Bad Accounts Problem For Hospital District

BY PAUL SIMS Managing Editor

Bad accounts are a headache for Ron Welty, administrator of Deaf Smith General Hospital, who often has to write them off, but the problem at Hereford is not as bad as in many places.

APPROXIMATELY SIX per cent of the forecasted revenue each fiscal year at Deaf Smith General Hospital is written off as uncollectable. The national percentage for public hospitals is higher.

The Hereford hospital has disposed of $65,820 in bad accounts for an eight-month period which ended May 31 of this year. Total accounts receivable from Deaf Smith General patients who were discharged in the same period constituted a $534,016 figure.

"The write-off represents about six per cent of our revenue, of charges billed to patients. That's pretty good for a hospital, especially for a public hospital," Welty said.

Private hospitals often limit credit losses by not accepting patients with financial problems. Those patients usually are asked to check into a public hospital. Public hospitals, such as Deaf Smith General, do not turn away patients and therein line the rich.

BEFORE ADMITTANCE to the Hereford hospital, a person without health insurance who requires normal services is asked to put up a deposit of $250. If the payment cannot be made the hospital and patient work out a payment plan suitable to both parties.

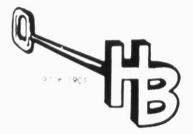

"You can pretty well determine how much a month a person's going to be able to pay." Welty said. "We work it out from that standpoint. Then we ask them to finance it through the bank if they can because we're not a financial institution.

"A lot of people tend to have financial problems and don't have collateral, etcetera, that they can use to get loans from the bank. So we try to work something else out."

The hospital was budgeted $34,158 in August for care of indigents, the most financially afflicted class of people in Hereford. The hospital districts pays the entire account of an indigent.

THERE IS NO get-tough policy at the hospital with the patient who is able to pay but doesn't, although writing off a bad account doesn't mean letting such an individual completely off the hook.

5-Month Total Indicates Job Placements Behind

BY PAUL SIMS Managing Editor

Job placements by the Hereford office of the Texas Employment Commission for the first five months of 1977 are considerably down from the number last year during the same period, a fact causing TEC officials in Hereford some concern.

The Hereford office placed 275 people in jobs during May, 9" less than last year's 3"2 total. For the first five months of this year, the TEC office has found jobs for 1.345, compared to 3,181 for last year.

"We're a bunch behind," said Lester Rape, manager of the Hereford TEC office, "We are concerned about it. I guess the reason for it is the economy didn't take a slide in our area until after it did everywhere else. We're one of the last ones to feel the pain."

There were 177 job placements in April this year. More farm jobs became available in May prior to wheat harvest, the reason for the higher number in May.

the reason for the higher number in May.

Even students have found the going tough in getting a job through the Texas Employment Commission this year.

"We've had so few jobs for school kids because the employers haven't called us," Rape said. "They don't want hardly anybody it seems. When we have a good year on kids, we generally are having a good year on everybody else.

Rain Totals Drift Up With Friday Downpour

BY JIM STEIERT Brand Farm Editor

Locally heavy showers deposited over one inch of moisture in scattered portions of the county Friday night as thunderclouds unleashed a downpour for the third night in a row.

FRIDAY NIGHT'S storm hedgehopped across the county from the west, pouring heavy rain on some dryland areas, then cutting the waterworks to a trickle as the clouds moved closer to Hereford.

Rains again became heavy within the vicinity of Hereford, and tapered off as the storm moved to the northeast.

The heaviest rainfall reports from Friday night's storm came from the Bootleg Corner community and the Texas New Mexico line in Deaf Smith County.

Eldred Brown of Bootleg Corner told. The Brand that 2.50 inches of moisture fell on the state line while the Ernest Riley farm near Bootleg received a whooping three inches of rain.

OTHER 1.50 INCH reports were scattered around the Bootleg Corner community.

The rainfall tapered off in other dryland areas, however, as the Clint Homfeld farm 47 miles northwest of Hereford recorded only .30 inches and the Bruce Coleman farm at Walcott reported .50 inches. The Westway community also received .50 inches.

Brown reported that grain sorghum in his area was already sprouting to a good stand, and the recent showers should provide adequate moisture for outstanding initial growth.

To the south of Hereford, the Easter community missed out on Friday night's big shower.

A SPOKESMAN FOR Easter Grain reported that only .10 inches fell there, and commented, "We don't seem to be having as much luck as Hereford where catching rain is concerned. It just keeps missing us."

A light shower was also reported at the Erio community.

Drainage ditches were running full and culverts were hard-pressed to carry all of the water in Hereford last night as the clouds poured forth 1.45 inches of moisture on the city shortly before 8. That total was logged by KPAN radio.

THE HOLLY SUGAR Corporation's Hereford plant measured 1.36 inches of precipitation, while .80 inches was measured in a gauge on property farmed by Griffin & Brand on the city's northern

The Farmer's Corner community 15 miles north of the city received .50 inches of moisture in the Friday night storm, according to a spokesman for the Hereford Grain Corporation's office

To the east of Hereford the rain dwindled to negligible amounts, with "only a sprinkle" reported at the Bob Strain farm near Dawn Community.

Friday night's showers gave Hereford a three day total of 3.08 inches of moisture according to figures supplied by KPAN radio, to mark a virtual monsoon season for the month of June.

THE DRYLAND country to the west of the city also enjoyed a moisture-filled week with some farms receiving moisture accumulations in excess of two inches.

Total rainfall for the three day period at Farmer's Corner reached the 2.20 inch mark, but much of the farmland between that community, and Hereford received substantially smaller amounts of moisture.

The three day total at the Griffin & Brand farm north of the city was upped to 1.90 inches.

The Hereford Holly plant hit a three day total of 3.37 inches, for another outstanding moisture total.

 We need some orders from the employers for the school kids. We are really behind this year over last year.

One reason for the decline in job lacements this year may be a regulation that crew leaders must register thrugh the TEC, according to a new regulation this year, before they can use the placement service to recruit labor.

"In last year's 3,181 figure 500 or 600 are crews that we didn't have this year. We didn't have many crews this year because they changed the rules and regulaions. I guess some of the crew leaders didn't want to go through the trouble of registering," Rape said.

The Hereford office manager expects things to get better--and soon-- thanks to recent heavy rainfall which has been a boost to farmers.

"Everybody in our district and state office think it's going to improve. Things are getting better."

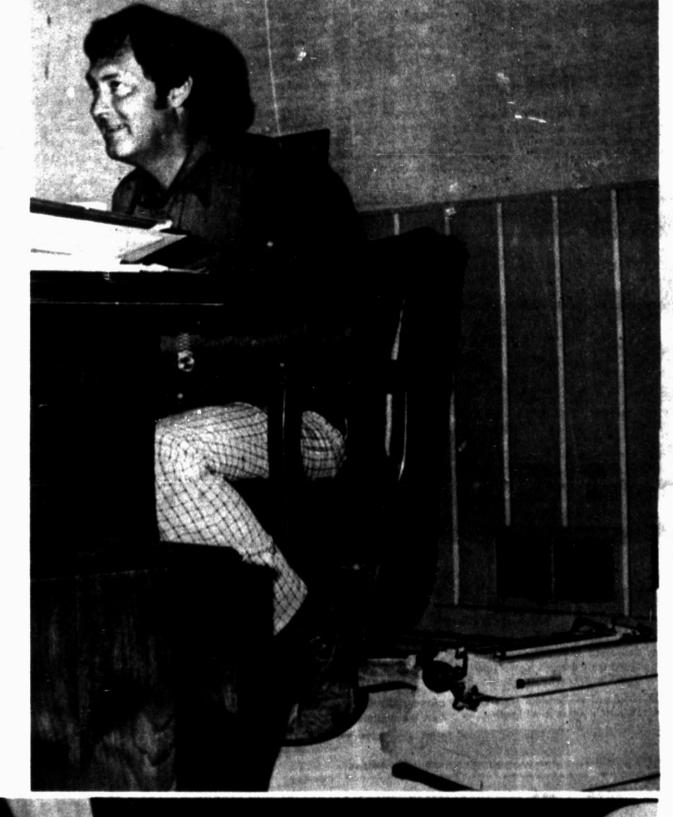

Through the first three weeks of June, Rape's office has placed more people in jobs than it did the entire month of May.

TEC figures show the overall employment situation in Deaf Smith County is not indicative of the number of job placements through the office. Hereford's estimated unemployment figure is 3.5 per cent of the more than 8,200-person work force, much better than the statewide 4.9 per cent figure.

"We're lower than the statewide average. Unemployment's not bad here," Rape said.

According to the Texas Labor Market Review May publication by the Texas Employment Commission in Austin, the Texas labor force continued to move upward in April, totaling 5.622,600 at mid-month. Some 34,600 new jobs were provided from March to April, bringing the total employment at mid-April to 5,178,400--up 170,700 from the level in

Russians Charge US Of No Progress

MOSCOW (AP) - The Soviet press has accused the United States of using the lack of progress in strategic arms talks to justify an escalation of the arms race and an expansion of American military might.

Izvestia commentator Vikenty Matveyev said Friday that U.S. proponents of the arms race are now getting more attention from "Washington's higher echelons" than voices in favor of weapons limitations.

Funeral Draws Hundreds Of Blacks

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) Hundreds of young mourners poured into a church in the violence-prone black township of Soweto Sunday for the funeral of a 17-year-old classmate followng two days of massive student demonstrations

Armed police guards were stationed some distance from the Methodist church and tensions were running high in this segregated city 10 miles outside of Johannesburg. No incidents had been reported by noon.

The funeral was for Philemon Tloana, who was killed June 15 - one day before the anniversary of last year's bloody Soweto riots - when students looted a store and fire-bombed a car in the Diepkloof shopping center.

Witnesses said the young black woman collapsed after being beaten by police. But an autopsy released by a state pathologist appointed by Tloana's family said there were no assault marks on the

from the president's birthplace, yet genuine civil liberty is almost unknown.

For instance a local black woman has filed a complaint with the U.S. Justice Department in which she charges that her dentist forced her to enter his office through the back door. The front door is now and always has been for whites. Bad as things may be in Russia, the woman says she presumes its entrances are integrated Then there are the Dawson restaurants. Many of them are closed to citizens of African descent. There are no hard rules on it, and certainly the establishments have no public proclamations to this effect, yet segregation prevails by custom, and, again, local blacks know of no similar conditions in the

Georgian area of the USSR. No one here claims Dawson is worse than Moscow. In fact, blacks agree that "things are getting better." At least the town no longer permits colored men to be flogged in public. Gone also are the days when resident D.U. in secret ballot. Yet for all of the progress and despite constitutional and congressional guarantees. Dawson blacks say they are still not free. Compared with the people of Moscow local Negroes have more liberties, but they say they have fewer compared with the people of Minneapolis or Mason City. Racially, Dawson is still of the Old South

All resident blacks past their teens remember the Old South. Trees still stand outside town where Negroes were lynched. In the 1960s segregationists burned three black churches to the ground.

Insurance salesman Lucius Holloway remembers conditions so raw that "the white folk took to hiring black Toms to do their killing. It's not as bad anymore. For one thing the violence has stopped. Yet socially, economically, and politically, blacks say Dawson, Ga., pop. 9,000, clings tenaciously to its awful history.

Items: there are two swimming pools in town, one for whites and one for blacks: there is one golf and country club in the area, and its membership is exclusively white: the churches and fraternal organizations remain for the most part segregated; and the races automatically divide themselves in many waiting rooms

According to the census Dawson blacks outnumber the whites three to two. Yet the most popular community services cater to the minority. In its April 14 edition, Dawson's weekly newspaper printed photos of 18 people, all of them white. The area radio station is similarly oriented. as are many of the downtown

Nowhere is the segregation more severe than in the educational system. When the courts forced Dawson's high school to begin admitting blacks in 1970, white parents immediately built a fallback barricade in the form of a private academy. Today the private school is all white, while the public institution is 99 per cent black.

The school matter has a special irony. Lucius Holloway says the public schools are still controlled by an all white board of education, but its members send their own children to the private academy.

Agnew Again Failed To Report Taxes

WASHINGTON (AP)- Spiro T. Agnew, who resigned as vice president in 1973 because of income tax evasion, failed to report almost $27,000 in income when he filed his federal tax return the next year, the Internal Revenue Service says.

The IRS says Agnew owes $13,966 in back taxes and penalties on the unreported 1973 income. But Agnew's lawyer says his client is being "harassed" on at least one of the items being questioned.

Agnew, who resigned as vice president of the United States and then pleaded no contest to a felony charge of tax evasion on Oct. 10, 1973, was notified of the new IRS case on April 15, the day the three-year statute of limitations ran out. Agnew's lawyer, Myron J. Mintz, filed a petition Thursday in U.S. Tax Court disputing the IRS contentions.

The IRS says Agnew should have reported as income $11,370 for home improvements by the General Services Administration; $4,398 for personal use of government aircraft; $5,554 in personal and family expenses and $924 in food delivered by a grocery chain

In addition, the IRS disallowed an exemption Agnew claimed for supporting an aunt as well as $3,600 in home office expenses and business entertainment deductions.

The IRS is seeking a 5 per cent 'negligence'' penalty plus back taxes on the alleged unreported income. The case does not involve new criminal charges.

