On Social Security promise

President denies renegeing

SANTA BARBARA, Calif. (AP) — President Reagan, accused of renegeing on a promise not to cut Social Security benefits, says critics are "lying in their teeth" by claiming he went back on his word.

As senior citizen groups began mobilizing to fight the president, Reagan went on the offensive, arguing he had not retreated on Social Security.

"How is adding a 2 percent raise each year cutting it?" the president said Friday as he set out from the White House for California, where he settled in for a 10-day vacation at his mountaintop ranch.

Reagan, aware he faces a congressional battle on his budget plans, met with Senate Majority Leader Robert Dole, R-Kan., and Sen. Pete Domenici, R-N.M., chairman of the Budget Committee, before leaving Washington.

Referring to the new budget plan, Reagan said, "We all agree; it's going to be a fight."

"It's been a fight since 1981," he added. "There are factions in there that just want to keep on spending in the Congress."

The budget compromise between Reagan and Senate Republicans combines limits on Social Security increases with deep spending cuts in domestic programs and a slowdown in the Pentagon buildup.

"I'm shocked that the president of the United States would deliberately repudiate a solemn commitment he made to the senior citizens of this country that he would not cut Social Security benefits," said Rep. Claude Pepper, D-Fla., the 84-year-old chairman of the House Rules Committee.

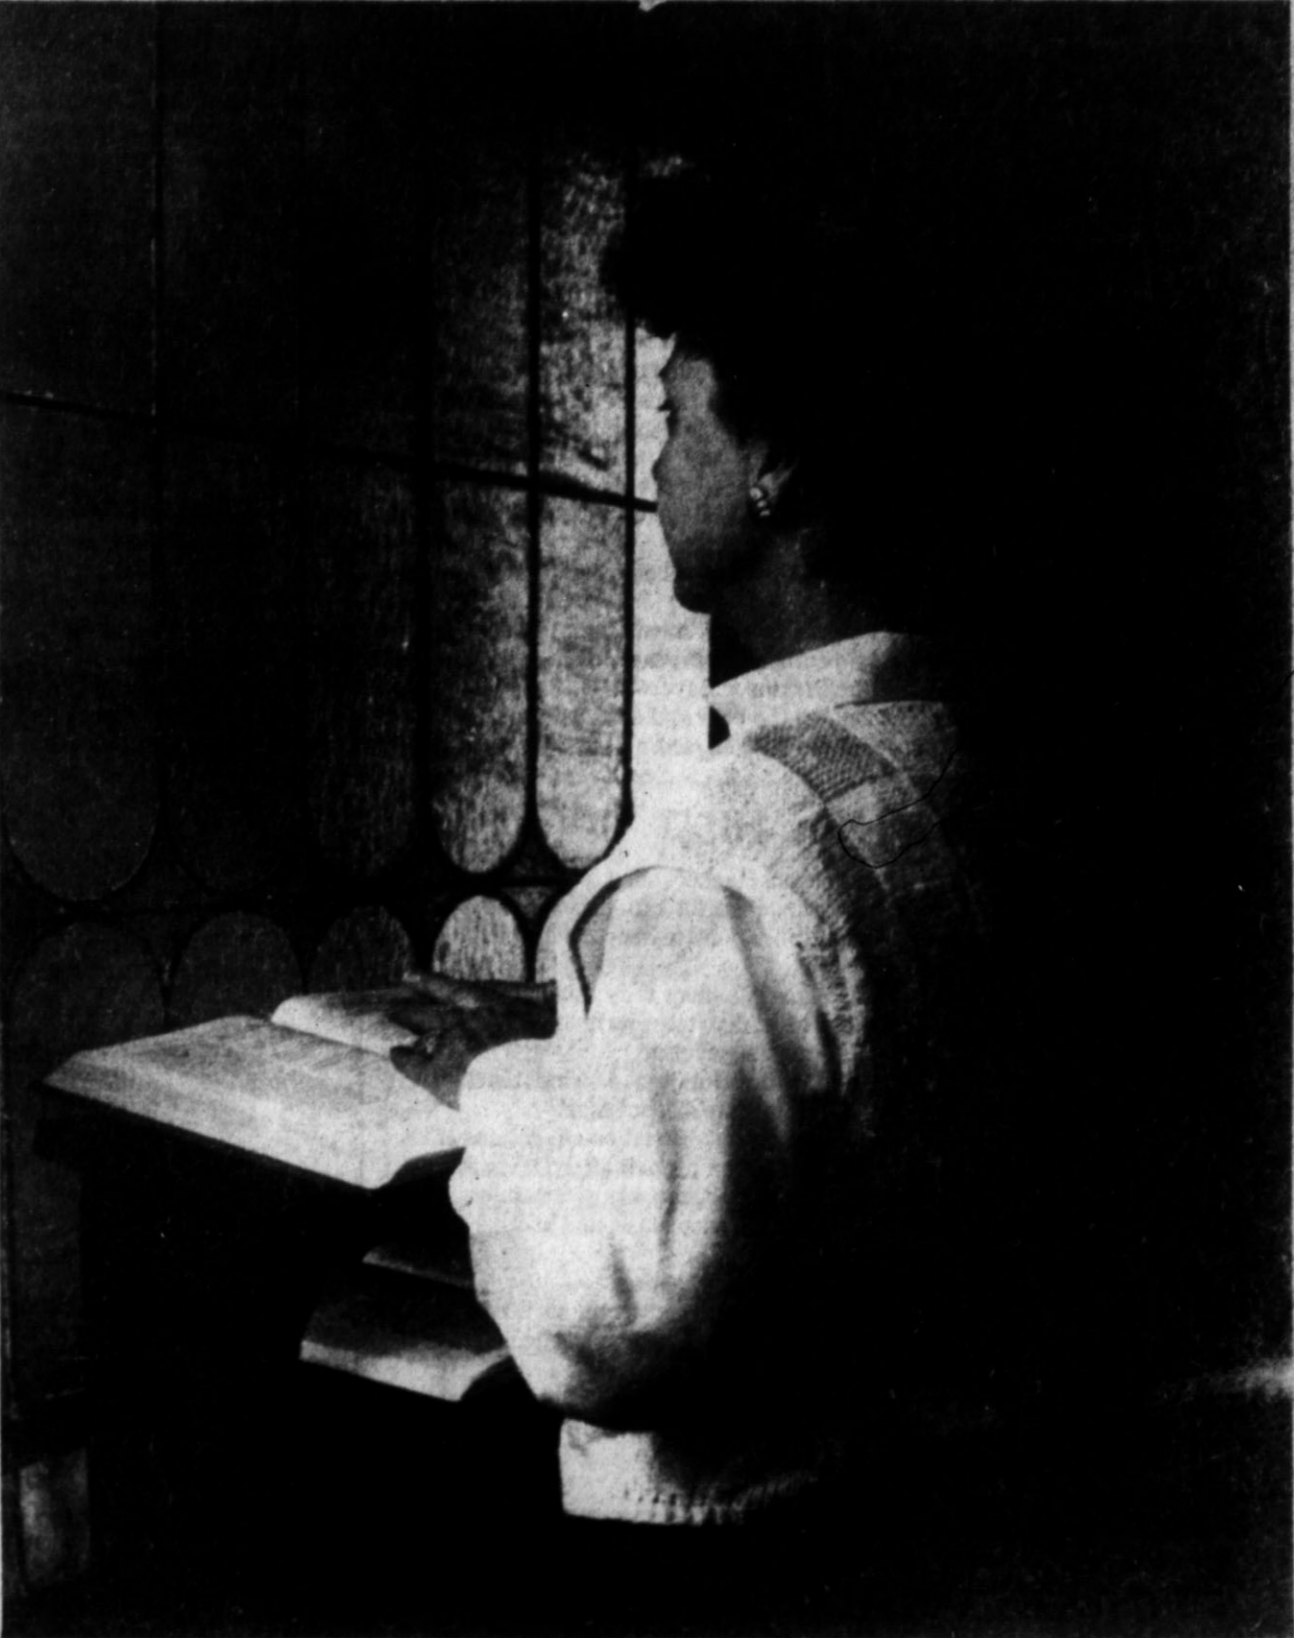

"We in Congress say: 'Mr. President, we're going to make you keep your word — God help us,'" Pepper said.

In the campaign last fall, Reagan said a president should never say never, but then added, "I will never stand for a reduction of the Social Security benefits to the people who are now getting them." White House deputy press secretary Larry Speakes hardened the pledge later, saying Reagan would not accept cuts in cost-of-living increases.

Reagan amended that promise earlier this year, saying he would consider restrictions on the increases only if he were faced with a bipartisan mandate from Congress.

Reminded of that statement on Friday, Reagan suggested he had saved Social Security from a harsher fate that had been considered by Senate Republicans in their budget deliberations.

"They were talking about totally cancelling it; that regardless of what inflation might be, that there would be no increases in the cost of living allowances or no cost of living allowances at all," Reagan said.

Spring storm brings tornadoes, high winds

Associated Press

A spring storm spawned at least 17 tornadoes and winds up to 80 mph on a path from Illinois to the Deep South, killing four people and injuring nearly 30 more as it devastated trailer parks and knocked out electricity before moving out into the Atlantic today.

High winds lashed Ohio, Kentucky, Indiana, Illinois, Mississippi, Alabama, Tennessee and Georgia on Friday. At least 20 Alabama counties reported power outages and roads were closed in several areas because of fallen trees.

"We had hurricane-force winds in some parts of the state," said Mark Miller, a spokesman for the Alabama

Emergency Management Agency.

The storm, which spawned at least 17 tornadoes, mostly across Tennessee and Alabama, and more than 75 reports of damaging wind — some to 80 mph — weakened overnight and was moving off the Atlantic Coast, said Pete Reynolds of the National Severe Storms Forecast Center in Kansas City, Mo.

"Things will calm quite a bit today," he said.

Two people died in their car in Roanoke, Ala., when a tree limb fell on them, said Randolph County Sheriff Fred May. At least 10 people were treated at Alabama hospitals for cuts and bruises they suffered as twisters and storms downed trees, overturned trailer homes and damaged houses.

Winds gusting to 65 mph in Marion, Ohio, toppled a tree on a 2-year-old boy, killing him, authorities said.

One man was killed and his sister was injured in Tilden, Ill., when winds demolished their mobile home, said Randolph County Coroner Neil Birchler. "It was apparently tossed about 20 to 30 feet from its pads and there was just nothing left of it," he said.

A tornado touched down near Albertville, Ala., destroying an automobile dealership, and two people were injured in the Tilden area.

Tornadoes touched down in at least seven places in south-central Indiana, but caused no injuries, said forecaster Paul Hunt in Louisville, Ky. Two people were injured in Perry County, Ind., when high winds overturned a mobile home.

Six barns were blown down north of DePauw, Ind., and roads were blocked by downed utility lines and trees, state police said.

Work, donations build firetruck

By KIM THOGMARTIN
Staff Writer

Six months ago, Hereford Fire Marshal Jay Spain wheeled a GMC 7,000 cab and chassis into the crowded fire station that is like a second home to the veteran firefighter.

More than 1,100 volunteer man-hours later, a booster unit capable of carrying 800 gallons of water emerged. Hereford Volunteer Firemen had built themselves a fire truck from scratch.

Making use of the assorted talents and skills of the 37 men on the force, the department charged the taxpayers only $49,000 for a truck that is valued somewhere between $87,500 and $92,500.

Not only do the firemen have a new piece of equipment that the City of Hereford probably could not have budgeted for—they have a truck that fits their needs perfectly. That's because they designed it themselves.

"It's a fireman's fire truck," Spain said simply. "We have a big truck that does what we want, and if something goes wrong we know how to fix it because we built it."

Spain takes pride in the fact that everything on the truck was purchased from local merchants except a few pieces of special equipment that had to be ordered from fire equipment manufacturers.

Poarch Brothers built the water tank and did the machine work; part of the pipe needed was donated by Holly Sugar.

The truck can be used to fight any kind of fire the department might be called on to extinguish, including electrical, fuel and structure blazes. A built-in foam system means the truck is ready for aircraft fires, train derailments, any sort of large fuel-fed fire.

The inventory also includes air packs for the firemen, 1,200 feet of hose, a 24-foot ladder and a generator. A master stream apparatus means the truck can shoot long streams of water at a safer distance from the fire.

The department's equipment lineup now includes three pumpers, three boosters, a tanker that carries 5,000 gallons of water, a rescue truck and two suburbans for transporting firefighters. Hereford firemen do not ride to fires clinging to the side or back of the truck, which Spain says is "dangerous."

It's difficult to tell which Spain is prouder of—the truck or the men who built it. He opens his mouth to make some sort of comment about the efficiency of the department, then stops himself.

Because even though he oversees a well-trained, well-equipped, professional corps of local husbands, fathers and sons who risk their lives every time they answer an alarm—well Spain just doesn't like to brag.

Big, Beautiful Bargain

Volunteer fireman Steve Cortez admires the department's newest truck which he and other squadmen helped build during the winter, saving thousands of dollars. The truck was put into service in March.

Coast Guard searches for boys

GALVESTON, Texas (AP) — Coast Guard helicopters and boats searched a 200-square-mile area of the Gulf of Mexico for nearly 15 hours for three adventurous boys who skipped school, borrowed a boat and went for a joy ride around Galveston Bay, officials said.

The boys — ages 13, 13 and 12 — were spotted about 5 p.m. Friday and taken into custody by Galveston County sheriff's deputies, said Coast Guard Petty Officer Tracy Carlson. They were released later to their parents, Carlson said.

About 8:30 a.m. Thursday, the three boys told friends at McAdams Junior High School in Dickinson, about 20 miles north, that "they were planning to skip school, get a boat and go out into Galveston Bay," Carlson said.

Two Coast Guard helicopters and three boat and the sheriff's marine division began looking for the trio about 1 a.m. Friday, Carlson said.

Authorities feared the 16-foot flat-bottomed boat they took might have sunk in the choppy water.

After hearing news report of the disappearance, Harold Boutwell, operator of an area marina, told authorities Friday afternoon that he stopped the trio heading into the Dickinson Bayou.

A Coast Guard helicopter located the boys and directed boat back to the marina and waiting deputies, Carlson said.

Two teachers sue HISD

HOUSTON OUT (AP) — Two school teachers sued the Houston Independent School District, claiming district officials launched a "campaign of harassment and intimidation" to deny the instructors freedom of speech.

Named in the suit were HISD Superintendent Billy Reagan, Milby High School Principal Claude Brinkley, district security director Les Burton and Dan Ortiz, district's Area 5 supervisor.

Milby teacher Brady Davis and Walter Hinojosa, a former teacher at the school, filed the suit Thursday in state district court.

Davis, 38, was investigated by the school district on allegations of sexual harassment of a student. Less than a week after Davis was cleared of the charges, Brinkley accused the teacher of fraudulently handling supplies and money in his wood shop class, and another investigation was started.

Davis was also cleared in the second investigation.

Hinojosa was fired in October for allegedly giving students answers to a district proficiency examination, but he has denied the charges.

The teachers' attorney, George Kirk Jr., alleges Hinojosa was fired because he supported Davis and because he is a member of the American Federation of Teachers.

Cocaine stash found in ice chest

MOBILE, Ala. (AP) — An ice chest containing 28.6 pounds of cocaine was dug up in coastal Alabama, according to FBI agents who estimated the street value of the find at $1 million.

FBI special agent Carol Toohy of Mobile said Friday the uncut cocaine was buried in a wooded area near Elberta in Baldwin County.

He said seven Baldwin County sheriff's deputies helped federal agents dig up the chest Thursday night in the continuing probe into a cocaine-smuggling scheme that last month led to drug charges against Stewart B. Munro of Houston.

Two other suspects have been arrested, but their names were not immediately available to Alabama authorities. Toohy said Texas and Florida investigators were assisting in the probe.

Munro's sailboat, believed used in the transport of the cocaine, was seized last month at Pirates' Cove in Baldwin County, according to the sheriff's department.

The Denise, a 54-foot offshore racing sailboat, was seized on March 5. The vessel sailed to Pirates' Cove, authorities said, under a contract with Munro.

Police lead to $7 million cache

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) — A man and woman arrested on burglary charges led police to a fencing operation and privately rented lockers containing $7 million in cash, gold, silver, coins and jewelry.

