

Punhong Leaves; Hereford May Gain 3 Doctors

By PAUL SIMS
Managing Editor

One Hereford doctor, Prasert Punhong, Tuesday wound up his family medical practice but the city will compensate by adding three family practitioners this summer.

The new doctors should lighten but not eliminate the heavy patient load now experienced by Hereford physicians

"I'm sure that Hereford could still use two or three more doctors," said Ron Welty, administrator at Deaf Smith General Hospital and the primary recruiter of physicians to Hereford.

"We're continuously working on recruiting but it will probably be next summer before we recruit any more."

Punhong resigned from the Hereford Medical Surgical Clinic in order to move his practice to Levelland. Punhong, a native of Thailand, lived in Levelland before moving to Hereford in November, 1976.

"Without a doubt, we'll miss him," Welty said.

The last doctor to leave Hereford before Punhong was H.A. Pennington, who resigned at the Family Medical Clinic in December, 1976.

Dr. David G. Carruth, a Tulsa native, has signed a contract to begin a family practice at the Hereford Medical and Surgical Clinic in July. He is expected to be in Hereford by July 1 and begin his practice around the middle of that month.

Carruth has been family physician at the United States Air Force Hospital Luke Air Force Base, Ariz. A major in the Air Force, Carruth did his family practice residency at the University of Virginia Hospital in Charlottesville, Va.

Family Medical Clinic also expects to soon add another physician, whose name is being withheld by clinic officials until his hiring is verified.

Dr. Edwin Hui, a Hong Kong native and citizen of Toronto, Canada, probably will open a practice at the Hereford Medical and Surgical Clinic probably in August. His arrival date in Hereford is dependent upon when he secures a visa from the United States Department of Immigration and Naturalization.

Hui attended medical school for two years at UCLA and two years at the University of British Columbia. He has just completed a medical science fellowship from the Canadian Heart

SINCE SO MUCH publicity has hit area papers and tv about the problems of the San Jose community, it might be well to review the facts.

The problems of the area were brought to the public's attention again because the owner of the water well in the community informed The Brand that a critical situation was about to occur that he might be forced to discontinue operation of the well. A three-part series appeared in The Brand, dealing with the problems of water and living conditions.

The articles explained why city and county officials could see no way to provide help in the area, and it pointed out the fact that state and federal agencies might be of help, provided that people in the concerned area initiated the effort. It was our hope that the information would stimulate citizens of

Reporter Says Uganda Boss On Honeymoon

NAIROBI, Kenya (AP)—An American reporter in Uganda says President Idi Amin told her by telephone he is honeymooning with his fifth wife two years after their marriage.

But the Kenyan news agency says Amin's police are on the rampage after an attempt to assassinate him, and hundreds of Ugandans are fleeing to Kenya.

Independent confirmation of the agency's report was not available.

Audrey June Taylor of New York radio station WWRL reported by telephone from Kampala, the Ugandan capital, that a government official there "put in a special telephone call to Amin" so she could check the reports of an attempt on his life.

"He told me he was alive and well and relaxing and vacationing on a belated honeymoon with his wife Sarah," said Mrs. Taylor, who had met Amin before.

"He did not tell me where he was, but a television newscast here Tuesday night said he addressed a refugee rally in the western province.

"The president told me that he is doing his best to stay out of the news. He didn't say exactly when he planned to return to Kampala although he said it could possibly be next week."

Karen Quinlan Closer To Death

MORRIS PLAINS, N.J. (AP)—Karen Anne Quinlan, whose two-year coma sparked nationwide debate over the right to die, is hovering closer to death 13 months after her life-supporting respirator was turned off under a court order.

Her parents, Joseph and Julia Quinlan, today kept vigil at her bedside at the Morris View Nursing Home.

The family priest, the Rev. Thomas Traoposa, said he administered the Roman Catholic last rights to Miss Quinlan Tuesday night, something he said he had done periodically during her illness.

Karen is experiencing difficulties, Paul Armstrong, the family's spokesman and attorney, said Tuesday. But he refused to comment on reports that death was imminent. "We don't want the world to be at the bedside. We don't want this to turn into a macabre vigil," he said.

Armstrong said Miss Quinlan's condition began to deteriorate several days ago. He said the nursing home, which has no respirator, was following a philosophy of using no "heroic means" to save lives.

Doctors said Miss Quinlan now weighs only about 60 pounds. She is curled in a semi-fetal position and twitches occasionally from involuntary responses to light and noise. But doctors say that at no time has she been aware of people around her, including her parents who have made daily visits to the county nursing home.

Miss Quinlan, 23, lapsed into a coma on April 15, 1975, after consuming alcohol and tranquilizers at a party the night before. When she failed to recover three months later, her parents asked a court for permission to disconnect her respirator so she could "die with dignity."

"I was the last to hold out," Joseph Quinlan, 52, said of the decision. "But after a lot of prayers, I became convinced this is what God's will was, and that Karen was being called by Him."

The issue was debated among doctors, clergymen and lawyers. At a week-long trial in nearby Morrisview in October 1975, physicians testifying for the family said the woman's condition was chronic and vegetative.

But doctors for both sides agreed that Miss Quinlan was not dead by any medical criteria.

"If Karen Ann Quinlan has one chance in a million, who are we and by what right do we kill that chance?" asked the attorney for the hospital.

Judge Robert Muir, ruling against the family's request, said, "There is no

Hereford May Get Drought-Relief Aid

Officials from the Austin and Lubbock offices of the Economic Development Administration (EDA) met with Hereford City Manager Dudley Bayne Tuesday to discuss the possibility of a drought relief grant to aid Deaf Smith County farmers.

Bayne applied for the grant, which if approved, must be approved by the Panhandle Regional Planning Commission before Hereford is eligible to receive any money. A PRPC representative also met with Bayne Tuesday.

Hereford may be eligible to receive $480,000. The grant, if approved, will be for at least 20 per cent of that total. The breakdown of the funds that Bayne applied for is $160,000 for new wells, $120,000 for well supply lines and 200,000 for a one million gallon ground storage tank.

The city commission, should it decide to go ahead with the construction, will decide how the balance of project will be financed should Hereford receive the federal aid.

Deadline for application to the Austin office of the EDA is July 7. Hereford probably will receive word on its eligibility from the EDA shortly after that date.

Soviet, France Leaders Ink Pact

PARIS (AP)—Soviet leader Leonid Brezhnev and French President Valery Giscard d'Estaing signed declarations today pledging to pursue and intensify efforts toward international detente and nuclear nonproliferation. A declaration on economic cooperation also was signed.

Brezhnev, who earlier had criticized Czech participation in the North Atlantic Treaty Organization, said his talks with Giscard d'Estaing were "useful and necessary," and Giscard d'Estaing labeled Brezhnev's three-day trip to France, the first to Western Europe since 1974, a "success."

On Tuesday, Brezhnev said no progress had been made in U.S. Soviet arms limitation talks and warned that development of "new types of systems of massive destruction" constituted a "particularly grave danger."

In their declaration on detente, Russia and France said, "the superior interest of humanity imperatively demands that states and peoples renounce policies founded on mistrust, rivalry and tension, and that they acknowledge that despite differences in the conception and organization of society, they are united against the perils that threaten them."

The declaration cited "respect of the rights of man and fundamental liberties by all states" as being one of the essential conditions of detente.

It said that "states must renounce the use of force, threats or the accumulation of arms as a means of influencing the policies of other states," and that they must "abstain from intervening in the domestic affairs of other states, respecting their sovereignty and independence."

The declaration also urged that "the spirit of detente not be contradicted by the considerations of bloc policies," an apparent reference to collective decision by the Warsaw Pact and NATO.

One detente condition laid down Tuesday by Giscard d'Estaing—"moderation of ideological competition"—was replaced in the final text by a decision to maintain "a favorable climate in relations between states."

The declaration on nuclear nonproliferation said France and Russia recognize "that access to peaceful uses of nuclear energy represents a means of economic development for an increasing of countries."

But it said the two sides "will apply their policies on exporting nuclear material, equipment and technology, respecting their international agreements in this domain" and called for working out an international convention in this area.

The declaration urged "limitation of transfers of nuclear parts including the Palestinians."

The declaration also urged greater efforts for peace in Africa and called for a world disarmament conference in the near future that would group "all the nuclear powers."

In the economic field, France and the Soviet Union worked out

A five-year agreement to study how chemical industries can be developed without harming the environment.

Another five-year accord to develop different modes of land, river and sea transport.

An extension of their current economic cooperation pact to 10 years, with plans for more joint industrial projects.

In a Tuesday night banquet speech at the Elysee Palace, residence of the French president, Brezhnev said there is "no more burning problem, no task more important than ending the arms race."

Brezhnev said the Soviet Union "is doing and will do everything on its side to prevent such developments. We hope that France also will act in this way."

The Soviet leader spoke a few hours after the chief U.S. disarmament negotiator, Paul C. Warnke, arrived in Moscow for a new round of negotiations to limit the Soviet and American nuclear arsenals. Brezhnev told Giscard d'Estaing earlier Tuesday there has been no major progress in the Soviet-American arms talks, but Warnke told reporters there had been "encouraging" progress.