Connors Overcomes Smith's Challenge

AP Sports Writer

WIMBLEDON, England (AP) Jimmy Connors, in and out of trouble all day, finally overcame the stiff challenge of another former champion, Stann Smith, and joined three other American men Saturday in the quarter-finals of the centenary Wimbledon Tennis Champion-

Connors edged Smith 7-9. 6-2, 3-6, 6-3, 6-3 in a fluctuating, four-hour thriller that finally saw the 1972 All-England champion falter at vital points and throw away his chance for an upset.

Meanwhile, defending champion Chris Evert and Billie Jean King, six times the women's Wimbledon champion, both escaped trouble to advance to the next round and set up a quarter-final meeting of the top seed vs. the sentimental favorite.

The other American men who made it to the quarter-finals were 18 year-old John McEnroe

Sales Brisk For Banquet Tickets

David McDonald of Hereford Kids, Inc. has reported that sales of tickets for that organization's annual banquet set for Thursday, June 30 at the Bull Barn are brisk

"Sales are going strong, and tickets are still available at the Hereford State Bank, Hereford Janitor Supply, and the Ink Spot,' McDonald said. The banquet, held to honor players and coaches in the organization will begin at 8 p.m. with serving for the barbecue dinner to begin at 7:30 p.m.

West Texas State University football coach Bill Yung will be the featured speaker at the banquet. President elect of Kids, Inc., Jerry Don George, will act as master of ceremonies.

To be recognized at the affair are the champions of the respective leagues in both boys baseball and girls softball. All-Stars for the leagues will be announced, and special awards will go to coaches and players of the year in addition to sportsmanship awards. The Hereford Rotary Club will cater the barbecue dinner, with the Hereford State Bank sponsoring the entire affair. Some 1,200 persons are expected to attend the banquet.

NHL Proposes Merger To WHA

BY JOE MOOSHIL AP Sports Writer

CHICAGO (AP)- The National Hockey League ended three struggling days of meetings Friday by proposing a merger with the World Hockey Association, effective with the coming 1977-78 season.

The proposal will be put forth to surviving WHA teams and is expected to be accepted. It stipulates that the WHA form a separate division of no less than six teams and play under a National Hockey League umbrella. For the coming season, the new division would play entirely within itself with its four top teams joining the top 12 teams in the NHL to play in an interlocking Stanley Cup for-

WHA teams expected to join the NHL are Quebec, New England, Cincinnati, Edmonton, Houston and Winnipeg. Birmingham also is a possibi

Making the joint annoucement of the proposed merger were NHL president- elect John 4 Ziegler and R. Alan Eagleson, executive director of the NHL's a Players Association.

After two days of separate and joint meetings between the owners and players, it appeared 7 that there would be little or no chance of a merger.

Early Friday, the Board of ! Governors met and then called in the playes' representatives. The player reps broke for a brief ? meeting and again joined the Board of Governors. Moments later the merger plan was announced.

Eagleson said the move had I to be made before July 1; otherwise the WHA felt it would be shut out and would have to play the 1977-78 season as a 2 separate league. With numerous problems still to be resolved between the NHL owners and the Player's Association, the two groups scheduled another set of meetings beginning July 13 in Toronto.. The "merger," as the players call it, or "expansion" in terms of the owners, will be worked gradually. After the upcoming season, the schedules will be slowly integrated where it is hoped that in four years there will be complete realignment of the NHL.

Ziegler refused to divulge what the incoming teams will : have to pay for joining the NHL. "A figure of $3.2 million has been reported." said Ziegler, "but it is less than that."

Such problems as what to do about the collective bargaining agreement, players' pension rights and rights held to various players by teams in the WHA and NHL are included among a long list which eventually must be solved.

Once the WHA agrees to join the NHL, the five-year collective bargaining agreement will be open for renegotiation. At least one owner, Jack Kent Cooke of the Los Angeles Kings, is against renegotiating the basic agreement. It cannot be renegotiated without unanimous approval.

Tomato Hobby Blooms Into Ripe Corporation

Brand Staff Writer

VEGA .- A 1961 backyard gardening venture turned into a 1400,000 a year business for a Vega man who showed the world that tomatoes can be raised in a semi-arid climate, such as the Texas Panhandle. W.B. (Bill) Johson, a soil conservationists in 1962, had no idea that his backyard hobby of the early 1960's would mushroom into a very profitable vocation-greenhousing.

Johnson now co-owns a five-acre greenhouse facilitity on the western edge of Vega which grows and distributes tomatoes and cucumbers. Sunripe Incorporated Greenhouses is one of the very few growers of its kind on the high plains.

When I read about the greenhouse effect and planted in my backyard, I never realized it would turn out like this," Johnson said. In 1963, Johnson joined forces with Roger Grulkey. opened a half-acre greenhouse, and started a local business known as Golden Spread Growers. The business did well and, in 1966, added an acre of greenhouse facilities. That same year, Johnson also changed partners -- Don Knox bought Grulkey's half of Golden Spread Growers.

The greenhouses produced and the present five-acre greenhouse buildings were completed in 1969. Golden Spread Growers was officially changed to Sunripe Incorporated Greenhouses. Jack Griffin and Jim Witherspoon, both of Hereford, bought out Knox' share of the business and Sunripe became incorporated in

No matter when or how the business changed hands, Johnson always has the biggest interest in Sunripe. Johnson, president of Sunripe, maintains his office within a few feet of the tomato plants themselves. He supervises their growth, cultivation and shipment to retailers in several states.

Sunripe has three main greenhouses, a 11/2-acre building and two 1-1/4-acre glass-topped buildings. The buildings put out 600 tons of tomatoes per year at approximately 40 cents per pound. The $400,000 per year gross brings a sizeable amount of money into the Vega-area people to pack and ship the tomatoes or whatever crop is being cultivated. He also employs an eight-man picking crew (from Hereford) and said that Sunripe employees do a 'real good job. Oct. 1 and Jan. 30.

Sunripe distributes its tomatoes to grocery store chains such as Safeway, Ideal, Affiliated Foods, Furrs, and Taylor & Sons. Some tomatoes are brought by local fruit markets and stores in the Panhandle, and Sunripe sells tomatoes at to keep the plants healthy and reproductive.

The tomatoes are harvested during two periods each year. The first season is from about Apr. 1 to Aug. 1 and the second harvesting dates are between Though growing conditions sometimes are difficult to maintain, Johnson enjoys the greenhouse business. Yet, he is quick to note the problems of such an undertaking.

"Weather is one problem. We had a real bad hailstorm i May of '74, with baseball-size hail. It destroyed most of the greenhouses and we had to rebuild. Another problem are insects and plant disease control. We have a regular spraying program for insects and disease. The tomatoes have to be pruned and tied once a week, as well," Johnson said,

'The plants must be pollinated three times a week by electric vibrators. If we grew the plants outdoors, the wind would pollinate the plants for us. But, since the plants are grown in the greenhouses, we have to pollinate them artificially." Johnson estimates weekly production close to 2500 lugs (a lug equals 20 pounds) at capacity. That means a maximum of 50,000 pounds a week which is also the number of plants that Sunripe has in its greenhouses.

Sunripe accomplishes several goals for Johnson, who plans to expand someday, and Vegaarea residents: it boosts the local economy, provides a year-round source of tomatoes, and makes a profit.

That says a lot for a business that started out as a hobby.

Woman Airline Pilot Just 'One of the Guys'

By JOY STILLEY AP Newsfeatures Writer

NEW YORK (AP) - Someday she'd like to be a captain on an SST, but right now Claudia Jones likes being second officer on a Boeing 727.

One of Continental Airlines' three female pilots, she was the only woman among the 17 men in her training class.

'We performed around the country and had so many problems with transportation somebody decided that one of us was going to have to learn to fly and because I was the biggest daredevil they pointed a finger at me," she explains.

Members of the act chipped in to pay for her flying lessons and the group leased a sevenpassenger aircraft, removing the back seats to make space for their instruments. 'It got so I couldn't wait till I got offstage so I could go and plot the course for the next day. Flying got to be more fun than entertaining," said the 5' foot 7, brown-eyed pilot, who was wearing a green and white dress and white sandals.

In 1970 she went into aviation full time, teaching and flying

She met her husband, Hal, a helicopter and fixed wing aircraft pilot, at Las Vegas airport when he asked her to teach one of his five children from a previous marriage to fly. She has since taught all of the children, ranging in age now from 13 to 22

"Hal had a helicopter and I had a plane, so we decided to form a business and I got elected president," she said.

A couple of years later they extended the partnership to marriage, and now all five children are active in Oasis Aviation: The oldest daughter is a flight instructor; two sons work in the shop; another daughter helps in the office, and the youngest boy washes airplanes and does odd jobs.

Mrs. Jones, who is still involved in the business, "didn't go knocking on airlines' doors because they just weren't hiring women. But when I heard they were giving women equal opportunity I applied right

"Anybody who gets hooked on flying isn't satisfied with fly-ing small airplanes, but wants larger and more complex equipment," explains Mrs. explains Mrs. Jones. "But it's the hardest work I've ever done in my life. The training is unbelievable."

'We're not allowed to wear petroleum-based makeup because it ignites with oxygen and if I ever had to use pure oxygen I'd sustain burns," she explains. "I'm nct sure which makeup has a grease base so I just do without.

Mrs. Jones, who says passengers often exclaim with disbelief "a girl!" as she stands near the door after a flight, sees no reason why more women shouldn't become pilots.

"People have preconceived notions, and it will take a little time to change all that," she says. "I've taught men to fly and I've taught women to fly, and I honestly cannot see any difference in ability.

Mrs. Jones has apartments in Los Angeles, where she is based, and in Las Vegas, and a house 20 miles northwest of Las Vegas in the Toyabee National Forest, where she lives at an appropriately high altitude of 8,500 feet.

She and her husband enjoy taking their motor home, their motor bikes or their helicopter out into the desert, where they explore ghost towns.

Ag Department OK's Pig Vaccine

WASHINGTON (AP)- The Agriculture Department for the first time has approved a license for the manufacture of a vaccine to protect swine against pseudorabies, a virus disease especially deadly to baby pigs.

Officials said Friday that the license was granted to Norden Laboratories of Lincoln, Neb., for the production of a modified live-virus vaccine. It is expected to be available next week.

However, the department's Animal and Plant Health Inspection Service said that "distribution will be limited to those states where authorized by state animal health officials under such additional conditions as they may require."

vaccine with care since pseudorabies antibodies in vaccinated swine produce blood test reactions identical to those from infected swine.'

Thus, if tests show hogs to have disease signs in their blood it could result in restrictions on the movement of animals from place to place although the antibodies may have been induced by vaccination.

"Vaccination is recommended for newborn pigs over three days old if they are nursing non-immune sows," the agency said. "If piglets are nursing immune sows, however, vaccination should be delayed until declined, generally when pigs

Meat Prices Rise Again

WASHINGTON (AP)- New government figures show that retail beef and pork prices rose again last month, due mostly to higher prices paid farmers for live cattle and hogs.

The average national retail price of beef, measured on an all-cut basis, was more than $1.38 a pound in May, up 4.4 cents from the composite retail price in April. That was the highest beef price since last December when the average was nearly $1.39 a pound.

As used by USDA, the price covers choice- grade beef sold in grocery stores. That is from cattle which have been "finished" or fattened in feedlots of grain rations. The report, issued Friday, said that the market price of choice live steers in May averaged $41.43 per 100 pounds over the entire month, compared with $39.73 in April. Translated to the supermarket, the report said that farmers received an equivalent of 82.8 cents of each retail pound of beef in May, up from 78.6 cents in April. It takes about 2.3

pounds of live steer to make one pound of store beef. The middleman's share for transporting, processing and selling beef was 55.6 cents a pound in May against 55.4 cents in April the report said. Cattle prices, meanwhile, have dropped since their spring peaks and by mid-June were averaging around $38 or so per 100 pounds of the major markets as the feedlot supply rose and packers became more selective, according to other USDA

Retail pork prices rose to nearly $1.21 a pound in May from less than $1.19 in April. However, that was about what pork cost consumers last February and March

Farmers received an equivalent of 73.8 cents a pound for pork sold in retail stores last month, compared with 64.5 cents in April. Middlemen's shares dropped to 47.1 cents from the April average of 54.4 cents a pound, the report said.

Live hog prices averaged $41.79 per 100 pounds in May, up from $36.97 in April. Through mid-June, hog prices have held fairly steady, according to recent USDA market reports. Since red meat makes up a large portion of family grocery bills over a year's time, it has a heavy bearing on over-all food

USDA economists expect this year's grocery prices to average around 6 per cent higher than in 1976. Last year, food prices rose 3.1 per cent, compared with 8.5 per cent in 1975 and 14.5 per cent each in 1974 and 1973. Officials expect that U.S. farm products will account for only about half of this year's over-all food price increase, with seafood and imported products- mainly coffee, cocoa and tea-accounting for the rest. Friday's report said "marketing spreads," or middleman charges for a market basket list of farm-produced food items, declined 1.5 per cent over-all in May, the first decrease this year. Even so, the May price spread between farmers and consumers averaged 2.9 per cent more than it did a year ago.

Put another way, the report said that farmers in May received an equivalent of 39.3 cents of each dollar spent by consumers on market-basket food, compared with 38.8 cents in April and 401 cents in May, 1976.

