Shane Stewart, 2-year-old son of Hereford assistant coach Rick Stewart, enjoys the Whiteface basketball games as much as anyone. Of course, being a coach's son lets him get a little closer to the action. Shane voiced his support of the Herd in its loss to Borger Tuesday night [when he wasn't practicing his dribbling on the side], and a Brand photographer caught him in action. Shane intently watches the play in the left photo, wonders with amazement at the proceedings [most likely a call by an official) in the center photo, and cheers a Herd score in the right photo. Unfortunately his support didn't carry the Whitefaces to a victory. [Brand photos by Bob Nigh).

But, logic does not win elections. There are more registered Democrats in the 31st District, but if they don't support their candidate at the polls Saturday, the GOP faithful could take advantage of the opportunity to put a Republican in the state senate. The difference could well depend on who is the less apathetic along party lines - the Democrats or the Republicans.

Less than 20 percent of the voters bothered to cast a vote in the special election with five candidates from which to select. And, though it wasn't a party election, the voters picked a Democrat and a Republican for the run-off election.

Court Urged To Nix Gas Ruling

WASHINGTON (AP) - Texas Attorney General John Hill urged the U.S. Supreme Court on Wednesday to oppose a federal ruling which would require more Texas natural gas to be sold out of Hill asked the Supreme Court either to fixed-term leases.

Texas natural gas sold intrastate commands about a 25 percent higher price than gas sold in the regulated interstate trade.

Specifically, the case involves the hland Royalty Co. and El Paso Gas Co. and whether the natural gas under the Wadell Ranch in West Texas will go into interstate or intrastate commerce.

The case began in 1925 when Gulf Oil Corp. signed a 50-year lease to the oil and gas under the Waddell Ranch. In the intervening years, the ranch owners sold the ownership of the mineral rights to a number of buyers, the largest of which was Southland.

In 1975. Gulf's ease expired and control over the mineral rights reverted to Southland and the other owners. Southland decided to sell the gas in the more lucrative intrastate market.

Court Says TPUC Legal with Rates

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) - Southwestern Bell Telephone Co. failed Wednesday to convince the 3rd Court of Civil Appeals that the Texas Public Utility Commission's telephone rate-making formula is illegal.

The court said the comission's method. using a rate base consisting of original cost of equipment minus depreciation. was within the limits set by state law.

John Hayes, a Bell vice president in Dallas, said the company had not decided whether to appeal to the Texas Supreme

The appeals court denied Bell's request for a stay of rates set by the commission

It ruled, however, that Bell has a right to present witnesses who would testify the rates are confiscatory because they don't provide the phone company enough

Attorney General John Hill said he would ask the appeals court for a rehearing on that issue.

The utility commission granted Bell a $57.8 million per year revenue increase last December, $173 million less than the telephone company wanted.

Committee Supports Automobile Taxing

WASHINGTON (AP) - President Carter can claim an important victory in congressional negotiators' approval of a tax on fuel-wasting cars. But a final agreement on the toughest energy problems seems as elusive as ever.

If accepted by a second conference committee and then by the House and Senate, the auto tax would cost buyers of inefficient 1979-model cars up to $550, figure that would soar to as much as $3.850 on 1985 models.

The tax was approved Wednesday by the conference committee on energy taxes. Another part of the compromise approved by the committee would allow the 19 million motorists who itemize income tax deductions to continue to take a deduction for state and local gasoline taxes. The House had voted to end that Even with those agreements, it seems unlikely that Congress will be able to wrap up work this year on Carter's energy program.

CHAPTER SEVEN THE GIANT

WHAT did it matter, thought Claus, if the magic of the elves' marvelous gifts would work but once? Each weapon was so powerful that it could destroy the Pigwidgen. And once only would it be needed.

Claus thanked the elves and climbed aboard the Sopchoppy River Ferry. Patrick Tweedleknees poled the raft back through the dark and perilous currents.

At the river's end they clambered out of the hole and started on their way to the land of frost and neverending snow where the Pigwidgen was said to dwell.

Day and night they traveled north. They stopped only for a few hours' sleep or to hunt for a bit of food in the forests. One night they came upon a mansion standing dark and empty against the moonlighted

It was a cold night and so they crept through the doorless entrance of the mansion to find warmth. Using Tweedleknees' fire-fly flashlight they found themselves in an empty hall from which four long and one short corridors led. They hiptoed into the short corridor and Jay down on the floor and fell as-

When dawn came they went back to the hall and out the flapping, doorless entrance. Tweedleknees stood there yawning noisily. Claus elapped his hand over the elf's mouth. He pointed at a nearby hill.

"What is it?" sputtered Tweedleknees behind Claus' hand. "It's not a hill!" gasped Claus. "It's a sleeping giant!" He pointed sion. It's the giant's glove!" Suddenly the mighty hump stir-

"L-let's get out of here!" stuttered Tweedleknees. He and Claus started off as fast as their trembling legs could carry them.

Unfortunately the only place to run was straight up a mountainside. They had hardly started when a grinding, crunching caterwaul split their ears. They fell to the ground and shivered and shook. When they peered down at the hump they saw the giant had merely turned on his back and was now peacefully snor-

'What an .oaf!" grumbled Tweedleknees. He was ashamed to have been so afraid. "I should have given him a good clouting while we were there.

'Come on," urged Claus. "He may wake soon.'

They scrambled up the rocky mountain. They had only to disappear on the other side to be safe and at the mansion where they had spent the giant would never know they

"What have you done?" cried Claus in alarm.