Brezhnev, who still heads the Soviet Communist party, appealed to France to

Luckenbach's Charm Not A Misconception

LUCKENBACH, Tex. (AP)—If Waylon and Willie keep singing that song, somebody in this Hill Country hamlet is going to get the idea they need more than one parking meter.

Waylon Jennings and Willie Nelson, the high priests of what is commonly called "Redneck Rock," recorded a duet a few weeks back called "Luckenbach Texas" and things ain't been the same here since.

Vacationers by the hundreds now brave the sometimes treacherous back roads seeking the place with the funny name where the popular song says Waylon and Willie go to get away from keeping up with the Joneses.

Most stay long enough to fall under Luckenbach's lazy-day spell and leave only after they can't hold another bottle of beer—a veritable tradition here.

"I'll tell you one thing," said Texas cotton farmer John Massey. "They've got cold beer and a shade tree and that's a hell of a lot better than most towns."

Inside the general store, Kathy

Morgan was busy cleaning up the stacks of long-necked beer bottles scattered about on weathered tables and doing a little philosophizing on the town's success.

"There's something magic here," she said. "And I think the big secret is we don't have facilities. Everyone has to sit together and start talking and enjoying each other."

The success story has been such that Mrs. Morgan, who owns an interest in the store, the local dance hall and 10 acres of creek bottom, was not even upset that the last weekend horde carried off every sign that says "Luckenbach" and the town's beer-drinking chicken.

But not everybody likes the hoopla. Mrs. Armin Engel, who lives in one of Luckenbach's two houses, calls it "foolishness."

"The elderly people used to play cards there at the dance hall on Sunday, but the local people don't go there anymore," she said.

The general store now makes more money on a weekend than it used to make in during holidays, like the

Corn Crop Develops Say Ag Department

WASHINGTON (AP) — The 1977 corn crop continues to develop rapidly but needs more rain in parts of the Corn Belt and in much of the South.

As of June 19 the corn crop nationally was rated in good condition, the Agriculture Department said Tuesday in a weekly weather and crops report.

Corn in Missouri and Georgia particularly was suffering stress from dry weather.

The crops in the eastern area of the midwestern Corn Belt were 15 to 36 inches high, compared with nine to 22 inches on June 19 of last year, the report said.

"In the western North Central states the Minnesota crop grew exceptionally fast with some of the earliest fields almost ready to tassel," officials said.

Legislation Limits Boycott Involvement

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter, saying foreign boycotts go "to the very heart of free trade between all nations," today signed compromise legislation which limits but does not end the involvement of U.S. corporations in the Arab boycott of Israel.

The President said his concern about foreign boycotts stems "from our special relationship with Israel, as well as from the economic, military and security needs of both our countries."

He said he is confident "the divisive issues in the Middle East which can be resolved." He noted he has described the Arab boycott in the past as "a profound moral issue, from which we should not shrink."

Carter placed his signature on the bill at a ceremony in the Rose Garden at the White House. The measure is the product of an unprecedented agreement between the nation's most influential Jewish groups and the chief executives of many U.S. companies.

American, British Reach Agreement

LONDON (AP) — The United States and Britain agreed on terms of a new air transportation treaty today, averting a curtailment in direct passenger service between the two countries and between the United States and Hong Kong that would have delayed thousands of travelers.

The final negotiations lasted all night at Shell Mex House overlooking the Thames. The British Department of Trade said an agreement setting the guidelines for the new pact was signed just before 6 a.m. nearly an hour after the expiration time for the 31-year-old Bermuda Agreement which the new accord will replace.

Negotiations to work out the wording of the pact will continue in Bermuda, and a final version is expected to be ready for signing by mid-July. Meanwhile the Bermuda Agreement remains in force.

Police Report

Juliana Lavario, 23, of 717 Ave. H, posted $1,500 bond this morning and was released from Deaf Smith County jail in charges of driving under the influence of drugs, driving while license suspended and misdemeanor possession of marijuana.

Lavario was arrested by Hereford police at 12:52 a.m. today at the corner of 13th St. and Highway 385 after police received a tip that a vehicle was driving in an erratic manner.

Upon investigation, police discovered a can of acrylic lacquer spray paint and an empty beer can reportedly used for sniffing the paint. Lavario was also found to be in possession of a small amount of marijuana.

Rebate In Offing After Oil Taxes

WASHINGTON (AP) — Congressional tax writers revamping President Carter's energy plans want to give each adult American an estimated $28 rebate of money that would be raised by a new tax on crude oil.

The new crude oil tax would raise gasoline prices an estimated 7 to 8 cents a gallon. The tax rebate would be paid to every American adult next year regardless of whether the person pays taxes or conserves energy.

It also would give each typical American couple about $1 a week under a one year special payment system approved 19 to 17 Tuesday by the House Ways and Means Committee.

His art is accepted by noted professional art critics and is displayed in collections of foundations, corporations, banks and individuals throughout the Southwest.

Letter To The Editor

Dear Editor: Since January, a Constitutional amendment to prohibit forcing children to attend schools outside their own neighborhood has been bottled up in the House-judiciary committee. The committee has a pro-bussing majority.

Chairman Peter Rodino, D-N.J., has kept all anti-bussing legislation bottled up for years. Representative Ron Motl D-Iowa, introduced the Discharge Petition 1 on March 24 to try to pry the amendment loose from the committee, but Mr. Rodino put the screws on the Discharge campaign to squash it in its tracks.

Five members took their names off the petition. Mr. Motl urged citizens to oppose the forced bussing by contacting their representatives, asking if he or she had signed Discharge Petition 1 and, if not why not?

Forced bussing has no real pluses, but numerous minuses: it has caused redsegregation of school systems; it has pushed school systems to the point of bankruptcy and caused chaos and disorder in many cities.

I would urge all American citizens who are interested in improving the schools of our country to contact their representatives immediately.

Volunteer Cleanup Planned At San Jose

Andres Del Toro, Jesus Garcia and Robert Gallegos of the San Jose Steering Committee have announced plans for another volunteer cleanup project at the community this weekend.

Speaking for the committee, Gallegos reported that the steering committee is requesting volunteer help at the camp and the loan of any available trucks.

"A more intensive cleanup of the San Jose area will be launched, and anyone who cares to lend a hand will be more than welcome," Gallegos stated.

Persons interested in the weekend project can call Gallegos at 364-2218 for further information.

He reported that although the first cleanup effort at the camp centered in the area of a lakebed on the south side of the community this weekend's efforts will be directed toward the improvement of the entire San Jose area.

"We will get together at 8 a.m. and split up into groups to scatter throughout the community," said Gallegos.

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Barry Alan Beaver, a 21-year-old male nursing student, married Ellen Owens in a civil ceremony Tuesday and took his bride's name.

He said he did it because she is an only child and the last in her line of descendants.

Kershen Triticale Co. of Canyon will hold a triticale and wheat field day Thursday morning, eight miles west of Canyon on Highway 60.

The farm is located two miles east of Umbarger on the north side of the highway.

Tours of the farm will get underway at 10 a.m. and will be conducted on the hour until 2 p.m.

Dr. B. Charles Jenkins will present the results of 23 years of triticale plant breeding research, in addition to information obtained from the ninth international wheat breeders test and the southern small grains forage committee test.

Tour members will also have the opportunity to visit commercial fields near the tour site.

NUCLEAR POWER PLANTS AHOY
NEW YORK (AP) — Where do you dock a floating nuclear power plant? Not just anywhere, according to The Compass, a publication of MOAC, a commercial marine insurer.

In an article describing the nation's first floating nuclear power plant — scheduled for activation in 1984 off the New Jersey coast — The Compass notes that the breakwater for these plants will be the largest, strongest structure ever built in the ocean. It must be capable of protecting the power plant from a one-in-a-million storm with wind velocity up to 300 mph, and be capable of stopping the largest oil tankers from ramming the plant.

The breakwater for the New Jersey power plant will be built about three miles from shore. The Compass notes that sea-borne sites for power plants must be in water between 40 and 70 feet deep with a temperature variation of between 28.6 and 85 degrees Fahrenheit.

WINNIPEG, Canada (AP) — Northbound American tourists traveling along Highway 75 between the U.S. border and Winnipeg soon may be subject to "arrests" and sentenced to a night in a luxury hotel, dinner and a tour of the city.

Winnipeg police and the Jaycees are co-operating in the plan to stop cars with U.S. license plates, starting next month.

If the occupants of the car that is stopped plan to spend a few days in Winnipeg, they will be treated to some of the city's tourist attractions.

One carload of tourists will be so treated each week.

CHICAGO (AP) — A federal judge has ordered a Chicago curio dealer to turn over $11,000 worth of whale and hippopotamus teeth, turtle shells and tusks from elephants and walrus.

The dealer, Donald Kostecki, 39, received a suspended two-year sentence Tuesday on charges of violating the Endangered Species Act. He pleaded guilty May 12 to receiving the animal parts through interstate commerce and selling them in violation of the act.

Kostecki was arrested Dec. 9 after he allegedly sold three sperm whale teeth to an under cover agent from the U.S. Customs Service. At that time he allegedly showed the agent 20 more of the teeth, most of which has been imported from Japan.

Mrs. Taylor is one of a group of eight black Americans visiting Uganda at the invitation of the government to investigate ways of assisting the east African nation in the economic, educational and medical fields.