Police said the two suspects admitted to more than 700 burglaries in affluent neighborhoods in Tarrant County to support a $750-a-day heroin habit.

They had to steal about $7,500 daily in jewelry, television sets, stereo equipment and other merchandise to support their drug addiction because fences pay only about 10 percent of stolen property's value, Sgt. Mike Manning told the Dallas Morning News.

Manning said about 400 of the more than 700 burglaries had been confirmed by police.

The 42-year-old man and 23-year-old woman are charged with burglary, but their names are being withheld because they are working with police on the fencing operation, police said.

India rejects $200 million offer

NEW DELHI, India (AP) — The government has rejected a $200 million offer by Union Carbide for an out-of-court settlement to compensate victims of the Bhopal gas disaster, the Telegraph newspaper reported Saturday.

Prime Minister Rajiv Gandhi had earlier said India turned down an offer by the American company but he did not disclose the amount.

In an interview published Thursday in London's Financial Times newspaper, Gandhi said the figure was too low and that it was likely India would sue Union Carbide in U.S. courts.

Grenades explode over racetrack

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Rocket-propelled grenades exploded over the Beirut racetrack minutes before post time today, sending an estimated 4,000 spectators diving for cover, witnesses reported.

Jockeys jumped down from atop their mounts and the horses, lined up at the starting line, bolted toward the stands as the blasts shook the Hippodrome, on the Green Line separating Beirut's Moslem and Christian sectors.

Two ambulances were seen leaving the track, and police said at least two people were injured in the crowd stampede. They said the three grenades exploded in the air, missing the spectators and the horses.

The track supervisory committee said the weekend races were indefinitely suspended.

A committee source, speaking on condition he not be identified, said a local militia had demanded protection money and was turned down.

In defense contract

Westinghouse accused of fraud

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Defense contract fraud at Westinghouse Electric Corp. was so widespread that supervisors told employees in memos to "sandbag" funds that paid for company picnics and other activities, the government says.

The accusations are part of the Defense Department's continuing attempt to acquire Westinghouse's internal audit reports, which the defense contractor has refused to relinquish despite a Pentagon subpoena and government lawsuit.

Workers at Westinghouse's defense complex in Baltimore "routinely" filed false expense vouchers on defense and commercial contracts "with the knowledge of many company supervisors," the Justice Department said in court papers.

The money was turned over to "a slush fund to pay for company picnics, Christmas parties, baseball uniforms and the like," the government alleged in the documents filed recently in U.S. District Court.

Westinghouse, the 14th largest defense contractor with $1.7 billion in defense business in 1983, argued that the subpoena "exceeds the scope of" the Pentagon's authority.

The government recently cited testimony in a Maryland criminal trial for a company clerk accused of embezzling $65,000 to illustrate its need for access to the internal audits.

The government said it learned of the embezzlement in a newspaper article.

The Justice Department said the embezzlement "provides a fascinating, albeit tiny, window into the company's internal audit activities" and proves the existence of a systematic misuse of funds by a number of employees.

The clerk was acquitted of the charges, even though she admitted altering invoices for $65,000 of office supplies, because the woman's supervisors "knew and tacitly approved her conduct," the government said.

Several engineers from the complex testified that supervisors requested that employees raise the money by claiming reimbursement for fictitious travel and that the cash was turned over to a supervisor and the expense billed to either a Defense Department or commercial contract.

Thomas Williams Jr., who worked at the Westinghouse facility from 1977 through 1980, testified that abuse of expense vouchers was "widespread" and "a similar type of occurrence existed ... outside of technical training."

"This matter cannot be written off as one employee's misfeasance," the government said. "It was a routine pattern of misconduct involving many employees."

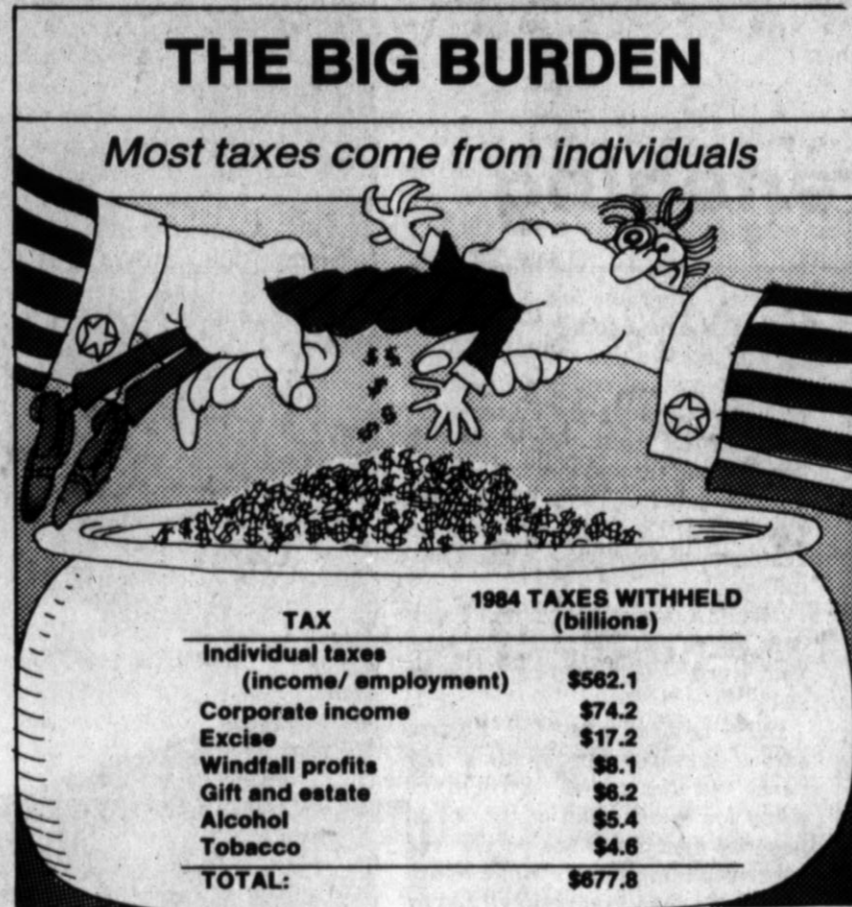

The government cited an internal memo introduced at the trial, written following a April 6, 1983, Westinghouse staff meeting, that said:

"The TTO (technical training office) Christmas party will be held at the Aquarium. Each is expected to contribute $50, and now may be the proper time to sandbag funds. Later on in the year when Accounting gets tougher, it may be more difficult to obtain extra funds."

The technical training office trains military personnel to use the radar equipment on the F-16 fighter, the B-1 bomber and the Divad anti-aircraft gun.

Westinghouse spokesman Bill Allan Jr. said Friday that the embezzlement trial, held in Howard County, Md., bears "no relevance" to the Pentagon's case concerning the company's internal audit reports.

"In any event," Allan said, "the actions referred to were investigated and appropriate measures have been taken."

Phones on flights

By LEWIS GRIZZARD

On certain commercial flights, airline passengers now may make phone calls back to the planet Earth. I was on one of those flights recently.

There was a portable phone on the wall near the galley. The flight attendant said if anybody wanted to use the phone, they simply could insert their credit card in the proper spot and then take the phone back to their seat.

I considered making a call. There wasn't anybody I particularly needed to talk to, but I thought it would be fun to try to impress the person sitting next to me.

I would dial the "800" number for Amtrak reservations, which nobody ever answers. I would pause for a few moments and then say, "Hello, Mr. President? Grizzard here returning your call. A meeting with Secretary Shultz at 10 in the morning? I would be delighted to be there, sir, and give my best to Mrs. Reagan."

I decided such a ploy was fruitless, however, since the passenger next to me was some kid wearing one of those Walkman things in his ear. Everytime he opened his mouth to yawn, I could hear some strange sort of music coming out, likely being played by a punk rocker with orange hair.

I suppose telephones in airplanes were bound to come sooner or later. In fancy hotels, they even have telephones in the guests' restrooms nowadays, which isn't such a bad idea when you consider that studies indicate nine out of 10 times you walk into your restroom either to take a shower or to relieve yourself, the telephone will ring.

I don't however, like the idea of phones in planes. The only thing I liked about flying in the first place was it enabled me to get away from telephones for a few hours.

You see, I suffer from a condition known as Black Cord Fever, a disease that is at its worst around midnight, especially if the victim has had several drinks.

What happens is the victim has this overwhelming urge to talk to somebody on the telephone, even if it means waking them from a deep sleep. The problem is that very few people want to talk to a Black Cord victim in the middle of the night.

The long-range effects of this condition are that the victim encounters huge telephone bills and finds his or her list of friends dwindling away.

I can see myself on a late night flight now. I've had a few beers, and I get hit by an attack of Black Cord. I grab the phone on the plane and start dialing. A weary voice finally answers.

"Guess where I'm calling from?" I begin.

"A bar."

"No, Zero, I'm calling from an airplane! What do you think about that?"

"Get out of my life."

"Want to hear the engines?"

Click.

What the airlines are going to have to do if they insist on having phones on their planes is to remember those of us with Black Cord Fever.

"Phoning or non-phoning?" the ticket agent should ask.

"Non-phoning," I will reply and retire to the back of the airplane with the others so afflicted.

STORM

"We've had trailers scooted off their foundations and roofs torn off barns and sheds," said Bob Smith, a sheriff's spokesman in Washington County, Ind.

High winds in Kentucky toppled a 765-foot transmission tower in Louisville, knocking radio station WHAS-AM off the air. Power outages were widespread, affecting about 6,000 people, and barn roofs and silos were damaged.

In Cincinnati, four TV stations were knocked off the air for about 30 minutes and about 10,000 customers lost electric power, said Bruce Stoeklin of the Cincinnati Gas & Electric Co.

Tornadoes in Tennessee destroyed an auto repair shop and cafeteria in Cleveland and ripped the tops off several businesses in Shelbyville.

High winds closed busy Hartsfield Atlanta International Airport for about 45 minutes and knocked six Atlanta TV stations off the air temporarily.

Postal service issues stamp to honor Nimitz

By RICK SMITH

The Dallas Times Herald

FREDERICKSBURG, Texas (AP)

As the plane flew over this small town in the Texas Hill Country, a package attached to a parachute was thrown out.

When the startled residents opened it they found a photograph of a white-haired man with brilliant blue eyes decked out in a 10-gallon hat, a neckerchief and a pistol strapped to his side.

"Photo of a rootin' tootin' Texas rogue," the inscription said in obvious jest. A note concluded: "You can take a Texan out of Texas, but you can't take Texas out of the Texan."

Playing the prank years ago was Chester Nimitz, who left Fredericksburg vowing to become an admiral and later commanded 22 million men and women in helping defeat Japan during World War II.

Nimitz achieved the highest naval rank his country could offer, was feted by Presidents Franklin Roosevelt and Harry Truman, and was given a parade through Washington, D.C., that drew 500,000 people, plus 275 tons of ticker tape.

But the war hero never forgot his Texas roots. And last month, two days before what would have been his 100th birthday, the admiral was honored here at the Admiral Nimitz State Park when the U.S. Postal Service issued a stamp in his honor.

The stamp comes after the lobbying of author James Michener, a member of a 16-member citizens committee that suggests topics for stamps. The recognition, Michener said, corrects a "dreadful oversight." Other U.S. military leaders had been honored, but never Nimitz. And his home state was the obvious site to issue the first stamp.

"The old man always loved Texas," said Chester Nimitz Jr., one of Nimitz's three children. "One of his terrible statements was that whenever he was confronted by a bowl of chili he would say one of the great pleasures of life was to sit under a tree when it was hot, drink a cold beer, eat a bowl of chili and sweat."

Nimitz returned to Texas for a series of celebrations soon after the war. When the battleship Texas was made part of the San Jacinto battlefield park near Houston, Nimitz was there to be named admiral of the Texas navy.

"Texas is a state exceeded in size only by its importance," he once said. After the war, he claimed: "During the surrender negotiations at Tokyo, one of my principal worries was that I would not be able to persuade Texas to stop fighting. However, a satisfactory agreement was arrived at between Tokyo and Austin."

Nimitz also went out of his way to visit a Dallas native who was the only survivor of a squadron of planes shot down in the 1943 battle at Midway Island. George Gay was wounded and flown to Pearl Harbor.

"He asked me if I had notified my folks that I was OK," Gay wrote in his book "Sole Survivor." "I said, 'No sir. I can't send messages home from here. This is a war zone.'"

"Well, maybe you can't, but I can."

A Texas sailor presented himself at Nimitz's headquarters at Pearl Harbor and asked to see the admiral. He had seen a photo of a Kansan native who visited another Kansan, Gen. Dwight Eisenhower, Supreme Allied Commander in Europe, so the sailor wanted a photo taken of him with the admiral. It can be seen in the Admiral Nimitz State Historical Park museum.

Nimitz, asked why he agreed to see the sailor, told an aide he wanted the sailor to win a $20 bet that he could see the admiral.

The incidents portray Nimitz as an admiral with a heart when it came to the concerns of his men, especially the enlisted ones. He once gave cans of beer to enlisted men for every palm tree they planted in a straight line on Guam after the island was retaken; he would pitch horseshoes with his men, many times dressed only in shorts, and became a marksman on his own pistol range.

"His men loved him," said the younger Nimitz, who served as a submariner in the Pacific. "He was humble and self-effacing with the troops. He didn't feel like living the easy life while the egomaniacs were seeking all the glory." He was referring to Gen. Douglas MacArthur, who commanded other Pacific forces.

While MacArthur was always seeking headlines and uttering classic phrases such as "I shall return," Nimitz tried to stay in the background. Oddly, he kept an autographed photo of MacArthur on his desk.

Family members say they believe the admiral would not have wanted the same recognition that others, like Eisenhower, received.

"I do feel that my father was given the recognition he deserved, and I'm sure he did, too," said his daughter, Catherine Lay.

"Limelight and publicity were the last things he wanted."

Nimitz even refused to allow his voice to be recorded, although the Nimitz museum has two tapes made while he was speaking at public engagements.

His modesty is one reason why Michener, who served in the Navy in the Pacific and now lives in Austin, admired him.

"He was an extraordinary man, really," Michener said recently. "He was low key but he was never reluctant to take the responsibility for a decision. He made a very good foil for MacArthur, and together they made a very good team, a difficult team for the Japanese to figure out. We were very fortunate to have them."

Michener, who is completing a novel about Texas, has included someone molded in the admiral's image.

"This type of man surfaced in Texas repeatedly, acting for the welfare of everybody," he said. "He was resolute, courageous, bright, generally soft spoken and tremendously reliable when the chips were down."

Chester Nimitz, who died on Feb. 20, 1966, spent his youth in Fredericksburg and Kerrville. As a youngster, he would often mimic the exploits of Adm. George Dewey, who defeated the Spanish fleet at Manila during the Spanish-American War while playing at his grandfather's Steamboat Hotel (now a museum). He had hoped to attend West Point, but there were no openings. Instead, he attended the Naval Academy and became, in the words of naval historian Richard Hough, "his country's greatest admiral."

In a 1944 cover story, Life magazine said of Nimitz: "While MacArthur is a star general, Nimitz is a maker of star admirals, with the result that several of his seagoing subordinates, like (Adm. Bill) Halsey, are probably better known to the public than the admiral himself."

Yet Michener, says, "The word among the men was that Nimitz was the one man who made everything happen."

Nimitz's prowess impressed officers worldwide. During World War II, British naval officers concentrated on two admirals — Horatio Nelson, the victor at Trafalgar, and Nimitz.

Despite his burden of command, when one mistake would have opened up the West Coast to possible Japanese invasion, Nimitz never lost his sense of humor. He was famous for puns like "Gentlemen, you will forgive me if I say we are midway to victory," after Midway.

Before Midway, he had little to celebrate. Six months earlier he had taken command of a shattered fleet after the attack on Pearl Harbor.

"Tell Nimitz to get out there and stay until the war is won," Roosevelt said, promoting Nimitz over about 20 other admirals who had more seniority. There were several reasons the President chose Nimitz. He had a well-rounded career, was head of the Navy's personnel division and had caught the president's eye years before. Nimitz proved a wise choice.

He certainly was not overconfident as he took over the job — one he had declined before the war because he said he was junior to too many other admirals.