"Demolished a giant!" said Tweedleknees gleefully

Minority Students Fail Bar Exams

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) - Tom Nazario, a slightly built 26-year-old Puerto Rican from New York City, graduated from the University of San Francisco Law School with a "B" average after three years of hard scholastic effort and part-time work to pay the bills.

But then his dream turned into a nightmare. Three times he took the California State Bar Examination - the test required to practice law - and three times he failed.

'It is certainly not that I am incompetent to practice law," said Nazario, soft-spoken and articulate with no trace of an accent from the Spanish he spoke as a child.

Nazario is part of a disturbing trend - a disproportionate percentage of minority students admitted to law schools under special qualification criteria introduced 10 years ago are failing to pass the bar exam.

The special admissions program - born out of the civil rights movement - was aimed at having the professions more accurately reflect the proportion of minorities in the overall population. For example, while 25 to 30 percent of Americans are members of a minority group - black, Spanish-surnamed or Asian - only 2 or 3 percent of the nation's lawyers come from those groups.

Why such high failure rates?

The answers are as varied as the background of the people

Nazario and other minority people believe it is because the test is culturally biased against minorities. They say it doesn't accurately measure the real skills of a good attorney, such as the ability to argue either side of an issue, think on your feet in court or carefully think out or thoroughly research a point of

The three-day exam only tests an applicant's ability to write essays and answer multiple-choice questions under intense time pressures, ignoring skill at oral debate or leisurely, creative thinking, Nazario contends.

"The pass-fail rate for minorities is jolting the first time you run across it," said Dick Fogel, public information officer for the California State Bar.

From 1970 through 1573, the last period for which detailed statistics are available, 70 percent of the 5,995 law school graduates taking the California State Bar exam passed. But only 37 percent of the 585 minority students passed.

An incomplete survey now under way indicates the same pattern still exists, according to Dave Nelson, last year's chairman of the committee which conducts the exam.

A 1975 state bar report on minority pass-failure rates created such concern over the University of California's law schools at Davis and Los Angeles that the legislature demanded to know what was being done to overcome the Legislators were concerned that only 25 percent of UCLA Law School grads and only 34 percent of Davis grads passed the bar exam, while some law schools had half of their minority students passing. In March, UC President David S. Saxon reported special help programs were drawn up to aid minority law students The programs call for special counseling and tutoring of minority law students, plus financial aid after graduation to insure adequate time to study for the exam.

The UC report raised another concern. "We have discovered, to our dismay, that minority applications to law schools have fallen dramatically all over the nation this year," it savs.

Who Pays Most Taxes

If our President does not understand how the American income tax works, no wonder we

Roper p 'Isters find three out of four Americans are confused by federal income tax forms. Most Americans, Roper reports, think the rich people are getting off too easy. President Carter thinks so.

President Carter says, "The average person in our nation who makes less than $10,000 a year pays a bigger proportion of his income in taxes than the person who makes more than a million dollars a year." That is a precise quote. But it is not correct. President Carter is not the first to parrot this political bunkum. No wonder we, the people, are mislead. Here are the numbers direct from the Internal Revenue Service: The average person with a taxable income of $10,000 a year paid 10.3 percent in federal income taxes. The average person with a taxable income of a million dollars a year paid 49.2 percent.

While politicians protest that many rich people pay no taxes at all, the IRS confirms that people in the $100,000 to $1 million bracket the last audited year paid a total of $8 BILLION in income taxes.

And the IRS confirms that most tax cheaters are in the unaudited echelon; that most tax cheaters make less than. $10,000 a year. So now the IRS is undertaking to audit some of

Liability Insurance Rates Could Soar

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) -Products liability insurance rates might not be skyrocketing. but that day seems near, says the chariman of the State

Insurance Board. Hugh Yantis testified Wednesday before the House Joint Committee on Products Liability, which is looking for ways lawmakes can help reduce rates for such coverage and make sure it is available. "Premiums are beginning to go up. I can't tell from talking to my staff whether they are skyrocketing, but the fuse is lit," Yantis said.

One possible method for easing the problem would be legislation placing a limit on how long a manufacturer can be held responsible for accidents resulting from the use of his products, he said.

"If a man makes a product, he should not forever be liable for it." Yantis said. He did not recommend, however, how long the statute of limitations should Yantis, who has a flair for the dramatic, opened his pocket knife and simulated how he sometimes uses it to drill holes in wood.

He then showed how the knife blade could collapse "and cut my finger off."

'Does that mean it is a defective knife unless it has locks to hold the blade open?" he asked.

We have got a lot of philosophizing to do that hasn't been done" about the extent to which manufacturers should be held liable for accidents involving their products, Yantis said. Yantis said the products liability problem is only "at the beginning of a curve that is going up.'

Later, he said he paid $600 for $300,000 worth of products liability coverage in 1973 and now pays $29,000 for $500,000 worth, while his sales have held steady at $3 million a year.

Yantis and Clay said the legislatures should look into the practice of "double dipping," where an employee hurt by a piece of equipment collects both workers' compensation and damages for products liability.

Asked why insurance companies were raising rates and tightening coverage so drastically, Yantis said, "All I can tell that they are going on is being scared," without any hard data on losses.

Maverick, Dogie Fem Teams Clash

The distaff side gets its turn today when the girls' basketball teams from Stanton travel to the La Plata gym to meet the Mavericks in the first of two meetings this season for the cross-town rivals.