Mafia Link May Knock Sheriff From FBI List

County Sheriff William Lucas says FBI agents investigating him as a possible nominee for FBI director have questioned him about possible connections with a Las Vegas casino being probed for alleged Mafia links. Lucas is one of five men being considered as a possible successor to retiring FBI Director Clarence Kelley. A former FBI agent, Lucas is the only black candidate among the five who were recommended by a presidential commission.

Lucas said the questions, about the Aladdin Hotel and Casino, came last week during routine FBI investigation of his background.

He said agents asked him about trips they suspected he made to the Aladdin, allegedly at the invitation of Detroit bail bondsman Charles "Chuckie" Goldfarb.

Lucas said Friday that he told

DETROIT (AP)- Wayne the agents he knew nothing about the Aladdin, had never stayed there, and had never accepted any invitation from Goldfarb. Lucas' disclosure that he had been questioned in the Aladdin probe came one day after he acknowledged a Los Angeles Times report that he twice accepted free air transportation and hotel rooms as part of Las Vegas gambling junkets.

The justice Department's Organized Crime Strike Force has been investigating allegations that Detroit Mafia figures have secret ownership in the Aladdin in violation of federal and Nevada laws.

Federal documents allege that Goldfarb and James Tamer. a convicted Detroit felon, are running the hotel and casino for the mob.

Lucas said he had accepted free rides from Las Vegas to Detroit in 1974 and 1975 and accepted free lodging at the Sands Hotel. Both the rides and the room, he said, were paid for by Detroit businessmen.

Lucas also said he had accepted a free vacation at the Puerto Rican home of a Detroit businessman and an expensespaid trip to California from Motown records.

Officials familiar with the process of selecting a new FBI director said Lucas' chances were almost certain to be damaged to some extent by the disclosures.

Neither of the two men who will make the choice, President Carter and Atty. Gen. Griffin Bell, have commented on Lucas' disclosures.

Metric Signs To Be Placed On Highways

WASHINGTON (AP)- A public outcry is forcing the Federal Highway Administration to abandon its plan to convert the nation's highway signs from miles to kilometers at a cost of $100 million.

"There simply was too much opposition to the proposal from the general public," William M. Cox, director of the Federal Highway Administration, said Friday.

Of 5,000 comments received since the plan was announced, in April, "about 98 per cent of them were negative," Cox said.

"In light of such overwhelming sentiment, the Federal Highway Administration has determined that it would be inapprorpiate to issue a regulation coverting...to metric standards, he added.

An agency spokesman said the complaints centered on both the estimated $100 million conversion cost and resistance

Cox said his agency is closing the book on the matter and there are no plans to revive the short-lived plan in the future.

When the recommendation was made in April, the agency said it was acting in line with the national policy of converting to the metric system as outlined in the Metric Conversion Act of 1975. The act makes conversion voluntary.

Under the proposal, the conversion of all speed limit and vertical clearance signs would have been completed by Dec. 31, 1979. Instead of 40 m.p.h., for example, a speed sign would have read 65 k.p.h. kilometers per hour. Warning and regulatory signs were to have been switched by Sept. 30, 1980, and milepost and guide signs by Sept. 30, 1982.

Former President Gerald R. Ford signed the conversion act in December 1975 and stressed that compliance was voluntary. But he declared that continued use of the English system of measurement was making the United States "an island in a metric sea."

Man Denies Tax Course Violates State Laws

how to beat the tax collector himself before Roe, said that it may not please the state is untrue as alleged by Gorton's attorney general, but the complaint that members of the customers don't complain, says tax counselor R. Bruce Ripley.

The Woodinville man denied allegations that his organization violated the state Consumer Protection Act.

Ripley said he was pleased with Friday's action by Spokane County Superior Court Judge Willard Roe, who temporarily enjoyed several tax avoidance groups from continuing their activities.

Roe set a trial date for July 28 in the State's case against the American Law Association, Karl Dahlstrom of Bryan, Tex. and Ripley.

The groups claim to provide information to their members on how to avoid high taxes, unjust probate practices and excessive legal fees by attorneys.

Ripley said he was pleased because "we want a speedy trial. The allegations against us by the attorney general's office are quite erroneous.'

The complaint filed by Atty. Gen. Slade Gorton alleged that the defendants were enrolling persons in courses which cost $5,000 to $20,000 and said that Ripley and Dahlstrom, two nonlawyers, were practicing law illegally.

Ripley said during an interview that it is strange Gorton's original complaint, filed May 19, says "all Washington residents will suffer" if the defendants continue their activities.

No consumers have complained about the information they have received, Ripley said.

Ripley, who is representing groups are charged as much as $20,000 to receive information on such things as how to avoid high lawyers' fees. But the $5,000 figure "is more in the ballpark," Ripley said.

Ripley said about 700 persons in Washington state belong to the American Law Association.

Ripley said that any persons joining the association are required to sign an affidavit which says in part that they clearly understand that the information will be provided by tax researchers, not attorneys.

In issuing an earlier memorandum opinion June 13, Roe said that "the court is mindful that nonlawyers such as estate planners, legislators, investment counselors, properly discuss various aspects of tax laws and problems and such activity is not restrainable." while the providing of legal

We Want It Now!

BY JAMES ROBERTS Andrews County News

We wouldn't have believed it if we hadn't heard it and eyeballed it ourselves.

The pair were sitting a few booths away, an older, greying man and a young man in the middle or late twenties and enough likeness to certainly be father and son.

"We're just not making it anymore," the young man was arguing, sadly and resignedly. 'But son you've got it made.. a good job, a month we don't have ... "Forget it for the time being.. we can do without it but I still don't understand. You're 15 years ahead of where your mother and I were at your age. You're making five times the money were during our early marriage."

"But things are different now. Things cost more. Everything costs more...

"So what else is new? Things are always higher, more expensive. But you've got four years of college that I didn't have and your mother and I were tickled to do it. And since our old house wasn't rented any way, it's better that you're living in it and keeping it up. I never liked renting our first home to anyone anyway."

'But things were different for you and mom! You didn't need a lot of money...'

"Lissen at him! Your mother had to have four surgeries in six years. We had to buy furniture, a car, a home in between births of five of you kids. Seems like every time I came in from work there was a new mouth to feed. And after that, seems like every time we got a little money ahead, one of you kids needed something or other. But we enjoyed it!"

"But that's just it, dad! We're not enjoying anything...the job, the house, our vacation, nothing!"

'But why? You've got it made already with your your whole life ahead of you?"

'But we don't have a three bedroom brick home like you and mother have-- and most of our friends have. We don't have a boat and motor like you do. We don't have a big camper, or draw dividends from a wad of oil company stock, or have any cash on savings drawing interest..."

"My God, son, it took us thirty years to get to where we are today...30 years of scrimping, sacrificing, sweating, dreaming, planning, starting over. It's taken us a life time to get to this

"That's the whole point Dad! Susan and I don't want to wait a lifetime-- we want it now!"

What a difference a generation makes. Fatherhood is wonderful if patience is intertwined with obligations and responsibilities in the offspring, a heartache if it isn't.

We'd offer a little wager. When the son overheard above confronts his son a generation from now, it's not from the father the son will get his answer to the cry of "want it now". The father won't do it and the demand will be made to the government to provide instant success, instant security, instant material things, and instant happiness.

Thus it will ever be!

Work A Curse?

A lot has been said in recent years to glorify the benefits of leisure time, and very little has been said about the value of work. We believe it's important that children are taught that one of the most important facts of life is that you must be happy at work.

Work should be challenging, rewarding and fulfilling. Many folks consider work a necessary evil--a means to make money with which to purchase the pleasant things of life, yet work itself should be a satisfaction.

Work is a blessing, and not the curse which may seem to think it is. Working may not be the cure-all, but it is of some value to all persons in all conditions of life. In some situations, nothing but work will serve all needs.

Work is more than a means of livelihood. It is essential to life's fulfillment and all except the totally disabled can do some kind of useful work. We have all seen evidence of the handicapped who manage to be happy while carrying on successful businesses. Instead of complairing about having to work, they are grateful that they can.

The people who live the richest lives are those doing the kind of work they like to do and usually they can see the tangible results of their labors. The list is endless. It includes farmers, carpenters, doctors, teachers, construction workers, printers, and on down the line.

The unhappy people are those chained to what they consider dull and routine tasks, in which they never see the end product of their labors. It is unfortunate that a feeling has developed in our nation that the happiest times are those when a person is spared the drudgery of work. It actually works just the reverse.

If you're the type who loves your job and loves to go to work, you are indeed blessed. -- O.G. Nieman "Excuse me, but has anyone seen a golf ball bounce by

They have finally convinced me, "Yes, Virginia, there is a fuel crisis!" I am now ready to admit that fact and ready to put my IQ to work on the problem.

So far, the emphasis has been rather limited in its' scope. Drive 55 mph in the car and turn your thermostats to uncomfortable. No one will do either of these with very much consistency. I will drive 55 anytime I am not in a hurry and am going somewhere I do not want to go in the first place. There must be deeper thinking given to the subject. For example...

We need a National "don't forget anything campaign". I drove fifteen miles to a picnic. Drove right on the double nickel (that's C.B. talk for 55 mph). I got the fire built and ready to go. Then drove like mad to go get the wieners we left in the cabin. If all of the gas we use going back after purses, sunglasses, wives and babies left in various might not need to drive 55 mph. If we need to drive mph the best way I know is to have every car equipped with a C.B. radio. That may sound wierd at first since most folks buy those things so they can break the sound barrier and not get green stamps (tickets) from Smoky Bears (Highway Patrolmen). All of that is a

If the nation is serious about the 55 mph they should pick out about five strategic locations across the U.S. Twice per day in these locations have a C.B. er get on the radio and say: "Break one-nine for a Smokey report." Yeah, good buddies there is a bear at mile 40. He is mobile (Moo-bile) hostile, taking pictures, giving green stamps and working in a plain wrapper with an airplane spotting for him." Twice a day would do it. Five locations would stop traffic from coast to coast. Not only would the whole country drive 55 mph, everyone would have plenty to report for the whole day. Then everyone would be happy!! 10-4!!

By JACK MAGUIRE

HOUSE OF GENERALS---Texas' most famous living quarters for military is a 96-year-old home at No. 6 Staff Post Road on the quadrangle of San Antonio's Fort Sam Houston.

It's known as Pershing House. However, John J. Pershing, the only man ever to hold the rank of General of the Armies, didn't live there until 1917. Since the 11-room, six and one-half bath house was built in 1881, it has always been the quarters of Fort Sam's senior officer.

The three full generals, 22 lieutenant generals, 17 major generals, 15 brigadiers and one colonel who have occupied the home have each written an important page in the nation's military history. They include such names as Jonathan M. (Skinny) Wainwright, the hero of Bataan and Corregidor, and William H. Simpson, who commanded the Ninth Army in Europe during World War II.

Not all of those who went from Fort Sam Houston to a place in history were occupants of Pershing House. Dwight D. Eisenhower, as a young second lieutenant, lived in a room in the bachelor officers' quarters during his first tour of duty at Fort Sam. Gen. Douglas MacAurthur lived at No. 4 Staff Post Road as a child; his father was a major stationed there from 1883 to 1897.

No. 8 was the home in 1910-11 of Lt. Benjamin D. Foulis, "the father of military aviation" and the first pilot in Air Corps history.

Today Pershing House is the home of Lt. Gen. Allen M. Burdett, the commander of the Fifth Army, and his family.

YOU MIGHT LIKE TO KNOW --That the only surviving manuscript copy of Sam Houston's official report of the Battle of San Jacinto is in the Hall of State at Fair Park in Dallas. It is signed in Sam's own hand.

PREMIER CITY--Galveston claims more "firsts" than any other Texas city.

According to "The Handbook of Texas." Galveston got the state's first private bank in 1854 and the first telegraph line the same year.

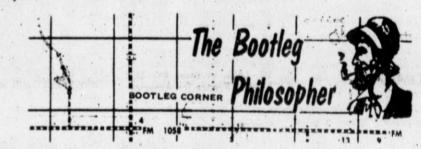

Texas' first jewelry store opened there in 1856 and the state's first national bank in 1865. The first electric lights in Texas were installed there in 1888. In 1898, the state's first golf course was built on the island. Galveston also claims Texas' first medical school (1890) and the first training school for nurses (1894). The state's first brewery opened there in 1895.

THE READER'S WRITE- Indians may have "invented" chewing gum by mixing the sap of the sweet gum tree and flavoring it with mint, as "Talk of Texas" pointed out recently.

Not bubble gum, however. Sheldon B. Wilson of Austin writes that he made that product as a child long before it became a staple in the supermarkets.

Wilson used peach tree sap as a base because no sweet gum trees were around. Then he added the rubbery clear sheath that's just under the skin of the stretch berry. The concoction wasn't exactly tasty, but it did produce a chewing gum that would bubble.

Editor's note: The Bootleg Philosopher on his Deaf Smith County grass farm examines a couple of topics this week in his own peculiar

Dear Editor:

You've seen commercials for new cars on television. First the brand new car comes on, preferably with a movie star at the wheel or at least leaning against the hood, sometimes even singing if you want to call it that. Finally the price flashes on the screen: Only $5,000, or some such figure. But if you'll look close enough and fast enough you'll see in small letters: Excluding taxes, license, transportation and dealer prep.

