campaign in Haiti to wipe out the disease was issued Tuesday. The outbreak of African swine fever in the Caribbean Basin has raised concern among U.S. hog producers that the deadly virus might spread to the mainland.

James Downard of the department's Animal and Plant Health Inspection Service said the project began in May 1982. By this June 15, nearly 375,000 swine had been slaughtered, with animal owners paid $9.4 million as compensation.

Now that all the pigs are gone in Haiti, efforts will begin to repopulate the country with disease-free hogs.

The pigs were slaughtered by animal health authorities and eviscerated.

This does not mean that you cannot take your wheat to a feedyard. However, prior to settling with them on the wheat, you must come in to the office and make certification.

PIK WHEAT FROM EXISTING LOANS:

Producers who are receiving their PIK wheat from their reserve loans may pick up their warehouse receipts beginning July 1 at the ASCS office. You will have until November 30 to pick up the receipts. CCC will pay $.000726 per bushel per day storage on this PIK grain beginning July 1 and ending on the date you pick up your receipts or November 30, whichever comes first.

ACCURATE ACREAGE REPORTS

Accuracy of your certification will determine whether or not you are in the PIK program. You have a 5 percent tolerance on individual crops. If you miss your acreage report by more than this 5 percent, you will be ineligible for program benefits AND there will also be liquiated damages assessed on PIK bushels.

If you have both irrigated and dryland acres of a crop, these acres will have to be reported separately and must be just as accurate as any

Roy Acuff looks back on 'a happy life' in music

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) - Country music singer Roy Acuff this year joins comedian Bob Hope as an 80-yearold performer, still active, who is beloved for entertaining U.S. troops overseas.

Acuff, whose fancy fiddling and stirring songs earned him the laurel of "the king of country music," will be 80 in September. Hope was 80 in

In 1949, Acuff made his first of dozens of trips overseas."I followed the boys wherever they went," Acuff recalled in an interview. "I went into the trenches in Korea during the ceasefire.'

Resurrecting memories, Acuff said he and Hope had different styles.

"I'm a country boy," he said. "I'm no Sinatra or Bing Crosby or Bob Hope. I'm with the country field of music and it's all I've ever tried to represent."

In his 45th year of singing for the Grand Ole Opry, Acuff now lives within hollerin' distance of the live country music show. The Opry built him a $251,000 home whose front door is just 92 steps from the entrance to the Grand Ole Opry House. It saves him the 10-minute drive from the home that became too big for him after his wife died in June 1981.

Acuff has been entertaining Opry crowds almost every weekend since Feb. 19, 1938, with songs like "The Wabash Cannonball" and "The Great Speckled Bird "

"I came here to win and stayed with it until I became a pretty good winner," he said. "It's been a happy life." He said he had thought about retirement, but loyalty to the Opry and his band keep him on stage.

"I mentioned to Hal Durham (Opry manager) that when I'm 80, maybe I should quit," he said. "But the people who come to the Opry come to see people who've been here a while.

Acuff, the son of a Baptist minister, hears poorly now and takes medication for a heart ailment that flared up in 1976. And he frequently forgets his yo-yo, which he uses during Opry pauses "to keep the stage alive."

One thing he hasn't forgotten is country music and how it should sound.

"I'm afraid we're letting it get a little out of hand in using strong electric guitars and strong beats on the drums," he said."I like the sweetness of the guitars and fiddles - the softness of them. Country music should be soft and enjoyable."

How does he want to be remembered? "As a man who took pride in country music and did what he could to raise it and help its standards," he replied. "... I'd like to be remembered as a man who went to heaven and not another place. I hope to join my wife some day.'

Matthau, Williams mixture provides 'instant hilarity'

HOLLYWOOD (AP) -What happens when the disparate comedic talents of Walter Matthau and Robin Williams are mixed in "The Survivors," a new Columbia Pictures release? Instant hilarity, to hear Williams tell

"I did Jessel for Matthau, and it never failed to break him up," Williams said. "For me to break up, all I had to do was look at that incredible face of Walter's."

Williams, late of "Mork and Mindy" on television, and "Popeye" and "The World According to Garp" in movie theaters, flew into town from his Sonoma ranch for interviews. He looked un-Morkish, wearing a full red beard.