La Plata won a 2-1 advantage when the boys' teams met last week. The Mavericks won the 7th and 8th grade games before the Dogies turned the tide in the freshman battle.

The La Plata girls are all unbeaten after a trio of wins against Plainview Coronado last week. The Maverick 7th grade took a 29-9 win, while the 8th graders won 42-41 in overtime, and the freshmen cruised to a 56-10 romp.

Stanton wasn't as fortunate against Plainview Estacado teams last week, dropping two of the three games played. The Dogie 7th grade dropped a 46-7 decision, while the 8th graders suffered a 27-25 loss. The Stanton freshmen ended the slump, however, with a 32-27

Olsen says his football experience had helped his acting career. Every actor has days when he just doesn't feel like acting. But, as in football, the show must go on.

Messersmith Sold To Yanks For $100,000

By RALPH BERNSTEIN AP Sports Writer

HONOLULU (AP) - Baseball as well as politics makes strange bedfellows

Andy Messersmith, the pitcher who smashed baseball's lifetime hold on a player's contract, then spurned a rich offer from the New York Yankees, has been sold to the world champions for one-tenth of what he would have cost them three years ago. The 32-year-old Messersmith was sold by the Atlanta Braves to the Yankees Wednesday night for $100,000, pending the pitcher's approval. Atlanta owner Ted Turner said. however, the approval was a mere formality.

And before the Messersmith bombshell was dropped at baseball's winter meeting, the Baltimore Orioles shattered the five-day trade calm with two deals involving nine players. Before the Orioles' business with Montreal and Seattle, only five trades involving 11 players had transpired since baseball brass descended on Oahu Friday.

Baltimore acquired pitchers Dan Stanhouse and Joe Kerrigan, plus outfielder Gary Roenicke from the Expos for veteran left-hander Rudy May. right-handed reliever Randy Miller and minor league right-hander Bryn Smith, Smith was shifted from Rochester to

"Before the game we had a long wait in the locker room." Thomas said. "I read the program filled with pictures of the crippled and burned kids. When I realized how much more I had than the child on the cover with leg braces and a smile on his face, I thought: 'You durnmy, you owe it to yourself and all the people with less physical ability to make the best of what you have.' Baltimore General Manager Hank Peters then disclosed he had sent pitcher Mike Parrot to the Mariners for outfielder

Carlos Lopez and pitcher

Tommy Moore. The most intriguing transaction had to be the Messersmith sale. The righthander, who began his major league career with the California Angels in 1968, revolutionized player contracts with the help of an arbitrator and two federal court decisions.

In 1975, unable to reach financial agreement with the Dodgers, Messersmith played with no contract. He claimed it was his option year, and that at the end of the season he would become a free agent. The case went to arbitration, and the pitcher won. Two federal courts upheld the arbitrator.

It was the start of the free agent frenzy, the era of long-term, multimillion dollar contracts for players. Messersmith put himself on the open market, and in a cocktail lounge in Tampa, Fla., agreed to a rich pact with Yankees owner George Steinbrenner.

But the deal fell through. Both sides were bitter. Steinbrenner held a news conference to blast Mesersmith. The pitcher said some unkind things about the Yankees. But that was three years ago.

Messersmith, who won 39 games the previous two season, won 11 for the Braves in 1976. and only five last summer. He suffered an elbow injury and underwent an operation. He missed the last month and a half of the season, and was told not pick up a baseball before Jahuary 1978.

That accounts for the small $100,000 price. He's a gamble for the Yanks.

The only man who seemed unhappy in the orgy of deals was Baltimore Manager Earl Weaver. It seemed nobody told him about the deals, and he showed up after both transactions were announced. Peters hustled an obviously angry Weaver onto a terrace to calm him down.

Montreal manager Dick Williams, however, could hardly conceal his satisfaction. Williams said that with the recent signing of free agent pitcher Ross Grimsley, and now May, an 18-game winner in the American League last year, the Expos are a contender in the National League East.

Kramer's Future As Viking QB Settled

By GENE LAHAMMER

BLOOMINGTON, Minn. (AP) Even if rookie Tommy Kramer does not start his first regular season game Sunday against the Oakland Raiders, there is no doubt that he is the Minnesota Vikings's quarterback of the future.

"He's certainly done everything we expect of him when we drafted him No. 1," says Minnesota General Manager Mike Lynn.

Kramer's total playing time with only two weeks left in the National Football League regular season amounts to about half a game. He got in a few minutes on Nov. 6, when the Vikings absorbed a 27-7 licking at the hands of the St. Louis Cardinals:

A week later 37-year-old Fran Tarkenton was caried off the field with a broken bone in his leg. Kramer was pressed into action in the third quarter because veteran backup quarterback Bob Lee had not recovered from a broken bone in his right hand.

Kramer completed four of six passes, one for a touchdown. and directed three TD marches to complete a 42-10 rout of the Cincinnati Bengals.

With Tarkenton sidelined for the season and Lee generally ineffective against the San Francisco 49ers last Sunday, the 22-year-old from the Rice University played the last 121/3 minutes.

Minnesota scored three touchdowns, all on Kramer passes, in wiping out a 24-7 deficit to nip the 49ers 28-27.

That means the Vikings have scored six touchdowns in their nine possessions with Kramer at quarterback. "It's almost implay at the same level," Lynn

"When I go in things have happened and it's been fortunate for me," says Kramer.