She reported that Kampala was completely normal "with nothing unusual happening" and said it had been that way since she first heard reports of the attempt to assassinate Amin.

Amin's last confirmed public appearance was last Thursday at a budget meeting in Kampala. The Nairobi Daily Nation, one of Kenya's leading newspapers, reported on Monday that the Ugandan dictator had disappeared after two gunmen tried to kill him last weekend. Ugandan officials in Kampala who could be reached by telephone were evasive, and Kenyan newspapers speculated that Amin was dead, deposed and hiding from his enemies, or wounded and under treatment in Libya.

U.S. officials in Washington said they assumed Amin was still alive because there had been no upheaval in Uganda.

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — The Texas Rangers fired Frank Lucchesi today and named Eddie Stanky as his successor.

"We're changing managers today," said Rangers Executive Vice President Eddie Robinson. "Lucchesi is not being fired, but he's being moved over into another job in the organization."

Robinson said Lucchesi would become his administrative assistant.

The decision was made Sunday night after the Rangers had lost three of four games at home against the expansion Seattle Mariners.

Robinson and Stanky's contract was for more than one year and that all details have been ironed out. Stanky was scheduled to arrive in Minneapolis later today to sign the pact.

He will be introduced to the Rangers players following a 5 p.m. CDT news conference.

Eisenhower Didn't Plan To Divorce From Mamie

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Dwight Eisenhower never planned to divorce his wife, Mamie, and at one point told her not to worry "your pretty head" over rumors that he was having an affair with his secretary, their wartime correspondence shows.

The letters from the former president to his wife were released to the Los Angeles Times by the Eisenhower family in reaction to an ABC television screenplay being produced in part from a book by Lt. Kay Summersby, "Past Forgetting: My Love Affair with Dwight D. Eisenhower."

The screenplay is to be aired in several months, the Times said today.

Lt. Summersby, a member of the Women's Army Auxiliary Corps, was Eisenhower's driver and secretary in Europe and North Africa during World War II.

She wrote her book about the alleged affair in 1976 and died of cancer shortly afterward.

The Times reported, however, that the Eisenhower letters cast doubt on the accuracy of the Summersby book and on a story, attributed to former President Harry Truman, that the general planned to divorce his wife and marry Kay Summersby.

Truman's account of the alleged divorce plans were printed in a recent book by Merle Miller, "Plain Speaking: An Oral History of Harry S. Truman."

In his letters, Eisenhower repeatedly refers to his wife as "my darling" and "my sweetheart."

"This eve I just wanted to say you're the greatest gal in the world. I'll never be in love with anyone but you," the general wrote to his wife from Algiers on Feb. 20, 1943.

Five days later, he wrote again from Algiers: "I love you—don't go bothering your pretty head about WACs, etc., etc."

The 319 Eisenhower letters are scheduled to be published next year by Doubleday under the title, "Letters to Mamie."

Luckenbach

infamous Mud Dauber Day.

Thousands of beer-laden Texans annually flood Luckenbach to celebrate the silliness that goes with the return of the first mud dauber wasp during the spring.

Luckenbach was established in 1849, but few people paid it any mind until reporters and columnists took a fancy to Hondo Crouch, part owner of the store and post office.

Crouch's tall tales were printed far and wide and his interest in country music brought several big names to town for Saturday night gigs.

When he died last September at the age of 59, the tributes and songs flowed almost as thick as the beer does today. "Luckenbach Texas," most here agree, is another way to say "Thanks for the hospitality Hondo."

"It's the greatest thing that ever happened," said Mrs. Morgan.

Things YOU Should Know ...

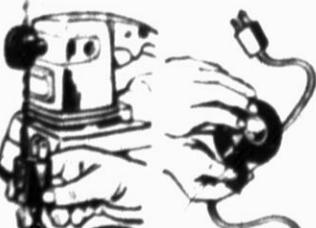

Home Workshop Safety

- Read instructions carefully before using power tools.
- Use only the tool designed for the job you are - doing. Misuse of equipment is a frequent cause of accidents.

- Always buy power tools equipped with double-insulation or a three-prong grounded plug. A Ground Fault Circuit Interrupter installed in the housing circuit also prevents potential shocks from power tools or any other electrical appliance.
- Check electrical cords regularly for cuts, cracks, or breaks in insulation, repairing electrical cord with tape.

- Look for comfortable, securely attached handles when purchasing tools.
- Disconnect tools by holding the plug, not by pulling on the cord.
- Wait until motor is off, all parts stopped, and tools unplugged before repairing or cleaning power tools.
- Avoid loose clothing, ties or jewelry that may catch in moving parts of tools. Roll up loose shirt sleeves.
- Dress appropriately: wear closed, sturdy shoes and - safety glasses to protect a gainst flying particles.

- Store tools on pegboard in a high or locked place, away from children.

Reactivated Well Just A Big Fizz

DEDCAMBRE, La. (AP) - An old dead natural gas well, reactivated for a great experiment, is gushing 5,000 barrels a day of boiling hot salt water that fizzes like soda pop.

The fizz is natural gas, dissolved by enormous pressure, saturated into stratas of hot water trapped several miles underground along the Louisiana and Texas coast in a geothermal area.

There is an awful lot of gas down there. The trick is to get it out in any way which would make the effort worthwhile.

Optimists say if engineers can just figure out how to capture that fizz, the nation's gas shortage is over for another 50 years or more. Critics call the effort a waste of money.

"There are people who don't believe all this, it is pie in the sky to them," said O. Carroll Karkalits, dean of the School of Engineering and Technology at McNeese University in Lake Charles, La., and director of this budding research.

"But if the critics are right, we have got to know it," he added. "And if we are right, we need to know that, too."

In any case, federal officials could not resist the enormous potential in the multimillion dollar program now focused on the old well out among the mosquitoes of Tigre Lagoon.

A U.S. Geological Survey study estimated that the geothermal hot salt water under Texas and Louisiana contains 24,000 quads of methane gas within drilling range. Some experts say there is more than that.

A "quad" is a unit of giant measurement. It is one quadrillion British Thermal Units-btu. A btu is the amount of heat it takes to raise the temperature of a pound of 39-degree water one degree Fahrenheit.

Roughly speaking, a quad is equal to the btu's in 170 million barrels of oil or a trillion cubic feet of natural gas.

So success would mean gas to burn, gas for plastics, cleaner skies, trillions of dollars in profits, international political impact.

Failure would mean the federal Energy Development Administration - ERDA - will write off a few million bucks in losses and try something else.

"At least we will know, one way or another," said John Salisbury, Washington, chief of research assessment of ERDA's geothermal energy project.

The term "geothermal" is applied to areas where millions of years of pressure from the earth's crust has created heat.

In this instance, the area of deep heat and great pressure is precisely defined - and why not? It is 200 miles wide and stretches from New Orleans to Brownsville, Tex. Drillers who have put down 300,000 holes along there since 1920 used to blunder into it frequently.

Before instruments were perfected for early detection, hitting the geothermal area unexpectedly was disastrous. Sudden entry into subterranean areas of pressures of 11,000 pounds per square inch - could spit drill and casing up out of the hole in a violent blowout. "If you drilled into it unprepared - whoopee," said Salisbury.

ERDA has data from thousands of oil and gas wells but drillers dealt with the geopressure zone as little as possible - limiting their effort to getting on through it.

"Major unknowns remain," said Salisbury. "We don't know exactly how much gas there is, where it is, whether water everywhere is saturated with gas or some of it has just a little bit. We don't know temperatures. We don't know how saline the water is, whether it changes place to place..."

In saturated water, gas content ranges from 6.7 to 11 per cent.

Bill Osborn, a Lafayette petroleum engineer handling well operations, declined to specify how much gas the laboratory finds in this test water.

"We don't have enough conclusive information at this point," he said. "What we are after is working pressures, permeability, this type of thing. So far, we are running very close to what we predicted."

At the surface, the water temperature is 220 degrees, eight above the boiling point. The temperature is important because, in addition to gas, the experiment is to whether the heat can be converted to energy.

Heat diverted into freon boilers could turn turbines and thus generate electricity. Geothermal areas in Texas tend to be hotter, but the sands are tighter and water doesn't flow as well.

Osborn said he thinks it will take both gas extraction and heat extraction to make geothermal wells worth their expense and trouble.

"If we find what we think we are going to find, this could be a very viable energy source," he said.

Karkalits said this test well is bringing up geothermal water from 12,999 feet.

ERDA has invited oil companies to lend it a few more old or dry holes for additional tests. And a true geothermal well is planned. It is a water well, and would be bigger hole than is needed for oil or gas. It probably will cost $2 million and bring up 40,000 barrels of water a day - to be reinjected, lest land above the geothermal begin to sink.

It has not been done as yet, but theoretically gas would be extracted at the well, using pressure tanks.

"As the water comes to the surface you would get gas coming out of solution automatically, just like opening a bottle of Coke," the professor said. "First thing you do is have a big tank pressured at 6,000 pounds per square inch to take the gas out, then put pressure down to 3,000 to take off more gas, then your high temperature water would go into a freon boiler."

"We are just beginning this research," said Karkalits. "But I think it may be reasonable to expect that by the end of this century Louisiana will be getting three trillion cubic feet of gas a year out of geothermal wells."