"It's for my next film, 'Moscow on the Hudson,'" he explained. "I play a Russian circus musician who defects to the United States while shopping in Bloomingdale's in New York. I've been taking seven hours a day of Russian at Berlitz. Wanna hear?"

He then uncorked a flood of Russian, showing off one of the most acute ears for accents in show business. In the course of the interview he mimicked everything from his farm animals to the voice that breaks up Matthau, the late George Jessel.

"The Survivors," directed by Michael Ritchie ("Bad News Bears"), also stars Jerry Reed.

"Survivors' taught me a lot," Williams said. "Not only from Walter, but Jerry Reed, too. He's a marvelous combination of Jack Nicholson and Mister Rogers. The three of us worked well together, always finding some playoffs we could use, never competing

"I like the idea of working with another comedian, and I'd like to do more of that in films. When you have two different energies working, you can end up with something that is better than the sum of two parts."

Williams' last movie, "Garp," had mixed reviews and similar box office appeal.

"For me it was a positive experience," he said, "and it seems even more so, now that

By MARY CAMPBELL AP Newsfeatures Writer

NEW YORK (AP) - The Kingston Trio, which recently played Carnegie Hall, was formed in the spring of 1957 and has been celebrating its 25th anniversary for the past year. But there hasn't exactly been a Kingston Trio for most of those years.

Only one of the original members, Bob Shane, silverhaired at 49, is left. The others are Roger Gambill, 41, who has been singing with Shane for 11 years, and George Grove, 35, who as a boy listened to Kingston Trio records so much that his father admonished him, "After all, you can never grow up and be in the Kingston Trio." In 1957, the Kingston Trio was Shane, Nick Reynolds and Dave Guard, Menlo College students who sang in coffee houses around San Francisco. They were discovered by a publicist at the Cracker Pat in Palo Alto and signed to a contract written on a table

Their biggest hit came the following year with "Tom Dooley," only their second release. Other songs they made famous were "The Tijuana Jail," "M.T.A.," "A Worried Man" and "Scotch and Soda."

The trio tours 35 weeks a year. When they first regrouped, they spent three months in the Ohio Valley and the rest in the West. Now, they're expanding the territory. Their Carnegie Hall appearance was the trio's first in 21 years.

What about the inevitable comparisons? "A lot of people play our old records before coming to hear us," Shane said. "Basically, all we've done with the old material is uptempo it. Everybody has learned to live faster lives. We moved up the pace.

"George has a whisky baritone that people remember," he said. "Roger on lead; harmony's too hard. Whatever it is, it works. It works very well." Dave Guard left the Kingston Trio in 1961, replaced for six years by John Stewart. In 1967, Shane and Stewart started solo careers and Nick Reynolds started farming.

"I was doing a solo about nine months in 1968," Shane recalled. "I didn't like it. I realized I enjoyed singing with a group. Then I started the New Kingston Trio with a couple of other fellows. We made one single record for Capitol. It was horrible.

'Basically we were doing bars, hardly any concerts at all. We couldn't get any better jobs. We were singing mostly new material.

"If I was going to keep the name," he continued, "I was going to have to do the old material. It took four or five years before that sank in with me.

Gambill was with Shane by that time, and they added Grove.