That's the way the Alaska pipeline was swung, only the pipeline people beat the car people about 50 to 1 in using small type.

When the pipeline was launched, the builders estimated it's cost 900 million dollars. When it was finished, the cost had soared to over 700 billion dollars.

In other words, it cost over 700 times more than they've figured. This just shows what teaching kids new math will do. We'd better get back to basics.

Changing the subject, I haven't read this anywhere but I believe science is approaching a major crisis. I mean, it may be running out of something to do.

In recent years scientists have found so many things that're harmful to human life, like saccharin, sword fish, tuna, tobacco, sugar, asbestus, lead, roach powder, dandelions, baby pajamas, and a lot of other things I've lost track of, that before long they're going to run out of something they can discover is dangerous. And if you can't discover something that's dangerous, how're you going to get your name in the paper? And if you can't get your name in the paper, how're you going to get a government grant to hunt up something else that's dangerous?

"Ford was in the Rose Garden, I was in the briar patch. If we'd won, my role would have been forgotten. Since we lost, it was my fault," he observed in a recent interview.

Dole seems to have adopted the classic rationalization of every politician with a bad press: never mind what they say

The losing vice-presidential campaign, he said, greatly increased his "visibility" nationwide. "It gave me exposure, experience and contacts." He is quietly seeking to capitalize on

He raised $18,000 for a recent "Salute to Ronald Reagan" here in Washington designed to fill the coffers of a Reagan-led political committee backing conservative Republicans in next year's elections

In the Senate, Dole is resuming the "point man" role (some say "hatchet man") that he occupied back in 1970-71, sharply challenging Carter administration decisions on tissues ranging from farm policy to improving relations with Vietnam and

At the end of Jimmy Carter's first hundred days as president, it was Bob Dole - not GOP National Chairman Bill Brock, Senate Minority Leader Howard H. Baker Jr. or House Minority Leader John J. Rhodes -- who issued a scathing assessment that the new administration was stressing "style

Next month, he plans a trip to Jerusalem to address a Zionist conference. Israel, of course, is a "must" stop on the 3-I circuit (Italy and Ireland being the other two) which every prospective American presidential candidate feels compelled to hit sooner or later.

All this activity on Dole's part has gone virtually unreported in the press and has not exactly struck terror into the hearts of other would-be GOP presidential contenders.

The prevailing view seems to be that Dole had his chance at national politics, and blew it. Even some of the Ford people are openly scornful of his prospects. "Anybody who would go around insisting that World War II was a Democrat war is not likely to get very far in presidential politics." one top Ford campaign operative said.

Crash Spurs Revenge

PORT MORESBY, Papua New Guinea (AP) hen a government minister's car overturned on highway and killed a 5-year-old girl, her tribe's tone-age code demanded compensation: money, goods of lives.

Neither Education Minister Kobale Kale nor his family offered money or goods, and officials say incident touched off one of the worst outbreaks of tribal fighting in recent times.

Over the past week two persons were killed in clashes related to the auto crash. Some 45 others were injured as 2,000 primitive warriors clashed with bows and arrows in a remote district of the main island of New Guinea, 350 miles north of

The government flew 90 armed riot police and tear gas in from Port Moresby, the capital, to try to halt the fighting. But police at Port Moresby said the situation was deteriorating.

Authorities said the trouble began June 17. when a car driven by Kale on a campaign trip rolled over on the Highlands Highway in the mountainous New Guinea interior. The girl, a member of the Koge clan, was killed in the mishap.

Police charged Kale with dangerous driving and released him on bail. But when no compensation was offered the Koges by Monday members of the 500-strong clan attacked a car in which Kale was a passenger.

He escaped injury but his 24-year-old brother Aina Kale, a police constable, was seriously

This led to a confrontation between the Koge clan and Kale's 1,500-member Emai tribe, with a third clan - the Ina - joining the Emai warriors. In the fight with axes, bows and arrows and spears. Kale's elder brother Aula Kale was killed.

The Emai - who are not traditional enemies of the Koge - retaliated by murdering a Koge chief. Some 2 million persons live in Papua New Guinea, scattered across more than 100 Islands and speaking over 700 languages. Officials say revenge battles are a way of life and that they are increasing. Bell Removes Faulty Transformers

Southwestern Bell has launched an accelerated program to locate and remove 85,000 telephone transformers installed in the company's five-state territory.

The transformers, manufactured by Ault, Inc., were installed in Texas. Arkansas. Oklahoma, Kansas and Missouri from 1972 through 1976.

An extremely small number of these transformers were plugged in. Out of the 85,000 Ault transformers installed by Southwestern Bell, only six have proven defective.

No figures are available on the number of Ault transformers installed in Hereford. However. the company noted that the number would be small compared to the total number of transformers in service.

Although the company used its bill insert and news releases to notify customers about the defective transformers earlier this year, a spokesman said only about 3,000 have been recovered. Most of those were found by employees during regular installation and repair visits.

The transformers are enclosed in two-inch square plastic cases which plug into an electrical outlet and are wired to the telephone. If defective, the transformers can burst into

However, the chances of any substantial hazard or injury are remote, the company said.

"We are starting a continuing program throughout Texas in which we are writing customers who may have Ault transformers to urge them to check their electrical outlets and iet us know whether or not they find one," said Southwestern Bell District Manager John Clemmons. "Any customers who do not reply will be contacted by telephone." Customers should be sure to check all electrical outlets, inleuding any they may have in their basement, attic, garage or closets, or behind their washer. dryer, refrigerator or bed.

"If customers find any Ault transformers they should not remove them. Instead they should call Repair Service 4102 for removal and replacement." Clemmons said.

The transformers are not part of the telephone set. They are separate units which provide power for dial lights. Locations without dial light telephones may still have a transformer in place from earlier installations.

Several companies manufacture transformers similar in appearance to the Ault model. However, only those manufactured by Ault are being replaced. Those made by other companies are not involved.

The board, two men and two women, agreed unanimously that the von Hoffburgs lived together as "biological females" and said the Army has no place for such affairs.

Spec. 4 Sode, a 22-year-old from San Diego, Calif., said she 'most likely' will ask a federal court to block the dismissal. But she said an appeal will depend It's expected to be at least a week before a transcript of the case is completed and reviewed by Col. Powers.

Spec. 4 Sode, who has maintained all along that she is in no way a lesbian, told reporters after the verdict there was "no biological proof" of any homosexuality.

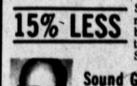

The von Hoffburgs did not take the witness stand, but a sex-roles specialists for the defense supported their claims. Dr. Paul A. Walker, a gender specialist from the University of Texas, said the von Hoffburgs lived together in a state of

Greeting cards sell kids' creativity

By Ellie Grossman

NEW YORK - (NEA) Shelli Lipton has come up with a solution to hold down exenses in the greeting card in-She doesn't pay her artists

Well, they're only between 4 and 9 years old, anyway: pure, pristine little creatures around the country who love to send their drawings to The Children's Art Collection, the greeting card line which Ms. Lipton markets through her company, Hello Studio, Inc.

And, says Ms. Lipton. We'd find it impossible to write out about 200 different royalty checks to children. We give the kids a laminated wall ique of their cards (which the company also sells for a profit), 12 greeting cards and a certificate of commenda-

Most other card companies pay the artist a flat fee or a royalty and we do give a royalty in our other line, but frankly, the children are happier that we're giving donations to charity in their

Actually, just one donation so far. Ms. Lipton recently gave $1,000 to One To One, a New York organization which provides community housing for mentally retarded children. But, as time goes on, they'll be giving five per cent of sales proceeds to charities around the country, from time

And maybe they'll donate to One To One again, she said, which would help since, accor-ding to Paul Dolan, executive director of the organization, It takes $50,000 to open a private home for 8 to 12 mentally retarded children staffed by professionals and there's an operating cost of $8,000 per person per year."

If it occurs to you that these donations are probably tax deductible, they certainly are, says Stuart Fonfa, Ms. Lipton's husband, who runs Hello Studio with her.

But what's wrong with that, for heaven's sake? Lots of businesses make charitable contributions, and Hello Studio is a business, a profitmaking organization. It's just that somehow the idea of sharing the profit with the children who supply the art

CHILDREN DO the best drawings, according to Shelli Lipton, who markets their work on greeting cards through Hello Studio, Inc. Not only that, but they're willing to work for less than the proverbial peanuts and freely send their work (which becomes the exclusive property of Hello Studio) in "for possible publication." that sells the merchandise is distasteful.

'We don't want to turn this. into a commercial venture for children by paying them," he said. "We'll be glad to give them the plaque, the cer-tificates and make donations in their names.'

The whole thing began brewing two and a half years ago, when Ms. Lipton, 30, a former advertising art director, first thought about marketing children's art. 'They do the best drawings,' she says. "They're uninhibited and for years, artists have been trying to do what they do.'

Finally, in February '77, Hello Studio test-marketed 36 cards whose artwork had been donated by children in the Margaretville school system - "a very poor, depressed area in New York" - and the reaction was fireworks, brass bands and hot fudge sundaes. The Children's Art Collection may do an estimated half a million dollars by January. Ms. Lipton says, maybe more. And there's no telling where it will end. The line now includes cards for most occasions, those laminated plaques each contributor gets, stationery, address books, line memo books, and think about the possibility with tee shirts, pencil sharpeners, etc. The natural resource is unlimited and eager. If there's one thing this country has, it's children, maybe three or four of whom don't like to draw. And their mothers? Why one called Ms. Lipton to find out if she could pay to have her child's art produced, right there on the front of a greeting card with his name and age and everything. Mining the resource is easy enough, too. All Ms. Lipton does is print a blurb on the back of each greeting card or whatever asking for submissions from young artists "for possible publication," and the young respond.

Sometimes, again and again. "Maybe we've gotten six or seven hundred drawings so far," she says, "and the children are beginning to send in their writings, too. Which means Ms. Lipton and her partners may not even have to think up cute sayings anymore for the art they choose. Just match one kid's clever idea with another's charming drawing and the anguish of creation is, in a sense, bypassed

Well, if some scent exploitation here, the ones most closely involved don't.

We met several of the artists at a greeting card trade show at New York's Coliseum recently and asked them if they thought they should be paid for what they did.

Kore Yoors, 8, who specializes in Viking ships and war scenes, said, "No. because it's too easy for work.

And Danny Knowles, 6, whom Ms. Lipton sees as the Picasso of her cottage industry and who has contributed at least 10 cards to the line, said, "I get money from my mother. Mrs. Knowles, his mother, didn't think he should be paid, either. "The pleasure he gets out of it and the experience are enough. And it's also helping a lot of handicapped children.

Only five per cent goes for that, we said, but she didn't change her opinion.

But that's show business for you. Bright lights, glory, the eyes of the crowd - art for art's sake.

Of Clipper Was a Lady

NEW YORK (AP) - Mary Patten, called the Florence Nightingale of the Ocean," is one of the few women to have had their names inscribed in the annals of the sea, records recently discovered reveal.

For a girl of 19 to sail a clipper ship 5,000 miles around two continents through storm and frigid weather, her captain-husband and two other officers ill below deck and a mutinous first officer in irons, is one of the all-time epics of the high

In 1856, Capt. Joshua Patten was assigned to sail "Neptune's Car" from New York to San Francisco. Below decks, as recorded in the historic "disaster books" of the Atlantic Mutual Insurance Co., was a cargo valued at $800,000; appraisal of the cargo today would be $10,000,000.

At sea only a few days, Captain Patten was forced to depose his chief mate for mutiny and put him in irons. Malaria then felled the captain and his two remaining officers.

Responsibility for the navigation of "Neptune Car" now rested on young Mary Patten, the records show. Faced with the decision to return to New York or continue the long trip to the West Coast, she ordered her crew to sail on.

On the ship's southward sweep toward Cape Horn the weather turned frigid. Rounding the Cape in the dead of winter, the clipper ship shuddered in the storm-filled Antarctic. The insurance company's records show that only Mary's expert handling kept the clipper from capsizing in the heavy seas. When not at the helm, Mary was down in the cabin tending her ill husband, as well as the other sick.

After 55 tedious days, "Neptune's Car" entered San Francisco harbor. It was only after she safely delivered its valu-able cargo that anyone knew that during the entire ordeal Mary was pregnant

In recognition of her skill and courage, Mary was awarded several years' wages and many tributes, among them, "Few shipmasters could have ex-celled Mary Patten in seamanship or as a navigator.

The Inquiry Center, limited to 80 students, offers an accel-erated academic program. Classes are held in a college atmosphere for major study areas. Students normally add up to three "electives" from the traditional program to their required schedule.

The SWAS Learning Center is for students who have scheduling problems or cannot function in a traditional classroom setting. They can work independently on assignments. The following year they can move back into the traditional program, or should an opening oc-cur, into the Community Based

The flight training program at Sooner High School, Bartlesville, Okla., was started to motivate students not interested in math and science to sign up for classes. Basic concepts are explored through the study of meteorology, naviga-tion, aerodynamics, aircraft construction, mechanics and aircraft performance, said Dr. Dale Smith, principal.