"The ingenuity of American engineers will figure out a way to do it."

Companies Want Their Money Before Cuba Trade Renewed

NEW YORK (AP) - Perhaps the biggest obstacle to renewed trade with Cuba are those Yankee dollars the Caribbean nation owes American companies for properties expropriated by Fidel Castro's government.

The U.S. Foreign Claims Settlement Commission has documented more than $1.6 billion in bills for seized properties, and some corporation executives aren't in the mood to write off their share of the amount.

Goodyear Tire and Rubber, for example, has informed shareholders that while "normalization of relations with Cuba is a desirable objective," it is essential "these claims be negotiated as part of any plan for restoring normal relations."

Charles Philliod Jr., chairman, maintains the original claim of $5.1 million, for a 96,000-square-foot automotive tire plant, has now mounted to $13.7 million, the result of 6 per cent interest, compounded annually for 17 years.

If other companies press for interest also, the entire bill will be close to double the original $1.6 billion, even if simple rather than compound interest is assessed.

The trouble is that Cuba appears to be in no position to pay off such claims, and thus a stalemate demanding all the diplomatic and other skills of negotiators is likely to develop.

The only relief the American companies have obtained has been from the U.S. government in the form of tax deductions.

Goodyear, for example, told shareholders that it took an initial claim against taxes of slightly less than $2.7 million in 1960. After other adjustments, it said, its net loss amounted to $2,411,145.27.

Other companies lost considerably more. Boise Cascade, owner of the Cuban Electric Company claimed a loss of $279.3 million, and almost the same amount in interest. International Telephone & Telegraph lost $130.7 million.

With both sides apparently anxious for a renewal of trade relations, these huge sums almost inevitably will be the subject of intense debate. Some analysts believe the interest charges might be dropped; some U.S. officials are said to be talking in terms of barter arrangements.

J. Paul Austin, chairman of the Coca-Cola Co. which likes to be everywhere, recently returned from discussions with Castro, but no report of his subsequent briefing of President Carter has been made public.

Coca-Cola is hardly a disinterested party, and its views of its own situations may be indicative of who has the upper hand - Cuba, which seeks normalcy, or American business, which seeks sales. Coke has a claim of $27.5 million, not including interest. But it wants to sell Coke, and it needs sugar.

To date, as Philliod told Goodyear shareholders, the Cuban government has offered no compensation of any kind, although originally it was believed the Castro government would offer bonds in compensation.

"Should Congress or the administration lift the U.S. trade embargo against Cuba before obtaining an agreement on the claims," wrote Philliod, "there would be little or no incentive for the Cuban government to ever offer compensation."

For the United States to reach agreement with Cuba without first resolving the property claims, he said, "would amount to a tacit pardon of Cuba's action and tend to encourage other nations to confiscate American properties without compensation."

While Goodyear has been outspoken, other companies have not been silent. They too have been taking time to write their senators and representatives. They want their bills paid.

Emmy-Winning Director Does Things Differently

LOS ANGELES (AP) - John Korty, the Emmy-winning director of CBS "Autobiography of Miss Jane Pittman," does things a bit differently. For starters, his office is near San Francisco, not in Hollywood.

And in a boom era for half-hour situation comedies, with 27 set for next fall on the networks, a sitcom idea of his called "The Transport of Delight" may wind up on public TV in several years.

It's being pitched by station KOED in San Francisco to officials at the Corporation for Public Broadcasting as a candidate for partial underwriting for a pilot show that could lead to a series, KOED says.

"Transport" is about young folks of differing races who form a moving and trucking company, and advertise in foreign-language and underground newspapers, a station spokesman says.

"Well, I guess it's because I'm a little crazy," Korty said when asked why he didn't take his wares to NBC CBS, ABC. "I had the idea for three years... but I didn't want to do a commercial series."

He said he only wanted to do

13 episodes a year. But if his series was on a network and clicked, he feared the network would demand the usual 24 or so episodes annually, leaving him no time for other projects.

His comedy idea sat idle until an old friend, Chloe Aaron, a Public Broadcasting Service program executive, mentioned a need for comedy on public TV, "so I decided to try it," he said. Should CPB tell "Transport" to start trucking, he says, he won't take it to Hollywood. He'll tape the series on location around the City by the Bay, avoid the conventional studio and audience therein.

"And I want to use, as much as possible, Bay-area writers, actors and directors," he added in a phone interview from his office in Mill Valley, just north of San Francisco.

"There are a lot of good people up here who find it very hard to crack the Hollywood scene. And yet they're very talented and know what they're doing."

Korty, 40, a transplanted New Yorker born in Lafayette, Ind., is among the small, but growing, colony of San Francisco film folk who've cracked the Hollywood scene with spectacular success.

Others who call the Bay area home include Francis Coppola of "Godfather" fame; George Lucas, director-writer of the hit "Star Wars," and Lee Mendelson, who makes those "Charlie Brown" specials for TV.

Korty said he never wanted to live in Hollywood - a state of mind extending from Dreamland to the Cuckoo's Nest - even though it's said to survive here you must constantly see and be seen here.

The director-writer says he doesn't hate Hollywood, just prefers life in San Francisco. He once even "had one agent give up on me because he said I was never found" in Hollywood.

Natural Acids Prevent Growth of Food Poison

WASHINGTON (AP)—Government scientists say "if proper procedures are used" home gardeners can look forward to canning their own tomatoes without fear of them developing a deadly form of food poison.

The Agriculture Department said Monday a two-year study of more than 350 tomato varieties showed the fruit normally contains enough natural acid to prevent the growth of bacteria which causes botulism.

But the department said home canners can easily add citric acid or lemon juice to their tomatoes as further insurance against botulism.

The study to assess the safety of home-canned tomatoes was conducted by USDA's Eastern Regional Research Center, Wyndmoore, Pa., after questions were raised several years ago about the possibility of botulism resulting from so-called "low acid" tomatoes canned at home.

Officials said the tests "show that there has been no consistent change in tomato acidity of varieties introduced over the last 25 years," although four varieties are low in acid and should not be used for home canning.

One of these, Garden State, was low enough in acid "to possibly permit growth" of Clostridium botulinum, the organism that causes botulism. However, officials said, Garden State tomatoes, introduced in 1945, are not commercially available now.

Three other varieties—Ace, Ace 55 VF and Cal Ace—are low in acid. They were developed for commercial growers who produce tomatoes for the fresh market and should not be used for home canning.

"The scientists found no other ripe, normal tomatoes with acid levels in the range that would permit growth of C. Botulinum," the department said.

The research, lead by Dr. Gerald M. Sapers of the USDA's Agricultural Research Service, showed that one-fourth teaspoon of citric acid of one tablespoon of bottled lemon juice in each pint will increase tomato acidity and produce no off flavors.

Vinegar is not as effective as citric acid or lemon juice and causes an off flavor in canned tomatoes, the scientists found. A commercially prepared "acidification" table also was not as effective.

The report said that "proper procedures" begin with the selection of tomatoes that are not overripe or decayed. Further, home canners should follow "tested and approved" procedures such as in USDA's publication, HG-8, "Home Canning of Fruits and Vegetables" which may be available from county extension offices.

The publication can be ordered for 45 cents a copy from the U.S. Government Printing Office, Washington, D.C. 20402.

"What the public has been told about yellow, orange and small tomatoes being low in acid and not suitable for home canning is a fallacy," the report said. "According to the data, tomatoes of the small and light-colored varieties actually tend to be higher in acid than other tomato types."

The acid taste in some high-acid tomatoes may be asked by a high sugar content.

The environment in which tomatoes are grown or the condition of the vines can effect tomato acidity.

One sample of the Fireball variety, for example, was picked after the vines were dead. Although the tomatoes appeared normal, 38 per cent of them were low enough to permit growth of the bacteria.

Trio Attended National Big Brother Convention

The Big Brothers and Big Sisters of America officially merged this weekend during the national convention at Orlando, Fla., where more than 580 persons registered.

Among the crowd of BB-BS officials were three representatives of the local chapters, including JoAn Dwyer, executive director of the program, and board members Margaret London and Patsy Giles.

President Gerald Ford, honorary chairman of the Big Brother program for the past two years, was a guest speaker during the awards luncheon. He expressed a "great and growing need" for the Big Brother organization in this country.

A highlight of the convention was a presentation of $20,000 to Big Brothers by the National Football League. Also, the Big Brother and Big Sister of the Year were recognized.

Of import to the local delegation was the announcement that Hereford will host the Region X meeting in October. This region includes five states—Texas, New Mexico, Oklahoma, Colorado and Montana. This will be the first time that the local BB-BS organization has been host to a region assembly.

Dave Bahlman, who was a Little Brother himself, gave a moving account of his growing involvement with foster children.

The attorney told the crowd that he was now a foster parent to 23 children, many of whom are handicapped or come from abusive backgrounds.

Also, actor James Caan will serve as national volunteer and recruiting chairman during the coming year, it was announced.

In their leisure time, the trio of Hereford women visited the Florida beaches and Disney world.

Peaches, Milk, Beef Plentiful for July

WASHINGTON (AP)—Beef milk and peaches head the Agriculture Department's "plentiful" foods list for July.

Although beef production will be down 4 to 6 per cent from a year ago, USDA says in a monthly "food marketing alert" that next month's supply still will be larger than average for mid-year.