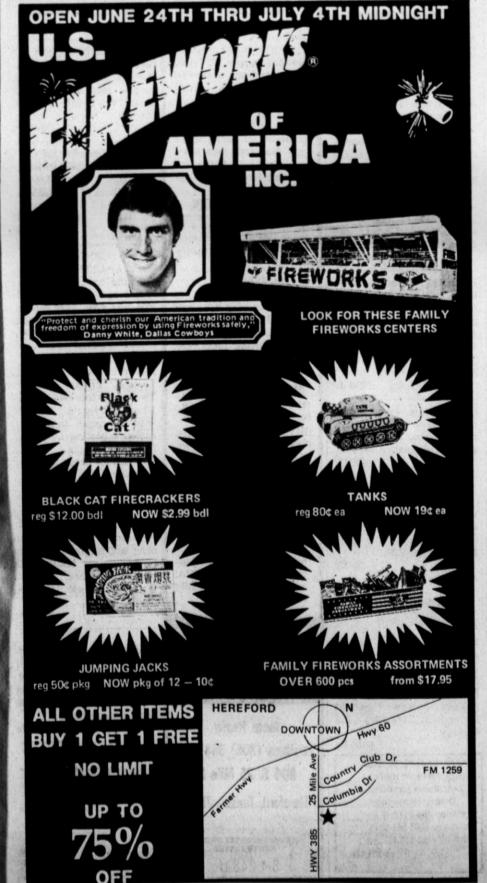

"I thought, 'It's time to go out on a limb and buy the name," Shane said. "It cost me everything I had. It was owned by Kingston Trio Inc., a corporation of three major stockholders. Now it is owned by me."

EAT OUT TONIGHT...

WHY EAT OUT WHEN YOU CAN SERVE THE SAME FOODS AT HOME FOR ABOUT HALF THE COST? WE RECENTLY COMPARED THE COST OF POPU-LAR FOODS SERVED AT "FAST FOOD" RESTAURANTS WITH THE COST OF THE SAME FOODS PURCHASED AT THE SUPERMARKET AND PREPARED AT HOME. WE WERE A LITTLE SURPRISED AT THE RESULTS. IN MOST CASES WE FOUND THE COST OF EATING OUT WAS ABOUT DOUBLE THE COST OF EATING AT HOME. THIS IS BASED ON A COMPARISON WITH POPULAR FROZEN FOOD ITEMS LIKE FRIED CHICKEN, PIZZA, AND FRENCH FRIES. SOME OF THESE PRICED COMPARISONS ARE LISTED BELOW SO YOU CAN SEE FOR YOURSELF. (COOKING FOODS FROM SCRATCH CAN KE AN EVEN BIGGER DIFFERENCE IN COST.) WHAT'S ALL THIS MEAN? IT MEANS YOU CAN SERVE YOUR FAMILY DELICIOUS, FAST, CONVEN-IENT MEALS AT HOME... WITHOUT THE COST OF EATING OUT. AND... YOU CAN MAKE SURE THEIR MEALS ARE MORE NUTRITIONALLY COMPLETE BY ADDING A SALAD, A VEGETABLE, ETC. TO YOUR "FAST FOOD" MENU. THE REST OF YOUR MENU CAN BE AS VARIED AS YOUR TASTES... FRIED CHCKEN, HAMBURGERS, PIZZA, FRENCH FRIES, SHRIMP, FISH & CHIPS, SANDWICHES, MEAT PIES, FRUIT PIES, BREAKFASTS, DINNERS, AND MUCH MORE. MANY OF THESE ARE AVAILABLE AS CONVENIENT "HEAT & SERVE" FROZEN FOODS. THEY'RE FAST, EASY, AND MOST COOK RIGHT IN THEIR OWN PACKAGE SO YOU DON'T HAVE A BIG MESS TO CLEAN UP. THE NEXT TIME YOU HAVE AN URGE TO EAT OUT, EAT AT HOME INSTEAD. CHECK THE MENU BELOW THEN STOP IN FOR EXTRA SAVINGS ON YOUR OWN "FAST FOODS" FROM JACK & JILL.

• WHO SEZ? Quick to perceive another's faults? Remember, you may have a few of your own, as this Bengalese saying suggests: "SAI DTHE SIEV ETOT HENE EDLE, "YOUH AVE AHOL EINY OURH EAD." Rearrange cap-letter spacing for sense.

Sum Fun! Challenge: Find two numbers whose sum is 14 and whose difference is four. Hint: They are under 20. Time: 30 seconds.

"LEROY IS NATURE'S WAY OF TELLING US TO STAY SINGLE."

"HOW CAN YOU HELP ME ? THROW US OUT! "

TSETSE Name Game! Correct the last names of these fictional detectives: 1. James Blond. 2. Nero Fox. 3. Philo Chance. 4. Sam Shade. 5. Jane Maypole.

Riddle-Me: This! What kit does a moonshiner use? A brew-it-yourself kit. What advice should a cabbage heed? Quit while you're a head. How far back does the name Wanda go? To the Seven Wandas of the World.