"I'll be lucky to last six months," Nimitz said upon seeing the carnage at Pearl Harbor. Seven months later, the U.S. forces were seizing Guadalcanal and on their way to victory.

Asked to explain Nimitz's success, his son said: "He was just terribly professional, smart and he liked to play poker, to gamble. There's an old saying that man plans but God decides. (Nimitz) knew he just had to have that kind of break to get where he wanted. Everyone has to. You can call it luck, but luck rests with those who are best prepared."

Michener said esteem for Nimitz will rise.

"I think he will rate there at the top (with other leaders) when the magnitude of the Pacific is taken into account."

But Michener's highest praise came when asked if he thought so highly of Nimitz why he had not written a book about Nimitz: "I wish I had," he said.

Unlike other leaders, Nimitz refused to write about his exploits after the war, saying he did not want to offend anyone. He also refused to enter politics, unlike Eisenhower.

"He says himself as a professional military man," the younger Nimitz said. "He didn't want that image to change."

But with all his success as a leader, he grew to hate war.

"War is the most repugnant product of the human mind," he said shortly before his death.

And at home, Ms. Lay said, "I don't remember the war figuring prominently in his conversation." She said "the admiral" spent "as much time with us as he could, was always very supportive and encouraging, and gave us the feeling that he was immensely proud of us — that we could be anything we wanted to be if we wanted to work hard enough for it."

He had been a fan of Japanese Adm. Heihachiro Togo, who defeated a Russian fleet in 1905. Togo's flagship was preserved as a monument, but at the end of World War II it had fallen into disrepair. Nimitz helped spark a drive to save the ship.

The Japanese responded in turn, donating $100,000 to build Japanese garden of peace at the Nimitz museum. And recently, several Japanese fighter pilots donated a painting; each signed it.

But another tribute to Nimitz's efforts as peacemaker is perhaps the most fitting. In a guest book at the Nimitz residence in San Francisco is written, "no more Pearl Harbor." The signer was the Japanese pilot who led the attack.

Community moves with volunteers

The quality of life in any given community is directly in proportion to the amount and quality of work performed by volunteers.

We have lived in small communities all our lives, and we are continually amazed at the amount of work performed, the duties carried out, the hours spent by volunteers laboring in the vineyard of parental or interested concern.

Take the volunteer firemen, the chamber workers, the Camp Fire workers, those who labor for the United Way, those involved in Jubilee preparations, those who labor long and hard for their churches, the county museum workers, civic and study club projects involving many volunteers, those working in charitable campaign drives, the Scout and Kids, Inc., workers, those who serve on school boards, city commissions, hospital boards...and ever-expanding needs for other worthwhile community efforts and projects.

If you added all the volunteer hours performed by local citizens into one total, paid a minimum wage for the hours involved, the total amount would probably exceed the combined budgets of the city, county and the school. And, yet, it's all free!

It's labor given from the heart, given from a sense of duty, given freely and readily because it's needed.

America does not move on the backs of federal workers or handouts, nor on the backs of services laded out by the state, the county, or the city.

It truly moves forward, eternally, gratefully, and blessedly on the backs of its volunteers.

Thank the merchants, thank the parents, and thank all volunteers—it's what community life is all about and why we are usually known as "Hustlin' Hereford".

And if you're not participating in one way or another, we feel sorry for you. An hour or two in front of the boob tube is a mighty poor substitute for one of life's more rewarding and satisfying experiences—that of a volunteer.

States should set own speed limits

Our Congressman, Larry Combest, is co-sponsoring legislation in the House that would permit states to raise the maximum speed limit to 65 mph on rural Interstates.

We wish the congressman luck!

The resolution allows the governor of each state to apply for a waiver from the Secretary of Transportation to raise the speed limit on areas of highways that the secretary determines that safety will not be adversely affected.

The bill would certainly help but it doesn't go far enough.

The federal government never had any business getting into the act of setting speed limits on highways. Until the OPEC embargo of 1974, speed limits were the prerogatives of the state governments.

The resulting gasoline shortages prompted our representatives in Washington to rush to grab a few headlines and pass speed limits on Interstates and held a club over state governments by threatening to withhold highway construction funds if they did not comply with the federal speed limit.

And every year since, the National Safety Council has trumpeted how many lives and how many gallons of gasoline have been saved because of the lower speed limits.

The lives and gasoline saved figures are about as reliable as our national budget figures. Somebody in some obscure office makes a saddlehorse guess as to the figures—and they're accepted as gospel by all those interested in keeping the speed limit at a lower figure.

There's no question that a lower speed limit helps in those crowded corridors of the Northeast where traffic is so congested that a motorist couldn't go any faster if the speed limit were higher.

But basically, the 55 mph speed limit west of the Mississippi is ridiculous for cars and highways designed for much higher speeds.

Our here in the wide open spaces of West Texas, 55 mph on our Texas highways is like taking one wheel off a bicycle in order to save wear and tear on the cyclist.

The lower speed limit may save lives and fuel. It also is a terrible waste of time.

Supporters of the lower speed limit claim that if the limit is raised, an additional 500 people will lose their lives nationwide. That may be true. But if the saving of lives is the only reason for the speed limit then it makes just as much sense to lower it to 40, 30, or even 10. Think of the fuel and lives that could be saved if we simply outlawed all vehicles from our highways?

Congress ought to rectify its hurried decision of ten years ago and return to the states the right to set speed limits on the highways.

Letters to the Editor

Dear editor:

I read with interest the letter to the editor which appeared in Wednesday's Hereford Brand, written by Loren Barrick. It does seem that all the investigations into the purported wrongdoings of Jerry Smith have been a waste of time and money.

However, before you make a quick judgement, there are 24 persons you should talk to. Those are the Deaf Smith County residents who served on the two grand juries that indicted Mr. Smith.

Mr. Barrick would have us believe that the special prosecutors are responsible for the indictments. The fact is, the grand juries are responsible. Those 24 persons were convinced, with proper evidence and procedure, that a violation of law had taken place.

For whatever reasons, both special prosecutors were unable or unwilling to draft proper indictments. That does not change the facts, facts which have been convincing enough for five indictments from two separate, independent grand juries.

The grand jury list is available to anyone who asks at the district clerk's office.

Sincerely,

Dear Mr. Nieman:

While I was visiting Hereford a few weeks ago, I had an opportunity to see a local United Way organization and the agencies supported through it in action. The United Way of Deaf Smith County is fulfilling the mission of a United Way, which is to increase the organized capacity of people to care for one another.

The ten health and human service programs supported through the United Way enhance the quality of life in the community. The new YM-CA and Senior Citizen Center I visited are further evidence that the people in Deaf Smith County intend to continue improving their community and care for one another.

Thanks to all the people in Deaf Smith County, the United Way is working.

The Penultimate Word

HE GOT UP

I reserve the right to use this space for something serious every now and then. It can be drivel most of the time, but a couple of times a year I get in the mood to say something semi-profound.

That was my problem when I was a preacher. I got the urge about twice per year and the deacons seemed to think I should be urged a little more often. They tried, but somehow it didn't happen.

I get the urge every Easter. Somehow Easter is what it is all about as far as I am concerned. All the other stuff we call theology does not grab me. Too much of it becomes issues to argue over. I have a hard time making much sense out of theology that splits brothers.

But Easter—now that makes sense to me. If He got up then there is hope, and joy, and courage in the world after all. I don't have any infallible way to prove that He did get up. Frankly, I believe it like a drowning man clinging to a life preserver. He just had to have arisen or else.

I feel like the mother fox who, with her pups, was running from the hounds. They came to a cave that looked deep and safe.

'Wild' driving taught for purpose

You are seeing some wild driving on TV. There must be an enormous public fascination with cars careening over curbs, skidding in circles and jumping into lakes.

Some of us suspect the chase movies encourage impressionable youngsters to attempt a degree of stunt driving which is dangerous even for professionals.

At the same time there is now a school you can attend which teaches wild driving with a purpose.

It may be that the best driver training for police is available to Los Angeles lawmen; practical lessons which teach the physical limits of an automobile.

Yet, even that "best" driver training program is 30 years out of date.

Terrorists since have been teaching themselves much better techniques — while corporate executives, military personnel, government officials and private citizens have become increasingly vulnerable.

Responding to that need, JPM was established in 1983. JPM, located in Falls Church, Va., identifies J. Peter Minogue, an antiterrorist specialist.

At a driver training facility on Long Island Minogue's experts are teaching the good guys how to elude and/or escape the bad guys.

Americans most in jeopardy — or their drivers — are taught vehicle modification, weapons, hostage survival, armor and tactical driving, detecting vehicle bombs.

Tactical driving of an automobile — even an armor-plated automobile — requires both dexterity and knowhow. The skidding in circles "performance driving" you see on TV is not safe at any speed, it requires a studied understanding of the vehicle and its capabilities on various road surfaces.

Most high schools teach "defensive driving," remaining alert to what the other driver might do.

JPM teaches "aggressive driving," appropriate response to what a kidnapper or assassin is likely to do.

No driver graduates from JPM without sharing the wealth of security experience shared by its distinguished faculty.

And nobody is certified until he can handle slalom, compound braking, threshold braking, off-road recovery, low-tire exercises, blow-tire exercises, pursuit driving evasive maneuvers—bootleg turns, J-turns.

And he must handle "surprises"—ambushes, barricades, ramming — day or night.

It's a shame we have to think of these things but, since we have to, it's a good thing that the somebody who is best at it — is on our side.

Bootleg Philosopher

Traffic jams should be probed by Congress

Editor's note: The Bootleg Philosopher on his Johnsongrass farm on Tierra Blanca Creek examines the traffic problem this week.

Dear editor:

I'm the sort of person who, if I'm driving down to my mail box and meet another car, I consider it a traffic jam.

Therefore I'm having trouble handling a news story I read in a newspaper the other night while pretending to be listening to movie academy award winners thank all their kinfolks and in-laws.

According to it, there's a freeway in Los Angeles that handles 267,000 vehicles a day.

If you were living in a house alongside that freeway with that many cars and trucks whizzing by every day you'd go crazy after a week or two, although there'd be some doubt you were sane before moving there.

Those 267,000 cars per day tops the Guinness Book of Records, which fails to report on how many wrecks per hour the freeway achieves.

While Los Angeles holds the record, I doubt if there's a big city in the country whose mayor has been able to figure out you can't put 100,000 cars in space for 50,000. If they can't figure it out in their head or on their fingers, you'd think somebody would give them a hand calculator. Nearly any school kid can teach them how to use one. I tried to master the gadget and failed, but then I'm not a mayor.

Some experts say the answer to more traffic is more highways, but that's like saying the answer to Ethiopian hunger is more people.

Yesterday I met three cars on my way to the mail box. Congress has got to do something about this.

Yours faithfully,
J.A.

Reputed drug baron brought back to Mexico

MEXICO CITY (AP) — Heavily armed police returned Mexican drug baron Rafael Caro Quintero to Mexico City to face questioning about the kidnap-slaying of an American narcotics agent.

Caro Quintero and four other men were captured Thursday at a plush estate on the outskirts of San Jose, Costa Rica, by Costa Rican police acting on a tip from U.S. officials. Costa Rican authorities deported the five men Friday.

Dozens of plainclothes police agents armed with shotguns and sub-machine guns guarded the runway as a Mexican government jet landed Friday night with Caro Quintero and the others, whose identities have not been established.

A second plane, thought to be carrying a 17-year-old Mexican girl taken into custody when Caro Quintero was captured, was not seen at the airport. The teen-ager had said she had been kidnapped.

A convoy of two armored vans and four other vehicles escorted the five to the local headquarters of Interpol, where dozens of police agents stood guard outside.

Caro Quintero, 33, is a prime suspect in the kidnaping and killing of U.S. Drug Enforcement Administration agent Enrique Camarena Salazar in Guadalajara, Mexico.

Mexico's Attorney General's Office had issued a warrant for Caro Quintero's arrest for questioning. It also has filed murder charges against seven active or retired Mexican policemen in connection with the case.

Caro Quintero had last been seen in public on Feb. 9 at the Guadalajara airport where he embraced a ranking police officer and then boarded a private plane.

The Attorney General's Office announced Friday night that Caro Quintero will be tried in Mexico for any crimes he may have committed and would not be extradited to the United States, Televisa, the country's leading television network, reported.

Earlier Friday a U.S. official in San Jose said Washington does not plan, at least for now, to ask that Caro Quintero be extradited to the United States.

"At this point, it is a matter between Mexico and Costa Rica. Later, it could become a matter between Mexico and the United States. But

Cuban inmates isolated after reports of plans to kill guards

TRENTON, N.J. (AP) — Separating 150 Cuban refugees from other inmates because of an alleged plot to kill guards at two prisons is dangerous and doesn't protect the innocent, says a priest who works with the refugees.

State officials had "good, solid information" about the plot to kill guards at the maximum-security Trenton State Prison and the medium-security Southern State Correctional Facility in Maurice River Township, Department of Corrections spokesman James Stabile said Friday.

All 150 of the Cubans who arrived in the 1980 Mariel boat lift and are in nine state prisons awaiting deportation hearings were moved Thursday to special areas designed for inmates who present a potential threat to the safety and security of the institutions, Stabile said. "It's a preventative measure."

But the Rev. Raul Comesanas, director of the Union of Cubans-In-Exile Pastoral Center in Union City, said the move is dangerous.

"What about the innocent people? You're mixing agitators in with people who would otherwise not get involved," the Roman Catholic priest said Friday. "That's fine, they're taking precautions. What are they doing to safeguard innocent people's rights?"

Comesanas said he got a call Friday night from a Trenton State inmate who was worried because he didn't know why he and the others were moved. Stabile said the segregation was explained in writing and orally to prisoners.

The inmates will remain in detention until their deportation hearings and will not be allowed to eat in dining halls with other inmates or participate in group exercise programs, Stabile said.

The Cubans are among 2,700 refugees the U.S. government hopes to deport under an agreement reached with Cuban President Fidel Castro in December. Many are considered undesirable because of criminal behavior or mental illness.

About 125,000 refugees arrived in this country in the spring of 1980 aboard the "Freedom Flotilla" boatlift from the Cuban port of Mariel.

Officials learned late Sunday or early Monday "that the Mariels at Trenton State Prison were planning to kill officers," Stabile said. Forty inmates at Trenton State were placed in detention Monday; 12 others were already in detention awaiting disciplinary hearings, he said.

Officials learned Thursday from sources inside and outside the prison system that Cubans at Southern State planned to kill officers there, and 23 inmates were placed in detention, he said.

After that, any Cuban inmates from Mariel who were not already in detention were segregated throughout the prison system, he said.

In another incident involving Mariel refugees, about 20 Cuban prisoners at the medium-security Leesburg State Prison were placed in detention Wednesday after one stabbed another four times with a pair of scissors.

For U.S. next year

Ford Motor Co. to begin production

By CAM ROSSIE

Associated Press Writer
HERMOSILLO, Mexico (AP) - The Ford Motor Co. assembly plant under construction here will begin producing automobiles for the U.S. market late next year, thus completing the Big Three automakers' response to a government ultimatum to export or get out.

It's a mere skeleton today, but the ultramodern $500 million plant on the outskirts of this capital of the northwestern border state of Sonora will begin rolling cars off the assembly line in November 1986, company officials say.

At that time Ford will join General Motors and Chrysler, which last summer began exporting Mexican-made vehicles to the United States for the first time.

The companies' decision to export vehicles, after decades of producing cars in Mexico for sale domestically and motors for assembly plants on both sides of the border, follows the passage of a Mexican law requiring automobile companies to balance their imports and exports, said David McKee, the plant's Dearborn, Mich.-based industrial relations program manager.

"It's indispensable that the automobile industry stop being a liability for the country's commercial balance and begin to generate all foreign currency necessary for their operation," says the law, passed in September 1983 as part of President Miguel de la Madrid's plan to restore the ailing Mexican economy.

"If you want to stay in business in Mexico, you can't contribute to a trade imbalance. And Ford, Chrysler and GM are totally dedicated to staying in Mexico," McKee said in an interview at company headquarters in Hermosillo.

Ford, which has been in Mexico since 1925, will produce 130,000 cars a year at the Hermosillo plant, at least 80 percent of which will be exported to the United States. The rest will be sold on the rapidly improving domestic market.