A smaller supply of grass-fed cattle is the main reason for beef supplies being down from a year ago, officials said Monday. Grain-fed beef, meanwhile, is more abundant.

According to USDA definition, plentiful means "more than adequate for requirements." Adequate is "enough to meet needs," and light is "less than adequate, not enough for normal needs."

Pork broilers, eggs and turkeys, along with fresh potatoes and onions, were rated adequate for July.

An abundance of fresh peaches also is expected next month, reflecting big harvests in California and southern states. The report had this advice:

"Don't judge a peach by its blush. The red color is not always a good indicator of the ripeness. Look at the background color. It should be creamy to a very mellow yellow color. Also, look at it for well-defined creases. Fragrance can also be an indicator for ripeness."

Ann Landers Klutz Complains

DEAR ANN LANDERS: My problem in three words--I'm a klutz. The embarrassment and shame I've suffered from spilling things, breaking things, dropping things, stumbling, falling--is more than I can take. Everything I do screams "KLUTZ." When I shuffle cards, serve a glass of water, walk into a room, I feel like a clumsy ox--inept and left-footed.

Life would be a breeze instead of a hurricane if I were more graceful--or at least a little better coordinated. Please don't send me to ballet school, just tell me how to develop poise at home.-- Klutzzy Carol (Age 19)

DEAR CAROL: Most klutziness is the result of (a) hurrying, (b) being absent-minded--no concentration on what one is doing.

Slow down and make a conscious effort to do every small thing as gracefully as possible. You're bound to see an improvement, Lovey.

P.S. Can it be that you are subconsciously klutzting it up a little to call attention to yourself? Some people would rather be laughed at than ignored. Think of these things.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: A continuing family problem prompts my first letter to your column, regarding the writer from Philadelphia who keeps sending gifts and checks and gets no thanks or acknowledgments from nieces and nephews.

Out of a family of four children we have a 12-year-old boy (I can sit down and guide him through the thank you's, no problem), an 18-year-old girl who responds warmly, and promptly, without prodding, a 22-year-old who responds warmly, but not too promptly, and a 20-year-old son who stubbornly refuses to write a thank-you note, no matter how I beg or plead and try to shame him into it.

When I see a relative who has sent a gift to this impossible boy I make some feeble attempt to apologize. If you have a solution to the problem I would love to hear it.

In the meantime. He knows what to do. He just won't do it.-- Not Guilty In Endwell, N.Y.

DEAR NOT GUILTY: Can it be that your 20-year-old clod refuses to acknowledge gifts because he likes to bug you?

I suggest the following: When a gift for him arrives, phone the sender--tell him or her it was a lovely, thoughtful gesture.

Also say, "Unfortunately the young man is very remiss when it comes to acknowledging gifts and this, of course, distresses me. Please don't send him another gift ever again, if he fails to say thank you for this one. I, as his mother, would consider it a great favor."

DEAR ANN LANDERS: A friend of mine is married to the youngest son of a large family. Her husband, Ferdinand, has five brothers--all older. Their wives seem to produce nothing but girls. At last count Ferdinand and Cheryl had 17 nieces.

Cheryl became pregnant recently. She is determined to have a boy and has been eating herbs and root food (carrots, turnips and beets) like mad. Her grandmother says this will produce a male child. True or false?-- Big Q.

DEAR Q: The sex of a child is determined at the moment of conception. Whatever she is carrying has already been decided.

Power Decentralization

New Trend Authority Says

NEW YORK (AP) - A contract was awarded this month to begin redevelopment of a small hydro plant on the Passaic River at Paterson, N.J. that was abandoned after a flood in 1968. At the time it was decided that to spend $120,000 on repairs would be uneconomical, especially since electricity could be provided by a modern, powerful central generating plant.

When work is completed, Paterson, a city trying to recapture the energy that made it an industrial center even before the 19th century, will have an installation of perhaps 4,500 kilowatts, tiny by modern standards, but significant.

As one of those involved in the project stated, "It's enough to keep an industry from leaving town."

Author of the comment was David Lilienthal, who in the past has subscribed to the engineering concept that big is beautiful and efficient, and who seemed to apply that view - he might argue with you - as head of the Tennessee Valley Authority.

Lilienthal, whose company, Development and Resources Corp., is planning the Paterson comeback, now believes the nation has gone too far toward the belief that power generation should be centralized, and with it the people who need that power.

Small hydropower now appears competitive, in the Northeast anyway, both in terms of unit investment costs and operation-maintenance costs. There is no shortage of sites; there appears to many, many thousands of them.

The tumbling waters of New England streams, which turned the gears of factories since colonial days, are perhaps the most abundant sources. But reservoirs, locks, navigational dams, even irrigation canals, offer opportunities everywhere.

Municipalities, factory owners, utilities and federal officials now are showing interest in sites long abandoned, left behind by the alleged march of progress.

The Federal Power Commission survey of potential sites almost ignores those of less than 5,000 kilowatts, or enough roughly to serve a city of 5,000. But recently President Carter asked for, and soon will receive, a report on such possibilities.

An investigation by the Mitre Corp. confirmed the economic feasibility of restoring a 300 kilowatt hydroplant at Wareham, Mass. At Harrisville, on the Nubanusit River in New Hampshire, a manufacturer is restoring a 180 kilowatt site.

Lilienthal, who also served as the first chairman of the Atomic Energy Commission, believes the potential of other sites is obvious, providing we have adapted to the realization that power need not be centralized. Sites of as little as 500 kilowatts, and sometimes even less, might be feasible, he says.

He has on his desk a report that 25 small dams in Minnesota have been withdrawn by the Northern States Power Co. in the past 20 or 30 years.

A particularly fine example, he feels, is the Coon Rapids Dam at Brooklyn Park, on the Mississippi near Minneapolis. The power equipment was removed in 1966 and the dam transferred to the Hennepin County Park Reserve District. If restored, that same facility might provide 6,500 kilowatts, or about $1.35 million a year in power. Most likely it would not interfere with recreational facilities. Most likely it would not offend conservationists.

Lilienthal's company has designed large-scale, integrated, agricultural-industrial-human redevelopment projects around the world, but in recent months his contagious enthusiasm has been directed at small power.

Since he first spoke out on the subject a year or so ago he has been deluged with inquiries. "I am not used to pioneer ideas being accepted quickly. This comes as close as any," he commented.

Among other virtues, small power returns power to the people, he feels. It permits them to decentralize and to retain local autonomy. Big power helped bring centralization, he says, but now "decentralization is a worldwide feeling."

Group Seeks Cut Of Abortion Funds

WASHINGTON (AP) - Attorneys for a group of congressmen and private citizens opposed to abortions Tuesday asked the Supreme Court to let Congress immediately cut off all federal funds for abortions in which the lives of the mothers are not endangered.

The lawyers specifically asked the high court to set aside the order of a New York federal judge that barred a ban on such abortions passed by Congress last year, the so-called Hyde amendment.

The request, filed with Justice Thurgood Marshall and expected to be referred to the full court for consideration, said the Supreme Court's decisions on abortion funding Monday removed any constitutional questions about the cut-off of such monies to poor women seeking elective abortions.

The court ruled, by a 6-3 vote, that states are not required by the Constitution or federal law to provide such funds. While the cases considered Monday did not involve the federal government, the rationale appears to apply to federal Medicaid funds also.

In seeking to set aside the order by U.S. District Judge John Dooling in Brooklyn which barred use of the Hyde amendment, the attorneys said Dooling's injunction goes against Monday's ruling.

The challenge to Dooling's authority to freeze such congressional action was mounted by attorneys for Rep. Henry Hyde, R-Ill., for whom the appropriations amendment was named; Sen. Jesse Helms, R-S.C.; former Sen. James Buckley of New York and Isabella Pernicone of New York, a private citizen.

The court could act very soon in approving the abortion funding cut-off request.

Under Monday's ruling, an estimated 300,000 poor women who receive abortions each year, 100,000 of them teenagers, no longer can be certain that states will pay for the operations.

Americans Living Longer, May Work Longer

Nothing ages a man like retirement.

You see vigorous executives turned out to pasture in some retirement village so soon beginning prematurely to walk old and talk old and think old... Practicing up to be dead.

While business and industry and the arts are showcases for men who are vigorous, virile and vital to their 90s...

Yet a federal law tends to force retirement at age 65.

That law is right now being rewritten.

Life expectancy in Colonial America was 27 years. A man was "old" at 45.

Today life begins where it used to end.

Life expectancy in the United States is now 76 years for men, 79 years for women. And any infant which survives birth and the precarious first year can reasonably expect to live into his 90s!

Yet labor, industry and government have conspired to enforce retirement at the arbitrary age of 65.

That 65 limit dates back to Bismarck; it is as outdated as he is.

The Employment Act of 1967 re-enforced it—specified that there must be no discrimination based on age—in hiring, firing or promoting—up to the age of 65.

After that your rights are terminated.

Well...

There are three bills now before the Congress designed to change that—to prohibit job discrimination at any age. And President Carter is prepared to support any one of three.

Greater than any other waste of any national resource is the brainpower that's benched when it should still be in the game.

Prof. Joel Hildebrand taught chemistry at the University of California until he was required to retire.