Students in the program are eligible for flight training on a Cessna (funded by community groups) leading to a private pi-lot's license. Started this year with 29 students, the program has attracted 114 boys and girls for the fall term.

Of the 29 in the initial group, 24 have signed up for advanced math and science in the fall; 18 are in flight training, eight have taken their solo flights, and four have completed their cross-country requirements and will be licensed this year, Dr.

Smith said. At Plymouth Canton High School, Plymouth, Mich., students with an interest in a subject not offered on the regular schedule may arrange with a teacher to offer a class to several students with the same interest, or may undertake individual projects.

Charles Skinner Setting the Mood for Summer

Why so much fuss about a spring or summer wardrobe? Why a special shopping trip to buy a new outfit for a special occasion? The answer is related to human psychology. Today clothing and accessories do more than merely keep the body warm and protected. They set a mood, frame an attitude, imbue confidence. Fine jewelry also plays a part in this magic. And the two mood-making gemstones for summer are coral and ivory. Both coral and ivory are organic gems. This means they were formed from once-living plants or animals. Ivory comes from the tusk of the elephant, the hippopotamus, the walrus and the wart hog. Coral is formed from the skeletons of tiny sea creatures. lvory appears in one very characteristic warm white color while coral grows in a range from white to red. The most characteristically summer shades of coral are white, light pink (called angel skin) and the light, warm salmon color.

Shapes and colors blend together to give a summery look to an outfit. Coral may be strung together branchlike for a casual necklace to add interest to the area bared by a sundress. It may be carved into beads to drape over a gauzy peasant blouse. The vanilla color popular with designers this year provides a stunning backdrop for the salmon shades of coral. And what shows off a hard-earned tan better than white on bronze skin, in Bangles, beads or another bold form

Fine jewelry can really add boost to a wardrobe if selected with care. We at Cowan Jewelry can give you tips on the colors and shapes that will compliment your complexion and your features.

Candlelight Ceremony Solemnized Saturday

A massive candle tree with white tapers lighted the altar of First Baptist Church Saturday afternoon for the marriage of Miss Rhocelle Elaine Davis and David Wayne Hutcherson. The Rev. Doug Manning, pastor, read the nuptial vows.

The bride is the daughter of Mrs. Harley E. Davis, 709 Grand Ave. and the bridegroom, who resides at Summerfield, is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Kindsfather, 112 Doug-

In addition to the candle tree, the altar was flanked by twin bouquets of white gladiolas, Killian daisies and babybreath.

Miss Luanne Kindsfather. sister of the bridegroom, served as the bride's honor attendant and Chris Hutcherson of Houston was his brother's best

Other bridesmaids were Miss Donna Kendall and Miss Sandee Finley, Groosmen included the bride's brother, Gus Davis, and Gary Sims of Spearman.

Wedding guests were ushered by James Collier and Rusty Collier. Candles at the altar were lighted by Ronny Collier and Max Middleton.

Leading the processional were the flower girls, Kathy Middleton and Anessa Scott. They are the daughters of Mr. and Mrs. Don Middleton and Mr. and Mrs. Ben. G. Scott, respectively.

Carrying the wedding rings was Robby Collier, son of Mr. and Mrs. Jimmy Collier.

Vicki LaFrance vocalized "Evergreen," "Wedding Prayer" and "Follow Me" as the couple's principal selections. Providing accompaniment were Jerry Shultz and Mrs. Ken Walser.

The bride was given in marriage by her uncle, Sid Davis of Buckeye, Ariz. She wore a floor-length gown of snowflake quiana trimmed with you'd never guess I have two teenage children. I have no gray hairs, no wrinkles, and no excess baggage.

A few months ago, I became fascinated by an art dealer whose studio is near our apartment. I am not the type to sneak around, so I told my husband everything. I didn't want a divorce or a separation, only his patience and understanding until the tornado blew itself out.

Being broadminded and intelligent, he agreed to stand by. He treated me beautifully and he put up the usual front of the happily married couple.

In less than three months, the affair was over. I love my husband more than ever for his maturity and wisdom. He is thrilled to have me back on a full-time basis. No one was hurt and I learned, in the best way possible, there's no place like home. We are closer than ever and I'll never look at another man again. Everyone profited. Please agree in print. I'll feel better-- Jezebel.

DEAR JEZ: If you're looking for a good- conduct medal, Buttercup, you came to the wrong place. Consider yourself lucky your husband didn't broom you out when you told him about the "tornado." Just because he didn't throw himself on the floor and chew the carpet doesn't mean he wasn't deeply hurt.

And while you're counting your blessings, include a prayer of thanks that your children didn't hear the gossip. You were shot full of luck all the way 'round.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: We are six junior-high guys who are in plenty of hot water. I was the pitcher, Buzzy was the batter. Buzzy belted the ball right through a plate-glass dining room window.

Do you think the pitcher should help the batter pay for the window? Should the whole team buy a new window? Should the man who owns the window say to the kids. "I was young once myself so I'll just forget about it, but be more careful next time"? Also, who should buy a new ball? The man who owns the broken window won't give it back. He says anything that lands in his living room belongs to HIM.

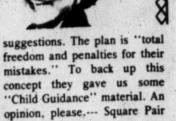

Ann Landers, please help us. We can't afford a lawyer. -- The Connecticut Cowards.

DEAR C.C.: It would be very brotherly indeed if the whole team pitched in to help the batter pay for the window -especially the pitcher. His earned run average must have soared following such a stupendous blow, and he ought to pay a penalty.

The man who was young once himself will surely give the ball back when he learns that you plans to pay for the window. DEAR ANN LANDERS: We have two teenagers -- a daughter 14 and a son 16. They are smart, both in and out of school, which is what I'm writing about. The kids think our ideas on child- rearing are out of date. They say they are "over-directed and "over-protected." They don't want any discipline or

New Miss Texas for 1977 Can Expect 'Hectic Pace'

Miss Texas will be crowned and the reign of Carmen Ann McCollum will come to a close.

"It's been fun, but very hectic," commented Miss McCollum, "I'm so oriented to that pace of life it seems a part

Other than the traditional appearances at grand openings and the like, Miss McCollum has participated in what she calls "some weird things." Her first indication of what was to be came in the week following her crowning when she was called out of the audience to share the stage with famous sax player Boots Randolph, Carmen, who played the sax as her talent in the 1976 pageant, described it

little bit uneasy about playing experiencing only one-millionth Yakity-Sax while standing next to the man who made it

Other somewhat unusual activities for the current Miss Texas include appearances at rodeos, automobiles racetracks and an engagement on the ice at a hockey game.

Most recently she appeared with Bob Hope at a benefit performance in Lubbock.

"The opportunity to meet people like Bob Hope, Boots Randolph and Bert Parks is one of the more enjoyable aspects of this year," continued Carmen, "I'm beginning to understand how hard it is for people like that to balance their personnal lives with career expectaas a great thrill, "but I was a tions. of what they experience as a celebrity.

Other than the trip to Atlantic City for the Miss America Pageant, Carmen's travels have remained primarily in Texas. "I've been from the largest to the smallest Texas towns," commented Miss McCollum.

"My hometown is Odessa so you'd think I would prefer the small cities and towns, but when we started out, just the opposite was true. I was somewhat unsure how the small, more close- knit communities would look on me as Miss Texas. I was pleasantly surprised. The reception I've gotten everywhere has been just great. The people of Texas know how to show their appreciation if you do something they like."

As the busy year of Miss Texas begins to wind-down, Carmen doesn't see her personal life as changing pace that much. "I'm going back to Abilene Christian University with the scholarship money I have from Miss America," she said, "and get my bachelor's degree in psychology. I may even do some doctoral work going to close that door. With the free time I'll have after the pageant, I may even start taking saxophone lessons

What else? Miss Texas 1976, Miss Carmen Ann McCollum won't be a "Miss" very long. She plans to be married in

"SUMMER 'KITCHEN ESCAPE' PLAN"

Summertime "kitchen escape" tactics are easy--and still allow for nutritious menus. Following is a 10-point

'kitchen escape' plan: 1) Prepare gelatin desserts-they're easy to prepare and to

2) Use the outdoor grill for the entire meal including vegetables and breads.

3) Serve one-dish meals such as casseroles--and round out the menu with a cool salad and packaged bread.

4) Plan menus that cook in the oven at one temperature--this eliminates the extra heat of surface burners.

5) If you have a microwave oven-use it!

6) Prepare your main dish in a slow cooker. Serve vegetables and salads that don't require. cooking and last minute preparations.

7) Serve cold meat as a main dish for a change.

COMBINES MOVE IN UNISON ACROSS VAST DRYLAND WHEAT FIELDS

Sprawling Dryland Fields Yield A Golden Harvest

By JIM STEIERT Brand Farm Editor

When the dryland wheat harvest gets underway, it's a full scale operation, particularly on acreage farmed by the brown brothers near the Bootleg Corner Community.

ELDRED, FLOYD and Ernest Brown, working with their sons and their mother. Mrs. N.A. Brown, have been conducting harvesting operations on some 6500 cres of dryland wheat.

The job of harvesting such a huge wheat crop calls for a fleet of harvesting machinery, and the Browns are employing six large capacity combines in gathering their golden grain.

Yields this year have ranged from nominal to phenomenal, with the highest yields in the 40 bushel per acre category.

County agent Juston McBride visited a field the Browns were harvesting Thursday afternoon and commented, "This is the best wheat crop I've ever seen produced, considering the small amount of moisture which fell on the cropland."

MOISTURE WAS generally favorable on the dryland acreage where the Browns operate, and some timely snows and showers put moisture in the ground for the crop during the winter and spring.

McBride pointed out that one of the factors which could have had a big influence on this year's high yields is that the Brown brothers utilized moisture ing tilla with fallowing the land.

A big ox tillage implement was used in working the land to break the hardpan and allow greater moisture penetration, and chisels and sweeps were used infurther land preparation.

Research has shown that sweep tillage more efficient in land preparation. requiring less energy expenditure and allowing more moisture storage.

MCBRIDE STRESSED that the outstanding dryland wheat yields weren't realized in just one field, but in several plots, and emphasized that other management practices in addition to sweep tillage were utilized to obtain the top yields. "They used good wheat varieties and good seed," said McBride.

The combination of fertile soil, good management and a little help from Mother Nature via favorable moisture paid off in a bumper crop for the Brown

Other farmers throughout the county also are gathering a good wheat crop this summer, with protein content of the wheat excellent, moisture content low and test weights heavy. THE COUNTY'S wheat harvest is well past the halfway point, and rains in recent days have delayed the conclusion of the harvest, which was originally expected to come before the first of July.

The surprisingly good wheat yields here this year would give farmers reason to rejoice in most years, but there aren't many smiles on the faces of county farmers these days.

The crop is good, but the grain-glutted market definitely is not.

County Leads State In Cattle

AUSTIN-Deaf Smith County leads the state in the total number of cattle and calves on hand, with latest statistics June 1. numbering the county figure at Commissioner Reagan V. Brown has announced.

Feedlot operators in Deaf Smith County also show the largest number of cattle on feed in Texas, some 211,000 head.

"Producers in the county are Brown added. major contributors in making Texas the leading cattle and calf-producing state in the nation, with a total of 15,800,000 head reported in the state as of the first of the year." Brown explained.

Texas is also the top cattle feeding state in the nation with latest estimates showing some 1,480,000 head on feed for slaughter market in the state

"The hard work and some 318,000 head, Agriculture dedication of the county's producers, despite marketing problems and production cost increases, go a long way toward helping us reach our goal as Number One in agricultural productivity and profitability."

Statistics recently released by the Texas Crop and Livestock

Reporting Service show that the total of 165,000 cattle operations in the state remained steady in 1976 in comparison to a year

At the same time, the total number of cattle feedlots in Texas decreased by 11 to 1,089 between 1975 and 1976.

Farmers Union Leader Outlines Farmer Protest

LUBBOCK-A protest action other alternative than to ses, rallies and demonstrations, has been announced by the Texas Farmers Union

Speaking from the Panhandle where the Executive Board of the statewide general farm organization formed the official resolution of protest. President Jay Naman described the ensuing events.

"We are calling for major amendments to the four-year omnibus farm bill now before Congress. We find certain provisions intolerable, such as the importation of raw cotton, grain reserve systems which would assure constant surpluses and the resulting low prices. inadequate disaster programs, the destruction of the peanut and rice programs, and many other sections which are obviously implemented at the request of trade and processing groups. The leadership in Washington has apparently been lobbied into providing a farm bill which benefits commodity buyers who love cheap prices, trade groups who enjoy prices at a world bargaining level, and political leaders who fear food and fiber inflation. Domestic producers have been forgotten.

"If Congress does not. however, rewrite this bill, we ask the President for a veto and eversion to previous permanent arm legislation.

Failing all of that, we find no equipment, fertilizer, fuel..all supplies. With the loss we are taking this market year, farmers will not be financially able to buy these supplies anyhow.

'We will do whatever it takes to draw attention to the serious problems of farming and the fact that this situation cannot continue. If farmers are an minority group to gain a voice before we are all forced out of

'Apparently the Administration and Congress are not interested in our need for survival through a fair price. And consumers are likely not interested in anything but the retail price they face.