Kramer was a four-year starter at Rice, a school he chose because of its high academic ratings. He completed 507 of 1,036 passes for 37 TDs in his college career, capped by a spectacular senior year of 269 completitions of 501 attempts for 3,317 yards and 21 TD

"When Tom had an open receiver he got him the ball," says Vikings Coach Bud Grant in explaining why he was the first quarterback to be drafted on the first round by Minnesota. "I think that was the single outstanding thing."

What kind of a young man is Tommy Kramer, the youngest of 11 children of retired Air Force Col. and Mrs. John Kramer of Kingsbury, Texas?

"If you believe in yourslef, then people around you are going to start believing." says Kramer.

Asked if it was easier to complete passes in the pros because of outstanding receivers like Sammy White, Amhad Rashad and Chuck Foreman, Kramer replied: "If you don't have time to throw the ball you're out of luck. It's more important to have an offensive line that's going to block for

The 6-foot-1, 200-pound sets up quickly in the pocket and has a quick release, in addition to a strong throwing arm. Says Lynn: "He reminds you lot of Tarkenton in many, many ways-not only on the field. but off the field. He's very inquisitive about what's going on within the organization."

While still in the minor leagues, Hall of Fame pitcher Dizzy Dean made two hits in Joe DiMaggio holds the major league consecutive game hitting streak of 56 but he also batted safely in 61 straight games for San Francisco, then in the Pacific Coast League.

Mrs. Raymond Walker of 102 Beach has undergone drastic metamorphosis in her life. changing from a 190-pound truck driver to a shapely fashion

Moving to Hereford Oct. 17th from Amarillo, Mrs. Walker was employed by Allen's of Amarillo as a model. She has worn exclusive Paris originals and is currently preparing to model classical fashions. The blueeyed beauty has hopes of opening a modeling school sometime after Christmas. Anyone interested may contact

She is presently employed by McDonald's during the lunch hour, and is a member of Young Homemakers of Texas.

Her husband Raymond, known to friends and employers as Ray, is a Cub Scout Master and is employed as the assistant transportation manager at Armour Foods. Before coming to Hereford he was employed in the same department by Luber Trucking. He is the "interior decorator" and makes all designing decisions in the Walker home.

Walker is also the Investigator for the Amarillo Humane Society of the Texas Panhandle. The couple hopes to someday be a missionary team. He is an ordained minister. The Walkers have one son, Billy Ray, who is an eight-year-old second grader at West Central Elementary School.

The family is religious and is presently searching for a church to attend.

We keep Jesus and His love in our house and we try to let him guide us to do what He thinks is best for us," she said.

"I was raised in a religious home. My parents mean a lot to me, they brought us up to love the Lord." Her mother and father are Pick and Laqueta Cox, who reside in Clarendon. He is the foreman of Clarendon

"When I tried to talk to Ray So when you think of about Jesus while we were on Christmas, r the road (truck driving) he would tell me to shut-up!"

Though he wasn't aware of it. he began listening one day when Mrs. Walker, who was and "heard the Lord" speak to her, telling her to quit trucking. She ignored what she heard and ignored what she heard and again, had another heart attack. This time she said, "I actually heard His voice tell me that if I did not get off that truck I would perish from the earth. I knew I wasn't ready, spiritually, to die. I would go straight to hell!"

She then went out to tell her husband and he thought that she had "lost every screw he thought she had ever had."

He went on to his destiny with another driver who talked to him about being saved. Finally Walker agreed to go to church so they would leave him alone. That Sunday he was conver-husband and I had both seen." Mrs. Walker also writes poetry. She is having some of her lyrics put to music.

Bangle Day Begins In City Tomorrow

Bangle Day will be observed Friday and Saturday in Hereford through the efforts of local boys who are members of Leo Club and Key Club.

The project, sponsored by The American Lung Association, Top of Texas Area, is a means of raising funds to supplement those received through Christmas Seal donations. Similar to the American Legion Buddy Poppy Day, Bagle Day is represented by a small, red, double-barred cross lapel pin, given in recognition of each contribution.

From 9 a.m. - 3 p.m. tomorrow, the Key Club and Leo Club will support Bangle Day by taking contributions at Hereford State Bank and First National Bank. The youths will be stationed at Sugarland Mall Saturday from 10 a.m. - 6 p.m.

All club members will be identified by official name tags bearing the double-barred cross, national emblem of the American Lung Association. Free literature will be available concerning asthma, emphysema, chronic bronchitis, influenza and the common cold.

Funds contributed to the Top of Texas Area, ALA, cover a number of services for Panhandle residents. These include training sessions for small-town medical personnel in the Justiss.

Honeymoons Strengthen Marriage

COLLEGE STATION -Married couples take more honeymoons to strengthen the closeness that is basic to most of today's marriages - and to cope with it, advises Dorthy Taylor, a family life education specialist. Closeness creates its own complexities, so to make today's marriage successful, partners must learn two vital skills - how to communicate openly and resolve conflicts, she says.

Miss Taylor is with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service. The Texas A&M University

In developing the two skills, partners must be aware that marriage, especially in today's society, is an ever-changing process, rather than a permanent state. Throughout marriage, each basic human need will require new efforts, she says. HONEYMOONS ALLOW experience needed for developing these skills, she recommends mini-honeymoons, noting that some marriage specialists suggest as many as three a year.

"Mini-honeymoons mean taking time to remain lovers and revitalize the intimate relationship of husband and wife without the children.