He was on faculty for 64 years. Forty thousand students took his chemistry courses.

Then in 1952 he was pronounced "old" and put out to pasture.

So here is a vigorous American— hale and hearty and productive at 96—who still climbs four sets of stairs at the Berkeley campus every morning to pursue his continuing research.

What a terribly tragic waste if he had taken seriously his "retirement."

In the three years since, Prof. Emeritus Hildebrand has published 13 papers and a book.

He has won most major chemistry awards and served as president of the American Chemical Society. This, understand, during his "retirement."

His marriage has thrived through 68 years; he still reads

Cities Using Special Taxes

Editor's Note - The nation's cities are finding it increasingly difficult to raise money and are looking to suburbanites to provide some of it. Part I of a two-part series on changing tax systems deals with the way cities are taxing their neighbors.

By JOHNATHAN WOLMAN
AP Urban Affairs Writer

Central cities are turning increasingly to special taxes and fees designed to recapture revenue from commuters who have moved out of town, but still use the city for work or entertainment.

Many cities, once wealthy, face a tough financial future which is not made any easier as middle-income families and businesses move to outlying suburban communities.

The flight from the cities began in the 1950s, but has become more acute in recent years as some cities began to suffer a decline in population for the first time.

However, some states do not allow cities to levy extra taxes on nonresidents, forcing communities to nickle-and-dime their way toward a balanced budget with special nonresident library and parking fees.

"People are leaving Little Rock and moving to the outskirts," says city Finance Director Jack Murphy. "Not only does Little Rock lose its tax base, but it's got to renew the core city in some way."

"We don't have a city sales tax or earning tax, so this creates a financial problem," he says.

Among those who can tax their suburban neighbors, the favored weapon is the wage tax. It is wielded by cities with problems as different as Birmingham, Ala., St. Louis and New York.

Most cities with wage taxes, for example Philadelphia, tax suburbanites working downtown at the same rate as city residents. The New York City commuter tax, however, is a flat one-quarter of 1 per cent of income while the city income tax on residents ranges from four times as much to 14 times as much.

Some cities-Nashville and Kansas City, for example - solve their problems by annexing outlying communities, or merging with them for tax purposes. Minneapolis and St. Paul share in a unique tax-base pool with their suburbs.

Buffalo, N.Y., benefits from a regional sales tax, returning revenues that the city has been losing gradually for years as shoppers headed for the suburbs.

Phoenix sells sewer and water services to residents of its suburbs at up to 40 per cent more than it charged city residents.

Boise, Idaho, charges extra fees for nonresidents who take books out of its public library. In Portland, Maine, suburbanites are charged an extra greens fee on public golf courses.

Milwaukee fiscal coordinator Bill Carey says: "We have to bear the municipal burden of costs associated with poverty and the elderly. These extra expenses of police and fire protection, code enforcement, health care, rat control fall most heavily on those with at least ability to pay.

On the one hand, says Carey: "Milwaukee is limited by state law as to what it can tax. It cannot levy income or sales taxes on nonresidents." On the other hand, Wisconsin has a progressive tax equalization formula that aids the city.

Because influence in the state legislatures has been swinging from the cities to the suburbs, many other metropolitan areas are not so fortunate as Milwaukee in seeking help in the Statehouse. New York City has consistently been rebuffed in its efforts to raise commuter tax.

The Georgia Legislature has blocked any commuter tax proposals designed to raise more money for Atlanta, which figures that its tax base is not increasing fast enough to keep up with inflation.

Boston has been trying - so far without success - to get a payroll tax through the Massachusetts Legislature, and others have proposed a regional sales tax to help the city through its financial difficulties.

When St. Louis levied a 1 per cent tax on earnings, it added $44 million to city coffers in 1976. Officials say the funds are needed to reduce the disparity of wealth between the city and its suburbs.

It's not just that the people have fled to the suburbs. The businesses have gone, too, leaving the city with tougher problems and a reduced tax base with which to face them," says city comptroller Raymond Percich.

Suburbanization problems are spreading to the wide open spaces of Idaho and Utah, according to officials there.

"Our property owners for the most part are required to foot the bill for city services for all the people, whether they live in the city or outside," said Salt Lake City finance chief Jennings Phillips.

"Police and fire protection, health, water, traffic control are all paid by property owners, not visitors," he says. "There was a time when the city was compensated, before the advent of suburban malls. We used to get sales tax. Now we get very little because the big retailers in Salt Lake have branches in the mall."

Phillips says Salt Lake City officials may ask the Utah Legislature to allow a commuter tax.

In Idaho, officials say suburbanization woes may spread with the eroding of downtown business districts that bolster city finances. In Pocatello, two large plants recently located outside the city to take advantage of lower property tax rates.

Two cities with a variety of ways of regaining suburban tax dollars are Birmingham and Kansas City.

Birmingham has suffered from white flight to 30 surrounding suburban communities since the 1960s. Mayor David Vann says suburbanites make heavy use of such city facilities as the zoo, the airport and the civic center. As a result, the city levies a 1 per cent tax on wages earned in Birmingham by both residents and nonresidents, gains funds from a 1 per cent city sales tax, and charges $5 to $10 extra for library privileges.

Kansas City Mo., aside from annexing liberally, used a 1 per cent tax on earnings to pry tax dollars from suburbanites who work in that city. It also has a tax on businesses located outside the city based on the volume of their business within the city.

Many urban experts believe the best way to solve city financial problems would be to merge the central cities with their suburbs, or to allow the cities to annex the outlying communities. Neither is likely to happen frequently in the current political climate, though an aide to the mayor Moon Landrieu says suburban resistance to a regional approach in the New Orleans area "is definitely breaking down."

In St. Louis, where the city population of 500,000 is one-tenth the county's, comptroller Percich says, "One solution that has been considered in the past is the merger of the city and the county."

"But the political climate is not right for that now. The people in the county can't see buying into the problems of the city. And, the flight of whites has left the blacks with considerable political clout in the city."

Survey Shows No-Fault Works

WASHINGTON (AP) - A new federal survey of no-fault automobile insurance plans in 16 states concludes that no-fault provides quicker and more equitable benefits than does the traditional liability system.

"No-fault automobile insurance works," said the Department of Transportation.

The report said the 16 states with full-fledged no-fault insurance plans "would appear to confirm the basic soundness of the theory and the feasibility of the theory's implementation."

Sen. Warren G. Magnuson, D-Wash., chairman of the Senate Commerce Committee, released the DOT study. He said he will use it in hearings beginning June 27 on his proposal for federal no-fault minimum standards.

"The DOT study confirms that good no-fault laws are working efficiently and effectively to compensate auto accident victims," Magnuson said. "Perhaps now we can enact a uniform, sensible statute and stop this foot-dragging."

Compensation for injuries or damage in auto accidents traditionally is funded by liability insurance. Under that system, blame has to be fixed on one party whose insurance then compensates the victim. Both parties often have to hire attorneys and wage long, expensive legal battles before any benefits are paid out.

The delay in payments, inequitable benefit awards and a large built up of court cases led to a movement to substitute no-fault for the liability insurance system. Massachusetts was the first state to pass a no-fault plan in 1970. 15 other states have enacted comprehensive no-fault plans and other states have adopted parts of the no-fault concept.

In the 16 states studied by the DOT, no-fault insurance had three common features: mandatory economic loss benefits were available to all victims regardless of fault; these benefits replaced liability insurance for compensating the same loss; and victims were restricted in their right to sue for damages for such intangibles as "pain and suffering."

The states studied are Colorado, Connecticut, Florida, Georgia, Hawaii, Kansas, Kentucky, Massachusetts, Michigan, Minnesota, Nevada, New Jersey, New York, North Dakota, Pennsylvania and Utah.

The report concluded that: "No-fault plans provide more adequate and equitable benefits than the liability system, especially for seriously injured accident victims and for victims of single-car accidents where no second person could be blamed."

For example, a Colorado bicyclist who ran a stop sign and was hit by a car covered by liability insurance so far has run up $8,201 in medical bills. None of those bills would have been covered by liability insurance because the bicyclist could not have successfully sued the car's driver, who was not at fault.

Under no-fault, the bicyclist's bills are covered because the system pays her medical costs regardless of fault.

Connecticut estimates that 25 per cent more accident victims recover for economic losses under no-fault insurance than under fault. Kentucky said that of the 53.8 per cent increase in the losses incurred in its first year of no-fault insurance, about 16 per cent were persons who would not have gotten benefits under the tort system.

Payments are paid promptly for economic losses under no-fault insurance, a marked improvement over other plans, the DOT said.

Michigan said almost all auto accident claims are settled within 30 days. Colorado said 59 per cent of its no-fault claims are settled within three months and 91 per cent within six months. Massachusetts said 63.3 per cent of its no-fault claims are paid within 90 days compared to only 40.5 per cent for traditional liability claims.

Insurance premiums can be lowered when no-fault benefits are coordinated with benefits from other sources.

"Significant net premium savings appear to be available to policyholders in the states which mandate the coordination of no-fault auto insurance with other public and private insurance coverages," the report said, noting that New York, New Jersey and Michigan have had particular success.

"The cost of administering no-fault auto insurance is probably lower, the report said, because claims are simpler to make and fulfill. But the DOT study said it now has no way to document this assumption."