"If everyone thinks we are going to be the scapegoat for inflation while facing our own huge cost increases in equipment, supplies and labor, they are wrong. Thousands of farmers have been going out of business over the past decade, and it's all going unnoticed. while America enjoys the supermarket fantasy of always having plentiful, high quality food and fiber.

"That is not the reality of farming when we are getting mere pennies of the retail

'The time has come that we will no longer sit by and accept this. Even our bankers will be behind our protest because they cannot continue to finance a losing farm business either. I feel certain that once this whole thing begins, you will see farmers more unified than they have been since the turn of the century. All segments in the business of agriculture will know we're serious. And maybe then something will change. At this point we really don't see any other alternative."

Cattlemen Encouraged To Attend Hearings

Independent Cattlemen's Association President T.A. Cunningham this week called on all cattlemen in Texas and surrounding areas to attend hearings set up Tuesday in Fort Worth by the U.S. Trade Commission on the impact of beef imports.

Cunningham said that the hearings "may be the cattle industry's best chance to voice support for reducing the massive amounts of beef imports presently flooding our market.

The hearings are part of an investigation by the International Trade Commission to determine the impact beef imports have had on the economy of the domestic cattle industry in this country.

If the commission finds significant damage to the cattle imports, will recommend to President Carter, the Senate 211 square miles.

Finance Committee and the House Ways and Means Committee that action be taken to halt the flow of beef imports Cunningham further stated that "attendance at the hearings will prove that the cow-calf producers are tired of their industry being the dumping grounds for foreign beef producing nations.

"Last year, some 2.07 billion pounds of meat and 983 thousand head of live cattle were imported into the United States. If this continues, the cow-calf producer will face financial ruin." Cunningham

The hearings are to be held Tuesday at 10 a.m. in Fort Worth at the Fort Worth Sheraton Hotel.

Brand Farm Editor

My primary concern at this paper is farm news, but'versatility never hurt any man and I work in numerous areas of news coverage as well.

Recently, co-worker Bob Nigh and myself wrote a series of articles on the San Jose community southwest of Hereford.

Our idea for the series was brought about when Domingo Pesina, owner of the well at the community called The Brand and informed us that San Jose was about to get into serious trouble Pesina related that the community's only water well was about to go out and that some 100 resident families in the community might be without water in a matter of a little over a month.

Unfortunately, some people either neglected to read all of the series or took our statements out of

Nigh and myself were both aware of past water

People, no matter who they are or where they live, must have water. It is one of the most vital elements of human life.

It was with the idea of explaining the problems at San Jose and offering workable alternatives that we launched our series.

They have set their minds and hearts on obtaining a water and sewer system for their community, and they are working toward that goal

We have attended their meetings, and the sentiment most frequently expressed by the people of San Jose is simply: "We must put the past and its failures behind us and work for the future. And we must obtain these things ourselves.' And they are working. With the assistance of dedicated people such as Joe Vasquez of the Department of Health Resources, they are trying to clear up health hazards.

Only two weeks after our series on the camp ran, virtually all of the livestock in the San Jose community had been removed.

Residents there have already organized two cleanup projects using trucks provided by their own community residents in addition to their own

And they have elected a steering committee to meet with various agency officials to get advice on the right course to follow as they seek to pull themselves up by their own bootstraps.

We have not rediscovered the San Jose problem, it has been there a long time. Much too

The people of San Jose know they have lived with this problem too long, and they are doing the best they can with what they have to get something done about it.

I hope that a little publicity on the matter will not adversely influence the attitude of local residents toward the work at San Jose.

And I would add that I don't think it's very wise to throw stones at people when they're trying.

Crop Prospects Better In China

WASHINGTON (AP) - The Agriculture Department says China has received excellent rains in its parched northeastern area in recent weeks.

The department's Foreign Agricultural Service said the rains "have improved the moisture picture in this important region producing spring wheat, soybeans and coarse feed grains.'

Officials said rains last month also improved the outlook for crops in the North China Plain,

Drought Causes Fewer Jobs

AUSTIN. Tex. (AP) - The Texas Department of Welfare relayed word from Idaho last week that there will be little work in that state this summer for migrant farm workers.

Welfare Commissioner Raymond Vowell said that Milton Klein, director of the Idaho Department of Health and Welfare, told him Idaho is expected a severe drought this Vowell quoted Klein as

This will have a serious effect on the number of agriculture jobs which will be available in the state of Idaho. We are already receiving reports that a higher than usual number of migrant laborers are coming to Idaho thinking that work will be available. Actually. there will be much less work available in Idaho than there is normally. I think it is our duty to inform migrant laborers that work is not available in this state and save them the expense of making the trip to Idaho."

Prospect Of Higher Fuel Costs Spurs Work On Limited Tillage

BUSHLAND .- With the prospect of new taxes on energy. growers will be looking for ways to farm with less fuel.

Recent research on limited tillage in the Great Plains will help solve the problem. These conclusions were reached by Ron Allen and Dr. Bill Fryrear, Agricultural Engineers at USDA Research Centers at Bushland and Big Spring. Texas. They reported these findings at a recent meeting of The American Society of Agricultural Engineers held at Raleigh, North Carolina, June

The two Engineers with the Agricultural Research Service say that conservation tillage research has been underway in the Southern Great Plains since 1942. In that landmark year a sweep plow was built and tested at the Bushland Center. Back then scientists at Bushland were looking for ways to control wind erosion. Their machine not only controlled wind and water erosion but conserved soil moisture and increased yield. Since the advent of the sweep plow many other limited tillage practices that conserve water have been developed in the Great Plains. Recent experiements with tractor power requirements show that fuel conservation is an added benefit for limited tillage systems.

The scientists point out that efficient agricultural production will not solve the national energy crisis because farmers only use 3 to 4 per cent of the nation's energy budget to produce food and haul it to market. From the growers' standpoint conserving fuel will help keep farming profitable in an era of constantly rising energy prices.

"Limited tillage will definitely help control wind and water erosion." the scientists pointed out. They found examples of research that prove this in the Great Plains as far north as

Madison, South Dakota, where investigators conducted experiments on a 5.8 per cent slope. They compared the moldboard plow, sweeps and disk as methods of seedbed preparation for corn. Disking and planting were combined into one operation. Soil loss from water erosion was 6 tons per acre where moldboard plowing was used. This was reduced to 3.5 tons per acre with sweeps and the disk-till plant system. It took 13 gallons of fuel per acre to till Allen pointed out. and plant corn when a moldboard plow was used.

Sweep tillage was more efficient and reduced fuel required to 9 gallons per acre. Disking and planting in one operation reduced fuel needs to 7 gallons per acre. Corn yeilds were 4,000 pounds per acre with the two efficient systems and only 3,700 pounds per acre with moldboard Scientists at Alliance, Nebraska, had a similar experience producing wheat in a wheat-fallow sequence. Soil loss during the fallow year was 6.5 tons per acre with moldboard plowing. Soil loss between crops dropped to 3 tons per acre with oneway plowing and 2 tons per acre with sweeps. Moldboard plowing after wheat harvest required 50 per cent more fuel than tillage sweeps or a oneway plow.

"Further south in the Great Plains, controlling wind erosion is a big conservation challenge," the scientists stated. At Bushland, Texas, sweep plowing leaves more residue on the soil surface and gives better wind erosion control than planting methods have been compared in a wheat-fallow cropping sequence since 1942. In addition to decreasing erosion, soil moisture storage during the fallow was increased 1.5 inches per year by sweep tillage. This extra soil moisture increased wheat yield 13 per cent or 1.3 bushels per acre. 'Over the long haul, that makes a lot of difference in the potential for profit," Engineer

In a recent experiment at Bushland, Jack Musick and Dr. Allen Wiese used herbicides to replace disking during fallow periods in irrigated wheat-sorghum-fallow cropping sequence. Weeds were controlled with AAtrex and 2.4-D from wheat harvest to sorghum planting. This new procedure increased soil moisture storage 1.5 inches during the 11-month fallow over disk tillage. Grain sorghum yields after the fallow were increased 900 pounds per acre in the 3-year study. Fuel needed to control weeds between the crops was cut from 18 to 5 gallons per acre when herbicides were substituted for tillage. This included fuel used to manufacture herbicides. Similar results were obtained by Dr. Paul Under at Bushland when dryland sorghum was grown on chemically fallowed land after havest of irrigated wheat.

In Hays, Kansas, no-tillage was evaluated in a dryland wheat-sorghum-fallow cropping sequence. After the study had progressed several years, atrazine did not control certain grass weeds. The problem was solved by sweep plowing once after wheat harvest and again before sorghum planting. This system saved 1.5 gallons of fuel compared to sweep tillage during the entire fallow. The big benefit was increasing sorghum yield an average of 1,000 pounds per acre during the 5-year study.

"Double-cropping sorghum after irrigated wheat harvest is another cropping sequence where no-tillage does a good job," Allen stated. In addition to saving a lot of time and fuel. grain sorghum yields were increased 500 pounds per acre Sorghum was planted immedia tely after wheat harvest about 1 inch deep with a grain drill. Drought Causing Crop Losses Throughout South

ATLANTA (AP) - A twomonth drought through much of the South has prached land, shriveled crops and dried up water supplies, threatening to cost farmers millions of dollars.

Guest Editorial

'Country Editor' Disappointed With Carter Farm Attitude

[EDITOR'S NOTE--The following "Letter to the President" was penned by H.M. Baggarly, editor of the Tulia Herald, and was written concerning the farm vote in Swisher County and current conditions facing farmers there. However, the conditions faced by farmers in that area are not unlike those faced by agriculturalists throughout the Panhandle, and the sentiments expressed by Baggarly are in line with the feelings of farmers throughout much of the nation.

EAR MR. PRESIDENT: As one who did everything I could possibly do through the columns of this newspaper to insure a Democratic victory last November, I would like to share some of my thoughts with you.

May I say in the beginning that my efforts were not fruitless. Although I live in the heart of "Reagan country," and this general area tends to be Republican, this county did NOT go Republican last November. We voted Democratic 2811-753.

THIS LOPSIDED VOTE was due pri-marily to the fact that our farmers, and we are almost totally agricultural, who were almost ready to give up as a result of depressed farm prices, saw a glimmer of hope in the election of a Southern Democratic farmer.

In turning back through my newspaper files, I notice a major story with the headline, "Carter Would Be First Farmer President Since Jefferson.

People remembered the friendship of Roosevelt and Kennedy for agriculture despite the fact that they were Eastern bred and not familiar with agriculture. They remembered the traditional friendship of the Democratic Party for agriculture.

ANY OF MY pro-Carter editorials last fall were inspired by calls and letters from farmers who said in effect, "We can't make it any longer, we want to know how the election is going to come out. If we thought Ford would be elected we would sell out now while we can get a good price for our land. If the Democrats win, we want to try to hold on a little longer.'

My interest was partially selfish. As a businessman, my livelihood depends upon farm solvency. I don't want to see this county's population cut in half.

I had every confidence that things would be better under Carter and the Democrats. I was right about the Democratic Congress. I seem to have been wrong in the case of Carter. It's not that you're so bad, agriculturally speaking. It's just that you are not as good as I had anticipated. You have failed to provide that glimmer of hope we all wanted so much to see.

OOKING OVER some other newspapers from last fall, I note the Democratic farm platform which came out of the New York convention. "Foremost attention must be directed to the establishment of a national food policy which will be fair to both producer and consumer and be based on family farm agriculture." So it said.

And then. Without parity income assurance to farmers, full production cannot be achieved. . . we must assure parity returns to farmers based on cost of production plus a reasonable profit."

Mr. President, the farmers I know can forgive you for not advocating "a reasonable profit" for farmers in your agricultural recommendations. They CANNOT forgive you for ignoring a "cost of production" guarantee! And you will be a dead duck with our farmers in 1980 if you veto legislation proposed by Congress which obviously is more pro-farmer than is the White House. They will not support you should you follow your present course, not because they think a Republican administration would do better, which it wouldn't, but as a PRO-TEST. It never fails to happen. And I don't want it to happen!

N YOUR AUTOBIOGRAPHY, "Why Not the Best?" you said, "Grain speculators and monopolistic processors have profited, while farmers are going bankrupt trying to produce food that consumers are going broke trying to buy.'

I agree that farmers are going broke. I do NOT agree that consumers, who pay about 16 per cent of their income for food. are going broke. You certainly should be familiar with the fact that Americans pay a smaller percentage of their income for food than residents of any other country on earth.

And you also say in the same book. "I know this nation can develop an agricultural policy which will insure a fair profit to our farmers and a fair price to consumers.'

The Texas Extension Service says that it costs near $3.75 to produce a bushel of dryland wheat and approximately $4.25 for irrigated. With wheat selling for $2 and less, does this sound like a "fair profit"? And the proposed loan rate is not much better. It's completely inadequate.

ANY HAVE SPECULATED that your apparent insensitivity to farmer survival is an attempt to "punish" the farm belt of the Midwest which did not support you last November. In fact, Senator Bellmon of Oklahoma suggested this on a recent television show in this area.

Only you know your reasons for what

My own political philosophy is that should I run for public office and be elected. my first priority would be to woo those who didn't support me, to prove them wrongthat is, if I craved re-election.