"Honeymoons free a couple from the pressure of being mother or father.

"This is important because most couples will be partners two or three times as many years as they will be parents actively involved in rearing children," the specialist ex-

TODAY'S MARRIAGES DIFFER FROM PAST

Today's marriages are different from traditional marriages of the past, so of course they require different skills, Miss Taylor emphasizes.

"The traditional marriage of a century ago has all but vanished - in this country particularly.

"In the past, marriage was primarily an economic and procreative alliance in which the sex roles were rigidly fixed and the husband was in charge. These marriages were often held together more by a sense of duty than by love or commitment.

"Today's marriages tend to be friendlier and warmer. Most men and women marry because they love each other, enjoy each other's company and want to share their lives in an intimate way," she says.

OLD MYTHS HURT

TODAY'S MARRIAGES However, widespred myths perhaps held over from the past - have stood in the way of many couples' enjoyment of marriage, Miss Taylor points

One is the belief that marriage is instinctual and natural for human beings so there is no need to learn any special ways of handling it.

Another is that the wedding ushers bride and groom into a permanent state rather than an ever-changing process.

Also, the new state is regarded as a very private one. about which even minor difficulties are never revealed to other people.

Because of those myths most couples are ashamed to admit problems, so many of them either go unsolved or are left to steep and build in pressure, the specialist says.

Despite mutual affection and a genuine desire to build a good marriage, a husband and wife often find their small problems growing into larger

They may settle for a superficial, bland relationship in which they paper over the difficulties with daily routines. They may become cynical about the possibilities of fulfillment in marriage and accept their dissatisfaction as par for the eventually drive them to seek professional help - perhaps too late to save the marriage and certainly too late to wipe out the pain that has gone before," Miss Taylor adds.

HONEYMOONS - STRATEGY FOR STRENGTH Instead couples should design a "preventive strategy" to build up the strengths each partner brought to the relationship and to equip themselves with skills for coping with problems. Mini-honeymoons help insure a rewarding continuously working strategy. she says.

'Second-Rate Managers'

While managers of U.S. multinationals abroad are honest, open and efficient, they are also impatient, arrogant and second-rate, according to a wide variety of foreign leaders interviewed by The Conference Board. In addition, most American executives serve only two or three years in foreign countries, leading to charges that their firms are there only for the short term to seek quick profits. European multinationals, in contrast, usually give managers lengthy overseas assignments, some-times for all or most of their

FBI's Texas Office Disrupted Dissidents

WASHINGTON (AP) - Recently released FBI files show that the agency's San Antonio, Texas office waged a secret war against dissidents in the late

The Texas operation was part of the FBI's "COINTELPRO" campaign to disrupt activities of anit-war groups.

The Students for a Democratic Society SDS chapter at the University of Texas bore the brunt of San Antonio's contribution

FBI memos from the San Antonio office to the office of FBI Director J. Edgar Hoover outlined battle plans against University of Texas around what the Bureau termed the

New Left" that included:

-Mailing anonymous letters requesting action against dissidents to then-state Sen. Wayne Connally, brother of Gov. John Connally, and Frank C. Erwin, identified as 'chairman of the Board of Regents at the University of Texas, former National Committeeman of the Democratic Party and consultant and confidant of President Lyndon B. Johnson."

-Harassing the San Antonio Committee to Stop the War in Vietnam and its Draft Informa-

-Investigating a "bearded young man" who was appearing at a shopping center to advise young people not to accept draft notices. The San Antonio office discovered the man worked for Abbott Laboratories in Dallas. wrote an anonymous letter to the firm and took credit for having the man fired. His name, like those of all the COINTEL-PRO victims, was censored from the released file.

-Using a former FBI agent employed at the University of Texas to spy on SDS members:

-And on several occasions mailing anonymous letters to parents of dissidents after investigating the parents to determine if they were "respectable" and therefore subject to pressures.

The anonymous letters told the parents that their sons or daughters were immoral and smoking marijuana.

Through a network of spies located on the campus of several San Antonio and area colleges. the agent who was in charge of

Cole, sent regular reports to Washington asking for, and in most cases receiving, permission to harass members of the "New Left."

A spokesman for the San Antonio office said Tuesday in a telephone interview that Cole was "now retired." When asked where Cole could be located, the spokesman said, "We're not allowed to give that information."

In November 1968 the San Antonio office wrote that an informant had indicated that the SDS was going to hold a national conference or convention at the Christmas.

Inasmuch as the University of Texas is going to be the site of President Lyndon Johnson's library which will gain worldwide attention, it is obvious that any publicity given to this SDS conference could be embarrassing to the President," read the letter. "It is strongly suggested to the Bureau that this matter be brought to the attention of the White House so that the strongest possible pressure can be brought to prevent the SDS from having any type of conference at the University of Texas."

The SDS convention was held in Austin but in off-campus church organization meeting rooms. The university refused to allow its facilities to be used.

Under the heading of "Tangible results." the San Antonio office took credit for having anti-draft advertisements rejected by the San Antonio College campus newspaper and for a bill regarding disruptive activities in public schools passing the Texas Legislature.

The San Antonio office noted that since it has such good results with its anonymous letter campaign that other FBI offices should try it.

The letters were to be written "on locally obtained stationary that cannot be traced to the Bureau or the government."

The San Antonio office also wrote letters under the fictitious name of "Dillon J. O'Rourke" and rented a post office box to supply Mr. O'Rourke with a return address.