"The backlog of court cases involving auto accident claims to is substantially eased under a no-fault system, according to experience in Florida, Massachusetts, New Jersey and Michigan, the report said."

"Seriously injured auto accident victims are more likely to seek effective rehabilitation under no-fault systems because they are more assured of being reimbursed for the enormously costly medical process."

Under normal litigation procedures, the determination of whether there will be any reimbursement can take months or years and the needs of the injured are neglected in the interim.

Jetliner Hijacked

MENDOZA, Argentina (AP) - A Chilean jetliner with some 70 persons aboard was hijacked to Mendoza, Argentina, Tuesday, officials said.

The Boeing 727 jet of Lan-Chile, the government owned airline, was making a routine flight from the northern Chilean city of Antofagasta to Santiago, the Chilean capital.

Gen. Augusto Pinochet, president of Chile's ruling military junta, gave the first word of the hijacking to newsmen accompanying him on a visit to a community near Santiago.

He said that the plane was hijacked just before landing at Santiago's Pudahuel international airport.

When the jetliner landed at the airport in Mendoza, a wine-growing Argentina city just across the Andes mountains which separate Argentina from Chile, army troops surrounded it, the independent Argentina news agency, Noticias Argentina, reported.

There was no immediate word on the identity of the hijacker or of any demands.

'WRONG DISTANCE' CALLS

RUDOLPH, Ohio (AP) - No one seems to know why, but on a recent Sunday, Mrs. Eugene Romaker received long distance calls from Grand Junction, Colo., Ocean Key, Fla., Appleton, Wis., Bradenton, Fla., and Dayton, Sylvania and Toledo, Ohio - all wrong numbers.

Pipeline Won't Cut Gas Costs

NEW YORK (AP) - With Alaskan oil finally headed toward the lower 48 states, here is a brief question-and-answer primer on the situation:

Q: When will all that Alaskan oil result in lower prices at the gas pump?

A: Probably never. Because of the extremely high transportation charges, about $6 per barrel for Alaskan oil instead of 50 cents per barrel for other domestic oil, the federal government plans to allow oil companies to charge the highest possible price for the oil. That price is about $14 per barrel, the same as currently paid for foreign oil.

The transportation charges proposed by the oil companies - which not only drilled for the oil but also combined to build the pipeline - have been called too high by the Justice Department. But no matter how the dispute is resolved, the price almost certainly will be the same as for foreign oil.

Q: But with all that additional oil, shouldn't there be more gasoline and other products, and therefore lower prices?

A: You would think so, but there's another complication. When the pipeline reaches full capacity by mid-1978, 1.2 million barrels a day of Alaskan oil will be heading south towards the West Coast.

But refineries able to handle the high-sulfur Alaskan oil already are working at full capacity and have no room for the additional oil.

Q: What will be done with it?

A: Alaskan oil will replace foreign oil, mostly from the Middle East. The price will be the same, but the money will stay in the United States. To refine the high-sulfur oil, plans call for shipping much of it through the Panama Canal to Gulf Coast refineries, but experts aren't sure if there are enough tankers available to handle the load.

Q: You mean they spent $7.7 billion over 10 years to build the trans-Alaska pipeline and now can't figure out what to do with the oil?

A: Essentially, that's correct.

Oil companies hoped to build pipelines from the West Coast to the Midwest or Gulf Coast. But conservationists have stymied those plans, although some proposals are still alive.

A: How about those rumors of payroll padding and other financial misconduct? How much did all that add to the pipeline's cost and the amount I pay for the oil?

A: It's hard to say. Critics charge that many millions of dollars were wasted through the pipeline company's headlong plunge to finish the 800-mile job.

But the firm, Alyeska Pipeline Service Co., insist that it did a commendable job of finishing a much-needed project on time and under extremely difficult working conditions.

The company says that whatever was spent was needed to keep labor peace and for unique equipment.

No Agreement Reached On Passenger Flights

BY RICHARD BLYSTONE
Associated Press Writer

LONDON (AP)—A cutoff in passenger flights between the United States and Britain appeared increasingly possible today as a year of talks entered their last few hours with no sign of agreement.

An American official said without basic agreement on the key issue of free enterprise in international flights, there is no use extending the deadline of Tuesday midnight Washington time. He reported deep differences still existed after Monday's session.

Pan American World Airways and Trans World Airlines, the two main American carriers, and the state-owned British Airways told passengers that services between the two countries would continue via points in Canada.

Britain's Department of Trade announced Monday night that a rereading of the "small print" in the 31-year-old pact indicated it should expire at midnight Wednesday instead of Tuesday as had been generally expected.

However, U.S. officials who have been taking a tough line against British demands for a guaranteed greater share of the market, said they did not accept this version.

A British spokesman said today: "I think if we look at it realistically one must be prepared for something to happen tonight."

Britain asked a year ago for termination and renegotiation of the post-World War II agreement that governs British flights to the United States and American air traffic to the United Kingdom and dependencies like Hong Kong.

Britain complains that it gets only one third of the $850 million annual air business between the two countries and that it is squeezed by the American lines' ability to flood the market with more flights and available seats.

It said in the last six years only 55 to 61 per cent of its available seats have been filled. American officials refused to give details but said 63 per cent of passengers between Britain and America are Americans. The United States has been willing to agree to restrictions against abuses of power, they said, but refused to compromise the principle of free competition.

CANTON, Ohio (AP)—Alice Browne, 14, of Mission Viejo, Calif., in April became the first woman to swim the 200-yard butterfly in less than two minutes. The first man to do that was Mike Troy in 1960, swimming for Indiana University. That year Troy went on to win a gold medal in the Rome Olympics.

BUENOS AIRES (AP)—Bolstered by a record, 11.2-million wheat harvest, Argentine agricultural production increased 13 per cent in the 1976-77 season, according to figures released here by the Secretary of Agriculture and Livestock. This represents the highest growth rate for a single season in the country's history.

Natural gas was once regarded as a hindrance and vast quantities were burned as waste, says the National Geographic Society.

Baboon's Heart Fails In Woman

BY MAUREEN JOHNSON
Associated Press Writer

CAPE TOWN, South Africa (AP)—Heart transplant pioneer Christiana Barnard's first attempt to bolster a human heart by grafting a baboon's heart onto it ended with the death of the patient, a 26-year-old Italian woman, early Tuesday.

"I think I will use chimpanzees next time," the surgeon told a news conference.

Looking haggard after the 10-hour operation Monday at Groote Schuur hospital and the losing battle for the life of his patient, Barnard said the transplant of the baboon's heart was a "last resort" to save the woman's life.

He said the woman's death was certain without a transplant and a human heart was not available.

The woman's husband was reported under sedation at Groote Schuur, and the hospital refused to release her name until he gave permission.

Barnard said the baboon's heart proved too small to keep the woman's circulation going when her own heart began failing.

The surgeon told an interviewer in March that a human patient could be expected to reject a transplanted animal heart eventually. But he said the alien organ might work long enough for the patient's heart to make some recovery or might keep the patient alive until a human heart became available.

He told the news conference today that the baboon and the woman had the same blood type but matching of tissue types was not possible. He said he would not know whether the woman's body rejected the heart until laboratory tests were completed, but he said no evidence of rejection was apparent.

Dr. Reeves Saunders, a spokeswoman for the hospital, said the woman was born with a chronic heart condition and entered the hospital for replacement of a valve which had been put in her aorta, the main artery from the heart, several years ago.

The operation to replace the aortic valve "became considerably more extensive" than planned, Saunders said, and the coronary artery was replaced in an attempt to boost circulation.

Barnard then decided to use a baboon heart for a "piggy-back" implantation to increase the patient's circulation, Saunders continued.

During the transplant operation Monday, the patient was put on a mechanical heart bypass for 10 hours. "The longest Dr. Barnard has ever had anyone on a bypass," Saunders said. The woman awakened after she was taken off the bypass, but her condition deteriorated rapidly, and she died at 3 a.m.

Looking Ahead,
Trophy Shoot, Taste

Local A.A.U. thinclads are looking forward to the West Texas A.A.U. Junior Olympic Track and Field Championships which will be held in Borger July 9. The meet is a stepping stone to Regional competition for entrants in the Intermediate (14-15) and Senior (16-17) age groups.

The top two finishers in selected events in the two classifications will qualify to compete in the Region IX Championships, which will be held July 23 at Gregory Portland near Corpus Christi. Winners at the regional meet qualify for the National Championships.

The WT A.A.U. meet will be held at Borger's Bulldog Stadium's six-lane, 440-yard all-weather track. Medals will be awarded to the top three finishers in each event.

—RAN—

The Hereford Gun Club will conduct a trophy shoot for the R.J. Cramer floating trophy at 2 p.m. Sunday at the shooting range east of the city airport. The event is open to all male shooters with trophies to be awarded in two classes; men, and 18-under boys.

Entry fees for men is $8, which pays for four rounds of 25 shots of trap each. Boys, who will shoot two rounds each, will have to pay $4.

The competition, held twice a year, was won last by Melvin Fowler in the men's division and Harold Murray in the boys division.

A practice session for the shoot will be held from 1-2 p.m. Neal Lueb of the club reported.