Y PERSONAL REACTION and analysis of your farm program suggestions is that your top priority is balancing the budget, that you have a genuine desire to improve our national fiscal policy. And with this we can't disagree. I attribute your apparent farm insensitivity to noble intentions, a desire to cut spending.

Everybody is crying for more income, to counteract inflation if not merely to satisfy an appetite to live a little higher on the hog. These cries come from school teachers, government workers, Big Labor, Big Oil, even the welfare recipients! Government policy seems to see something sacrosanct in 'cost of living" wage hikes, in maintaining the status quo so far as standard of living is

But before we take care of those who aren't making quite as much profit as they would like, as a result of inflation, whether it be Big Oil or the welfare recipient, shouldn't we FIRST take care of those who MAKE NO PROFIT AT ALL, those not receiving cost of production?

Farmers are having a most difficult time convincing ANYBODY that they are losing money on every bushel of wheat they produce! If YOU doubt it, call some of the smalltown bankers in the agricultural areas.

SUPPOSE MY greatest disappointment in your attitude towards agriculture lies in the fact that the Democratic Party's long reputation as "the farmer's friend" is being dispelled NOT by an Ivy League President. NOT by a Big City President, NOT by a Big Labor or Big Oil President but by a SOUTHERN FARMER!

Roosevelt, Truman, Kennedy and Johnson ALL gave farm survival the VERY HIGHEST PRIORITY. I hope history will not record that the Carter Administration was the one that sold out the farmer!

I was talking to two medium sized farmers in an adjoining county just last Sunday. They predicted that with the family farmer driven off the land, it would be up to either large corporate groups or the government to produce our food and fiber. Only they have the resources to go in the hole season after season and survive...

Should large business conglomerates take over farming, they would immediately set their own prices on farm products just as they set their own prices for an automobile or a bar of soap. They would not only have the clout to do it but the will. Or, if they didn't do that, they'd use farm losses to offset business profits when reporting to

SHOULD GOVERNMENT undertake the task, no doubt we'd have another Post Office mess. Certainly none of us wants that.

Everybody we know sets his own price, the shoe shine boy, the laborer, all the rest-except the farmer who asks, "What will you give me?"

Everybody is virtually guaranteed a fair price for what he does as a result of government support, even the immigrant laborer who is guaranteed a minimum wage whether or not his farmer employer is operating in the black. The government is sensitive to the needs of welfare recipients and Big Business alike.

We are all compelled to pay a fair price or more for whatever we buy, a new car, interest rates, even food at the store. Why should not society also be compelled to pay the farmer a fair price?

All fair prices are made possible by either business or government. The prices are paid at the marketplace.

Agriculture is peculiar in that farmers cannot set their prices for their produce as does every other segment of society. If the public, the consumer, pays LESS than a fair price to the farmer at the food store, what's wrong with his making up the difference when he pays his taxes on April 15? We wish a way could be found for the farmer to do his own pricing, just like General Motors, but he seems to lack sufficient wisdom to find a way to do it. Government's role in a society is to do for the individual what he can't do for rejecting the proposals. Ordered by the department nine months ago during the Ford administration, the report was prepared under a $371,848 contract with Booze. Allen and Hamilton, Inc. The three-volume report was delivered to the USDA this week.

We should have no higher priority than a dependable FOOD MACHINE. What good is a balanced budget without it?

Generally, the report proposed more flexibility in inspection procedures, particularly in federally inspected poultry plants.

More responsibility would be placed on the plants themselves, which would be required to set up quality control systems for use by USDA inspectors in monitoring the operations.

One of the recommendations, which would require Congress to change the law before it could be adopted, involves the use of a "bi-level" system for the inspection of poultry after slaughter by dividing birds into "good" and "bad" lots.

The study team said it is possible to identify birds that way by using historical production patterns and keeping track of disease patterns in specific areas.

As the good birds move through the plant, only random samples would be taken by inspectors. At present, all poultry - good and bad - is checked by inspectors. All bad chickens would be called for inspection under the plan.

Assistant Secretary Carol Tucker Foreman, who oversees food and consumer service in USDA, told a news conference that the department is "neither accepting nor rejecting" any of the recommendations at this time. A summary of the three-volume report was released Wednesday.

The report said that if the recommendations are implemented an estimated $210 million could be saved in federal

One deficient element is incentive, which has been basic to expansion of U.S. agriculture particularly since homesteading legislation of 1862. In developing countries the subsistence character of farming still persists.

Also needed are the many services and facilities which modern large-scale farming require, such as education, transportation and storage. Such an essential factor as

Marshall said it would require 'a strange theory of human nature to assume that any group of people would ever be permanently satisfied with second- class status, and that's what we've got here."

Marshall also raised the possibility that if U.S. unemployment rises again, there could be widespread demands for mass roundups and deportation of foreign workers who compete for existing jobs.

no such outcry. "But if we don't do something to legalize the process, and if we are unfortunate enough to have annually. rising unemployment again to 9 or 10 per cent, then we'll get demand for a roundup and you won't be able to contain it,"

Referring to aliens in the labor force as "undocumented workers," Marshall said they constitute one of the big obstacles blocking the administration's goal of full employment, particularly if as many as one million enter the U.S.

'If it's a million, then that works against our efforts to provide jobs for people who are already here," Marshall said.

You have to be realistic about the law," said Charlie Perez, district director for the Immigration and Naturalization Service at El Paso, whose office admitted the workers as non-immigrant, temporary laboadvertisements in West Texas newspapers.

Oscar Spencer, who farms about 500 acres, said approximately 2,000 persons are needed during the harvest season to harvest the 5,000 acres - 105 farms - in the valley.

"We tried to get some help." Spencer said. "We explained our problem to people in Austin and Dallas to make them see that their requirements would not apply here and that we were about to lose our crop because we could not get anyone on this side (Texas) to work. The whole town of Presidio only has 1,000 people...how we were supposed to build homes for 2,000 more."

Florida bass have been stocked in 24 public lakes and reservoirs around the state this year.

The ability of the Florida bass to adapt to Texas reservoirs in part explains why they will be stocked in such diverse geographic locations as Lake Bob Sandlin in East Texas and Twin Buttes Reservoir outside San Angelo in West Texas. Floridas also have been stocked as far north as Lake Texoma and

P&W Photos Are Stolen

AUSTIN-"Not worth stealing" obviously did not describe the photo entry submitted by the Texas Parks and Wildlife Department in recent national competition.

The entry placed first, and was promptly stolen.

Competing against photographic entries from a number of other state game departments for the American Association of Conservation Informations's annual awards in Lafavette, La., during the first week in June, P&WD submitted a five panel entry entitled "Thanks to the Hunter." P&WD hatchery coordinator Bill Rutledge cited two factors which contributed to this year's success-favorable weather and an enthusiastic hatchery staff.

"After a cold winter the temperature steadily climbed this spring," said Rutledge with no major fluctuations in temperature."

A sudden cold snap after a warming trend has started will drive broodfish such as bass from the nest. Without an adult to tend the eggs they soon develop fungus infections and

According to Rutledge, eggs from the first nesting are more viable and decline in quality during subsequent nestings.

"This year we were able to stock nearly 80 per cent of our target lakes with Florida largemouth bass from fry hatched on the first nesting attempt," said Rutledge.

This year some 3.4 million of the fast-growing Florida largemouth bass were produced in Texas hatcheries, along with another 227,800 obtained from the Federal Hatchery near Uvalde, Texas.

Florida bass are only one of five so-called exotic species of fish produced and reared in Texas hatcheries this year. Others include striped bass and a hybrid of the striper and native white bass, smallmouth bass and walleye.

This is in addition to production of native largemouth bass, channel, blue and flathead catfish and hybrid sunfish.

The Parks and Wildlife Department now operates 12 hatcheries: San Angelo Numbers One and Two. Dundee, Possum Kingdom, Lewisville, Eagle Mountain, Tyler, Huntsville, Jasper, San Marcos, Olmito (Brownsville) and the recently acquired hatchery at Fort Worth.

"Five years ago, said Rutledge, "only native fish were being produced in state hatcheries. But Texas has one of the most complex water systems in the United States. There are some 450 public reservoirs. many of which have 10 to 15 different species of fish in them."

Many of the lakes are not suitable habitat for native predator fish such as Texas largemouth bass and catfish which evolved as stream fish. Lakes such as Canvon, Amistad, Travis and others have steep sides with large expanses of open water. What they needed was a predator which could live in deep lakes, feed on the forage fish which frequent them and provide sport for anglers.

reproduction." Deliveries of stripers are still underway but estimated produc-tion this year is 2.8 million fingerlings, including 438,000 produced in saltwater ponds at the Palacios Marine Fishery Lab and some 200,000 provided by the National Fish Hatchery at Tishamingo, Oklahoma.

"This should be a record year for striped bass," said Rutledge. "And it is due in no small part to dedication of fisheries workers. When traditional sources of broodfish failed. enterprising technicians and biologists scrambled about water systems with known striper population and discovered an abundance of adult fish in the Brazos River between Lakes Granbury and Possum Kingdom."

Everyone connected with striped bass procurement and production stayedon duty over the Easter holidays, transporting broodfish, stripping eggs and milt from brooders and

WILDLIFE PLANTINGS

LUBBOCK -- The American farmer and rancher is striving to produce enough food and livestock to feed the world and he is doing a good job but these efforts many times encompass drastic land changes including destruction of natural wildlife

To help supplement this reduction in cover and food for native birds such as the quail, pheasant and priarie chicken, it is sometimes necessary to alot a fencerow or corner of the field to wildlife plants and cover.

Quail, for example, depend on three factors: cover, food and weather. The adverse High Plains weather can be minimized if the food and cover conditions provide for winter survival and for spring nesting.

A strip of domestic grain along a wheat field will do wonders for upland birds and migratory birds súch as dove. Most domestic grains are grown for early maturing seeds and the stocks are usually soft for ease of harvesting. These factors dictate a combination of domestic grain and wild plant food for wildlife.

Some of the more common wild plants that furnish seeds for upland birds include; wild sunflower, Russian thistle, broomweed, ragweed, and smartweed. A few plants furnish both cover and food such as the Russian olive, aromatic sumac, and black locust.

Planting instructions for all wildlife food whether specialty seed such as the game bird pea. WGF sorghum, bob white sovbean or domestic grain such as corn and maise, should include good soil prearation.

On cultivated land, use normal plowing and seed bed preparation. On pasture sod, disc strips two or three times to break up the hard-pan surface. Since most birds eat insects in spring and summer till the first hard frost, the unnecessary use of insecticides should be eliminated. Consumption of these sick or dead insects by game birds will reduce the bird's natural ability to fight disease or escape from their

It is often difficult to convince a good farmer to plant only one-half the normal seed rate he would use for normal production crops. This lower seeding rate is important as birds need room to maneuver freely through a food strip. The underplanting will also allow weeds to reach maturity furnishing a variety of food lasting through winter until next spring. Assistance from the Texas Parks and Wildlife Department is available by contacting Richard DeArment, Extension biologist, P.O. Box 122, Wheeler, Tx. 79096.

TROTLINES CREATE TANGLE

FRITCH--Panhandle game wardens confiscated over 180 illegal trotlines at lake Meredith last week and the Texas Parks and Wildlife Department is holding these devices for identification by the owner.

"Over 50 per cent of the trotlines checked were in violation of one or more of the department's trotline regulations," said Weldon Fromm, Amarillo district supervisor.

"The msot numerous violation was the uncomplete or entire lack of an identification tag." Fromm continued.

All freshwater trotlines in regulatory counties must be identified with a legible tag, constructed of material as durable as the trotline. The tag. whether metal, plastic of other durable material, must bear the name and address of the fisherman and the date it was

All trotlines remaining in public waters shall be redated at the expiration of each 90-day

No such lines may be placed or set in the vicinity of any public boat dock, public bathing pier, public bathing beach or any public place commonly used as a swimming or bathing area.

County regulations listing the length and number of hooks for trotlines are available in the current 1976-77 Guide to Texas Hunting and Fishing regulat-

Crowds Visit Parks

Parks operation officials at the Texas Parks and Wildlife Department logged 439,163 visitors to parks.

Most came only for the day--377,813--with another 61,-350 spending the night.

knowledge of them.

AUSTIN--If asked what they consider to be the greatest danger to swimmers on the coast, most people would say sharks. Not so, says the Texas Parks and Wildlife Department. Attacks by sharks are rare, but currents and riptides have claimed a number of lives.

A prerequisite to swimming safely in the Gulf surf is an understanding of the water and its movements. Even if it seems still on the surface, there is constant, strong motion bene-

Wind action, pushing waves onto the beach at an angle, causes a current called a set or drift, running parallel to the beach. Sometimes the drift is extremely fast and may carry a. swimmer far from where he entered the water. Rather than trying to swim against the current, which is only tiring, swim across it to the beach and walk back, or continue parallel to it and the shore. Most of the currents are only 10 to 20 feet wide and parallel swimming enables the swimmer to reach safe water where he can return to the beach. In areas where there is a hole in a sandbar, the water will rush seaward creating a strong outward current. This may happen quite suddenly when a weak portion of a sandbar gives way under the constant motion and pressure of the surf. In such cases, the swimmer can swim parallel or just relax and let the current carry him seaward until it dissipates and he can swim

Such currents usually may be spotted from the beach by the surface motion. There may be small, choppy waves in a criss-cross pattern running perpendicular to the beach, or they may be of a different color with bits of grass or other debris flowing toward open water...

freely back to the beach.