In writing Washington asking the San Antonio office, J. Myer for approval for the fictitious

JOB TRANSFERS AND THE HOUSING MARKET

NEW YORK (AP) - Americans are continuing to move to the Sunbelt states of the South and West, and away from urban centers to smaller cities and towns, according to a nationwide survey by Merrill Lynch Relocation Management

"The movement of people in large part accompanies the moves of industry," said Weston E. Edwards, board chairman of the relocation firm, "and businesses are increasingly willing to locate in communities on the remote fringes of urban areas, and through the lower-cost base areas of the South and West."

Edwards cited Seattle and Portland as two metropolitan areas where residential home demand is particularly strong.
"The business generated by the building of the Alaska pipeline is bringing a steady influx of people into these areas, which were depressed only a few years ago. A similar phenomenon is taking place in coal min-ing areas with the shift of emphasis in energy," he says.

Feds Taking Too Much

WASHINGTON (AP) - Nine out of 10 American workers subject to withholding taxes are letting the government take too much of their weekly paychecks, the General Accounting Office says in a new report.

The GAO, Congress' investigative agency, also said most employees apparently prefer to have too much withheld and get a refund than not to have enough withheld and have to pay more.

But the agency said a better job could be done of matching withholding with tax liability. Meanwhile, it said, millions of earners are, in effect, constantly lending money to the government without receiving interest. The report said the average amount overwithheld in 1973. the latest year for which full statistics were available, was

"Since overpayments are normally refunded in March or April of the following year, taxpayers are denied the use of some of their income for more than a year," the report said. "By the time they receive their refunds, their current taxes are already being withheld."

GAO said the system imposed "a particularly great hardship on low income wage earners. About 97 percent of taxpayers earning under $5,000 had too

The report said there are various ways in which employers and employees can legally adjust withholding to minimize the discrepancy with the amount of tax owed, but that these are not generally well publicized. It suggested that the Treasury Department provided better information and survey withholding practices to see whether they could be modernized. Revising revenue codes to allow quick refunds to the unemployed might be considered, it clude simplifying the income tax, paying interest on the refunds and allowing taxpayers still more altitude in setting their exemptions.

In comments appended to the report, the Treasury Department said "withholding has been designed to work best for the large group of taxpayers who have one job and a steady. constant income ... and for such taxpayers, withholding does work very well."

"In a way, Mr. Smith has capitulated and succumbed to our demand for the transfer of power on the basis of universal adult franchise. The intensity of our struggle has caused this capitulation." - Bishop Abel Muzorewa,

"Abortion is but one alternative solution to many of the 'problems'. It is an option, uniquely, which is exercised between conception and live birth. As such, the literal alternatives to it are suicide, motherhood and, some would add, madness. Consequently, there is some confusion, discomfort and cynicism greeting efforts to 'find' or 'emphasize' or 'identify' alternatives to abortion.'

LUBBOCK, Tex. - "The American Agriculture Movement is doing an excellent job of bringing the farmers' problems to the public's attention. They are to be commended for their efforts in this achievement," according to A.W. "Dub" Anthony, Jr. of Friona, Tex., who is president of the national Grain Sorghum Producers Association.

Anthony continued to say that the success of farmers' drive to get parity must be recognized by all American people as being good for the nation - not just farmers. He said the facts that should be realized are:

Milk Output Still Up

WASHINGTON (AB) - Butter and nonfat dry milk production continues to grow as the result of stepped-up milk output by the nation's dairy farmers.

In October, butter production was 84.9 million pounds, up 12 percent from September and 9 percent more than in October of last year, according to the Agriculture Department.

Nonfat dry milk, a byproduct of butter-making, totaled 71.5 million pounds, up 27 percent from October 1976 but down from 78.4 million in September. The department's figures showed that the decline in ber to October, however, was

Water Imports Could Receive More Support

LUBBOCK - Water problems in other sections of Texas may ultimately help see that water is imported to the High Plains, Harvey Davis, executive director of the Texas Department of Water Resources, told directors of Water, Inc., recently.

Noting the subsidence problem in the Houston area, Davis said, "Houston is about to fall in a hole. This may be conducive to a greater statewide effort than we have ever had before. We will be working on it and, of course, you (Water, Inc.) will have to continue working on it with all the vigor you can."

Davis, who assumed on Nov. I the top position in the state's new water agency, said, "We know that the water situation is crucial to this area and we are going to give it the best we can...(It) is not a simple problem, as everybody knows that knows anything about that kind of activity."

"It is inconceivable for me to think." Davis continued, "that an area like this country out here, as important as it is literally to the world, would ever be ignored with the problem it

Authorities Unsure About China

WASHINGTON (AP) - Alhough experts say they cannot e sure whether China soon will buy U.S. grain, some authorities in the Agriculture Department say China may have boosted its own grain production this year and is off to a good start with 1978 crops.

China has bought cotton and some soybeans from the United States, but the department says it has no evidence it will purchase American grain in the near future. No U.S. grain has been sold to China since the 1974-75 marketing year.

The department's Foreign Agricultural Service says in its current weekly magazine that China's vice premier, Yu Chiuli recently "gave the most explicit outline in recent years of the country's development policy" at an official meeting of the standing committee of the 4th National People's Cofgeys.