—RAN—

A scene which was unfortunate for the New York Yankees, and baseball in general, occurred Saturday when Yankee manager Billy Martin jerked out-fielder Reggie Jackson from the field for "a lack of hustle" and then proceeded to come close to fistcuffs with Jackson in the dugout while a national television audience looked on.

In an interview with Howard Cosell on Monday Night Baseball Martin commented that he had told his players that if they "embarrass me and the Yankees during a game by not hustling that I would embarrass them by pulling them out of the game immediately."

Yankee catcher Thurman Munson voiced support of the manager's actions, stating that definitely "most" of the Yankee players also approved. BUT, there was a hint of antagonism in Munson's voice as he spoke; due obviously to earlier conflicts with Jackson, a man with a personality all his own.

Munson called Martin a man who "loves the Yankees", but it seems that a standing threat of public embarrassment is not a "loving" act. No matter how justified, the action of purposely pulling a fielder out of a game just to punish him in front of baseball's fans is in bad taste.

And, to make matters worse Jackson missed a usually easy play Monday night when he apparently lost a ball in the lights giving the Detroit Tigers and Mark Fidrych a 2-1 victory.

There's no telling what Martin may do in the wake of more boo boos like the one Jackson made Monday night. He might even send the self-acclaimed outfielder to bed without his dinner!

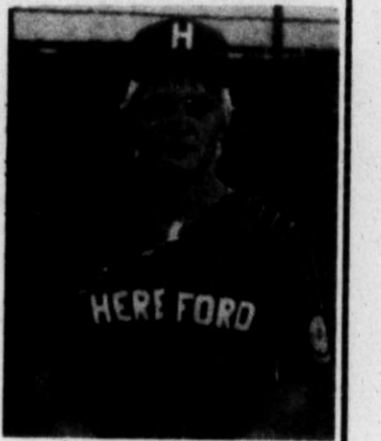

Legion Limelight

Speed is essential in any sport, and Dennis Artho, son of Mr. and Mrs. Joe Artho, uses high octaine fuel when he patrols center field for Hereford's American Legion baseball team.

Artho, a 1977 graduate of HHS, is in his second year of Legion ball. "Dennis has great speed, and he is doing a fine job in center field for us," Legion mentor Joe Don Cummings commented. Artho also leads off at the bat for Hereford and according to the coach "has a high on-base percentage."

In addition to Legion ball Artho has two years each of Bronco and Pony league and one year of high school baseball in his background.

He also takes the field at the shortstop and second base positions when the occasion arises. And, he has used his natural speed to advantage playing on the gridiron, too. He donned the maroon and white of HHS on Whiteface Field throughout his high school career.

Martin To Employ Bench; Sox Roll On

BY HERSCHEL NISSENSON
AP Sports Writer

You can't fire 25 baseball players, so you fire the manager. But you can bench players, and that's what Manager Billy Martin, who was nearly fired Monday, intends to do today in an effort to shake up his slumping New York Yankees.

The Texas Rangers, on the other hand, reportedly were set to fire Manager Frank Lucchesi and replace him with Eddie Stanky.

Meanwhile, the Boston Red Sox roll merrily along, slamming home runs in record fashion and pitching shutouts. Luis Tiant fired Boston's second consecutive two-strike-and-ten Rice and George Scott homered as the Red Sox trounced Baltimore 7-0 Tuesday night for their fifth consecutive triumph and opened a 4½-game lead in the American League East over the Orioles and the Yankees, who were beaten 5-2 by the Detroit Tigers.

Elsewhere, the Minnesota Twins trimmed Texas 9-5 in what may have been Lucchesi's final game as manager, the Chicago White Sox edged the California Angels 3-2, the Kansas City Royals slugged the Seattle Mariners 13-3, the Cleveland Indians blanked the Toronto Blue Jays 4-0 and the Milwaukee Brewers clobbered the Oakland A's 12-1.

Mickey Stanley and Tito Fuentes smashed two-run homers while Jim Crawford shackled New York with strong relief inn-

Tigers handed the Yankees their fifth consecutive setback. Martin then announced that center-fielder Micky Rivers, right fielder Reggie Jackson and first baseman Chris Chambliss would sit out tonight's game, giving way, respectively, to Paul Blair, Jim Wynn and Cliff Johnson.

Meanwhile, Minnesota scored five runs on seven hits in the fifth inning in wiping out a 3-1 deficit and beating Texas despite two homers by the losers' John Ellis and one by Toby Harrah. Rod Carew's single tied the score and Butch Wynegar greeted Mike Marshall with a tie-breaking two-run single.

Stanky, who formerly managed the St. Louis Cardinals and the Chicago White Sox and has been the coach at the University of South Alabama for a number of years, was expected in Minnesota today to sign with the Rangers.

"I guess everybody in the country knows it but me," said Lucchesi. "The thing I can't understand is why no one from the club has been in contact with me."

Red Sox 7, Orioles 0

The homers by Rice and Scott enabled Boston to equal the major league record of 24 homers in seven games by the Cleveland Indians of 1962 and the New York Giants of 1954. They narrowly missed breaking the record when Denny Doyle doubled off the right field wall during a four-run ninth-inning.

White Sox 3, Angels 2

The White Sox did not exactly tear Nolan Ryan apart Tuesday night, but they managed to bunch two of their three hits after three walks in the second inning. Ralph Garr delivered a two-run single after Ryan walked the bases full and Alan Bannister singled home what turned out to be the winning run. That was the third and last hit of the game.

Royals 13, Mariners 3

Tom Poquette, Hal McRae and George Brett unloaded three hits apiece and combined for eight runs batted in and six runs scored, leading a 16-hit Kansas City attack. Al Cowens singled and cracked a two-run homer, while Frank White and Fred Patek also collected two hits apiece.

Indians 4, Blue Jays 0

Unbeaten Rick Waits pitched 6 2-3 innings for his fourth victory as Cleveland ran its winning streak to six games, including four in a row under new manager Jeff Torborg. Don Hood and Jim Kern finished up.

Brewers 12, A's 1

Jim Wohlford's two-run single capped Milwaukee's three-run third inning and Von Joshua singled home two more in a club record eight-run fourth. The Brewers sent 13 batters to the plate in their big inning, which also included RBI hits by Charlie Moore, Don Money and Cecil Cooper. Jim Slaton scattered five hits for the Brewers.

Hoover Signs On With Hardin-Simmons

Steve Hoover, called the best tennis player ever to come out of Hereford High School, has signed a four-year renewable scholarship with Hardin-Simmons University he announced Tuesday. Hoover signed with the Abilene-based school Monday. He was only the second recruit signed personally by Hardin-Simmons coach Dr. George Newman in the coach's two-year reign. "I think I'll like it there," Hoover exclaimed in making the announcement. "Abilene's a real good tennis town." The personable former Herd student plans to major in Psychology at the school. Hoover finished his high school career April 29 in a 6-3, 6-1 loss to Amarillo High's Jim Cannon in the Region 1 Tournament. His overall record at HHS was 208-82, and he forged a 55-18 record in singles play his senior year. He also was a state qualifier in doubles his junior year. Hardin-Simmons, a small school with an enrollment of 1,800 will have dual matches against Texas Tech, TCU, Oklahoma City University, and Southwestern Oklahoma State University next year as well as playing in tournaments at North Texas, West Texas, and Rice University. The independent school finished with a 16-6 record last season. Hoover will play in the Hereford Open this weekend before trekking to Lubbock, Abilene, and Amarillo on successive weekends. He will participate in the T-Bar-M Tournament in Amarillo before taking some time off in August.

Expos, Fans Fired Up

Montreal right-hander Steve Rogers has noticed a change in Expos fans. "The people are fired up for baseball here now," said Rogers after blanking Houston 6-0 at Olympic Stadium for his third shutout of the season. "We have the new stadium and a good attitude. It's really exciting now. I was glad to give them something to cheer about. It felt good." It also must feel good to lead the National League in four pitching categories, as Rogers does. The 27-year-old right-hander, 9-5 this season after a 7-17 record in 1976, tops the NL with 99 strikeouts; 18 starts, 10 complete games and 136 2-3 innings pitched. Gary Carter aided Rogers with a 4-for-4 performance at the plate. "I've never had four hits in a nine-inning game before," said Carter, who has a 7-for-7 streak going. In other National League contests, Cincinnati belted Philadelphia 10-5, New York defeated Atlanta 5-2, Pittsburgh mauled San Diego 9-2, the Cubs eased past San Francisco 8-2 and St. Louis edged Los Angeles 4-3 in 10 innings. Reds 10, Phillies 5 George Foster's 19th homer of the season, a three-run blast, was the key blow in the Reds' romp.

Brownfield To Hold Net Meet

Brownfield will host its Sixth Annual Open Tennis Tournament at the Brownfield High School courts July 6-9. Events for the netters in groups 10-under through 30-above will be held. A $3. per player per event entry fee is required. Entries may be mailed to Carey Lee White, 904 E. Lake, Brownfield, Tx. 79316, or by calling him at 806-637-6847. In addition to singles and doubles play for boys and girls or men and women in each division, three division of mixed doubles will be held. Players are asked to include their age on their entry blanks. The four-point scoring system will be tied to the finals. A nine-point tie breaker will be used in all matches.

Foster, who is tied with Boston's George Scott for the major league home run lead, sent a Warren Brusstar pitch over the right-centerfield wall.