Strong rip currents can start very near the beach and normally are caused by land depressions betwee breaking waves. After the wave breaks, the returning water will rush seaward along the depression. Rip currents may not be very wide nor long, but may easily create panic in a swimmer and carry him quickly to deeper water, if he does not have any

Some of the stronger rip currents are formed along obstructions that extend into the Gulf from the beach, such as a jetty, pier or maybe even a beached shrimp boat. The jetty rip is quite dangerous and for this reason swimming usually is prohibited in these areas. Perhaps the most common current is the undertow. This is created when the surf breaks on beaches, then water rushes rapidly seaward pulled by gravity. The feeling of an undertow can be experienced by standing in the surf's edge at almost any beach.

As the water rushes out in a strong undertow, it washes the sand from around a person's feet and sometimes causes loss of balance. If the swimmer or water is in an area where the surf is breaking, a wave may crash down directly on top of him. The weight of the water is heavy and dangerous.

There are some areas on the South Padre Island beach where breakers and undertow may create frequent problems, but the more gentle beaches of the Texas coast are not consistently hazardous. However, any beach can be dangerous at any time depending on the water conditions and the caution exercised by the swimmer or Swimmers do not need to be unduly afraid of the currents, but should respect the water and not be careless. It is important to remember not to fight any sudden current nor to swim against it. A swimmer should move with or across it until the pull decreases enough to free him so he can return to

Large Rock Is Small Park

BIG ROCK PARK, Wash. (AP) - This could be the world's largest pet rock - or one of the nation's smallest

And it is both - a pet of those who know and love it and the smallest park in the King County park system: 20 feet wide and 70 feet long.

Only the unfeeling could see this resting place shaded by 61year-old Western redwood trees as just another big boulder.

"A lot of artists go there. It's very scenic, overlooking the Snoqualmie Valley," said Chris Loutisis, head of the county's Property Division.

A native of the region, Loutisis says he's been taking his family to the site a mile south of Duvall for years.

Big Rock is the granite descendant of a glacier that retreated into Canada. Leo Lyde, a local resident, planted the trees in 1916.

During logging days, Loutisis said, it was easier to build the road around the impervious stone than to go through it.

Later residents arranged for a Y-shaped easement on each side of the rock. Loutisis says he thinks it became a part of the parks system in the 1950s.

Transfer requests will be evaluated to make sure they will help achieve a better racial balance, according to officials. But Connie Gordon, head of a committee that helped devise the program, said the transfer of a black student to a high minority-enrollment school or of a white student to a low minorityenrollment school may be allowed if the changes will decrease imbalance overall.

"When I drove in I saw this

MOOREVILLE, Tex. (AP) - the citizens' band radio. The than he expected.

More than 100 people joined the chase, which roared through Mooreville at speeds exceeding 100 miles per hour. Clemons from work at about 2 p.m. was followed north to Eddy, back to Moorville, out Texas 7 and was finally trapped by a roadblock on U.S. 77.

He was taken back to Mooreville, where townsfolk had gathered at the general store for news of the incident. A check of Childre's trailer home indicated two guns, a deer rifle and shotgun were missing. Clemons admitted he had a companion.

"He gave a general description of his friend and we put it out on the police radio as well as the CB." Sheriff Larry Pamplin said. That brought on another search. Police and CBers looked for the second man for about three hours, and were about to call off the search, when Mooreville residents saw an unfamiliar man walking into

They surrounded the stranger and someone used the CB to call the police. When questioned, Stephen M. Hardman, 24, said he'd been fishing nearby.

"When he said trout fishing everybody started laughing." Pamplin said. "There hasn't been trout in Mooreville since the creation. And none in Falls County that I know of."

The man finally admitted there was no trout and led officers. Mooreville residents, Childre and Pamplin to Cowdayou Creek, to where the missing guns were found. Clemons and Hardman were taken to the Falls County Jail at Marlin and were charged with burglary. They were held in lieu of $5,000 bond each.

2-Wheelers Outnumber Automobiles

Madison Sets Example For Combatting Crisis

MADISON, Wis. (AP)- You see them everywhere, zigging and zagging through downtown traffic, parked in long shiny rows on campus and even whipping along the edges of 40-mile-per hour thoroughfares.

Madison, where two-wheelers outnumber automobiles, may be the bicycle capital of the United States. And the city may be showing the way for other communities trying to cope with the energy crisis.

In Madison there are kids on short bikes with tall handlebars, bearded students on rusty one-speeds with balloon tires and businessmen who strap briefcases to sleek European racers.

There are even senior citizens pedaling sedately down shaded residential streets on big tricycles.

"We figure there are somewhere between 120,000 and 150,000 bicycles in Madison," said Jerry Tomczak, bicycle control monitor for the police department in this city of 170,000. "That's three bicycles for every two cars."

He said the University of Wisconsin campus, with nearly 40,000 students, is responsible for much of the boom which has seen the number of bikes in town double since 1969.

"For a lot of students, it's all they can afford," he said. However, he emphasized that other portions of the community are also beginning to rely on bicycles.

"Besides the cheaper cost, it has become a lot more popular for energy reasons. And some of it has to do with the the traffic. You can make it a lot faster around town on a bicycle than in a car, and you don't have to worry about parking," he said.

"There is a growing number of adult bicycle users," agreed Tom Walsh, a city traffic engineer who will disburse up to $300,000 on biking improvements this year.

He said surveys show that 68 per cent of all city residents are regular bicycle riders, and three out of every four bike trips taken during the week are for work, school, shopping or some other nonrecreational trip.

Tim McDowell, 22, a salesman at a large family bicycle shop across town from campus, said riders who bought 10speeds in the past are getting better bicycles as they come to depend on them more.

'We've had more interest this spring in the $200 to $300 bikes than ever before," he said. "People are concerned about energy, and the companies are putting out better bikes with better components."

"Adults are tending to see the bicycle as a viable mode of alternate transportation," said Walsh, who said many people also begin biking for environmental and health reasons.

Officials said perhaps 4,000 bikes a year are stolen in the city, and there has been an average of two bicycle fatalities a year in Madison in the 1970s. "The number of bicycle accidents is only 2 per cent of the total number of accidents in the city," Walsh said, "but about 90 per cent of the bicyclists involved suffer injuries." He said that it's still safer to bike than drive a car because the odds of getting in an accident are so much less.

"It should also be emphasized that bicycles are subject to the same vehicle traffic code as cars," he said, noting that is not unusual for cyclists to get tickets for running stop signs.

Walsh, who rides a bike seven miles to work every day, said the city offers free maps of the 50 miles of urban bike paths and limited- use lanes shared by buses and bicycles. More lanes and paths are part of a 10-year bicycle engineering plan,

"A lot of people in business and government are riding bikes to work," he said. "We put in three large bike racks downtown last year and we need to triple that. Wherever we put them they're well used."

He said many people, particularly students, ride their bicycles throughout the winter.

There are several bicycle touring and racing clubs around the city. Steve Kiargaard, 17, rides his $700 custom built bicycle up to 250 miles a week during nice weather, often on trips of up to 100 miles with other members of the Bombay Bicycle Club.

'We have about 40 paid members, but a lot of people just show up and ride with us," said Kiargaard. He said the club has 36 weekend trips planned this year.

"It's a great excuse to get out with friends in nice weather," he said. "Some of the crazy ones even go when the weather's bad."

He said there is no drinking on the trips or during picnic

"Sometimes somebody might have a beer when we get back," he said, "but only one since they still have to ride

Reseachers Improve Capacity Of CB's

STOCKTON, Calif. (AP)- Two Harris, a professor of electrical researchers say they have improved on a system for carrying two conversations on a single Citizens Band channel, making it more convenient and cheaper than previous methods. "A problem today with CB radios is that the crowding of voices on the 40 channels available makes it hard sometimes to understand the person you are talking with," said J. Fred Cleveland, 27, a former student who worked on the project with Dr. Richard W. engineering at the University of the Pacific

'There are other ways of doing what we are talking about," said Harris, "but the cost for such units approaches $7,000. We figure our system can be sold for less than $100."

The Harris- Cleveland system compresses speech as it is transmitted so that it takes half as many units of spectrum space, allowing two conversations on the same band.

rian Church in the U.S.A. says discriminating against gays would result in the church "not ordaining some people that God is explicity calling.'

The Rev. Gail Ricciuti, vicemoderator of the church's 189th General Assembly in convention here, testified during a public hearing by a task force on homosexuality. The task force is scheduled to make a progress report to the assembly.

Resolutions seeking to kill the task force, created last year, and deny ordination of gay ministers have been submitted by delegates from Huntsville, Ala., and Pittsburgh, Pa.

The Rev. Mrs. Ricciuti, who with her husband is co-pastor of the First Presbyterian Church of Byron, N.Y., said that while the Bible may say some negative things about homosexuals, it also is explicit about women and their rights in the church, "and a great many of those things exclude me."

The Rev. Mrs. Ricciuti was appointed vice moderator by the newly- elected moderator, the Rev. John T. Conner of Oregon.

The Rev. Mr. Conner opposes any effort to cut short the work of the task force which is scheduled to present its final recommendations next year.

Kelley, Bell Withhold Praises For Bureau

WASHINGTON (AP) - If you're looking for an ironclad assurance that the FBI is obeying the law of these days, don't go to Atty. Gen. Griffin Bell. And don't try FBI Director Clarence M. Kelley.

As remarkable as this may seem, neither is willing to vouch for the bureau's lawfulness.

Both say they believe and hope no wrongdoing is occurring and they're takings steps to prevent it. But they leave the public with lingering doubt, perhaps because they have some doubts of their own.

At a Hosue subcommittee hearing recently. Bell showed signs of the frustration he fells at trying to come to grips with the traditionally secret society of the FBI.

Are you convinced, he was asked, that the FBI no longer burglarizes homes and offices, opens private mail, illegally taps telephones and plots dirty tricks against political activitsts? "I don't want to say whether anything is going on or is not going on. There are 20,000 people in the FBI. It's too big. I wouldn't know that," he confessed.

With the optimism of a new man on the job. Bell said the continuing Justice Department investigation of FBI misdeeds should settle the question; and "I think I will reach the point" of certainty that no wrongdoing is occurring.

Kelley may not share Bell's optimism because he knows from his own sad experience that a man takes risks if he swears to the FBI's good behavior.

Two years ago, he confidently asserted that there were no FBI burglaries against domestic targets after 1966. He trusted the FBI men who had told him that.

As it turned out, there were numerous FBI burglaries after 1966, many of them carried out in New York in the bureau's frantic search for Weather Underground fugitives.

Department investigators have spent more than a year probing evidence about the burglaries and illegal mail-opening and wiretap operations. As a result, one FBI man faces serious criminal charges and Bell is considering whether to authorize additional indictments.

In a nationally televised interview last August. Kelley uncomfortably admitted, "I know that I was deceived. I think they should have told me, at least not make me stand out on a limb with this knowledge they had and should have imparted to me."

Facing reporters at a news conference two days later, he was asked for assurance that burglaries were finally a thing of the past.

"I wish I could say categorically, unquestionably, that this is not going on." But he could not. He had been decieved and from that, he had learned he "can no longer make categorical, sweeping statements." And he's sticking with that position even today. Bell touched on one of the barriers for anyone trying to find out what goes on in the bureau. As he put it, the "internal operating controls" aren't very good.

Or as other department officials repeatedly complain, "They tell you" what you ask and no more. You have to know exactly how to phrase the question."

The key is understanding the FBI's language, an idiom far. different from ordinary English and even more obscure than the jargonof other government agencies. The purpose often is to communicate the key information only to the few who understand the code and to conceal it from all others.

For example, FBI files often refer to information obtained from "contact with highly confidential sources." That has turned out to be a frequent code phrase for an FBI burglary.

The curious language is not the only barrier to enlightenment about the FBI's activities. Few if any records were kept on some operations, particularly those most likely to embarras the bureau. The post-1966 New York burglaries, for example, were recorded only in a separate set of files in a safe in the New York field office and were not discovered in a search of others filed in that office and bureau headquarters.

Bell says he wants to correct the situation and he's telling FBI agents to get their instructions in writing so there's a clear line of accountability.

If there are any questionable operations, Bell wants the records on paper, identifying everyone responsible from the street agent all the way to the top.

State Police Call For 'Mother Goose'

WATERLOO, Md. (AP)-'Mother Goose' has been ummoned by state police in Maryland to help crack down on

"It's sort of a Trojan Horse and is our answer to the rubber duck," says Col. Thomas S. Smith, the state police superintendant. "Rubber Duck" is Ctiizens Band jargon for the leader of a truck convoy.

Troopers will use trucks equipped with speed guns and CB radios, Smith says, and will monitor CB conversations and talk to other CBers.

'Mother Goose' will not only follow suspected speeding trucks but infiltrate their convoys, flushing out traffic violators," he says. When speeders are identified. Smith says, the troopers will radio backup cruisers to stop the violator.

The "flock" includes mobile homes, campers, convertibles, foreign cars and various-sized trucks, Smith says, as well as a rusty pick-up that troopers used two years ago to nab speeding automobiles.