"It seems to indicate new attempts to expand agricultural production through more efficient resource allocation and better management," the agen-

The report was written by two specialists in the department's Economic Research Service. Frederic M. Surls and Charles Y. Liu. THey said that "China's total grain production this year appears to be slightly larger" than 1976 production and that winter grain planted for the 1978 harvest has progressed

"Despite recent reports of localized drought, the combination of warm temperatures. October rains and generally adequate soil moisture in north China has created favorable conditions for over-wintering crops," they said.

Further, the report said. winter crops have been planted on schedule this fall. According to Peking reports, the winter wheat crop in major production areas was planted by Nov. 2.

"As a result, winter wheat and other over-wintering crops are off to a much better start than last year's," the report

China has bought large quantities of foreign wheat for delivery in the coming year, and the two experts said there is a slim chance the United States may be a supplier if much more grain is needed.

"Although a change in policy toward purchase of U.S.

agricultural products cannot be ruled out, purchases that have been made appear consistent with a policy of treating the United States essentially as a residual supplier," the report

"This means that China will normally avoid purchasing U.S. agricultural products."

The report added, however, that "when other sources of supply are tight" or when "the price is right" China does buy U.S. commodities and that the recent purchase of soybeans is

USDA Says Abundant Food Supply Assured

WASHINGTON (AP) - Taking a further look at prospects in 1978, the Agriculture Department says consumers "are virtually assured" of abundant supplies of farm products at moderate prices next year.

"As a result, barring adverse weather, the farm value, or cost of food, will continue the relatively stable pattern it has exhibited in the second half of 1977, with only small increases well into 1978," the department said Monday.

Officials repeated a forecast made earlier in November that food prices next year are expected to go up an average of 4 to 6 percent. This year food 6.5 percent on the average, from 1976.

Prices of imported foods, which accounted for most of the food price increase in 1977, are expected to make little contribution to the rise in 1978," the department's outlook board said. The report said the output of meat and other livestock products will probably increase further next year as relatively low feed costs "help encourage expanded production of fed beef, pork, poultry and milk." This is expected to mean somewhat lower prices for hogs and poultry, the report said. But prices are going up an estimated cattle prices may rise somewhat and help offset the declines.

'Crop output should be large again in 1978, barring major bad weather," the report said. Officials said that farmers appear to be facing another year of relatively low prices and ncomes."

The department has estimated net farm income this year at $20 billion, down from $22.5 billion in 1975.

"However, government deficiency payments and loan programs in 1978, particularly for wheat and sugar, will boost incomes," the report said. "For many livestock producers, net incomes should improve

FORT ORANJE

ST. EUSTATIUS, Netherlands Antilles (AP) - Fort Oranje, from the ramparts of which the American frigate Andrew Doria was saluted as it pulled into harbor for ammunition to supply George Washington's armies, is being restored to its original condition, says the tourism office here.

The Netherlands Federal Buildings Service has ordered 30,000 red bricks to rebuild bastions and to restore a newlydiscovered wall.

Plans are also being made to restore an old market square and other historical sites on this tiny Caribbean island.

The island of Kalymnos in the Dodecanese chain was not incorporated into Greece until 1948. It was looted by the Saracens in the Byzantine era, and later its main town was de-stroyed by the Crusaders. The Knights of the Grand Masters of the Order of St. John con-quered the island in the 14th century, and up until 1821 it was under Turkish rule.

FROM SIN TO SANCTITY -Arlington's Baptist College may be the only school in the world where visitors have to enter through heavy iron gates marked by guard towers.

For years the college's only building was equipped with trap doors and secret passages leading from the classrooms. Outside was a lovely tea garden which legend says had a false bottom.

The structure was never intended to house a seminary training ministers of the gospel. It was built as a lavish dining resort called "Top o" the Hill." It was designed so that it could be converted, in seconds, into a complete gambling casino. In 1947, Texas Rangers conducted their first successful raid of the place and closed it. Then in 1956, a fundamentalist Baptist group headed by J. Frank Norris, the late Fort Worth evangelist, bought the property. They turned it into a school for ministers and missionaries.

The old main house with its secret passages has been razed and replaced by a modern administration building. However, the guard towers and garden remain.

FREE ENTERPRISE - Not all Indians depended on hunting for a livelihood.

In 1853, Ben Colbert, a member of the Chickasaw tribe, was granted rights to operate a ferry across the Red River above the old Preston Road north of Denison, he built a station on the Oklahoma (then Indian Territory) bank of the river to provide bed and board for travelers.

For years his profits averaged more than $100 a day.

After the Texas patriots under Gen. Sam Houston defeated the Mexicans at San Jacinto, Santa Anna returned to Mexico and later became that country's dictator. Ousted in 1855, he went into exile and eventually showed up in New York, Fascinated by the suave general, New Yorkers eagerly purchased $750,000 worth of first mortgage bonds which Santa Anna agreed to redeem in 1868. They were supposedly secured by his "palace and grounds" in Mexico.

Once he had the Yankee money in hand, however, he disappeared. He died in 1876, blind, broke and almost forgotten. One of the bonds, which he never repaid, is on display at the Institute of Texan Cultures in San Antonio.

THE GOOD OLD DAYS - For 31 years, residents of Van, Van Zandt County, got all of the natural gas they wanted without paying a cent for it.

In October, 1929, oil was discovered in the county and the new field also developed into a bonanza of natural gas. The major producers, interested only in oil in those days, gave the community all of the natural gas that it could use.

The free supply was not cut off until 1962. In that year, the producers switched from natural gas to electricity to power its own pumps.