Last July, the Chrysler Corp. began importing two-door K-cars from its assembly plant in Toluca near Mexico City. A month later, GM's 1985 El Camino headed to the United States from the company's plant just outside Saltillo in northeastern Coahuila state.

Ford officials here said the company has not decided what model to produce for export in Mexico.

"It's not designed yet, but it will be a medium-size car more or less the size of the Topaz," said Ernesto Zertuche, Ford public relations director in Hermosillo.

The plant, 150,000 square yards set on a nearly 300-acre site, will employ 1,600 people, he said.

The new plant is being built at a time thousands of U.S. communities are competing for GM's planned Saturn automotive plant, which reportedly will employ 6,000 people and bring a major economic development boost to the winning city.

Wages much lower than the rate paid in the United States have been sited historically as a key factor in the automakers' dedication to Mexico.

Mexican autoworkers earn the equivalent of about $1 an hour, according to Pablo Roman Salinas, GM workers union leader in Saltillo.

U.S. laborers earn 20 times that amount.

GM workers in Saltillo, saying most of the vehicles they produce are exported to the U.S., staged a brief strike recently demanding to be paid in dollars.

McKee said wages are not a major factor in Ford's interest in Mexico. "The issue is productivity and flexibility in the work force."

The Mexico labor system allows "broad job assignments where a worker takes ownership for his part of the operation...and flexibility in classification," he said.

The U.S. United Auto Workers union has "not been happy" with Ford's decision to make such a major investment in Mexico, McKee acknowledged. "But it fully understands the reasons for doing it."

Back In School

A five-week course for adults 18 to 55 designed to improve reading, mathematics and communications skills was recently completed by 17 Hereford residents. The classes were taught by local instructors Pat Brooks and Tom Haney under the auspices of Amarillo College and funded by the federal Job Training Partnership Act. Phyllis Cook, a contract service representative for Texas Panhandle Community Action, which administers the program, is shown during the last day of classes with Lupe Sepeda, one of the students.

Senator Lloyd Bentsen Watching Washington

General Motors plans to spend $5 billion over the next five years creating, from the manufacturing plant on up, a new line of state-of-the-art automobiles.

I want to see that these Saturn automobiles are built in Texas, so I wrote a letter, signed by all members of the Texas Congressional Delegation, urging GM officials to seriously consider locating their plant in our state.

Texas has many advantages to offer GM and, in return, our state's economy would have much to gain. The Saturn plant would employ 6,000 people and inject $500 million annually into the economy around it.

Saturn officials have indicated they will first select a state, then choose a city. The company is looking for a site with a good business climate; good training opportunities; proximity to markets and suppliers; and ample availability of skilled labor, energy and transportation.

Ninety-seven Texas cities are competing for the plant, a good indication of the enthusiastic support the Saturn company would find in our state.

Texans are by nature innovative and willing to take on difficult challenges, such as GM's goal of using the latest technology to build a car so efficiently that it will allow no cost advantage to Japan.

Our state has stayed on the cutting edge of technology, leading the way in creative computerization, space exploration and business innovation. The University of Texas System has one of the largest endowments in the world, for example, and has embarked on an ambitious plan to further the state of the art in robotics manufacturing, advanced computers and business management.

With our 11 engineering schools, Texas produces 4,700 bachelors of science, 900 masters level and 150 doctoral engineers each year, offering a wealth of engineering talent. And, over the past several years, skilled workers have relocated to Texas, increasing the pool of skilled workers available to Saturn.

The business climate in Texas is one of the best in the nation, and with no corporate, personal income or unitary taxes, we will remain one of the lowest tax states.

Our central location, close to major hubs for rail, air, sea and land transportation, would enhance shipping of cars and parts.

At last word, Texas is a serious contender among many states vying for the plant. A decision on its location is expected in early spring.

The letter to GM and Saturn officials included an invitation to meet with the Texas Delegation to learn in greater detail the significant advantages and opportunities our state offers. I will work hard, along with the rest of the Delegation and other state officials, to convince GM and Saturn officials to select our state.

Texas offers the new Saturn venture, I believe, its greatest opportunity for success.

The Saturn venture, in turn, offers Texas one of its greatest economic opportunities of recent years.

We're Moving Home!!!

Great Western sells four sugar plants

By KATHY EYRE Associated Press Writer

Tate & Lyle has signed a contract finalizing its purchase of Great Western's four Nebraska sugar plants and two other facilities, industry officials announced.

The agricultural manager of the Bayard factory, Kent Wimmer, said in a telephone interview with the Associated Press Friday night that he was told by Leo Hoehn, formerly of Great Western and now a Tate & Lyle vice president of agriculture, that Tate & Lyle officials signed the documents Friday in New York City.

"It's my understanding they closed the deal," Wimmer said. "Tate & Lyle purchased the Great Western factories in Bayard, Mitchell, Scottsbluff and Gering, the mill in Lovell, Wyo., and the mill in Billings, Mont."

Great Western had said earlier that Tate & Lyle offered a letter of intent to purchase the six factories for $21.5 million.

The plan was subject to approval by the federal bankruptcy court in Dallas and creditors holding about $295 million in defaulted loans and other Great Western obligations.

Wimmer said Tate & Lyle officials are still taking acreage commitments from area farmers in hopes of having enough contracted acres to operate all four Nebraska factories.

North Platte Valley producers eked out the required 40,000 contracted acres by a Saturday deadline to assure Tate & Lyle's purchase of Great Western assets in Nebraska.

Tate & Lyle officials have said they aren't yet ready to release the exact number of acres committed, but it isn't enough to operate all of the facilities.

"There's been no statement on which mills will run or will not run," Wimmer said Friday night. "I'm assuming the statement will be made in the near future."

The president of the Nebraska Non-Stock Beet Growers Association, Henry Schneider of Gering, later said he was notified of the sale by telephone by Paul Lit, an assistant to the president of Tate & Lyle.

"It was not a surprise," Schneider said of the announcement. "We felt that after the approval of the bankruptcy court a week ago, it would be forthcoming. And we're pleased it's now been consummated and we can go about the task of planting sugar beets."

Dennis Smith of Powell, Wyo., the president of the Big Horn Basin Beet Growers Association in northern Wyoming, said he also received a telephone call Friday from Lit.

"It's all over. It's a new era," Smith said.

He said planting could begin immediately. Wyoming growers needed to commit 15,000 acres to ensure operation of the Lovell plant and they committed 18,300.

Great Western put the company up for sale late last year and recently filed for protection from its creditors under Chapter 11 of the federal bankruptcy code.

Six Great Western plants in Colorado and Kansas are left out of Tate & Lyle's purchase. The plants are at Greeley, Loveland, Fort Morgan, Ovid and Sterling, Colo., and Goodland, Kan.

Block pushes for legislation to exempt 'blended credit' program

By DON KENDALL AP Farm Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Agriculture Secretary John R. Block says the administration will push for legislation to exempt a controversial "blended credit" program from a law requiring half of the commodities shipped under government programs to be transported in costlier U.S. flagships.

"We're going to be working shoulder to shoulder in trying to accomplish this for American agriculture," Block told a news conference on Wednesday.

Several bills have been introduced to overturn a Feb. 21 decision by a U.S. District Court judge who held that shipments financed under the Agriculture Department's "blended credit" program are subject to provisions of the 1954 Cargo Preference Act.

As a result of the ruling, the department was forced to suspend $536 million worth of credit that had been designated to help Egypt, Iraq, Morocco and Tunisia buy U.S. grain and other commodities.

The ruling caused a furor among farm groups and members of Congress from the major grain areas.

However, Transportation Secretary Elizabeth Dole said she understood the White House is not at this time supporting the legislation mentioned by Block. Asked later about the discrepancy, an aide to Block said the secretary stood by his news conference statements.

Block was asked about opposition from the seafarers' unions and the maritime industry, which had challenged the USDA's claim that the blended credit program was exempt from the 50-50 provisions of the Cargo Preference Act. Commodities shipped under other government programs, including Food for Peace shipments, are subject to the 1954 law.

Although he declined to speculate on what the maritime industry might do in the way of opposition, Block said, "We're going to win this one, we're going out to win."

Sen. David Boren, D-Okla., said that "agriculture is in a desperate economic condition" and that the higher costs of shipping commodities overseas — as brought about by the court decision — would be another blow to U.S. agricultural exports.

"Our farmers are broke, and yet under this court decision, it would require the farmers of this country ... to subsidize the crew members in our merchant marine," said Boren, who appeared with Block and several other lawmakers in support of the administration's move.

The maritime industry is essential, he said, but "if that's the case, all of us ought to help pay the cost" instead of putting so much of the burden on farmers.

Block said the cargo preference costs as a result of the court decision would add $40 million to $50 million to the costs of supplying the $536 million worth of commodities to foreign buyers.

Under the blended credit program, a typical package includes 80 percent loan guarantees at commercial rates of interest and 20 percent direct loan by USDA at no interest. After the direct loans are "blended" with the guarantees, the effective interest rate is lower than it otherwise would be.

The blended credit program represents a small portion of USDA's overall export credit offerings. According to the department's Foreign Agricultural Service, a total of $4.03 billion was programmed for credit guarantees in the fiscal year that began last Oct. 1.

As of March 29, the agency said, $1.24 billion had been approved for 22 countries. That left nearly $2.8 billion in credit guarantees still available for use this fiscal year.

European market not what it used to be

WASHINGTON (AP) — Salesmanship and boosterism are not likely to convince Common Market countries they should buy more U.S. farm commodities, an Agriculture Department economist says.

The 10-nation European Community began as six in the late 1950s and for more than 25 years has been a major market for American farmers. But the EC is "no longer the growth market it used to be," says Ron Trostle of the department's Economic Research Service.

In the fiscal year that ended last Sept. 30, the community bought $6.7 billion worth of U.S. farm goods, the lowest level since 1976. A record $9.8 billion was reported in fiscal 1980.

Trostle's analysis was reported in a recent issue of Farmline, published each month by the agency. Some other observations:

—Declines in U.S. sales to the Common Market countries "were out of proportion to the overall downturn" in exports. In 1980, the community accounted for $23 out of every $100 in farm export sales. By last year, the EC share was less than $17.

—Last year was the first time since at least the late 1960s that the EC came in second to Japan as a U.S. farm customer. Last year Japan, traditionally the largest single-country buyer of American farm products, spent $6.9 billion on commodities, $200 million more than the EC.

"We've now reached a point, I think, where we just can't count on the EC anymore for consistent growth or for dominance over all other markets," Trostle said.

In fact, trade analysts expect another small decline in total U.S. farm exports to Common Market buyers this year, and a long-term decline in EC demand for U.S. corn and wheat.

Also, the Europeans are increasingly competitive in export markets for a variety of goods, including soft wheat, barley, poultry meat, beef, dairy products, wine, and fruits and vegetables.

"I don't think aggressive advertising and marketing of American products will bring our sales back to prior levels," Trostle said. "The EC nations already know what the United States has to offer, and they aren't buying the way they used to."

Trostle said he does not expect major reforms in the EC's common agricultural policy — which has included high subsidies to European farmers. However, there have been some "hopeful signs" for U.S. exports because of the heavy budget pressures caused by those policies.

"There are indications that the EC is realizing its role and responsibility in world prices," Trostle said.

In the past, the EC seemed to ignore the world price implications of its grain policies, for example.

"Surplus production and subsidized exports force down world prices," he said. "That comes back to haunt them because greater subsidies are needed to make up the difference between high internal EC farm prices and lower world market levels."

Trostle said the outlook for U.S. exports to the community is not encouraging, aside from a serious decline in European production. Another possibility is a growth in EC demand, but most of that probably will be satisfied by the community itself.

Water supply in West is adequate

WASHINGTON (AP) — Despite below-normal precipitation in parts of the West, the region's water supply is expected to be adequate this year, the government has reported.

Peter C. Myers, chief of the Agriculture Department's Soil Conservation Service, said precipitation during February ranged from below normal in California and over much of Montana, Wyoming, the Great Basin, the Colorado Basin and the Upper Missouri Basin, to above normal in southeastern Oregon and south-central Idaho.

Study indicates that more loans won't solve farm finance problems

By JIM DRINKARD Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The financial crisis that endangers one in four American farmers will not be solved by loaning them more money, concludes a new study by the Roosevelt Center for American Policy Studies, a Washington policy research group.

Any solution to farmers' woes will hinge on future U.S. agriculture policy, along with other factors that are far more difficult to control, the center said in paper on the farm debt crisis released Tuesday.

Those factors include a growing federal budget deficit, a tight supply of money and credit, high interest rates, dropping land values and the strong value of the dollar compared to foreign currencies.

"Any one of these developments would dramatically reduce the ability of many thousands of farmers to survive through 1985," according to the report, titled "Down, Down, Down on the Farm."

"A combination of some or all of these developments would return the credit crisis to the front burner — and turn the flame up even higher," said the document.

Echoing gloomy forecasts from many analysts, the center said: "As bad as current conditions are, they could well deteriorate further." It said experts assembled for a policy roundtable this winter "found little to suggest that a significant improvement in the farm economy will occur this year or in 1986."

The participants "also agreed that financial stress for full-time commercial farmers will become even more severe if current agricultural economic conditions persist for another two years," the report said.

The problems of American farmers, particularly those in the grain belt of the Midwest, are by now well chronicled: high debt and interest rates coupled with low values for commodities and farmland are squeezing thousands out of business every month.

In its analysis, the moderate-to-liberal think tank contended the problem is primarily one of solvency rather than liquidity; that is, farmers are suffering not primarily from a lack of cash flow in an otherwise sound operation, but from an erosion of their capital and collateral bases.

"Thus the primary issue is not more credit," the center contended. "It is rather the extent to which government can (or should) intervene to alter the underlying forces driving so many farmers toward insolvency."

The government cannot come to the rescue with higher price support programs, the report concluded. Despite political pressure to do so, there are equally strong pressures to cut federal deficit spending — a step it said might be more beneficial to farmers in the long run.

Besides, commodity prices would have to be boosted by 32 percent to restore profitability to endangered commercial-size farms, it noted, citing recent Agriculture Department estimates.

But the other extreme — the one advocated by the Reagan administration in its relatively austere farm-policy proposals — ignores the human cost of a massive shakeout in farming, the report said. That cost includes loss of the nation's farming base and devastation of many of its supporting industries and rural communities.

The report suggests policymakers look to the government's experience with loan guarantees made for Chrysler Corporation for guidance. Rather than allowing the automaker to go under, the government responded with temporary aid that later was repaid with interest.

"First, aid should be given only where there is a reasonable chance that its direct beneficiaries will eventually be able to make it on their own. The public has nothing to gain from a permanent bailout," the report suggested.

"Second, aid should encourage self-reliance, not dependence ... the aid program should be temporary, with a clear cut-off date.

"And third, whenever possible, aid should include mechanisms that will allow the general public as well as direct beneficiaries to profit from a successful intervention into the market."

Government investment in surplus farm commodities still running low

WASHINGTON (AP) — The government's investment in surplus farm commodities continues to run below year-earlier levels, according to the latest Agriculture Department report.

As of Jan. 31, the Commodity Credit Corp. had $19 billion invested in commodity loans and actual inventories, the report said Wednesday. A year earlier, the CCC had $23.3 billion tied up in its operations.

Loans outstanding totaled $12.5 billion, down only slightly from $12.8 billion a year ago. But commodities owned outright were put at $6.5 billion, compared with $10.5 billion on Jan. 31, 1984.

Total feed grains held by CCC or under price support loan amounted to 2.16 billion bushels valued at $5.66 billion, the report said. A year earlier, 3.16 billion bushels worth $8.77 billion were being held.

Wheat loans and inventories totaled 1.32 billion bushels valued at $4.92 billion, compared with 1.42 billion bushels valued at $5.4 billion a year earlier.

Another major item, dairy products, totaled 2.76 billion pounds and a total investment of $3.3 billion. A year earlier, dairy surpluses were reported at 3.44 billion pounds

FmHA adds more funds for farm operating loans

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Farmers Home Administration plans to transfer an additional $300 million into the agency's account to handle a surge in applications for farm operating loans, say Agriculture Department officials.

Last month the agency shifted $300 million from an emergency loan fund to help meet rising demand for direct operating loans this spring. That boosted the funds available for operating loans to $2.22 billion.

But by April 3, about $2.04 billion had been approved for 43,777 borrowers, an increase of 187 percent from a year ago, leaving a cushion of only $180.6 million, officials said Thursday. Thus, it was decided to ask approval of the Office of Management and Budget to shift an additional $300 million from emergency funds.

On a related farm credit matter, officials said the FmHA has now made 85 guarantees to banks totaling about $12 million under a debt restructuring program available to commercial lenders.

In District 3-5A baseball

State-ranked Monterey slips by Herd

By DENNIS BALL
Sports Editor

Doug Welch's solo home run in the top of the seventh inning Friday denied the upset-minded Hereford

Whitefaces and gave District 3-5A leader Monterey a 6-5 victory at Whiteface Field.

The teams entered the final inning tied at 5. After forcing David Coleman to pop out to short, Hereford pitcher Bobby Medina hung one to Welch who responded by sending a shot over the left-field fence.

The Whitefaces stranded Chet Bunch at first base in their half of the seventh.

"I've got nothing but praise for these guys," Hereford Coach Don Long said of the Whitefaces. "We had talked a little last week about the talent on this team. Well, today they showed it.

"I thought they might be a little intimidated about the (Plainsmen's) No. 5 ranking in the state. But the kids came out to play."

Keeping its state ranking in tact, the Plainsmen upped their league record to 6-0 and overall mark to 16-1. Hereford fell to 1-6 in district action and 4-8 overall.

"That was a good ball game," said Monterey coach Bobby Moegle. "I'm proud for both clubs. They both played well."

Monterey, winner of 11 straight games now, easily could have lost the game, Moegle acknowledged. He said his club was stale mentally and he felt fortunate to leave Hereford with a win.

"That's what makes baseball a good game, though," he added. "Every day it could be something different happening."

In spite of trailing by a run heading into the bottom of the seventh inning, the Whitefaces were in an ideal position. They had the top of the batting order up and were guaranteed to send to the plate Stefan Hacker, Chet Bunch and Mike Scott.

That threesome had a combined batting figure of five-for-eight through six innings. Hacker had a double and Scott had two doubles.

Hacker hit a hard liner to left field which forced Monterey left fielder Kyle Guerry to leap in order to make the grab. Bunch singled to right, but Scott made the second out when he hit a shot to Shane Salyer that made the Monterey shortstop dive for the ball.

Curtis Cotten struck out to end the inning.

"They made some plays on us today," Long said. "Mike really stung that ball."

"We finally put some hits together, too," he added, pointing to Hereford's eight-hit total.

Medina, a sophomore, suffered the loss for the Whitefaces. He came on in relief of Chad Stephan in the fourth inning. Medina is now 0-1.

Monterey's Dan Doggett picked up the win, going just two innings and facing only seven batters.

The Whitefaces got to Plainsmen starter Brad Walker, 5-1, in the first inning. Bunch reached base on a fielder's choice and scored when Cotten ground out to second.

The Whitefaces picked up three runs in the fifth inning. Hacker crossed the plate after hitting a ground-rule double. Bunch scored his second run of the game, and Kurt Simon scored after reaching on an error.

Sammy Suarez also scored for the Herd.

The Whitefaces' next encounter will be Tuesday when they travel to Amarillo to face the Palo Duro Dons.

Hereford's junior varsity, a 6-3 winner over Tascosa and a two-run loser to Canyon in the Amarillo Relays Thursday and Friday, is to play Canyon at 4 p.m. Monday at Whiteface Field.

Tulane decision draws opposition

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — A fundraising group known as The Greenbackers, along with some non-member sympathizers, planned a march to the home of Tulane University's president today in objection to his decision to drop men's basketball because of a point-shaving scandal.

Howie Farrell, a member of the club board, refused to characterize the march as a protest or demonstration.

Farrell said the group would simply gather on the campus quadrangle and walk over to Dr. Eamon Kelly's mansion to "give him a position paper supporting the continuation of basketball at Tulane."

"But demonstration is too strong a word for what we are doing," Farrell said. "It is a cooperative thing we are trying to organize among the local booster clubs."

Kelly's announcement on Thursday came just a few hours before an Orleans Parish grand jury indicted three of Tulane's basketball starters and five other men on charges of sports bribery and conspiracy.

It accused five players of accepting at least $17,000. Two of the five were given immunity from prosecution in return for their testimony.

One of the accused players is John "Hot Rod" Williams, Tulane's All-Metro Conference center and, until the scandal broke, considered an almost certain first-round pick in the upcoming National Basketball Association draft.

Kelly said he was certain Tulane's board of administrators and the university Senate would accept his recommendation to drop basketball, and he expects the termination to be permanent.

The uproar reportedly began as a small cocaine buy.

Investigators said Clyde Eads, a senior forward, went to senior business major Gary Kranz looking for cocaine. They became friends and, within two weeks, the conversations had turned to point-shaving.

Eads, given immunity to prosecution, gave investigators a full account. Jon Johnson, a starting forward, also was given immunity and corroborated Eads' account.

Many local sportswriters and sportscasters agreed with Farrell that Kelly acted too quickly in scuttling Tulane's 73-year-old basketball program.

"We feel that the decision is a hasty overreaction to a very distasteful situation," Farrell said Friday.

"We feel that the violations which they are convinced occurred need to be addressed, but ... if you look at it in a medical analogy, if Dr. Kelly were a medical doctor, all of his patients would be dead because they've become diseased. We don't feel that should happen to our particular institution.

"We don't want to see our institution die. We don't want to see the financial contributions to academics be thwarted because of a loss of basketball program. We know that intercollegiate athletics has been a major part in fundraising for academics."

Girls third at Pampa

Whitefaces sixth at Amarillo Relays

Hereford High School finds itself in sixth place with 10 points after the field events Friday at the Amarillo Relays boys track meet.

Lee Brockman was the only Whiteface to win a place for the locals, taking first in the shot with a put of 52-6 1/2.

Two Whitefaces and a relay team qualified for Saturday's running finals. Jimmy Hazzard ran a time of 50.65 in the 400 to qualify for that race, which was to be conducted

Hereford girls, boys in golf action

Hereford's Whitney Drake shot 96 Friday, and Laura Osborn had a 118 in District 3-5A's second round district golf at Meadowbrook Golf Course in Lubbock.

The Whitefaces do not have a team entered in the girls competition. Amarillo leads the chase by 33 shots with a 718 total. The Sandies turned in a combined score of 337 Friday.

In boys non-district action at the Amarillo Relays Friday, the Herd was in eighth place, 22 shots off the pace set by Amarillo.

The boys had a 340 total heading into Saturday's second round.

Matt Albracht and Bobby Baker led the Whitefaces with 81s at the Tascosa Country Club. Michael Drake shot 85. Albert Valdez turned in a 93 and Bobby Valdez a 94.

In B-team play, Hereford fired a team-total 349. The Whitefaces find themselves in sixth place in that division.

In a copyright report, The Times-Picayune, The States-Item said Williams had told investigators Green came to his home in Sorrento, La., and gave him a shoebox with $10,000 — the most money he had ever seen in his life.

Saturday. He turned in the fourth fastest time.

Alan Dudding blazed to a 22.28 in the 200. He was to be running Saturday with the third best time in the event.

Finally, Hereford's 1,600-meter relay team made the finals with a run of 3:25.04.

In the Top of Texas girls invitational in Pampa, Hereford won third place from a field of seven teams. The Whitefaces, which were outdistanced by Pampa by 64 1/2 tallies,

"It is simply untrue. I have always worked within the framework of our strict NCAA guidelines, and at no time have I ever wavered from those rules." Green's written statement said. "This is all I have to say regarding that unfortunate situation."

What will the NCAA do about the fact that Tulane, and the Superdome, are hosts for the 1987 Final Four tournament? The matter is expected to come up at the summer meeting of the NCAA basketball committee in Newport, R.I., July 7-11, but the University of New Orleans already has offered to replace Tulane as the tournament's official host.

totalled 85 1/2 points.

Girls winning places among the top three in each event were: 1. Stephanie Thomas, shot (37-8); 1. Lisa Redmon, 100 (12.34); 2. Lina Esqueda, 1,600 (5:47.4); 2. Stacy Sanders, long jump (17-4); 3. B. Evans, shot (35-7 1/2); 3. Stephanie Thomas, discus (104-9); 3. Members of the 400 relay (50.6); 3. Lina Esqueda, 3,200 (12:33.7)

In junior varsity competition, the Whitefaces racked up 35 points for fifth place.

Heading For Third

Chet Bunch rounds second base and takes off for third during Friday's baseball action against the Monterey Plainsmen. The school from Lubbock won the game, 6-5, dropping Hereford's District 3-5A record to 1-6.

Sluman retains Greensboro golf lead

By BOB GREEN
AP Golf Writer

GREENSBORO, N.C. (AP) — Under extremely windy conditions, Jeff Sluman said he changes his approach to golf.

"You know pars are going to be a good score on a hole. The wind makes you play a little more conservative," Sluman, who holds a one-stroke lead over Bobby Clampett at the halfway point of the $400,000 Greater Greensboro Open, said. "You kind of have to pick your spots where you want to hit it close."

One of those opportunities, in severe, gusty winds, occurred on his 10th hole Friday as Sluman tried to hit his 3-iron second shot close to the wind-whipped flag, 189 yards away. He did better than that.

He hit it in the cup for an eagle-2, the highlight of a remarkably steady round of 71 (16 pars, one bogey, one eagle) that enabled Sluman to regain a one-stroke lead after 36 holes.

He completed two trips over the Forest Oaks Country Club course in 137, seven shots under par, with two rounds to go in the chase for a $72,000 first prize.

"I know I'll be a little nervous tomorrow," said Sluman, who has won less than $5,000 for the year and has yet to finish higher than 25th in a PGA Tour event.

"I'll just try to keep my emotions under control," the 5-foot-7, 135-pounder said. He failed to meet the tour's minimum performance standards after the 1983 season, spent last year on the Asian tour and rejoined the American circuit this season.

Clampett, once considered one of the game's more promising young players but a struggling also-ran for the last two years, had a second-round 70 that lifted him into second place at 138.

"There was a lot of guesswork out there in the winds, the way they were gusting," Clampett said.

He was followed by Japanese veteran Isao Aoki, who did not have a bogey in a round of 69 that put him at 140, and Lance Ten Broeck, 70-141.

The group at 142 included Sandy Lyle of Scotland, Jim Neiford of Canada, Brad Faxon, Dan Pohl and Roger Maltbie. Faxon had a 71 in what he called "a 2-club wind," Neiford matched par 72, Maltbie shot 73, Pohl 74 and Lyle 75.

U.S. Open champion Fuzzy Zoeller had another 72 and was at 144 after 36 holes.

Ben Crenshaw, who will defend his Masters title next week, got an early start toward Augusta, Ga. He struggled to a 78 and failed to qualify for the final two rounds at 153.

Dinah Shore tournament

Two women tied for top spot

By KEN PETERS

AP Sports Writer RANCHO MIRAGE, Calif. (AP) — Muffin Spencer-Devlin had an eagle and three birdies on the last seven holes Friday en route to a 5-under-par 67 that gave her a share of the lead after two rounds of the LPGA's $400,000 Nabisco Dinah Shore golf tournament.

Co-leader Judy aClark shot a second-round 68 as she and Spencer-Devlin, both of whom have never won an LPGA tournament, were at 7-under-par 137 after 36 holes at Mission Hills Country Club.

Betsy King and Alice Miller, who carded second-round 68s, and Patty Sheehan, with her second 69, were one stroke off the pace at 138. Jane Crafter, Denie Strebig and Jan Stephenson were another shot back at 139.

Myra Blackwelder, the first-day leader at 68, ballooned to a 76 to fall seven shots behind the leaders.

Juli Inkster, who won the Dinah Shore in 1984 and would collect a $1-million bonus if she repeats this year, had a second-round 74 and is 10 strokes out of the lead.

Spencer-Devlin and Clark, in addition to having in common the fact neither has ever won an LPGA event, also both have been steadily improving since joining the tour in the late 1970s.

Spencer-Devlin, who began the second round two strokes off the lead, played the front nine Friday at even par, then came alive on the back nine.

She trimmed two strokes off par on the par-5, 485-yard 11th hole after she blasted her second shot 226 yards and to within six feet of the cup and made the putt for an eagle. She went on to birdie the 13th, 15th and 16th holes to go 7-under-par for the tournament.

Stephenson, playing in the same group, had eagled the previous hole on her way to a 68.

Clark, who'd begun the day one stroke behind Blackwelder, also finished strongly. She rolled in a 25-foot birdie putt on No.17, then sank a 10-footer for another birdie on the final hole.

The winner of the Dinah Shore, one of the LPGA's four major tournaments, will collect $55,000.

Partnership tourney here April 13-14

Texas schoolboy races to Relays record Friday

By DENNE H. FREEMAN AP Sports Writer

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Dallas Roosevelt's Roy Martin, rated the nation's top boy athlete by Track and Field News, blazed to a Texas Relays record and second best all-time United States high school 100 meter mark of 10.18 seconds Friday night.

Martin's time on a windless Memorial Stadium track was just .02 seconds off the all-time best by Houston McTear of Baker (Florida) in 1976.

Joe DeLoach of Bay City finished second in 10.26 seconds, which was the fourth best all-time time. The third best of 10.23 is held by Johnny Jones of Lampasas, Texas.

Martin, who says he plans to attend Southern Methodist, was behind coming out of the blocks but caught and passed DeLoach in the last 30 yards.

The old Texas Relays record of 10.42 was set by Herkie Walls of Garland, Texas, in 1979.

Californian Henry Thomas, the top rated schoolboy sprinter in the nation by Track and Field, was disqualified for a false start earlier in the 100 meter preliminaries.

"It's great," said Martin. "I came here for the national record but I'll take this."

"I had to get down into fifth gear to come from behind. I felt Joe DeLoach being real close at the finish."

Thomas, last year's California state champion in the 100 and 200, had already run a 10.3 manually and a 9.2 manual, wind-aided this year.

However, he leaned out of the blocks ahead of the field in the second heat and was disqualified by the starter under the Relays' strict rule against false starts.

Martin, the Texas Class 5A 100 meters champion who was selected the outstanding male performer at last year's Texas Relays, ran the 100 meter qualifying in 10.30.

DeLoach, winner of the State 4A 100 meters and won the 100 at the Pan American Junior Championship last year, qualified in 10.32 seconds.

Martin has anchored Roosevelt to the Texas relay title in the last three Texas Relays. Roosevelt has run a 3:12.28 this year. He also was an alternate on the U.S. Olympic team.

The high school 400 and 1600 meter relay will be held Saturday evening.

For college presidents

Sport honesty causes concern

WASHINGTON (AP) — College presidents are worried about the integrity of athletics, and nearly one-fourth doubt whether they have the authority to ensure sports programs are run honestly, according to an NCAA survey released Friday.

The NCAA Presidents' Commission said it will sponsor resolutions at a special convention in June to bring athletic budgets under college presidents' control and to overhaul the rules for policing athletic violations.

They favor distinguishing between "major" and "secondary" violations and spelling out specific penalties for violations. They also want to give the NCAA enforcement staff the power to impose penalties for secondary violations, subject to appeal to the NCAA Committee on Infractions.

Volleyball being offered at YMCA

Hereford and Vicinity YMCA is offering an open men's and women's volleyball league, to be played at 6:30 p.m. Mondays.

Entry deadline is Thursday, and fee is $65 per team. A $10 charge will be added for team members who are not Y members.

Participants must be at least 16 years old.

Play begins Friday. For more information, contact the YMCA at 364-6990.

In addition, they want to keep restrictions on rule-breaking coaches even if they leave the campus where the violations occurred and take a job at another school belonging to the National Collegiate Athletic Association.

The current point-shaving scandal involving Tulane University's basketball team has focused renewed attention on corruption in intercollegiate athletics. Three basketball players and five others were indicted for sports bribery Thursday, and the president of the New Orleans school recommended the sport be dropped.

John W. Ryan, president of Indiana University and chairman of the NCAA Presidents' Commission, said an NCAA-sponsored survey of college presidents — including 60 percent of the 791 institutional members of the NCAA — showed the depth of their concerns about athletics.

"They believe there are serious violations of rules occurring, especially by coaches and by alumni and by other boosters. They believe there should be stronger enforcement procedures and more stringent penalties," he said.