Coal Slurrey Pipeline Depends On Colorado Water Situation

AUSTIN, Tex. (AP) - What happens to Colorado water circles the next year will deter circles the next year will determine whether Texas has a coal slurry pipeline.

"If we continue to have a lot of problems up there we might just put it off," said Dave Keith, vice president in charge of communications, for Houston Natural Gas who wants the

"If it takes five or six years before we can start construction something better might come

"We think it will be at least two or three years before they can begin any construction, if they ever do," replies Walter Caven, head of the Texas Railroad Association, bitter foes of the half water-half coal pipeline, "and we will be fighting them all the way."

Houston Natural Gas won the first skirmish in the coal slurry controver when they pushed a bill through the 1977 Legislature that authorizes operation of the pipeline in Texas, under regulation of the Texas Railroad Commission. The bill gives them the right to condemn land for a right-of-way, but Texas water cannot be seized for use in making the slurry, which is 50 percent pulverized coal and 50 percent water.

Houston Natural Gas said during the long, bitter legislative battle that it would build a 900-mile pipeline costing an estimated $600 million from a al pulverizing plant in Walsenburg, of south central Colorado, to near Houston. Supporters argued the coal would be welcomed by Texas Gulf Coast industries as they are forced to abandon natural gas as a boiler fuel.

Caven and representatives of all Texas railroads argued that the pipeline, which would be the first interstate effort ever attempted, would hurt railroads who need the coal business for their strained financial conditions. Wyoming coal is already being shipped into Texas by rail for electricity generating plants at San Antonio and in Fayette County.

"If we can defeat them economically, and we think we can, we can beat them," says Caven about Houston Natural Gas' water troubles in Colorado.

For construction and operation of the pipeline, Houston Natural Gas entered into a joint venture with Denver-based Rio Grande Industries to form the San Marco Pipeline.

San Marco applied Dec. 30. 1976, for water rights to what they say is an untapped underground acquifer in Colordo's San Louis Valley - but they have not received them so far. In fact, 20 statements of opposition have been filed in the water court at Alamosa. including those by the state of Colorado and the Rio Grande Water Conservancy District. The water court is waiting for San Marco to complete testing a number of deep wells in their effort to prove the water it claims is not subject to previous

The water fight has aroused farmers and ranchers in the San Louis Valley who want to keep Colorado water from going to Texas. An organization called "Folks Against Coal Slurry" put out bumper stickers reading "Hurry, Stop the Slurry," and water claims.

"San Marco Go Home." "The pipeline threatens our livelihoods, the way of life that we have known," said Vicente Valdez, one of the organizers. Without water, our land is little more than a desert."

Meanwhile, an interim committee of the Colorado General Assembly has drifted a bill that would specifically forbid the use of Colorado water in slurry pipelines. However, the bill will not be up for debate until 1979, unless the governor schedules it for the short financial session in 1978, which he is not likely to Stockholders of Houston

Natural Gas were told at a recent annual meeting it would be "another year or two" before the Colorado water problems "There are about four phases in the building of this slurry "First, you have to have the legal right to build it. We think we have that from the legislature. "Second, you have to have the water. That's what we are working on now with the San Marco Pipeline. "Then third and fourth you have to have a coal supply and you have to have the customers for the coal. We do not have the last two because we cannot assure them we will buy the coal or that we can deliver it until we get the water," Keith said. "I would imagine that if a year from now it looks good on the water situation, we will then make an application to the Texas Railroad Commission for the pipeline permit. In this way the water court hearings and the commission hearings on right of way can be going on concurrently." Under terms of the Texas legislative act the commission must hold local hearings along the proposed right of way to get the feelings of those directly affected.

"Certainly we will oppose the pipeline throughout at all the hearings," said Caven. "We will seek to show it is unnecessary from a transportation point of view. The railroads are already here and can do a better job."

Keith thinks the eminent domain hearings for right of way will not be as big an obstacle for the pipeline as the water battle. "Eminent domain is seldom used in pipeline construction," he said, "Ninety percent of all pipeline rights of way are negotiated because they know you have the right to take it to court, and you know they can take you to court if they are not satisfied."

"We think water and the environmental aspects are the prime problems of the people trying to build this pipeline," said Caven. "It is a misuse of water from the beginning to end of the pipeline. They have never addressed themselves to what they are going to do with the water once the coal is taken out of it. That is an environmental problem of serious dimen- it will help them."

Keith said disposal of the 15,000 acre foot of water expected to be used annually to transport the coal is not considered a serious problem although they cannot say exactly how it will be done until the final consumers of the coal are determined.

"If the coal is delivered to a utility company for generating energy it would be a simple matter to use the water. Such a plant uses eight times as much water in generating electricity as it would receive with the coal used for generating that amount Railroads are doing a good transportation problem now and there is no need for the pipeline," Caven said.

"We are not going to take away the railroads' business," Keith said, "and in the long run

Laitin. On Monday, Treasury Secretary W. Michael Blumenthal designated Woodworth's deputy, Donald Lubnick, to act in his place. President Carter named Woodworth to the treasury post in February, giving him the chief responsibility for drawing up the comprehensive tax reform program he had promised during his campaign. The fact that the program was slow to develop, and was subject to repeated revisions, was considered the fault of the policy-makers, including Carter, rather than Woodworth's office.

In fact, Woodworth was understood to believe that Carter had promised too much and some of the things he said he would do might not be to develop a more equitable tax code that would ease some of the tax burden on the poor and middle-income Americans, and bent his energies to this end. Woodworth was a member of