Ryan said the commission is urging college presidents themselves to attend the special NCAA convention in New Orleans June 21-22 to address the integrity and financing of college athletics.

The resolutions approved by the commission would require colleges to maintain control over athletics budgets, with all expenditures subject to normal budgeting procedures and approved by the colleges' chief executive officer.

They also would require annual, outside audits of athletics budgets by an auditor chosen by the college's head.

According to the survey, 96 percent of the college chiefs felt they should be ultimately responsible for the integrity of their athletics program, but only 76 percent felt they had the authority to do so.

Ninety-nine percent of the presidents — and 100 percent of those from Division I schools, which are the major football and basketball powers — said they were concerned about integrity in sports and worried about its effect on higher education's image.

NBA roundup

Things working out for Cavs

By The Associated Press
If the surprising Cleveland Cavaliers reach this year's National Basketball Association playoffs — and they're getting closer to doing it — then a good example of what's been going right came in their latest game.

Trailing Detroit by a point in the final seconds Friday night, the Cavaliers called a timeout. In the team huddle, high-scoring World B. Free, who had already poured in 37 points, suggested that John Bagley take the game's final shot.

"We know our personnel and we know what each other can do," Free said. "We know who to get the ball to."

Bagley followed the script perfectly, taking a crisp inbounds pass from Ben Poquette and driving for a layup with three seconds left to give Cleveland a 119-118 victory over the Pistons.

The triumph put the Cavaliers three games ahead of idle Atlanta in the race for the final Eastern Conference playoff spot. Each team has five games remaining.

In other NBA games, Philadelphia held off Chicago 116-113, Boston beat Washington 115-104, Denver stopped San Antonio 118-109, Portland romped past Seattle 145-129, the Los Angeles Lakers defeated Kansas City 132-125, and the Los Angeles Clippers tripped Dallas 126-122 in overtime.

76ers 116, Bulls 113
Philadelphia's big two, Moses Malone and Julius Erving, were able to offset another fine effort by Chicago's Michael Jordan.

Malone scored 27 points and grabbed 19 rebounds while Erving scored 19 points. Jordan registered 40 points before fouling out. It was the seventh time he has scored 40 or more points in a game.

The host 76ers led 89-78 going into the fourth quarter, but Jordan scored four straight points to put the Bulls ahead 109-107 with 1:54 left to play.

But Bobby Jones made two foul shots to tie it, then Maurice Cheeks made two more free throws with 1:02 left and Jones scored on a breakaway dunk to clinch the victory.

Celtics 115, Bullets 104
Larry Bird scored 26 points as Boston, giving its reserves a lot of playing time, beat visiting Washington.

The victory helped the Celtics clinch at least a tie for the best record in the Eastern Conference.

Boston Coach K.C. Jones starting playing his reserves in the first half as the Celtics cruised to a 22-point lead. Jones needed to make another substitution with 28 seconds left in the third quarter when Robert Parish was ejected for punching Washington's Tom McMillen.

Gus Williams scored 21 points for the Bullets.

Nuggets 118, Spurs 109

Calvin Natt scored 30 points and Alex English got 27 in helping Denver reduce to one its magic number for clinching the Midwest Division title. One more Nuggets victory or one loss by Houston will give Denver the crown.

The triumph followed a pre-game tribute for Denver center Dan Issel, who is retiring at the end of the season. Issel, whose No. 44 jersey is being retired by the team, scored 18 points.

Mike Mitchell had 34 points for visiting San Antonio.

Clippers 126, Mavericks 122, OT
Derek Smith scored 38 points and got a key rebound of his own missed shot in the final seconds of overtime for Los Angeles.

The Clippers led 122-120 when Smith grabbed his own miss. After a timeout, Michael Cage was fouled and made two foul shots for insurance.

Los Angeles, 29-49, won for just the 10th time on the road this season.

Mark Aguirre scored 32 for Dallas.

Lakers 132, Kings 125

Byron Scott had 30 points and James Worthy added 25 to guide Los Angeles past Kansas City. The Lakers held a comfortable lead until the Kings pulled within 127-123 with 1:23 remaining. But two consecutive turnovers kept them from getting closer.

Earvin "Magic" Johnson did not play for Los Angeles. He bruised his right knee in a game Wednesday night.

Trail Blazers 145, SuperSonics 129
Jim Paxson scored 20 points in leading a balanced team effort that carried host Portland past Seattle.

Eight Trail Blazers scored in double figures, with Kiki Vandeweghe next in line with 19.

Tom Chambers led the SuperSonics with 20 points.

Volvo Tennis

Connors in semifinals

CHICAGO (AP) — Jimmy Connors says he tried to lure opponent Brad Gilbert up to the net during the quarterfinals of the Volvo Tennis-Chicago tournament, but the plan almost backfired.

"He got wise to me and he kept retreating, forcing me to go back to the baseline," Connors said Friday.

Connors, who moved into the semifinals of the $315,000 tournament with a 6-4, 4-6, 7-5 triumph over Gilbert, recalled "that Gilbert got wise to me in the second set and decided to try to beat me at my own game."

But Connors refused to abandon his strategy.

"I will rush the net on every chance I get because that's my game," Connors said. "But Gilbert, seeing what I was doing, just whacked the ball back to the baseline and I was forced to go all out."

"My philosophy is that I will win like a man or lose like a man and I will never, I mean never, change my style for anyone at any time or on any surface," Connors added.

Connors, 32, faced Paraguay's Andres Gomez in one of today's two semifinals, while top-seeded John McEnroe of New York City met Scott Davis of Balmoor, Fla., in the other semifinal.

McEnroe was forced to go three sets before eliminating fellow New Yorker Paul Annacone 4-6, 6-4, 6-1.

The unseeded Davis topped Terry Moor of Memphis, Tenn., 6-4, 6-4.

HOW'S THAT AGAIN?
CLEVELAND (AP) — Golf has its own language, whether it's a duffer or a pro talking.

During the Senior Tournament Players Championship on the Canterbury Golf Club course here, the 225-yard par three, 17th hole gave a lot of the players a bad time.

Among them was Don January, who bogeyed it on the second round and gave the following explanation for his poor shooting: "It calls for a high, cut three wood but I don't have that shot. I can only hit it low, hot and hooking."

Texas A&M slams Texas Tech

By The Associated Press
Texas A&M first baseman Fred Gegen went four-for-four at the plate, slugging three home runs and driving in nine Aggie runs in a 16-4 victory over Texas Tech.

Gegen gave A&M a two-run lead in the first inning when he slammed his first home run, scoring Scott Livingstone ahead of him. He also hit homers in the third and fourth as the Aggies stormed to a 13-1 lead after five innings.

In other Southwest Conference games Friday, Texas downed Baylor 5-1, Texas Christian downed Rice 9-5, and Arkansas defeated Houston 16-12.

A&M improved its record to 26-10, 3-4 in the SWC. Tech fell to 17-19 and 2-8 as Phillip Taylor, 6-1 and 3-0, went the distance for the Aggies. Clay Hollock, 3-5 and 0-2, took the loss.

In Waco, Texas put together a big seventh-inning rally and Longhorn sophomore Greg Swindell struck out 10.

Swindell improved his record to 6-1 on the season. Baylor's Alan Koonce, 3-2, was charged with the loss.

Texas, 36-8, improved its SWC record to 4-3. Baylor stands 32-6 overall and 8-1 in league play. The two teams meet Saturday in a noon doubleheader.

TCU pitcher Dwayne Williams strong performance along with heavy hitting led the Frogs over Rice.

TCU stands at 24-8 overall and 2-5 in SWC play, while Rice dropped to 23-11 on the year and 3-6 in the conference.

Williams went the distance for Texas Christian. He is 5-2 and 1-3. Steve Blackshear, 4-3, 1-2, took the loss for Rice.

In Fayetteville, Ark., Dave Patterson had four hits to lead Arkansas over Houston.

The Razorbacks, 25-8 overall and 6-3 in the SWC, lashed Houston starter Mike Walker, 8-2, for seven runs in the first inning, with Derrick Richardson contributing a two-run, bases-loaded single and Ellis Roby smashing a three-run, bases-loaded double. Jeff King got his ninth game-winning hit of the year.

Arkansas Pitcher Rick Huntze, 4-0, went seven and two-thirds innings in his first conference start. He allowed 13 hits and two walks, giving up 10 runs, six of them earned. Pat Rice finished on the mound for Arkansas.

Mike Ingle had three doubles and a triple and drove in three runs for Houston, 29-5 for the year and 5-2 in league play.

Richardson and Roby had three hits each for Arkansas, and Mike Loggins added a solo homer.

CAR AND COMPUTER WRITE-OFFS
Under the Tax Reform Act of 1984, Congress has clamped down on tax write-offs for cars and computers that are used less than 50 percent of the time for business purposes. In the past, if you used your car 40 percent for business and 60 percent for personal use, you could claim a 5 percent investment tax credit against 40 percent of the cost. You could deduct the rest of that 40 percent over three years using the accelerated cost recovery system (ACRS). Or, if you chose to forego the tax credit, a technique called expensing would let you write off up to $5,000 of the qualifying business cost, in the first year. Remaining deductions would be claimed over three years. Under the new law if you fell under the 50 percent business-use level, it would preclude both expensing and the investment tax credit.

Fashion Seminar scheduled April 20

A Fashion-Image Improvement Seminar, entitled "Be Yourself-Look Your Best," is planned for 10 a.m. until 3:30 p.m. Saturday, April 20 in the Heritage Room of Deaf Smith County Library. The day-long seminar, sponsored by the Texas Agricultural Extension Service, is designed for youth ages 8 to 19.
 Registration begins at 9:30 a.m. that day in the Heritage Room. Participants should plan to bring a sack lunch for the event. Refreshments will be provided and there is no admission charge.
 Susan Raney, coordinator of the event, explained that the seminar is traditionally held in the summer but has been moved into the spring because of the County, District and State 4-H Fashion show dates.
 The extension agent encourages teenagers to attend the seminar as they will benefit most from the various sessions. However, all youth are invited to attend. For further information, contact Raney at the county extension office.

 Included in the seminar are the following sessions:
 -Hair Care-Popular Styles for Youth, Brenda Thomas of Touch of Class
 -Modeling Techniques-Potter County 4-H models
 -Etiquette for Today-Brenda Reinauer, owner of Cabachon
 -Accessorizing Can Double Your Wardrobe-Karen Worthington and Jana Carthel
 -Keeping Fit-Susan Marnell, YM-CA exercise director
 -Soap, Suds and Science-Taking Care of Clothes, Susan Raney
 -Fashion Forecast for Spring Summer-Becky Saunders, extension clothing specialist.

Interior Designs

RECOGNIZING A GOOD THING

Window coverings mounted at the ceiling dramatize both the window and the room. Such use of vertical space heightens the look of a room and adds importance to the windows. Ordinary traverse rods can be ceiling-mounted to show off living room draperies. The result can be extraordinary drama, as the mounting plays up the beauty of the windows and emphasizes the room's enviable height. Window shades and blinds can also take on added impact when hung at the ceiling line. By mounting even Roman shades high up on the wall, instead of at the usual window molding location, the ceiling can be pushed up to balance the mass of the other walls in the room.

The design options available just in the selection of draperies is overwhelming. In fact, a drapery can make or break a room's interior design scheme. For instance, ceiling mounted draperies create a dramatic vertical line that can be an elegant addition to your home or office. FINISHING TOUCHES features a complete line of draperies - custom made or otherwise. Let us help you make the best choice for your home. We're located at 501 E. Park Street and are open each weekday from 9-5. Or call us for an appointment at 364-8870. Ceiling-mounted draperies offer a clean unbroken vertical impact to any room.

Verner, Burford exchange nuptials

MRS. CRAIG BURFORD
...nee De'Anne Verner

Lakeridge United Methodist Church in Lubbock was the site of Saturday evening's wedding between De'Anne Verner of Lubbock and Craig Burford of Dallas.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. David E. Verner of Lubbock, and the bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. William Burford of Hereford. The Rev. Bill Couch, pastor, officiated.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a formal length gown of candlelight chiffon fashioned with a Queen Anne neckline. The fitted basque bodice was of English net overlaid with aleveon and Venice lace and adorned with seed pearls. The leg-o-mutton sleeves were of the same fabric as the bodice. The full skirt fell into a chapel-length train with Venice lace finishing the hemline.

Her two-tier fingertip veil was held in place by a bandeau covered with aleveon lace and adorned with seed pearls. Lace appliques and seed pearls were scattered over the illusion.

The bride carried a bouquet of lubrium lilies, stephanotis and roses. She complemented her attire with pearl earrings and a pearl necklace.

Debra Verner served her sister as maid of honor. Dee Dee Thomasson of Lubbock and Christy Burford of Hereford served as bridesmaids.

The attendants were dressed in wine-colored taffeta dresses with an off-the-shoulder bodice. They were enhanced with a sweetheart neckline and short, puffed sleeves. Each of the women carried a bouquet of lubrium lilies and stephanotis.

Steve Burford served his brother as best man. Groomsmen were Scott Burford of Dallas, Mark Gerner of Lubbock and Donny Johnson of Austin.

Reed of Lubbock served the four-tiered ivory frosted cake decorated with ivory flowers and three ells on top. Julie Buffington and Kelly Kirk, both of Lubbock, served the punch.

A centerpiece of lubrium lilies, carnations and stephanotis adorned the reception table.

The bride left for a wedding trip to Jamaica in a red linen suit, cream-colored pleated blouse and red shoes. The couple will make their home in Dallas after April 14.

The bride is a graduate of Coronado High School and Texas Tech University. While at Texas Tech, she was a member of Gamma Phi Beta Sorority. She graduated with a degree in finance.

The bridegroom is a graduate of Hereford High School and Texas Tech where he received a degree in mechanical engineering. He is employed with Square D as a field engineer.

Out of town guests came from Throckmorton, Haskell, Dallas, Austin, Waco and Corpus Christi.

Ushers for the occasion were Steve McNaughton and Gary Beckman, of Dallas, Tom Hazelrigg of Waco and Dan Reynolds of Lubbock.

Chelsea Taylor of Lubbock was the junior bridesmaid. Darcy Burford, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Steve Burford was flower girl. Candlelighters were Dan Reynolds of Lubbock and Gary Beckman of Dallas.

Randy Stephens of Lubbock accompanied Sandra Hawthorne, Steve Blaylock and Peggy Stephens as they sang "Crazy," "You're the Inspiration," "Walk Hand in Hand," "The Lord's Prayer" and "Whither Thou Goest."

A reception followed in the fellowship hall with Karen Payne of Lubbock registering guests. Chris

School of instructions given to Rebekah Lodge members

Hereford Rebekah Lodge No. 228 met in regular session Tuesday evening with 16 members and two visitors present.

"Prayer," as prayed by a busy housewife and mother, was read by Dorothy Lundry for the Light of Faith altar program. Faye Brownlow, noble grand, presided at the business session. Ten visits to the sick and 12 cheer cards were reported.

Wilma Wise of Friona, newly commissioned district deputy president of district 5, was introduced and given the honors of the Rebekah degree. A short school of instructions followed during which several points were emphasized. The points were to have a current copy of by-laws, not to conduct lodge business over the phone, correct kindly and discreetly and exercise self-control.

Wise asked that all members consider a nursery for children of younger lodge members on meeting nights. Two joint schools of instruction are planned for all lodges in the district.

Susie Curtsinger gave a resume on the life of Schyler Colfax of Indiana who was instrumental in establishing the Rebekah Lodge and author of the Rebekah degree.

Anna Conklin served as hostess to Brownlow, Lundry, Curtsinger, Wise, Charlie Wise, Jo Irlbeck, Fern Durham, Glessie Shelton, Lydia Hopson, Verna Sowell, Ada Hollabaugh, Nellie Beauford, Karrol Rettman, Helen Bishop, Peggy Lemons, Kee Ruland and Edna Mathes.

Abundant Life

WE MUST CARE

By Bob Wear

WE MUST CARE, without caring too much. Of course, the level of caring will be different for different people; and all of us will find some difficulty in maintaining the level of caring which is best for us. There will be times, when weariness may almost overcome us; because it is easy to become disgusted or, perhaps I should say, discouraged with the human scene. This is something, however, which we cannot afford. There will be times, when we may decide that, with everything as it is, trying to maintain the best possible level of caring is not worth the effort. We must not give way to this notion. In succeeding with this, it is essential that we learn how to use the attitude of indifference, and when to use it; because there are times, when indifference is the wise way to go.

WE CAN DO very well with our personal living, in the midst of conditions and happenings which we may not like; and still maintain a suitable level of caring. We must surely understand that it is impossible to find a life situation in which everything is as we think it should be. Nevertheless, we have great capacity for living our own personal life of success; in the midst of the life situation which surrounds us. If we permit wisdom to support our level of caring, we can change some things, maybe, and we can adapt to other things without being influenced by them, and there will be some things which we think are alright. Facing these elements of reality will help us to move along in a very satisfactory way of living.

THERE MAY BE some disappointments, but knowing that such is possible should help prepare us to cope with them effectively. We must conditions our minds so that we do not permit the happenings in the world of reality to cause us to give up, because we have great potential for success.

DAR meets in Dimmitt for program on honoring ancestors

Rhoads Memorial Library in Dimmitt was the site of the Thursday meeting of Los Ciboleros Chapter, NSDAR. Hostesses were Dimmitt-area members Mrs. G.T. Downing, Mrs. Swain Burkett, Mrs. J.R. Riley, Mrs. Doyle Wassom, and Mrs. William Moss.

Mrs. Joe Reinauer, Sr., vice-regent, officially welcomed Linda Sue Withers Wassom of Dimmitt as a new member of Los Ciboleros Chapter.

Mrs. Stanford Knox, Regent, conducted the opening ritual with Mrs. Brian Clark presenting the President-General's message.

Mrs. Abel Ruga, national defense chairman, spoke on "The Genocide Convention". Senator John P. East of North Carolina. President Reagan has become the seventh president to endorse the ratification of the U.N. treaty against genocide, and Senator East is concerned with the political implications. He states that the treaty, if ratified, clearly gives sovereignty to the International Court of Justice over American citizenry. He contends that the International Court of Justice that sits in the Hague is hostile to Western values, western traditions, western culture and is loaded with anti-western, anti-American, Third World nations. He believes that the political implications are ominous.

Since the treaty does not include political groups in its list of genocidal categories, the Soviet Union could very cleverly argue through this loop hole that it does not apply to their genocide in Afghanistan or in Cambodia. It is interesting to note that 90 nations during the 1970's ratified this treaty, while more than 2 million in Cambodia were subject to genocide. He continued by saying that if the U.S. ratifies this treaty, the United Nations, the Soviet Union, and the Third World bloc will use it further to club Israel.

Senator East concluded by saying, "I submit that this Treaty is not genuinely going to help fight genocide. Ironically, it may be turned against those who are genuinely fighting it. It will give a false sense of security."

Plans were made for the tea honoring DAR Good Citizens and American History Month Essay winners.

Storage space topic of club program

Peg Hoff spoke on storage space when members of North Hereford Extension Homemakers Club met Thursday in the home of Edith Higgins.

Hoff listed methods of storage for the garage, basement kitchen, den, bedroom and bath.

Higgins presented the opening exercise and during the business meeting with Naomi Brisendine presiding, several announcements were made.

The next regular meeting date was cancelled April 18 as most club members plan to attend the district meeting in Canyon. They will meet May 2 with Evelyn Crofford serving as hostesses.

Martha Lueb presented the council report and Higgins gave the 4-H report.

Other members present included Bell Reid and Brenda Campbell.

Also honored will be Pet Ott, who will be presented the DAR Medal of Honor, one of the most prestigious honors given to a native-born citizen. The affair will be at 3 p.m. April 28, in the Community Center.

Regent Mrs. Knox presented a report of the State DAR Conference held March 21-23 in Fort Worth. She stated that the featured speaker was Mrs. Walter Huey King, president General NSDAR. At the Conference, Certificates of Merit for Excellence were presented to Los Ciboleros Chapter for printed publicity, 1st place, Texas Division I; recognizing and honoring junior members; DAR magazine advertising, 2nd place, Division I; transportation and safety tips; genealogical records; DAR service for veteran patients; library work for one life member.

Also awarded were Certificates of Recognition for participation in American History Month Essay Contest Lee Anne Reinauer, 5th grade and to Jamie Alexis Baker, 6th grade, Dimmitt. Medals of Honor were presented by Texas State DAR to H. Ross Perot and Roger B. Stauback. Mrs. Knox informed the chapter that Texas leads in the number of NSDAR members, having the largest number of all 50 states.

There are 16,401 members in NSDAR.

Pattie Ruth Johnson Faulkner was elected to membership in Los Ciboleros Chapter.

The program was given by Mr. Brick Autry, librarian at Rhoads Memorial Library. His topic was "Honoring Our Ancestors." He pointed out that a good way to honor our ancestors is to listen to family stories and to record them in writing or on tape. He related several family stories and examples of folklore to emphasize how they can develop interest in a historical period, define the climate of the times, and add charm to history. The organization is interested in collecting any family tales anyone might be willing to share. The program was concluded by Mrs. William Moss' reading a poem "Beatitudes for Genealogists."

Members present in addition to those mentioned were Mrs. Garth Thomas, Mrs. Arthur Clark, Mrs. L.W. Norvell, Mrs. J.J. Durham, Mrs. Beryl Fish, Mrs. C.F. Newsom, Mrs. Joe Reinauer, Sr., Mrs. Leroy Williamson, Mrs. W.J. Gilliland, and Mrs. J.P. Jones, Mrs. Sue James, and Mrs. Glenn Reeve of Friona.

Guests were: Miss Allie Mae Willis, Mrs. Melvin Faulkner, Miss Jennifer Miller and Mrs. John Lantz.

Discussing Upcoming Event

Jena Rawley-Whitaker, at left, is shown discussing the St. Thomas Episcopal Church Women's "Tour of Tables" with Susan Stockman, owner of Finishing Touch in Arlington. The event has been scheduled Sunday, April 28 at the Hereford Community Center.

'Tour of Tables' set April 28

St. Thomas Episcopal Church Women are sponsoring "Tour of Tables" Sunday, April 28 at the Hereford Community Center. Proceeds from the "Tour of Tables" will be given to the Senior Citizens, Operation Good Shepherd, Chemical People, King's Manor and Project Christmas Card.

Jena Rawley-Whitaker, who is serving as chairman, emphasized that the "Tour of Tables" competition will give the participants the opportunity to set a table depicting their own individuality. The event also provides the public a chance to view various table settings.

The public is invited to view the table settings from 2-5 p.m. that day and competitors are requested to set their tables up from 3-5 p.m. Saturday, April 27. Barnes Jewelers of Amarillo will judge the event at 5 p.m. Saturday. The main objective of each competitor will be to express their own special flair.

For those interested in participating in the event, a $5 registration fee must be paid by April 23. Tables may be reserved by calling Claudia McBrayer at 364-2377; Meredith Wilcox, 364-0195; Vera Threwit, 364-0939; or Jena Rawley-Whitaker, 364-5400.

Admission to the viewing is priced at $2 per person and tickets may be purchased from any "Tour of Tables" committee members at St. Thomas Church or at the door.

Each competitor will be required to watch over their table during show hours and a security guard will be present.

Tables will be judged in three categories - holiday, novelty and formal settings. Silver trays will be presented to each first place winner in each category and an over-all grand prize will also be awarded. There will also be a People's Choice award.

Recently, Ms. Rawley-Whitaker visited with Susan Stockman, owner of Finishing Touch in Arlington, to compile information for the first event of this kind to be held in Hereford.

Stockman explained, "The key to creative table setting is not the amount of money invested but the use of one's imagination. Walk through your house and find something you really are fond of and set the table around that object. Use a centerpiece that is unusual."

Handling Easter
Eggs and Ham

Easter, like other holidays, has its own festive foods. Children are thrilled with decorative eggs and other goodies in their Easter baskets. Grownups prefer the savory ham dinner with tasty trimmings. These foods, like those served year-round, require safe handling to prevent food poisoning. The rules are simple—keep cold food cold, hot food hot and all food clean.

Callers to USDA's Meat and Poultry Hotline (and our office) frequently ask about the preparation and handling of hardcooked eggs and ham.

Although unbroken and uncooked eggs are remarkably resistant to bacterial invasion the heating process breaks down the egg's natural defense. The recommendation is thus that cooked eggs be handled as aseptically as possible and that they be refrigerated until eaten.

Q: Are hard-cooked eggs used for an Easter egg hunt safe to eat?

A: Yes, but they must be handled properly because hard-cooked eggs are perishable. First, cool hard-cooked eggs in cold water immediately after cooking, and then refrigerate them so they cool all the way through. If any eggs crack while cooking, do not use them for the hunt since bacteria can easily get through the openings and contaminate the eggs. In addition, hard-cooked eggs should not be out of the refrigerator for more than two hours—a time span to keep in mind when you plan the hiding and hunting of Easter eggs.

Q: How long will hard-cooked eggs keep in the refrigerator?

A: Hard-cooked eggs in the shell should be used within one week. Those with cracked shells or eggs with the shell removed should be used within one day.

Q: Is there any danger of trichinosis in hams?

A: There is no danger of trichinosis in fully cooked hams. They are specially processed in accordance with the U.S. Department of Agriculture's guidelines to kill trichinae organisms. These hams are ready to eat without further cooking.

Fresh hams, however, need extra care in preparation. Thorough cooking of fresh ham—until the center reaches a temperature of 170 degrees F—will kill trichinae parasites—the cause of trichinosis. To make sure this temperature is reached, insert a meat thermometer in the thickest part of the cut, not touching the bone or fat. Trichinosis, while rare in the United States, can be serious.

Neutrinos, most elusive of subatomic particles, loom large, indeed, when compared to the amount of chicken in a chicken salad sandwich.

The devil comes in a poor second to garden catalog publishers when it comes to making work for idle hands.

Q: How long can ham be safely refrigerated?

A: Uncured ham or fresh pork will keep in the refrigerator from 3 to 5 days.

It will keep in the freezer from 4 to 8 months.

Cured ham will keep in the refrigerator for one week. Leftover cooked ham that is tightly wrapped and refrigerated 1 to 2 hours after cooking will keep 4 to 5 days. Both uncooked and leftover ham can be kept in the freezer up to two months before losing flavor and texture.

Happy Easter!

Former sewing club members gather

A covered dish luncheon was held Thursday for 12 former members of the Easter Sewing Club in the Easter Lions Club building.

The club was organized in the early 1940s as a home-demonstration club with 10 members. Two of those original ten were present, Anna Mae Burnett, president, and Hertha Frye, secretary.

The club was later changed to a sewing club in the early 1950s with Emerald Epperson as its president and Burnett as its secretary. During this period, the club members made comforters for various children's homes and needy individuals. The club was disbanded in 1970.

Those in attendance from Hereford were Louise Banks, Gladys Flood, Florene Struve, Ruby White, Mildred Garrison and S.T. Walton.

Also present were Nadine Warrick, Rosalie Hawkins, Frye and Skeet Brooks, all of Easter, Burnett of Dalhart and Epperson of Amarillo.

Members spent the afternoon looking at old pictures, visiting, and planning an annual reunion.

Members of the Deaf Smith County Genealogical Society will meet Thursday at Deaf Smith County Library. Guest speaker will be Sylvia Murray, a genealogist from Amarillo.

Murray will give suggestions on what one can do when they have reached a dead end in their research. The public is invited to attend.

DEAR POLLY — I have heard that a chemical reaction takes place when frozen orange juice is mixed and stored in a plastic container. This may be dangerous. Is this true? — ANTOINETTE

DEAR ANTOINETTE — As long as the storage container is of food-grade plastic, meant for the storage of food, there is no danger in storing orange juice in it. However, juices should not be stored in opened lead-soldered cans, since there is some possibility of lead leaching into the juice.

Don't forget that orange juice and other vitamin C juices should be consumed as soon as possible for maximum nutrition. The longer the juice is stored, the less vitamin C it contains. — POLLY of caffeine per cup. Instant coffee has 60 milligrams per cup. Both instant and regular decaffeinated coffee have only 3 milligrams per cup. — MRS. M.K.

DEAR POLLY — We had some painting to do. Instead of following the normal routine of setting the paint pail on newspapers to catch the drips, I placed it in a plastic dishpan. This was easier to move around, there were no messy newspapers to throw away and the paint couldn't soak through the pan onto the floor as it might with newspapers. I just rinsed the wash basin when I rinsed the brushes and it was as good as new. — SALLY

DEAR POLLY — To wash combs and brushes or other hard items in your washing machine without running the risk of them becoming jammed in the agitator, put them in a small zippered "delicates" bag. They cannot tumble freely and become wedged under the agitator. — A READER

Parental guidance leads to better grades for students

By CHRISTOPHER CONNELL
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Students whose parents closely monitor their activities tend to get the highest grades in school, and those with both parents in the home also score better, a new study shows.

The National Center for Education Statistics drew those conclusions Friday from a study of information gathered in 1980 and 1982 from 58,000 high school students.

Sophomores were asked to what extent their parents or guardians monitored their activities — that is, knew where their children were and what they were doing.

"The overwhelming majority of 'A' students (88 percent) also indicated the highest degree of parental supervision," the center said. "Fewer 'B' students indicated that their parents knew of their activities (81 percent)."

Some 72 percent of the "C" students and only 61 percent of the "D" students said their parents monitored what they did closely.

"Teachers and other educators frequently cite the importance of parental involvement to learning," the center said in a report on the study.

"A two-parent family may have an advantage over a one-parent family in this," it said. Eighty percent of the "A" students lived in a household with both parents. Among the "B" students, 71 percent did; "C" students, 64 percent and "D" students 60 percent.

"Exactly 75 percent of the students who said they earned mostly 'A' grades reported that they talked with their mothers or fathers every day or almost every day," the report said. The percentage fell to 67 percent for the "B" students, 59 percent of the "C" students and only 45 percent of the "D" students.

All of the students, regardless of grades, were more likely to talk about school with their mothers than their fathers.

Among the "A" students, 25 percent reported their parents attended PTA meetings at least once in a while; the "B" students reported 22 percent; "C" students 20 percent and "D" students 15 percent.

New Books:

Herman Wouk's "INSIDE, OUTSIDE" and "PROOF" by Dick Francis will be available this week at the library. Herman Wouk's first new novel in seven years moves on from the grand themes which have won him international acclaim—war, the fate of nations, and the indomitable spirit of man—to a different theme and a profound one: the quest for identity, in the clash between the Inside of family and faith and the Outside of the glittery American dream.

"INSIDE, OUTSIDE" and "PRO-

OF" by Dick Francis will be available this week at the library. Herman Wouk's first new novel in seven years moves on from the grand themes which have won him international acclaim—war, the fate of nations, and the indomitable spirit of man—to a different theme and a profound one: the quest for identity, in the clash between the Inside of family and faith and the Outside of the glittery American dream.

"INSIDE, OUTSIDE" sweeps through more than sixty years. Scenes of rollicking family humor and show-business comedy alternate with sudden tragedy, with the spectacle of a falling President, and with the explosion of war. "INSIDE, OUTSIDE" is a merry, poignant, sometime ribald picture of the American Jewish experience, by a master at the peak of his powers.

In "PROOF," young wine merchant Tony Beach has known tragedy, but never violence. Until his wine-tasting expertise is enlisted to substantiate a liquor scam. For, once Tony Beach had pronounced the best scotch and the finest claret at the Silver Moonance restaurant to be something other than what they were labeled, he had become the hunter and the hunted.

The plot of "PROOF" is far-reaching into fraud and destruction. Dick Francis has concocted a mystery so wonderfully complex, with so disarming a protagonist and such a varied and unforgettable cast of characters, that readers will thoroughly enjoy it. Dick Francis is also the author of "The Danger," "Twice Shy" and many more.

Add up what a 9-month John Deere finance charge waiver means to you

Are most advertised "low-rate" finance offers the big deals they're made out to be? Not compared to John Deere's 9-month finance charge waiver on new tractors, 40- to 300-hp.* As the chart shows, the John Deere 9-month waiver is more attractive than most of the low-rate offers you've read about. And, as you can see, paying off the John Deere contract early could result in an effective rate as low as 3.38%.

Don't be misled — compare real finance charges

If balance owed is paid off after	Your effective annual rate		Your total finance charge

Actual rates and finance charges will vary depending on payment schedules and rate changes on variable-rate JDFP contracts.

And the John Deere Finance Plan also includes physical damage insurance and, for qualified individuals, credit life insurance. All that on a tractor with proven high trade-in value. A John Deere tractor with a warranty backed by a solidly established manufacturer. A John Deere tractor we'll treat like our own when it comes to supplying parts and giving shop service. Added together, the 9-month finance charge waiver and the John Deere tractor deliver more real value to you.

Magistrate denies white supremacist bond

By RICK SCOPPE Associated Press Writer

WINSTON-SALEM, N.C. (AP) — White supremacist David Lane, linked by the FBI to the slaying of a Jewish talk show host, was denied bond Friday and will be returned to Idaho to face charges of aiding in a $3.5 million armored truck robbery.

Lane, 46, has been held in North Carolina on counterfeiting charges filed in Philadelphia and is wanted in Colorado for questioning about the January 1984 machine-gun slaying of talk show host Alan Berg.

After Lane waived the probable cause hearing in North Carolina, U.S. Magistrate Russell Eliason said Lane would be sent to Boise for a similar hearing on charges of aiding in the July 19 robbery of a Brink's armored truck in Ukiah, Calif.

Eliason said he denied bond because of Lane's link to the holdup and because "the defendant has been leading an unstable existence in terms of employment and residence."

Lane was at the scene of Berg's slaying, FBI Agent Don Wofford of Butte, Mont., testified at the bond hearing.

"Our investigation, which includes confidential sources, indicates that David Lane and other members of The Order were responsible for the murder of Mr. Berg," said Wofford, who called Lane a founding member of The Order.

The Order is a faction of the Aryan Nations, a white supremacist organization.

U.S. Attorney Ken McAllister said Lane did not participate in the robbery of the Brink's truck but "helped facilitate it, knew it was occurring and received (money) from it."

According to a search warrant and other federal court documents, Lane was carrying a 9mm black automatic handgun when he was arrested. Agents also found a fully loaded .45-caliber semi-automatic firearm under the seat of a truck in which Lane had been traveling, along with 600 rounds of ammunition and birth certificates bearing the name William Johnson.

Other testimony at the hearing said agents found a printing press and $30,000 in counterfeit $10 bills that linked Lane to the counterfeiting charges.

Denver police said Lane had on-the-air confrontations with Berg several months before the talk show host was killed. Lane also is a suspect in a Virginia bank robbery.

DENNY SHARBER, CAROL ROHRBACH

Marriage planned

Mr. and Mrs. Edward Rohrbach of Route 4 announce the engagement and approaching marriage of their daughter, Carol Anne, to Denny Ray Sharber, son of Sue Ann Bryan and Tommy Ray Sharber, both of Amarillo.

The couple plan a June 15 wedding in the Immaculate Conception Catholic Church in Vega.

The bride-elect will graduate from West Texas State University with a degree in administrative services in May. She received the 1985 Certified Professional Secretary certificate, and is presently employed as an administrative assistant at Marsh Enterprises.

The prospective bridegroom is employed in the family business, Amarillo Mop and Broom Company.

Family boasts 22 children

LINEVILLE, Ala. (AP) — As a girl, Betty Jo Hardy complained about baby sitting and told her mother and sisters she would never have children when she grew up.

She was wrong. She is now the mother of 22 children, with 20 of them still living in the family's wood and tarpaper home.

"I've had a baby about every 11 months since we've been married," said Mrs. Hardy, 41, who has been married to Samuel Hardy, 46, for 25 years.

The Hardy family roll call: Rita, 24; Roger, 22; Samma, 21; Andrew, 20; Veronica, 19; Emma, 18; Loretta, 17; Bettz Jean, 16; Nancy, 15; Anita, 14; Greg, 13; Felicia, 12; Jeff, 11; Regina, 9; Tad, 8; Tony, 7; Jill, 6; Tina Jo, 5; Kim, 4; Jan, 3; Windy, 2; and Kris, 10 months.

All but Rita and Roger still live in the Hardy's eight-room, seven-bed home, filled with the sound of children constantly laughing and bickering as they bustle in and out of doors.

The children bathe in shifts. A mountain of laundry is heaped by the washer and rows and rows of clothing hang on the line to dry.

The clothes, said Hardy, "get worn again and again and again, right on down the line."

Atheists compete with fundamentalists

By GARTH JONES Associated Press Writer

AUSTIN (AP) — With Easter Sunday at hand, religious fundamentalists and atheists are competing on opposite sides of Austin, the atheists vowing to ignore the Christians and the fundamentalists urging to "pack up the forces of evil."

"All they are doing is using our convention to get themselves a name," said Jon Murray, vice president of the American Atheists meeting in south Austin. "We will continue to ignore them."

"Pack up the forces of evil and truck them down the road," said C.E. "Buddy" Hicks, host of a local radio-TV talk show and organizer of the God and Country Rally in north Austin.

Madalyn Murray O'Hair, president and founder of American Atheists told a news conference Friday that religious fundamentalism was spreading throughout the nation "in a manner that frightens me."

"And it is a thing that we must regret and apologize for to the world that we have a president who eggs them on," said Mrs. O'Hair, whose lawsuit on behalf of her oldest son led to the banning of organized prayer in public schools.

Hicks, who also is a part-time preacher, said he organized the rally of Christians after learning from William Murray, eldest son of Mrs. O'Hair, that the atheists planned to hold their 15th meet in Austin on Easter weekend. Murray, who has broken with his mother, is now a Dallas-based evangelist.

"I see the fundamentalists as fascists, reactionaries, thought police and basically are sick," Mrs. O'Hair said at the news conference.

She said atheists would work hard to take advantage of two favorable court decisions this year that she said would allow them access to public schools along with other religions and for tuition tax credits for atheist schools.

Her other son, Jon, director of the American Atheist Center in Austin, sat by her side.

She was asked about a statement by William Murray on Thursday that atheists stand for anarchy, destruction of government, and a number of other things.

"I've got ying and yang for sons," Mrs. O'Hair replied. "I've got a good one and a bad one. There's always a bad apple in the barrel."

She said American atheists stand for "freedom from the oppression of religion, freedom from the censorship of human thought, freedom from the traditions that have been religious which have caused so much misery for humankind."

She said the God and Country Rally

ly "was formed for one specific reason, to obstruct what we are doing."

Mrs. O'Hair said there was no significance in the atheists holding a convention at Easter.

"We found that basically hotels are empty at Easter time. So we have taken advantage of it for 15 years," she said. "It is an economic factor and not a sinister one."

PUC delays hearing on complaint

AUSTIN (AP) — The Public Utility Commission will look at Southwestern Bell's $324 million rate hike case before reviewing consumer complaints that the company improperly uses ratepayers' money to finance unregulated, profitable services.

Lawyers for the company, attorney general's office and several consumer groups agreed Friday that some of the issues raised in the complaint will come up in the rate case — which begins with a prehearing Wednesday.

Attorney General Jim Mattox, Consumers Union and other groups filed the complaint Oct. 17. The first Public Utility Commission prehearing in the case was Friday, a delay that upset Consumers Union lawyer Carol Barger.

"Up to this date I have had the impression there has been a great deal of contempt from the commission on the handling of this, the fact that it took six months to get a prehearing," she told Crandal McDougall, a PUC administrative law judge. "That would certainly suggest to me a lack of interest in the issues."

The complaint says money from Bell ratepayers might be going to finance profitable, unregulated services, such as Yellow Pages and mobile telephones. Ratepayers should not be subsidizing those businesses, the consumer groups say.

Ms. Barger has said costs to consumers could be cut by up to 40 percent if the complaint proves accurate.

McDougall recessed the Friday session to allow lawyers to sort out the issues. After an hour of negotiating, the attorneys listed the issues that will come up in the rate case and the topics that will have to be handled in a separate hearing.

The issues not cleared up by the rate case will be considered in a hearing that will begin several weeks after the commission sets new rates for Bell.

Bell has denied improperly mingling ratepayer money and unregulated services. Company lawyer Jon Dee Lawrence said Friday there was no effort to unfairly delay a hearing on the complaint.

"We're not trying to duck trying the issues but we only want to try them once," he said. "Some of the issues I think, of necessity, are going to have to be decided in the rate case."

Surrounding broadcasters

Buyout fever heats up

NEW YORK (AP) — The takeover frenzy surrounding the broadcasting industry continues to heat up.

Several rumors involving a potential bid for CBS Inc. swirled about Wall Street again this past week. In Miami, Storer Communications Inc. scrambled to block a liquidation threat.

Speculation also surfaced that financier Irwin Jacobs was accumulating shares in Gulf & Western Industries Inc., the parent of Paramount Pictures Corp.

These and other media companies have come under the spotlight after last month's blockbuster announcement that Capital Cities Communications Inc. will acquire American Broadcasting Cos. for $3.5 billion.

Media properties had already been hot prospects, as evidenced by a flurry of recent acquisitions involving newspapers, magazines and television stations.

Gannett Co., for example, recently bought the Des Moines Register and other newspapers for about $200 million. Publishing magnate Rupert Murdoch purchased half of 20th Century Fox Film Corp. for $162 million, and CBS acquired 12 consumer magazines from Ziff-Davis Corp. for $363 million.

But it was the acquisition of ABC, a company three times the size of Capital Cities, that showed that even the largest of America's broadcasting giants were among the media properties being eyed by potential suitors.

Industry analysts said it's not hard to see why. Investors began scrutinizing the value of the companies' assets relative to the price of their stocks. In many cases, it would be far cheaper to buy a broadcasting company through a takeover than to buy piecemeal the stations owned by the company.

The value of a broadcasting company's assets was not lost on Coniston Partners, the New York investment firm that is leading the dissident shareholders' group trying to oust Storer Communications' directors.

One day after the Capital Cities-ABC announcement, the group said it would ask Storer's shareholders to replace Storer's directors with its nominees, who if elected, would then liquidate the broadcasting and cable-television concern.

Liquidate Storer, the group said, and stockholders would receive $90 to $100 a share. On the New York Stock Exchange, Storer's stock closed this past week at $75.37 1/2 a share.

Storer this past week asked a federal judge to block the group's proxy fight.

Camp Fire bean supper scheduled for Friday

The Camp Fire Supporting Membership Drive is underway and to kick-off the event, a bean supper has been slated from 5 to 8:30 p.m. Friday at Hereford High School cafeteria.

The supper is being sponsored by CF board of directors.

Tickets are priced at $3 for adults and $2 for children 12 years of age and under. They may be purchased from board and Camp Fire members, at the CF office, and at the door.

The menu will consist of beans, cornbread, cobbler and all the trimmings.

Proceeds from the supper will be used for new CF programs, support on-going programs, expand new areas of concern and to promote educational skills as well as skills for day to day living.

Anyone weathering the present winter in southern climes is only too willing to acknowledge that Northerners can keep their cool — and welcome to it.

Lawrence E. Lamb, M.D. Cautery removes veins

DEAR DR. LAMB — Is it possible to remove broken blood vessels on the legs or thighs? Since physicians cauterize or seal broken blood vessels on the face and around the nose, can this be done to the leg area? I saw a vascular surgeon, and he offered no advice on cosmetic treatment for this condition, other than elevating the legs and wearing support hosiery. I'm mostly concerned about the appearance of my legs. Would it be appropriate to seek advice from a dermatologist?

DEAR READER — I presume you are talking about fine spider veins. Those on the nose are quite small, and electric cautery works just fine, but it is painful. The very small veins in the leg could be treated this way, but most of them are larger than the small veins on the nose and face. For that reason, dermatologists may inject a concentrated salt solution that scars and destroys the small veins. Not all dermatologists do this, but you probably can find one who does.

These spider veins are not really varicose veins. Varicose veins involve the large superficial veins in the legs and appear to be about the size of a pencil. They are dilated, and the valves in the veins that prevent blood from pooling in the leg veins are usually damaged.

It is not absolutely certain that the small spider veins are related to varicose veins. However, anyone who has these should take extra precautions to avoid developing varicose veins of the large superficial veins in the legs. This is why wearing support hose, elevating the legs and avoiding prolonged standing are probably good measures to be taken.

I have discussed treatment of spider veins and varicose veins in the Health Letter, Special Report 21, Varicose Veins and Venous Insufficiency, which I am sending you. Others who want this issue can send 75 cents with a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for it to me in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station New York, NY 10019.

In many cases, the large superficial varicose veins can also be treated by sclerosing agents that are somewhat stronger. This procedure is a bit more involved, but is far simpler than having surgery if a patient's case permits the use of injections rather than surgery.

DEAR DR. LAMB — A friend told me that at my age (38), my body will not produce muscle tissue. I was also told that the amino acid L-ornithine would turn body fat into muscle tissue if I exercise. I'm pretty heavy in the stomach area and want to reduce this. Will L-ornithine help me? I have rheumatoid arthritis. Would L-ornithine aggravate this?

DEAR READER — Nonsense. You may not grow new muscle fibers, but you can increase the size of the ones you have if you use a proper strength-training program. Many men a great deal older than you have increased the size of their muscles with strength-training exercises. You may need to approach strength exercises with some caution because of your rheumatoid arthritis. I recommend that you talk to a specialist in physical medicine for a program that would be helpful and not harmful. Ornithine is an amino acid that your body can make from glutamic acid, a common amino acid in a balanced diet. Don't expect any miracles from it. Any ornithine you take as a supplement will most likely be converted to arginine, another amino acid that is found in food. It won't affect rheumatoid arthritis. Rather than taking some fad product, you should follow a good balanced-diet plan and a suitable exercise program.

DEAR DR. LAMB — What is the proper diet for a 13-year-old boy who is very thin and very active? He needs some muscle, meat and fat. Could this also apply to a 17-year-old boy who is an athlete?

DEAR READER — A balanced diet applies to every healthy person, whether a growing child or a middle-aged man. One needs items from each of four basic food groups: dairy group, bread and cereal group, fruit and vegetable group and the meat group. There should be four servings daily of each of the first three groups and two servings from the meat group. The size of the serving may be changed in relation to the calories needed. I call this the "4-4-4-2 rule" to remember how many servings of each group you need each day.

Growing individuals and those recovering from weight loss, as from an acute illness, need extra calories. However, a young boy may not develop muscles and may pass through the "thin stage" until his growth cycle and development phase dictates it. Testosterone levels have a lot to do with becoming muscular, as do inherited tendencies. This is why both exercise and diet are sometimes disappointing in producing muscle. One must wait for Mother Nature to take her course.

I have discussed the details of a balanced diet in The Health Letter, Special Report 16, The Balanced Diet, which I am sending you. Others who want this issue can send 75 cents with a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for it to me in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, NY 10019. You can use it for your athlete, too. It is for everybody and is the basis for sound nutrition.

Leadership topic of program

Esther Thuett was hostess to the members of the Wyche Extension club Thursday afternoon in her country home.

Clara Trowbridge, president, conducted a short business meeting. Nine members of the club have made plans to attend district meeting of extension clubs, to be held in Canyon on April 18. Those who plan on going are to meet at the community parking lot at 8:20 for a ride. Crafts are to be taken for the Deaf Smith County display. They should be labeled with the name of display and county and club.

An invitation was read from the Los Ciboleros chapter of the DAR invite the members to a reception honoring Mrs. Pet Ott, recipient of the DAR Medal of honor. This to be held in the community center April 28 at 3 p.m. A luncheon will be held April 29 in the Heritage room of the Deaf Smith county library for members to hear reports from delegates to the district meeting. Council will hold the April meeting following the luncheon.

Argen Draper introduced Johnnie Messer, who gave a program on leadership. She listed 23 Tips to strengthen the organization. A demonstration on how to introduce a person and how to give and follow instructions followed.

The next meeting will be April 25 in the Ott home. The 4-H members will give method demonstrations.

Members attending were Clara Trowbridge, Audrey Rusher, Ethel Logan, Louise Packard, Pet Ott, Argen Draper, Carol Odom, the hostess and the guest Johnnie Messer.

Once upon a time a man had the correct change in his pocket to satisfy the requirements of the copying machine in the drug store.

Treasury checks are being printed in pastel colors, replacing the traditional green, but the department itself still runs in the red.
